LIBRARY
THE MUSEUM
OF MODERN ART
Received:

Scanned from the collection of
The Museum of Modern Art Library

Coordinated by the Media History Digital Library
www.mediahistoryproject.org

Funded by a donation from Domitor

Digitized by the Internet Archive in 2012 with funding from Media History Digital Library

http://archive.org/details/moviwor13chal

FL
PER

FL
2742

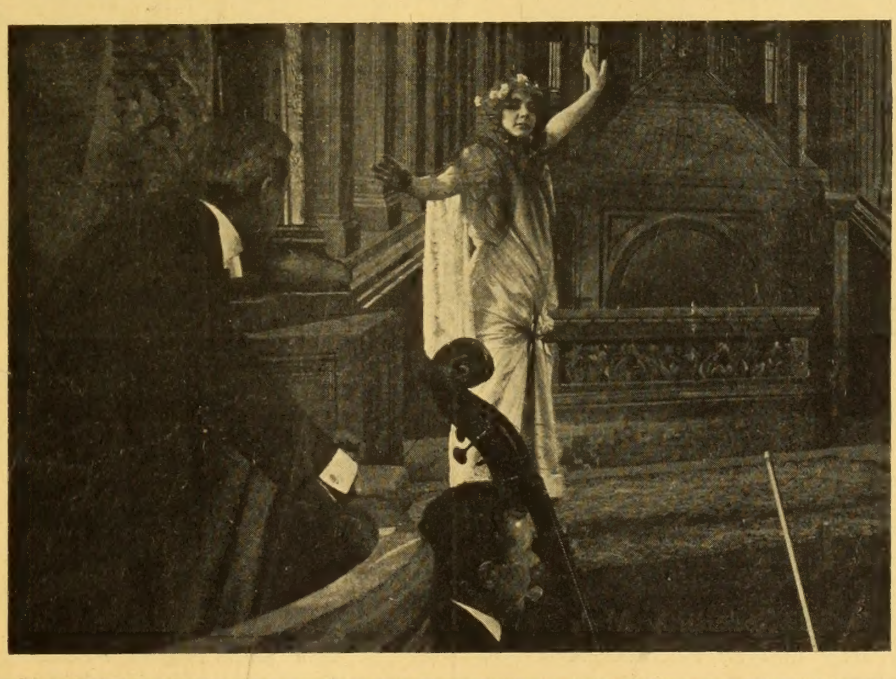
Vol. 13. No. 1 July 6, 1912 Price, 10c.

H. E. HOFFMAN

MOVING PICTURE WORLD

THE FILM INDEX

EXHIBITORS' GUIDE



Scene from Selig's Fourth of July Release, "The Last Dance."

125 East 23rd Street New York—Chicago 169 W. Washington St.

THE THANHOUSER THREE-A-WEEK

SUNDAY, JULY 7, "Under Two Flags" in 2 Reels

SUNDAY, JULY 7, "Under Two Flags" in 2 Reels

"UNDER TWO FLAGS"

BY OUIDA — IN TWO REELS

OUT SUNDAY, JULY 7

See Page 89 For Special Announcement

RELEASED TUESDAY, JULY 9

"PA'S MEDICINE"

AND

"THE HAZERS HAZED"

Screaming Comedy Split-Reel Partly Made in Florida and Partly in New Rochelle—A Pleasant Swing from South to North.

RELEASED FRIDAY, JULY 11

"NURSIE

AND

THE KNIGHT"

A Juvenile Surprise Film Enacted by Two-Score Child Players Whose Performance Is Remarkable—A New Kind of "Kid Picture"

Thanhouser Co., New Rochelle, N. Y.

Send me FREE June Feature-frame. I am / I am not getting "The Thanhouser News."

Name.....

Address.....

Exchange.....

Coming! "PUT YOURSELF IN HIS PLACE" Charles Reade's Great Story "LUCILLE." By Owen Meredith "MERCHANT OF VENICE," By Shakespeare In 2 Reels

THANHOUSER COMPANY

NEW ROCHELLE, NEW YORK

Film Supply Company Agents for U. S. and Canada

FILM SUPPLY CO. OF AMERICA

FOUR-A-WEEK ESSANAY

WORLD-WIDE! ALL-SATISFYING!

ESSANAY FILM POPULARITY!

THIS WEEK! FOUR GREAT FEATURES THIS WEEK!

Released Tuesday, July 2nd

"On the Cactus Trail"

A splendid, virile and gripping Western drama featuring Mr. G. M. Anderson in one of his world-famous characterizations. Unquestionably a feature, and a fine subject with which to start the new month! Book immediately!

Released Thursday, July 4th

"White Roses"

A wonderfully appealing heart-interest drama that runs the gamut of love and tenderness. Extraordinary in plot, beautiful in point of production and presenting Francis X. Bushman in another of those exquisite roles that have won him such sweeping popularity! Great for your patriotic program!

Released Friday, July 5th

"The Butterfly Net"

Light, airy and altogether charming! A summer idyl that involves international complications deliciously captivating and featuring Miss Beverly Bayne and Mr. Bushman in wonderfully attractive roles.

Released Saturday, July 6th

"Broncho Billy's Narrow Escape"

Another tense Western drama of the famous "Broncho Billy" series, with Mr. G. M. Anderson in his popular character-creation! The talk of two hemispheres! Produced in the heart of the great West, and pulsating with the spirit of the endless plains!

COMING SOON! COMING SOON!

"The Fall of Montezuma"

(In Three Reels)

3 Sheet Posters

OF "BRONCHO BILLY'S NARROW ESCAPE," IN FULL 4 COLORS, BEAUTIFULLY LITHOGRAPHED, 50c EACH. ORDER FROM YOUR EXCHANGE OR DIRECT FROM THE MORGAN LITHOGRAPH CO., CLEVELAND, OHIO.

Write For Prices On

Those Anderson One-Sheet Posters, Lithographed in 4 Sepia-Tones! Great for Your Classy Lobby Display! For Your Souvenir Night!—Those Artistic Anderson Postal Photos! Wise Exhibitors Are Getting Essanay's Monthly Advance-Notice Sheets! Four Big Pages, Cuts of All Your Favorite Players and Film Descriptions! Get Your Name on Our Mailing List!

ESSANAY FILM MANUFACTURING CO.

521 First National Bank Bldg., Chicago, Ill.

BRANCH OFFICES IN

LONDON PARIS BERLIN BARCELONA

Convict Life in the Ohio Penitentiary

Just Think of It!
The Only Moving Picture of the Kind Ever Made!

Taken by special permission of the State of Ohio and under the personal direction of HON. T. H. B. JONES, Warden

THREE REELS OF REAL PRISON LIFE

THAT REVEAL THE WORLD'S GREATEST AND MOST MODEL PENAL INSTITUTION IN ITS ENTIRETY.

Departments Shown that Visitors Never See

Such as

THE

FAMOUS BERTILLON SYSTEM
CONVICTS AT WORK
HOSPITAL AND THE OPERATING ROOM
FEMALE DEPARTMENT
PRISONERS AT THEIR MEALS
"BANKERS' ROW"
PALACE OF DEATH

EVERY FOOT MADE BEHIND THE GRIM, GRAY WALLS

Showing how over eighteen hundred daring and desperate law-breakers are paying the penalty of the inexorable law. Slaving day in and day out at hard and wearisome tasks, allowed fifteen minutes in which to eat, locked in cheerless cells through the long, lonesome hours of the night, and separated from friend and foe by stern and unyielding bars and bolts.

SENSATIONAL? YES, BUT AT THE SAME TIME A MORAL LESSON

Because these pictures can be shown in any church, before any school, and especially to the children, because they prove indisputably how strong is the arm of our great Nation and how swift and sure it will strike when the rights of its people are outraged.

State Rights Now Selling

And they are going mighty fast. And why should they not? The men who know realize that this picture is the feature of them all, and when you consider that

WE CAN FURNISH ADVERTISING THAT IS THE BEST EVER

Including threes, ones, halves in litho and block, cards, heralds, banners, cuts, booklets, display frames, one-sheet and three-sheet photo enlargements, novelties, photo frames, etc., it makes it

THE BIGGEST REAL FEATURE OF THE YEAR

Lose No Time. Write To-Day for Full Particulars and Price on Your State.

REMEMBER! EVERY FOOT MADE BEHIND THE WALLS

America's Feature Film Co.

406-7-8 Schiller Building. Chicago

MONDAY, JULY, 1

Imp "LO[illegible], WAR AND A BONNET"	Nestor "WHEN HEARTS ARE TRUMPS"	Champion "PAT'S BREECHES" "LITTLE OLD N. Y."

TUESDAY, JULY 2

Gem [illegible]EDAL OF HONOR"	Bison "THE SHERIFF OF STONY BUTTE"	Eclair "THE HOLY CITY" (2-reel)

WEDNESDAY, JULY 3

Powers "T[illegible]NEW GENERATION"	Nestor "HARD LUCK BILL"	The Animated Weekly

THURSDAY, JULY 4

Rex "PROP[illegible]T WITHOUT HONOR"	Imp "BETTY THE COXSWAIN"	Eclair "HEARTS AND MEMORIES"

FRIDAY, JULY 5

Powers "MA[illegible] AND MIS-MATES"	Nestor "YOUNG WILD WEST ON THE BORDER"	Ambrosio "THE AIR MAN" and "LEGEND OF THE CHRYSANTHEMUM"

SATURDAY, JULY 6

Bison "[illegible]RESTORATION"	Imp "HOME AGAIN—PRINTING AND ENGRAVING U. S. GOVT. STAMPS"	Itala "A WOMAN'S DUPLICITY" (2-reel)

SUNDAY, JULY 7

Rex "THE [illegible]NOWN BRIDE"	Eclair "FOR LOVE"	"ARABIAN THEATERS"

TE[illegible]EXHIBITOR'S PROGRAM

The UNIVERSAL Program

IMP

"Love, War and a Bonnet"

Monday, July 1

A spy dons Betty's bonnet and a cape and makes his escape. Betty recovers the bonnet after the spy has discarded it. Hearing steps approaching she runs away and hides, but her pursuer pulls her from her place of concealment—and proves to be her soldier sweetheart.

"Betty, the Coxswain"

Thursday, July 4

Betty's sweetheart is lured from his place in the college eight. So Betty puts on a coxswain's suit and steers the boat to victory.

"Printing and Engraving U. S. Stamps"

Saturday, July 6

Showing the printing, perforating and cutting of postage and commercial stamps. All the interesting operations are shown. On the same reel is

"Home Again"

One of the comedies of the year. If you don't get a good laugh out of this take something for your liver.

ITALA

"A Woman's Duplicity"

Saturday, July 6

A country girl wins the heart of her employer and becomes a woman of fashion. She visits her native village and misleads a former sweetheart. Her duplicity is discovered and results in a tragedy.

NESTOR

"When Hearts Are Trumps"

Monday, July 1

This is a Mexican story of love and adventure in which the poor suitor outwits a wealthy merican for the hand of the lovely Juanita.

"Hard Luck Bill"

Wednesday, July 3

The story of an elopement through aming incidents, in which papa is outwitted.

"Young Wild West on the Border"

Friday, July 5

Wild West is on the Mexican borde ust prior to the 4th of July. The Mexican flag is ing above the U. S. emblem, and he reverses the sition. A terrific fight ensues in which Wild Westnd his followers are victorious. Wild West's setheart is kidnapped, and he rescues her and landhe miscreants in jail.

REX

"A Prophet Without Honor"

Thursday, July 4

A humble preacher wins the hearts his hearers by his wonderful human sermons andchings.

"The Unknown Bride"

Sunday, July 7

An old man disinherits his son for engagement to an actress. The girl nobly gives young man his freedom, not wishing to injurim, but the father, a widower, determines to seat the youth receives none of his fortune. On dying bed he sends his lawyer out for a woman o will marry him, and the actress manages to elected. The old man dies, and she is reconciledthe son, having been left the entire fortune by terms of the will.

THE ANIMATED WEEKLY

Wednesday, July

Important events of the world.

Universal Film Mfg. Co., 1 UNION SQUARE NEW YORK CITY

for the Week of JULY 1

AMBROSIA

"The Legend of the Chrysanthemum"

Friday, July 5

A poetic Japanese legend which shows the chrysanthemum was born of filial love and sprang from the grave of a little child's mother.

On the same reel:

"The Airman"

A diverting comedy of adventures in the clouds.

BISON

"The Sheriff of Stony Butte"

Tuesday, July 2

In the contest for the hand of the girl the sheriff defeats his rival whom he proves to be a bandit and captures after a sensational fight.

"The Restoration"

Saturday, July 6

A cashier embezzles and juggles his accounts to throw suspicion on his assistant, who is arrested and escapes to the West. Years later he is re-arrested amid sensational scenes, but the dying confession of the guilty man saves him from prison.

CHAMPION

"Pat's Breeches"

Monday, July 1

Pat is a street cleaner. He gets his breeches wet and taking refuge in a servant's kitchen had many adventures before harmony was restored.

GEM

"The Medal of Honor"

Tuesday, July 2

The coveted medal of honor reached an old soldier in his old age and was sold to buy medicine which saved his life.

ECLAIR

"The Holy City"

Tuesday, July 2

Scenes from the Bible story of Jesus Christ are rendered with great reverence and devotional feeling in this beautiful two-reel picture.

"Hearts and Memories"

Thursday, July 4

A man whose wife has died goes to the country and meets a girl who falls in love with him, neglecting a former sweetheart. In a spirit of self-sacrifice, the man untruthfully tells the girl he does not love her and goes away, but later they are reunited when each has proof of the other's Affection.

"For Love"

Sunday, July 7

Emile Vaillant loves the daughter of the man for whom he works. He dares not express his love, however, despite the evident reciprocation of Miss Juliette. Her father is a hard man, and by his selfishness brings himself into a position where he is robbed. He accuses the clerk of stealing the money, but through the girl's love all is eventually adjusted.

On the same reel:

"At an Arabian Theatre"

POWERS

"Mates and Mis-Mates"

Friday, July 5

This picture shows the harmful effects which follow mis-mating in marriage; much suffering being caused by a young couple who were forced to marry against their will.

"The Coming Generation"

Wednesday, July 3

Resenting a fancied slight, the children masquerade as their elders at a fashionable cafe. While their frantic parents are searching all over for them the children furnish much amusement to the diners.

Universal Film Mfg. Co., 1 UNION SQUARE NEW YORK CITY

Coming Features

"Under Two Flags"

TWO REELS

Released Tuesday, July 9

A GEM MASTERPIECE

"Custer's Last Fight"

"101" BISON

IN THREE REELS

SENSATIONAL THRILLING SPECTACULAR

WATCH FOR RELEASE DATE

"Winning the Latonia Derby"

SENSATIONAL IMP FEATURE IN 2 REELS

Released Thursday, July 18

FLORENCE LAWRENCE

In Victor Release, Friday, July 12

"In Deep Waters"

Universal Film Mfg. Co.

1 Union Square :: :: :: :: :: New York City

MUSICAL BELLS

HAVE PROVEN TO BE THE MOST APPROVED DELIGHT OF THE MOVING PICTURE THEATRE

$40.00 UP

MANUFACTURED EXCLUSIVELY BY

J. C. Deagan

NEW ADDRESS

BERTEAU AND E. RAVENSWOOD PARK AVES.

CHICAGO

In answering advertisements kindly mention the Moving Picture World.

We hand you money

244

COUNT 'EM

Features.

All the Best, and more to follow.
Ask for our Classified Lists.
Book them — then ADVERTISE.
Banners, Photos, ones, twos, threes and heralds.
Do it—all the wise ones are!

Feature Film Co. Toledo O.

Orchestra Music

FOR

MOVING PICTURES

Violin, Cornet and Drum parts have been added to the popular "Orpheum Collection" of piano music (dramatic and descriptive) for Moving Pictures. Practical for piano alone or any number of above instruments. Issued in two parts: No. 1 and No. 2.

Piano, 58 cents each;	both No.'s	$1.15
Violin, 40 cents each;	both "	75c
Cornet, 35 cents each;	both "	65c
Druma, 30 cents each;	both "	55c

Send for free sample pages.

CLARENCE E. SINN

1501 Sedgwick St., Chicago, Ill.

ANOTHER BIG ONE COMING

THE EQUINE SPY

(TWO REELS)

Released August 23rd

A sensational "horse sense" feature with thrilling and spectacular incidents. "Don," the famous trick-horse, does everything but talk.

This is comedy week. An exhilarating Western comedy and a fast honeymoon comedy that is a scream from beginning to end are the big headliners on this week's bill.

WINSOME BUT WISE

Released Wednesday, July 10th

The bandit thinks he's a smart one, but the girl from the East is much smarter. She goes after him with a toy pistol—after he had robbed her stage coach—and gets him by a clever ruse. A Western comedy full of breezy situations and lots of fun.

HOTEL HONEYMOON

Released Friday, July 12th

The newly-weds, through the efforts of bell-boys who were not "tipped," are separated. The number on their room is removed and exchanged for a number of a room occupied by a society drunk. An old maid gets mixed up in the scandal and before the newly-weds are reunited there are some scandalous doings.

How Do You Like Our Expensive Art Posters?

CLASS? EH?

Solax Company

CONGRESS AVENUE, FLUSHING, NEW YORK

3 AMERICAN "WESTERNS" EVERY WEEK

Don't forget—Beginning July 3 You will have THREE WESTERN AMERICANS every week—three strong, dramatic subjects that mean increased box-office receipts for the wise theatre proprietor. Note those below. They represent the Uttermost in Western Backgrounds, Pantomime and Adventure. Not to Demand them is a mistake.

An Hour of Terror

(RELEASE WEDNESDAY, JULY 3.)

Away off on the frontier, the lonesome railroad agent pointed a direction to two prospectors. He went inside. An Indian cut the wire and later killed one prospector. Two women and two men reached the little station only to find the wire out of commission. There was a battle, the station became a great blaze and the women prepared to receive the last merciful bullets. But the news carried, and while the women stood with bared breasts, help came, ending that awful "hour of terror." A masterful subject, gripping and intensely dramatic.

The Vanishing Race

(RELEASE THURSDAY, JULY 11.)

The last of the Hopi Tribe, father, son, mother and daughter, camped near Beardstown, Ariz. Dick Wren saw the pretty Indian girl and ran away with her. Later, he went back to his first love. The Indian brother then shot him and himself died shortly thereafter. The father followed, ending the line of Hopi warriors forevermore. An Indian subject, unique, dramatic, with a vital touch that makes it the exception in Western pictures.

The Fatal Mirror

(RELEASE MONDAY, JULY 15.)

Pretty Jessie Brown, living alone with her brother in the mountains, knew no luxuries; so when Bob brought a mirror from town, her joy knew no bounds. Nor was her grief the less when it was broken. Bob posted a sign directed against sheepmen that day and was shot. Jessie, in revenge, shot his murderer, not seeing an outlaw in the bushes close by. When the posse came to get her the woods echoed with two shots. The posse captured the outlaw, who, when asked if he killed the cattleman, nodded and smiled. A beautiful tale of sacrifice, thoroughly Western.

American Film Mfg. Co.

5th Floor Ashland Block Chicago

"THE FALL OF BLACKHAWK"

Revolutionizes All Pre-Conceived Notions of TWO-REEL Subjects of a "Western Nature." There is a reason for this Which You Will Quickly Understand. For Instance—

An Ordinary TWO-REEL "Western" is merely a cheap novel dramatized, a story written around fictitious characters, with exciting battles, Indian fights, chases, etc., made to supply the demand for that kind of pictures.

But in "THE FALL OF BLACKHAWK" your appeal is universal. Beautiful battle-scenes, hand-to-hand encounters, swimming feats, the burning of Ft. Crawford, etc., furnish plenty of healthy excitement, In ADDITION TO AN HISTORICAL TOUCH THAT WILL GRIP BOTH YOUNG AND OLD.

STATE RIGHTS

Are Vanishing Fast, as we predicted. This Smashing, Historical Two-Reel Containing Such Famous American Statesmen as

ABRAHAM LINCOLN JEFFERSON DAVIS
ZACHARY TAYLOR GEN. WINFIELD SCOTT

Demands the Attention of Live, Up-to-the-Minute State-rights men as a new departure in film features.

You see the incidents that led to the Blackhawk War—the signing of the treaty of 1830, the first assault on settlers in 1831—how the news reached Springfield, where you see Abraham Lincoln, axe on shoulder, hearing the news, his volunteer company and what happened when they reported to General Scott; how Blackhawk, after his peace messengers were shot, decided to fight. Also a glimpse of Mrs. Zachary Taylor and her two daughters, their determination to visit their father at Ft. Crawford, how Blackhawk captured Sarah Taylor and how Jefferson Davis recaptured her and fell in love with her, the famous attack on Ft. Crawford with burning fagots, battering rams, and finally the successful attack with flaming arrows. We see the suffering inside the fort and the marriage of Davis and Sarah, finally the ultimate capture of Blackhawk, after a blood-stirring battle.

POSTERS—Two styles of ONE SHEET, One style THREE SHEET and one style EIGHT SHEET.

SOME DESIRABLE STATES STILL OPEN—READY FOR SHIPMENT FIRST WEEK OF JULY.

American Film Mfg. Co. FIFTH FLOOR, ASHLAND BLOCK : : CHICAGO

FILM SUPPLY CO. OF AMERICA

Hand-colored
Exhibitors, DON'T miss this colored idyl. Another flower story of brilliant originality

LOVE'S FLORAL TRIBUTE

ONE REEL

THURSDAY, JULY 11

FILM SUPPLY CO. OF AMERICA

133 W. 44TH ST., N. Y. C.,
DISTRIBUTORS

GAUMONT CO.
Flushing, N. Y.

Scene from "The Lion's Revenge." July 9.

Scene from "That Troublesome Bird."

Scene from "The Story of Chopin."

Tuesday, July 9
The Lion's Revenge

Tuesday, July 16
LOVE'S SUREST PROOF

Thursday, July 18
A Mid-Channel Romance

Tuesday, July 23
The Silent Castle
(handcolored).

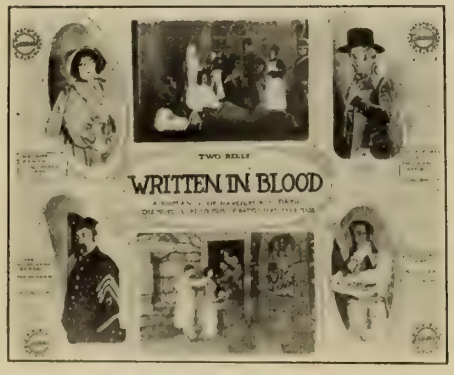
Thurs., July 25
That Troublesome Bird and a Tenacious Hubby

THE PRISON on the CLIFF

TWO REELS—Black and White—TUESDAY, JULY 30

Quite a few exhibitors have been fortunate enough to see this feature at the several recent film conventions, particularly at Chicago, Atlanta, Lexington, Cleveland and Wheeling, where D. W. McKinney exhibited it. In each case "The Prison on the Cliff" has met with unstinted approval. There's a reason, you can bet. Sensationality and picturesque beauty have never been so harmoniously or ideally combined. Watch the Trade Papers' next few issues for the story and criticism.

NOTICE--Buy This Advertising Novelty, Mr. Exhibitor:



The accompanying picture is that of the new Gaumont, WRITTEN IN BLOOD (July 4th)

PHOTO POSTER or PHOTO LAY-OUT

Size 16x20 inches

If you have ever seen the A. P. A. Photo News Service or that of the International News Service, you can get an exact idea of this novelty prepared to accompany our July 4th feature "WRITTEN IN BLOOD." We will sell any quantity at cost price just to see how you like them. That means that if you send us stamps or money to cover cost, we will send you photo posters at 30c apiece.

POST UP IN YOUR LOBBY OR ON THE WINDOW OF YOUR TICKET BOOTH

REASONS WHY

YOU SHOULD PURCHASE

THE LIFE OF BUFFALO BILL

IF YOU WANT

A REAL FEATURE

1--State right buyers fully protected by our $1,000 bond.

2--State right buyers now owning territory reporting record breaking business.

3--A production of merit acted by real Cowboys, Indians and Soldiers headed by Buffalo Bill.

4--Excellent photography.

5--A name that has enjoyed over forty years of popularity in the amusement world.

6--A full line of advertising material to help you get the business.

7--It appeals to all classes of people.

8--Not a topical feature but will be good for years to come.

9--We have hundreds of letters from exhibitors asking for bookings which we can turn over with each purchase.

GOOD TERRITORY STILL OPEN.

SEND FOR NAME OF STATE-RIGHT BUYERS EITHER FOR BOOKING OR TO ENQUIRE INTO THE MERITS OF THE PICTURE.

BUFFALO BILL & PAWNEE BILL FILM CO.,

145 WEST 45th STREET, NEW YORK CITY

KLEINE

Cines and Urban-Eclipse

RELEASES FOR NEXT WEEK

CINES, TUESDAY, JULY 9, 1912

THE GAY DECEIVERS

Two clever old jokers get "caught with the goods"

Leah Learns to Dance

A screaming comedy

ECLIPSE, WEDNESDAY, JULY 10, 1912

A MYSTERIOUS CASE

A unique story, which holds the spectator breathless to the end

CINES, SATURDAY, JULY 13, 1912

For Her Father's Sake

A daughter's love and self-sacrifice meet with a just reward

Don't forget the feature

"The Inventor's Secret"

RELEASED JULY 30, 1912

Advance Synopses Free. Write to

GEORGE KLEINE

166 North State St. Chicago

Licensed by Motion Picture Patents Co.

LUBIN FILMS

Released Wednesday, July 3rd, 1912
Length about 1000 feet

The Prize Essay

A prize is offered at a fashionable seminary for a "best essay." Margaret Blake, a girl of moderate circumstances, is a contestant. An aristocratic rival purloins the script, but between the leaves finds a home letter from Margaret's parents telling of need of money. This touches the rich girl's heart and she confesses her fault.

Released Thursday, July 4th, 1912
Length about 1000 feet

A Child's Prayer

John Deveraux, a cattle king, and his motherless girl are at the grave of his dead wife. At the same time Burt King with his little boy far away are enacting the same scene. Each go their way, the rich ranchman to his home, and King to locate a homestead. The latter stakes out a piece of land and is soon informed that he has appropriated a part of Deveraux ranch. Deveraux with an armed posse goes to evict the Squatters. Before starting he hears his little girl repeating the Lord's Prayer. On reaching the Squatters' tent he also hears King's little son saying the same. The ranch owner is so moved at the coincidence that he gives King a clear title to the land he appropriated.

Released Monday, July 8th, 1912
Length about 1000 feet

The Half-Breed's Treachery

A dramatic story of the mining camp. Elsie, the daughter of an old miner, enters into partnership with a young prospector to work a rather hopeless claim. A drunken half-breed one day causes an explosion near the mine. The wreckage discloses gold and the partnership is made permanent.

Released Friday, July 5th, 1912
Length 724 feet

Just Pretending

Little Albert Mills and his sister Henrietta are playing at abduction. Albert hides his sister's dollies, writes a note demanding a ransom of $4,000 and places it in the mail box of the house. The two kiddies then induce the chauffeur of an auto to take them for a ride. The Mother missing the children and finding the note, with a number of neighbors gives chase. Finally they are caught in the park, a spanking is due, but Mother pleads for the Kiddies and all enjoy a laugh.

Released Friday, July 5th, 1912
Length 316 feet

A Pair of Boots

Two mischievous boys place a pair of the coachman's boots behind the portieres in Miss Annabelle's room, believing there is an intruder. The police are summoned, and with the folks of the house and neighbors, they proceed to capture the burglar, when they find only a pair of boots.

Released Saturday, July 6th, 1912
Length about 1000 feet

The Back Window

Visiting some friends, Harry and May McCloskey are bored to see so much caressing bestowed on the baby of the house. Later they discover that a baby has arrived at the home of an Italian couple, who live at the back of their house. Harry surreptitiously buys the new baby a rattle and May buys a baby dress. The gifts being discovered opens up a new understanding between the admirable couple.

EXTREMELY BEAUTIFUL ONE and THREE SHEET POSTERS of our PHOTO-PLAYS, printed in FIVE COLORS, can be obtained from the A. B. C. COMPANY, CLEVELAND, OHIO. These handsome bills will offer a GREAT ADVANTAGE to your Theatre.

LUBIN MANUFACTURING COMPANY,

Chicago: 154 West Lake St. B. Nichols, 86 Wardour St., London, W., England.

MODEL NEW STUDIOS
20th and Indiana Avenues
Philadelphia, Pa.
Berlin, 35 Friedrich Str.

VITAGRAPH

"AFTER MANY YEARS"

Monday, July 1st

Reaches home. Finds a true and trusting wife. Ashamed of his unfounded suspicions he pleads forgiveness and promises to redeem the past. A Western drama of lower California.

"THE CHURCH ACROSS THE WAY"

Tuesday, July 2nd

Its music strikes the right chord. Cheers a discouraged man. He takes heart and finds comfort and happiness through a little child and the Church Across the Way.

"LINCOLN'S GETTYSBURG ADDRESS"

Wednesday, July 3d

The Greatest Patriotic Inspirational ever uttered or delivered. It will fill your theatres with people and the people with enthusiasm. It will be a celebration and an ovation.

"ON THE PUPIL OF HIS EYE"

Friday, July 5th

It stands out in bold relief. It fascinates. A detective story that captivates.

"THE TROUBLESOME STEPDAUGHTERS"

Saturday, July 6th

Charming and pretty. Quite a handling for a step-mother. She proves equal to it when she introduces the five girls to eligible young men.

NEXT WEEK		NEXT WEEK
"HER OLD SWEETHEART" / "FATE'S AWFUL JEST"	Split Reel.	MONDAY, JULY 8th.
"THE CURSE OF THE LAKE."—Western legend.		TUESDAY, JULY 9th.
"A BUNCH OF VIOLETS."—Sweet and pretty.		WEDNESDAY, JULY 10th.
"THE FOSTER CHILD."—A credit.		FRIDAY, JULY 12th.
"AUNTY'S ROMANCE."—Happy reminder.		SATURDAY, JULY 13th.

SPECIAL VITAGRAPH FEATURE FILM

"The Money King; or, A Mission in Diplomacy"

RELEASED THROUGH THE GENERAL FILM CO.

Monday, July 15th, 1912

"MARTIN CHUZZLEWIT"

Is Making Big Money

Is He Making It For You? Get That Film While It Is Still New

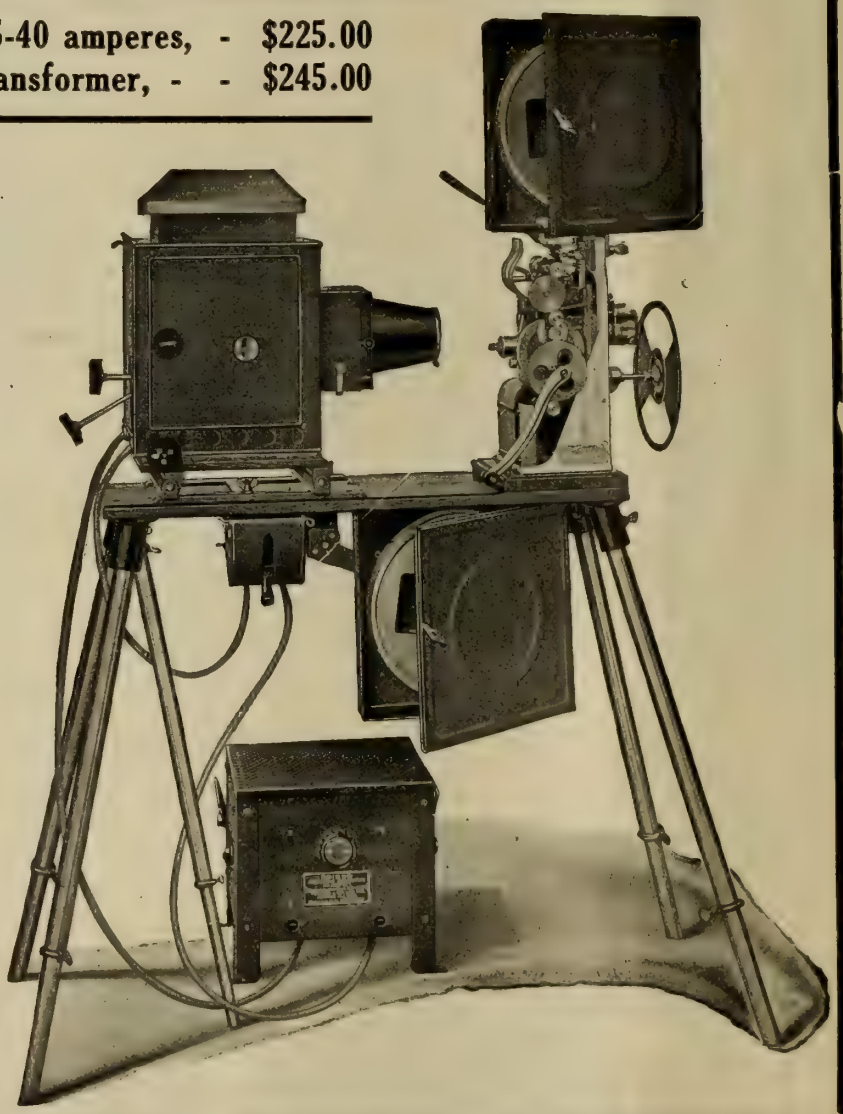
Special Features of Edison Underwriters' Type "B"

Adjustable Outside Revolving Shutter, Chain Take-Up, Extra Large House with square condenser holder, Double Magazine Rollers, Heavy Brass Terminals on connecting cords, set of Heavy Extension Legs, four of which are 1 1-4 inches in diameter. A very substantial stand.

Price, with Rheostat, 110 volt, 25-40 amperes, - $225.00
Price, with 110 volt, 60 Cycle Transformer, - - $245.00

Current Edison Films

July 6—"An Intelligent Camera," 300 feet. Comedy.
" 9—"After Many Days," by Camilla Dalberg. 1,000 feet. Dramatic.
" 10—"The Artist's Joke," by Harry Furniss. 1,000 feet. Comedy.
" 12—"For Valor," by Talbot Mundy. 1,000 feet. Dramatic.
" 15—"Picturesque Darjeeling, India, in the Himalayan Mountains." 300 feet. Scenic.
" 15—"Madame de Mode," by J. W. Culbertson. 700 feet. Comedy.
" 16—"Nerves and the Man," from "Daybreak," by James Oppenheim. 1,000 feet. Dramatic.
" 17—"Revenge is Sweet." 600 feet. Comedy.
" "—"The Maple Sugar Industry at Thompson, Pa." 400 feet. Industrial.
" 19—"The Necklace of Crushed Rose Leaves. 1,000 feet. Dramatic.
" 20—"The Little Artist of the Market," from The New York Sunday Times. 1,000 feet. Dramatic.
" 23—"The Sketch With the Thumb Print," by Harry Furniss. 1,000 feet. Dramatic.
" 24—"The Grouch." 985 feet. Comedy-Drama.
" 26—"The Escape from Bondage," by Bannister Merwin. Being the first story of "What Happened to Mary," produced in collaboration with "The Ladies' World." (This story appears in the August number.) 1,000 feet. Dramatic.
" 27—"The Relief of Lucknow." (The Indian Mutiny, 1857.) 1,000 feet. Historical-Drama.
" 30—"More Precious Than Gold." 1,000 feet. Dramatic.
" 31—"When She Was About Sixteen," by James Whitcomb Riley. 1,000 feet. Comedy.



Thomas A Edison
INCORPORATED

239 Lakeside Ave., Orange, N. J.

The Leading Motion Picture Producer of the World

SELIG — FOLLOW THE FLAG

July 8th

Under Suspicion

The dramatic story of a homeless waif. A simple and appealing story of the trials of an orphan boy. Excellent action and beautiful settings.

About 1000 Feet

July 9th

The Vow of Ysobel

A romance of old Mexico. Picturesque, and gripping in story. Abounding in thrilling action. Picturing one of the best over cliff falls ever shown in pictures.

A REAL FEATURE

About 1000 Feet

COMING — COMING

They are on the way!!

WHAT??

Why—The Season's Selig Sensations

"KINGS OF THE FOREST"

Selig's Wild Animal Masterpiece.

AND

"The COUNT of MONTE CRISTO"

Greater than Columbus.

TRADE MARK

July 11th

His Masterpiece

A tragedy of old age. One of those lovable human interest dramas for which Selig is ever popular.

About 1000 Feet

July 12th

A Mail Order Hypnotist

A hilarious country comedy in which a rube lover outrivals his rival by the aid of a correspondence school course in hypnotism. On same reel with

The Los Angeles Police Department

An educational subject of unusual interest.

SELIG — FOLLOW THE FLAG

Selig Polyscope Co. — TRADE S MARK — Chicago U.S.A.

EUROPEAN OFFICES

LONDON — BERLIN — ST PETERSBURG.

KALEM

The Lair of the Wolf

A Drama Of Present Day Life

Released Monday, July 15th

The Suffragette Sheriff

A laugh provoking satire on Western politics

Released Wednesday, July 17th

A Prisoner of the Harem

Produced in Egypt

ON THE SAME REEL

Egyptian Sports

Photographed in Cairo, Egypt—Released Friday, July 19th

Coarse Screen half-tone cuts of principal Kalem Players 40c and 60c each, postage prepaid

KALEM COMPANY

INCORPORATED

NEW YORK, 235-239 W. 23rd St.
86 Wardour St., LONDON, W.
BERLIN, 35 Friedrich Str.
PARIS, 13 Rue du Faubourg Montmartre

MOVING PICTURE WORLD

J. P. Chalmers, Founder.

Published by
CHALMERS PUBLISHING COMPANY,

Telephone call, 1343-1344 Gramercy
125 E. 23rd Street (Beach Building), NEW YORK

J. P. CHALMERS, SR., PRES.; E. J. CHALMERS, SEC. AND TREAS.; JOHN WYLIE, VICE-PRES. AND GEN. MANAGER.

The office of the company is the address of the officers.

Entered at the General Post Office in New York City as Second Class Matter.

SUBSCRIPTION RATES: $3.00 per year. Post free in the United States, Mexico, Hawaii, Porto Rico and the Philippine Islands. Canada, $3.50. Foreign Countries, $4.00, Post Paid.

WESTERN OFFICE: 169 W. Washington St. (Post Bldg.), Chicago, Ill. Phone, Main 3145. Automatic Phone 32732.

DISPLAY ADVERTISING RATES ON APPLICATION.

CLASSIFIED ADVERTISEMENTS (No Display), Three Cents per Word; Minimum Charge, 50c.

Address all correspondence "Moving Picture World, P. O. Box 226, Madison Square, New York," and not to individuals.

Vol. 13 JULY 6, 1912 No. 1

INDEX TO CONTENTS.

ADVERTISING FOR EXHIBITORS..... 38
AMONG THE EXHIBITORS..... 72

CALENDAR OF INDEPENDENT RELEASES.. 60
CALENDAR OF LICENSED RELEASES..... 62
CHICAGO LETTER..... 27
COMMENTS ON THE FILMS (Licensed)..... 42
COMMENTS ON THE FILMS (Independent).... 43
COMPARATIVE LATITUDE OF THE PICTURE PLAY..... 22
CORRESPONDENCE..... 55
CLINTON, IOWA..... 57

DOINGS IN LOS ANGELES..... 35

FACTS AND COMMENTS..... 20
"FALL OF BLACK HAWK, THE" (American) 31

IN THE MISSISSIPPI VALLEY..... 55
INDEPENDENT FILM STORIES..... 74
INDEPENDENT RELEASE DATES..... 88
INQUIRIES..... 41
INDIANAPOLIS..... 58

KALAMAZOO, MICH..... 58

LOUISVILLE..... 56
LICENSED FILM STORIES..... 66
LICENSED RELEASE DATES..... 90

MANUFACTURERS' ADVANCE NOTES..... 52
MOTION PICTURE EXHIBITORS' LEAGUE.. 29
MUSIC FOR THE PICTURE..... 49

NEW ENGLAND..... 56
NEW FUNCTIONS OF THE MOTION PICTURE 21
NEW ELECTRICAL RULES..... 29

OBSERVATIONS BY MAN ABOUT TOWN.... 30
OREGON..... 58

PENNSYLVANIA CONVENTION..... 29
PHOTOPLAYWRIGHT, THE..... 40
PROJECTION DEPARTMENT..... 45
PHILADELPHIA..... 57

SACRAMENTO..... 58
STORIES OF THE FILMS (Licensed)..... 66
STORIES OF THE FILMS (Independent)..... 74
SOME OBSERVATIONS ON MUSIC..... 50
SONG SLIDE RELEASES..... 64
STUDIO SAUNTERINGS, by Louis Reeves Harrison..... 23
SUGGESTIONS FOR PIANISTS..... 50

"WRITTEN IN BLOOD" (Gaumont)..... 36

INDEX TO ADVERTISERS.

CARBON IMPORTERS.
FRORUP, L. E..... 92
KIEWERT, CHAS. L..... 95
REISINGER, HUGO..... 93

ELECTRICAL AND MECHANICAL EQUIPMENT.
BELL & HOWELL..... 94
BENDER, GEO..... 83
CHICAGO M. P. SUPPLY CO..... 93
CHICAGO PROJECTING CO..... 87
ENTERPRISE OPTICAL CO..... 75
FOOS GAS ENGINE CO..... 73
FORT WAYNE ELECTRICAL CO..... 80
HALLBERG, J. H..... 95
KOERTING & MATHIESEN..... 96
MACKIE CO., INC..... 87-94
SCHNEIDER, E..... 83

FILM IMPORTERS AND DEALERS.
INTERNATIONAL FILM TRADERS..... 73

FIREPROOF AYPARATUS.
H. W. JOHNS-MANVILLE CO..... 91
TRAINER, C. W..... 83

FILM EXCHANGES.
BRADENBURG, GEO..... 97
CALEHUFF, CHAS..... 77
GREENE, W. E..... 81
HETZ, L..... 83
LAEMMLE FILM SERVICE..... 87
ROYAL FEATURE FILM CO..... 86
SPECIAL EVENT FILM CO..... 75

INDEPENDENT FILM MANUFACTURERS. (Film Supply Co.)
AMERICAN..... 10-11
FILM SUPPLY CO. OF AMERICA..... 61
GAUMONT..... 12
GREAT NORTHERN..... 71
LUX..... 71
MAJESTIC..... 77
RELIANCE..... 75
SOLAX..... 9
THANHOUSER..... 2-89

INDEPENDENT FILM MANUFACTURERS. (Universal.)
BISON..... 59
CRYSTAL FILM CO..... 79
UNIVERSAL FILM CO..... 5-6-7-8

LICENSED FILM MANUFACTURERS.
EDISON..... 16
ESSANAY..... 3
KALEM..... 18-63
KLEINE..... 13
LUBIN..... 14
MELIES..... 99
PATHE FRERES..... 84-85
SELIG..... 17
VITAGRAPH..... 15

MISCELLANEOUS.
A. B. C. CO..... 91
AMERICAN SONG SLIDE & POSTER CO..... 90
ARGUS WEEKLY..... 79
BARTON, DAN..... 64
BRADY, A..... 75
CARTER TICKET CO..... 83
CLASSIFIED ADVERTISEMENTS..... 82
CORCORAN, A. J..... 75
EXHIBITORS' ADVERTISING CO..... 98
EXHIBITORS' ADV. & SPECIALTY CO..... 62
EXPERIENCED..... 92
HARBACH & CO..... 75
HENNEGAN & CO..... 94
HOKE, GEO. M..... 96
INTERNATIONAL NEWS SERVICE..... 62
KENNEDY, R. S..... 83
McKENNA BROS. BRASS CO..... 96
MICHIGAN CENTRAL REALTY CO..... 86
MORTIMER FILM CLEANER CO..... 80
NATIONAL TICKET CO..... 88
NATIONAL X-RAY REFLECTOR CO..... 81
NEWMAN MFG. CO..... 96
PARISIAN MFG. & FILM RENOVATING CO.. 64
PHOTOPLAY ADV. & SPEC. CO..... 91
PITTSBURGH M. P. SUPPLY CO..... 83
RAW FILM SUPPLY CO..... 94
SARGENT, E. W..... 96
SMITH, L. C..... 81
STELZER BROS..... 87
STERN POSTER CO..... 77-86-94
TECHNIQUE OF THE PHOTOPLAY..... 86
THOMAS, A. G..... 64
VONNEGUT HARDWARE CO..... 92
WILLIAMS, J. D..... 75
WHYTE-WHITMAN CO..... 93

LENS MANUFACTURERS.
BAUSCH & LOMB..... 79

LECTURERS.
MARION, L. M..... 86
MOVING PICTURE WORLD..... 75

MOVING PICTURE MACHINE MANUFACTURERS.
AMERICAN..... 77
EDISON..... 16
MOTIOGRAPH..... 97
POWER'S CAMERAGRAPH..... 100
SIMPLEX..... 72

MUSICAL INSTRUMENTS.
DEAGAN, J. C..... 9
SINN, C. E..... 9
WURLITZER, RUDOLPH..... 97

PROJECTION SCREENS.
AMERICAN THEATER CURTAIN CO..... 79
INVENTORS' SPECIALTY CO..... 91
MIRRORROIDE CO..... 92
MOTION PICTURE SCREEN CO..... 77

SONG AND ADVERTISING SLIDE MFRS.
BATTERSHALL & OLESON..... 93
ERKER BROS..... 80
LEVI CO..... 64
NORTH AMERICAN SLIDE CO..... 83
SCOTT & VAN ALTENA CO..... 64
SIMPSON, A. L..... 83
UTILITY TRANSPARENCY CO..... 81

FEATURE FILMS (Released by).
AMERICA'S FEATURE FILM CO..... 4
BUFFALO BILL CO..... 13
CATSKILL FEATURE FILM CO..... 83
COLUMBIA FEATURE FILM CO..... 92
CROWN FEATURE FILM CO..... 65
FEATURE & EDUCATIONAL FILM CO..... 83
FEATURE FILM CO. (Toledo)..... 9
HILL FEATURE FILM CO..... 73
IMPERIAL FEATURE FILM CO..... 72
INTERNATIONAL FILM TRADERS..... 73
KINEMACOLOR CO. OF AMERICA..... 77
MASKO FILM CO..... 67
NEW YORK FILM CO..... 89
OHIO DANTE'S INFERNO..... 75
SPECIAL FILM CO..... 97
STAR FEATURE FILM CO..... 94
STEPHENS, MR..... 69
SUPERIOR FEATURE FILM CO..... 87
TOURNAMENT FILM CO..... 83
WARNER FEATURE FILM CO..... 73
WORLD'S MOVING PICTURE CLASSICS..... 92

THEATRICAL ARCHITECTS.
DECORATORS' SUPPLY CO..... 83

OPERA CHAIR MANUFACTURERS.
AMERICAN SEATING CO..... 96
ANDREWS, A. H..... 96
BENNETT, GEO..... 96
HARDESTY CHAIR CO..... 96
STEEL FURNITURE CO..... 96
WISCONSIN LUMBER CO..... 96

Facts and Comments

WHAT is meant by the term "a piratical copy" of "an original film production"? What is the legal meaning and definition of this term? Upon the answer which courts will give to this question will depend, to some extent at least, the possibilities of the American market for the European producer. The copyright law, confused and complicated as its application to films has been so far, seems to afford the needed protection to the foreign manufacturer who wishes to market his product here. There are criminal statutes against film "pirates," but as far as we know there has not been any conviction under the law, although there have been arrests and indictments. It will all come back to the question, What is a "piratical copy?" If the courts take the view that any importation in violation of a prior copyright taken out by the original producer is "piratical," and therefore criminal, making the offender liable to imprisonment and authorizing the seizure of the unauthorized importation, all will be well and good. The Government has so far by its action in certain cases taken just that view. The prosecution, however, has not been carried to its logical end, namely, the trial of the offender.

*

The criminal prosecution will be the only efficient remedy against the depredations of the pirates, who care little about civil suits, being as a rule irresponsible financially and having therefore no fear of any judgments that may be recorded against them. Some of our most prominent manufacturers who have studios and markets both here and abroad have been much annoyed by the actions of pirates, who wait until the film has left the country of its birth and been exhibited in some other European state. Then these pirates secure a copy, exhibit it here and then rent the film out, calmly awaiting the results. In many cases the manufacturers resorted to legal seizures of the alleged infringing copies. This method helps some, but the pirates often manage to rebond the seized films. Of course, the best thing about these seizures is that they put the exhibitor who may be tempted to deal with these pirates, and often does deal with them in apparent good faith, on his guard, and act as a deterrent to other exhibitors. It is impossible to give a satisfactory show if the sheriff or a United States Marshal is liable to take a prominent part in the proceedings at any time and bring the amusement to an abrupt end.

*

Such remedies, however, are only palliative, while the situation calls for drastic and radical action. Every decent-minded person in the industry will earnestly hope and pray that the law as it now exists is plain and strong enough to secure the conviction of any man who, by infringing upon the copyright, seeks to rob another of the just reward of his labor and his right to dispose of his property as he sees fit. This is a question which will not down. Sooner or later the situation must be faced. Nor is any reasonable compromise possible in such a matter. If the present law is in a test case found insufficient, then it would seem to be to the interests of both domestic and foreign manufacturers to get together and frame laws which will accomplish the purpose. Under the "most favored nation clause" a failure of the American law to prosecute the infringer of the European product will most likely result in a failure of the European laws to protect the rights of the American producer. The only effective protection is the criminal prosecution of the pirates. As the American maker exports a great deal more than his European colleague it is not hard to tell which side would suffer most in case of a failure of prosecution here.

* * *

QUITE recently the large dailies gave much space, local and editorial, to the consideration of motion pictures in Turkey, Japan, Hindostan, Korea and other close neighbors. We hope that before long they will discover the motion pictures in such distant and far-away regions as New York, Brooklyn and Philadelphia. We read reams of consular reports about the countries first named and next to nothing about what the motion picture is doing right here. We suggest the advisability of establishing a school for reporters and editors, where they could see motion pictures and have a good man explain to them what American manufacturers have done while they were busy denouncing the spread and progress of the motion picture.

* * *

AN exhibitor freely proclaiming that he is going to show clean and educational pictures on Sunday and then going in search of some one to arrest him is a most entertaining and instructive sight. An old Jersey exhibitor is doing this very thing in the Borough of Pleasantville in the Mosquito State. When he first announced his intention of showing a suitable Sunday program, such as THE MOVING PICTURE WORLD suggested, the "conservatives" of the little community were up in arms and threats were freely made to arrest him and make him feel the heavy arm of the law. On asking the aid of the borough's attorney it was found that there was no authority to proceed against the exhibitor and that in fact Sunday exhibitions of moving pictures were not forbidden by the law of New Jersey. In fact, the legal adviser of the borough in a legal opinion went on record with the views just quoted. When last heard from this progressive exhibitor was still looking for a constable to arrest him, but though he offered to pay the costs in advance he failed to get himself arrested.

*

We expect to see a "cinematographic section" as part of the equipment of every good library. The room now occupied by numerous shelves with more or less antiquated tales of travel will be given over to modern collection of cinematographic views of the nations and countries of the world and in fifteen minutes with the aid of an operator and a machine the "reader" will learn more of foreign countries than books could teach him in as many months. The average motion picture patron of to-day knows more about France and Italy for instance than did the most learned professor of geography of ten years ago, if the latter had no other source of knowledge than books and stories of travelers.

New Functions of the Motion Picture

By W. Stephen Bush

THE great processes of Nature are carried on in secret and in silence. It is the same in the affairs of men; great things are done quietly, almost imperceptibly, while noise is always an indication of weakness. The motion picture of to-day, or rather the functions of the cinematographic art, have struck their roots deep into the soil of our civilization. This much is apparent to any intelligent observer who looks about him at any point of the inhabited globe. An attempt to trace this growth in all its minute detail, to analyze with chemical precision its wonderful processes, would lead us into a wilderness of words. Suffice it to note that the roots are there—strong, sturdy roots with infinite promise for the proportions of the tree itself. The telegraph and the telephone are not more indispensable in the scheme of modern civilization and the program of the coming centuries than the cinematograph.

This journal would do its work but poorly and fall very short indeed of the high ideals of its founder if it did not seek to anticipate and point out all the new functions and the responsibilities which these functions involve. The motion picture will forever remain a rich and unfailing source of amusement and entertainment; indeed, the latest developments in the theatrical field seem to assure new and important conquests here and abroad. Its limits, however, are not circumscribed by any single field of human endeavor and usefulness. We believe that one of its present and future missions is the counteracting of what is cheap and nasty in current literature and especially in yellow journalism. We perceive a very distinct manifestation of this new work in the growth of clean and classic features. The whole development of the feature film has been intense and rapid, following in the wake of the three great epics, which were filmed in Italy a little more than a year ago. The feature film is a plain and strong appeal to the finer taste, the healthier sentiment and the trained and educated mind. By devoting more time and the highest forms of artistic skill the producers of films have shown a much keener perception of what the public really want and a much higher standard of ethics than the magnates of journalism and current literature. If the present supply of good features can be kept up we can think of no better bulwark against the flood of literary garbage which is turned out in such amazing quantities both in the daily press and in the current literature.

There are two ways in which the clean and wholesome influence of the feature may be made to tell. We may borrow from the heritage of the past or we may try to originate. So far only the first way has been tried in practice. It is a most effective way and may always be followed with absolute safety. The treasure of fiction, secular and sacred history, the domain of classics have by no means been exhausted. The unqualified success in reproducing ancient and modern classics seems to augur well for the success of an attempt at originality. The subject of epic proportions is always with us; we only need the right man to discover it and give it cinematographic expression. The same applies to the novel. Neither epic nor novel depend primarily on action; their force and appeal are must stronger than a mere drama. The conventional stage cannot deal successfully with the epic or novel; except perhaps in the novel, when the dramatic element predominates in certain instances. As a medium of original expression the motion picture is far better adapted for the epic and the novel than the stage and in the proper cases the cinematograph surpasses the type as a means of epic or romantic utterance. Why should a great living author hesitate to choose the cinematograph for the expression of his message rather than the cold black type? If he wants to influence the largest possible audience, if he wishes his fame to transcend all national and geographical limits and avoid the dangers of inadequate translation where can he find a better instrument than the motion picture. Originality in cinematographic production, or in other words the creation of a purely pictorial literature, is most assuredly among the coming achievements of this present age. Whatever originality there may have been up to now has with but few exceptions been of the most frothy and superficial order, amateurish to the last degree. They have been about as interesting as a cheap mechanism or a new toy.

Nothing is more certain than that the motion picture and above all the feature must strike a new path, if it is to fulfill its highest destiny. It must labor not alone as an imitative, but also as a creative art. It must do the one and not neglect the other. The possibilities are unbounded in either field.

The producer who will demonstrate to the world that a great original work, whether novel, epic or pure drama, can be transferred directly from the author's brain to the screen, may be sure of his reward both in glory and in material gain. It will mean a revolutionizing of present ways. Author and producers and all the auxiliary forces must soar "with no middle flight," for only by the boldest flight will they be able to "rise to the height of this great argument" and justify to mankind the real worth and grandeur of the cinematographic art.

Such a production would be heralded from one end of the world to the other. It will need no press agent. As a new departure in the recording of and conveying of original dramas or novels or epics it will be sure of miles of newspaper space. The triumph of such a production would place the cinematograph above the movable type in importance as a literary and civilizing factor. Not the book alone, but the stage would be thrown into the shade. Nor must it be forgotten that such an original production would find a most powerful aid in proper music, which also would be an original composition. The harmonizing union of music and drama could then be realized much in the same sense in which Richard Wagner has given it to us in his greatest works.

This new and original function of the motion picture will, we firmly believe, help to shape the higher destiny of the great invention.

AMID the mass of misrepresentation anent the motion picture placed before the public by the daily press, it is most gratifying to find a tribute which is conspicuous both for its sincerity and its eloquence. We can well understand the feeling of a reader who sends The Moving Picture World a clipping from a Richmond, Va., paper, in which such a tribute is to be found. The article in question, printed on the editorial page of the paper, deals in a most intelligent and sympathetic way with the motion picture, and concludes with this striking paragraph:

> All art arose out of the desires and sentiments of the people. The people are still proving their true and instinctive recognition of art by their devotion to this, its last incarnation. The drama may be decadent, and poetry out of date, but while the picture shows are crowded, and shopgirls and clerks gain a brief vision of beauty, the heart of the people is being lighted by the ancient flame.

The Comparative Latitude of the Picture Play

By Robert A. Ward

Selig Press Club Contest Prize Winning Article. Copyright, 1912, by the Selig Polyscope Co.

THE inventions of science serve frequently to broaden the domains of art by offering the artist new media of expansion. The development of skeleton steel construction has given our architects an opportunity to imagine that new type of beauty in the art of building which has obtained consummate embodiment in the Metropolitan Tower. Photography, which began merely as a mechanical process, has developed into an art more subtle for handling elusive effects of light and shadow than even the major art of painting. The introduction of electrical illumination has revolutionized the art of stage-direction in our theaters. As new avenues of opportunity are opened to the artist by the range of scenes, the processes of the traditional arts are required to readjust themselves to meet the new conditions. The scientific invention of the kinematograph suggested the artistic invention of the moving-picture play—a novel type of narrative, wherein a fictitious story is represented in pantomime by actors and reproduced by the kinetoscope; and the new art sprang at once into competition with certain of the previously established types of drama.

The domain of criticism is co-extensive with the domain of art, and should naturally be broadened to include those new provinces which the inventions of science and the consequent inventions of art have recently discovered and annexed. It will not do for the critic to ignore a new art because it is new or because its basis is mechanical. All art arises from the application of mechanism; and the hoariest of the traditional arts was new at some time in the history of mankind. The critic of architecture must accept the skyscraper; the critic of painting must consider the new art of photography; and it is surely not logical that the moving-picture play should be ignored by our critics of the novel and the drama. A new type of narrative that has achieved such immediate and such widespread popularity as the moving-picture play must certainly be worthy of serious criticism. If we should learn nothing else from a study of its material and methods, we should at least succeed in clarifying our ideas concerning those pre-existent types of narrative from which it has derived its processes.

Even a casual study of the moving-picture play will convince us of the soundness of that principle of contemporary criticism that nearly every good play has for its basis a good pantomime, and that dialogue—the purely literary element—while not the least important is, at any rate, the least indispensable of the many elements which are compounded in that complete work of art, the acted drama. The kinematograph bereaves the drama of the spoken word; and it must be surprising to the literary theorist to learn how much is left—how vividly the essential elements of action, character and setting may convey themselves by visual means alone. Pantomime has been recognized for many centuries as a legitimate type of drama; but it is safe to say that the variety and the extent of its adaptability as a means of story-telling were never fully understood until the invention of the kinematograph demanded of it an unprecedented exertion.

The familiar French one-act pantomime entitled "La Main" has been reproduced by the flitting film, and is fully as effective on the screen as on the stage. Such a classic of the art of pantomime as that wordless drama in three acts, "L'Enfant Prodigue," devised by Michael Carre, which was recently revived at the Carnegie Lyceum by Mme. Pilar Morin, could be reproduced by the kinetoscope without any loss of dramatical effect, and would furnish an interesting evening's entertainment. But even the spoken drama might, in many of its classic manifestations, be kinematographed without irremediable loss. Several of the melodramas of Sardou have already been successfully submitted to the process; and it is not impossible to imagine a wordless reproduction of even more eminent types of drama. Such a farce, for example, as "Le Medecin Malgre Lui," of Moliere, could easily tell itself through the medium of the moving-picture and would still awaken laughter. Moliere's humor always expresses itself through the situation or the character, and never through the mere range of the dialogue; in all his plays there is not a single witty line; and humor which is thus visual instead of auditory in its appeal may be conveyed in pantomime. The second scene of "The School for Scandal"—to choose an instance from high comedy—would remain clearly intelligible in all its necessary complications if it were acted without words; and if we desire an example from poetic tragedy, we need only consider that the final scene of "Hamlet" would still be thrillingly appealing if it were projected on the silent but animated screen.

The only type of drama which is absolutely unavailable for the kinetoscope is that in which the element of action is entirely subordinated to the element of character, and in which incidents are imagined off the stage for the sake of their subsequent psychological effect on the people, presenting to the eye the type that is represented by the tragedies of Corneille and Racine, and some of the social dramas of Ibsen and his imitators. But since the preponderant proportion of the existing drama conveys its message more by visual than by auditorial means, it seems strange that more of our standard plays have not been reproduced in moving pictures.

For some time we have utilized the phonograph to record the voices of our greatest opera singers. Why should we not also utilize the kinematograph to record the visual aspects of the acting of our greatest histrionic artists? This available invention should surely be applied to make a permanent record of such bits of acting, for example, as Mr. Forbes-Robertson's death scene in Hamlet, that moment when his half-uplifted hands wave and flutter in the air, and his face is for the last time suffused with the ineffable smile that dawned over it in the first act of the phrase, "Methinks I see my father," and then the head sinks forward in sign that for all eternity the rest is silence—surely this, and many moments like it, should be recorded, like Caruso's voice, before the living artist is stolen from the world. But on the other hand, there is a sound critical reason why the moving-picture play should not confine itself to the reproduction of the ordinary spoken drama.

In several important respects the moving picture is a more serviceable medium for story telling than the regular drama; and it can achieve its most interesting effects by flinging emphasis upon such expedients of narrative as lie beyond the reach of the actual theater. The main advantage of the moving-picture play over the traditional types of drama is that the author is granted an immeasurably greater freedom in handling the categories of place and time. The modern play must confine itself to not more than three or four definite localizations; but a story told by moving pictures may change its place as frequently as the author may desire. He may arrange his tale in fifty

(Continued on page 51)

Studio Saunterings

By Louis Reeves Harrison

JUST for the novelty of the experience, and for no other reason, I would like to meet an American who goes to see the picture plays and does not think he could improve on them in every department of manufacture if he had a chance. It is racial with us to criticize what has been done and improve on it. The progressive spirit is a national characteristic. The average man watching these presentations from in front does not like to be imposed upon, whether he pays ten cents or a dollar for his entertainment, and he is justified in damning a large proportion of the photoplays shown, but the fruit of this tree is not ripe yet, in spite of occasional rotten specimens that drop from the branches. The entire new art is in process of cultivation.

I have had opportunity to study the methods of nearly every studio in this part of the country, not merely to give a half-curious, half-indifferent and wholly superficial glance at what is passing within the walls, but to note constant changes for the better and to learn by observation and communication from those now producing the best examples of the new art what its future is to be, and I am still learning. The production of moving pictures is largely in the hands of men who have been at it for twelve or fifteen years, who have reached the present stage after long periods of experiment, pluck to meet discouragment, persistency to overcome all sorts of obstacles, adaptive intelligence to meet new requirements and plain, ordinary hard work.

That each concern is affected by the personalities behind it is to be expected—that gives variety to the release program—but the production is so composite, depending upon an aggregate of photoplaywrights, actors, stage directors and others concerned in the net result that it is difficult to get any line on those who own the company from the general character of its output. I frequently met Mr. Marion of the Kalem Company in the course of writing stories of his releases for Mr. Brewster's artistic magazine, but I first made his acquaintance during one of my studio saunterings, and we were in harmony on the first subject discussed.

The ideals of womanhood set forth in the picture plays are nearly always good of intention, but the types are often chosen from those who may know how to act yet do not look the parts from lack of vigorous health or ingrown tendency to daub on the theatrical war paint. The cowboys of the Western dramas are pleasing because they are ruggedly natural, but many of the cowgirls in picturesque costume look as though they had not had time to remove their Lobster Square face enamel—they are cowladies.

The central figure in all plays of the eternal triangle is an attractive woman, and she should seem desirable to those in the audience, well worth the fuss two men are making over her; hence it is more essential that she should present that symbol of inner excellence which men universally and instinctively recognize, the quality that nature so cunningly compounds in the faces of sound women, wholesome beauty, than she should interpret her emotions by theatrical artifice. She can learn how to perform, but the man is yet unborn who can teach a woman how to acquire health by the vigorous and right use of natural functions rather than try to lay it on with a hare's foot or drink it out of a bottle.

Because some old married grouch once said that beauty is only skin deep, his neatly turned phrase became immortalized among the envious as a measure of compensation if not consolation. It is now generally admitted that ugliness seems deeper, but both are created by the forces of heredity and environment and affected in childhood by prenatal influence. It is on the last account that an expectant mother is asked to fix her mind upon images of purity and beauty that the impress of her thoughts may determine the features of her unborn child.

Kalem "Airdome" Studio at Glendale, Calif.

Site of Kalem Studio at Beaufort, Ireland, Near Lakes of Killarney.

Among the maternal desires none is more powerful than that of starting children with the essential of beauty and success, and it follows that what would benefit the little one would help woman in all stages to preserve her own natural endowment, but no one can induce her to acquire the rich color of health by exercise and deep breathing as long as she thinks she can buy it at the drug store. I was therefore delighted to hear Mr. Marion announce his policy of securing normal young women for the leads in his photodramas in preference to those whose experience on the stage might prove corrupting quite as well as beneficial.

Such actresses as Miss Joyce, Miss Neilson and Miss Cooper never had a day's experience on the stage before appearing in the moving pictures, yet they enlist interest in their roles by quality of performance as well as by that harmony of form and feature which thrills the nerves of sight, just as fine music and sweet voices vibrate upon the sense of hearing. We get our impressions of the women in the pictures from such externals as natural beauty and the costumes which frame it, and these operate powerfully to stimulate the imagination all during the action. Personality counts heavily in every photoplay shown.

Miss Joyce is a home girl, a Southern Rose, who replied when asked how she spent her evenings, "By going to bed at nine o'clock." She makes her own dresses, using her own intelligence and taste in creating what becomes her rather than hiring others to do her thinking; she is unspoiled by the pseudo-popularity of moving picture idols; she has emerged from the shell of insular egotism which often narrows the home woman's view into a knowledge that she is only one thread in Nature's beautiful pattern, and her modesty is that of clear vision combined with high ideals.

When a woman becomes a stage favorite and hears the applause accorded her role or the sentiments she utters or her acting—usually the result of training by the stage director—and falls into the error of thinking that she has become an important factor in the affairs of our little planet, she is to be pitied, but when a man loses his head because some one injected him as an automaton into the interpretation of a play he becomes impossible. I saw one of these picture idols at a vaudeville theater not long ago perform in a way that revealed his true status. He had been drinking, had to be urged to go on and made a contemptible boast of the mash notes from foolish girls. No wonder such creatures are rank outsiders socially and belittle the business they should try to honor. There may be some vain actresses working among the studios—it would be remarkable if there were not occasional exceptions—but none among those I have met. Without exception they are clean-minded, wholesome and charmingly unaffected.

I have laid stress upon Mr. Marion's new-century policy of selecting graceful and well-formed types of women because they help to enforce the necessity of health promotion and all-around culture of the perfect human being. They also contribute to the pleasure of those who go to the little theaters for relief from dispiriting drudgery, in gratifying universal appreciation of beauty.

Scene from a Kalem Irish Subject, "Beggar Maid."

Studio Setting. Photographer's Platform.

TAKING A SCENE AT JACKSONVILLE STUDIO.

Besides the New York studio under Edmund Lawrence and carrying a stock company of eighteen, there are five others. That at Jacksonville under Kenean Buel serves for most of the stories of war times and employs twenty-two in the company. It was probably at Jacksonville that "Tide of Battle" was produced, with its unusual presentation of a ballroom scene. Although apparently an interior, it was, like most of the Kalem interiors, taken outdoors in the sunshine and constructed by an architect —Kalem people employ no scene painters. It was a vast platform with genuine balconies and stairs that could stand human tread without an attack of delirium tremens.

While I refer to this scene because of its viewpoint, with upper balconies in the foreground and the ball below in the background, I can not help remarking the intense relief a director must feel to be well rid of that unknown quantity, the dauber of canvas—we have had enough of him on the stage and in early motion-picture settings of the wall-paper variety. Oh, you wall-paper photoplays! I asked Mr. Marion if he remembered them. He said that they had the same effect on him as the wire screen of a baseball grandstand, they not only distracted attention from the game but became painful at intense moments. The truth is that pronounced figures of any kind on the walls of an interior are as ugly as warts. Burlap is more endurable and in better taste for picture purposes than even tapestry.

Think of having architects replace scene painters! The director can locate his studio near a saw mill and make his props on the spot. He can set up an interior against the side of a house, as was actually done in Ireland, when a room was built outside of a cottage, against the wall, and furnished from what was found within. I could never understand why Kalem sent a company to Ireland. Of course the Irish are interested in Irish plays, and the Scotch in the Scotch plays, and the Poles in the dramatic career of their unfortunate land, but the great mass of people in this country are getting very weary of what has been done to death in this respect. The outcry made by the vanquished races—those who are licked always make the most noise—should not be mistaken for popularity.

Constructing a Kalem "Airdome" Studio in Jerusalem.

The Kalem Company did better in sending a company of twenty-seven under Sidney Olcott to Egypt and Palestine. Egypt is a land of noble monuments to the earliest civilization of man, a land of romance and mystery, and the best any director can do is to give us a mere glimpse of this nest egg of human intelligence. I have seen none of the photoplays laid in this magnificent setting, but between Olcott and the talented Gene Gauntier, otherwise known as Miss Genevive Liggett of Kansas City, Missouri, a fine start should be made in the lore of the oldest race of civilization in the world.

Still greater achievements are expected of this same company in their present headquarters at Jerusalem, though they may meet with serious mechanical difficulties such as lack of timber. The country is desolate and unattractive, but pictured stories of the region which gave birth to the Christian religion can now be given with the actual backgrounds.

Los Angeles has become the Mecca of companies seeking ideal conditions for motion-picture making, and Kalem has planted two studios in that neighborhood, one twelve miles to the west of the city at Verdugo Canyon. As may be seen this is for those who use the sunlight exclusively, but there is a serious question of dust to be considered. On this account a location has been chosen amid trees and flowering plantations where nature carpets the scene. An auto bus is run to Los Angeles for actors and props. An accompanying picture shows that this studio consists principally of an adobe floor and upright beams and sun screens. It is called the Glendale studio, and it is in charge of George Melford with a company of eighteen.

The Kalem Company has another studio at Santa Monica, about twelve miles from Los Angeles on the coast, and still another at New Orleans, with companies of twelve and ten respectively, thus making six in all with a summing-up of over a hundred performers. In practically discarding artificial lighting and scene painting, Mr. Marion is really able to plant a company at almost any reachable point on the face of the earth, have the negatives sent to New York and concentrate all factory work at the home station.

This is one way of making the production of moving pictures a distinct art in itself, distinguished in many important particulars from the older art of the drama. First of these is to supplant artificial effects with natural ones, thus opening up a wondrous field, both instructive and beautiful; but most important is to center the direction of affairs where the responsibility is located. That responsibility will not be a light one when the American people fully realize what an important part moving pictures are playing in forming the minds of the new generation. Of all problems engaging the interest of home lovers in our country the question of the child's success and happiness is nearest and dearest.

While our social organization permits its members latitude in individual effort, it will not allow such efforts to be directed against our progress and enlightenment. A great deal has been tolerated in moving pictures because it has been visible to all of us that their production is in process of evolution, but it will soon be up to those in control to eliminate whatever is offensive or destructive to cleanliness of mind regardless of the clamoring of short-sighted exhibitors or rental agencies. Censorship must begin at home.

I am glad to discover men of Mr. Marion's type at the head of any branch of this industry, men who are under the refining influences of wife, children and home, for the good they can do is a national need. Instead of women who must be nursed and coddled and dolled into a state of feeble inactivity that leads straight to Oriental slavery, we need those of well-balanced mental and physical strength, who have the charms of spirited intelligence combined with the grace of muscular freedom and the beauty of superb vitality.

Instead of children headed for crime and degradation by evil influences such as those suggested in decadent photoplays, we need the kind every noble and true-hearted mother in the land is trying to raise by unselfish devotion in the course of her own self-betterment. The opportunity of the photodrama is that of rising above stage presentations to the rank they should have taken long ago among the fine arts.

EDUCATOR FAVORS PICTURES.

California's State Superintendent of Schools Anxious to Obtain Educational Subjects.

THE motion pictures have found another new and powerful friend and champion in the West. He is Edward Hyatt, State Superintendent of Public Instruction for California, and head of all the public schools of that State. Other educators have recognized and commented on the educational possibilities of this new instrument for the expression of ideas, but Superintendent Hyatt has gone a step further and is planning to put the motion pictures to practical use in his work.

"I think the time is at hand when moving pictures will be as much an adjunct of any properly equipped school as text books," he says. "They seem to offer us an entirely new means of presenting facts to the mind, and I believe we will neglect an important advantage if we do not study this new means of expression and make the most of it. I know that in the popular mind moving pictures are regarded merely as a new form of entertainment, but if the educational possibilities have not been realized, it is because that phase of it has hardly been developed at all. The thing that appeals to me is that through the medium of the motion picture film, it is possible to present facts and ideas so impressively and so graphically that the mind grasps them with the minimum of effort. Anything that offers so much promise as the moving pictures do of increasing the efficiency of the schools—of making, not only teaching, but learning, easier, is not to be despised."

The chief drawback to the general adoption of motion picture equipment as a fixture in the school room, Superintendent Hyatt thinks, is the impossibility of getting the necessary reels at the present time. It is true that many of the manufacturers have turned out subjects which have a tendency toward education, but no intelligent scientific attempt has yet been made to produce reels which attack the concrete problems of the school room. He suggests that the manufacturer who will devote some attention to the development of this phase of the industry will find it profitable in every way.

Furthermore, he has authorized the Moving Picture World to say that he will gladly co-operate with other friends of the motion picture industry in any way that will tend to realize the educational possibilities of the pictures, and will be grateful for any suggestions for the employment of the pictures in school work in California. Letters will reach him if addressed to Edward Hyatt, Superintendent of Public Instruction, State Capitol Building, Sacramento, Cal.

P. M. POWELL.

SMITH-PARKER.

On Friday evening, June 13th, Mr. J. Clifford Smith and Miss Ruth Parker, both of Albion, Mich., were united in marriage by Dr. Samuel Dickie, president of Albion College, from which both were graduated. Mr. Smith is manager and proprietor of the Globe Slide and Film Co., of Albion, Mich.

CHICAGO LETTER.

By Jas. S. McQuade.

WM. J. SWEENEY, Chairman of the Chicago Convention Committee, was seen after his return from Cleveland, where a special meeting was held, June 13, to consider a fire and liability insurance for motion picture theaters. About 40 members of the Cleveland local were present.

It will be remembered by members of the League who attended the first national convention at Cleveland that Mr. Sweeney was appointed chairman of the committee on insurance. This committee was instructed to secure all the data and information possible on the subject and report at the second national convention in Chicago, the coming August.

The chief difficulty in securing insurance for picture theaters lies in the fact that machines and other valuable apparatus, in addition to films on hand, are not included in most of the policies issued by old line companies. Guided by Mr. Sweeney the insurance committee has devoted considerable time to investigation and it is believed that relief is now in sight.

J. W. Daugherty, of St. Louis, who represents certain inter-insurance interests, addressed the meeting. The system advocated by him recommends itself specially to picture theater owners because it provides for the loss of machines, films, etc., by fire. Mr. Daugherty's organization also offers further benefits, such as a pro rata division among policy holders of the amount left over from premiums paid, after losses, expenses and the organization's dividends have been satisfied. Another meeting will be held in St. Louis, June 30, to consider the subject more fully, and Mr. Sweeney will attend.

Mr. Sweeney left for Pittsburg Saturday, June 22, to attend the convention in that city, on June 24 and 25. He attended in his capacity as chairman of the National Convention Committee of Chicago and will forward the interests of the approaching national meeting of exhibitors in this city in August.

Matters are progressing favorably here for the big meeting, and the various committees are as busy as nailers. The program will be out about July 20 or 25, and copies will be mailed broadcast to League members and other exhibitors throughout this country and Canada.

Ordinance Regulates Chicago M. P. Houses.

The City Council of Chicago passed an ordinance, June 21, regulating the construction of motion picture theaters seating more than 300 persons. Heretofore the code lacked regulations covering theaters of this class. The new sections provide that such theaters shall be located on two thoroughfares, or shall have open spaces on two sides, the width and length depending upon the seating capacity.

Several aldermen contested the provision requiring 34 inches space between the seats of such theaters, back to back, maintaining that 27 inches gives enough.

"The space should be sufficient to permit the audience to get out in case of panic or fire," replied Ald. Thomson. "For moral reasons the space should be wide enough to permit persons to pass in front of others seated."

Ald. McInerney wanted the new provisions to apply to theaters having less than 300 seats and those already in existence. That was defeated, and the ordinance was passed with McInerney and McDonald voting in the negative.

Ald. Thomson caused some excitement by presenting an amendment to the code intended to prevent the "slipping over" of violations of the building code. He would have all orders for deviations referred to the building committee, when the report of the building and health commissioners will be asked with their recommendations in writing. Then the order must be passed by a two-thirds vote of all of the aldermen at the committee meeting in order to get the proposition back in the council for a ballot.

Thomson asked that the matter be referred to the building committee. Others insisted that it should go to the judiciary committee. By acclamation the latter course was adopted.

Motion Pictures Record Prominent Nuptial Ceremony.

A press dispatch from San Francisco announces that for the first time in the history of American society, moving pictures will be taken of a fashionable wedding, the marriage of Miss Jennie Crocker with Malcolm Whitman, in the Church of St. Matthew at San Mateo, on July 16, being the occasion on which the innovation will be attempted. The announcement that the pictures would be made was given out by Miss Crocker with the explanation that the reels will not be made by a motion picture company for public use but only for the benefit of the Crocker family, in the hope that they may make interesting records of the history of the family.

A Realistic Make-Up.

Francis X. Bushman, the popular leading man of the Essanay Eastern stock company, had an amusing, though somewhat disagreeable, experience recently during the filming of "White Roses." Mr. Bushman was playing the role of a convict and was standing manacled between two guards on a railroad platform, while the camera man was preparing to take the scene.

Mr. Bushman is an artist at "make-up" and his disguise as the convict was perfect. Suddenly an elderly lady, evidently from the country, chanced to pass with her son, about fifteen years of age. At the sight of Bushman she stopped and surveyed him for a moment. Then, turning to her boy, she said: "There, John, let that awful creature be a lesson to you and don't never touch strong liquor. It always leads to a prison cell!" As she swept on down the platform, dragging the gaping boy by the hand, peals of laughter followed her, adding additional haste to her movements and shock to her morals. Bushman declares he has had many varied experiences in his life, but that this one "takes the cake."

Chicago Film Brevities.

Miss Kate Davis, of Wilkesbarre, Pa., spent last week in the city. Miss Davis is much interested in the censorship of motion pictures and spent a great deal of her time while here visiting Chicago picture theaters. She expressed herself as being highly pleased with Chicago's censorship of films, and complimented Sergeant O'Connor, of the Censorship Board, on the good judgment and care displayed by his department.

* * *

Dr. William J. Cheny, proprietor of the Crown Theater, Petersburg, Ill., was a visitor at the World office last week. He stated that business was excellent and that he had had a very prosperous year thus far.

* * *

K. J. McRae, one of the owners of the Empress Theater Circuit, in MacLeod and Medicine Hat, Alberta, and Vernon and Kamloops, B. C., was a visitor at the World office last week. He stated that his company will open up new houses in Nelson and Revelstoke, B. C., in August. Straight picture programs are run in nearly all these new houses, which have an average capacity of 550 people, some of them seating as many as 750. Good traveling dramatic attractions are shown in these theaters when they chance that way. Three reels of pictures constitute a program in any of the houses, and the admission is from 15 to 25 cents. A four-piece orchestra, with good spotlight singers, are also used. Two presentations in the afternoon and two at night are given. The best people are catered to and well-selected Licensed or Independent programs are used, according to the location of the town. The Western houses are booked from Vancouver, B. C., and the Eastern from Winnipeg. Mr. McRae stated that all the picture theaters in the Dominion of Canada, west of Winnipeg, are high-class structures. Mr. McRae spoke highly of the World and stated that every house on the circuit was a subscriber.

* * *

W. W. Watts, of the Vaudette Theater, Springfield, Ill., was a visitor last week. He reported business very fair for this season of the year.

* * *

W. D. Emerson has been added to the producing staff of the American's Eastern company. He will devote himself to the production of one Western subject weekly. Joseph Sullivan will specialize in the production of two reels every alternate week. William Lee, at present, is assisting in scenario work, but will produce a film subject from time to time.

* * *

It is understood that S. L. Rothapfel has severed his connection as producer of the Lyric Theater, this city. He has been in Omaha for over a week, where, it is said, he intends opening the Boyd Opera House with pictures de luxe. The Lyric is now running pictures continuously from 11 a. m. to 11 p. m. at 10 cents admission. The program consists of three reels, which are changed daily. Mr. Gerson is in charge.

* * *

The Essanay Company announces seventeen releases for the month of July. Seven of these are Western dramas, featuring Mr. G. M. Anderson; six are comedies and four are dramas from the Chicago studio. The great popularity of the Broncho Billy Western Series has induced Mr. Anderson almost to double his output. Three-sheet posters of the Saturday Western releases, featuring Mr. Anderson, are being issued. These posters are lithographed in four colors and may be ordered direct from exchanges or from the Morgan Lithograph Co., Cleveland. These, in addition to the regular one-sheet posters issued with releases, make fine lobby displays for the "Essanay nights" now featured by exhibitors throughout the country.

* * *

Messrs. Davis & Lorentz will open the Airdome, in Coloma, Mich., about June 29th. The Airdome will seat 700 people. A high class Independent service will be used. A three-piece orchestra will play the accompaniment for the pictures. The Chicago Moving Picture Supply Company furnished the necessary equipment.

* * *

The offices of the Inventors Specialty Mfg. Company have been removed from 401 Ashland Block to a three-room suite in 620, in the same building. The enlarged space will better accommodate their rapidly increasing business.

* * *

The Chicago Song Slide Exchange has on display a complete set of 48 new announcement slides made by Scott & Van Altena. These slides are up to the usual high standard of Scott & Van Altena's work. The sale has been very satisfactory.

NERVOUS PROSPERITY.

The General Film Publicity and Sales Co. came near being exterminated recently. H. A. Spanuth bought a new automobile and took Joe Strouse and Dore Hoffman, of the business staff, for a spin to Coney Island. On the way home Spanuth took the wheel from the chauffeur and promptly ran the car into an elevated railway pillar; much to the profit of a Brooklyn garage and the clothes-cleaning business in Greater N. Y.

VITAGRAPH STUDIO NOTES.

The big picture plant out at Locust and Slippery Elm avenues is like a large orphan asylum. The three heads of the firm at this time of writing are scattered to three of the four winds. Pop Rock has gone to Paris to see if all the things he has heard about it are true. Albert E. Smith has gone to California on a sort of vacation, but will be most of the time with the Vitagraph's California company. J. Stuart Blackton has gone to Detroit to get another boat; one just like the one he was in that hit a log at full speed and went to the bottom of Gravesend Bay. They are all three very much missed.

Maurice Costello is getting fat enough to kill. He has increased the size of his collar twice in the last six weeks.

No first-hand news of John Bunny & Co. as yet, although postcards from Larry Trimble announce that the party has arrived in London and can already find their way from Piccadilly to the Strand, provided they can first locate Piccadilly.

All hands are glad the elephants are gone. For four weeks the actors have been eating, sleeping, riding and playing with the docile monsters. That well-advertised smile came off of many a face, but there is an aroma that lingers still.

Charley Eldridge says it's no fun to have an elephant wipe his moist proboscis across one's face, but then, what does Charley know about elephants? Charles looks fine in a picture as a high financier, but Bill Shay says that to sit in a poker game with him is like robbing the blind.

Every month the Vitagraph Co. deposits in the bank one thousand dollars, to be divided among all its employees at Christmas time. The $12,000 melon will be divided among those who began the year with the firm.

All employees of the Vitagraph Co. are wearing handsome membership buttons. They are presented by the management and resemble a college class or fraternity pin. The design consists of a gold eagle rampant over a large "V" couchant in the paddock of a blue racetrack with white grass.

PRINCIPALS OF THE VITAGRAPH COMPANY OF AMERICA:

Col. W. T. "Pop" Rock Capt. A. E. Smith Commodore J. Stuart Blackton

Motion Picture Exhibitors' League

OF AMERICA

PENNSYLVANIA CONVENTION.

Exhibitors of the Keystone State Hold Harmonious Meeting in Pittsburgh—Next Gathering in Philadelphia.

There was an enthusiastic meeting of Pennsylvania exhibitors at the Monongahela House, Pittsburgh, Pa., on Monday and Tuesday, June 24 and 25. President F. J. Herrington, of the Pittsburgh Local, called the meeting to order Monday morning and introduced President Neff, of the National League, who gave the assembled exhibitors an interesting talk upon the benefits of organization and urged them to get together for a strong organization in Pennsylvania.

H. E. Reiff, of Pittsburgh, and Norman Jeffries, of Philadelphia, were appointed a committee on credentials. As a committee on permanent organization, F. J. Herrington, Pittsburgh; G. C. Miller, of Plymouth; G. H. Roth, of Philadelphia, and Mr. Rech, of Sharpsburg, were appointed. At this point an adjournment was taken for lunch and to give the committees time to make a canvass of the exhibitors present.

Convening again at 3 o'clock every exhibitor present was enrolled on the list of members. The Pittsburgh and Philadelphia Locals came in a body. It was decided to form a permanent State organization, after which the meeting adjourned until 10 o'clock Tuesday morning.

The Tuesday meeting opened with addresss by Secretary Christensen, of the National League, and Mr. Morris, after which an election of officers was held with the following result:

President, Walter Stuempfig, of Philadelphia.
First Vice-Pres., C. E. Smith.
Second Vice-Pres., G. C. Miller, of Plymouth.
Secretary, George H. Roth, Philadelphia.
Treasurer, T. J. Barbin, Millvale.
National Vice-President, F. J. Herrington, Pittsburgh.

Delegates to the National Convention: R. E. Reiff, Harry McGowan and G. C. Miller. Alternates: John Hayes, Mr. Silverman and Mr. Mercer.

Philadelphia was selected for the next convention, which will be held on the first Monday and Tuesday in June, 1913.

After adjournment the members of the association visited the works of the Heinz Pickle Company, where lunch was served. In the evening a steamboat trip down the Ohio to Homestead was enjoyed.

The Reliance Film Company was the only picture concern represented at the meeting. C. Lang Cobb, Jr., that firm's energetic booster, was on the job and induced the exhibitors to sing "Reliance" before they left for home.

Other manufacturers and supply men represented were the Enterprise Optical Co., of Chicago; Nicholas Power Company, and American Moving Picture Machine Company of New York; Photoplay Advertising & Specialty Company, Pittsburgh, Pa., and Exhibitors Advertising Company, Chicago. All these firms made elaborate displays.

WASHINGTON, D. C., EXHIBITORS ORGANIZE.

At a meeting of motion picture theater managers of Washington, D. C., held at the New Willard Hotel, Washington, President M. A. Neff, of the National League, formed a temporary organization of the exhibitors of the Capital City. The meeting was called to order by Mr. Neff, and Mr. Fulton Brylawski was chosen temporary chairman. After a few remarks by Mr. Neff and Mr. Brylawski upon the needs of organization, the following provisional officers were elected to serve until the next meeting, when a larger attendance could be obtained: A. Brylawski, president; E. S. Wertz, vice-president; Fulton Brylawski, secretary-treasurer.

Application for a charter from the National League was made.

Among those present at the meeting were C. Lang Cobb, jr., of the Reliance Company, and A. K. Greenland, of the Gaumont Company. After the convention adjourned, Messrs. Neff, Cobb and Greenland made a tour of the Washington theaters and visited the Mutual Film Exchange.

CLEVELAND EXHIBITORS HOLD PICNIC.

Cleveland Motion Picture Exhibitors, Local No. 1, held a big picnic at Forest City Park, Cleveland, Ohio, on Wednesday, June 19th. Tickets were distributed to patrons of the Cleveland theaters, and slides announcing the event were used in all houses. A big turnout and a fine time resulted. The committee in charge of the event was composed of Ed. Kohl, S. E. Morris, C. F. Schroeder, F. M. Kinney, A. P. Anthony, Sam Lustig, C. F. Christensen, F. E. Simmons, George Heinbuch, and Mrs. Louisa Schnidt.

NEW ELECTRICAL RULES.

Picture Theater Managers Affected by Latest Department Ruling.

Changes in the electrical rules and regulations governing the five boroughs of Greater New York were announced on June 24th by Commissioner Thompson, of the Department of Water Supply, Gas and Electricity, to go into effect on July 1st. The rules apply particularly to the installation of fixture wire and, of course, they are particularly interesting in the fitting up of all moving picture houses. He also announces a working agreement with the Suburban Fire Exchange similar to that in effect with the New York Board of Fire Underwriters.

The full text of the new regulations is as follows:

On and after July 1, 1912, new code fixture wire will be required on all installations for which application for inspection is not on record prior to that date.

On and after October 1, 1912, new code rubber insulation will be required on all installations of flexible cord, armored flexible cord, reinforced flexible cord, canvasite and Crefield flexible cord, special stage cables, battery charging cables. etc., for which applications for inspection are not on record prior to that date.

Rule No. 12-g, 4th paragraph, of the electrical code, is hereby amended to permit twin conductor lamp leads to be carried down combination poles on insulators by the addition of the following two sentences at the end of the paragraph:

> In lieu of the above, twin conductor wire, with insulation specially approved for the location, may be run vertically on pins or brackets down the pole and drawn taut and fastened upon standard insulators. This wire shall be firmly held at a distance of not less than five inches from the surface of the pole.
>
> This change takes effect immediately.

On August 1, 1912, a working agreement with the Suburban Fire Insurance Exchange, similar to the working agreement now in existence between this Department and the New York Board of Fire Underwriters, will be placed in effect. Mr. George E. Bruen, Superintendent of the Electrical Department of the Exchange, will become a member of the Advisory Board of Engineers. The present method of endorsing Underwriters' certificates will be applied to the entire city, the portion covered by the Suburban Fire Insurance Exchange being that portion of The Bronx east of the Bronx River, all of Richmond and all of Queens except Long Island City.

On and after June 1, 1913, the introduction of wooden moulding for electrical purposes in this city will be prohibited.

HENRY S. THOMPSON, Commissioner.

MOTIOGRAPH HANDBOOK OUT.

The Enterprise Optical Company points with pride to the new edition of the Motiograph Instruction Book, which is now ready for distribution, and which is said to be the finest book of the kind yet published. On account of the expense attending the issuing of the new book, a charge of 10c will be made to cover the cost of mailing. All applicants who have written for it within the past two months will have received copies by the time this notice reaches them.

NEW PHOTOPLAYWRIGHT BORN.

To Mr. and Mrs. Epes Winthrop Sargent, at 1 o'clock a. m. Thursday morning, June 27, a nine-pound boy. The young photoplaywright is fine and dandy and distinctly in the picture. He has a bid in for a seat at that Photoplaywrights' Dinner.

BELATED RECOGNITION.

The proposal of theater managers to eliminate orchestras and substitute pianos carries with it a portent of the coming of a time when the whole shooting match will be eliminated by the substitution of the moving picture and the gramophone.—New York World.

OBSERVATIONS.

BY OUR MAN ABOUT TOWN.

ONE of the best-known booksellers in the metropolis for several years has been R. F. Sherwood. He attained a wide reputation as a cut-rate dealer and has attracted attention through the many novel methods he adopted in attracting trade. At one time, when located on Maiden Lane, he secured considerable free newspaper advertising by setting aside the noon hour for dancing sessions. This he established in connection with his sheet music department and the dancing went on while the singer was entertaining the patrons with renditions of the latest selections. Young women and men flocked there daily to enjoy the dancing, and the sales of music were big, not mentioning book sales. Later, Sherwood moved back to his old stand on Fulton Street, near Broadway. He had been forced out of the place by promoters of a cafe and restaurant, who struggled along a couple of years and then gave up on account of poor business. In going back to the place Sherwood again attracted much attention by his novel announcements, in which he stated that Demon Rum was forced to give way to Lord Literary and how much more benefit the stock of the latter would give the public than that served by the Demon. All this may appear quite foreign to matters pertaining to the motion picture business, but it is a suitable introductory to what follows. Sherwood, after a trial of a few months, finds that Lord Literary has failed to cut any more ice at this particular stand than his predecessor, so here is his latest bulletin:

> THE HANDWRITING ON THE WALL
> Seems to indicate that every library built by Mr. Carnegie is a monument to his memory; also a headstone to the commercial grave of the retail bookseller. 'Tis sad, but true. Consequently this store will be closed for a few days preparing the stock for distribution at auction. As soon as alterations are made a modern motion picture theater will be operated here under my personal management. You can't keep a squirrel on the ground.

* * *

For a week or more crowds gathered in front of the place to read the announcement above quoted. In passing on, people have given expression to varied opinions as to the proposed change. Some have declared it is a pity that books must give way to motion pictures; others have been heard to say that the pictures frequently convey more to the mind in a few minutes than the reading of an entire volume, and at far less cost. But, by a large majority, the people are congratulating Sherwood on his grit and enterprise. He has a long lease at big rental on his hands which no one else seems disposed to take, so he is pinning his faith on the "movies" to pull him through. The building is an exceedingly attractive one for the business and has the advantage of a commodious balcony, which was installed when concerts were provided when the people wined and dined in the place. This house and one other will be the only two picture houses in the city south of the City Hall park. True, that part of the city consists almost wholly of office and other business buildings, but the place on Park Row, opposite the Post Office building, has been doing big business for several years on a rental alone of $15,000 per year.

* * *

The passing bookseller is to be commended for the policy he has mapped out for his new venture. He is going into it with a spirit that everyone interested in the welfare of motion pictures will appreciate. When asked if his announcement was a bona fide one, or only a trade trick to draw attention to his auction sale, he said: "I'll put the pictures in here and have already opened negotiations. Everything will be the best money can provide. I will take time in selecting the best outfit, operator, pictures and everything else that goes to make a first-class house. In addition to that I will provide lectures when suitable to the pictures, and so that the discourses will be in keeping with the subject and the public will have no difficulty in reconciling what they hear with what they see I will do the lecturing myself." This may sound a little egotistical to some, but when it is stated that the speaker is one of the best read men in the country, on account of his years of experience in the bookselling business, we will be pardoned for the inference that he intends to be a big hit as a lecturer. Men of his calibre should meet with success, and there is ample room in the motion picture business for people like him.

* * *

So the old Keith theater on Union Square has gone back to the straight vaudeville line with prices ranging from a quarter to a dollar! For the first time since motion pictures clinched popular favor in Greater New York they have been displaced. No reflection is cast upon them by the change, however. The new policy is simply a natural drift due to the recent merger of vaudeville enterprises in the city. The old Keith house is actually surrounded by picture places and there is no straight vaudeville house nearer to it than Proctor's, on 28th Street, a distance of almost a mile. The latter house has been doing good business, and the change of policy was brought about by the belief that there was room lower down for a house conducted on similar lines. Many express the opinion that the belief is a mistaken one and it will not be long before some film exchange will get the C. Q. D. signal from Union Square.

* * *

But the pictures have covered the one loss at Union Square. Marcus Loew will build another theater in Yorkville. A large site has been purchased at Third Avenue and Eighty-Seventh Street, and work is now well under way. That is a great moving picture locality—that old Yorkville. There are four places on Eighty-Sixth Street, just off Third Avenue. All nice, big houses, doing good business. Mr. Loew's will make the fifth big house located within two blocks of each other. The new house will have a frontage of 155 feet on Eighty-Seventh Street and 21 feet on Third Avenue. Going some, eh?

* * *

Poor "Tim" Hurst is reported being near to death. He is well known from coast to coast and from Maine to Texas; but most people only know of him as being prominently identified with the sporting world—as an umpire in the National and Eastern baseball leagues and a referee of boxing and wrestling matches. In the earlier days, say ten years ago, he was also quite active in the moving picture field, as a promoter. About that time foreign film manufacturers were putting out reels showing tours of their different countries and leading cities. "Tim" wondered why somebody didn't get up a series showing points of interest in the United States. At that time the home manufacturers were few in number and they did not seem inclined to give time or money to such projects. They had little faith in them. The subjects were "a little dry," they said. The people were interested in funny and mysterious pictures, and they were just getting a taste of stories. That was the direction in which the manufacturers looked for returns. So "Tim" started the ball rolling. He made a contract with the Vitagraph Company to produce a "Tour of New York" and "Tour of Washington," individual subjects. He then invented a facsimile of a touring automobile, which he installed at Steeplechase Park, Rockaway Beach, L. I. A few feet distant from the front of the auto was a screen upon which moving pictures were projected from a machine located at the rear of the vehicle. With this contrivance he utilized the tours of New York and Washington. "Tim's" real patent was a mechanism that gave the auto a swaying motion, so that the audience experienced the sensation of a real automobile in operation while the pictures were projected. These were probably the first ten-cent motion picture shows given in the vicinity of Greater New York. It was a novelty but not a financial success, and it was less successful when installed at Dreamland Park at Coney Island. But Hurst sold several prints of the subject both here and abroad and I understand that he disposed of his European rights to the auto contrivance at a good profit. He did not remain a moving picture promoter a great while, but while he was in harness he displayed the same activity and enterprise that characterized his work in the sporting circles. His last appearance as an active "movey" promoter was during the Irish industrial exhibitions at Madison Square Garden, when he exhibited "A Tour of Ireland" in one of the small halls in the main building. He then left the field and did not enter it again until quite recently, when he took an interest in arranging to have pictures taken of the McFarland-Wells boxing exhibition.

* * *

In correcting a false impression, I do not wish to be understood as trying to take credit from the film company that burned up a Darracq automobile to add realism to a photodrama recently produced. From a standpoint of enterprise and loyalty to faithful representation regardless of expense, the producers deserve all commendations accorded them. From the standpoint of originality, however, let me say that the "stunt" was antedated by almost six years. A local company burned up an automobile in producing "The Automobile Thieves," issued in October, 1906.

"The Fall of Black Hawk"

Exceptional Historic Picture Produced in Two Reels by the American Film Co.

Reviewed by Jas. S. McQuade.

IT would have been difficult for the management of the American Film Manufacturing Co. to have chosen a more attractive subject for their first effort in feature films than that picturesque figure, the Black Hawk.

When Chicago had a population estimated at 60 people, Black Hawk first became known to the pioneers of Illinois. That was in 1831, and it was not until the following year that his leadership of the Sac and Fox nations against the settlers, on the Illinois border of the Mississippi River, made his name known in every home of the sparsely populated state.

Black Hawk was born in the Sac, or Sauk, village, on the north bank of the Rock River, in Illinois, about three miles north of its confluence with the Mississippi. He was a full blood Sac, about five feet eleven inches in his moccasins, of light build, but of great endurance. His features were rather pinched and drawn, bringing into prominence his cheek bones and a pronounced Roman nose. He had glowing, black, restless eyes that wandered during conversation, with almost a total lack of eyebrows above them. Like all the chiefs and braves of the Sac nation, he had the hair plucked from the scalp with the single exception of a scalp lock, to which, on state occasions, was fastened a bunch of eagle's feathers. This scalp lock, Black Hawk boasted, was worn by him with great prominence, so as to tempt an enemy to fight for it and to make its removal easy in case he should be slain in the encounter.

Black Hawk considered everything of little importance except war, and his ventures were made primarily for personal aggrandizement or popularity. It has been said of him that he never made a sacrifice for his race. Here was a strong contrast between him and Keokük, the principal chief of the Sac nation and a powerful orator. The latter was always planning and working for the good of his people, for whom he tried to secure good homes and large annuities from the United States government. Black Hawk was not a chief of the Sacs, simply a brave; but his martial spirit and skillful leadership established him firmly in the minds of a wide following of his race. His many expeditions against neighboring tribes, most of them successful, afforded him training in warfare, so that when he took up arms against Americans he was a more dangerous foe than they suspected.

The Sacs were originally British Indians, living near Montreal, but their constant outbreaks against neighboring tribes led to their expulsion—what was left of them—from that territory. They were a brave and fierce people, and in their American home they were feared even by the hard fighting Sioux. Black Hawk hated Americans, and he and the Sacs fought with the British in the War of 1812, and continued the fight long after the treaty of Ghent had been signed. He attacked Fort Howard in the Middle West, in what was known as the "sink hole affair," as late as May, 1815, although the treaty had been signed in the preceding year.

Treaties had been signed by the Sac and Fox nations and the United States government, concerning the removal of the Indians from the lands East of the Mississippi, in 1804, 1816 and 1825. Violations of these treaties by the Indians had been made from time to time. In the summer of 1830 the settlers in this territory suffered great hardships by the loss of their crops, which were either appropriated by the Indians without a consideration, or destroyed by fire or by incursions of their live stock. The settlers appealed to Governor Reynolds for protection, and on June 30, 1831, a treaty was signed, in full council, by Black Hawk and twenty-seven chiefs for the Indians, and by General Gaines and Governor Reynolds for the Americans. This treaty again stipulated that the Indians should remove west of the Mississippi, and not come east of the river without a signed permit from the officer in command of the American forces in the district.

Scene from "The Fall of Black Hawk," Produced by the American Film Mfg. Co.

In April, 1832, General Atkinson, in command of United States troops at Jefferson barracks, St. Louis, received the order from Washington to proceed to the Sac and Fox territory, and demand from them eight or ten of the principals who had participated in the murder of Menominee Indians, an adjoining tribe. He immediately left for the upper Mississippi with six companies of 220 men. Arriving at Fort Armstrong, near the mouth of the Rock River, he held a council with Chief Keokuk on April 13. At the time, Black Hawk was east of the river "to make corn," as he explained. After the council, at which Keokuk promised to deliver up the chief murderers of the Menominees, General Atkinson wrote Governor Reynolds, of Illinois, for the assistance of the militia to drive Black Hawk and his band from the state. Including braves, warriors, women and children, Black Hawk had with him about 2,000 people.

A serious setback was given the American forces by the defeat of Major Stillman, at Dixon's Ferry, and the news spread like wildfire among other Indians within the state, creating great danger for white settlers. The battle of Wisconsin Heights and Bad Axe soon followed, resulting in the complete destruction of Black Hawk's forces and his flight. The defeated chief was caught by two Indians and brought into Fort Crawford, at Prairie du Chien, where he was delivered to General Street, August 27, 1832. Major General Winfield Scott was ranking commander of the United States forces on the spot at the time, having reached Prairie du Chien from Fortress Monroe, on August 7.

A treaty was signed September 21, 1832, by General Scott and Governor Reynolds and the Sac and Fox nations, consenting to the removal forever, from east of the Misssissippi, all members of those tribes.

Black Hawk was conducted from Prairie du Chien to Jefferson Barracks, St. Louis, by Lieut. Jefferson Davis, who afterward became President of the Southern Confederacy. Thence he was taken to Washington, the latter part of April, 1833, where he was presented to President Jackson. He was thence placed in Fortress Monroe, where he was held prisoner until June 4. To impress him with the greatness of the American nation, he was next conducted through all the large eastern cities. When in New York he created greater interest than did President Jackson, who happened to be there at the same time, and ladies made a great ado over him, some of them even kissing him. He was then brought to Fort Armstrong, near the mouth of the Rock River, where he was liberated on August 1, 1833.

He settled quietly down near Keokuk's village. In 1837, accompanied by Chief Keokuk, he paid another visit to the East. Returning, he lived amid his early surroundings until October, 1838, when he died. In July, the following year, it was discovered that his grave had been opened and his bones and everything in it stolen. His bones were afterward recovered and deposited in the collection of the Burlington (Iowa) Historical Society, which was destroyed by fire in 1855.

Five men, who afterwards figured prominently in American history, participated in the events of the Black Hawk war. Reference has already been made to Lieutenant Jefferson Davis. Besides him, Abraham Lincoln, Zachary Taylor, General Winfield Scott and Albert Sidney Johnstone were also engaged. As one chronicler of the events of the Black Hawk War puts it: "Out of a job in the spring of 1832, Abraham Lincoln found employment in the Black Hawk War. At Richland, Sangamon County, on April 21st, 68 men volunteered to serve the state. Lincoln was very popular among the men and was chosen by three-fourths of the number to be their captain. He enrolled his company for sixty days' service and marched to Beardstown to be mustered in. He owned no horse and was forced to borrow one, and the march for Beardstown, 40 miles distant, was begun. The company was mustered into the service of the state of Illinois, by Colonel John J. Hardin, Inspector General of the State and Mustering Officer. Two muster rolls of this company are still in existence, one by Lincoln and the other by Colonel Hardin. His company was assigned to the Fourth Regiment and the march to Yellow Banks, and thence to Ft. Armstrong, at the mouth of the Rock River, was started."

Lincoln related afterwards his first experience in drilling his company. He was marching in front of about 20 men across a field, when he desired to pass through a gateway into the next enclosure. "I could not for the life of me," said he, "remember the proper word of command for getting my company endwise, so that it could get through the gate; so as we came near the gate I shouted: "This company is dismissed for two minutes, when it will fall in again on the other side of the gate." This story he told to illustrate the position of a man in debate, who could find no tactful way out of a dilemma into which he had worked himself.

Lincoln was mustered out after his sixty days' service and re-enlisted as a private in the company of Elijah Iles, one of the six companies to enter for twenty days' service, pending the organization of new levies at Fort Wilburn. On July 10th, 1832, his company was mustered out of service and he made his way homeward.

Zachary Taylor, who held the rank of Major of the U. S. Army, was commander for some time at Ft. Crawford, Prairie du Chien. As is known, he was afterwards president of the United States, an honor also sought by General Winfield Scott. Albert Sidney Johnstone figured prominently in the Civil War.

The Filmed Story.

The opening scenes disclose the signing of a treaty between the Fox and Sac tribes and the whites. We can see that Black Hawk hesitates long and then reluctantly makes his mark. The white settlers came into the territory vacated by the Indians with such rapidity and in such great numbers that the Indians feared and resented their intrusion. The following scene, therefore, shows a state of unrest, and hand-to-hand conflicts between the incoming settlers and the Indians. The latter hold a council of war and determine to stem the tide of immigration. At first the Indians do not use weapons and retire before the whites, who bear firearms. Following, we see an exciting chase in which a girl and her escort are pursued by mounted Indians. A fine scene shows the ambuscade of the girl and the settler.

We next see Abraham Lincoln reading of the Indian attack on the settlers and, possibly, also the call of the governor for volunteers. Abe is shown with his company, a comically awkward squad. Great sympathy is expressed on his face for the settlers as he marches off. He is next seen amid forest glades marching to Winfield Scott's camp. The military evolutions and discipline of Lincoln's troop creates great mirth among the subordinate officers. Winfield Scott, himself, shows disgust on his face and he asks for Lincoln's sword. This is given him with great respect, and we watch the deposed captain as he marches to the enrollment sheet and signs his name as a private.

The next scene shows a hospital camp, where the men lie suffering from cholera. Here we witness the first meeting of Lincoln and Davis. After this we are treated to a wrestling match in which Abe easily disposes of his opponent.

We next see a scout riding swiftly towards Black Hawk's camp, advising him of the approach of Scott's large army. With native cunning he decides not to make an attack and sends three of his men with a flag of truce to Scott.

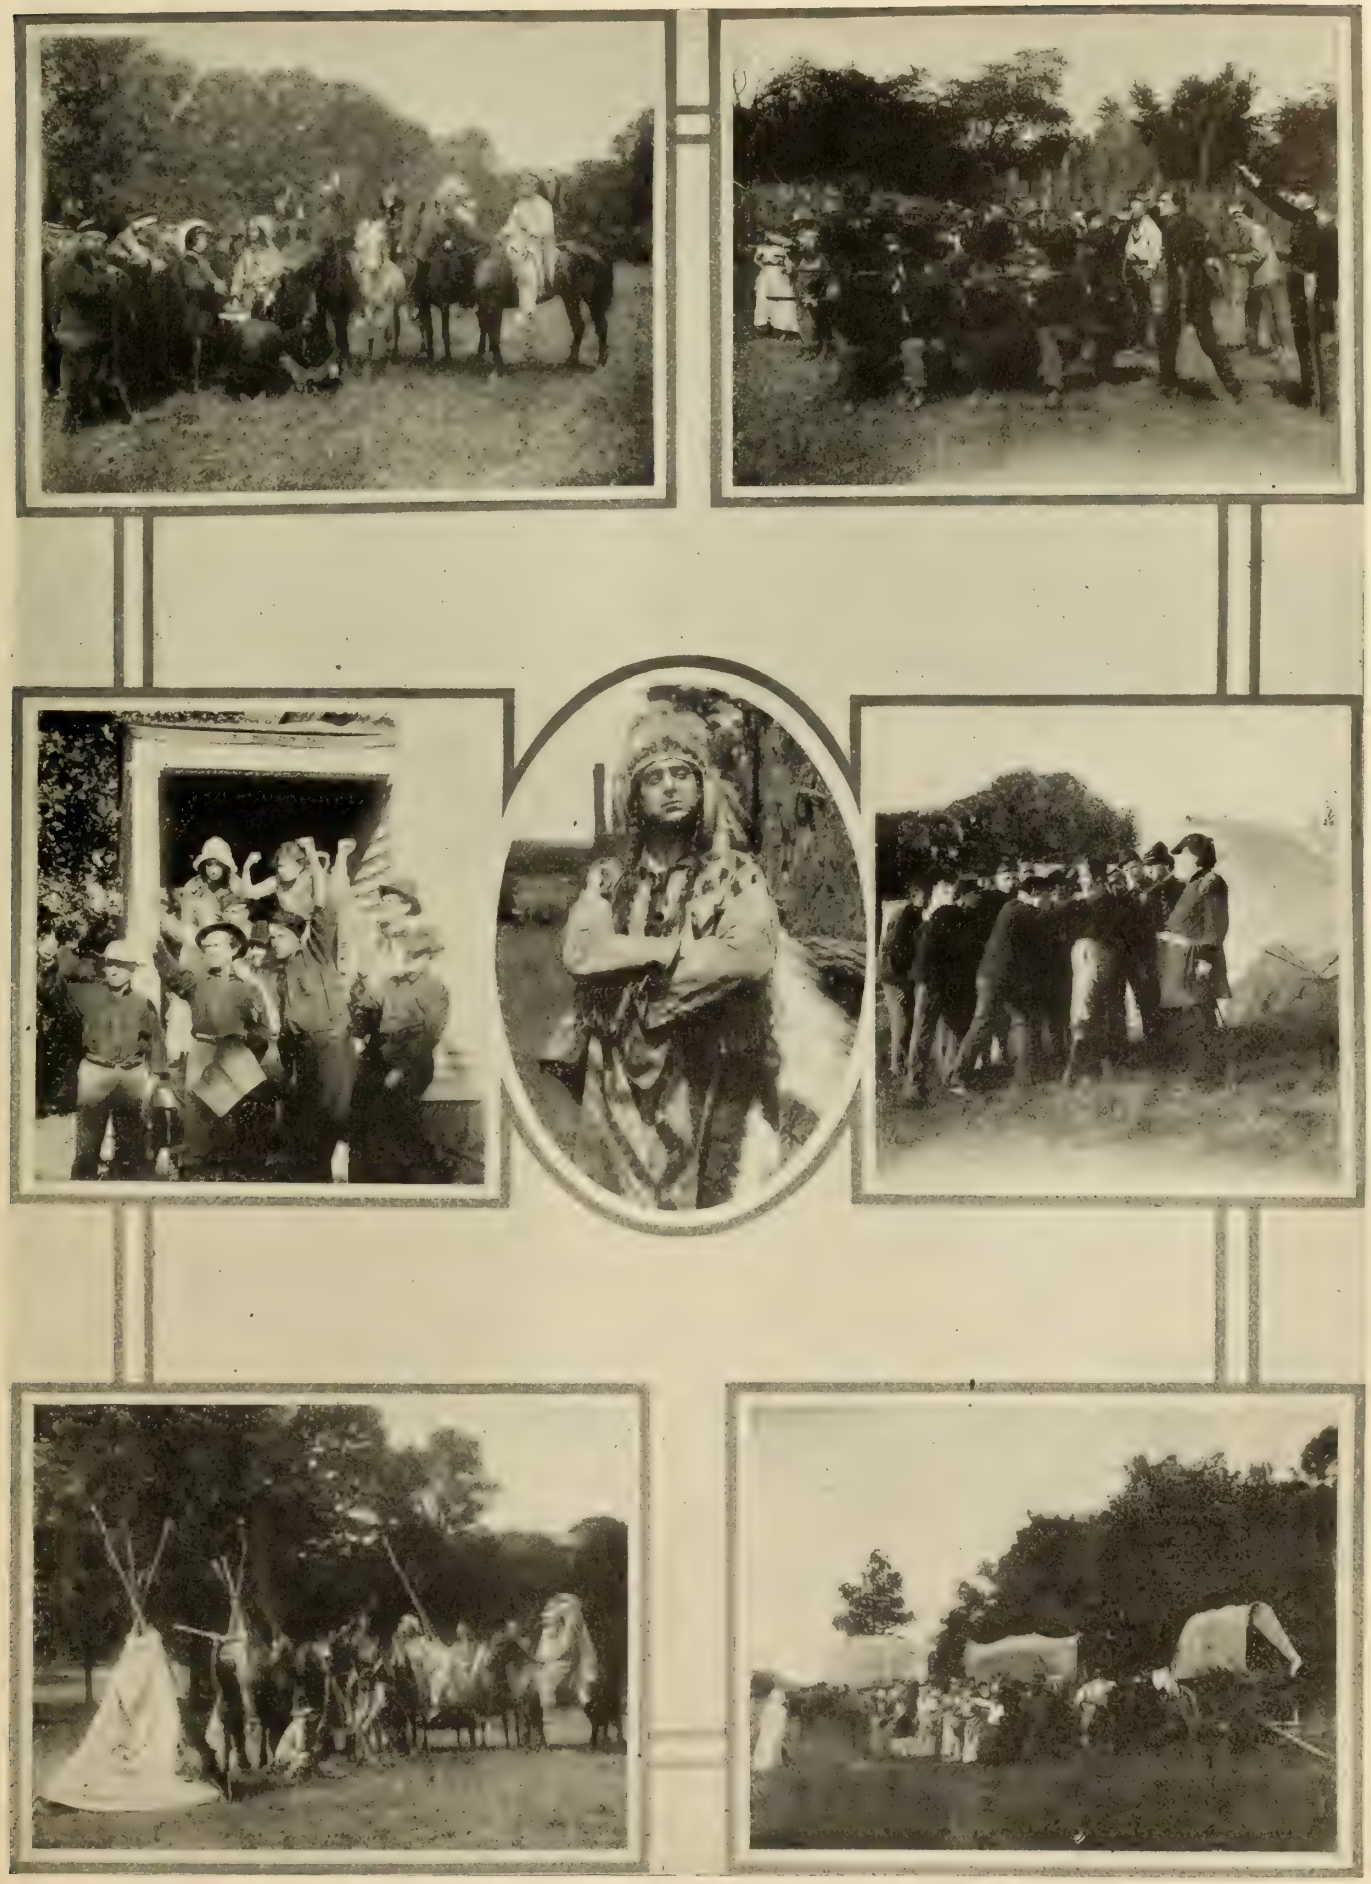
The next scene presents Zachary Taylor at the gateway of Fort Crawford, a large wooden block house. He is deep in thought as he thinks of his wife and children and home in St. Louis. A scene is immediately introduced giving us the subject of his thoughts.

The next scene shows us the capture of the mail bags by a party of Indians. The latter form an ambuscade and as the troopers ride past they open fire. As the smoke clears away, we see several bodies on the trail. This is a fine scene and full of action. The Indians carry the mail to the camp, where an interpreter reads a letter from Mrs. Taylor to her husband, advising him that she and her daughters are on the way to Ft. Crawford. Black Hawk immediately plans the abduction of one of the daughters, returns the mail to the bag and dispatches several of his men to place them again on the trail where they had been secured. One of the men who had escaped from the Indian attack had reported to Major Taylor, who had sent out another troop to find the Indians. They discover the mail and carry it back to Ft. Madison.

Major Taylor reads his wife's letter and fully aware of the cunning of the Indians, knowing that they have read the mail, he dispatches Lieutenant Davis and an escort to meet his wife and children and convoy them to the block house.

The next scene shows us Black Hawk and his companions in a forest recess, near the trail, awaiting the wagon with Mrs. Taylor and her family. Scouts approach the wagon and immediately retreat again, having planned how to make the abduction. Davis and his troop are next seen arriving at the Taylor camp where he meets Mrs. Taylor and Misses Sarah and Elizabeth. It is a case of love at first sight with Davis and Sarah, and they engage in close conversation. Finally good-night is said and Sarah retires to the rear of the wagon, where she stands for a while, with bowed head, in thought. At this juncture an Indian, dressed in a bear skin, and approaching on all fours, springs up and placing his hand on her mouth forces her away towards the Indian camp.

The opening scene of the second reel shows us Davis in despair and bewilderment after discovering the loss of Sarah. Accompanied by Lincoln he sets out to find her. They come upon a party of Indians in the forest, one of whom is



Scenes from the American Film Co.'s Historic Two-Reel Production, "The Fall of Black Hawk."

Sioux Chief Ogalalla Fire.

First Meeting of Lincoln and Davis.

SCENES FROM "THE FALL OF BLACK HAWK" (American).

forcibly placing Sarah on a horse. In the attack which follows, he is knocked unconscious, but not seriously injured. He is rescued by Lincoln, who had defeated his enemy as the Indians disappear on a gallop with Sarah.

We next view her in the camp of Black Hawk. She is pleading to be returned to her family, but Black Hawk gives her into the hands of a guard and she is placed in a tepee. She escapes that night, after cutting her bonds on a tomahawk. The Indians follow in close pursuit and, hard pressed, she jumps into the river. Just before entering the water, she picks up a reed for future use. Davis and Abe are seen following the two Indians closely, and several shots are exchanged, but no damage is done. Sarah swims well, and seeing that the Indians are following her in a canoe, she sinks beneath the water, under the shade of a great tree, and putting the reed in her mouth, gets air from the surface. We see the Indians paddling around vainly in the endeavor to find her. Just then Davis and Jefferson, accompanied by Elizabeth, rush to the rescue. The two men fire at the Indians and succeed in rescuing Sarah from the river.

The next scene depicts Taylor's arrival at his wife's camp, and immediately afterwards we see a large body of Indians, horseback and afoot, on the warpath. Next we see a large caravan composed of many settlers and the Taylor family slowly filing towards Ft. Crawford, while the Indians follow closely. The settlers arrive at the block house and close the gates, with the Indians close behind.

Three attacks on Ft. Madison are then revealed. First the Indians use a battering ram and try to beat down the gate, but are repulsed. Then they endeavor to fire the blockhouse with burning fagots, but this also fails. The third attempt is made by shooting burning arrows into the blockhouse, which is soon afire. In the midst of the exciting scene we notice that Lieutenant Davis and Sarah Taylor are united in the very face of death.

The settlers are driven from the fort by the flames and the men make a furious charge, dispersing the Indians in all directions.

The final scene shows the capture of Black Hawk, and his convoy fording a river. He is brought before General Scott and insolently refuses to sign the treaty placed before him. Later on, seeing the hopelessness of his cause, we witness his signature to the document.

The photography and technique of these films deserve praise. The acting and the action throughout are very appropriate. It must be remembered that the Indian style of warfare meant ambuscade rather than a fight in the open, so that if the action at times seems slow, the facts must be borne in mind. The scenario of "The Fall of Black Hawk" was written by Omer F. Dowd, and if there be departures at times from the actual historical accounts, these will be pardoned for the sake of dramatic effect. The films were produced by Joseph Sullivan and William Lee. The part of Abraham Lincoln has been well sustained by H. G. Lonsdale. Miss Zelma Barber gives a clever impersonation of Sarah Taylor, while the roles of Winfield Scott, Jefferson Davis and Zachary Taylor are well presented by Charles E. Gould, David Fischer and George E. Cole. Seymour Rose makes a picturesque Black Hawk. Among the Indians in the cast are Ogalalla Fire, a full-blooded Sioux Indian, and Little Bear. Ogalalla is 87 years of age and in feathers and war paint makes a magnificent appearance.

"The Fall of Black Hawk" will be handled on the state rights plan, and release will be made July 10th.

"MATES AND MISMATES" (Powers).

In "Mates and Mismates" the stars of the Powers Picture Players appear at their best in a society drama in which is depicted the inevitable results of parents mating their children for gain or convenience.

Mabel Wentworth and Jack Allison are lovers. Theirs is the sweet, untainted love that is satisfying and they are happy. The aristocratic mother of Jack has other plans for her son and she chooses a woman who is already a shining light in society at early age. The father of Mabel selects for her a husband who is possessed of wealth and position and the sweethearts find their dream of love rudely shattered and grieve in consequence. The wife of Jack proves to be a woman without a sense of honor or duty and she carries on a clandestine affair with another man with the inevitable result—a flight and a note of explanation. Jack reproaches his mother and his life is wrecked as well as his little fortune and he meditates and resolves on self-destruction. He is strong in his trouble and thinks differently.

The husband of Mabel soon tires of the simple ways of his wife and seeks other diversion, with the result that he is attracted by a woman and he deserts his wife. She returns home and relates all of the harrowing details to her father, upbraiding him for mating her with one so unworthy in every way. He is stricken with remorse and dies.

One of the guilty parties meet death on pleasure bent on the water, and the other quarrels on a cliff and both fall to their death below. Mabel, her cup of bitterness filled to overflowing, goes out in a small boat to drown herself just as Jack has visited the pond on similar intent. He throws himself in the water and is rescued by Mabel, and they are once more reunited and free to marry, every obstacle to their union having been removed, a fitting close to an interesting story with a moral.

A QUAINT ANIMAL PICTURE.

One of the quaintest domestic animal pictures yet produced will be released by the Selig Polyscope Company on July 2nd. It is called "The Cat and the Canary" and in its production were used two dogs, a cat, four kittens, a canary, and two players. It is called a pastoral comedy drama of old New England and more than holds the auditor's interest while one thousand feet of the quaint "Pomander Walk"-like story unfolds itself.

NEW ARKANSAS PICTURE COMPANY.

George Ketcham, of Little Rock, Ark., is one of the incorporators of the Ketcham Moving Picture Company. It is intended to pay special attention to local scenery and interests. Later it is intended to send a staff to Mexico. The headquarters of the company will be in Little Rock.

Doings In Los Angeles.

A Quiet Week Reported, But Everybody Seems Busy—Bison to Make Big War Pictures.

THIS has been an unusually quiet week in Los Angeles, so far as the motion picture industry is concerned. At all the studios the usual routine work is being done. The Pathe Western company got away to Orange County under the leadership of James Young Deer, the director, and are now located on the great "S and M" ranch. They took with them a carload of horses and another carload of performers, costumes and properties, and for the next six weeks will be engaged in the production of big Indian and Western pictures.

The Selig Company has finally finished the big Monte Cristo picture on which it has been engaged for several weeks, and there has been a natural tendency to slacken up all around for a few days. Another big picture is being planned it is said for the near future. Possibly this will be a jungle story, for new animals have been arriving weekly and added to the menagerie at the Wild Animal Farm.

Director Sturgeon, of the Vitagraph Company at Santa Monica, is expecting a visit within the next few days from A. E. Smith, treasurer of that company, who is on his way from New York. It is reported that there are to be extensive and important improvements at the studio as soon as he arrives and that the company is to be substantially enlarged.

The Kalem branch company at Glendale, under George Melford's management, continues to make high class Western pictures, and lately has been spending much time in the foothills back of Glendale.

The Universal companies in this field—the Bison, the Imp and the Nestor—seem to be the busiest just now. The Imp forces now consist of four companies, all playing split-reel comedies, two under Fred Mace and two under Edward L. LeSaint. Eddie Lyons and Virginia Kirtley are playing leads with one of LeSaint's companies and Harry Pollard and Margarita Fischer with the other. LeSaint also has a new camera man, William Foster, formerly with Selig.

Three releases a week are being turned out at the Nestor studios, notwithstanding the disorder and confusion caused by the numerous improvements and alterations which are being made around the plant. A new member of the company is Baby Brierley, the five-year-old daughter of Tom Brierley, chief stage carpenter at the studio. The baby is utterly without self-consciousness and is one of the most charming actresses in the business as everyone will be saying when some of the early releases appear.

W. H. Clifford, head of the Pacific Motion Picture Co., is still in the neighborhood of Santa Barbara with his players. They went north to take pictures among the Channel Islands, but on their return to the mainland discovered some backgrounds that could not be "passed up" and decided to wait a week longer to make use of them.

Busy at Nestor Studio.

With three directors constantly at work things are humming at the Nestor Studio in Hollywood. Thomas Ricketts, principal director for the company, tried his hand this week at a Civil War story and found that it went so well that he will make several others in the near future. The film will be an early regular one-reel release under the title of "The Fortunes of War."

The really big picture of the week was produced by Milton H. Sahrney. The story required a Western saloon to be burned down, so Sahrney sent carpenters out into the outskirts of town the day before to erect a building. Next day he took his company and about 100 extra people out, rehearsed the scene once or twice and then burned down the building in order to get what he wanted.

Alfred E. Christie, the other director, seems to have a life job turning out his Wild West series to which he is now devoting all his time. He turns out one each week with the regularity of clockwork.

Hereafter when all three directors insist that they have to work in the studio on the same day it won't be necessary to fight it out. The stage has been enlarged until it is more than half a block long and will accommodate five scenes at a time in a pinch.

Sunset Weekly in "Q" Theaters.

Scenes taken in the courtroom where the trial of Clarence Darrow, charged with bribery in connection with the McNamara cases, is being held, are to be one of the features of the new Los Angeles Weekly which will be issued for the first time June 17, and will appear every Monday thereafter.

Hugh C. McClung, director of the Sunset Motion Picture Co., which is responsible for the novel experiment, was given permission by the presiding judge, the district attorney and the defendant this week and devoted the greater portion of an afternoon to filming bits here and there, showing the trial in progress. The Darrow trial is attracting attention all over the world and the interest is especially keen in Los Angeles.

The weekly, for the time being, will not circulate outside of Los Angeles, and in this city will appear exclusively at the several "Q" theaters under the management of the Quinn Bros.

A few days before the first picture appeared Quinn Brothers, who operate three of the principal downtown theaters, received a wire from the Motion Pictures Patents Co. warning them that the exhibition of the weekly would result in the cancellation of their license. The three brothers held a consultation with their attorneys and thereafter announced that not only would they exhibit the weekly according to program but that they would in all probability continue to show licensed pictures in their theaters.

No explanation of the mysterious means by which they are planning to perform the seemingly impossible was volunteered. Apparently the Quinn Brothers intend to fight. There have been vague references to the Sherman law, which may throw some light on the situation. Two of their theaters are located on Broadway in the very heart of the shopping district. The other is a downtown house centrally located. All three are doing big business and are among the most profitable in town.

That the boys have ample financial backing is shown by the fact that within the last two weeks they took a fifty-year lease on one of the most valuable sites on Broadway and are having plans drawn for a ten-story hotel and theater which will be erected at once.

Bison to Make "War Pictures."

The announcement made at the Bison offices this week that that company will soon begin the production of a series of two and three-reel Civil War subjects will be of interest to exhibitors as well as motion picture fans. Everybody knows the quality of the Bison Company's Indian and Western military pictures, and so the announcement that the Civil War is to be exploited in the same careful manner is a guarantee of a series of productions that will do the motion picture industry a great deal of good. Arrangements for the new departure are now being made; in fact, a great many of the costumes have already arrived and properties are arriving every day. "This is going to be the real thing," says Richard V. Spencer, of the Bison Company. "Just wait until the equipment is all here and Director Ince will show the moving picture world something that will make it sit up and open its eyes."

Brevities.

Miss Gussie Quin, who has been office manager and secretary of the Pathe Western Company, has resigned in order to go to Seattle where she will make her home. Miss Virginia Skelly will succeed her.

Miss Gertrude Clair, formerly a leading woman for the Nestor Company, has returned to that company after an absence of more than a year and will soon reappear in the pictures.

Three new names were added to the Bison Company's roster this week. Miss Jane Keckley, characters, went over from the Selig Company where she had been for two years. Edgar M. Keller, another experienced motion picture actor, has also been taken on for characters. Miss Helen Case, former leading woman for the Vitagraph Company, is the third addition. She will play leads with one of the Bison companies.

Miss Hazelle Baker, photoplay editor for the Western Pathe Company, was seriously injured this week when she fainted and fell through a glass skylight at the Edendale Studio. The company was putting on a picture and just for a lark she donned a costume and joined the ranks of the supernumeraries. The exertion and excitement brought on the fainting spell which resulted in the accident. Both arms were deeply gashed by broken glass and she has been confined to her bed ever snice under the care of a physician.

The following information is for the enlightenment of ambitious young women who want to become motion picture actresses because "the woman don't have anything to do in the moving pictures": Josephine Ricketts, leading woman of the Nestor Company, in a production which was finished this week, changed her costume fourteen times in one day and a change of make-up was called for eight times.

Coincidence, rather than any noticeable slump in business, is believed to be responsible for the simultaneous closing of three downtown picture theaters. The Nestor Theater, 247 South Main Street, will probably be abandoned permanently, for the chairs have been taken out and it is being remodeled into a billiard hall. The Gem Theater, Seventh and Main streets, is temporarily closed. The California, 238 South Spring Street, has been dark for several days, but it may reopen under new management in the near future.

"Written in Blood" (Gaumont)

By Louis Reeves Harrison.

LIEUTENANTS LESPARRE and Gerard are shot down and nearly buried by falling walls while fighting in the same regiment under Napoleon at Vauchamps against the British under Wellington's command. Both are abandoned for dead during the active movement of troops, but Lesparre gradually regains consciousness and manages to extricate himself from the debris. Not far away he finds the body of Gerard, examines it to see if life remains and finally breaks down in a fit of nervous weeping over the death of his comrade.

Lesparre binds up his own wounds—they are slight—and looks about him. There is no one within call, none within reach of vision save those stiffened with death. His squadron has swept on to other fields of action, and he is alone. He is about to rise and find his way to some place of greater safety than the path of conflict when it occurs to him that Gerard may have friends deeply interested in his fate and he searches the pockets of his fellow-lieutenant.

Lesparre has thus far been actuated by the best of motives. He has shown bravery, devotion and sympathetic feeling, but he becomes transformed by what has turned many a man from the natural course of his life into the alluring path of sudden gain. He finds among Gerard's papers a recent letter from attorneys announcing that an enormous inheritance in cash and securities awaits the appearance and identification of the man who lies dead before him. The necessity of identification, other documents indicating that Gerard is not personally known to the attorneys of the estate and the fact Lesparre strongly resembles the heir leads him to consider the idea of impersonating Gerard long enough to secure possession of the property.

Here is opportunity for fine emotional work in small scope, depicting the inner struggle between powers for good and evil in every man's character. His first thought has been for the dead man; there is manliness in the make-up of Lesparre, but he yields all too promptly to the temptation, pockets Gerard's papers and transfers his own to the clothes of his comrade. He rises in his new identity to follow an entirely new line of life with small regard for the honor of his own.

After his first false step Lesparre carries out his plan with the skill and daring of a veteran criminal, though it transpires that he is merely one of those primitive individuals who imagine that the possession of wealth has not counterbalancing cares. He goes to the inn of a man named Bersac, a gentleman addicted to pulling the ends of his heavy mustache and a former canteen keeper of the regiment, and enters into a plot to obtain the great fortune.

In order to secure the essential identification or as support to the evidences of it he has stolen from Gerard, Lesparre offers an enormous bribe to Bersac and his wife. They are at first reluctant but, a view of documents describing the inherited estate, they yield to temptation and become criminal participants in Lesparre's scheme. They go with him to the offices of the attorney and there is enacted one of those purely theatrical scenes so rare if not impossible in real life.

It is not in the nature of lawyers to give up any property on which they have once laid their hands, but in all plays where the inevitable uncle leaves a vast and timely estate, the legal sharks hand it over cheerfully and in such compact form that it can be carried away in a valise. Bersac and his wife formally attest that the claimant is none other than gallant Lieutenant Gerard, the fortune is removed from a safe and it is carried away by the band to Bersac's inn.

Honest Lesparre keeps his word. He hands Bersac a trifle of twenty thousand dollars, his wife another memento of the same nature, and retires to a real castle—it is shown in the pictures—to amuse himself in his own way. He need worry no longer. He has enough to satisfy his heart's desire, and that consists of carrying out in a lordly manner the role he has assumed.

Now it transpires that the real Gerard did not die. He was carried from the field in a state of coma and taken to a hospital when an army surgeon discovered that life was not extinct. There he rapidly improved and we meet him again at the moment he is about to leave. Upon examining the papers found in the pockets of his uniform he finds those of Lesparre. He hurries at once to the office of the easy mark who had charge of his inheritance and is at first denounced as an imposter.

The real claimant insistently demands his rights and is shown the attestations of Bersac and his wife as to the first claimant's identity. He happens to know Bersac and seeks him out at his café. The inn-keeper attempts to put up a front, but breaks down under pressure and lays bare the plot devised by Lesparre. His wife goes further in making good by restoring intact the portions received by herself and husband. For this they are granted immunity from prosecution and the real Gerard proceeds to call on the false one.

Lieutenant Gerard finds the gentleman impersonating him at an old castle converted to modern uses. As the rightful owner of the property he dispenses with formality and forces an entrance to the study in spite of the protests of attendants. Once face to face with the gentleman who has calmly appropriated the wealth intended for him to enjoy he does not put him under arrest nor even slap him on the wrist—he demands an explanation.

Gerard Confronts the Bersacs—Scene from Gaumont's "Written in Blood."

The resourceful Lesparre is at first taken off his guard and "recoils in horror" at the apparition of one he never expected to see again, but he recovers his nerve and treats the matter as one of excusable error under the circumstances. He merely expected to enjoy in an honorable manner what Gerard could not possibly need. He points out that he has conducted himself like a gentleman and a soldier since his accession to wealth, and gives assurance that he will make full amends by turning the property over, castle and all, without vexatious litigation.

In evidence of his good faith he shows the real Gerard over the magnificent estate he will enjoy. He escorts him along the ancient ramparts to the great dungeon tower and leads him by degrees to the dungeon formerly used for political prisoners. After pointing out the impossibility of escape from a chamber, lighted only by a narrow slit heavily barred with iron, the clever Lesparre slips out and locks the door behind him, entombing the unfortunate Gerard.

Scene from "Written in Blood" (Gaumont).

All goes well—Gerard dieting on bread and water—until one day the prisoner is visited by a pair of pigeons, former tenants of the dungeon, and at the same time by an idea that may lead to his escape. He tears a strip from his kerchief, pricks a vein in his arm and lets out enough of his precious life fluid to serve as ink while he indites an epistle to the world at large. He scrawls on the bit of linen, "Imprisoned in tower. Help!"

Scene from "Written in Blood" (Gaumont).

This message of uncertain destination he affixes to the pigeon's left leg and sends the declaration forth to whom it may concern. Who else should it concern but the daughter of the Imperial Prosecutor, a nice jeunne fille Francaise, wholly unaccustomed to receiving anonymous letters, though ready to say "Oui, Monsieur," to almost any proposition that will enable her to escape from the dungeon of parental authority?

Of course, she gets it. Destiny arranged that in advance by leading her to prepare a little nest for the same pigeons on her tiny balcony. There she communes with them every day in process of learning how to bill and coo. They fly from the dungeon tower—we see them do this in the picture—and alight on the balcony puffed up with importance. She investigates and finds the message poor Gerard has written in blood.

Meanwhile how is the imposter getting along? He, also, is visited by a couple of birds, his accomplices, M. and Mme. Bersac. These honest people have grown suspicious because they have heard nothing from the rightful heir since he left them to claim his property. Lesparre is as plausible as ever, but not convincing. They conclude to stay where they are and investigate.

The Imperial Prosecutor only smiles indulgently when his romantic daughter brings him the message written in blood, but her merciful instincts prevail over his merciless skepticism and he decides to visit the castle. His daughter fastens a reply to the carrier pigeon's leg, a modest little word, "hope," dabs some poudre de ris on her spunky nose and sallies forth to assist at the rescue. Thus it happens that the Imperial Prosecutor arrives at a critical moment.

Lesparre is nothing if not courteous. He repeats to Monsieur le Prosecutor what he has already told to the Bersacs. His dear friend Gerard, whom he once supposed to be dead has returned alive, but enfeebled and has had to go back to his hospital for an operation. The prosecutor's daughter does not believe the story. She boldly declares that Lesparre has imprisoned Gerard in the tower that he may dispose of the estate and leave the country. Her papa now approves. His daughter's idea has at last reached him. He insists upon making a search. Righteous Bersac suddenly becomes inflamed and draws a pistol. He points the gun at the man who dared corrupt him and tells the villain to lead the way. Being a soldier Lesparre does as he is ordered and marches in advance of a flying column across the same ramparts where he guided the unsuspicious Gerard.

Gerard is found in the dungeon—the Imperial Prosecutor's daughter just knew he was there all the time—and he is taken to the bosom of his property as a preparatory measure. Lesparre is left in his place—the villain—to repent at leisure, but who cares what becomes of him. He has been a fool from the outset, when he might have made a quick getaway with an enormous fortune in a valise instead of buying real estate and settling down where he was sure to be recognized sooner or later. Nobody cares what becomes of him.

As for the right Gerard and the Imperial Prosecutor's daughter, the last seen of them is in her papa's salon seated at a table with the young officer she has been largely instrumental in rescuing from the oblivion of the tower dungeon. He is exhibiting his appreciation in the warmest way that the watchful eyes of her papa will permit, when suddenly one after another of the billing and cooing birds fly to the table and, in a delightful final scene, indicate what is soon to happen between the two they have helped bring into the sweetest relation known on earth.

EVERYBODY DOES IT.

A film man was looking at the pictures and, in a running conversation with a World man, was commenting, at times adversely, on the work of his competitors. "You know in the trade we often roast each other's work, and perhaps we do enjoy pointing out the other fellow's shortcomings—picking flaws, noting errors of judgment, or lack of knowledge of some particular factor, and oftentimes calling attention to palpable carelessness. Now carelessness, of course, is the least excusable of the many varieties of blunders."

Just as the speaker ceased talking—he was interested in watching one of his own productions—the World man, who also was closely following the work on the screen, said: "I notice your ambitious young moneymaker up there on the canvas has been able to buy shares of a prominent railroad on a ten-cent margin. Stock exchange houses require a margin of $10 a share. You know that. Come, now, how about you?"

The picture maker's jaw dropped slightly. "Yes," he confessed, "I'm guilty. You're the second one who has called my attention to the blunder—of carelessness. Let's go. I'll buy."

SUNDAY PICTURES NO VIOLATION.

The Mayor of Fulton, N. Y., in a letter to the members of the Ministerial Association which he requested be read to their congregations in the event of any pulpit reference to the subject, notifies them that he has referred to the city attorney the request of the ministers that the picture theaters be closed on Sunday; that he is informed by that legally constituted adviser of the city government that neither under the statutes of New York nor the ordinances of Fulton is it a violation of the law to exhibit moving pictures on Sunday; and that consequently he does not think he is justified in ordering arrests. The Mayor of Fulton is evidently a believer in the Gaynorian policy—that we live under a government of laws and not of men—and has the backbone to say so.

Advertising for Exhibitors

Conducted by EPES WINTHROP SARGENT.

If We Only Could.

HERE is a letter from a manager who wants to know how to make his Thursday business as good as that done Saturday night. Could we get a patent on any scheme like that we would be able to buy the Capitol building at Washington for a residence and use the Library of Congress for a kennel for our dog. But the inquirer presents some interesting problems; problems that puzzle a great many of our readers and he raises the question of vaudeville or no vaudeville. For a proper understanding of the situation we give his letter:

"Have been a reader of your valuable work on 'Advertising for Exhibitors' since my first week in the moving picture game, about two years ago (and we only started last fall!—E. W. S.), but have never written your department before; having nothing to contribute that in my estimation was worthy of being copied by other exhibitors, I was content to remain quiet and read your hints to advertisers and tried some suggestions which worked fairly well for a time.

"We are located in a small town of 1,200, run 3 nights a week, Tuesday, Thursday and Saturday, seat 585, in the Opera House, use Independent service over 30 days old, run pictures only (3 reels), on Tuesday and Thursday at 5 cents, and on Saturday put on one act of vaudeville with 3 reels at 5 and 10 cents.

"Our Tuesday and Thursday night business is not nearly so good as it was a year ago at this time, while Saturday night is holding its own; we were giving away prizes at that time which of course boosted business somewhat above normal, and after the novelty began to wear off and people began to realize that they could not all win prizes the prize nights began to go bad; later we adopted the plan of giving a spoon with a Tuesday, a Thursday and a Saturday coupon (had special tickets printed), and that did not prove satisfactory; our conditions required them to have a coupon of each of the three nights, and they would have, maybe two Tuesdays and one Saturday coupon, and would insist on getting a spoon, putting up the argument that the two Tuesday tickets cost as much as one Tuesday and one Thursday ticket, which was true; but our aim was to get the attendance on all three nights as good as it was on Saturday night; we tried running vaudeville on Tuesday and Thursday night, but they don't relish putting up a thin dime save on Saturday night, when they certainly do turn out in good shape and we pack the house. Have good piano player, but am unable to get her to play the pictures as she should; she also sings the illustrated song and has fairly good voice. We keep the house in good, clean condition and do everything possible to get good Tuesday and Thursday night houses. Can you offer any suggestions through your columns that might help a condition 'wot's got my goat'? We tried featuring an educational or scenic every Tuesday night, but they did not draw worth a cent. We produce a good, clear light and no fault can be found with the pictures as I am always very careful to select a program that could not possibly offend anyone and give them as much of a variety as the film exchange will allow us, but that does not seem to be the trouble; the patrons seem to be satisfied with what we offer them in a way, but we are unable to work up the proper enthusiasm over the Tuesday and Thursday night shows. We ran a couple of Gaumont Weeklies with a great deal of advertising, but they did not pull the crowd and those that were there did not think it anything so extraordinary.

"Now here is the whole situation in a nutshell: the people turn out good on Saturday night at 10 cents to see pictures and vaudeville. Up to a few weeks ago they turned out nearly as strong on Tuesday and Thursday at 5 cents to see pictures, but now the 5 cent nights have gone back almost half of what they were a year ago, with no apparent reason other than we are not giving prizes, and even that does not draw them now. They seem to want vaudeville only on Saturday night; now if you can suggest anything that looks like a 'first aid to the injured' let's have it, anything from an oratorical contest to a greased pole expedition.

"Except I have already taken up too much of your valuable time with my troubles, and trusting you might be able to offer some suggestions through the columns of 'Advertising Department' that will be of some benefit not only to me but to perhaps some other brother exhibitor who may be up against the same conditions."

Scattered Shots.

We think the keynote of this letter is found in the statement that a "couple" of Gaumont Weeklies were tried with small effect. From general reports all over the country the Pathe, Animated, and Gaumont Weeklies have made for better business when shown on a regular night each week, but only where the reel is less than ten days old. In these days of the illustrated press, month-old news in picture form is stale news indeed and if the Weekly was of the same age as the rest (above 30 days) the answer is plain. If it was of recent issue the scheme might have worked had the showing of the feature been persisted in. Two weeks is too short a time, even in a small town, to try out the full effect of a move. The people who see it the first week may bring others and so on, but here it does not seem that the Weekly is going to be the solution of the problem even though it should be possible to get the issue more promptly.

It is a self-evident certainty that an audience of the sort that will hustle an extra five cents to see one act of cheap vaudeville is not going to be attracted on the off nights by educationals and scenics, as has been tried. The gross takings of the house will not be much in excess of $60. You can't get a fair vaudeville act for one night for less than $25 single and $40 double. You can get them for less than that, but they will not be the sort ranking as even fair. Even the $25 act will not be very good and if this is the sort of thing the audience wants—and we are not wholly content that the crowd comes to see the vaudeville alone—scenics will not appeal and the educational features will not appeal. But most of the crowd will come Saturday night anyhow, and we would suggest that the experiment be tried of using an additional reel; a semi-feature, on Saturday in place of the vaudeville. Then try the same grade vaudeville act on Tuesday night with the ten cent admission. If the business shifts from Saturday to Tuesday it is fair to assume that it is the vaudeville that draws. If the business holds to Saturday drop vaudeville and stick to film.

Film Will Work.

We do not like a combination of pictures and vaudeville, and it is not because we do not like vaudeville, either. We think we know vaudeville as well as any writer in the country and we know it from the "dumps" of San Francisco to the Palace Theater of Varieties in London. Our objection is not based on ignorance but on positive knowledge of facts and conditions and it is because of that knowledge that we argue against vaudeville as a booster to the picture game.

Vaudeville in photoplay houses was introduced before the time of the feature reel. The pressure of competition grew strong and some managers turned to vaudeville in their search for novelty. Anything new will attract. The "opposition" sought the same advantage and there has been raised up a tradition that vaudeville must be used when business gets bad, although the sort of vaudeville that the small photoplay theater can afford tends to kill healthy growth instead of foster it. If you will spend with the exchange for features half the money you are willing to spend for vaudeville, the better bill will attract a better class of patronage and hold that which you have. It has worked in 95 per cent. of all cases where it has been tried and will work in the same proportion any place in the country.

Prizes and Things.

We are not keen for an elaborate and persistent use of prizes. The gift feature is all right to build business, but if persisted in too long it will react against the house.

One bad feature of such a scheme is that it must be built up. From time to time the value of the prizes or souvenirs must be increased until there arrives the period when the prize not only wipes out the profits but represents a loss.

The souvenir is better than the prize since there is less dissatisfaction, but it seems to us that the better plan of distribution would have been a strip ticket and a spoon at the time of purchase. Get a form of ticket that will give you three tickets on the same card, perforating rule being used between the divisions. Number these tickets one, two and three, and have it clearly understood that the tickets are good only for the dates on which they are issued. On the back of the card, but only in the space devoted to the Thursday and Saturday tickets, print this card:

> This special souvenir ticket is sold to encourage the regular attendance of our patrons. Tickets are good only for the date given and cannot be accepted for other performances or redeemed if not used.

Now, when your feminine patrons purchase a twenty cent ticket on Monday they are given tickets for the three performances and the spoon. If there is a subsequent kick of any sort, the printing on the back of the card is all the argument you will need. Some persons cannot understand why if three coupons are good for one spoon any three coupons are not good for the same article, but if they complete the transaction there is no room for reasonable argument. If you want to save the cost of double printing print the above card on the face. It is well to use a different color for each week.

What We Would Do.

We think that if we bought this house from the present management we would see the exchange people and see the very best they could do for us on a fresher service for a price reasonably within our means. We would see just what they wanted for feature stuff, not shown in our town, no matter what the age so long as it was in reasonably good condition. We would make a new contract that would include the price of that vaudeville act and perhaps a bit more.

Then we would go back to the town and have a long talk with the editor of the local paper. If he ran a job office, as most small town editors do, we would have a longer talk with him. The first part of the talk would be about the pictures. We would tell him what we hoped to do, explain all about the coming features and get him interested. We would arrange for a card to run in the paper and have a frank talk about how much reading notice we could get. Then we would talk about the job printing office, get him to tell the foreman to prove up all the stock cuts and styles of type. While we were fixing for that we would suggest to the job compositor that he ought to drop down to the show now and then on a Monday and get a look at some good pictures, and we would write him a "Pass 2" to back up the invitation with.

We would try and get a chat with the head of the school system; with all the principals, if there was more than one school, and we would write a letter to the exchange to please get us some classical or Biblical stories. Then we would get after the ministers.

Getting Everybody Interested.

There is something in the film catalogue that will interest every man, woman and child in America. We would try to get something to interest every man, woman and child of the 1,200 in our town.

Most towns of that size have one or more literary clubs. They would be interested in the visualized novels of Dickens, Haggard (Jess, not She, perhaps) and others. There are other reels that will interest some of the secret societies, welfare workers, churches, in fact any society with a membership of more than five.

Just about now there is interest in fresh air funds and children's aid. Get your local editor to put you in touch with some paper in the nearest city. Show the child reels, announcing that you will give an extra performance for the benefit of the fund of the big city paper. They will give you a write-up that the local editor will reprint and you can have it reproduced on circulars to reach everybody. You're just the Photopalace in Smalltown, but it will tickle the Smalltowners that the house is recognized by the Big-city Times. We would not overlook a single bet that appeals to local pride —not if we could help it.

But we wouldn't have these things come off on Saturday. We would feel pretty certain that Saturday would care for itself. The big stunts would come on Tuesdays and Thursdays. You don't hitch an extra horse to a four-horse team with the three-horse load. You put the extra on the wagon with a horse and a half-load and only one horse. We wouldn't get worried because business fell off along in June. We would expect that. We would fight for the old crowds, fighting with fans and novelties, but we would expect a drop.

The Direct Appeal.

But these plans are all general. We would get after the individuals as well. There is, in every town, a small aristocracy, and usually there is a leader. Put in some reserved seats. Then get the leader to come and sit in one of them. She'll not be lonesome long. She may be hard to get, but you can get her. Perhaps she's interested in some pet charity, an orphan asylum, a hospital or something. Offer her a benefit. You put up the show and the printing and she gets after the crowd. Give her all the help you can and the first thing you know she'll be as much of a photoplayfan as any eighteen-year-old girl.

Make good use of postcards. Get some of the good-looking leading men and attractive leading women. Mail them around, not once, but every couple of weeks for a time. Get them interested and the first thing you know everyone in town will be coming. You can't do it as long as you have poor vaudeville to kill the effect of good films and the chances are that you cannot do it with undated stuff, but if you get some commercial and some dated runs and pick out the better class of product, you can make the pictures a local fad. Not all the people who will come are interested in prize contests or silver-plated spoons, but you can make them all interested in the right sort of pictures.

As for the oratorical contest and greased poles, we have from time to time outlined a lot of good schemes that others have tried. The inquirers have only to read back for these. Make the appeal to local interest strong in these contests, but do not make it so strong that bitterness is engendered. Play up the personality of the players. Be liberal with souvenir post cards, gets sets of the players' portraits. If you have a large lobby put them in the lobby, but don't crowd it. In a small town you do not need to yell at the crowds as you do in the sections of a city where appeal is made to the passer-by. Put the pictures where they can be seen, but do not shoot them at your patrons. Foster the photoplay spirit in every way, get established as one of the town's live wires, and the only thing you'll need worry about is how to increase your seating capacity.

Using the Lecture.

The Poinciana Theater, Tampa, Florida, used the Kalem Egyptian industrial reel, and by way of advertising issued the lecture sent out by the Kalem Company and this card:

EGYPT, AS IT WAS IN THE TIME OF MOSES
A Great Educational Picture On Exhibition Friday, June 7
In Conjunction With the Regular Program.—Read the Lecture.
Enjoy the Picture.
CHILDREN'S DAY AT THE POINCIANA THEATER
Don't miss the Dream of a Lobster Fiend; Children's Games at Singapore—and the other good things coming for Friday

This is an effective way to use the lecture. The people come to the theater with the facts predigested as it were and they are ready for the silent running of the reel. Those Kalem features are being put out in capital style and the assistance given the exhibitor by the manufacturer enables the good work to be gotten over to the public. One of these days the Patents Company should listen to a lecture by the Kalem on what real presswork really is. If you have not had the Egypt reel yet try reproducing the lecture that came with the Kalem Kalendar for May 1.

Some Edison Features.

The Edison release for July 5th will be "The Workman's Lesson," which has been produced in conjunction with the National Association of Manufacturers. It deals with the contempt with which workmen commonly regard the safety appliances installed for their protection. The New York World the other day declared that box factory employees habitually throw off the safety devices from the cutting machines because the appliances retarded speed slightly and that the employees expected to pay in split fingers for the neglect of precaution.

The Edison story is pretty much the same. An old mechanic regards with contempt the safety devices in his shop. He instills a younger [illegible] with the same disregard for caution. The guard over a lathe chuck is thrown out and the young man's arm is mangled. He recovers the use of it but not until the elder man has been led to believe that through his teachings the other has lost the use of his arm and realizes the value of the protection at last.

In a factory town this story—which also carries a love interest—can be played up for a feature. Special circulars distributed at each shop at noon or night, editorials in the papers and advance billing on the boards may all be used. If you can locate the factories using protected gears, etc., perhaps you can arrange with the foreman or superintendent to interest his men by letting you put up a neat card where all can see it. Get every mechanic and mill worker in town interested.

A Bit of History.

The ninth of the Edison Historical Series "The Close of the American Revolution," will be released on July 10th and brings to a close the episodes of the War of the Revolution. It deals with the ride of Jack Jouett to save the Virginia Assembly, then in session at Charlottenville, near Monticello, the home of Thomas Jefferson and includes pictures of that Mecca of the Jeffersonian Democracy. The film ends with the Surrender of Cornwallis at Yorktown. The Jouett ride is less well remembered than Paul Revere's famous canter, but it was as far-reaching in its effects. The film comes a little too late for the usual appeal to the school children, but if you can reach the teachers it would be a good thing to invite them to come and see the film just to show that your school-time invitations were not wholly due to a desire for the patronage of the pupils. You will need the teachers in the fall. Do not forget them in vacation time.

More About a Raise.

Here is a belated letter in which the Coming of Columbus is discussed. It is from R. F. Sodestrom, of Bradley and Sodestrom, managing the Loring Theater, Riverside, California. It will be noted that the house is a "combination" theater, playing dramatic combinations and filling in with pictures. Their patrons are used to the sliding scale and so accepted the 15 to 35 cent admissions without comment. Mr. Sodestrom writes:

> Through the columns of The World you ask exhibitors to state how they handled Selig's "Coming of Columbus," so will show you how we put it on.
>
> Our house, which is a combination house, playing road attractions as well as pictures, has a seating capacity of 840. Our prices for pictures are 10 and 20 cents. Our usual programme consists of 4 reels of licensed pictures and two of the best vaudeville acts we can secure.
>
> We secured our date on this picture a month in advance and immediately started an advertising campaign. We had 100 special window cards printed and put up a number of three and eight sheets. We also used about 20 one-sheet boards around town and lithographed a number of windows.
>
> We figured that in justice to the picture, if nothing more, it should not be shown at the regular prices, for it seems to me that when a feature of this kind is put on at the regular prices it has a tendency to cheapen the production, and people are apt to wonder why it is that you can't always put on a picture of that kind. It seems to me that a big feature production, such as this picture is, should be kept away from the ordinary run of pictures, so we accordingly made our prices 15, 25 and 35 cents and put reserved seats on sale three days in advance.
>
> The result exceeded all of our expectations.
>
> On Thursday afternoon we sent out invitations to the school teachers and the clergy of the city, with the result that those who wished to attend the matinee on Friday were excused from school in time to attend.
>
> On Thursday night we did almost capacity and on Friday night we could not begin to take care of the crowds. Every seat, including boxes and loges, which went for 50 cents, was sold and still there was a line of people that stretched clear out in the street.
>
> The newspapers here are fine about giving us space in the paper, even giving us front page write-ups on two occasions.

The card sent is well balanced as to type proportions and says plenty while not saying too much. The presswork is clean cut and effective. Do your work well and the increase in price will more than pay for the slight added expense and your patrons, in the aggregate, will respect the offering more because it does cost an increased price.

Coming.

Space prevents the use of several good cards this week and a discussion of matters of interest. Some of the contributions received this week carry no explanation whatever. Just give a line or two of facts and tell your hailing point. It makes for interest.

Making Photoplay Fans.

Do you make your patrons photoplay fans or do you discourage them? A letter to the Inquiry Department the other day explained that the writer came to us because she had asked the local manager and he had told her he was too busy to look up casts. It was an Edison and it is to be presumed that he had the Kinetogram, but was unwilling to take the small trouble to look it up.

This is a grave mistake. The real popularity of the photoplay business came when the identities of the players became known and the intelligent manager will foster the interest of his patrons rather than rebuff them for curiosity. If you cannot locate a name, send in to the Inquiry Department of this paper and your question will be promptly replied to. Take the items that appear in the Los Angeles correspondence and elsewhere, and make them into lantern slides to use between reels. If you have a program run them in the program, but don't ever be too busy to be polite to a patron and obliging if you can. It pays every time.

The PHOTOPLAYWRIGHT

CONDUCTED BY EPES WINTHROP SARGENT

MARKET NOTES.

SELIG POLYSCOPE CO. (Editor not stated), 20 East Randolph Street, Chicago, Ill. "With our large force of scenario editors and the rights which we control to a large number of short stories, plays, fiction, etc., we are not in the market for many outside scenarios. There is no chance, therefore." Licensed.

NESTOR FILM CO. (Richard Willis, Editor), Hollywood, Cal. Can use Eastern drama, melodrama, comedy drama, seacoast stories and light comedies. Mr. Willis writes: "We are specially in need of strong dramas with some strong situations or stirring heart interest." Independent.

Words of Cheer From G. W. T.

GEORGE W. TERWILLIGER, editor for the Reliance Company, whose campaign for the better scripts was temporarily disturbed, writes:

> Although I have a great many scripts ahead, I am in the market for the best that there is, and the former prices quoted ($50 to $100), will hold good. The photoplays I have been receiving lately are far from being up to the standard. I hope that before long the calibre of this material will improve.
>
> We are going to put out a two-reel subject a month, and, of course, I will be open to extraordinary material along these lines.
>
> I have just arranged with James Oliver Curwood, author of "Honor of the Big Shows," "Phillip Steele," "Flower of the North," and other stories, for the rights to his work, "The Phillip Steele Stories," which deal with the Canadian Northwest Mounted Police. He is one of the big authors to whom we are paying big prices.

If you have a Reliance-looking story that is out of the ordinary, send it in to Mr. Terwilliger. He's one of the real sort and he means what he says when he announces his willingness to pay the best price for the best sort of scripts. It's useless to put Reliance at the tail end of your list and then expect top money. He doesn't have to take anything that comes along because he needs scripts. Coax him with good stuff or don't bother him.

That Powers Prize Contest.

Have you seen the announcement of the Powers Prize Contest for photoplays? If you have not look it up in the recent issues and get busy. The prizes are liberal and C. B. Hoadley, the editor, announces that they are on the level—which means that they are.

Make note that scripts for the contest must be so marked else it will be presumed that you ask immediate action and usual rates. Here is what Mr. Hoadley says:

> The Powers Motion Picture Company has inaugurated a prize contest in order to, if possible, stimulate photoplay writers to better efforts. The contest is now open and will close July 15. The awards will be made July 20, if it is possible to have the scripts read and passed upon by that time by a committee of moving picture experts, who will be entirely disinterested. Two hundred and fifty dollars will be divided into four prizes: $100, $75, $50 and $25, for the scripts selected. We do not care for Indian, Western or costume plays, and prefer American subjects with the scenes laid in the open as much as possible. The conditions are that all manuscripts shall be typewritten and accompanied by self-addressed envelope, with return postage fully prepaid. All scripts intended for the competition must be plainly marked "contest," otherwise they will be treated as regular contributions, passed upon and returned if not found available. All scripts should be addressed to the Scenario Department, 422 West 216th Street, New York City.

More Terminology.

We are not in favor of inventing an entire new language for photoplay, but in a recent letter Emmett Campbell Hall raises the question of "set," when applied to exterior scenes that may interest others. Mr. Hall has recently devised for himself a cover page giving the titles of some thirty photoplays he has had produced, the number of scenes and sets, and the number of leading men and women players and extra players. Few writers have reached the stage of prosperity where printed covers are called for and we think that Mr. Hall will either be put to considerable expense for new printings or else soon find his cover out of date.

But getting back to the subject he runs this:

> Time.
> Place.
> Exterior scenes (sets).
> Interior scenes (sets).
> Male characters.
> Female characters.
> Extra people.

He explains that when he has five scenes in a forest, using only three localities, he would write it 5 Exterior scenes (3 sets), using "set" for both interior and exterior, although the term set originally applied only to sets of scenery.

We think it good practice, but are inclined to favor the word "Location" employed by the Rev. Dr. Stockton.

In passing we gather from his letter that Mr. Hall is not wholly tickled to death at the unauthorized use of his name by several so-called scenario schools in their advertising.

Studio Style.

In a letter a correspondent asks information as what "style" means when applied to studio productions. Others seem to have had the same trouble. Here is what he writes:

> Having had a script returned by an editor, with the statement that it was not their style, I would like to know what he meant by that statement in a technical sense. Where and how are the different styles of the various companies shown in the films and releases, as they affect the acceptance or non-acceptance of the work of a photoplay writer, besides being classified as Comedy, Drama, etc.? In other words what are the earmarks, distinguishing one style from another, that are looked for by an editor, in considering a scenario?

Style, in the studio sense, means the sort of production the studio favors. Perhaps the Melies style is the most pronounced—a dramatic idea and a lot of riding. Should you send a society drama with a lot of interior scenes to the Melies Company the probabilities are that you would be told it was not in their style.

Most companies have various styles to suit the various sections of their company, but the earmarks are readily recognized with a little study of the screen, aided by a careful reading of the Stories of the Films, which we print each week. The list of studio wants recently published in this department is an invaluable aid, because it is up-to-date and wholly reliable—which may not be said for the information published in some magazines.

It is scarcely necessary to allude to the fact that the Selig Company likes, now and then, to make big productions with several hundred persons, and that it maintains a menagerie, or that Biograph wants the tricky discussion of social problems and a sort of comedy that defies classification. Study the wants of the various directors and you will have arrived at their style of story. It is not easy to put it in type; it must be sensed, but if you are observant you can gain the information at the cost of a couple of dollars' worth of nickels and some hours in the photoplay theater.

A Line About Names.

Here's another suggestion from William H. Kitchell, who no doubt is moved to be helpful because the Newark team won two games the other day, probably because it was raining and the opposing team had forgotten their raincoats. He writes:

> Revised my name sheets yesterday. Have one sheet full of male first-names, one for females, one with list of occupations, and about 1,500 surnames besides. This with the World index of photoplays for three years back, helps a lot in starting a play—for instance, has about ten proper names, which he used for characters in all his plays. I make new ones for every play, and I notice that my names are generally used when my plays are released. This, with the card-index system, helps a lot.

There's a lot to that list of names. The perpetual use of Mary and Grace grows tiresome. Get up a list, but for the sake of the man who may have to revise your script for studio use, make selection of short names. You can get suggestions from most dictionaries, which give the meanings of names in the appendix; you can find odd ones in the daily papers, in books, magazines or almost anywhere. For foreign names we use a newspaper almanac which gives the list of the Diplomatic Corps in Washington and some consular officers.

Perhaps Mr. Kitchell will send us copies of his lists as a starter for an enlarged list to which others may add.

Doing Your Best.

One of the best known photoplay writers says that he has found the best way to get more money for his product is to write a better script. Ever look at it in that light?

Any story divided into scenes and written in action is a photoplay just as every egg is an egg, but not all eggs are strictly fresh and not all photoplays are good photoplays. Some dealers get a dollar a dozen for their eggs, while others sell "rots and spots" for a dollar or so a case. Are you offering dated eggs or rots and spots? The dollar a dozen man now and then has shopworn eggs, but he does not offer them to his patrons. He has educated them to an appreciation of fresh laid country eggs, and if he had eggs "almost as good" for half the price his patrons might experiment and take to the cheaper sort. The rots and spots man will sell eggs at any price, according to their degree of freshness. You can get "Guaranteed strictly fresh eggs" for fifty cents, strictly fresh for thirty-five, fresh for twenty-five and just plain eggs eighteen for a quarter.

It's the same way with scripts. You can send out a raft of stuff of all grades of cleverness and you'll sell some of these for $35, some for $25, and some for even less. The editors come to know you as a man who sometimes writes good scripts and sometimes poor ones. You are paid by a sliding scale and you will find that the slide does not push up very easily.

Suppose that instead of trying to market your entire product, you hold back the second grade material until it can be worked up to a higher standard. Suppose that you sent out only a grade of work that editors looked for. You might not always hit the style of the studio to which you send it, but you'll sell it somewhere, and the earlier editors will slip the script back into its return envelope with regret because they know that it's a really good script, even though it may not meet with the demands of that studio, and they'll take the trouble to tell you just what they do want in the hope that you'll send them another as good and right in their style.

Doesn't it pay you as well to sell one story for $50 as to market two for $25 each. And if you sell but the one you'll have the other idea ready to hand to be worked up, as well.

Of course, at the start, you cannot write a good script every time. You must go to the general market and take what you can get, because it is good training to see your work produced, but even while you accept with thanks the wispy little twenty-dollar check, be working for the time when you can enter Class A. Work always toward that end, work faithfully, and in due course you will have gained success; a success that is not to be built up on one good script out of five or ten. With that average the editors will regard the good script as an accident and figure out that you will take the $25 because you know no better. Now and then you'll find an editor who doesn't know a good script when he sees one because the only ones he can see are the ones he writes himself, but there is plenty of market with the others and you can build up a trade; a profitable clientele, if you offer only your best.

How About the Camera?

You know that the camera is the thing they make Motion Pictures with, but did you ever stop to think of the camera when you write your photoplay? Suppose that when you start to write a scene you do what the director does when he makes it. Look at the camera. Lots of things you do do, you won't do if you do that.

You know—or you should know—that the present fad is for a large picture of the people with some background. The makers bring the figures so close to the camera that if the leading man slipped on a banana peel he would cut his eye on the rim of the camera. This makes for large faces and large faces make for clearness of expression. Good expression, in turn, helps out the story by making the emotions clear.

In a few words bring your people close to the camera.

To do this you will have to consider the camera before you start to lay out a scene. Suppose that you have a banquet table. Reginald is going to marry Lucille and this is the announcement party. Suppose that along about the time they are serving the roman punch the wronged lady comes in and calls Reggie names, spoiling a perfectly good chance for his getting a life interest in a lady and some millions of dollars.

You're just regarding the scene and not the camera. You picture to yourself a well set table. At the end there is Lucille's father and Lucille and Reggie and on either side eight or ten guests. It makes an effective setting, but when the lady with the first mortgage on Reggie's affections butts into the festal scene she is going to be so far from the camera (at the end of the table) that you can't tell whether she is remonstrating with him about her fractured heart or an unpaid wash bill.

The camera lacks the adaptability of the human eye. It does not make proper allowance for the fact that Gwendolyn, Reggie and Lucille are twenty feet back from where they should be. The scene is spoiled.

Before you write the scene figure on where you are going to set the camera with relation to the players. You can't get it right and still preserve the suggestion of a large dinner. All right! Take them into the parlor. Now you can swing it so that when Gwendolyn comes in, even though she was not invited, she can get hold of the affianced pair as close to the camera as optical laws will permit them to come. You've changed no essential fact in the story. You merely have played the scene where the figures are large.

Just remember that you are writing something that is to be made by the camera and count the camera first and the lay of the scene after you have placed the camera. Of course there is nothing to prevent the photoplay editor or director from changing from dining-room to parlor himself, but if it is just as easy for you to do it, why not do it? It may help your chance of acceptance materially.

Here's the way to work it. The camera sets about ten to twelve feet back of the front line of the scene. Plan your stage so that you can bring your leading players so that naturally they face the camera close to that front line without seeming to do so. Plan your scene and your camera view point first. Then figure your action to fit these.

Just One Toot.

It is not often that we blow our own horn. We've a rather poor ear for that sort of music, but we can't resist the temptation to avail ourselves of the permission of Capt. Charles Kiener to print this. He writes:

> It may be of interest to you to know that Technique of the Photoplay has been and is of great help and benefit to me as a valuable reference book as well as a helpful guide in my work of Photoplay writing. The Kalem Company, in whose regular employment I am, has lately complimented me on my "superior work." While I, without false modesty, may claim to be a photoplay writer of experience and success, I am convinced that my late special successes are directly attributable to a careful and close study of your book.

Captain Kiener is one of the Kalem contract stars and was turning out capital scripts three years ago, when Photoplay was young, and even then was firmly gounded in technique. That he finds new help in our book on photoplay is a testimony of distinction. We have received many pleasant appreciations of the book, but this is praise indeed.

More About Envelopes.

We are inclined to think that Harry O. Hoyt has to some extent solved the mystery of scripts received in poor condition from the studios. He writes:

> Received a script from Pathe in very bad shape. It looked as though the script had been folded and crushed into a perfect mess. At the same time I received another script that was in capital shape, the latter coming in a cloth lined envelope. I took both to the postoffice and they say that it is probable that the carrier spoiled the first one, and I believe that it must have left the Pathe studio in good condition. They always have been careful with my stuff and I have no complaint to offer. The postoffice here says that so much cheap advertising matter comes in the large envelopes that the carriers are inclined to get careless with them. I can check this from my own experience as here at the office (Mr. Hoyt is secretary of a street railway corporation) we get two advertisements in number ten envelopes to one in the smaller sizes.

Here is testimony from a man who knows. The other day we received a very badly crumpled script from the copyist though it had come but a few miles. Perhaps it is not always the studio that is to blame. Get some stout envelopes and avoid trouble.

INQUIRIES

J. A. M.—William Leverton was Herbert Moore in Solax's "The Sewer," and "Spike" Robinson the Police Inspector in the same company's "The Wooing of Alice."

S. R.—Miss Adele Lane and Romaine Fielding had the leads in Lubin's "An Indian's Gratitude." We pass those Biograph questions.

S. E.—We have not the cast for "Lena and the Geese."

J. M. P.—The Little Blonde of the Biograph is not Miss Mabel Normand. The latter is perhaps best remembered as The Diving Girl and in the Vitagraph's Betty series. The Little Blonde is Miss Blanche Sweet, not Olga.

M. A. J.—As it is not possible to get a ruling along these lines from the General Film Company, your question cannot be answered with the definiteness you seem to wish, but there are many circuits using Licensed service in some houses and Independent in others. It is the house, not the management, that is licensed, one license to each house. If you have five and want three Licensed services, you get three Licenses and run Independent in the other two without. Our original answer is practically what the Implet told you, save that our understanding of the open market is the right to use films of any make in conjunction, which cannot now be done.

EARNEST INQUIRER.—Sign your name and address next time, as evidence of your earnestness. We do not quite understand what you mean by "how to treat visions and dreams." The subject is too broad for discussion here, but if you will be more definite we'll be glad to answer. Usually a vision is brought into some scene and is written "vision in figure of Alice looking toward John," or, "vision of scene (naming some previous scene), is shown in corner," or, "a vision of Broadway appears at Jack's right." In most studios dreams are "treated" with disdain as being the poor excuse for an improbable subject.

W. J. McC.—If you submitted a "playscript" to the Eclair we fancy they kept it to laugh over, but if it was a photoplay that you sent in and it stayed twice as long as an earlier submission, we think we would not try to pick it before it got ripe. The chances are that it is being held for further consideration. Do not get worried under eight weeks, and if you can last out twelve it is better yet. Conditions in studios differ from magazine conditions where an editor accepts or rejects. In studios the editor accepts a story then some producer must be found who graciously condescends to accept the story, and then the boss must give his approval before the check goes forward, all of which takes time. After this call them photoplays.

J. J. McC.—A letter, newspaper clipping or other insert is a part of a scene and not a scene in itself. In acting the scene the player takes up the letter and reads it for a moment, then puts it down and goes on with the scene. In the cutting room part of the action of reading is cut out and the letter inserted. Since there is no interruption in the actual action it is all one scene, the business before the reading the letter and that following all being played without a stop. The stoppage of the camera, whether to make a new scene in the same setting or to move to some other location, is the surest and most definite test of the ending of a scene. If the camera stops that scene stops. If it does not stop the scene has not stopped.

H. L. B.—We are not aware that Gaumont's "Written in Blood" was shown in this city on June 18th. Did you see the picture or merely see the poster announcing the same? If the former, it is possible that you saw an imported copy. Sometimes a C. G. P. C. will be seen in the Independent houses several weeks in advance of the Licensed release date.

INQUISITIVE READER.—George K. Spohr is the "S" of the Essanay Company. He is not an actor. The Helen Gardner films will be states rights propositions and not Licensed. There are no new companies on the Licensed side as the present constituent membership can produce a sufficient number of reels to meet all demands. Mrs. Clark, we understand, went to Egypt with the Kalem Company, though we have not seen her cast in releases. Owen Moore, Arthur Johnson and Misses Leonard and Pickford have all been with the Biograph Company. Miss Mary Fuller was a Vitagraph player before she went to the Edison forces. Miss Mabel Taliaferro played a special engagement in the Selig "Cinderella," then went to play vaudeville dates.

J. M. C.—Send a stamped and self-addressed envelope to this department, repeating your questions, and we will pass it on to a correspondent who very courteously offers to resolve your doubts.

J. C.—The Photoplaywright Department does not make a specialty of State rights and jobbing companies, but we gather that the Pacific Motion Picture Company wants three to five-reel subjects of note. They can write their own historical subjects and probably do not want cowboy or Indian stories. Why not write them direct, enclosing a stamped envelope for reply?

A. G. L.—After this sign your name and address. You write the letter in the plot of action and not in the synopsis. Paragraphing your synopsis is merely a matter of preference, but if you keep it as brief as you should paragraphing will not be necessary. We gather from your inquiry that you have the wrong idea of the synopsis. You do not write all the details of the story in the synopsis. The word itself suggests a condensation of the plot.

S. E. C.—See answer to E. H. H. in the issue dated June 29th. The questions are identical.

R. E. S.—Marshall Nielan is the American player of Brother Bill in "The Reward of Valor."

E. H. H.—Why this intense interest in Mr. Costello's marriage? He is married. He got tired of getting a lot of silly rot from empty-headed schoolgirls, so he permitted the fact that he was married to become apparent. He was not afraid that he would be kidnapped, as you facetiously suggest, but any normal-minded man is made intensely weary when he is asked to read the sort of stuff that rolls in from all parts of the country. Any human being likes to be told that he is clever and that his work is appreciated, but there is a difference between a cordial appreciation and ten to twenty pages of erotic guff contributed by some sentimental miss who is not old enough to tell good acting from bad. There are some flat-headed players who like this sort of thing, but being normally constituted, Mr. Costello is frank enough to admit that a certain type of letter makes him very weary. In the course of his work this writer is called upon to read several hundred letters of the milder sort each month and he is free to admit that they create a mental nausea. Here endeth the Costello discussion.

Comments on the Films

Licensed.

"PATHE'S WEEKLY No. 26."—The number is of more than ordinary interest. Among the chief features are pictures of the Fram, Amundsen's south polar ship, leaving Hobart, Tasmania; a bucking horse at an Elk Rodeo, and the graduation of the midshipmen at Annapolis. The Weekly is competing with those who dispense baseball slang on some of the more yellow sporting editions. Possibly some of the male auditors and all of the female may not understand the significance of such a statement as "Zimmerman Lacerates the Pill." As a matter of information he made a hit.

"THE EXTENSION TABLE" (Vitagraph), June 24.—Good drama, in which Leo Delaney and Harry Morey figure to good advantage. Leah Baird and Norma Talmadge acceptably fill the opposing roles. There is a touch of pathos at the conclusion of the play, when Herbert, portrayed by Morey, at the invitation of Hayward, calls at the home of the latter and is particularly attracted by a six-weeks-old boy. As he holds the child in his arms, his wife (Leah Baird) from whom for months he has been estranged, enters and informs him that he is holding his own son. Reconciliation is immediate and tentative divorce papers are destroyed.

"THE RUBE DETECTIVE" (Kalem), June 21.—A burlesque which will amuse the children and has one or two laughs for older folks.

"THE CHAUFFEUR'S DREAM" (Kalem), June 21.—On the same reel as the foregoing. A chauffeur, after sending out an invitation to a couple of friends to join him in a joy ride in the absence of his employer, falls asleep in his car while awaiting the arrival of his friends. What he dreams makes such an impression on him that despite the importunities of his friends he declines to take out the car.

"SHEEP SHEARING IN NEW MEXICO" (Selig), June 21.—This is an educational picture of merit and interest.

"THE KATZENJAMMER KIDS No. 8" (Selig), June 21.—On the same reel with the foregoing the arrival of Cousin Otto is celebrated by Otto in carrying the kids from the steamer by the slack of the blouse and by the kids, in retaliation, by the boring of a hole through the ceiling of Otto's room, running a rope with hook attached down into Otto's nightgear, and leaving him for a while suspended in midair.

"THE NEW BABY" (Biograph), June 24.—A farce comedy with an amusing finish.

"A DASH THROUGH THE CLOUDS" (Biograph), June 24.—One of the Biograph girls gets a couple of rides in an aeroplane and seems to enjoy it. The half-reel is of unusual interest. There is also scenery as well as comedy.

"THE SPIRIT AWAKENED" (Biograph), June 20.—A story on a farm that happened to be mortgaged. Taking part in it are the old farmer, his invalid wife, their light-haired, young daughter, two farm hands, and a girl of the neighborhood who appears only for a moment. The chief contrast comes between the two helpers. One, the slighter, is a Christian who believes in turning the other cheek, while the bigger man is somewhat brutal—also he has the courage of his evil desires, but lacks the wisdom to have good desires. There is also a subtile contrast between the two girls. The protected, yet not wholly protected, farmer's daughter, is happy and contented in her normal life, while the other girl, called "the victim of the renegade" is one of the most pathetic figures we remember seeing. She shows lack of direction (not artistic direction, let us quickly add it); even the awkward way of fixing her hair and the queer hat deeply stir our sympathies. Such little things tell us a volume of human heart-history that lies behind them. As best she can, and most piteously, she reaches out to the brute for a little love and sympathy, a little heaven-light in a dark world. This character is a very sincere piece of work.

In this picture, the producer brings these characters foreward with the sole aim of making us thoroughly acquainted with them. Thus he convinces us first of all that they are real people. They have lived before the picture opened and we feel that they are going to live after it closes. All he cares for, at first, is to make us feel the contrasts—which by the way is the only way we know one person from another. They are introduced in small groups. When he has succeeded, he brings forward something that will hold the attention of all his active characters. In this case, it is a sum of money, money for the mortgage. Around this all the characters suddenly begin to react together. First he mixes the powder, then he adds fire and we have the general explosion. The climax is a thriller. In the denouement there is humor and much pleasing humanity. It is a well photographed and very desirable picture.

"THE WIDOW CASEY'S RETURN" (Lubin), June 19.—In this we find an amusing idea which has been the making of several farces before this; but which has in this case a fresh twist. It depends for its fun on having, for some reason or other, the neighbors suppose that a death has occurred and showing them assembling for the funeral on the one hand and on the other showing the person very much alive, buying vegetables or doing some ordinary thing which becomes most intensely funny. We have seen it done better than in this picture. Here it is very theatrical. Yet it always amuses and this picture will furnish a good deal of amusement. The photography is good.

"THE INGRATE" (Lubin), June 20.—A picture, played by the Western Lubin Company's heavy man, that lives up to its title most surely. The man is taken into the home of his father's old friend. He shows his colors, or it might be more accurate to say his color, for it's only yellow, very quickly and ends by forging his benefactor's name and then murdering him. The old man's ghost appears to him and drives him to a confession in the police court. It isn't an inspiring picture; but it gets over. The part is very fairly played; the scenes well photographed.

"IN EXILE" (Selig), June 20.—A romantic melodrama set in a California orange ranch and with early scenes in Russia. The heroine is a pretty orange sorter; she is a granddaughter of the Romanoffs; but is a countess not a serene highness as one would expect any scion of that name to be. The owner's son falls in love with her and the father is much displeased. Fathers who try to force their children to marry against their wills are more common in pictures than in life. The situation is worked out satisfactorily and gives some pretty scenes. It is well photographed and makes an interesting, not a powerful picture.

"A MAN IN THE MAKING" (Edison), June 18.—A picture intended chiefly to illustrate the work for young men done by the Y. M. C. A. It has no real plot; but tells a slight, romantic story that is not very convincing, yet pleases. Its characters are such as any young fellow, out of work, would be likely to meet in saloons and cheap eating places, and on the other hand, the people he would come in contact with in a Y. M. C. A. building. A glimpse of a swell poolroom is given. It is, however, a very worthy release; the information it conveys is worth spreading. People will like the picture; it will widely interest. The photography is excellent.

"THE CAPTAIN OF THE 'NANCY LEE'" (Selig), June 18.—A farce comedy on a schooner, called the "Nancy Lee." It is a very theatrical picture, too much so to be wholly effective; but there are some very comic situations and some good laughs. It is fairly well photographed and will furnish light entertainment.

"TARGET PRACTICE OF THE ATLANTIC FLEET. U. S. NAVY" (Edison), June 19.—A well-photographed picture that was watched with great interest. It is sure to be popular.

"APPLE PIES" (Edison), June 19.—A short tramp farce on the same reel; it is amusing throughout, but didn't make any loud laughs.

"MIMI'S LOVE STORY" (C. G. P. C.), June 18.—A love story of a very Bohemian but seemingly innocent-hearted set of Parisians—poets, artists and women. It is a very French story, careless, jolly, pleasing; yet we can predict that it won't please the Puritans. There is no coarseness in it, but its morals are exactly like those for instance in the play "Leah Kleschner." The plot is slight in texture, straightforward and toward the end fairly dramatic. The characters are delightful portrayals, but are entirely fanciful and romantic. It is extremely well acted, conducted and photographed. It is not an immoral picture; but it is a picture of people who are unmoral, as some one has recently said.

"MOTOR BOAT RACES" (Eclipse), June 19.—Some excellently photographed views of speedy, little wave splashers. The people seem to like pictures of this kind. It fills almost half a reel.

"STUDIES IN FISH LIFE" (Eclipse), June 19.—A very interesting series of acquarium pictures. It gives us studies of many queer water animals, most of them well known. The last view shows an octopus, which is like a bad, very bad dream, and almost enough to make one turn Democrat. All the specimens are clearly pictured.

"BERGEN, NORWAY" (Eclipse), June 19.—A short but very beautiful picture of a city which seems to be at once a seaport and mountain town. A very fine view of a big cascade, tumbling through a rocky gorge, is included. It makes a worthy ending to a thoroughly excellent and desirable release.

"AN ARABIAN TRAGEDY" (Kalem), June 18.—A powerfully, affecting story of Egypt, with much that is beautiful in the way of scenery. It is also highly instructive, because the producer has been careful to make his sets and his scenes typical of the Oriental life that it portrays. The story is simple; there is nothing melodramatic in it; and it seems sincere and truthful. In its tragic ending, it is very effective even to us. Its chief characters are Arabian people of wealth. The center of interest is Fatima (played by Gene Gauntier), a first wife of an Arab merchant. She is barren and has been divorced; but in the end, her love proves stronger than that of the mother of his child who has supplanted her. The acting is natural and dignified and the photographs are fine.

"THE GAMBLER'S REFORMATION" (Pathe), June 19.—A good, melodramatic, Western picture of a gambler who is converted by the love of a good woman, his wife, whom he had greatly wronged. The story is fresh, not because of unusual incidents, but because of good character drawing and because the characters are made to react naturally and convincingly upon one another. The producer has made the girl especially interesting, because in the picture, she never would have been able to save the gambler, who had left her to shift for herself, had not also her goodness worked to make her employer charitable. All three of these characters are pretty well drawn, and there is a good child's part. The scenes are interesting and the photography good.

"CHASED BY BLOODHOUNDS" (Vitagraph), June 19.—There was only one bloodhound, a great spotted dog which appeared a few weeks ago in a comedy picture in which the lover got into a suit of armor. The picture's purpose is to show this beast in action. It has thrills and some comedy, but very little heart interest. The man chased is John Bunny. He had given a chicken thief a pair of shoes and the dog got the wrong trail. The experience made Bunny dream of dogs for some time after. It is clearly photographed and well worth seeing.

"AUTOMOBILE RACES AT SANTA MONICA, CAL." (Vitagraph), June 19.—A short sporting picture on the same reel. Some speedy driving is shown. There are no accidents. It is fairly well photographed.

"THE PASSER-BY" (Edison), June 21.—Marion Brooks has written an ingenious scenario and the Edison Company has been at pains to give it adequate presentation. Marc McDermott is the leading figure in the play, and his work is of his regular standard. There is some clever camera work in the dinner scene when the machine is gradually pushed toward the speaker at the head of the table, and then withdrawn. The effect, of course, is that of the actor being drawn toward the spectators and then receding. The Stock Exchange floor scene is unusually well done. "The Passer-By" is high-class drama.

"THE MYSTIFIED PIERROT" (C. G. P. C.), June 21.—This hand-colored comedy film gives a view of the exterior of the famous Parisian resort, the Moulin Rouge. The husband has received an invitation to dinner and dance at the resort and goes—alone. He declines to take his wife. She writes him a note addressed to "dear friend," informing him that she is going away, forever. Then she conceals herself behind curtains on her husband's return and watches the unsteady celebrator read the note. The action is lively throughout.

"LONDON" (C. G. P. C.), June 21.—On the same reel as the foregoing is a short travelogue of the British metropolis. One striking picture is of the royal guard headed by its band.

"DERBY DAY AT CHURCHILL DOWNS" (Essanay), June 21.—The sub-title of this film is "The Life of a Racehorse," and the reel makes good. The pictures are interesting, showing the raising of a race horse on a Kentucky stock farm and also many interesting pictures of happenings on Derby Day. The race is shown at various stages, the photographs apparently being taken from an automobile running near the course.

"HER BROTHER" (Vitagraph), June 21.—Fine Western scenery is the chief characteristic of this picture, and as an accompaniment some good horseback riding. There is a dramatic finish.

"THE RUNAWAYS" (Lubin), June 22.—A pretty romance of early married life in comedy vein. Miss May Buckley and Mr. Harry Meyer play in it, and in most of it with a good deal of convincing freshness, a young married couple enjoying their first serious quarrel and its inevitable make-up. It seems to be the man's fault. He is very boyish and not very well brought up and behaves very badly when the breakfast porridge is too salty. There is nothing new in the slight plot; but the acting and the method used to show the human qualities in the situation are, at times, most delightful. It is a good offering, rather slight, but it will please. The photography is good.

"OVER THE DIVIDE" (Lubin), June 24.—This title at once warns us that the picture's denouement is an escape "over the divide" from a sheriff's posse. It is a fairly innocent man this time. He had received stolen goods, it is true; but we are not sure he knew what they were. He was caught with the goods and in bad company, and the boys were about to hang him; but the girl, who knew that he was not at the place when the stage was held up, saves him. This seems trite enough; but the producer has made a good picture of it, speedy, fresh and convincing. The girl took too long to cut the rope; but there is nothing in the picture that isn't true to human hearts. There is no vivid characterization in it; but the figures are all individual and that keeps the story alive. It is very well photographed.

"THE FOREMAN'S COUSIN" (Essanay), June 22.—A very good Western picture that is well-acted, fresh and dramatic. The foreman of the ranch made a place for his cousin from the East. This individual was not of much value; but was better looking than the foreman. He stole his cousin's girl to begin with, and did a good deal of gambling. This got him into financial difficulties and because of this, he helped pull off a little job of rustling cattle. The girl's picture is found in the field and, by a convincing train of circumstances, the sheriff is suspected. It is a freshly human picture with good character drawing, well photographed and interesting. A good release, perhaps the best picture on June 22.

"THE GAMBLERS" (Vitagraph), June 22.—A romantic melodrama of modern social life in the upper circles of fashion. In it, Julia Swayne Gordon plays, and plays very well (but according to a well recognized convention) the role of a heavy villainess who, purposely and for vengeance, entangles the fiancée (Miss Lena Kiefe) of the man whom she had wanted to marry (Mr. Earl Williams). It is a very dramatic picture and will make a very good offering. But the scenario writer merely wanted to produce something that would be a commercial success. He has accomplished this. There is nothing in it to excite either the producer or the players and there is no true character drawing in it. The photographs are fine.

"TWO LOVES" (Melies), June 20.—A picture that shows us a brother and sister, separated when mere babies. They meet in later years and, without knowing each other, fall in love. A second girl is introduced who is jealous and who saves the situation by her discovery, in time, that the engaged couple are brother and sister. The story is developed smoothly and has some freshness. This is due partly to good acting and party to new and interesting scenes. The picture was taken in some beautiful valley in the West and one of its most noticeable qualities is good photography.

"THE RUBE DETECTIVE" (Kalem), June 21.—A comic character farce whose title very well describes it. The situations that are developed have some freshness and it is intelligently, but very theatrically, acted. This is its only real defect. The camera work is good.

"THE CHAUFFEUR'S DREAM" (Kalem), June 21.—On the same reel is this automobile-ride farce. It depends for its fun on the antics of the motor car as the chauffeur dreams them. It pictures no smash-up nor explosions; but merely the ordinary difficulties of a joy ride at high speed. The car wants to run down every cop. It is well photographed. There were some laughs; but there is nothing very new in it.

"THE GIRL AT THE KEY" (Edison), June 22.—The key referred to is a wireless telegraph instrument and the story is a melodrama, somewhat old-fashioned, set on board a yacht, and dealing with both love and business. The heroine is the daughter of the yacht's owner and her sweetheart is a son of her father's bitter business enemy. He has been invited on a short cruise by the girl's father with the purpose of keeping him away from the office until a plot to ruin him can be sprung. The cast was not wholly fortunate and this keeps the story from suggesting romantic sincerity as strongly as it might have. The photographs are excellent and give us some very pleasing views of the fine pleasure yacht. These suggest holiday joys and are acceptable. As a story, the picture is not very [illegible]

"AN INDIAN IDYL" (Pathe), June 22.—A wholly Indian picture, telling a love story, with a Crow brave for its hero and a Sioux maiden for its heroine. As the picture opens these two tribes are at war. The development of the romance in the end reconciles them. We have interesting scenes of village life and a very pretty series of pictures in which the hero and heroine alone figure. The picture's final episode is the most pleasing. The heroine has died and the hero sees a ghost who directs him to cull certain herbs that will restore her. It is this miracle that brings the war to an end and finally unites the lovers. The leaders are written in scraps of verse which is far less effective than prose. The camera work is good.

"THE GIRL AND THE MAYOR" (Cines), June 25.—A love story, with incidents and some of its characters in comedy vein. The characters are the city's mayor, a pretty working girl, the girl's aunt who is a suffragette and revolutionist, and the mayor's stenographer, a woman who does not want a "vote but a voter," and whose face the mayor finds very painful to look at. As a love story, it is effective; as a comedy not so much so, although it made more than one good laugh. The acting, scenes, photographs, etc., are good.

"THE CARPATHIA" (Vitagraph), June 25.—The Carpathia and Captain Rostron are very famous these days. This picture is another series of views of the ship, her officers, crew and life-saving apparatus; and was taken at the time of the presentation of the "N. Y. American's" check, and of the loving cup to the savior of the Titanic's castaways. It is well photographed and makes an interesting offering.

"NEVER AGAIN" (Vitagraph), June 25.—This farce comedy fills a little more than half the reel and made the audience scream with laughter. The situation is quite convincing, as shown, and yet hardly anything could be more preposterous or more ridiculously funny. It came about through a carelessly written letter of congratulation to a newly married friend. The reply advised the man to seek out his ideal, even if he had to follow her home. A few days later he sees her; she's the unknown wife of his friend. He follows; she has him arrested. He telephones to his friend who pays the fine and takes him home. What follows is very natural, except the ending, and very embarrassing. It's a good, hot weather drawing card.

"THE LITTLE BRIDE OF HEAVEN" (Edison), June 25.—A story of the slums by Mary Imlay Taylor. It is not, strictly speaking, a religious picture. Its characters are mostly Roman Catholics and it tells how a very poor little girl got a white dress for her confirmation. She thought it came, a miracle, in answer to her prayer to the blessed Virgin; but there is nothing in it to offend religious sensibilities in any one. It is set in the very slattern rooms of a congested city district except the last pretty scene, which shows the procession going to the church, choir boys, the priest, little girls in white and the two nuns that follow. It is a fairly effective offering, pretty well acted. Miss Mary Fuller, as the child's mother helps it out a good deal, although all the older players act very naturally indeed. The photographs are fine.

"BILLY AND THE BUTLER" (Essanay), June 25.—A competently written picture that is very dramatic and quite fresh. The family's butler was a crook; he had just been employed. The family gave a dinner. Billy was one of the guests. He suspected the butler and had some slight grounds; but his host laughed at his fears. This situation is very convincingly developed. The story carries the attention unresistingly with increasing excitement to a thrilling climax in which Billy (Mr. Stepney) rushes out of the house after the butler who is making off with a grip full of jewels and the family silver, only to be himself arrested by the policeman on the butler's accusation. The cop handcuffs Billy and takes him back to the house, letting the butler, who had declared the grip to be full of jewels, to get away with it. This is very weak. It enabled the writer, however, to add some excellent humor which, in its proper place, would have been good. It also made possible an added episode, an automobile chase of the thieves, which wasn't wanted. The acting is good; the sets and photography fine. It is a good, desirable offering, in spite of its faults.

Independent.

"THE GREAT BANK FAILURE" (Itala), June 29.—A love story comes before the bank failure in this two reel, feature picture, and the failure's effect upon this is shown. The early scenes are in the banker's beautifully appointed house. The banker's daughter has "a divine voice." She is loved by a composer and a captain; but the former is hopeless. Yet, after the failure, when all other friends have deserted them, he is of much service. The girl becomes an opera singer of distinction. The story is perfectly clear, as to its main thread, and is well drawn, and it has an extremely dramatic ending. It is indeed a competently made and acted picture of an interesting story and gives good entertainment. The photography is very good.

"ON THE WAR PATH" (Bison-101), June 22.—A two reel, feature picture in which an old chief re-enacts in a dream the scenes of his early life. This dream tells a story of fierce, mountain Indians. There are two tribes, Apaches and Yumas, not wholly in accord, and there are on the other hand the soldiers. The Apaches want war with the soldiers; the Yamas want peace and the struggle of will between these two tribes is the picture's center of interest. A love story is introduced, with a maiden of one tribe and a brave of the other, and this is used to bring out the incidents of the struggle and to add human interest. It is played against grandly mountainous backgrounds, and there are battle and flight in which the tribes figure as a whole, and there is also thrilling personal adventure. The Apache heroine, who warned the Yumas is, for her treachery, staked down with a rattle snake tied in striking distance of her. The soldiers, coming to the rescue of their friends, the Yumas, after an exciting climax in a mist of battle smoke, arrive in time to save her. It's a big, blood-stirring picture, well made in every way and thoroughly pleasing.

"ROMANCE IN OLD KENTUCKY" (Eclair), June 25.—A picture of romance and moonshine in a backwoods setting. It shows us mountain folk; the heroine being the daughter of a moonshiner. The coming of a young stranger to the valley is the cause of a lover's quarrel. The new comer is, however, a revenue officer. The rather complicated story and the characters who act in it are made very convincing. The backgrounds, scenes in the woods, and in and around a little cabin, are often very beautiful. Several moonlight scenes are of exceptional quality. It is a good picture, one that is likely to please.

"THREE MEN AND A GIRL" (Eclair), June 27.—A love story in a boarding house. There were other boarders, but these four stand out as principals. The heroine is made an especially desirable girl; two of the men, the hero, who is an inventer, and the villain who is rich, are in love with her. The third man is the inventor's friend who saves first his invention and then him from the schemer. The story's best quality is the freshness of its development; but there is a good deal of very true humanity in it. The acting, especially of the boarding house keeper (Mrs. Stewart), is very good; Miss Tennant, as the girl, and the three men also do excellent work. The photography is fine.

"LITTLE HELPING HANDS" (Powers), June 26.—The little heroine of this picture belonged to the children's "Helping Hand Society." She meant well in what she did; but her accomplishment in the way of helping others makes a laughable comedy. But the helps that she did that really convince, are much more amusing than those that do not. For instance, she helps a stray dog to a good dinner—it is the meat intended for the family. The little player however, is, herself, charming and makes the picture very good entertainment. It is well photographed and will be liked very much. Some of the scenes are beautiful.

"HOMES OF CLIFF DWELLERS" (Powers), June 26.—On the same reel is this, a very clearly photographed series of views of prehistoric habitations in the West. It is a good picture.

"GETTING RICH QUICK" (Majestic), June 30.—A travesty based on the gullibility of some mortals who believe they can get something for nothing. The opening scene of the comedy, where the members of the firm, in their desperation to raise sufficient small change to pay for the insertion of an advertisement calling for a partner with $10,000, shake by the heels some of their employes—at least the masculine contingent—brings forth laughter.

"PAPA'S DOUBLE" (Majestic), June 25.—Good comedy, especially at the finish. Herbert Prior and Mabel Trunnelle take the leading parts.

"THE KNIGHT AND THE FRIAR" (Majestic), June 23.—A comedy-drama based on the days when the strong took what he wanted—if he could get it. In this case the knight wanted a girl, and he got her. The friar was subjected to indignity as a means to that end, and in this respect the film may not be popular in all communities.

"MEALS BY WEIGHT" (Majestic), June 23.—On the same reel as the foregoing is this burlesque. The point of the comedy is the charging for the increase in weight at the conclusion of a meal over the scale register prior to the repast. The hobo, by loading up with a brick before eating, was able to claim a rebate after eating. The idea may have been a fair one, but in this case it was much overdone. A man of average size will not weight 360 pounds with a few bricks inside his coat.

"A CHILD'S INFLUENCE" (Imp), June 27.—A picture showing how a family's happiness was saved by the influence or perhaps more truthfully the needs of a child. Miss Jane Fernley and Mr. King Baggot play the child's parents. While a friend, played by Mr. Shay, is visiting them, the husband finds that he is needed at his mines and is absent for over a week. During this time the man remains with the woman and child and his attentions become something more than friendly. Glimpses of the rough mine, where the husband is, are given and are very good; also we see glimpses of the home. This house and its environment make some very lovely pictures. The acting is very simple, natural and effective; it gives convincing strength to the rather melodramatic story. It is a good picture; one likely to please all kinds of audiences.

"DAWN OF NETTA" (Nestor), June 24.—A love story not very clearly named; it is rather sentimental, and in its situation, just a bit old-fashioned. Its plot is well articulated, telling a clear story; but is such as one would expect in a novel rather than in a drama. Its characters are interesting people of wealth and culture, and its center of interest lies between a young lady and her father's friend, who is at once her guardian and fiance. The guardian breaks the engagement, only to find that she really loves him. The backgrounds are very pretty, being mostly in a very well appointed home. The acting is of high order and at times very praiseworthy indeed. It is a well photographed picture that will please and entertain rather than one that will make a deep impression.

"QUEEN OF MAY" (Republic), June 25.—A very charming little player, a girl of about twelve, takes the leading role in this distinctly pretty picture of a big May Day party held in Central Park. This party was given by the "Rep" Company to the stage children of the city and this half-fairy story was made up and acted to give human interest to pictures of it. The little girl is made the daughter of a stage scrub woman. She knows about the party; but can not get a ticket, because she has never "played" on the stage. However, she gets her chance and is a big success in a real play as Oliver Twist. She is then invited to the party and elected its queen. It is well photographed and interesting, a picture that will please.

"REAPING THE WHIRLWIND" (Nestor), June 26.—A strongly dramatic picture of passion, set in Western backgrounds that are somewhat rough and primative. It is an effective human and truthful story yet its rather trying situation is handled in a clean, wholesome way. Indeed, the moral wisdom of the story is one of its highest qualities.

Four people have prominent roles in it—two couples, with the flirtatious wife of one man and the light-headed husband of the other woman as the victims of their own folly. That all concerned become victims before the end need, hardly be said. It is a tragedy of disillusion; there is no killing in it. The characters are drawn in a vivid, clear-cut way, showing much imagination in both the producer and the players. The scene closing and photography could hardly have been improved upon. It is a desirable picture.

"HER FATHER, THE SHERIFF" (Republic), June 22.—A melodramatic picture in which the heroine's father, a Western sheriff, proves weak and lets bank robbers persuade him to take a hand in a big haul. The sheriff's brave daughter and her eastern sweetheart track the robbers and, in their hiding place, find the sheriff. He is conscience stricken and repents.

The story is smooth, fairly convincing and interests; but although the players are human and natural in their acting, there is little or no true character drawing. The figures do not live apart from the story they tell. The camera work is good.

"LOVE, WAR AND A BONNET" (Imp), July 1.—Marguerita Fischer plays in this picture a Southern belle. Her lover, played by Mr. Pollard, is a captain of Dixie. Mr. Lyons plays a Yankee spy who, chased by the captain, breaks into the grand old Southern homestead. He finds the bonnet, newly trimmed, and half-disguised in it and a cloak, manages to steal her horse. The girl, herself, gives chase on another horse. The captain has seen the man and is also following him. A complicated series of incidents follow so fast that the mind isn't given a chance to see anything inconsistent or unconvincing; but is carried along with a sweep. The photography is excellent. It is an acceptable picture of a war-time adventure.

"WILLY WANTS A FREE LUNCH" (Eclair), June 30.—A picture made in France with a very small boy in the role of ragged Willy. So small that, like a mouse in a furnished room, they have a hard time catching him. It is a very farcial picture, and trick photography plays an important part in it. It will surely make a roar of laughter. There is nothing coarse in it and it is clearly photographed.

"WOMEN'S WORK IN OPORTO" (Eclair), June 30.—Oporto is a Spanish city. There seem to be many women living there, and they are all workers. The loads they carry are astonishing. These are regular street scenes, and we see but few men.

"PICTURESQUE PORTUGAL" (Eclair), June 30.—Here are a few well-photographed pictures of peasants and peasant life in the newest republic of Europe. It includes some lovely views of the Valley of the Duoro, a mountain torrent. The three on the same reel make a good release.

"ANIMATED WEEKLY" June 17.—Our reviewer was not able to catch this weekly topical; but it is said to contain ten items. The washing of ranch cattle in Wyoming; Pacific Coast college boys making new records for jumping; the fancy diving and swimming of a human mermaid; a view of a trade boosting train in Canada; new gowns from Paris; a diver at work repairing a ship in New York harbor; Oakland motor races; the departure of America's Olympic team; a novel hydroplane race in Italy and a series of views of a spirited athletic meet in Munich, Germany.

"THE AIRMAN" (Ambrosio), July 5.—The early scenes of this picture were taken from a balloon, ascending. Following these, we see a very well suggested accident; the airman falls into an Alpine winter scene and is rescued by a St. Bernard dog. It is a very clever and amusing picture. The photographs are very good.

"LEGEND OF THE CRYSANTHEMUM" (Ambrosio), July 5.—A poetic fairy story of old Japan. Trick photography and delicate, graceful scenes leave a very delightful impression. It is an unusually charming picture.

"THE GIRL BACK HOME" (American), July 1.—Some fine photography in a story of a miner in love with a girl in the East, but who made love to two girls in the West. The sweethearts of the girls were anxious to slay him, but the girls deterred them. Then when one of the latter learned he had been making love to the other she started for him with a revolver. While she was threatening him the second girl from a distance fired a rifle and killed the Easterner, whether by mistake or intention is not absolutely clear.

"BEFORE THE WHITE MAN CAME" (Reliance), June 29.—A tale in which no white man appears, containing some striking scenery and some striking scenes—one which will hold interest.

"A MAN'S DUTY" (Reliance), July 3.—A story of the Civil War—of son against son—and a Northern mother and Southern father. It fell to the lot of the father to sit in court martial on the son, arrested as a spy. He was condemned to death, and is reprieved in the "nick of time." There is plenty of action in the play.

"RIP VAN WINKLE" (Reliance), July 6.—Washington Irving's famous legend, made so by Joseph Jefferson, has been filmed, and will make a valuable addition to the available list of school subjects. The story covers two reels. It follows more the lines of the play than those of the book, but it is to be regretted that old dog Wolf is omitted from the film. The first scene is of the village tavern; on a board in the background is conspicuously posted "Rip's score." Rip is being plied with drink by the wily tavern-keeper, and between steins he plays with the children, the same old, light-hearted, good-for-nothing, who will work for everybody but himself, laid down in the book. When Rip returns to his home he finds Dame Van Winkle in one of her choicest fits of rage. The lightning shows at the window when the gale blows the shutter ajar. The two young Van Winkles are watching their father as he caresses their mother and tries stealthily to abstract the maternal purse from the pocket of the ample apron. Detected, repulsed, and enjoined to "Get out and don't come back!" Rip goes out into the black storm. Dame Van Winkle repents, but her calls fail to reach the ears of Rip. The second reel opens with Rip in the mountains, carrying his long-barreled gun. This weapon, by the way, is not a flintlock; it is a percussion-cap affair, an invention of many years following Rip's ante-Revolutionary days. We see the runtlike, elflike, bewhiskered bowlers at play; they induce Rip to "take something," which, as always, was not difficult—and Rip sleeps. The awakening of the sleeper and his return to the village, his stop at the tavern and the scenes at his home, where he is reunited with his family, his once sharp-tongued wife now as meek as formerly she was vitriolic, and the ejection of the master of the house ad interim, are all well done.

"THE FLAT UPSTAIRS" (Majestic), July 2.—A comedy which will bring to the mind of many flatdwellers experiences with boisterous upstairs neighbors. Herbert Prior and Mabel Trunnelle take parts; the hamfatter is good; the old clothes man is funny.

"THE BURGLAR ALARM MAT" (Majestic), July 2.—On the same reel as the foregoing is depicted how a burglar alarm connected with the doormat worked all right when the mat was stepped on, which apparently every innocent person did, to the consequent disturbance of the slumber of the household. The burglar, however, stepped over the mat, and, after wrapping up the silver in the spread which he removed from the sleeping couple and taking the household revolver from beneath the pillow, cut the connecting wire and carried away the mat.

Projection Department

Edited by F. H. RICHARDSON.

COMPOSITION OF CELLULOID FILM.—Mr. M. A. Neff, President Motion Picture Exhibitors' League of America, has had a competent chemist prepare a statement showing the composition of a moving picture film. This statement he has very kindly contributed to the Projection Department for publication. It is as follows: "A Motion Picture Film, consists of the following ingredients, viz.: gun cotton and camphor, gelatine, silver bromide, and, in some case other salts of silver. The gelatine is the ordinary article used in every household. The bromide of silver is the ordinary silver dissolved in certain acids. Bromide of silver is in no way explosive, and the only action which intense heat could have upon it would be to reduce it to metallic silver, or cause it to oxidize. Gelatine absorbs moisture and is always found in a jelly-like state. It is only after subjecting it to continued heating that the moisture is driven off and then it is with difficulty that it can be burned.

"Gun cotton, when combined with camphor, is not explosive, as in a picture film. Gun cotton consists of the following elements: Six atoms of carbon, 10 atoms of hydrogen, and 5 atoms of oxygen. Camphor is composed of the following elements: 10 atoms of carbon, and 16 atoms of hydrogen and water.

"When a film burns the oxygen unites with the carbon and forms a gas. Carbonic dioxide is the common carbonic gas used in soda water and fire extinguishers. When a part of the oxygen unites with the carbon, the balance unites with the hydrogen and forms water. Now as camphor boils and passes off with steam at a temperature of 215 degrees, fahr., the heat of the burning film causes considerable of the camphor to pass off as steam of camphor. The heating also causes the water that is formed by the hydrogen and oxygen to pass off as steam. The carbonic dioxide is mixed with this steam. The carbon which is not completely united with the oxygen passes off as a black smoke or soot. Now only a small part of the carbon passes off in this form, and the principal part of the smoke is nothing but steam charged with carbon dioxide. This steam charged with carbon dioxide is an efficient fire extinguisher, and none of these chemical gases are in any way poisonous."

While the composition of film has been published in this department several times, and appears on page 102 of the Handbook, still it is well to have the matter in official form; also the chemist brings out some things not before touched upon. While I hardly believe that burning film will ever be adopted by the authorities as a fire extinguisher, still it is well to know that the product of its combustion has that property.

CHARTER WANTED.—Iowa (name of town suppressed), writes: "Would like full information as to how to get a charter from the I. A. T. S. E. All theaters here employ Union musicians and we think we can get enough employees and operators to secure a charter. We would like to know how many employees we need to secure the same. You would oblige us by answering this in a personal letter as we wish to keep the matter quiet, or we may lose our respective positions over it, if it is made known too soon."

I have forwarded your letter to Mr. Lee Hart, Gen. Sec. of the I. A. T. S. E., who will supply the necessary data. I have published your letter to show how narrow minded some theater managers are. Exhibitors would feel frightfully aggrieved if those who hire them (the patrons of their theaters), would refuse to employ them (refuse to attend their performances), because they join an exhibitors' union (an exhibitors' association is nothing more or less than a union, pure and simple); yet these same men or some of them rather, would discharge their employees for daring to join an organization of their craft. I must confess that I have no patience with that kind of business. It is as unfair as it is foolish. History has proven, and amply proven, the absolute foolishness of attempting to prevent the organization of labor. Some of the most powerful corporations in the world have tried that, and have succeeded for a time too; but it has invariably been at enormous cost. Furthermore, even these corporations, backed up by untold wealth, have not succeeded in more than checking organizations for a time. I firmly believe in organization. Let exhibitors and the men both organize and deal together as organizations, rather than as isolated individuals. In that way every one will benefit in the long run.

THE CONVENTION.—Mr. Blaine Day, Sherman, Texas, contributes the following: "As one of the older operators, who began projecting in 1905, I would like to say a few words in reply to the questions brought up by President Woods. I read the letter carefully, and it is true that a good many small town operators flock to the cities just to get a glimpse of the Great White Way. On the other hand, however, if they belong to a local they have their constitution and by-laws to govern their actions, and if they cannot pass a competent examination and deliver the goods, you, Brother Woods, don't want them—neither do we; also no manager worthy of the name would employ them. I don't believe in an operator going to some other town and taking the home man's job, but I do believe that if an operator can prove himself to be a competent man and can deliver the goods and there is an opening, he should certainly be allowed to fill it. The operator who takes no pride in his work is not wanted by you or by us, or by any 'real' manager. I have worked in some of the largest cities in the East. I have seen some good work and some that was very poor. Mr. Woods spoke of exterminating the floater, and, if the tourist or floater cannot pass a competent examination and deliver the goods, he should be exterminated. And now, my brothers, who will attend the coming convention, kindly remember that the operator has stuck to the I. A. T. S. E., instead of climbing into the I. B. E. W. band wagon, as he might have done. I believe the I. A. T. S. E. should recognize this fact, and appreciate it, making any changes necessary in the laws in order to give the operator what is his just due. Local No. 502 is very young, but we intend to try and send a delegate to the convention, nevertheless. All brothers of No. 502 send their best wishes to all and to the coming convention. We had the pleasure of meeting one of Brother Wood's boys, Mr. A. T. Snell, here in Fort Worth last winter, and he was a good fellow, too."

Brother Day's letter requires no comment, except to say that his views are, to my way of thinking, very largely correct. It must be conceded on behalf of Brother Wood's argument that under existing conditions the situation is rather a hard one, since the incompetent operator is very much more in evidence than the competent one. As to the convention: What Brother Day says is correct. The operators could have affiliated with the other organization, and some locals have done so. The great majority, however, have stuck to the I. A. T. S. E., and the I. A. T. S. E. should appreciate that fact. It will be well for the I. A. T. S. E. officials to wear out a lead pencil or two figuring how many operators there are in these United States, and then—do a little real solemn thinking.

CRAWFISH.—Montgomery, Ala., writes: "Attached find clipping from one of our Montgomery papers—one that knows more about moving pictures than the moving picture men themselves, judging by the stuff they print. The shows here run three reels of film, not more than 30 days old; they have a six-piece orchestra, pipe organ, two machines with one operator and an assistant, two ushers and two singers; some of the time there are more. The average pay roll expense is: Operator, $30; assistant, $8; pipe organ player, $40; leader of orchestra, $30; piano player, $20; trombone player, $20; clarionet and violin player, $20 each, and singers $50 apiece. The film costs $6 a reel, and we use 20 reels a week. Sometime ago the city passed an ordinance prohibiting the sale of standing room. The theater men did not make a kick, but have complied with the law. Owing to the restricted seating capacity of the houses it was necessary to raise the price of admission from five cents to ten cents. The largest house here has a capacity of 380. The people do not realize that the expense attached to the operation of a moving picture theater is greater than it was three years ago. Film service costs more and we have better operators and better pictures. Do you think that ten cents is an excessive price?"

Most certainly, I do not. It is high time that the five cent admission be done away with. Ten cents is little enough. The clipping is amusing. Reading between the lines, it is clearly seen that the people have been doing things to the aldermanic politicians in Montgomery, since the passage of the ordinance in question. They are rapidly craw-fishing, all of which illustrates that it is not always well to meddle too strenuously with the poor man's amusement. The poor aldermen are about to rescind the ordinance prohibiting standing room, and in excuse they say: "Whereas, certain owners or operators of moving picture shows in the city of Montgomery have, in the public print, announced as the reason for a doubling of the price of admission to their respective theaters, the recent action of the board of commissioners in prohibiting any person from standing in the aisle or passageway of said theater, and, Whereas the board of commissioners is of the opinion that the people would prefer exercising their own good judgment as to overcrowding places of amusement, and will properly use such discretion rather than to have the action of this board used as an excuse for doubling the price of admission, now therefore, etc. It is to laugh. Suddenly these dear aldermen have concluded that the people should be allowed to exercise their own judgment. Rather unusual for city officials to take that kind of a view, isn't it? The ordinance prohibiting sale of standing room is a good one, and it ought to be enforced. But, regardless of what the dear aldermen or supervisors may do, the exhibitors of Montgomery should maintain the ten cent admission, and never go back to the nickel proposition. It seems to me, however, you are putting some of the items on your expense list a little high. Have you a $30 scale for operators there and do singers get $50 per week? Forty dollars looks pretty stiff for an organ player, too. I hope the Montgomery operator is getting $30, but I'm afraid you could not quite make good on that—yet.

FROM ALABAMA.—Anniston, Ala., writes: "I see nothing from the Alabama operators and want to let you know we are not all dead ones. There are three theaters in Anniston, and projection in them all is as good as you can find in any large city. I use two Edison machines on a two-way switch, therefore do not have an intermission in the performance. Have a Fort Wayne compensarc, 110 volts, 60 cycle A. C., and project a 9x12 picture at 50 feet, using 40 amperes; the screen is plaster. The picture is as clear as a crystal and very steady indeed. I have noticed what you have said about fast running, none of that goes here. Our pictures last from 17 to 18 minutes. I agree with you that fast running not only ruins the effect, but also injures the machine. Our operating room is all wired in conduit. I tried the salt brine stunt, and am well pleased with it. I soaked a dozen carbons in brine for two weeks, then put them out in the sun to let them dry thoroughly. I get as good a light with 40 amperes as I used to with 60, but it is best to let the carbons get hot before you use them. This I do by placing them on top of the lamphouse. When I use 40 amperes they form a good crater and the light is steady, but on 60 they sputter and the light flares and is not steady; also the carbons get real hot about half way up and burn off at the front. I think the lamp is not made for 60 amperes. Am I right? I run over my films every morning, cut out the bad places, cement the loose patches; also notch torn sprocket holes. Therefore I seldom have a stop. One of the machines has a grind in it. It isn't much. I think the toggle gear is worn out. Am I right? If that isn't the trouble, please tell me what it is."

Glad to hear from you Anniston, and to know that projection is on such a high plane in your city. We have had quite a number of letters from Alabama, in the past, particularly from Atlanta. As to the grind in your machine, you say you have two Edison machines, and then speak of the "toggle gear," which is a Powers gear. The Edison has no gear called a toggle gear, nor any corresponding to it, therefore I guess you will have to explain a little more clearly. If you have a Powers machine, then get a copy of the January 6th issue of The Moving Picture World. If you have an Edison machine, get a copy of the June 1st issue of the World, in which appear respectively photographic instructions on the Powers 6 and the Edison Model B machines, the same being a part of the new edition of the Handbook, which will be out about September 1st. I think these instructions will enable you to locate your trouble. If by a "two-way switch" you mean that your machine lamps are both connected to one double-throw switch, I must advise you to make a change there. That is not the best practice. See page 58 of Handbook. I think your manager would find an intermission of 30 seconds between each picture to be good practice. Running one picture after the other without any stop at all is being discarded by many managers. See top first column page 1130, June 22 issue.

As to the carbons misbehaving when sixty amperes are used, I am inclined to believe one of two things, viz.: Either your compensarc is delivering in excess of 60 amperes—a matter easily proven out by having your light company test out your secondary output with their ammeter—or that the carbons flame more when treated with salt brine and subjected to their capacity amperage (a ⅝ cored carbon is at its capacity, or about so, with 45 amperes D. C., or 60 amperes A. C.). In fact, unless I be in error it has been reported that there is a greater tendency to flaming when the salt brine is used. The lamp being not made for 60 amperes would simply operate to cause excessive resistance and reduce the amperage. However, the fact that the carbons get red hot half way up makes me conclude that they are working above capacity; therefore test out the amperage delivery.

LONGER THROW.—Iowa (name of town suppressed) writes: "Am remodeling my theater and expect to have a longer throw. What size lens should I use for a 90-foot throw and what size curtain must there be? Expect to put my curtain on the wall, can you suggest a good wall coating? Am still having trouble with my intermittent sprocket. My pictures shake a good deal. Am using a Pathe machine. The intermittent wheel is loose. Do you think a new intermittent or cam wheel would remedy matters?"

Your information, Iowa, is rather indefinite. I cannot tell you the necessary focal length of lens without knowing the exact distance and width of picture. Even then, I would have to know the exact width of aperture. Proceed as follows: Measure the distance from lens to screen; measure the exact width of the aperture of your machine, using a pair of inside calipers and a finely graduated machinist scale, so as to get the exact measurement. In measuring the distance the calipers are open, you can use a condenser for a magnifying glass. Now multiply the distance from screen to lens; in feet, by the exact width of the aperture in fractions of an inch. Multiply this result by 12 to reduce it to inches, and divide it by the exact width of the picture you wish to have in inches. The result will be the equivalent focal length of the required moving picture lens, as nearly as it is possible to figure. For example, suppose you want a 10-foot picture at 64 feet; machine aperture 15-16 of an inch.

$64 \times 15\text{-}16 = 60 \times 12 = 720$. $10 \times 12 = 120$. $720 \div 120 = 6 =$ EF of required lens.

Exact results, however, cannot be expected, for the reason that there is considerable variation in cheap lenses; also it is not always possible to procure exactly the required focal length of lens. You say you will place your screen on the wall. By this, I presume you mean that you will frame a part of the plaster wall as the screen. If so, then white muralite or alabastine is a good coating (to be had of any dealer in painters' supplies), as is also English whiting, which can, I believe, be secured of any druggist, but which must be mixed, using a little glue and a little ultramarine blue. The wall can also be coated with white lead mixed half oil and half turpentine, adding enough ultramarine blue, ground in oil, to give it a decided blue tint when in the pot. This will mean that it will be pure white when on the wall. You say the "intermittent wheel" is loose. What do you mean by that? There is an intermittent sprocket and star on the intermittent shaft, both of which must be secured rigidly to the same. If they are loose, then either they must be made tight, or you must procure a new part. I would suggest that you order a new intermittent shaft, star and sprocket assembled, and put it in place of the old one. Your screen may be any size from 12 to 18 feet wide, but with a 90-foot house I would suggest 15 or 16 feet.

VARIOUS THINGS.—California writes: "I notice in the issue of June 8 an argument about the six months' apprenticeship law. I will set forth what I ran up against in San Francisco about a year and a half ago. Being out of work at the time, I went out to where the operators' headquarters were and had a very short talk with a genial, pleasant faced young man who occupied the other side of the railing, about the prospects of joining the local union. The question of residence came up and was disposed of. A few other questions followed, and along with them came the six months' apprenticeship law. When I came to that I objected on the grounds of having previous experience. No, I must serve six months as an apprentice before being allowed to have a card as a journeyman. I say that the law is wrong in all senses of the word. If any one, having previous experience, can take their examination and pass, is there any reason why he could not be admitted to the local as a journeyman operator? A six months' apprenticeship does one but very little good. In the Electrical Workers' Union, an apprentice must serve three years, or until qualified to pass the required examination. If he fails to pass, he must keep on serving until he can. That, it seems to me, is the way it should be. How much good can any apprentice derive in that short space of time, and how much can he learn in that time? Very little. I have been in and around the business for the last ten years and don't begin to know as much as I ought to about it. I never expect to know it all. The local residence law is another poppycock proposition. Will someone kindly set forth a good and sufficient reason why a chap must live in a town or city six months before he can get a job? Bosh! Or, as you say, 'Piffle.' Let the coming convention pass a law requiring all apprentices to serve at the very least two years before they can become journeymen operators. Also, that if a man, by diligent study and hard work, can qualify himself and bring himself up to the best standard he can be granted a journeyman's card, even before he has served two full years. That is, if he can pass a very rigid examination. Also an age limit should be set whereby irresponsible boys can be prevented from handling a picture machine alone. I have seen numerous cases where small boys were employed because they could be had for half, or even a third less wages than a good, competent operator could be had for. This is all wrong and all operators of worth and ability should fight hard to suppress the 'kids.'

Think I have had my little say, so will close, wishing you and the World all the success you both deserve."

I do not think I shall comment on this letter. I have printed it practically as written, for I believe these matters should have full and free discussion. I am a great believer in bringing things out into the open, and examining them, top, bottom and sides. It is thus the truth is arrived at, and just conclusions reached. If the six months law is wrong, then the opinion of those opposed to it will, in the end, prevail. If it is right, then the said opinions should not and will not prevail. At any rate, let us discuss these various matters openly, but without rancor, or ill-feeling. The brother sends in a sketch of, what I presume to be, his operating room. It contains two machines, spot light, a working bench, switchboard, rewinding tables, and supply cabinet. The room is 8 x 11 x 8 feet high and is very well arranged.

CATALOG WANTED.—Newport, Ky., wants to know where he can secure the latest Lubin catalog.

Write the Lubin Company, film manufacturers, Philadelphia, Pa.

VARIOUS COMMENTS.—Mr. P. E. Chapman, electrical engineer, St. Louis, Mo., contributes the following: "The writer, who reads this department with extreme interest, being an amateur moving picture man, notes the trouble of the brother from Edinberg, Ind., and the diagram accompanying same in issue of June 15. If a professional electrical man be allowed to butt in he would say that the diagram submitted is absolutely correct, and that the light will work as intended if his wiring is according to diagram. However, the gentleman's wiring, with all due respect to his opinions to the contrary, is not according to the diagram. What he has is the piano light wire (which is shown attached to the top house-light wire in the diagram), attached to the lower wire, if he will reverse it—that is disconnect and connect to the opposite wire he will find his trouble will cease. See sketch attached herewith. The piano lamp burns when double pole switch is open in series with the house lights, as he had it, they are so low resistance especially if tungstens, as to dim the piano light imperceptibly. On page 5 of the Handbook, and several other places the writer has noted statements that if one ampere at 2,000 volts should be transformed to 110 volts the current would be about 10 amperes. I believe this is an error that escaped your notice in proof reading, as the products in volts and amperes of a primary and secondary must be equal, always of course minus the small losses of transformation, this would make 18.2 amperes, or about 18 amperes, allowing for slight loss. This statement should either read, according to current practice, '1 ampere at 1,100 volts transformed to 110 volts would be approximately 10 amperes;' or, '1 ampere at 2,200 volts transformed to 110 volts would be approximately 20 amperes.' In the same issue 'Salt Brine,' from Indiana, wishes to know what the effect of running 60 amperes through his 40 ampere meter would be. Would beg to say that if he is using, as you suggest, 60 amperes with a rheostat, that, contrary to opinion expressed, that the meter would not register this current, the meter will register this current, and not only will it register it, but what is still worse, if it is run as indicated for more than a few minutes it will be very likely not only to register the current, but to speed up, and register fast on all loads, for nearly all recording watt meters used in this country measure by loading down the moving element with magnets working through a disk which is practically a short circuited dynamo. If this disk is run beyond a certain speed it will generate sufficient current therein to demagnetize these magnets slightly, and this current will be opposed in magnetic direction to the drag magnets as they are called. The writer has personally tested a good many meters and when a meter is subjected to a continuous long, drawn-out overload, as this brother's meter would be, they almost invariably run fast, although I must say that the general run of meters are about as near accurate as any commercial proposition could be expected to be. As to being an amateur in the moving picture line the following incident makes the writer feel almost chesty. The writer has charge of a moving picture machine in a church, of course there are a great many films not necessarily objectionable that would be objectionable in a church. The other evening we were running 'It Was as Ever Thus,' in which a couple of men are shown smoking up to beat a freshly fired locomotive, and one scene seemed to have been so nearly lifelike that one of the old ladies after the entertainment came to the writer asking whether he could not stop those men from smoking in the church, apparently having the opinion that two men were actually smoking in the church. It took about 15 minutes of explaining, exhibiting of films, etc., on the part of the writer, to convince the lady that the pictures were not actually live men with real cigars in their mouths. Are our amateur pictures good? Well!—"

We are glad indeed to have letters of this kind from the electrical profession. I think very likely your solution of the wire proposition of Edinberg is correct. The same solution occurred to us, but the gentleman was absolutely positive that his sketch was correct, therefore we submitted it as he put the matter. Your views as regards the meter are contrary to that of other electrical engineers whom we have consulted regarding this matter. I should like to have the comments of other competent men on this proposition, as it is one of importance. Your letter, Friend Chapman, is excellent and we thank you for it. Those pictures certainly must have been well put on—but where had the poor, dear lady lived all her life?

MOTOR-DRIVE.—Carlsbad, N. M., writes: "I note considerable discussion in the department regarding the driving of machines from motor to flywheel. There seems to be considerable objection offered, but the reasons are not clear. I am running a Powers 6 from a motor with an elastic belt, and up to date have detected no signs of trouble, but wish to know what to expect and be prepared. I enclose addressed stamped envelope and trust you will find it convenient to reply."

The objection to the motor-drive being belted to the flywheel has been set forth in this department. The flywheel shaft is a high-speed shaft, and it carries the weight of a comparatively heavy flywheel. If the pull of a motor belt be added, naturally wear on this bearing will be excessive and trouble is likely to be set up in the train of gears on the operating side of the machine as well as in the intermittent movement.

INFORMATION WANTED.—Nebraska (name of town suppressed) writes: "I wish to ask a few questions which are doubtless simple enough, but which nevertheless to me are perplexing. I have asked several operators, and they either told me wrong, or they would not tell me at all. Now, I am going to live and eat the chickens that scratch over the 'six feet of earth' of some of them, and what is more, some of these same boys will in time come to me for information, for I am in the business to stay and intend to learn all there is to be learned about it, and I wish to learn right. My knowledge and practical experience are at present limited, as the following questions will show: (a) If you were wiring rheostats on 25 or 133 cycle current, what size would you use and how many; also would you wire them in series or multiple? (b) Why could not a three-wing shutter be used on the inside with the blades of proportionately equal size? (c) What is the lock of the geneva movement? (d) Why does a crack in the condenser show in the stereo lens and not in the objective? In wiring rheostats in series and multiple is the accompanying sketch correct?" And thus continues the letter for eight pages.

Now these questions are elementary. All of them have been answered time and again in the department. The brother is in a city of sufficient size and ought to be able to secure a position as operators' apprentice, which I suggest that he do, and serve one or two years under a competent operator, meanwhile securing a Handbook and the back numbers of the department, in which he will find a mine of information. His determination to learn the business right is laudable, but to answer the questions he asked intelligently and completely would consume practically the entire department, and, as I have before said, I think the time is here when the answers to elementary questions propounded by novices in cities, where there is opportunity to serve an apprenticeship, has largely passed. By this I do not mean that I shall refuse to answer questions propounded by operators in cities. By no means. But where the questions are such that they show almost total lack of knowledge on the part of the questioner, I shall promptly suggest to him to serve an apprenticeship—provided he be located in a city. The small town man can ask any questions he desires to, since his opportunities for the acquisition of knowledge are restricted.

SALT BRINE.—Boyce, La., writes: "The experience of a rank amateur with salt brine may not be amiss. This place (about 500 whites) is not large enough for any perfectly sane person to go into the M. P. business, so we have for the past three years spent some of our spare time giving exhibitions for the benefit of some civic improvements. You can appreciate the class of commercials we are compelled to use to keep from going into a hole. I have endeavored to make up for poor films by increased excellence in projection. As this was my first experience with a projection lamp on A. C. (60 cycle, single phase current), I have had my troubles; pale blue ghosts, et al.; but we have hung close to your 'Bible' and the Projection Department with the result that we have been able to give our people at least an amusement of fair grade. We have a 12-foot picture at 40 feet; one 6½ and one 7½ condenser; use an Edison transformer at one-third of its amperage (5 to 6 turns out of total of 14). This combination, with the lower carbon treated with salt brine, is giving us a very pretty soft light at the arc, and a good white field on the screen. I have used both Bio and Electra carbons, soaking them for fourteen days, standing upright in a tall jar, the brine floating a fresh egg 1-3 out of the solution. I then tried them for two weeks before using, helping out the drying process in damp weather by the use of the kitchen range. The only time I have noticed excessive flaming at the arc has been during very damp weather, and then it does not seem to affect the picture. But even this I believe I can avoid by keeping my treated carbons in a closed fruit jar, or drying them in the kitchen range oven just before using."

I wish to use this interesting letter to point out one phase of the good work this department is accomplishing. Here is a little village containing but 500 white people (deponent sayeth not how many darkly sun-burned American citizens there are in addition), which would be totally without any amusement were it not for the little shows which the brother is able to put on in good shape through the information he has received in this department. There are a great many operators, I am sorry to say, who still are inclined to think that the dissemination of knowledge of projection is to be deplored. To such I would say that their position is absolutely untenable. Away back in the past, when labor organizations first came into existence, their very first endeavor was to prevent the introduction of improved machinery, and to suppress knowledge of their craft. We all know of the success that kind of a proposition met with, and the organization which would to-day attempt anything of that kind would be the laughing stock of the world. The nearest approach to it is the requiring of a thoroughly adequate apprenticeship and the limited number of apprentices to the needs of the business, to all of which I will heartily agree as a general proposition. But, as has been pointed out in these columns time and again, there are in this country thousands of small towns which ought of right to be favored with the amusement and education afforded through the medium of moving pictures. These small towns cannot and will not, at the present stage of affairs, support a show sufficiently to enable the employment of a competent operator, and this very largely complicates matters, in so far as the city operators be concerned. But, this much may be said, it is idle, it is useless, it is foolish to seek to suppress knowledge. The thing for the city man to do, and the thing which he has opportunity to do if he will avail himself of it, is to keep so far ahead of his small town brother that the danger of the small town man is practically nullified. But regardless of all that, knowledge cannot and ought not to be suppressed. I am glad to say that the really competent, intelligent men have come, or are very rapidly coming to a realization of this fact. Many of those who opposed the work of the editor in this department two years ago are now numbered among his friends. As regards that film business, it seems to me that your people would be willing to pay, once a week, fifteen to twenty-five cents to look at really good films, if they were properly projected. Why not try it out for one week, advertising thoroughly what you propose to do? You don't say what you charge, but assuming it to be ten cents, I should suppose that they would rather pay double that sum and see a really beautiful picture.

LOOP SETTER.—Milwaukee, Wis., writes: "In the June 15th issue you speak of an interesting patent by Mr. Nicholas Power, viz.: The loop-setter device, which seems to be along similar lines to one I am perfecting in my tension equalizer, which same I mentioned to you some time ago. Mr. Powers has struck a good idea all right, since a loop setter which will not pull the film apart will be hailed with joy. I have one of my devices on my Powers 5 machine, which I have for experimental purposes, and it works like a charm. It has been vastly improved since I wrote you more than a year ago. It sets the loop at any desired size and keeps it where set, large or small. Just a twist of a clamp and tangent screw, right or left, sets the size without any further attention, except possibly the matter of a little oil once in a while. The machine crank turns with a uniform degree of pressure from beginning to end. I have even run the film to the lower reel without the use of the lower sprocket. The motion is so uniform and steady that I never loose a loop on the worst possible kind of a film. I applied for a patent on the device last January, which is now about to issue. I am making two more of these devices and if you care to try them out I will send you one to put on the lower magazine. The only cutting of the magazine is a 3-16 hole in the back. Would you advise allowing a manufacturer to try the device before the issue of the patent. I am also working on a shutter that will take the flicker out of the high lights and put it in the shadows where it is not noticeable, using a narrow one-wing shutter, thereby saving one-third of the light. A certain manufacturer has asked the privilege of using this also."

I shall be very glad to test out the device as soon as you have one ready. I don't believe the manufacturer you named would treat you any other way than fairly, though it would probably be more satisfactory to you if you first secured your patent. In case the company in question did not adopt the device, a suspicion would naturally arise in your mind if they had it before the patent was granted. As to the shutter; frankly, I am skeptical. It seems as though about everything under the canopy of heaven in the shutter line has already been tried. However, we shall see what we shall see when your new shutter is finished. I thoroughly agree with you that a practical loop setting device will be of very great value.

LIGHT TROUBLE.—Somerset, Pa., writes: "In the May 4th issue, page 429, I asked a question concerning light trouble, and you made certain suggestions which we have tried out without benefit. The trouble still exists. Now, Mr. Richardson, could you not possibly figure out what it is? The light is not steady, and the spot jumps all over the gate. Am using an economizer, 110 volts, 133 cycles, 30 amperes. The light will burn steadily with new carbons for about ten minutes. Then it begins to jump. Could it be possible that my economizer is wound for lower voltage? If so, how could I find out? What effect would attaching an ordinary rheostat have?"

The brother's trouble, as stated on page 429, May 4th issue, is: "I have been having trouble with my light, which is not steady. Am using an economizer on 110 volt, 133 cycle current; use 30 amperes. Alternating current gets my goat. Have been working with it only about four months. Use Bio carbons, ⅝ cored. When I set them, the light will burn about ten minutes perfectly, and then the trouble begins. Have tried different ways of setting the carbons, but without improvement. I think the difficulty lies in the economizer. Have a rheostat, but when I connect that up it gets red hot. I never had any trouble during six years of work with D. C., but A. C.—well, that is something else again."

This is probably one of those cases that cannot be cured except by being on the spot. I think I shall pass this matter on to the consideration of brothers who may have had a similar difficulty. The attaching of a rheostat would lower your amperage, and would not be of benefit. I would suggest that you have your light company test the secondary amperage. Maybe your carbon holders are out of alignment. Such a thing would cause the crater to vary in about ten minutes. See Handbook on carbon setting. Use ⅝ cored above and below. Will be glad to hear from those who have anything to offer the brother in Somerset.

POWERS SIX REPAIR.—Sullivan, Ill., writes: "Can you inform me as to how much a Powers Six costs? Also cannot an old model No. 6, which has no adjustment to eliminate lost motion between cam and geneva, be remodeled and supplied with the adjustment. Can this be done without installing a new framing carriage complete. I wrote the Nicholas Power Co. concerning it, but was unable to understand their answer."

As to the price of the No. 6, I presume you mean only the mechanism itself; but it would be bad policy for us to quote prices in this department for several reasons. Yes, your old No. 6 can be remodeled, but a new framing carriage would be necessary, due to the fact that the left-hand intermittent bushing in the newer carriage is very much larger than was the old style one.

LIGHT TROUBLE.—Nebraska (name of town suppressed) writes: "Have a stack of Moving Picture Worlds, 1½ feet high, but do not seem to find my trouble. By the way, I suppose that the reason that so many wish the town suppressed is because they do not care to show their ignorance to the other managers in the same burg. I am running a 60 volt, 2½ kilowatt generator, which has an output of 41½ amperes at full load. It seems to be giving good light on the house lights. I want to throw a 12-foot picture at 60 feet. Am using ⅝-inch cored upper carbon and ½-inch hard below. The arc seems to sputter a good deal and try to burn together, and I cannot keep the carbons very far apart and hold an arc. Am I giving it too much juice? Should I speed up my engine more? Have been running all winter with 220 volt current, Powers 6 machine, and had no trouble. But this is something different."

I think you will find two 7½ condensers will serve your purpose best; however, you might try one 7½ and one 6½. The ball which forms on your carbon tip is what is technically known as a "tit" (see page 85, of the Handbook). It is composed of graphite and is caused by carrying too short an arc. This, together with the fact that your arc hisses, is evidence that you are carrying it too short. I think you had better test the voltage of that dynamo. You will probably find it to be considerably below 60 and if so you should speed it up until you have the full 60 volts. If you have a voltmeter with the outfit possibly it is not correct. Have it tested. At any rate, whatever the cause, your trouble is due to too short an arc.

AUTO POWER.—Bridgetown, N. S., writes: "A party is thinking of showing moving pictures in small country towns where there would be no electric lights. Is there any way a dynamo could be arranged on an automobile so that its engine could supply power to show the pictures?"

An automobile engine has plenty of power to run a dynamo supplying current for projection, and this has often been done. Write Mr. E. G. Kay, Snohomish, Wash., who can advise you as to the kind of dynamo to use. In making inquires of this kind, don't forget that the other fellow's time is valuable. You will be asking information worth a great deal to you, therefore enclose a dollar or two and you will be likely to get more complete data. Men often write in to me enclosing a stamped envelope for personal reply, which it would (in some cases), take me hours to compile—needless to say they do not get it.

A BEGINNER.—Pilares de Nacozari, Sonora, Mexico, writes: "We would like some suggestions and advice through the Projection Department as regards an amateur who has had no experience in the show line, but has had a good business training and experience in the mercantile line; also understands machinery quite well. Would it be advisable for him to go into the picture business?"

By "going into the picture business," I presume you mean as an exhibitor. I could not possibly offer you intelligent advice, and I would not care to offer you any other kind. There is too much depending on the personal equation. Many who have the same, or even less, training than you have, have entered the business and succeeded, while others with equal ability and training have ignominiously failed. I would be glad to help you, but it is impossible.

METALLIC SCREEN.—Mr. Roy A. Goggin, Estherville, Iowa, writes: "Would like your opinion as to enclosed sample of screen. It is called the '———— Screen,' and is manufactured by a firm in the State of Iowa. A sample placed over our plaster screen appears to bring the picture out much clearer. We could see the checks in the actor's clothing on it, while the same clothing looked black, with no checks, on the plaster wall. Undoubtedly it would make the pictures a whole lot plainer, provided it does not reflect the light too much. I tried the salt brine matter, soaking carbons five days, two weeks, and twenty days. I find the ones soaked twenty days worked the best. Our current is 110 volts, 60 cycle, through an economizer, delivering 30-40 amperes. I was using it on the highest notch, but by using salt brine I have been able to come down ten amperes. I also tried soaking them in salts. I put ten cents' worth of Epsom salts in one quart of water, soaking the carbons twenty days. It was not a success; in fact the light was not as good as ordinarily. I roll a piece of copper around the carbon inside of the carbon jaws to keep the salt from corroding. We will move into our new $25,000 house soon. It will seat 450. It will have a 90-foot throw, 15-foot picture. What length of condensing lenses would it take? I agree with you on the name of 'operating room.' It is operating rooms we want and need, not 'booths,' 'cabs,' 'coops,' etc. I worked with a fellow who called it 'lamphouse,' until I showed him that lamphouse was a part of the machine. I get much information from the department. Anybody who tries to get along without The World is simply stumbling along in the dark. Want one of your new Handbooks when you get them ready. Is it a revised edition of the other book? You may use my name as that is the only way operators who are hundreds of miles apart can get acquainted."

As to the screen, I would be afraid of it. Its surface is, I believe, too smooth, and I think you would find that it would produce more or less of an out-of-focus effect. I am of the opinion that any metallic surface screen must have a tolerably rough or matte surface; otherwise there will be more or less trouble. Undoubtedly the screen in question would increase your curtain brilliancy, but I would not care to advise its installation. It would be hardly fair to call the Handbook a revised edition of the old one. It will be practically an entirely new work—probably very nearly double the size of the old one, and far more complete in every way. It will represent more than nine months' of very hard toil, and I think will make the fraternity realize what good projection really means. In another part of the Department this week, you will find instructions on how to figure your lens. I could not figure it accurately without knowing the exact width of your machine aperture—the exact width mind you, not pretty near the exact width. You will also find the directions on page 68 of the Handbook. Focal lengths found thus are as accurate as it is possible to figure. Bear in mind that you won't get the precise width of the aperture if you measure with a carpenter's rule. Measure the exact width of the aperture of your machine with a pair of inside calipers and a finely graduated machinist's scale, since the variation of one one-hundredth of an inch will make considerable difference on the screen.

ELK CITY, OKLA.—Writes: "As I have seen nothing from this town I would like to say a few words. I have no questions to ask, as I have no trouble at present, but that is not saying that I never will have. If I do I will certainly ask you for advice and believe I will get it. I have all my M. P. W. on file and wouldn't take anything for them as they come in handy nearly every day. I can find out most anything I want to know by referring to the back numbers. I would like to say a few words in regard to Ft. Smith, Arkansas' letter, June 15th, issue on fly-wheel belting. Now don't get me down as being a believer in fly-wheel belting, for I am not, but he warns the operators, especially on the Powers 6, and says it will ruin the toggle gear in six weeks. I am using a Powers 6 and I have my motor belted to the fly-wheel and have had it that way for 8 months, not missing a night except Sunday, and I cannot see that the toggle gear is worn so very much. I have been operating six years and believe I could tell if it was. Now in regards to the grinding noise on the Powers 6 which many operators complain of, I have the same trouble and have had it ever since the machine was first installed. It only bothers when the framing lever is in midway. I lay it to the toggle gear, fly-wheel pinion gear, and the main driving gear for the idlers. As you know, when the framing lever is in midway these three gears are in line with one another, making a tighter mesh, therefore causing the grinding noise and while it is annoying to the operator I have made up my mind that it can't be remedied and I just let it grind. Maybe I am right and maybe I am wrong, I do not know. We have 110 volts, 60 cycle A. C. I am using 40 to 60 amperes at the arc through a Ft. Wayne compensarc. Forty isn't enough sometimes and 60 is too much but it has no 50 mark on it. It would be much better if it did have. I have heard traveling men tell the manager they see no better picture anywhere than I throw. I always do the best I can and work for the interests of my manager. I have been operating just long enough (six years) to begin to learn something. I want to close by saying that I believe I have one of the best managers in the world. When I want anything in the operating room all I have to do is to ask for it and I get it."

Your machine running that length of time with the motor belted to the fly-wheel, is an exceptional performance. But it is quite possible that you only run a couple of hours or so in the evening, which is very different indeed from an all day run. However, I have already expressed my views on this subject. No, the grinding noise usually does no real harm; still it is annoying. It is usually due to the toggle gear. I note you say you have been operating six years and that is just long enough to begin to learn something. That will doubtless make some of the six months' apprenticeship men smile, but there is nevertheless a lot of truth in the statement. It is a good deal the same as the ordinary man. At eighteen he knows it all and his father is a fool, or worse. At twenty-five he concludes there are still about two and a half things which he can learn, and maybe too, the old man is not quite the idiot he thought him to be. At thirty-five, he begins to discover that there are a number of things he can still learn and that the old man was a pretty bright old guy at that. At forty-five he finds out that he really does not know much of anything after all, and if he lives to be a thousand years old he probably might become tolerably wise. Incidentally his old Dad was, he now concludes, a very well posted man indeed, whom it would have been well for him to have heeded years ago. It is about the same proposition with the operator; that is provided he is a man of sense. The editor of this Department feels he has just begun to scratch the surface of projection knowledge. He expects in ten years from now to know at least ten times what he does to-day about the subject of projection of animated photography. It is not the toggle gear which wears through fly-wheel belting, but the fly-wheel shaft bearing. You will probably find it to be considerably worn and this is doubtless at the bottom of the persistent grind.

ISOLATED LIGHT PLANT.—Noble, Ill., writes: "Lately we have noticed several comments regarding isolated light plants. Have seen data on the Brush, Detroit and others, and have viewed several of them in operation. I have a Fairbanks-Morse & Co., Special Electric Engine, which is as steady as any automatic steam engine on the market. The Fairbanks-Morse Co. have an automatic throttling governor which gives one ½ or 1 per cent. control, and the needle of the voltmeter is absolutely stationary. One of the secrets of the engine's steady running is that it is equipped with very heavy, extra large belt wheels. The engine is of the 4-cycle type, make and break ignition, 6 H. P., speed 400 r. p. m., carries full load for ten hours on five gallons of naphtha or gasoline. Now can you readily see that it beats paying $40 per month for juice; also you have D. C. instead of A. C., and all you can use at that."

Noble is certainly enthusiastic on the Fairbanks-Morse & Co.'s outfit. I would not care to comment, but pass his remarks along to our readers for their consideration. I have, however, been told that the throttling governor does not always produce steady speed. I notice the brother claims differently. Would be glad to know the truth in regard to this feature.

ANOTHER BULL FIGHT PICTURE.

The Theater Film & Supply Co., 64 E. 14th St., New York, secured a winner in the Mexican Bull Fight, which took place at Mexico City, Mexico, May 6th, 1912. The picture consists of two reels, 1500 feet. The photography is very good. It's the kind of a picture that will satisfy those who crave plenty of action and, at the same time, there is not one inch that will offend those of more quiet taste.

Music for the Picture

BY CLARENCE E. SINN.

MANAGER S. L. ROTHAPFEL, who helped to make both Milwaukee and Minneapolis famous, has taken over the Lyric Theater in Chicago and is now giving us "Pictures de Luxe" in his own inimitable style. He gives a two-hour show, consisting of seven reels of pictures, an orchestra of nine pieces, a mixed quartet and a lecturer. The performance begins at 2:30 and 8:30 P. M., with an overture by the orchestra—the same as at a theatrical performance.

The present week's bill is as follows: Overture "William Tell," orchestra (under direction of Mr. Fisher). The lights slowly diminish, the strains of Gounod's "Ave Maria" are heard and the first picture is thrown on the screen—"The Lord's Prayer—a Study in Color Photography." The "Ave Maria" is played through once; the soprano, Mrs. Erlinger, then takes it up and sings it through to the end, singing from behind the scenes. At the end of the vocal solo the violincello takes up the same melody and plays to end of picture. The effect was beautiful.

Next, "Trawler Fishing in Hurricane." Not a note of music in this entire picture, but well executed sound effects of wind and waves. It got a rousing hand. Mr. Hugh Anderson, basso of the quartet, then sang "Calf of Gold" from Faust, and handled the number well. The next number on the bill was the picture "Shriner's Pilgrimage at Los Angeles." Music for this was "Auld Lang Syne" through first scene, then marches of more or less Oriental character till finish of picture. ("Imam" being one of them.) Mr. Kimball, tenor, who has a very pleasing voice, was next with "Ah, So Fair" from Martha, and a catchy little encore number, the name of which I did not get. This was followed by Pathe's Weekly Review No. 24. This also opened with "Auld Lang Syne," which got a hand from the shriners in the audience. 2d scene, "A Hot Time in the Old Town Tonight." 3d, a soft waltz, which played till the scene of the "Mass in Front of the Brooklyn Navy Yard," then Handel's Largo (violin and organ) back to same waltz, which was used as a "fill-in," till title: "New York, N. Y.;" then Weldon's "Gate City" march till title: "Rehoboth, Pa.," back to same waltz till "Constantinople," then "Turkish Patrol" till end of scene. Waltz again till "Roosevelt" scene, then "He's a Jolly Good Fellow" till change. The next scene opened with "Tramp, Tramp, Tramp," which music ran clear through. This was punctuated by cannon shots—a salute of 21 guns, which was heard all through the picture; this is correct, as the guns could have been heard by the marchers even at the times the battleship is not seen, and besides the 21 guns is an essential part of the picture. Other sound effects were given worth noting: The clash of cymbals in one of the "Shriner" bands, and the whistle of the captain of the drill team for each change of figure in the exhibition drill. For finish of Pathe Review ("Paris Fashions") they played "Oh You Beautiful Doll."

Miss Miller, a contralto of pleasing personality and a voice of both depth and quality, followed with "Annie Laurie" assisted by the other members of the quartet. "Winter Logging in Maine" (picture), "The Sextet from Lucia" (quartet) and "Buster's Nightmare" completed the first part of the program. The "Buster" picture was worked up in the usual way. Neutral to open, lullaby (from Erminie), at bedroom scene, "Indian War Dance" (Belstedt's), all through Indian scenes. Back to neutral (a waltz), to close.

"The Tale of Two Cities" in three reels formed the second part of the show. This was opened by the lecturer, Mr. Reader, in a short introductory address, which led up to the story of the picture. Music: First two bars "Marseilles" for brass; drum solo, two bars. Brass repeats first phrase a 4th higher. Then the "Marseilles" for voices and orchestra, forte. Diminish toward end, lights go down and as picture begins the same music is continued pianissimo by violin and organ—just above a whisper, in fact, to make a background for the lecture. When the young heir is seen, music changes to light waltz, which continues till combat, then agitato till "To the Bastile." Theo. Bendix's "Longing" is then played till "Thinking Manette Dead," etc. Here Nevin's "Rosary" is played—a short introduction pianissimo when the soprano (Mrs. Erlinger) joins in behind the scenes and this finishes the first reel. The music continues, however, the lights go up and then down again for the second reel, when the music changes to Massinet's "Meditation" from Thais for violin and organ. This is played softly till "In Paris when the "Marseilles" is again introduced by quartet (behind scenes) and orchestra; swell and diminish with action till prison scene; music dies out and blends into "Thais," which runs through next three scenes, then soft waltz till "The Case Darney," etc. Agitato music to action, waltz (same one) then "Thais" till end of reel. The "Marseilles" is again sung behind scenes, accompanied by orchestra, which fills the time between reels. At opening of third reel "Marseilles" is continued softly till "The First Red Stain," then mysterious (pizzicato) till stabs through curtains. This incident is accented by the wind instruments setting into form a heavy "swell" (not an ordinary (chord) diminishes and melts into the "Marseilles," which swells and diminishes according to action. Continues till "The Knock at the Door," then agitato till "To the Guillotine," "Marseilles" till "It is a Far Better Thing." Soprano behind scenes sings "Good-bye" to close.

Mr. Rothapfel is putting up a good picture show. His projection is excellent and all the musical accessories are subdominant to the picture. The audience was very appreciative and it is to be hoped that he meets with the patronage that his efforts deserve. The program is changed once a week—not every day.

* * *

A belated letter from Idaho says: "Have been reading letters from different pianists giving ideas and suggestions through your paper on playing the pictures. The following is our musical program for "Cinderella" (Selig):

"First reel: 'Beautiful Lady' (Van Alstyne) and 'Since I Fell in Love with You' (Von Tilzer).

"Second reel: 'Sunbeam Dance' (Jacobs) and 'Lady Bug's Review' (Niel Moret).

"Third reel: 'Heart Throbs' (Leo Feist) and 'Chrysanthemums' (Wm. Penn).

"For each reel we figure on playing two pieces of music, repeating each piece. (Not only for this, but for all pictures.) We have violin, piano and drums and all play just as soft as possible—loud enough to be heard all over the theater, but not loud enough to detract the attention from the picture. Our manager is a fine fellow and an up-to-date picture man; he gets all his reels two days ahead of time and runs them through for our benefit—also to see if they are O. K. In this way we can get up our musical program to fit the picture. We find with the general run of the public and also the proprietor a good smattering of popular and classical music with a novelty in each program goes fine. For our 'Current Events' we generally play an overture of popular hits. Our main object is to play soft, and for pathetic scenes the violinist mutes his instrument. I think soft playing and not a continuous changing from one piece to another takes better than a hum-drum (all same electric piano) by far. The 'Cinderella' pictures were certainly appreciated here by the public. S. R. O. each night. If the editor prints this I shall be tempted to write more later on. Hoping to see more 'dope' from pianists in the Moving Picture World. Yours, E. A. A.

* * *

The exhibition of "Pictures de Luxe" in the Fine Arts building on Michigan Avenue has seemingly gone away past the experimental stage and are interesting an increasing number of intelligent patrons who like the better class of pictures served up with high class music and realistic sound effects. This is a twenty-five cent show, running from noon till 10:30 P. M.

With Lyman Howe at the Palace Theater, the Paul Rainey "African Pictures" at the Colonial, the "Sara Bernhardt" and "Mme. Rajane" pictures at the LaSalle, "Dante's Inferno" at Riverview Park (accompanied by organ and vocal music and interpreted by a lecturer) together with the old reliable Orpheum Theater, Chicago may congratulate herself on her quota of high class moving picture shows.

The Orpheum Theater is installing a splendid pipe organ, which in conjunction with Mr. King's efficient orchestra will move this house one notch further in its record for high class picture music.

SOME OBSERVATIONS.

By Carl B. Lagerquist.

The Crescent Theater, of Adrian, Mich., has recently remodeled to the extent of several thousand dollars and is easily the leading five-cent house in southern Michigan. The seating capacity has been doubled and the mechanical equipment includes an excellent organ, piano and Victrola, besides two violins and traps.

The musical accompaniment at this house is eminently calculated to reach the average audience. While it cannot be gainsaid that what is known by professionals as program music of the classical sort is, par excellence, the desirable tone coloring for the various situations of the pictures, it must not be forgotten that the average theater-goer knows very little about the appropriateness of a given master's mood. The only chance he has of judging this is that the said composer has faithfully pictured the mood in tones, and if that be so it matters little who did it. When a pianist has sufficient originality to "hand out" the principal theme in a popular song hit at the right juncture, dressed up in dignified and chaste harmonies, he not only meets the behest of the purist, but elicits from the untutored listener an instant response which evidences itself in increased attendance.

It may be permitted to particularize. For instance, the Grieg lyrics, collected in a large volume, Peters edition, contains as many moods in exquisite setting as the most fastidious might desire. What a tearing at the heart-strings is produced by "Homesickness," well played, no matter whether the particular piece is recognized or not. The "March of the Dwarfs" for an elf scene is ideal. But in the case of a rural wedding, who but a knowing one would recognize the playing of "The Wedding Day at Troldhagen" as fitting. The point sought to be made is this: There is such a wealth of thematic material that nearly every one recognizes the moment it is hinted, that a clever player can create his own musical situations and make a running accompaniment to the pictures that will not suggest a musical program with moving picture illustrations.

If the true orator is unseen by the audience because of what he says, the talented player at the moving-picture house must be successful enough in keeping himself in abeyance to at once engage the ear in a suggestive way, without disturbing the function of the eye.

There is no doubt that the properly trained musician can find infinite material in any well-rounded repertoire to accompany any series of pictures, but he runs in danger of thinking the audience knows as much what he is doing as he does himself. If Chaminade's "Flatterer" is sufficiently suggestive to the average person of culture, without the aid of musical annotations, well and good. If not, the pianist may revel in it to the surfeiting of the crowd. Mendelssohn's "Songs without Words" were labeled by somebody else, and while it was intelligently done, the unhappy rendition of "Consolation" might mean grief to the other fellow, even though he knew the label it ought to have.

The day is approaching when America will listen to any musical mood without the need of explanations, but it is not yet. Meanwhile the popular hits must be "dished up" in proper style—which is as feasible as the masterly working over of folk-songs and folk-dances into classics across the water. And the one who can do that is delivering a musical message that is more intelligible than he who opines that "Menuet l'Antique" will be recognized by any one as a proper environment for powder and wig.

To be sure, the program music must be taught the public, and the picture can help teach it, but the doses must be homeopathic until that millennial day arrives when our people will give instant recognition to any piece of quality, such as is characteristic of some European cities to-day.

SUGGESTIONS FOR PIANISTS.

By C. K. Aiken.

The subject of improvising is one which concerns every motion picture pianist. A good deal of nonsense has been written about it, the few who were able to improvise insisting that this was all there was to picture playing and another set, equally wrong, who could see no good in it whatever. The other day I heard a program which, so far as my ear could detect, was nothing more than one long improvisation. The general effect was never convincing and seldom pleasing. There was no shading or coloring or working up to climaxes, but rather a dead level of monotony. It was neither sad nor joyous. It represented no fancy or feeling. Just when a musical thought would appear to emerge, like a bubble it would vanish. There was no consistency or completeness; no going straight after an idea and staying with it till its musical expression was exhausted. I could not help but feel after this performance that a little improvising, like a little learning, was a dangerous thing and the less some folks made use of it the better.

To the majority improvising means just wandering over the keys. A trill, a run, a few chords and we have improvised. Not so. This is no more improvising than for a cat to walk up and down the keyboard. To improvise means to work out a definite theme at a certain rhythm in a certain key. Now, how many pianists can do that? There are very few. We picture pianists should realize our limitations and not try to do the things which are hard, even for conservatory professors.

There is unquestionably much improvising necessary in playing pictures (this I shall come to presently), but the point to bear in mind is that, in the absence of great natural talent in this direction, the very best thing to do is to select the most suitable pieces possible and play these well. Composers often write slowly and with deliberation. It is not just momentary impulse with them. It is good hard thinking and painstaking attention to details. When improvising only the skeleton of things can be given. All the delicate tracings of a composer's thought, all the filigree work which add so much to the pianistic effect, all this must not be sacrificed through a foolish desire to be original.

The utmost the average pianist can do is to learn the peculiar characteristics surrounding each key. Then when occasion demands he may employ the fundamental harmonies of the key most appropriate for the effect he desires in such combinations as to make a convincing impression. But what are these peculiar characteristics and what are the best ways of bringing them out to good advantage? Well, with the understanding that I do not consider my judgment final or even authoritative I will make a few observations:

Taking the minor keys first it is unquestionable that they are strongly Oriental. The keys G and D have an Indian color. In B flat we have a key capable of expressing tragedy or power. Instances such as Chopin's "Funeral March," Tchaikowsky's "Marche Slave," McDowell's sea piece "In the Depths" come to mind. F sharp is sad and pensive. C sharp is sombre and heavy, probably the least beautiful of all. A is rather lively and resembles the major more than any other minor key. G sharp has sentimental and religious qualities. F is mysterious. In the major all is not bright and lively as some suppose. G lends itself to lofty conceptions. D flat and A flat are peculiarly good keys for love songs. A is sparkling and so are E and B. F is serious. B flat is a little thin. This is perhaps the least useful of the major keys. E flat has brilliant qualities. It is very likely, however, that others will not agree with me in this classification of keys. Any person's judgment in such a matter may be peculiar.

The manner of improvising is a subject big enough for a book. A study of transcriptions should be helpful; that is, in showing the various ways of carrying along a melody. Then one can try to work out an original melody along the same lines. The trouble with most improvisations is that they do not get on. A start is made in a certain direction and then another start in another direction, without ever completing any one musical idea. Perhaps a little practice at the piano each day with one hand would bring results. Facility in modulation is essential. This must be learned at the piano and not from books. Chord progressions should be as familiar as A B C. These are just the technical aspects. There remains the power to lose one's self; soul power, so to speak, whereby the pianist plays by intuition without effort or hesitation, evolving his own musical conceptions as easily as if he were playing from the printed page.

VAN WERT, OHIO, MEN BUY PICTURES.

The town of Van Wert, Ohio, has gone into the moving picture business with a will. The Buffalo Bill and Pawnee Bill Film Company sold the rights for the state of Ohio to Mr. F. A. Thaler, a resident of Van Wert, and a day after he received his film, the Buffalo Bill and Pawnee Bill Film Company received three telegrams simultaneously from three different citizens of that community, offering various prices for various states for the same production, which resulted in the sale of the rights for the state of Indiana to Mr. Bert Montague, and the state of Michigan to Mr. A. J. Herriott, of the same city. Who knows, but some day, Van Wert, Ohio, will be known as the home of the moving picture magnates.

The Comparative Latitude of the Picture Play

(Continued from page 22.)

scenes, instead of four; and this is technically an immeasurable advantage. Instead of constraining his characters to meet at a certain place at a certain moment, he may visit them at different moments in the various places where they choose to be. In this freedom the moving picture play resembles those earlier types of drama which flourished before the stage restricted its range of narrative by adopting a definite scenic setting.

Students of the history of the theater will discern a close analogy between the moving picture play and that type of chronicle history which was developed in the early Elizabethan period and was utilized repeatedly by Shakespeare. The battle episodes of Shakespeare's histories, vivid with alarums and excursions, wherein the scene shifts momentarily from one part of the field of conflict to another, and the characters make a rapid transit before the eye, launching hasty, incoherent lines in passing, could be suggested more emphatically by the kinematograph than on the modern scenery-encumbered stage. Furthermore, the moving picture possesses a notable advantage over the contemporary regular drama in its ability to alter in the fraction of a second the point of view from which the story shall be looked upon. As soon as a character has passed through a certain door the scene may be shifted from the room that he has left to the room that he has entered, and the eye may follow him all through the house from the cellar to attic without any loss of time. The new art of the moving picture play is the only one of all the many arts of narrative which makes it possible for the observer to follow with the actual eye the passage of a character through a mile or more of space. In this new form of artistic presentation, a person may walk, run, ride, drive, sail, swim or fly for any distance, and yet be accompanied through his entire transit by the actual eye of the observer. This fact offers to the artist who devises a scenario for the kinematograph many possibilities of narrative which lie far beyond the range of the writer for the restricted stage of the ordinary drama.

In this freedom in handling place and time and in shifting the point of view, the moving picture play resembles the novel much more nearly than it resembles the regular drama. The solitary horseman, dear to Scott and Cooper, could not be shown upon the stage, but he might easily be represented on the screen. If we draw on our imagination we may readily adduce a more emphatic illustration of this point. "Treasure Island," for example, could not possibly be dramatized for presentation in the regular theater, because the interest of the action is dependent on its rapid change of place from hour to hour; but the entire story, from the outset to the end, could be told in moving pictures; and many of the scenes, since their appeal to the imagination is mostly visual, would be even more effective on the screen than on the printed page. In handling the element of action, the moving picture play is more successful than the novel, since its appeal is made directly to the eye instead of to the imagination, and it is scarcely less successful than the drama. In handling the element of setting, it is overwhelmingly superior not only to the novel but to the drama as well. In dealing with interiors, the moving-picture play remains on a par with the regular drama; but in dealing with scenes set out of doors, it passes far beyond the reach of the roofed and stationary stage. In the modern theater, the Forest of Arden is nothing but a huddled conglomeration of canvas trees; but in the moving picture play, scenes like those between Shakespeare's idyllic lovers may be performed in an actual forest, drifting from place to place among trees that sift the sunlight and flutter their leafy branches in the breeze.

The kinematograph is especially successful in rendering effects of moving air and water. On the stage the sea can be suggested only by a crude and bungling mechanism, but in the moving picture play a scene may pass upon an actual sandy beach, with league-long, round-back breakers creaming on the shore. Boats always look silly on the stage; but the kinematograph may fluently represent the paddling of a canoe past bend after bend of rippling river. Animals, also, which can never be trusted to behave naturally in the theater, may be used as important agents in the plot when the scene is conducted actually out of doors. To the mind of the most contemporary artists the element of setting is not the least significant of the three necessary elements of narrative; and it is therefore an exceedingly important point that criticism is forced to concede that the local environment of a story may be exhibited more truly and more vividly in the moving picture play than in any of the older types of narrative. It is only in handling the element of character that the new art is at a disadvantage in competing with the novel and the drama. The many expedients that the dramatist and the novelist may use for delineating character are reduced in the moving picture play to one. What people are may be suggested only by what they do; by their deeds, and only by their deeds, we know them. In drawing character, the moving picture play offers a strict confinement of range in characters owing to inability to use the spoken word. Only a small minority of those innumerable characteristics which are compounded into any individual human temperament express themselves naturally in action which is obvious to the eye. Here, then—in handling the element of character—lies the weakness of the moving picture play, considered technically as a type of narrative—just as in handling that other element of setting lies its strength.

This analysis makes it possible for us to define the type of story which may be most completently represented by the kinematograph. Obviously the most desirable narrative material for a moving picture play is material in which the elements of action and setting are paramount, and the element of character subsidiary—in other words, a story in which incident treads upon the heels of incident and the action rushes headlong through a hurried succession of objective events, set preferably out of doors. It will be noticed at once that whereas this definition utterly fails to fit the modern regular drama, it almost exactly fits the traditional romantic novel of adventure. If we revert to an illustration that has already been adduced, we shall observe that this definition of what is necessary in a moving picture play, points directly to that traditional type of narrative that Stevenson revivified in "Treasure Island."

In fact, a re-reading of Stevenson's "Gossip on Romance" will give us a very vivid sense of the sources of interest and charm of which the moving picture play is particularly capable. What Stevenson says in place of the romantic novel of adventure may be applied with equal justice to that new art which did not spring into existence until after he was dead. "The story," he says, "should repeat itself as a thousand colored pictures to the eye. It was for this last pleasure that we read so closely, and loved our books so dearly, in the bright, untroubled period of boyhood. Eloquence and thought, character and confession, were but obstacles to brush aside as we dug blithely after a certain sort of incident, like a pig for truffles. For my part I like a story to begin with an old wayside inn, where toward the close of the year 17—, several gentlemen in three-cocked hats were playing bowls. A friend of mine preferred the Malabar coast in a storm, with a ship beating to windward, and a scowling fellow of Herculean proportions striding along the beach; he, to be sure, was a pirate. One and all, at least, and each with his particular fancy, we read story-books in childhood, not for eloquence or character or thought, but for some quality of the brute instinct. Contentment is three parts of life, they say, but I think they put it high. There is a vast deal in life, where the interest turns, not on the slips and hesitations of the conscience, but on the problems of the body and of the practical intelligence, in clean, open-air adventure, the shock of arms or the diplomacy of life. With such material as this it is impossible to build a play, for the serious theater exists solely on moral grounds, and is a standing proof of the dissemination of the human conscience. But it is possible to build upon this ground the most lively, beautiful and buoyant tales."

Here, in the words of a great artist in narrative, we have a clear and comprehensive statement of the possibilities that lie open to the maker of the moving picture play. He cannot contend with the dramatist in working out those problems of conscience which confront the will; he cannot compete with the novelist in analyzing characters; but he may tell with a vividness beyond the reach of their last visual expedients of appeal, "the most lively, beautiful and buoyant tales," in which the interest is centered not in "eloquence or character or thought" but in "some quality of the brute instinct."

It is evident, therefore, that the moving picture play is not a play to be despised or ignored by serious criticism. It represents, in fact—to look upon it from a historical point of view—a revolution to an earlier and more perennially refreshing mode of narrative than that which lately has assumed domain over the novel and the drama. The moving picture play carries us back to the boyish age of the great art of telling tales, when stories were narrated nakedly as stories, instead of being sicklied o'er with the pale cast of thought. One can hardly imagine Mr. Henry James devising a successful scenario for the kinematograph; but the Shakespeare who wrote "Richard III," and the Homer who wrote the "Odyssey," would experience no difficulty in fulfilling the requirements. It is only very recently that the masters of the art of fiction have made war upon the optic nerve and exalted the objective over the subjective. Our modern interest in those intimate phases of character which refuse to reveal themselves in action is certainly sophisticated and excessive. It is therefore with a feeling somewhat of relief that we notice that the newest of all the arts of narrative—the moving picture play—disembarrasses its stories of psychologising, and tells them in the free and boyish spirit that vivified the epic, the drama, and the novel throughout the centuries before the world grew old.

It is not at all surprising that the moving picture play has driven out of existence the cheap type of popular melodrama. The reason is not merely that the moving picture show could undersell the regular theater and offer a performance for five cents instead of for ten, twenty and thirty cents. In the old history of the world, no art, however cheap, has ever annihilated a more expensive art which was basically better than itself. The real reason for the triumph of the moving picture play is the purely critical reason that it offered a more artistic type of narrative than the old popular melodrama. In cheap melodrama, all that was worth while was the vividness and the variety of the incidents, the characters did not count, except as puppets in the plot; and the dialogue, crude and frequently absurd, was more a bother than a help. In abolishing dialogue the moving picture show relieved the cheap drama of its weakest element; it could suggest character with less obvious falsification than the actual popular drama; and it could easily excel it in the presentation of incidents, both on the score of variety and on the score of vividness.

The greater portion of the moving picture plays which may now be seen are fulfilling more completely than heretofore the high artistic aims of which they are indubitably capable.

WARNERS' FEATURES.

Messrs. A. and H. Warner, doing business under the firm name of Warners' Features, with offices in the Exchange Building, 45th St., New York, have each left the city for about two weeks, in which time they will visit all the large cities between New York and Chicago, for the purpose of studying the feature film market.

In an interview with Mr. A. Warner, senior member of the firm, the Moving Picture World representative was given an idea as to the future policy of the firm. Instead of disposing of their feature productions on the state right basis as heretofore, it is their intention to rent feature subjects direct to the exhibitor. With the new renting system it will be possible for the Warner Co. to furnish an exclusive feature program and, in order to further insure this, they have already established branch offices in many of the large cities.

Two large studios, with a well-equipped plant behind each, have been leased by the Warner Company for the production of two and three-reel features which, when added to their imported product, will afford a substantial foundation for the operation of the new feature film renting department. A cordial invitation is extended to the trade to visit the new and handsomely appointed offices of Warners' Features on the eighth floor of 145 West 45th St., New York City.

Manufacturers Advance Notes

KLEINE RELEASES FOR WEEK ENDING JULY 6TH.

George Kleine will release three very interesting reels this week. A split containing two hilariously funny Cines comedies on Tuesday, July 2nd; a split Urban-Eclipse presenting a particularly strong dramatic offering, "The Wax Model," followed by a beautiful travel subject, "Scenes in Somerset, England"; and for Saturday, a rattling good farce involving the capable Cines comedians in a series of laughs under the title "In Wrong."

The Tuesday's Cines, "A Violin and a Pipe" and "Jenkings Sneezes," should prove a splendid drawing card for exhibitors and will undoubtedly add genuine mirth to any programme. In the first subject, the clever comedienne, Leah Gillami, plays up splendidly as a foil to the comedy of Sylvester Furlai. Leah's violin and Furlai's pipe, as aids to Dan Cupid, play important parts, and the spirit of fun runs riot when one is pitted against the other. "Jenkins Sneezes," as the title of the second subject on this reel, almost suggests the humorous situations which occur in this snappy little farce. That very funny fellow, Louis Gillami, as usual, is seen as Jenkins, and the series of highly amusing situations which develop through his persistent and annoying malady should furnish abundant laughs for the audience.

Scene from "In Wrong" (Cines).

Wednesday, July 3rd, Urban-Eclipse, "The Wax Model," will be the leading feature on many programmes. It is an unusually interesting and intense photodrama with a highly dramatic climax. The story concerns a professor of music who secretly loves one of his most promising pupils, who eventually becomes so successful in her chosen field and rises to such heights in the operatic world that a wax model is made of her to adorn the local museum of contemporary celebrities. The beautiful and very popular singer now has no time nor inclination to look upon her one-time teacher with favor, and the poor professor loves on and sorrows in silence. He becomes so obsessed in his worship, and realizing the futility of his dreams, he steals into the museum during the night to view with adoring eyes the waxen image of his loved one. The real tragic interest begins at this point, and it would be spoiling the splendid story to relate the conclusion here. "Scenes in Somerset, England," have been added to complete the reel, and the views along the picturesque and historic rivers and in and about the ancient town of Bath, founded by the Romans; the ruins of old Glastonbury Abbey, built 146 A.D., furnish pictures which are a delight to the eye.

"In Wrong" is the title of the highly amusing farce scheduled for release Saturday, July 6th. Alfred Bracci, Lorenzo Lupi and Mary Furlai of the Cines Comedy players furnish many laughs. In the many amusing situations which occur in working out another version of the old story "the course of true love never runs smooth."

"WHITE ROSES" (Essanay).

Redolent with heart-interest, gripping in plot and exquisitely portrayed, this photoplay features Francis X. Bushman in another of the roles that have gained him popularity throughout the film world. The story is unique.

Mary Fuller, a pretty country girl, receives a letter from her city sweetheart asking her to come and meet him and they will be married. With a bouquet of white roses, her favorite flowers, in her hand she boards the train. A stop is made for lunch at a nearby station, Mary leaves the train, and is walking along the platform when she comes upon a convict, manacled between his guards, waiting in the falling rain for the train that will bear him to prison. With a heart full of pity for the poor unfortunate, Mary presses the white roses into his hand, whispers to him to keep them for hope, and again boards the train.

Scene from "White Roses" (Essanay).

Years later, Mary, now a widow, lives in a wretched tenement with her sick child. She cannot pay the rent, and the gruff landlord shows her a letter from the owner, Mr. Loring, to eject all tenants who are behind with their rent. Desperate, Mary goes to the owner's home and pleads for mercy. It is not until Loring removes a faded white rose from his wallet and reveals his identity as the convict, that she recognizes him. Writing her a note for the landlord, Loring presses her hand and leads her from the room. Back in the tenement Mary learns she may stay as long as she cares to without paying rent, and her joy brings the blush of returning health to the wan cheek of her baby. Kneeling by the bedside, Mary is amazed when a messenger enters the room with a large box filled with white roses, and a card attached reads: "White Roses for Hope." Realizing Loring has sent them, she bows her head in their sweet fragrance with a prayer of joy and thanksgiving in her heart.

Mr. Bushman plays the role of the convict with the gripping sincerity and countless humanizing touches that characterize his portrayals always. Beverly Payne is charming as Mary, and her many tense scenes are beautifully rendered. The production boasts of no great stage settings, but is simple, effective and thoroughly satisfying from all standpoints. The photography is uniformly beautiful and of the highest quality. The film is booked for release July 4th.

"UNDER TWO FLAGS" (Thanhouser).

After many months of preparation, the feature department of Thanhouser Company have completed their two-reel presentation of "Under Two Flags," from the story by Ouida. It is released Sunday, July 7. Katherine Horn, Flo La Badie, William Garwood, William Russell and other well-known Thanhouserites appear. The Thanhouser version of the famous story shows on the film this way:

Bertie Cecil, the elder son and heir of an English Viscount, fled from his regiment to shield his brother, who had committed forgery. He took the blame upon himself, and the search was soon dropped, for it was believed he had been killed in a railroad wreck. The fact was that he reached Algeria, where he enlisted in the French Foreign Legion.

In that country, strange though it was to him, he won fame as a gallant soldier, but failed of promotion because his colonel, for personal reasons, hated him. After twelve years under an alien flag, he had only reached the grade of corporal, although his merit was unquestioned.

Scene from "Under Two Flags" (Thanhouser).

A beautiful young vivandiere, Cigarette, met Cecil and fell in love with him. Cigarette had been with the army all her young life, and her bravery and patriotism won all hearts. She saved the detachment to which Cecil was assigned from destruction by hostile Arabs, and to recompense her it was decreed that she be made a member of the Legion of Honor.

When the presentation was made by a Marshal of France, a number of English people, guests of the Colonel, witnessed it. Cigarette, who watched Cecil jealously, saw that he recognized the stranger, although they did not notice him.

A day or so later, the one Englishwoman in the party expectedly surprised Cecil, who was kissing a tiny purse. This woman was the sister of Cecil's dearest friend, Lord Rockingham, and years before, when she was a young girl, she had given it to Cecil, with all her pocket money, because she was sorry when he lost a horse race. He refused the money but made her very happy by asking for, and retaining, the purse.

This link of the love of long ago betrayed Bertie's secret and he confessed his identity, but made the woman promise not to breathe a word of it to anyone. They met frequently, however, and one evening were surprised by the Colonel. He made a sneering remark and Cecil knocked him down. For this serious offence, Cecil was tried by courtmartial and sentenced to death.

Cigarette, who by this time had realized that her hero was not for her, decided to save him. By a wonderful ride she reached the headquarters of the Marshal, sent in her Legion of Honor ensign as a credential, and by her arguments won a pardon for the brave soldier. Then she started back again in her race against death. On the way she encountered a sand storm, but fought her way through it. Her horse was exhausted, so she made her way to a camp of Arabs, knowing that they sought her life. She told them that she would consent to be their prisoner on condition that they speedily forward the pardon in time to save a brave soldier unjustly condemned. The Arabs, won by her heroism, set her at liberty, gave her a fresh horse, and she reached the camp, just as the firing squad raised their muskets. Rushing in front of the prisoner, she waved the pardon in the air and received in her own body the bullets that were fired at Cecil. She lived long enough to tell him that she knew he would be happy with the English girl, and died. Cecil, his honor restored by the tardy confession of his weak brother, returned to England to claim the fortune and title that was his. And, although his married life was happy, he often thought of the girl who gave up her life for him.

There are two one-sheets, three-sheets, and heralds in quantities for the publicizing of this feature, which Thanhouser Company states far surpasses "Jess," a subject somewhat similar in nature.

NEW SPOTLIGHT TRANSFORMER.

The Fort Wayne Electric Works, of Fort Wayne, Ind., offers a new device to control theater spot and flood light arc lamps that should attract attention. "Transpotarc" is the name used to designate the new device, which is a transformer intended to replace the old iron wire and grid resistances with which the usual spot light is supplied. It is claimed for the "Transpotarc" that it will not heat, and that it occupies less space, also that it will affect a great saving in light bills.

This apparatus, as herewith illustrated, is designed to serve as a base for the lamp support. The weight of it is nearly the same as that of the base and resistance commonly used on theater lamps. The size of the Transpotarc, as can be noted from comparison with the lamp proper, is such that it takes but little floor space, and, due to the fact that its weight is concentrated near the floor, it is quite hard to upset.

The case is made from one piece of cast iron, and is strong and rigid. The transformer core and winding are protected against any possible injury from blows such as theater apparatus is likely to receive.

Ventilating spaces in base and in top of the case allow currents of air to cool both core and coils of the transformer, so that the temperature rise of the apparatus under continuous service will not exceed 40 degrees Centigrade.

Furthermore, the electrical construction is such that the apparatus automatically protects itself from a burn-out in case the lamp carbons have been carelessly left together.

Further information regarding this device will be supplied to readers of The Moving Picture World upon request.

"LINCOLN'S GETTYSBURG ADDRESS" A REGULAR RELEASE.

Attention is called to an error in the advertisement of the Vitagraph Company in last week's World by which "Lincoln's Gettysburg Address" is announced to be released through the General Film Co. as a special feature. This should be ignored, for the picture will be released in the regular way. The subject in question is an excellent picture and will be a fine feature for any July 4th program.

VITAGRAPH PICKS A POWER'S.

With some pardonable pride, the Nicholas Power Company transmits this bit of news: "The Vitagraph Company of America, being old experienced machine, as well as film manufacturers, have just installed a Power's No. 6 machine in their studio."

"AFTER MANY DAYS."

A Pathetic Comedy-Drama from the Edison Studio, Written and Portrayed by Madame Dalberg.

Characterized by the producers as one of its worth-while pictures, "After Many Days" is interesting in more than one respect. There is much pathos of the kind that takes a strong hold upon the heart strings, and which is accentuated by the skillful work of the players. This feature commends it to more than passing attention. It is unique in the fact that it was written by Camilla Dalberg and one of the principal parts is portrayed by the author.

In brief, the story is that of an old musician and his little daughter whom he sends away to be trained for opera. Just after the old man has bid his little girl good-bye, he is assaulted by a couple of highwaymen, robbed, beaten into insensibility and cast into a rowboat, in which he drifts to a fisherman's village. Rescued by the fisherman, but unable to identify himself, the old fellow takes up life anew with his new-found friends.

Long afterwards the daughter, who has exhausted every resource to find her father, visits the fishing village of Rest Haven, and is invited to sing at a benefit concert for the Old Men's Home. The detective who has been in the employ of the singer in her effort to find her father discovers among the fisher folk one who resembles the photograph of the old musician. The old man is unable to tell anything about himself, but the detective induces him to go to the concert, where he is brought face to face with his daughter. The old man is unable to recognize her until she sings the song which he taught her in her girlhood days. Then recognition comes and father and daughter are happily united.

Scene from "After Many Days" (Edison).

The character portrayal of the old musician by Mr. William West is one of the best things that player has done in some time. A more faithful representation would be hard to accomplish. The young detective is taken by Marc McDermott, who is always good in his part. Of Madame Dalberg, however, it must be said that she brings a charming personality to the picture. While some producers of photoplays may affect to disregard the talent of accomplished artists, Madame Dalberg is a living proof of the superiority of the talented performer over the novice whose only claim to recognition is a pretty face. There is something in knowing how, and the grace of Madame Dalberg's portrayal will be recognized at once by competent judges of photoplays and it will leave a lasting impression upon those who are fortunate enough to witness her work in this subject.

STERNS INSTALLS MANY BOOTHS.

The Sterns Poster & Supply Company reports that it has installed asbestos booths during the past week in the following houses: Kessler's Theater, 35 Second Avenue (2 machine); Riverview Amusement Co., 145th Street and Broadway (2 machine); Lawrence Pettinati, 212th Street; Crystal Palace Theater, Greenpoint Avenue, Brooklyn (2 machine); Max Pincus, Arverne; A. Adler, Haverstraw, N. Y.; P. Brown, 181st Street and Audubon Avenue; J. Weinberg, 109th Street; Comedy Theater, East 14th Street (2 machine); Ferber's Airdome, Katskill; Benson & Holzer, Auton Ave., Brooklyn; Henry Homan, 371 Willis Avenue; A. & W. Gray & Co., 185th Street and St. Nicholas Avenue.

"UNDER FALSE PRETENSES" (American).

In the American's subject, "Under False Pretenses," the observer will find a new charm given an old theme. Miss Pauline Bush, that accomplished actress who had done much to endear herself to picture fans, plays the role of a foolish girl led astray by the smooth tongue of a city chap. The rural scene in which she leaves home is an especially clever bit of work. Miss Von Trump plays a Spanish girl with a rather deadly-looking stilletto, Scene from "Under False Pretenses" (American).

and the duel between her and Jack Richardson is well calculated to stir the blood. Altogether, the release will prove a splendid addition to programs requiring color, action, superb pantomime and beautiful backgrounds. The subject is scheduled for release Thursday, July 4.

BIG AIRDOME AT PHILADELPHIA.

C. H. Goodwin and E. W. Eaton, manager and treasurer, respectively, of the New York Amusement Company, have leased a lot of land at the southeast corner of Fifty-Ninth and Market Streets, West Philadelphia, Pa., and have opened what is termed the Fifty-Ninth Street Airdome. The place has a seating capacity of 3,000 people and is one of the finest equipped open-air theaters in that state. Two shows are given nightly and Independent service is being used. Two Simplex machines are in operation and the LaSalle Ladies' Orchestra furnishes the music.

SUZANNE GRANDAIS,
Featured in Gaumont's Hand-Colored Subject, "Love's Floral Tribute."

Correspondence

IN THE MISSISSIPPI VALLEY.

THE Industrial Moving Picture Company of Chicago, got good results for the Gaiety Theater, Springfield, Ill., when 1,600 feet of municipality film were shown on May 2 to 26. The photography was remarkably good. Some of the subjects are valuable from an historic viewpoint. Among the places and personages photographed were: Lincoln's tomb and home; Governor Deneen, now a national figure, and Springfield's parks and residence districts. Mr. Watterson W. Rothacker, general manager, and Mr. Lockwood of the Industrial Company, were in Springfield one day during the run of the films.

The United Picture Company of Chicago, took the parade of Illinois veterans at the annual encampment of the Grand Army of the Republic in Peoria, and rounded out the stay of the cameramen by some industrial work.

The Elgin, Ill., City Council defeated a motion to repeal the Sunday theater ordinance which was requested in a petition signed by 2,762 voters .

The Titanic disaster still plays an important part in moving pictures in the Middle West. It is announced that when they were shown at the Photoplay Theater, Witt, Ill., "so great was the crowding for tickets that some were nearly injured. The beginning of a fight in the crowd was stopped only when the manager threatened to close the sale of tickets." Ed. Doskin, survivor of the Titanic, appeared recently at the Illinois Theater, Urbana, Ill.

Mayor Latham of Hillsboro, Ill., is urging a higher license fee for moving picture theaters, circuses and other amusements and concessions.

White & Compton, proprietors of the White Palace Electric Theater, Morrisonville, Ill., have moved their outfit to the Gauer Building, where they have room for 80 more patrons.

The Star Theater, Elgin, Ill., showed the "Odyssey" to good business for three nights and Saturday matinee.

C. Gruner will be the operator at the new Dees airdome, which has been opened in Pinckneyville, Ill.

Sycamore, Ill., is to have a Hippodrome show in a tent, playing dramatic attractions, vaudeville and circus acts and moving pictures. In addition refreshments will be sold.

Quincy moving picture show managers are in a fight over the musician question according to reports from that city. A pact had been made that songs should be abolished. One broke the agreement, it is said, and the others got busy with plans for counter-attractions, such as souvenirs and orchestras.

Tharp & Stivers have opened their airdome at Clinton, Ill. A band concert preceded the first performance.

The Fulrath Opera House, Savanna, Ill., is playing vaudeville and pictures for the summer season.

The Vaudette, Sterling, Ill., is running vaudeville in connection with pictures every night, instead of three nights a week as formerly.

The South Side Airdome has been opened at the corner of Cass and South Adams Street, Peoria, Ill.

While the Department of Illinois, Grand Army of the Republic, was encamped at Peoria, Ill., the Majestic made it a point to run at least one war picture a day and included patriotic songs for the old soldiers.

Five free tickets were given to the teacher of each grade in the Jacksonville, Ill., public schools when Manager Hunt had "Coming of Columbus" at the Grand.

The Vaudette, Springfield, Ill., will install a pipe organ.

Phil Martell, the pioneer moving picture man of Geneva, Ill., has taken over the Star on West State Street in that city, and will conduct it. He has been in retirement for several years.

Rev. Mr. Fiske, of the Universalist church, startled Galesburg, Ill., when the Men's Club of his church began a series of Sunday meetings at the Colonial moving picture show. Biblical and educational films were shown; the boys' orchestra furnished music and the pastor delivered an address. Mr. Fiske stated that he expected to be criticized for his departure, but if the meetings brought about interest on the part of the people who spent their Sunday afternoons on Main Street without any apparent aim or design, he would be well satisfied with the experiment. This feeling of satisfaction would be based, he said, upon the recognized use of the moving picture as an instrument for moral and educational lessons.

Peter J. Smith, formerly singer at the Main Street Theater, Peoria, Ill., is now at the Columbia in that city.

Dempsey's Theater, Peoria, Ill., will run all summer with a smattering of pictures.

The Majestic Theater, of Rockford, Ill., will operate the free moving picture show at Harlem Park. Three reels will be given at each performance.

Lewis Dell, who has been managing the Modglin Picture Show at Creal Springs, Ill., has gone to Richmond, Ind., to take charge of a photoplay house there.

The Interstate Exhibitors' Advertising League Company of Dayton, Ohio, has been incorporated with a capital stock of $10,000, to deal in moving picture advertising. The incorporators are, Valentine Rayburg, R. E. Alexander, Clem Kerr, Charles J. and Bertram B. Geyer.

A. F. Ratelle, singed, and Walter Davisson, pianist, who have been at the Vaudette, Springfield, Ill., for some time, have gone to Portsmouth, Ohio.

Follansbee Brothers of Pittsburgh, Pa., makers of tin plate, have been using the moving pictures extensively in the Mississippi Valley. The reels are shown to builders and contractors and metal workers under the auspices of the Master Sheet Metal Workers' Associations.

The grip of the photoplay upon the small town residents is evidenced in a story from Neoga, Ill., where it is said that William A. Nolting gave two picture shows one night at his Lyric, while half the shows of a competing carnival company were closed and those open played to less than a $5 total

Members of the Cincinnati, Ohio, Chapter, American Institute of Architects, protesting before that body that the state and city building codes were at odds, showed that under the state code, picture theaters must be 25 feet wide, while the city demanded a building thirty feet wide.

The Original Moving Picture Theater, West St. Paul Street, Spring Valley, Ill., was recently struck by lightning, the walls were badly scorched and the furnishings destroyed. About thirty persons were in the building at the time. Following the crash, fire broke out in the operating room, and James Mazzaroni, the operator, had a narrow escape.

Roy Charles, operator at the Tureman Opera House, Virginia, Ill., recently was shocked while operating the machine and fell, the back of his head striking some seats, cutting a bad gash and rendering him unconscious for several minutes.

Harry T. Loper, proprietor of the Lyric, Springfield, Ill., and family, recently made an automobile trip to New York to visit Mr. Loper's son, Russell, prior to the latter's departure for London. Russell Loper, now with the Appleton Publishing Company's London branch, was formerly with his father in the moving picture business.

The Liberty Theater, 329 South Adams Street, Peoria, Ill., has joined with other business houses in the city in a popularity contest, in which two pianos and other prizes will be given away.

Merchants of Arthur, Ill., have united in paying the expense of a moving picture show one night each week on the streets in order to advertise the town.

Mr. and Mrs. C. A. Hatcher have returned from Elmwood, Ill., to LaHarpe, Ill., to resume charge of the Photoplay Theater.

The Electric Theater, G. H. Gaskill, manager, Lewistown, Ill., never misses an opportunity to feature a Selig in which Miss Phyllis Gordon appears. Se once lived in Lewistown.

D. C. McClellan, who guides the destiny of moving pictures in Pekin, Ill., is also a post-office clerk, and made an address at the recent Illinois State convention of postalmen at Decatur.

William Newman of Elgin, Ill., has purchased the interest of Charles Prickett in the Grand Theater in that city.

Organizers for a fraternal society in Illinois, have found their work easier and the prospects more accessible by giving moving pictures at their meetings, preliminary to organization. Many who otherwise would not attend have been interested in fraternal insurance and enrolled in the order.

The newly incorporated Colonial Amusement Company of Harrisburg, Ill., will operate three theaters in that city in addition to the new Knell Theater, at Mt. Carmel, Ill., which has been leased. O. L. Turner will be in charge of the Mt. Carmel house.

The Star Photoplay, the Empire and the Princess of Lincoln, Ill., closed for five days during a Moose carnival.

The Gaiety Theater, East Monroe Street, Springfield, Ill., has installed a 360-pipe organ, which will be ready for use during the summer run of pictures. Paul Aschenbrenner, director of the Gaiety orchestra, and an unusually responsive accompanist of pictures, will be the organist.

M. P. Harvey, singer at the Lyric Theater, Champaign, Ill., better known as "Moving Picture" Harvey, has resigned his position and gone into vaudeville.

J. H. Martin has re-opened his airdome at Red Bud, Ill.

The Orpheum Amusement Company of Rockford, Ill., may build a new theater in that city.

Ed. Fellis, Jr., has joined his father, Ed. Fellis, Sr., of Hillsboro, Ill., in the management of his two picture shows at Hillsboro and Schram City, Ill.

A parade, headed by a band, advertised the exhibition of "The Coming of Columbus" at the Lyric, Freeport, Ill.

L. Eisman is reported to have re-opened the Majestic Theater, on Eighteenth Street, Rock Island, Ill., as a picture show. J. H. Goodman, manager of the Lyric, took the house under his care. A pipe organ is announced as an attraction.

Maurice H. Livingston, an original song writer, is advertised to sing a new composition of his own each week at the Theater De Luxe, Peoria, Ill.

The Family Theater Company of Rock Island, Ill., has been incorporated with capital stock of $5,000, to do a general theatrical and moving picture business. The incorporators are J. A. and Marie Lisy, and A. C. Tudor.

George R. Scharf has opened an airdome at Sidell, Ill.

Sam Rose's new picture show in South Main Street, Rockford, Ill., to be opened June 1 and be known as the Kaiserhof. It will seat 300 persons. Indirect lighting will be a feature.

Because of a protest from the library board Reel & Wilcox were denied permission by the city to construct an airdome of Nineteenth Street and Fourth Avenue, Rock Island, Ill.

The Lincoln-Belmont Theater Company of Chicago, has been incorporated with capital stock of $150,000, to do a general theatrical business. The incorporators are: John P. Price, Martin C. Anderson and Theodore Johnson.

Manager Peterson of the Airdome, Sycamore, Ill., is using licensed pictures. He is booking his vaudeville through the Western Vaudeville Managers' Association.

Dozens of Marshalltown, Iowa, merchants, for four days, gave away free tickets to the Isis, Princess, Lyric, Colonial and Elite Theaters in that city.

The Cuneo Amusement Company of Chicago, has been incorporated with capital stock of $30,000, to operate theaters and places of amusement. The incorporators are: Frank, Lawrence and Lawrence F. Cuneo.

The advent of pictures at the Majestic Theater, Peoria, Ill., was marked by a free opening day for the women and children.

Elmer Hawkins of Mahomet, Ill., has been touring small towns in that vicinity with his picture show, making two-week stands.

The Princess Theater, Peoria, Ill., pays special attention to all children unaccompanied at all afternoon performances.

Manager Clauer, of Dreamland, Galena, Ill., has installed a new operating room, a new machine, and made other improvements. A playing fountain, flanked with flowers and plants, will be a feature of this house.

A free moving picture exhibition at the Auditorium in Harlem Park, Rockford, Ill., probably will be one of the attractions at that pleasure resort this summer.

Both moving picture shows at Nokomis, Ill., laid off for a week when a tent show, owned by a former Nokomis boy, came for a week stand.

The American Amusement Company, Homer Bidwell, manager, has opened a moving picture show in the Palace Opera House, Plymouth, Ill., playing Tuesday, Wednesday and Thursday nights.

The Airdome at Augusta, Ill., has been re-opened.

G. A. Palmer has opened an airdome with a seating capacity of 500, at Fourth Avenue and Main Street, Rochelle, Ill.

The Adascope Company of Chicago, has been incorporated with a capital stock of $2,500, to manufacture and deal in stereopticons and other devices. The incorporators are: Rudolph Mueller, James P. Coughlin and J. F. Hurtubise.

George Davidson has taken over the management of the Majestic, at Bushnell, Ill.

The Daley Airdome has opened at Carlinville, Ill., with three reels of pictures and vaudeville.

The Chicago Motion Advertising Company of Chicago, has been incorporated with a capital stock of $2,500, to deal in projection advertising apparatus. The incorporators are: Fred A. Schwartfager, Fred R. Rosebro and John D. Emrich.

Mrs. Ed. Morrel, the energetic manager of a picture show at Watseka, Ill., recently gave a free performance—four reels and an illustrated song—for advertising purposes.

A twenty-five piece band from a neighboring city, opened the remodeled and enlarged Airdome at Litchfield, Ill.

Ezra D. Beers of Ipava, Ill., will open a moving picture show at Lewistown, Ill., it is reported.

William Folkerts, who has been appointed postmaster at Witt, Ill., has sold the Electric Theater to Thomas O'Dowd.

The Lomax Theater Company of Chicago, has been incorporated with a capital stock of $50,000, to do a general theatrical business. The incorporators are: Robert C. Knapp, Mahlon D. Bash and W. F. Quinn.

The Standard Theater, Pekin, Ill., has ended the vaudeville season and is showing three reels of Independent pictures.

The Ideal Theater, Princeton, Ill., has been conducting a piano contest.

The Glickmann Amusement Company of Chicago, has been incorporated with capital stock of $25,000, to do a general theater business. The incorporators are: Adolph D. Weiner, Henry S. Goldsmith and Theodore C. Mayer.

A. R. Lewis has leased the Auditorium at Morrison, Ill., for three years.

The Colonial Amusement Company of Harrisburg, Ill., has been incorporated with capital stock of $40,000, to conduct moving picture theaters and other amusement enterprises. The incorporators are: O. L. and W. T. Turner, W. P. Oliver, George Davenport and H. A. Murphy. The Messrs. Turner and Oliver have been conducting the Orpheum Picture Palace and the Star, while Messrs. Davenport and Murphy recently let the contract for a new vaudeville and picture theater. The incorporation comes as the result of a merger.

The Jacksonville, Ill., city council has been wrestling with the moving picture theater problems, and found all the proprietors more than willing to comply with any prescribed rules for safety.

Four reels, five Victoria records, and songs by Miss Barbara Halland of Minneapolis, is the offering for a nickel by the Majestic, Peoria, Ill.

FRANK H. MADISON.

LOUISVILLE.

A SHERIFF'S sale of the effects of the Cherokee Theater, owned by Derr Brothers, on Market Street, between Third and Fourth Avenues, was held recently to satisfy judgments which had been asked against the firm. Michael Switow, president of the Falls Cities Amusement Company, purchased the entire equipment of opera chairs and some incidental furnishings of the establishment. Henry Strube, the owner of a well-known house on South Eighteenth Street, purchased two Powers machines of the most approved types. The Federal Electric Sign System took away its unique sign, an arrow in the shape of a question mark.

Recently the Kentucky Feature Film Exchange introduced "Redemption." The Warner feature was given the Orpheum Theater on Jefferson Street, a house owned by the Princess Amusement Company. Its coming was heralded far and wide through the Falls Cities. The scale of prices, on the 5-cent basis, was not changed at the Jefferson Street house, despite the feature attraction.

The Princess Amusement Company experienced a great deal of success recently with "Tracked by Blood-Hounds," a strikingly realistic release from the Atlas manufacturers in St. Louis, Mo. "Tracked by Blood-Hounds" is a thriller of the standard and legitimate type, winding up happily and leaving every audience tockled to death with canine perspicacity.

"Pretty nearly every reel we have in the house could be called a feature, for we are doing mighty fine business, and the only thing there is to attribute it to is the excellence of the programme," said Manager Jacobstein, of the Novelty Theater, owned by the Falls Cities Amusement Company. "Our receipts during the week averaged higher than ever before at this time of the year in the history of any Falls Cities house, and we expect a record June, which is, by the way, a slack month as the word goes with picture men."

Kendall and Campbell Counties Branch Number One, of the Moving Picture League of America, a local organization of photoplay interests in Covington, Ky., was formed recently at a meeting especially held for the purpose in that city. The branch has elected to further the best interests and policies of the M. P. L. of A. throughout Eastern Kentucky in the future, and is enthusiastically backed by unusually large membership. The officers of the body were elected as follows: President, Nathan Rogers; First vice-president, C. Tarvin; Second vice-president, R. I. Griffiths; secretary, Harry Brice; treasurer, W. J. Halpin; state vice-president, Orene Parker, was elected a delegate to the National Convention to be held in Chicago in August.

A $120,000 theater, seating nearly 3,000 persons, is to be erected in the near future in Lexington, Ky., as the result of the enterprise of James B. Haggin, a multi-millionaire of the Central Bluegrass who divides his time between Lexington and New York. Mr. Haggin is at the head of a syndicate which has completed plans for the house. It will be a thing of beauty with all the appurtenances of the metropolitan playhouse. Mr. Haggin and his associates are ager to have the house opened by fall, when the regular season for in-door amusement commences.

A moving picture show is the latest evidence of urban development at Jeffersontown, Ky., a hamlet only a few miles distant from Louisville. The Titanic disaster opened the bill at the new Jeffersontown house, and the proprietors of the show proved themselves wise in inaugurating special hours during which colored patrons in Jeffersontown and vicinity could be accommodated.

John H. Stamper, of the Orpheum Theater in Lexington, Ky., has closed a popularity contest which created a furore among the younger set in the Central Bluegrass city. Every lassie in Lexington had her laddie laboring in her behalf and thousands of votes were polled upon coupons secured with admissions, until it was finally decreed in the storm of ballots that Miss Gladys Foushee was to be not only the most popular girl in Lexington, but also the fortunate possessor of a handsome prize provided by the exhibitor.

"For my part, I cannot see any harm in a moving picture. We are confronted with many genuine evils that are detrimental to the community." This, in part, was the reply of Mayor Polsgrove, of Frankfort, Ky., to an appeal made to him by the members of the Men and Religion Forward Movement in that city to close the moving picture shows of Frankfort on Sunday. Mayor Polsgrove, while assuring the committee which waited upon him that he appreciated every effort for the strict observance of the Sabbath, stated that a tolerant view of instructive amusements which may be enjoyed on Sundays by classes of the masses, which are unable to do so during the week, must be taken. He accordingly refused to prohibit picture exhibitions in the capital city.

Charles Hecklemann has purchased the Lyceum Theater in Lebanon, Ky., from Harry Curtis, who has conducted that establishment with notable success for the past year.

Thatcher & Waddle, owners of the Gem Theater in Somerset, Ky., are commencing the most prosperous summer season of their history, and have provided classy white uniforms for every member of the Gem's staff to attest to this fact during the summer.

The Savoy is the name of a handsome new moving picture theater which was opened for its inaugural show June 1 in Henderson, Ky. The new Henderson house seats several hundred people and is managed by F. W. Behrens, an experienced exhibitor of Evansville, Ind.

The Broadway Amusement Company has announced that it is negotiating for the purchase of theaters in New Albany and Jeffersonville, Ind., the twin Hoosier cities directly across the Ohio river from Louisville. This extension will give the Broadway company valuable properties in the three Falls Cities.

A. J. Wagner, the 7-foot giant who has guarded the door of the Novelty Theater for the past winter and who established himself as one of the features of the well-known Fourth Avenue house, has decided to give up ticket-taking in the Gateway City and has departed for Michigan. Mr. Wagner was upon the vaudeville stage for years and it is possible that he may return to the glare of the calcium. His departure has left the Novelty lobby in sole charge of "Archibald," the diminutive 4-foot Jeff, who played opposite the departed Mutt.

The Gem Theater, in Maysville, Ky., the newest and one of the handsomest houses in that section of the state, opened for business June 1.

The Lyric Theater, in Winchester, Ky., has been moved from its old headquarters on Court Street to handsome new accommodations in the heart of the business district of that city. The owners of the Lyric recently leased and remodeled a bigger and better building for their interests and business is progressing upon the same broad plan as heretofore, with every prospect of constant increases.

Supporters of the Men & Religion Forward Movement in Frankfort, Ky., have opened negotiations with Mayor Polsgrove for the rigid enforcement of "blue" laws on Sunday in the Bluegrass capital. The members of the movement have petitioned Mayor Polsgrove to issue an order to the effect that all moving picture shows in Frankfort shall remain closed on the Sabbath and the chief executive is now considering this proposition. The petition was originally made to include baseball games, but, fortunately for the Frankfort representatives in the Bluegrass League, the ball park is outside of the city limits and is accordingly beyond the pale of municipal authority.

As a matter of plain business policy in dealing with the public squarely, the Colonial Amusement Company of Lexington, Ky., has addressed a letter to the Board of Public Works in that city asking that the board make it a point to thoroughly inspect the theater properties of the Colonial Company with regard to fire prevention and protection and sanitation facilities. This move on the part of the Lexington exhibitors was induced by a recent grand jury report in Lexington, which handed a severe "roast" to the photoplay interests at large for the alleged maintenance of firetraps, etc.

A. K. Maluf, of Pottsville, Pa., has opened a handsome moving picture theater in Glasgow, Ky., and is doing fine business in the southern portion of the Bluegrass State.

The Princess Theater, in Hopkinsville, Ky., has been improved through the addition of ample electric lighting and exterior programme announcements and is now in the midst of the most prosperous season in its history.

G. D. CRAIN, JR.

NEW ENGLAND.

MR. GEORGE A. RAMSDELL, who is associated with his brother in the ownership and management of the Orpheum Theater, Opera House Square, Malden, Mass., was in a fatal automobile accident at Manchester-by-the-Sea. Miss Helen Bean, one of the party, was killed, and Miss Bessie Emerson was badly bruised.

Manager Appleby of the Star Theater, Boston, Mass., has bought a Hupmobile, and is often joyriding about the city and nearby towns. Mr. Appleby is his own chauffeur.

The Majestic Theater, Burlington, Vt., which opened recently, is offering straight picture programs. For the summer months no vaudeville is to be given, although vaudeville may be added this fall. The Majestic is about the finest house in Burlington, and should make a good bid for trade. It seats 750.

Mr. J. H. Donovan will build a first-class photoplay theater at Bridgeport, Conn. The site selected is the corner of Wood Avenue and Olive Street.

Mr. Ormand Jackson has been selected as the manager of Lexington Park, which opened for the summer season on May 30. Mr. Jackson is well known as he formerly was with Paragon Park.

The Colonial Theater, Lawrence, Mass., which is controlled by B. F. Keith, is offering a straight picture show.

Mr. W. A. Gill of New Haven, Conn., will build a moving picture house on River Street, New Haven. The theater will be a one-story brick building, and is promised to be modern and first-class.

Hartford, Conn., will have a new photoplay theater on West Main Street, owned by Mr. Louis Edelson, who expects to spend about $80,000 in his new project.

Messrs. Reed, Foster and Hatch report that their new theater, the Newton Opera House, Newton, Mass., is doing very well, considering the fact that the house opened very late in the season. The managers feel confident of success, as they are giving good shows of vaudeville and pictures, and have plenty of seats—about 1,000.

Norumbega Park, a popular summer park near Boston, opened for the 16th season. The open air theater is doing well with vaudeville and pictures. The rustic open air theater seats 3,000, and is usually jammed. Carl Aiberte is again in complete charge of the park.

Mr. Francis H. Bigelow, manager of White City Park, Worcester, Mass., has opened the season and reports himself as being satisfied with the outlook.

Mr. S. Z. Poli is presenting a supplementary attraction at his New Haven, Conn., theater, in the form of a stock company. During the regular season, the theater plays vaudeville and pictures.

S. Z. Poli and William Fox are about to enter active competition. The Bijou Theater, the new Poli house, is ready to open under the management of Mr. Edward Shields. The Bijou can easily seat 2,000 people and the admission prices are 5, 10, 20. The house is new and is one of the finest in Connecticut. The William Fox theater is named the Grand Opera House, managed by Mr. Jackson, and has been giving vaudeville and pictures for the last few months to a very pleasing volume of trade. Business competition will be very keen between these two houses.

Meriden, Conn., has two airdomes, both of which are doing very nicely, according to reliable reports. Messrs. Pindar & Rudolff are giving good shows of photoplays and songs at the Meriden Airdome, while Mr. R. T. Halliwell is doing a "S. R. P." business with his Star Airdome. Both theaters have been renovated and improved since last year.

Mr. George Geott has opened Lincoln Park, Worcester, Mass., for the summer season, and also the Lincoln Park Theater. Business opened up in good shape.

The Imperial Theater, Providence, R. I., has been purchased by the P. F. Shea Amusement Company of Springfield, Mass. The house will be entirely renovated and improved, and will be renamed the Colonial.

Mr. William Irvine is nearly ready to open his new airdome at Manchester, N. H., which will be called the "White Way Airdome."

Mr. I. J. Pinkham has sold his motion picture theater at Augusta, Me., to Messrs. Moore & Stanson, who will continue to run the house, after making a few improvements.

New Haven, Conn., has a very progressive Superintendent of Public Schools in Mr. Beede, who hopes to fit out the New Haven schools with moving picture machines. Stereopticon slides are being used at present, but the superintendent feels that they are not nearly so efficient as the pictures would be. The Board of Education of New Haven has been approached by Mr. Beede, with a view to obtaining an appropriation for the proper carrying on of this idea, and, although no definite promise has been made, it would not be at all surprising to see the plan materialize.

The Continental Film Company, at 32 Boylston Street, Boston, are the sole New England agents for the pictures now released through the Film Supply Company of America. Motion picture houses throughout the New England States received a letter from the new exchange, which stated that they were ready to give service on and after May 27. Mr. G. T. Eaton of the Continental Film Company, expects to close with some houses in the near future.

Inspector Atkinson of the State Police, suspended the license of "Kid" Harris, operator at the Olympia Theater, Boston, for two weeks. The cause was that Harris was found by Inspector Atkinson with the lamp house door open.

It is rumored that Marcus Loew is tired of his bargain at the South End Theater, Boston, and is looking for a buyer. The house is closed now.

Manager Furber of the Nickel Theater, Haverhill, Mass., will close his house over the summer and take life easy for a time.

The Dreamland Theater, Lynn, Mass., closed for the summer, after a most prosperous season, and will reopen late in August, with the usual picture programs.

Mr. Thomas McMann of Caribou, Me., will open a photoplay theater at Fort Kent, Me., where he expects to do well.

Mr. Charles Williams of Providence, R. I., has bought the Comique Theater, Hartford, Conn., from Walter Green of Boston. Mr. Green still owns the Casino Theater of Providence.

Mr. L. McDuffee of Rochester, N. H., intends to build a two-story structure in Central Square, Rochester, and will have an up-to-date photoplay theater on the ground floor. Rochester is ripe for a first-class moving picture theater, and Mr. McDuffee should find business good.

Work is certainly being rushed at the new theater being built for S. Z. Poli at Bridgeport, Conn. The house is slated for opening on Labor Day. Vaudeville and pictures is to be the policy.

The Kinemacolor pictures of the Durbar found business excellent at the Opera House, Providence, R. I.

It is rumored that the Goldstein Brothers Amusement Company, owning theaters in Springfield and Worcester, Mass., will soon have another house in the former city, located in Wight Place. This theater will seat approximately 3,000, and will cost about $150,000.

Mr. A. A. Kellman, proprietor of the Victoria Theater, Lawrence, Mass., has purchased both of Warner's features, "The Redemption," and "The Glass Coffin," in three reels. Mr. Kellman is a very active and astute manager, and will be heard from in other ventures before long.

Mr. Jacob Lurie, general manager of the Beacon Theater, expects to put another $8,000 into his beautiful Beacon Theater, Boston. An "ice-cooling" plant is to be installed, by which the theater will be kept at a temperature of 70 degrees without the use of fans. First-run Licensed service and vaudeville have shown good results for Mr. Lurie.

That popular and efficient manager of the Hub Theater, Boston, held his fifth annual testimonial this week. Mr. Mack is thoroughly conversant with all the curves of his business, and shows good results with the Hub, even though the competition is mighty keen in his locality.

Senator Charles H. Bean, owner and manager of the Pastime Theater, Franklin, N. H., David Aams, manager of White's Opear House, Concord, N. H., Frank Vine of the W. E. Greene Film Exchange, Boston, and a few others, have returned from Cold Springs Camp, Averill Lake, Averill, Vt., with just about the finest lot of fish seen in many a day. These picture men took a week's vacation, and at the above mentioned place caught 29 landlocked salmon, weighing from 3 to 10 pounds, 7 lake trout, and 50 pounds of brook trout. Frank Vine, known to every New England exhibitor, as one of the W. E. Greene Film Exchange executives, is surely some fisherman, having caught a 10-pound landlocked salmon, the largest ever taken from Lake Averill.

In Rockland, Me., there are two theaters that boast of real, live ball teams. The Rockland Theater, managed by Mr. A. V. Rosenberg, and the Empire Theater, of which Mr. F. M. Engley is in charge. On May 23, teams made up from these theaters met on the diamond, and, after a 10-inning contest, the Rockland Theater managed to win out. Score: 21-20.

Word has been received that the new Cumberland Theater being erected in Brunswick, Me., was not ready for its initial opening date, June 1, as was hoped. Work was somewhat delayed, but things are being pushed ahead with rapidity, and the Cumberland should be completed by early July. This house will be by far the best in the city.

Pine Island Park, near Manchester, N. H., reported a good opening on Decoration Day.

The new Standard Theater, Bellows Falls, Vermont, reports that it will be ready for its initial opening on Labor Day. The house will seat about 900, and is thoroughly modern in every way. Located on Canal and Rockingham Streets, the Standard should do very well.

Mr. W. A. Wesley of the Gardner Theater, Gardner, Mass., has leased Holmes Park, just outside of Gardner. Moving pictures will be given in the new theater which was built this season. It is understood that Holmes Park was operated last year by the local railway company.

The moving pictures of the automobile races held at Indianapolis on Decoration Day, are to be shown in New England theaters, and Mr. Joe Mayer has charge of the reels for that territory.

Mr. J. F. Appleton of Beverly, Mass., will build a photoplay theater in that city. The theater will be on Wallis Street.

It is reported that J. L. Rome and others are considering the advisability of building a moving picture theater at Pittsfield, Mass. If the deal goes through, it means a $50.000 building, with the theater on the street floor and offices above. Parker Street is the present choice.

The Park Theater, Dexter, Me., is about ready and the finishing work is now under way.

HENRY.

PHILADELPHIA.

C. I. MEYERS and C. E. Horn, managers of the Tacony Palace, are very much pleased with the patronage they have received since taking over the above house. They are trying to give the public the very best in the motion picture and vaudeville line, and are showing the finest of features in the motion picture world.

D. A. Brown, of Dola, W. Va., has purchased from the Calehuff Supply Company, for his theater, a Model B complete Edison machine.

A. C. Candoe, of the Lyric Amusement Company, will open in the early part of the coming month a theater in Lock Haven, Pa. He has placed an order with the Calehuff Supply Company for two Powers No. 6 with Edison transformers complete.

A. N. Liedy, of the Electric Theater at Souderstown, Pa., was a visitor in Philadelphia recently. The Electric Theater, which Mr. Liedy manages, is a house of no mean merit.

Charles K. Campbell, of the Mirror Theater, has fully recovered from his recent illness, and is back to his former position.

The population of West Philadelphia will have a chance to enjoy motion pictures in the open air for the coming summer. The "Hip" open air theater at 59th and Market Streets, under the management of C. H. Goodwin, opened about the 1st of June. The theater has a capacity of 5,000.

Manager Spears, of the Girard Palace, is about to have a theater built on Lancaster avenue, which will be devoted to pictures and vaudeville.

The Amber Theater, located at Frankford Avenue and Sargent Street, is going under alterations to the extent of $2,000 for the summer season.

The Garrick Theater, of Philadelphia, is drawing the public to its doors by showing the famous Carnegie Polar Exhibit, which is one of the biggest drawing cards that has been in this city for some time. Mr. Sullivan, who managers the exhibit, was formerly of the Luna Park at Third Street and Lehigh Avenue.

Glen Jackson, of Mahanoy City, Pa., was a Philadelphia visitor recently, and made many bookings for his Palace Theater, in the feature film line.

Charles Sturk, Morris Lifter and Louis Lifter, of the Pitt Amusement Company, have filed an application for incorporation of the company. The object of the new company is to build and conduct places of amusement in parks and other places.

Reading, Pa., is to have a new picture house. Ground has already been broken, and the theater is expected to be completed in a short while. The theater will have a seating capacity of about 500, and all modern fixtures will be installed.

The New Academy of Scranton, Pa., has closed down vaudeville for the summer and will show only the very best of motion pictures. The New Academy will undergo some renovations, and electric fans and other cooling devices will be installed to make the interior cool. The house is under the direction of Manager H. R. Smith.

George W. Bennethum, of Reading, was a city visitor recently, and was kept very busy booking feature films for his houses. He has theaters in Pottstown, Reading, Lebanon, Coatsville, Allentown and Baltimore, Md.

The Lyric Theater, of Atlantic City, N. J., has been closed by orders of the building inspector, as he found that the condition of the building was unsafe. Mr. L. Beard, manager of the theater, said that the theater will be closed for good.

Harry Gallow, of Allentown, Pa., who recently opened an open-air theater in that city, says that he is meeting with more success than he anticipated.

D. Label has taken over the Lyric Theater in Mannayunk, Pa., and expects to make it one of the finest little theaters in that town.

Loew's National has closed for the summer season, after enjoying a very large patronage, since the theater has been changed to a vaudeville and picture house. A few new alterations will be made and everything put in first-class shape for the winter season, when again there will be the high-class pictures and vaudeville acts shown.

The Orpheum Theater, of Harrisburg, which has installed a daylight motion picture screen, is meeting with the very best of success.

Lubin's Palace, which closed down vaudeville some time ago, is delighting hundreds of people with the excellent pictures they are showing.

The management of Willow Grove Park, which opened on May 25th, has been advertising their moving picture theater in all the city trolley cars. This is the first time that any such way of advertising for motion picture houses has been displayed, and the result is expected to be good.

The Bijou Amusement Company has been incorporated in the State of Delaware, with a capital of $25,000. The head of the new concern is David Sablosky.

A war between moving-picture proprietors and saloonkeepers was forecasted at the convention of the Exhibitors' League, which was held at No. 142 North Eight Street. It was declared that the saloonkeepers, feeling that their business is being injured by the moving picture houses, are preparing to have legislation enacted with the view of curbing the activities of the "movies." If such a move is made, the picture men are prepared to fight it. In their campaign against the picture houses the saloonkeepers assert that the picture houses have a demoralizing effect on the public. The convention elected three delegates to the national convention, to be held in Chicago the first week of August. They are Dr. Walter Stuenpfig, president of the association; Edward A. Jeffries, vice president, and J. Louis Breitinger, solicitor.

William J. Smith, the manager of the Union Amusement Company, of No. 2711 Germantown avenue, advertised the film "Sunset Gun" for several days, and ran it on release day. Many "veterans" saw the picture and proclaimed it the best they had ever seen of war pictures.

John Pelzer, of the Thos. A. Edison Co., Inc., was a city visitor for a few hours recently. Mr. Pelzer has been making a flying trip throughout the United States, and reported conditions throughout the country at about normal.

The Empire Theater, formerly the Park, a burlesque house, has turned over to a vaudeville and motion picture theater.

M. Spiers, of the Royal Palace, 27th and Girard Avenue, featured the "Coming of Columbus" to the capacity of his house.

W. M. Kieffer, of Fleetwood, Pa., has bought a model B. Edison complete with Fort Wayne compensare, from the Calehuff Supply Company.

The Grand Opera House at Broad and Montgomery Avenue, has been receiving a very large amount of patronage from the people in that section of the city. They are running three shows a day, with admission prices of five and ten cents, giving five acts of vaudeville and thirty reels of new pictures each week.

The Plaza Theater at Broad and Porter Streets is having extensive alterations made.

Settlement was made a few days ago by Hopkins & Gardiner for a lot 110 feet by 157 feet on the west side of Broad Street, 20 feet north of Snyder Avenue, recently purchased by them from the Allgier estate. The lot will be used as a site for a theater, the plans of which are being made by A. E. Westover. The theater and lot will represent an investment of $175,000. During the summer the Plaza Theater on Broad Street, above Porter, will be completely remodeled and enlarged at a cost of $50,000. The Plaza is owned by the Plaza Theater Company.

The members of the company, to be known as the Hyde Park Amusement Company, held a meeting at the Hyde Park Hotel and made further arrangements for the development of the Goodman Building into a theater. The meeting was well attended. Architect E. H. Davis explained the plans for the building, and they met with unanimous approval by the members. It was also decided to sell $75,000 bonds and $25,000 stock. The theater will have a capacity of 650, and there will be three performances daily. Moving pictures and vaudeville will make up the program. John H. Philips presided at the meeting. A petition was read at the meeting by Mr. Philips, explaining the plans of the company. Among those who are interested in the project are: Michael O'Connor, P. H. Durkin, Dr. P. F. Struppler, W. R. Hughes, John H. Philips and C. W. Farmer.

Photoplays are drawing large crowds of shoppers to the Family Theater on Market Street.

The Woodland Park Theater, of Camden, N. J., with Harry Dudley, manager, is running pictures and a minstrel troupe.

With the change of policy to moving pictures only the Harrigan Theater, of Darby, Pa., under the management of Mr. Herkinrichter, formerly of Lubin's Auditorium on Eighth Street, is meeting with the best of success.

Appreciative audiences are witnessing the wonders of the Kinemacolor as exemplified in the Delhi Durbar films at the Forrest Theater. Several new scenes, including the children's garden party, were shown.

F. C. Clark, of the Enterprise Optical Manufacturing Company, Chicago, has been demonstrating the qualities of his company's machine at the establishment of the Calehuff Supply Company.

Paul J. Rainey's African hunt pictures are still attracting the people to the Walnut.

Seven hundred children, who crowded Mercantile Hall, recently, at a mass-meeting of the "Ten-days-of-play" campaign of the Schoolgrounds Association, broke up the meeting by keeping up such a medley of noise that the speakers were unable to head themselves talk. The little folks came to see the "movies," which were shown in connection with the mass-meeting, and they kept up a clamor for the pictures until their desire was satisfied.

The Pennsylvania Amusement Company of Monessen, Pa., has been incorporated under the laws of Delaware, with a capital of $100,000. Frank Brumer is the head of the new company.

Moving pictures, when introduced at the Palace Theater, on Market Street recently, were simply an experiment. The outcome was that all records were broken from an attendance standpoint. The theater was visited by a number of managers of picture theaters from other cities.

Every moving picture theater in Blair County has received a letter from District Attorney Marion D. Patterson, asking him to refrain from showing films depicting murders, robberies or crime of any sort because of the effect they have on the minds of boys and girls. He suggested comedy, travel and educational pictures. His request will be generally heeded by the exhibitors.

The Calehuff Supply Company has sold Powers No. 6 machines, complete, to the following: E. P. Post, of St. Clair, Pa.; W. M. Sult, of Berwick, Pa., and to H. B. Christman, manager of the new theater which opened at 301 Kaigns Avenue, Camden, N. J. This house is owned by the estate of Elizabeth Mitchell.

CLEMENT H. CONGDON.

CLINTON, IOWA.

DR. LANGAN, a local capitalist, is erecting an up-to-date office building at the corner of Second Street and Fourth Avenue. The lower floor will be used for a moving picture theater. The lessee has not announced himself to date.

Mr. Henle, formerly of Muscatine, Iowa, will soon begin the building of an attractive and cozy moving picture theater on Sixth Avenue.

The Airdome, an outdoor theater formerly devoted to stock shows, will be opened soon with moving pictures.

Mr. Johansen, formerly of The Casino, has been operating the Family Theater, a vaudeville house, as a moving picture show, pending the settlement of an ouster proceeding against Mr. Galgano by the owners. It is alleged that a sub-lease was taken in good faith by Mr. Galgano against the terms agreed upon by the owner and the original lessee, Mr. Sodini. The latter disappeared, but has later returned and settled everything in a satisfactory manner, Mr. Galgano being reimbursed and costs paid by Mr. Sodini.

Clinton, Iowa, has the following moving picture shows: Colonial, Airdome, Lyric, Casino, Bright Spot and Superba (Lyons). Mr. Henle's will be named "Amuse-U," and Dr. Langan's has not been announced.

C. F. INGRAHAM.

INDIANAPOLIS.

The motion picture question is creating much interest in the Indianapolis public schools. At a meeting of the Home and School Association held in school No. 10 recently, an interesting paper was read by F. Tarkington Baker, dramatic editor of the Indianapolis News, in which he dealt with the motion picture as a form of amusement that has come to stay. He admitted too frequent attendance at moving picture theaters is harmful to children, but said he was in favor of motion pictures. Robert Lieber, local manager for the General Film Co., said that film makers are anxious to provide pictures that will satisfy the public, and that if there is to be a larger increase in travel pictures and others of educational interest, it must come through public demand.

Acting Judge James M. Leathers, in the superior court, has held unconstitutional an ordinance recently passed by the city council forbidding the attendance at moving picture, burlesque or vaudeville theaters of children under fourteen years of age unless accompanied by a parent or guardian, or by a person over twenty-one years old having the written consent of a parent or guardian.

Members of the West Washington Street Merchants' Association, as an advertisement, have arranged to give motion picture exhibitions in West Washington Street every Saturday night during the summer season.

A number of colored men have organized and incorporated the Union Amusement Company, which has taken over the Union Theater at 320 Indiana Avenue. Moving pictures and vaudeville will be presented for colored audiences exclusively. The theater was recently erected at a cost of $15,000. William H. Jackson has been appointed general manager.

Hal Edel has leased the Colonial Theater and will present motion pictures exclusively. Mr. Edel is giving 1,500 tickets daily to Harry D. Tutewiler, city playground commissioner, who is distributing the tickets through the public schools, to school children.

Airdomes are being erected by the following persons at the locations mentioned: H. F. Rice, 2705 E. Washington Street; H. A. Lavender, Washington Street and Garfield Avenue; R. S. Parkhurst, 1244 South Meridian Street; L. E. Mayhew, Howard Street and Blaine Avenue; James Walter, Chicago and Twenty-fifth Streets; Leo Herner, 1709 South Meridian Street.

Pathe Freres made films of the municipal parade held in this city on the afternoon of May 24. About eleven hundred city officials and employees and a large number of automobiles and other vehicles were in line. C. L. CUMMINS.

SACRAMENTO, CAL.

THE Sullivan & Considine people are to erect a new house in Sacramento at Tenth and L Streets, according to Mr. Harrison, who has been in Sacramento seeking a location to stage the Sullivan & Considine vaudeville attractions. The lease on the Empress Theater expires in August and from that time to the completion of the new house they will be without a permanent show house. Manager Kaiser stated that arangements had been made to continue the performances at another location until the completion of the new house.

Sydney Ayres, formerly of the Selig Polyscope Company, is now playing a season at Ye Liberty Playhouse. Mr. Ayres was leading man before going to Selig.

The Pantages Theater, which is being built on Twelfth Street, is nearing completion and within a few months will be ready for the opening.

Idora Park recently opened after being closed for the winter months. One of the main features was 'Dante's Inferno."

The Camera is now showing Independent pictures, so is the Broadway, in connection with vaudeville.

The Wigwam Theater, in Marysville, runs a notice in the Marysville Appeal giving a synopsis of the pictures on their program for the evening.

The Empress Theater, in Sacramento, is showing the Kinemacolor pictures as a feature on their bill. WM. L. IRWIN.

HOUSTON, TEX.

THE Isis Theater is a new photoplay house here and is in every way a first class picture theater, which cost within the neighborhood of $5,000.

Until recently the majority of the leading picture theaters in Houston charged an admission of five cents and Saturday and Sunday ten cents. Now they have all reduced price of admission to five cents.

The Pastime Theater has recently changed ownership from Mr. Dan Meyer to Mrs. Bosbyshell, who will conduct it in the same manner as it has been run.

The Gem, The Vaudette and The Star Theaters, owned and operated by Messrs. Wicks & Co., for March had an attendance of one hundred and eighteen thousand.

The Mecca Theater, owned by Jones & Rouse, seating capacity of one hundred and sixty, was opened recently showing first run pictures, and is playing to good houses.

Traveling shows are beginning to get ready for the season and from the inquiries we are having, a good many will be showing through Texas this season. WYNDHAM ROBERTSON.

KALAMAZOO, MICH.

PHOTOPLAYS are popular in Kalamazoo and the business has been given a big impetus this season. A large theater is building, one opened Tuesday, May 21, while two new houses have recently begun business. When operations are completed, this city will have six moving picture theaters.

The Colonial, H. C. Fuller, proprietor, and William Johnson, manager, reopened for business Tuesday, May 21. It has been considerably enlarged and beautifully redecorated, both inside and out. The front is of white marble, and a large hanging awning of steel and art glass afford protection from rain and sun. It is decidedly the most artistic motion picture playhouse in this section of Michigan.

Another beautiful theater, which commenced business May 11, is the Lyric. It is replete with all modern improvements, and the front and interior are ornate and attractive. It is owned by Goodie Rosenbaum, and is under the management of L. C. Barnes, who also has control of the Orpheum and the Gem. Independent films are used in the Lyric, while the other two houses show licensed films.

F. P. D'Archy recently opened a new photoplay house and is doing a large business. He uses Independent films exclusively.

H. P. HALL.

OREGON.

AT the weekly luncheon of the Portland Ad Club, held recently, Melvin G. Winstock, manager of the Peoples Amusement Company, acted as chairman for the day, introducing R. R. Earle, the Pathe Weekly man, who told of how moving pictures were made. Mr. Earle was greeted with great applause, and his remarks were dwelt mainly on the topic of the world's greatest weekly film. Mr. H. C. Stevens, manager of the Western Film Exchange, showed the latest Pathe Weekly for the benefit of the Ad Club members.

The famous Trio, of the Peoples Theater, who have been playing here since last November, have been loaned to the Fisher circuit, in Seattle, for five weeks, after which they will return to the People's again.

The Sunnyside Theater, at Portland, is being rapidly pushed to completion, and it is planned to open it some time in June.

Comment upon the death of Mr. Chalmers, editor of the Moving Picture World, is very rife here, as several of the picture house owners in this city knew Mr. Chalmers personally. The warm esteem felt for Mr. Chalmers here will long exist.

Another cameraman of the Gaumont Weekly has arrived in Portland to take pictures of local interest, and is to remain until after the Annual Rose Festival and Elks' Convention.

The Portland Railway Light and Power Company of Portland, Oregon, has commissioned Mr. Earle, of the Pathe Weekly, to take a film showing how to get on and off street cars. This film will be used to educate school children in particular, and will be exhibited in all the local schools throughout the State and city.

The People's Amusement Company, Fourth and Washington Streets, Portland, Oregon, will give a complimentary exhibition of the "Coming of Columbus" to the local "Ad" and Press clubs, school teachers, school board and the Board of Censorship. Tickets will be placed in all their theaters so that school children will be able to see the picture at any time.

M. G. Boyd, former city editor of the Portland Daily News, has been made house manager of the Star to succeed Albert Krause, who has resigned to give his full attention to the business of the Pacific Coast Stereopticon Slide Company.

Pictures for the Pathe Weekly and Gaumont Weekly have been taken of the First Infantry leaving Vancouver, B. C., Canada, and of their march to Portland, to board the United States transport, Sherman, for four years' service in Honolulu. Over 1,000 soldiers and officers left.

The Graves Music Company of Portland, have been made jobbers of the Edison Home Kinetoscope. J. J. Phillips, the Edison factory representative, while in Portland, gave demonstrations of the machine and made preparations for the sale of it in the state.

Ralph R. Earle of the Pathe Weekly, has taken a number of pictures of the Deschutes River in Central Oregon on a flat car. He has also taken scenes of Cascade range and of Crater Lake, the greatest natural wonder in America.

On Saturday, May 11th, The Pathe Weekly and Gaumont Weekly, took pictures of the laying of the corner stone for the $10,000,000 Reed College. Thousands of people attended this ceremony, and is the first of the series of pictures that will be taken as the buildings and campus are improved.

The new theater in Sunnyside, a suburb of Portland, is soon to be opened. The People's Amusement Company of Portland, has offered a prize for a suitable name that will meet with their approval.

August 1st will see the opening of another high-class exclusive moving picture house in Portland, Oregon. This theater will be opened and run by the Globe Theater Company, with J. L. Levy as president and I. Lesser Cohen as secretary and manager. This theater will be located at 12th and Washington Streets; will have two entrances and seat 900. It will be up-to-date and fireproof throughout. The interior decorations will be of such nature that will harmonize with a color that will be pleasing in both light and art.

I. Leeser Cohen, who has the state rights for Homer's "Odyssey," is having this masterpiece booked throughout the state at Chautauqua conventions and schools.

Astoria seems to have great difficulty in adjusting the city ordinance for providing for the licensing of photoplay houses. This city has recently enacted a new ordinance providing for the raising of such license. To this effect, a committee meeting will be held where a committee of two councilmen, the fire chief and Mr. Melvin G. Winstock, general manager of the People's Amusement Company, will be present when the hearing takes place. Some of the things that the ordinance calls for is that standing room should be abolished, change several fire exit rules, etc.

D. R. Burkhardt has been promoted from Albany to take charge of the La Grande Theater on the People's Amusement Company's curcuit.

Tim Nelson has been made manager of the theater at Albany to succeed D. R. Burkhardt.

Beginning Sunday, May 19, the Bijou Theater inaugurated a new policy where the program will contain films only that are of an instructive and educational nature with an occasional comedy. The plan is a new and novel one and the experiment will be watched with much curiosity.

"The Convicts Parole," written by Mr. Melvin G. Winstock, of Portland, has caused great comment, and Mr. Winstock has been the recipient of congratulations for the way he has portrayed the prison policy that Governor West founded.

Frank M. Brown of the Rex Amusement Company, proposes to establish a film renting agency in this city, with headquarters in the Pantages Theater Building. EDWARD N. WEINBAUM.

GRAND RAPIDS.

VAUDEVILLE in the motion picture houses of Grand Rapids, Mich., will soon be a thing of the past. This does not apply to the vaudeville theaters, the Temple and Orpheum, but to the vaudettes. The new ordinance prohibits vaudeville in theaters with less than 500 seating capacity. It seems unfair that the "big fellow" with the large seating capacity and greater money making possibilities should only be taxed $100 a year—while the "little fellow" of the vaudette has to plank down $150 license. The picture houses are planning to strengthen the musical and song features to compensate for the lack of vaudeville.

The "Coming of Columbus' was shown here at the Idle Hour, the, largest vaudette in town. It drew very well indeed, but should have been shown longer. It certainly merits several days' exhibit.

Last Call
TO State Right Buyers

For

Nat C. Goodwin as "Fagin" in Oliver Twist. 5 Reels.

The following States are all under negotiation for exclusive state rights, but we are holding off for final disposal until answers to this advertisement are received.

Alaska	Greater N. Y. C.
Arizona	North Carolina
Arkansas	North Dakota
Florida	Oklahoma
Idaho	South Carolina
Iowa	South Dakota
Kansas	Tennessee
Kentucky	Texas
Minnesota	Utah
Mississippi	West Virginia
Montana	Wisconsin
Nebraska	Wyoming
New Mexico

COMING RELEASES

"Victims of Villainy" (Aquilla), 2830 feet
"The Gold Drop" (Aquilla), - 1913 feet

Price 15c. per foot

Place your order now, while exclusive territory (given free with cost of film) is available.

General Film Publicity & Sales Co.
145 West 45th St., New York City.

IMPORTANT NOTICE!

The New York Motion Picture Co.

wishes to announce to the trade that it will sell its product direct and

HAS WITHDRAWN

Bison, "101"-Bison, Ambrosio and Itala Films from the

UNIVERSAL FILM MFG. CO.

Wire orders DIRECT at once to the New York Motion Picture Co. for future releases of Bison, "101"-Bison, Ambrosio and Itala films.

NEW YORK MOTION PICTURE CO.

Coming !! Coming !!

"Custer's Last Fight"

The Greatest Picture Ever Made. Watch For It.
"101"-BISON. IN THREE REELS.

"The Restoration"

Single Reel Bison. Released Saturday, July 6th.

"Legend of the Chrysanthemum" and "THE AIR MAN"

A Split Reel AMBROSIO, Released Friday, July 5th.

"A Woman's Duplicity"

In Two Reels. Released Saturday, July 6. Big Itala Feature. Sensational Scenes. Heavy Dramatic Situations. Beautiful Settings. A Large Cast.

New York Motion Picture Co.

251 West 19th Street New York City

Calendar of Independent Releases.

Releasing Through Universal Company.

CURRENT RELEASES.

SUNDAY, JULY 30th, 1912.

REX—Looking Backward (Drama).....
ECLAIR—Willy Wants a Free Lunch (Comedy)....
ECLAIR—Picturesque Portugal (Scenic).....
ECLAIR—Women's Work (Educational).....

MONDAY, JULY 1st, 1912.

IMP—Love, War and a Bonnet (Drama).....1000
NESTOR—When Hearts Are Trumps (Drama).....
CHAMPION—Pat's Breeches (Comedy).....
CHAMPION—Little Old New York (Hist.).....

TUESDAY, JULY 2nd, 1912.

ECLAIR—The Holy City (2 Reels—Biblical) .....
BISON—The Sheriff of Stony Butte (Drama) .....
GEM—The Medal of Honor (Drama).....

WEDNESDAY, JULY 3rd, 1912.

NESTOR—Hard Luck Bill (Comedy).....
POWERS—The Coming Generation (Comedy).....

THURSDAY, JULY 4th, 1912.

ECLAIR—Hearts and Memories (Drama) .....
IMP—Betty, the Coxswain (Drama).....1000
REX—A Prophet Without Honor (Drama).....

FRIDAY, JULY 5th, 1912.

AMBROSIO—The Legend of the Chrysanthemum (Dr.)
AMBROSIO—The Airman (Comedy) .....
NESTOR—Young Wild West On the Border (Drama).
POWERS—Mates and Mis-Mates (Drama) .....

SATURDAY, JULY 6th, 1912.

BISON—The Restoration (Drama) .....
IMP—Home Again (Comedy)..... 600
IMP—Printing and Engraving U. S. Government Stamps (Educational) 400
ITALA—A Woman's Duplicity (2 Reels—Drama).....

ADVANCE RELEASES.

SUNDAY, JULY 7th, 1912.

REX—The Unknown Bride (Drama) .....
ECLAIR—For Love (Drama) .....
ECLAIR—Arabian Theaters (Educational) .....

MONDAY, JULY 8th, 1912.

IMP—The Parson and the Medicine Man (Drama) 1000
NESTOR—(Title Not Reported) .....
CHAMPION—The Gypsy Bride (Drama) .....

TUESDAY, JULY 9th, 1912.

ECLAIR—(Title Not Reported) .....
BISON—(Title Not Reported) .....
GEM—Under Two Flags (2 Reels—Drama) .....

WEDNESDAY, JULY 10th, 1912.

NESTOR—(Title Not Reported) .....
POWERS—Tangled (Comedy) .....
POWERS—A Leap Year Delusion (Comedy) .....

THURSDAY, JULY 11th, 1912.

ECLAIR—(Title Not Reported) .....
IMP—Caught in the Flash (Com.-Dr.) 1000
REX—(Title Not Reported) .....

FRIDAY, JULY 12th, 1912.

AMBROSIO—(Title Not Reported) .....
NESTOR—(Title Not Reported) .....
POWERS—(Title Not Reported) .....
VICTOR—(No Release This Date) .....

SATURDAY, JULY 13th, 1912.

BISON—(Title Not Reported) .....
IMP—The Wrong Weight (Comedy) 600
IMP—In and Around Chicago, Ill. (Topical) 400
ITALA—(Title Not Reported) .....

Releasing Through Film Suppiy Company

CURRENT RELEASES.

SUNDAY, JUNE 30th, 1912.

MAJESTIC—Getting Rich Quick (Comedy) .....
THANHOUSER—Doggie's Debut (Drama) .....

MONDAY, JULY 1st, 1912.

AMERICAN—The Girl Back Home (Drama) .....
COMET—Jenks and His Motor Boat (Comedy) 500
COMET—New York Catholic Protectory (Edu.) 500

TUESDAY, JULY 2nd, 1912.

GAUMONT—The Lion's Revenge (Drama) .....
MAJESTIC—The Flat Upstairs (Comedy) .....
MAJESTIC—The Burglar Alarm Mat (Comedy) .....
THANHOUSER—Out of the Dark (Drama) .....

WEDNESDAY, JULY 3rd, 1912.

AMERICAN—An Hour of Terror (Drama) 1000
GAUMONT—Gaumont Weekly (Topical) .....
RELIANCE—A Man's Duty (Drama) .....
SOLAX—Father and the Boys (Comedy) .....

THURSDAY, JULY 4th, 1912.

AMERICAN—Under False Pretenses (Drama) 1000
GAUMONT—Written in Blood (2 reels) (Dr.) .....

FRIDAY, JULY 5th, 1912.

LUX——The Empty Holster (Drama) 860
SOLAX—Between Two Fires (Drama) .....
THANHOUSER—Ma and Dad (Comedy-Drama).....

SATURDAY, JULY 6th, 1912.

GREAT NORTHERN—The Two Sisters (Drama) ...
GREAT NORTHERN—Copper Industry in Spain (Edu.) .....
COMET—A Heroine of Pioneer Days (Drama) 975
RELIANCE—Rip Van Winkle (Drama) .....

ADVANCE RELEASES.

SUNDAY, JULY 7th, 1912.

MAJESTIC—The Cook Came Back (Comedy) .....
THANHOUSER—The Portrait of Lady Anne (Drama)

MONDAY, JULY 8th, 1912.

AMERICAN—(Title Not Reported).....
COMET—The Poughkeepsie Intercollegiate Regatta (Sporting) 1000

TUESDAY, JULY 9th, 1912.

GAUMONT—That Troublesome Bird (Comedy) .....
GAUMONT—A Tenacious Hubby (Comedy) .....
MAJESTIC—The Widower's Widow (Com.-Dr.) .....
MAJESTIC—Father's Bust (Comedy) .....
THANHOUSER—Pa's Medicine (Com.-Dr.) .....
THANHOUSER—The Hazers Hazed (Comedy) .....

WEDNESDAY, JULY 10th, 1912.

AMERICAN—The Fall of Black Hawk (2 Reels—His.).2000
GAUMONT—Gaumont Weekly (Topical) .....
RELIANCE—Grandpa (Drama) .....
SOLAX—Winsome But Wise (Comedy) .....

THURSDAY, JULY 11th, 1912.

AMERICAN—The Vanishing Race (Drama) 1000
GAUMONT—The Silent Castle (Drama) .....

FRIDAY, JULY 12th, 1912.

LUX—(Title Not Reported) .....
SOLAX—Hotel Honeymoon (Comedy) .....
THANHOUSER—Nursie and the Knight (Com.-Dr.) ..

SATURDAY, JULY 13th, 1912.

GREAT NORTHERN—(Title Not Reported) .....
COMET—(Title Not Reported) .....
RELIANCE—The Toy Phone (Drama) .....

REPUBLIC RELEASING ONE REEL A WEEK.

The Republic Film Company announces that it will release one reel per week, instead of two as heretofore, after its release of Tuesday, July 2, and Monday will be its release day. On page 1268 of our last week's issue we printed a synopsis of this company's film entitled, "The Girl in the Auto" and gave the release date as being July 6. This is an error, as this subject is scheduled for release on July 8, which is the first subject of the Republic Film Company's one release a week.

HALLBERG EQUIPS VIRGINIA THEATER.

Thomas Parsons, of Cape Charles, Va., has purchased through Hallberg, "The Economizer Man," a complete oil engine electric lighting outfit, Powers No. 6 M. P. Machine, 400 opera chairs, and all the necessary wiring, lamps, and supplies for the equipment of a new theater at that place. Mr. Hallberg also reports a splendid trade in moving picture machines of all makes, "Economizers," ventilating and exhaust fans—in fact, says the business is 25% better than last year at this time.

Start Roasting Our Program!!

We want your opinion about every film we distribute, practically your adverse criticisms.

We want every manufacturer whose films we handle to improve quality until you, Mr. EXHIBITOR, are wholly satisfied.

Will you interest yourself in a movement which means the betterment of your own business?

See This Program and Write Us

Monday—	American	Comet	All Star
Tuesday—	Thanhouser	Majestic	Gaumont
Wednesday—	Reliance	Solax-American	Gaumout Weekly
Thursday—	American	All Star	Gaumont
Friday—	Thanhouser	Solax	Lux
Saturday—	Great Northern	Reliance	Comet
Sunday—	Thanhouser	Majestic

We Operate No Exchanges but can refer you to an agency in your territory which can and will supply you regularly

Get On Our Mammoth Mail List

DON'T HESITATE TO ADDRESS

FILM SUPPLY CO. OF AMERICA

133-135 West 44th Street

NEW YORK

OCCUPYING TWO ENTIRE FLOORS

Calendar of Licensed Releases.

CURRENT RELEASES.

MONDAY, JULY 1st, 1912.

BIOGRAPH—Man's Lust for Gold (Drama).....
KALEM—Tragedy of the Desert (2 Reels—Dr.) (Special) .....
KALEM—The Girl Bandit's Hoodoo (Comedy).....1000
LUBIN—The Spoiled Child (Drama).....1000
PATHE—Pathe's Weekly No. 27, 1912 (Topical).....1000
SELIG—The Lake of Dreams (Drama).....1000
VITAGRAPH—After Many Years (Drama).....1000

TUESDAY, JULY 2nd, 1912.

EDISON—The Close of the American Revolution (His.).1000
ESSANAY—On the Cactus Trail (West. Drama).....1000
C. G. P. C.—Wild Birds at Home (Educational).....
C. G. P. C.—The House of Mystery (Comedy).....
CINES—Jenkins Sneezes (Comedy)..... 325
CINES—A Violin and a Pipe (Comedy)..... 640
SELIG—The Cat and the Canary (Comedy-Drama)....1000
VITAGRAPH—The Church Across the Way (Drama).1000

WEDNESDAY, JULY 3rd, 1912.

EDISON—Partners for Life (Comedy-Drama).....1000
ECLIPSE—Scenes in Somerset, England (Scenic)..... 200
ECLIPSE—The Wax Model (Drama)..... 800
KALEM—The Filibusters (Drama).....1000
LUBIN—The Prize Essay (Drama).....1000
PATHE—Where Jealousy Leads (Comedy-Drama)....
C. G. P. C.—Winter Landscapes in Finland (Scenic)....
VITAGRAPH—Lincoln's Gettysburg Address (Hist.)..1000

THURSDAY, JULY 4th, 1912.

BIOGRAPH—One-Round O'Brien (Comedy).....
BIOGRAPH—Trying to Fool Uncle (Comedy).....
ESSANAY—White Roses (Drama) 1000
LUBIN—A Child's Prayer (Drama) 1000
MELIES—The Cowboy Kid (Drama).....1000
PATHE—The Greed of Gold (Drama).....
SELIG—The Last Dance (Drama).....1000

FRIDAY, JULY 5th, 1912.

EDISON—The Workman's Lesson (Drama).....1000
ESSANAY—The Butterfly Net (Comedy).....1000
KALEM—Winning a Widow (Drama) 1000
LUBIN—Just Pretending (Comedy).....
LUBIN—A Pair of Boots (Comedy).....
SELIG—Baby Betty (Drama).....1000
C. G. P. C.—The Would-Be Hunter's Nightmare (Com.)
C. G. P. C.—Hairdressing of Other Days (Educational)..
VITAGRAPH—On the Pupil of His Eye (Drama)....1000

SATURDAY, JULY 6th, 1912.

EDISON—How the Boys Fought the Indians (Com.).. 700
EDISON—An Intelligent Camera (Comedy)..... 300
ESSANAY—Broncho Billy's Narrow Escape (Drama)..1000
CINES—In Wrong (Comedy)..... 975
LUBIN—The Back Window (Comedy-Drama).....1000
PATHE—The Wooing of White Fawn (Drama).....
VITAGRAPH—The Troublesome Step-Daughters (Comedy-Drama) 1000

ADVANCE RELEASES.

MONDAY, JULY 8th, 1912.

BIOGRAPH—An Indian Summer (Drama) .....
KALEM—The Organ Grinder (Drama) .....
KALEM—Nile Hippopotamus (Educational) .....
LUBIN—The Halfbreed's Treachery (Drama) 1000
PATHE—Pathe's Weekly No. 28, 1912 (Topical) 1000
PATHE—The Adopted Child (Drama) (Sp. Release)...
SELIG—Under Suspicion (Drama) 1000
VITAGRAPH—Her Old Sweetheart (Com.-Drama).... 500
VITAGRAPH—Fate's Awful Jest (Drama) 500

TUESDAY, JULY 9th, 1912.

EDISON—After Many Days (Drama) 1000
ESSANAY—Signal Lights (Drama) 1000
C. G. P. C.—The Geisha's Love Story (Drama) .....
CINES—The Gay Deceivers (Comedy) 585
CINES—Leah Learns to Dance (Comedy) 365
SELIG—The Vow of Ysobel (Drama) 1000
VITAGRAPH—The Curse of the Lake (Drama) 1000

WEDNESDAY, JULY 10th, 1912.

EDISON—The Artist's Joke (Comedy) 1000
ECLIPSE—A Mysterious Case (Drama) 1000
KALEM—The Bugler of Battery B (Drama) 875
KALEM—Hungry Hank's Hallucination (Comedy).... 125
LUBIN—The Stolen Ring (Drama) 1000
PATHE—On the Brink of the Chasm (Drama) .....
VITAGRAPH—A Bunch of Violets (Drama) 1000

THURSDAY, JULY 11th, 1912.

BIOGRAPH—Man's Genesis (Comedy) .....
ESSANAY—Pa Trubell's Troubles (Comedy) 1000
LUBIN—The Sheriff's Daughter (Drama) 1000
MELIES—The Man Inside (Drama) 1000
PATHE—His Wife's Old Sweetheart (Drama) .....
SELIG—His Masterpiece (Drama) 1000

FRIDAY, JULY 12th, 1912.

EDISON—For Valor (Drama) 1000
ESSANAY—Down Jayville Way (Comedy) 1000
KALEM—Saved by Telephone (Drama) .....
KALEM—A Pet of the Cairo Zoo (Edu.) .....
LUBIN—Over the Hills to the Poor House (Comedy)
LUBIN—The Hypnotist (Comedy) .....
SELIG—A Mail Order Hypnotist (Comedy) .....
SELIG—The Los Angeles Police Department (Topical)
C. G. P. C.—Max Takes Tonics (Comedy) .....
VITAGRAPH—The Foster Child (Drama) 1000

SATURDAY, JULY 13th, 1912.

EDISON—Picturesque Darjeeling, India (Scenic) 300
EDISON—Madame de Mode (Comedy)) 700
ESSANAY—A Story of Montana (Drama) 1000
CINES—For Her Father's Sake (Drama) 950
LUBIN—The Stranded Actors (Comedy) 1000
PATHE—The Unwilling Bride (Drama) .....
VITAGRAPH—Aunty's Romance (Drama) 1000

PATHE'S WEEKLY LOBBY DISPLAY

We furnish every week in advance five beautiful, mounted photographs, each 14 x 17, showing scenes from the Pathe Weekly Film. Hang these pictures OUTSIDE. They SEND THE PEOPLE INSIDE.

Samples on exhibition at all exchanges. Write at once for particulars to

INTERNATIONAL NEWS SERVICE, : - 200 William St., New York City

POPULAR PHOTO PLAYERS

Full Sheet Posters in Colors of Costello, Bunny, Joyce, Gauntier, Turner, Anderson, Johnson, Fuller, and other favorites. Complete set of 10 for $1.50 Prepaid.

Feature Posters for Feature Films

One sheets 15c. Three Sheets 35c. Six sheets 70c. Add 1c per sheet for prepaid postage.
Man's Lust for Gold, Tragedy of Desert, Close of American Revolution, Prize Essay, One Round O'Brien, Child's Prayer, Back Window, Broncho Billy and Indian Maid, Derby Day at Churchill Downs, Dash Through the Clouds, New Physician, What the Driver Saw, Captured by Bedouins, Colonel's Escape, School Teacher and the Waif, Nation's Peril, Lena and the Geese, Choir of Densmore, French Spy, Arabian Tragedy, Spirit Awakened, The Passer-By, The Runaways, Windy Day, Gun Smugglers, Neighbors, Indian's Gratitude, Prisoner of War, The Orleans Coach, Tomboy Bessie, Missionaries in Darkest Africa, Romance of the Border, Life With a Circus, Drummer Girl of Vicksburg, Home Folks, A Modern Portia, Beast at Bay, Fighting Dervishes, Senorita's Butterfly, Outcast Among Outcasts, The Honeymooners, Under Flag of Truce, Convict Brother, When Kings Were Law, Fighting Dan McCool, Coming of Columbus, and many others. Send for complete list. "If It's Anything to Advertise a Picture Theater, We Have It."

EXHIBITORS' ADVERTISING & SPECIALTY CO., 30 Union Square, New York

THREE-SHEET POSTER FRAMES

Reading Special Features, Extra Features, Extra Attraction, To-Day's Newest Feature, Special Attraction, Coming Soon, and other sayings. Complete set of 10 for $1.20 Postage Paid.

COMING Monday, July 22nd

GREAT WAR DRAMA — IN TWO REELS

The Siege of Petersburg

See the Collapse of the Burning Bridge crowded with fighting soldiers! See the explosion of the giant mine, "The Crater," beneath the Confederate Batteries!! The Romance and reckless bravery of the Great War exploited with astounding realism.

Controlled exclusively by the General Film Company

SPECIAL MUSIC Special piano music with suggestions for effects, 25 cents per copy, postage prepaid.

SPECIAL PAPER Special six-sheet posters, depicting the Fight on the Burning Bridge.

KALEM

KALEM COMPANY

INCORPORATED

NEW YORK, 235-239 W. 23rd St,
86 Wardour St., LONDON, W.
BERLIN, 35 Friedrich Str.
PARIS, 13 Rue du Faubourg Montmartre

Song Slide Releases.

Levi Company, Inc. (Motion Song Slides).

"You're My Baby"—Pub. by Jerome H. Remick & Co.
"Oh, You Dear, Sweet, Wonderful Boy"—Pub. by Kendis & Paley, New York.
"Good-Bye, Rose"—Pub. by Shapiro Co.
"Take Me Back to the Garden of Love"—Pub. by Ted Snyder Co.

Levi Company, Inc. (Current Events).

The Allen Outlaws.
Mississippi Floods.

A. L. Simpson, Inc.

"Bring Me Your Message of Love, White Dove"—Pub. by J. Fred Helf Co., New York.
"A Wee Little Drop of the Cruiskeen Lawn"—Pub. by J. Fred Helf Co., New York City.
"Little White Rose of Mine"—Pup. by Chas. K. Harris, New York.
"Honey, You Can Turn the World Around for Me"—Pub. by Musicians Music Pub. Co., New York.
"I Want a Patriotic Girl"—Pub. by J. H. Aufderheide & Co., Indianapolis, Ind.
"No Matter Who or What You Are It's Great to be in Love"—Pub. by Chas. K. Harris, New York.

Scott & Van Altena.

"Oh, You Little Bear"—Pub. by Joe Morris Music Co.
"Fiddle-Dee-Dee"—Pub. by Ted Synder Co.
"Why Did You Make Me Care"—Pub. by Joe Morris Music Co.
"That Raggedy Rag"—Pub. by Jos. W. Stern & Co.
"Waltz Me Around Again in the Old Ballroom"—Pub. by Chas. K. Harris.
"That's How I Need You"—Pub. by Leo Feist.
"She's Gone Again"—Pub. by Will Rossiter.
"Queen of My Air Castle Dreams"—Pub. by Brown Music Company.
"Mary Was My Mother's Name"—Pub. by Joe. Morris Music Co.
"Silver Water"—Pub. by Jos. W. Stern & Co.
"Au Revoir, Sweet Marie"—Pub. by Jos. W. Stern Co.

A. J. Clapham Feature Lectures.

"Titanic Disaster."
"Allen Clan."
"Mississippi Flood."
"Purgatory & Paradise."
"Seeing America—Section 4."
"Most Popular Candidates."

Songs.

"Pretty Face"—James S. White Music Co., Boston.

DeWitt C. Wheeler, Inc.

"Raggin' the Old Virginia Reel"—Pub. by Witmark & Sons.
"How Would You Like to Make Love to Me"—M. Witmark & Sons.
"Take Me Back to Yankee Land"—Pub. by Wulschner-Stewart Music Co., Indianapolis, Ind.
"A Real, Live, Regular Town"—Pub. by J. H. Remick & Co.
"Little by Little"—Pub. by M. Witmark & Sons.
"The Trolley Car Swing"—Pub. by J. H. Remick & Co.
"Laugh and Let the Clouds Roll By"—Pub. by Jerome & Schwartz Pub. Co.

WE CAN MAKE AND DEVELOP MOVING PICTURES OF ANYTHING.
Our Plant Is Fully Equipped to Make Perfect Pictures.
Our Camera Men Are Experts.
Our Prices Are Reasonable.
Write Us—We Want to Bid on Your Work.
The Parisian Mfg. & Film Renovating Co., 4948 Wentworth Ave. CHICAGO
Fred L. Tilly, President & General Manager.

"Silver Your Curtain With Silverit"
Silverit is a silver paste. It is rubbed on the curtain with a rag and can be polished like a mirror. No laps or streaks. A child can apply it. Increases your picture 100% over aluminum or silver applied with a brush. Makes your curtain a pearl white.
1 Lb. covers a curtain 9 x 12. Send for
1 Lb. can, $3.00; 2 Lb. can, $5.00. Sample.
A. G. Thomas, 1705 Fairacres Ave., Pittsburgh, Pa.

SLIDES
OF ALL KINDS
Send for Catalogue "W" of our new line of beautiful
ANNOUNCEMENT SLIDES
Each slide illustrated from life and most exquisitely colored. The Chicago Song Slide Exchange, 6th floor, Powers Bldg., Chicago, Ill., have the exclusive agency for our announcement slides in the states of Wisconsin, Ohio, Illinois, Indiana, Michigan and Iowa.
Advertising Slides at Reasonable Rates
Our Song Slide Catalogue of 500 different songs free to anyone for the asking.
SCOTT & VAN ALTENA
59 PEARL STREET NEW YORK CITY

Patents Pending
BARTON PIANO ATTACHMENT FOR MUSICAL ELECTRIC BELLS
Pianist plays Bells and Piano at the same time, the chorus of songs, catchy strains from selections, beautiful chords and harmony played from the ordinary piano music, the accompaniment on the piano and the melody on the bells.
Does not interfere with the usual playing of the piano or closing of the keyboard.
With a BARTON PIANO ATTACHMENT you can install musical bells (which are a proven attraction for Moving Picture Theatres), without one cent extra expense or increase in salaries.
Improved bells play loud or soft.
Outfits adapted to the size of your theatre.
Patent piano attachment furnished for any make bells.
WRITE TODAY FOR CIRCULAR AND PRICES.
DAN BARTON, 266 East Irving St., Oshkosh, Wisconsin

GOLDEN SONG REVUE with FOOLISH QUESTIONS in Motion and SPIEGEL MOTION SONG SLIDES are made exclusively by us. The only real slide attractions.
Write us for full information about them.
LEVI CO., Inc., 1560 Broadway, New York City

A CHAIN OF SUCCESSES

A NEW LINK EVERY TWO WEEKS

CROWN FEATURES DRAW CROWDS

ALL OF THE FOLLOWING HITS ARE QUICK PROFIT MAKERS

SAINT GEORGE AND THE DRAGON

3 REELS OF EXCITING SITUATIONS AND MASSIVE SCENIC EFFECTS

A Refined High-Class Elevating Attraction that any audience will want to see over again.

THE BATTLE OF TWO PALMS

2 REELS OF ACTUAL WARFARE! AN ENTIRE ARMY ENGAGED IN TERRIFIC CONFLICT!

These two reels contain only pictures of this particular battle. The most important of the

ITALIAN-TURKISH WAR

THE HAUNTED CASTLE

2 REEL DRAMA WITH A MORAL. A PHOTOPLAY OF ABSORBING INTEREST.

A clean and wholesome attraction that will appeal to all the people.

ATTRACTIVE ADVERTISING MATTER FOR ALL MILANO-FILMS

Four-color posters—8, 6, 3 and 1 sheets. Illustrated booklets. Original photographs for lobby display. Announcement slides. Cuts and electros.

OUR MOTTO: QUICK SALES, SMALL PROFITS

NOTE.—We release a new feature every two weeks and depend upon the volume of business for our profits; that is why we can offer FEATURE MILANO-FILMS at lower prices than demanded for the ordinary so-called features.

ALLOW US TO QUOTE YOU ON THE TERRITORY YOU ARE INTERESTED IN AND PROVE OUR STATEMENT.

SPECIAL PRICES TO REGULAR BUYERS.

Crown Feature Film Co., 145 West 45th Street, NEW YORK CITY

LICENSED Film Stories

VITAGRAPH.

HER OLD SWEETHEART (July 8):—Priscilla is all flustered when she receives word that a long-lost lover is coming to claim her. She is somewhat of an antique, but she has always kept alive the spark of maidenly love, which is ready to burst forth into a consuming flame. Time is precious. She cannot lose a chance and hastens to a beauty parlor to acquire a few touches of the bloom of youth. During her absence a burglar, a regular "tough mug," enters her home and holds up the maid.

When Priscilla returns she mistakes him for her long-lost lover. She embraces him and orders the maid from the room, that she may nestle on his breast and listen to the cooings of his responsive heart. The poor fellow tries to escape from her demonstrations, but she holds onto the skirts of his garment and will not let him go.

Her old sweetheart arrives and makes himself known. Priscilla hesitates, while the words of the immortal bard pass through her mind:—"How happy could I be with either, were t'other dear charmer away!" During this lull in the proceedings the burglar beats it through the open window and "hikes it for the tall pines." Priscilla gets a strangle hold on her arrived lover and assures him that it was all a horrible or pardonable mistake. "The other man was so handsome, I thought it must be you!"

FATE'S AWFUL JEST (July 8).—This drama of the circus is one of jealousy and the love of a ticket taker for Mrs. Heinrich, the wife of the proprietor. He cannot refrain from showing it and finally declares it in a demonstration which is extremely distasteful to the woman, for she detests him and her dislike is shared by her little boy Joey. The pet elephant of the circus, Nellie, who is a close friend of Joey's, has a natural antipathy for Michael, and when he strikes the boy, the faithful beast does not hesitate to show it. Joey's father, Mr. Heinrich, when he learns that the ticket taker has struck his boy is only prevented from knocking him senseless by Michael accusing the elephant of having struck Joey with his trunk. Heinrich despises Michael and the crisis of his feelings comes when Michael insults his wife. He discharges him and the ticket taker determines upon revenge.

He knows that the money is kept in a strong box in the living room of the van of the Heinrich's. He plots to get possession of it by breaking into the van, setting fire to it, burning the Heinrichs to death and escaping with the money. Joey accidentally detects Michael's plot and tells Nellie, the elephant, to watch the man's actions and protect him and his father and mother from harm. Michael, in the darkness of the night, opens the door of the van and secures the money from the strong box. The elephant sees him and makes him drop the money, which Mr. Heinrich afterwards picks up. Returning again, Michael enters the small vestibule, saturates the walls of it with petroleum, lights a candle and ignites the oil. While he is doing this, the elephant closes the door, the spring lock snaps, and Michael is held a prisoner, in his own trap caught. He tries to burst open the door, but the elephant holds it closed and the man is suffocated. In the meantime, Joey arouses his father and mother from their slumbers and they escape in safety through another entrance.

THE CURSE OF THE LAKE (July 9).—A tribe of Indians passing over the desert strike camp and the chief's daughter, Owanda, is sent to a nearby spring to fetch water. On her return she finds Howard Martin, a young cowboy, dying of thirst. She hastens to his side, revives him and brings him to her people, who administer to him. Owanda loves him and he persuades her to elope with him. Far out on the plains he tires of her and deserts her. When she awakens to her position, in desperation she wanders aimlessly until she comes to a small lake into which she deliberately walks, and is drowned. Shortly after this occurrence, the lake disappears, and according to a legend, it was accursed by the Great Spirit in displeasure at the white man's heartlessness.

Howard Martin goes East, enters business and forgets about the past. Many years have gone by and Howard, with his son, twenty-five, start on a sight-seeing tour. They are held up by an accident to the train at the very place where Howard met and deserted the Indian chief's daughter. While looking about he recognizes many of the old landmarks, and a vision of the girl appears before him. He sinks, apparently dead, to the ground. His son, half crazed by his father's condition, roams away into the open country, to the very spot of the sunken lake. He too, beholds a vision of the Indian girl beckoning him on. He follows on and on, until he falls exhausted to the ground and dies. His father, missing his son, searches for him with a party of horsemen. He finds him dead at the place where he deserted the girl; the shock is too great. He becomes a raving maniac and dies, stricken with heart failure and remorse.

A BUNCH OF VIOLETS (July 10).—Married to a man who is a drunkard and a general good-for-nothing, Violet Ray, a popular actress, sticks to him for the sake of their dead child. Mabel Wright, the daughter of a florist, aged ten, is a great admirer of Violet, and comes every afternoon to the stage door with a bunch of violets. Violet grows fond of the child and one afternoon takes her home with her to her apartment, and in answer to the child's questions, tells her about the little girl she has lost. Mabel reciprocates Violet's love with all her childish sympathy. Alec Lang, a man about town, who is very much in love with Violet, tries to persuade her to leave her brutal husband and marry him, but she refuses.

One day, going to the stage door, Mabel is run over and seriously injured; she is taken to the hospital. There she makes her father go and tell Violet what has happened and take her some violets. In the meantime, Jim has grown particularly brutal, and Violet, resenting his conduct, decides to accept Alec's protection. She telephones him to come to her. While she is waiting, Mabel's father arrives with the message and the violets. These touch Violet's heart and awaken her wifely love. She dismisses Alec, and we see her, in the final scene, at Mabel's bedside, consoling the little sufferer and happy in her resolution to remain true to herself and the memory of her child.

AUNTY'S ROMANCE (July 13).—In honor bound, Stephen Fiske, Jr., son of a supposed millionaire, tells Doris Myhtle, his fiancée, that the death of his father has revealed that he has died penniless and left him a poor man. She is so disappointed she returns her engagement ring to him, which he throws into the fire. He is obliged to go to work as an ordinary laborer. She tells her Aunt Patience, with whom she lives, and the old lady confides the romance of her life to her. She was engaged to Stephen's father. She rejected him and it was the regret of her life, and almost broke her heart when he married another woman.

One evening, Aunt Patience, after a day's shopping, entering her home, slips, injuring herself, and Stephen, returning from his day's work, finds her on the area step, and carries her into the house. He calls a doctor, who pronounces her injuries fatal. The old lady recognizes Stephen, of whom she is very fond, and who closely resembles his father. She expresses a hope that he and Doris will be wedded to each other, and again repeats the romance of her life. As she does so, visions of the happy retrospect appear before her and she passes away in thoughts of that past happiness, and a full realization of the joys that await her in the life beyond.

Grieving at the loss of their good friend, Doris and Stephen, kneeling at her bedside, touch hands, and looking into each other's eyes, they ask each other if they will fulfill Aunt Patience's hope. The mutual fervor with which they silently embrace each other is their answer.

THE FOSTER CHILD (July 12).—Mr. and Mrs. Caspar, home-loving, industrious people, long for a little one to bless their lives and their home. Their hopes are not in vain. One night, when they are sitting in the quiet, they hear the voice of a baby. Mr. Caspar, opening the door, finds a deserted child lying on the door-step. Tenderly lifting it in his arms, he brings it to his wife, who cares and nurtures it with a mother's love. Their adopted child is just one year old when a son is born to Mrs. Caspar, and an added joy comes to bless their union. The foundling, Jack, and the real son, Dick, grow up together as brothers, but quite different in dispositions. The real son is idle, morose, and disrespectful, and a selfish ingrate, who heaps abuse upon his parents, regardless of their kindness to him. The foster son is manly, kind and thoughtful, industriously working for his parents, constantly considering their comfort and happiness.

The mother of the child whom she deserted, conscience-stricken and remorseful, one day comes to the Caspar home to reclaim her child. Of course she cannot identify him, and the Caspars hate to part with the boy, whom they love more than they do their own. They determine to pass their own son off as the woman's. She is very wealthy and when Jack hears this, he is anxious to go with her, and does not waste much time in leave-taking with those who love him, and sadly part with him. Jack, with plenty of money, which he does not hesitate to demand from his supposed mother, soon shows his real nature and indulges in all sorts of dissipation. In a gambling den, he becomes involved in a quarrel. In the struggle, he is accidentally shot. He is taken to his home, where he dies. When his real parents hear that their son is dying, they hasten to his bedside, where they find him dead. The Caspars tell the whole truth to Dick's mother, and then, returning to their home, impart the truth to Dick. With a heavy heart he bids farewell to those who have brought him safely and lovingly to man's estate, asuring them the he will never forget them or neglect them. He hastens to his own mother's home and side, where she clasps her deserted child to her bosom and he lovingly embraces her.

KALEM.

THE ORGAN GRINDER (July 8).—Pasquale, an old Italian inn-keeper, is secretly in league with a party of bandits, but is extremely diplomatic in keeping his guests from becoming suspicious. His daughter, Pepina, is in love with Bariola, an organ grinder, who often serves as guide for the tourists and she takes good care of the young man's savings in anticipation of their coming marriage.

One day Bariola is attacked by brigands and is rescued by an American who is on his way to the inn with his wife. This timely assistance earns the Italian's gratitude and he is later in a position to demonstrate his appreciation. The bandits inform Pasquale that wealthy Americans are stopping at his place and a plan is made to rob them. Pasquale permits himself to be bound in a chair that he may not be suspected of complicity.

While the bandits are attempting to force the tourists' door, the American is attracted by strains of music beneath the window, where Bariola sits with Pepina in the moonlight. The tourist hastily drops a note through the shutters. This is picked up by Pepina who takes the grind organ and continues the music while Bariola hastens for help. The organ grinder gathers several officers who hasten to the inn where a desperate struggle takes place, the bandits being overpowered and conducted to jail. In liberating Pasquale, one of the officers, who has been suspicious of the landlord, warns him to keep out of bad company. Several weeks later we see Bariola and Pepina in a cozy home which has been provided by the generous Americans.

THE BUGLER OF BATTERY B (July 10).—Battery B makes its headquarters at the Colwell Mansion. During their stay of a month, Major Pitt and Bugler Harkness lose their hearts to the two Colwell girls. Major Pitt, summoned to the front, leaves Bugler Harkness alone in charge of headquarters. During the battle that follows, Battery B bears the brunt of the fight and does not surrender until almost the last man is killed. A cavalry charge carries the day for the Federal troops and the triumphant northerners, advancing upon the town, receive an unexpected check at the Colwell Mansion. A cannon that has been left at headquarters owing to an accident to one of its wheels, is operated by Bugler Harkness and the girls to such good effect that the Federals are compelled to retreat. A visit from Stonewall Jackson, who has been a distant witness of the brave boy's work, transforms the bugler to a lieutenant.

HUNGRY HANK'S HALLUCINATION (July 10).—Hungry Hank falls asleep on a park bench and has a dream that is very interesting to him, but uproariously funny when presented to the spectator.

SAVED BY TELEPHONE (July 12).—Mr. Lawson is about to go to the bank to deposit a large sum of money. An important business matter requires his attention and when he finally prepares to leave the office he finds to his annoyance that it is after banking hours and he will be obliged to take the money home for safe keeping over night. Just at that moment Blinky Morgan, a vagabond, forces his way into the office, begging the price of a meal. Lawson hands the beggar a coin and inadvertently displays the roll of bills.

Morgan sees that Lawson is taking the money home and resolves to secure possession of it. Having learned Lawson's name from the sign on the door, he secures the address of his residence from a telephone directory and then seeks his pal, Shiner Kelly, to whom he discloses his plans. Lawson arrives home and places the money in a safe.

That night Lawson is obliged to go to the office and as the maid has the evening off, Mrs. Lawson is left alone. Kelly and Morgan gain entrance into the house and demand the money. Mrs. Lawson bravely holds them off and tries to telephone to her husband, but the crooks knock the instrument from her hand. Kelly stands guard over Mrs. Lawson while Morgan attempts to open the safe.

Finding that he will be detained, Lawson decides to telephone to his wife and central tells him "I cannot get your number. The receiver must be down." While he is waiting for the connection Lawson hears his wife pleading with the crooks. He hurries from the office and with two policemen speeds to his home in an automobile in time to capture Morgan and Kelly. When Mrs. Lawson has recovered from her fright she asks her husband how he knew of her danger and in response he picks up the telephone and adjusts the receiver.

EDISON.

AFTER MANY DAYS (July 9).—This is the story of an old musician and his little daughter. Beginning when they play and sing in the saloons together, passing through the time when she is a coon shouter in a popular priced theater and then under his careful training becomes a good concert singer, she finally accepts an offer of a leading role in a big production in a large city. This, of course, leaves the old father alone as he cannot travel with her and at their parting she gives him some money to take care of him until the first salary day comes around.

As he turns from the railroad station he is followed by two men who have noticed the money. By the river's edge they attack him, take the money and put him, unconscious, into a small boat, which is shoved off into the stream. At Rest Haven he is cared for by fisher folk who find him, but he has lost his memory and all idea of who he is or where he belongs.

The singer is fairly beside herself because she can get no word and finally employs a detective to trace him. The years roll by and the great singer comes for a vacation to Rest Haven and is asked to sing at a benefit concert for the Old

THE SENSATION OF THE MOVING PICTURE WORLD

BLANCHE WALSH

in Tolstoy's Powerful Drama

RESURRECTION

THE GREAT ACTRESS IN HER GREATEST ROLE

A Magnificent Three Reel Production

INCLUDING IN THE CAST

THE RUSSIAN IMPERIAL TROUPE OF PLAYERS

AND

THE FAMOUS RUSSIAN DANCERS

STAGED BY EXPERTS

The Cost of the Cast will stagger some of the old-timers
Stacks of Advertising Matter, Lobby Displays, Booklets, Etc.

SOLD ON THE EXCLUSIVE TERRITORY PLAN

RESERVE YOUR TERRITORY NOW

DON'T DELAY --- DO IT NOW --- DON'T WAIT

MASKO FILM COMPANY

KOROR & MASON, Props.

145 West 45th St. New York

Men's Home. The detective, coming there, tells her that his search is over, that he has exhausted every resource and failed to find her father. Later, among the fisher folk, he sees one who resembles the picture which he had. He questions him but the old man can tell him nothing of his past and so he invites him to the concert. Thus the father is brought face to face with his daughter, but while something in his mind puzzles him, he is unable to place her until she sings an old song which he taught her. Then, of course, recognition comes, and his mind is restored to him.

THE ARTIST'S JOKE (July (10).—A wealthy artist lives in retirement in his country mansion with his only son, Charles, who is averse to country life and anxious to make his abode in the city where they raise brides instead of crops.

One day a sketch club, consisting of a bevy of beauties, arrive by motor from the city to sketch the ruins of an old castle which they are at first unable to locate. Nell Travers, the leading spirit of the party, inquires at the mansion for direction and thus forms the acquaintance of Charles, who begs to be permitted to act as guide. She gladly accepts the proposition and introduces him to the other members of the Sketch Club, and together they proceed to the old ruins and after considerable discussion as to the best point of view, the tripods and canvases are finally placed and each girl's name written in bold type across the top of her canvas. It is noon and they decide to return to their motor car for luncheon, but Charles, having become enamoured of Nell's charms, persuades her to meander in an opposite direction. The canvases being left alone, Charles' father, when he happens upon the scene, is unable to resist the temptation of carrying out a practical joke. He draws a caricature upon each canvas and in fiendish glee departs for home.

When the girls return and discover their canvases unfit to work upon, they conclude that Nell, the missing one, must be the culprit and immediately depart for home in their motor, leaving Nell to get home as best she can. When Nell learns of the girls' sudden departure, the gallant Charles offers to drive her home in his trap. At the mansion she meets his jovial father and, seeing the various drawings about the house, she immediately suspects him of being the one who disfigured the girls' canvases. She makes the accusation and the old gentleman admits that he is the real culprit and humbly apologizes for his joke. Nell now starts for home escorted by Charles, and we can plainly see that he is no longer anxious for city life.

FOR VALOUR (July 12).—The plot revolves around that eternal triangle, two men and one woman. We are first shown the heroine of the story in a beautiful lily field where she meets her two lovers who prove to be "Tommy Atkins" of the British army. Her affections seem to waver from one to the other when suddenly the regiment is called to South Africa. Then she is forced to decide which of these two privates has won her heart. Ere they have departed for foreign shores she has chosen.

The rival lover in bidding her goodbye discovers this fact, but to prove his worth promises her that he will bring her fiance home safe and sound.

We are now introduced to the two soldiers in this picture in the heat of a foreign campaign, and we discover that the man who has won the girl's heart is a coward. Nevertheless, the rival lover proves faithful to his trust and brings him safely out of danger, but ere they have reached the lines both are wounded. The coward would abandon his saviour but is forced at the point of a pistol to carry him safely into the lines. This is witnessed by the commanding officer. He believes the coward has performed an heroic action in saving his comrade, and, not knowing the motive back of it, awards him a medal for bravery. For the sake of the honor of the regiment his comrade does not reveal the secret, but when they meet the object of their love the truth is disclosed and Private Swanwick comes into his own.

PICTURESQUE DARJEELING, INDIA (July 13).—Darjeeling is delightfully located in the Himalayan Mountains. A view of the snow range including Mt. Everest, the highest mountain in the world, forty-five miles away, lends a touch of awe and majesty as these mighty earthworks rear their summits higher and higher until at last passing through the clouds, the peaks are crowned with ice and snow.

Another view equally as imposing was taken above the clouds which appear like a great rolling sea of soft white fleece, parting now and then, enabling one to see far below into the dizzy depths of valley space.

As picturesque as the scenery are the people whose habits and customs have stayed stagnant in the onward march of civilization. A market scene with hundreds of natives trading and bargaining, also a general view of the town, give a fair conception of what there is and what goes on in the land of Allah.

Pictures of such people as a wandering minstrel, Tibetan women dancing, mountaineers dancing, and an aged pair of Bhutanese dancers, add an unexpected touch of humor with their queer steps and gestures.

Some boys of Darjeeling are shown playing a native game in which they juggle a ball from one to the other, only using their feet.

MADAME DE MODE (July 13).—"Advice to the Lovelorn by Madame de Mode," is the heading of a column in a daily newspaper and Harry Fenton is the up-to-the-minute young newspaperman who replies to all correspondence from the Lovelorn under the nom-de-plume of Madame de Mode. Although he conducts this column successfully, Harry personally, is backward with women. He is in love with Madge Everett and she returns his love, but Harry never seems to acquire courage enough to propose.

Madge in her despair finally decides to seek advice and accordingly writes the following letter to the daily newspaper: "Dear Madame de Mode: A certain young gentleman loves me but he is too bashful to propose. What shall I do? Respectfully, Constant Reader." This letter causes more than a ripple of merriment among the clerks in the office and without having the slightest idea of the writer's identity, Harry causes the following answer to be published: "Constant Reader: Create opportunities for the young gentleman. Sit close to him. Keep your engagement finger prominent. Give him your photograph. Faint in his arms if necessary.

When Madge reads this she clips the item from the paper and determines to follow the advice. Consequently when Harry calls again Madge brings about a droll situation which culminates in Harry popping the question. The happy day is named and soon arrives. Among the wedding presents is one from the newspaper office with the following note: "To Mr. and Mrs. 'Madame' de Mode from the boys in the office." This is the telltale note which leads Madge to discover that bashful Harry is none other than "Madame" de Mode who advised her how to encourage her young man to propose, and which ended in bringing about a very happy union.

CINES.

IN WRONG (July 6).—William is madly in love with Marie, the pretty daughter of stern old Mr. Hasty, a retired merchant. But having incurred the father's ill-will is not permitted to visit at the home. In many ways he tries to reconcile the old gentleman and writes colntless messages of appeal to the object of his affections, but each time he receives the same answer that there is positively "nothing doing."

Just when things look darkest and William has begun to wear that long, downcast look, which rejected lovers assume, uncle Harry takes an active interest in his affairs. The uncle, after learning the details of the situation, calls upon his friend Hasty and cautiously suggests that he knows just the husband for such a pretty girl as Marie. Hasty is interested at once and eagerly consents to have the young people meet.

At the appointed hour, Marie rebels and literally has to be forced into the room, but whom does she find but the handsome William Smarty. The young man is now "in right."

THE GAY DECEIVERS (July 9).—Two Merry jokers get "caught with the goods." Leah and Lizette receive notes from their respective admirers, who wish to arrange a holiday party. Leah suggests that the three come to her house and have a jolly time. The two sweethearts, Tony and Fritz are married men, Tony being Fritz's father-in-law. Each leaves home in the morning, claiming to have an important engagement for the day. Fritz arrives first, with parcels of good things to eat, and Lizette and her friend Tony arrive soon after.

The scene which follows may be better imagined than described. However the two men pledge secrecy, and the party proves a huge success.

An unexpected sequel follows the next day, for the wives happen to make purchases at the millinery shop in which the girls are employed. On delivering the hats, Leah and Lizette meet their sweethearts and learn that they are married men.

Accusations, excuses and a general scrimmage follow, in which the husbands certainly "get theirs."

LEAH LEARNS TO DANCE (July 9).—Wishing to learn the art of dancing, Leah engages lessons with a famous dancing master. Because of her tireless energy, she makes rapid progress and is soon the leader of the class. At the ball she is a wonderful success, but the many partners who try to keep pace with her have to be taken home in an ambulance.

ECLIPSE.

A MYSTERIOUS CASE (July 10).—Lacking the necessary money to complete an experiment, John Brown, an inventor, decides to borrow from his brother Arthur, and calls at his house.

The latter, a miser, refuses the loan; a dispute arises and the noise attracts the attention of the neighbors. They arrive upon the scene just in time to see John walk hurriedly out of the door. Investigating further, they discover the miser lying senseless upon the floor with a large wound on his forehead.

The police are called and everything appears against the inventor as the injured man is unable to answer questions. The police superintendent is a rejected suitor of the prisoner's daughter, and is especially zealous in affecting the arrest.

The next day, however, with the able assistance of the girl, the injured man is restored to reason and is able to explain the circumstances. When the two men meet face to face the situation changes. Arthur Brown is astounded to learn that his brother is charged with attempt to murder, and explains that he only wished to take a book from the shelf and fell on the corner of the safe.

The prisoner is reluctantly released by the police officer, who realizes his error in being too hasty on account of a personal grudge.

ESSANAY.

SIGNAL LIGHTS (July 9).—Jim Drake is station agent at Winslow Junction. One noontime his wife and little child bring his lunch, and the baby becomes interested in the chains that turn the signal light outside on the platform. Drake laughingly shows her how to work them while she claps her hands in delight. That evening Drake receives a message from the Division Superintendent instructing that No. 6 is running as a "special" with bullion from Goldfield, and will not stop at Winslow. Before turning in, Drake smokes a pipe in the moonlight and accidentally drops the message on the platform, while searching his pockets for a match. It is found by two tramps who instantly decide to stop the "special" and secure the bullion. Holding Drake up at gun-point, they bind, gag and place him under the table in the office, turn the signal light to red and hide nearby to await the coming train. Meanwhile, Mrs. Drake is called out to nurse a neighbor's sick child and little Mary, rousing from her sleep and finding her mamma gone, determines to go to her father at the station. Running down the tracks she enters the station office, calls for her papa, but cannot find him. Suddenly she sees the signal light chains, clambers upon the table and, crowing with delight, turns back the danger light to the one giving the "special" a clear track. Hiding nearby, the two tramps are astonished when the train rushes through the station at high speed, and are amazed to see the signal reversed. Muttering deep curses they hasten away in disgust. Arriving at the station in search of little Mary, Mrs. Drake discovers her husband, releases him and little Mary is made the hero of the hour when Drake learns it was she who reversed the signal light and saved the bullion.

PA TRUBELL'S TROUBLES (July 11).—Pa Trubell objects strenuously to William Mason's attentions to his pretty daughter, Mildred. Mason conducts a school of dramatic art and has gobs of ready money. One morning Dick Trubell, old Trubell's son, borrows $500 from Mason to aid his father, who is in financial difficulties. Mildred now develops signs of dramatic art and Trubell agrees to hire an instructor. Of course Mildred sends for Mason, who starts in to give the lessons personally. Their love-making interferes with rapid progress. Trubell becomes enraged and, not knowing Mason is the one who has aided him with the money, orders him from the house. Mason disguises as an Italian artist and again proceeds to make love to Mildred under cover of the disguise until Trubell finds out and once more ejects him. Trubell now demands that Mildred have a lady instructor. The ready Mason disguises as a dashing female and the wooing goes on until Trubell again discovers the deception and throws him out for the steenth time. Mason and Mildred now agree to elope at midnight, take the butler into the plan and explain that "mum's" the word. Frightened out of his wits, the butler gives the scheme away to old Trubell, who sends him out, gets a huge club and prepares to lay for Mason when he comes. But he falls asleep, the young people get away in safety and Trubell is only awakened by the noise of footsteps in the hall. Thinking it Mason he turns out the lights and jumps upon the intruder, who happens to be Dick, his son! A glorious scrap ensues until they discover each others' identities, then both hear more footsteps, the lights are once more extinguished and this time the returning butler is mauled within an inch of his life. Returning from the parson the elopers find a trio of blackened eyes and torn clothes. Trubell is about to murder Mason when Dick explains about the money and that it was Mason who loaned it. So of course everything ends happily.

DOWN JAYVILLE WAY (July 12).—Tom and Jerry, two country boys, are in love with pretty Tilly King, a farmer's daughter. Tom and Jerry are bitter rivals and almost come to blows whenever the fair Tilly is nigh. Tilly cannot decide whom she loves best, takes the matter to her father and asks him to sit in judgment on the difficulty. Farmer King is puzzled and finally agrees to let the best man have her. Taking Tom and Jerry out to the barn-yard he inaugurates a target contest, but both boys are equally good at shooting bottles from the fence. A standing jump is now tried and both leap exactly the same distance. King is stumped, until he thinks of having a race for the marriage license. The one who brings back a parson first gets Tilly. Away go Tom and Jerry and after a tough struggle, both reach the parson at the same moment and both bring him to the farm-house. Again old King is stumped, introduces the minister to Tilly and the holy man instantly becomes smitten with her charms. Leaving Tom and Jerry waiting a decision, the minister takes the family into the adjoining room, pours out his love for Tilly and asks for her hand in marriage. The old people are delighted, readily give their consent and the young people leave by the back way to procure the license. It is not until Tom and Jerry see them driving off down the road that they realize they are badly stung and bury their animosity forever. Later they meet their old girls, and, after much difficulty, make up and a double wedding looms brightly on the horizon.

A STORY OF MONTANA (July 13).—Old Clayton, a ranchman, has a pretty daughter, Sue, who is loved by Dan Morris, a worthless cattleman. Clayton tries to force Sue to marry Morris, but the girl indignantly refuses, tells Morris she doesn't love him and goes to meet her real sweetheart,

MR. EXHIBITOR:

Do you want to fill those empty seats?
Do you want your house filled at all performances?
Do you want your theatre to become popular?
Do you want yours to be THE theatre in your town?
Do you want to increase your box office receipts?
Do you want the patronage of the better class, as well as the others?

If you do, fill out the blank below and mail at once to

Mr. Stephans, 86 John St., New York, N. Y.

He will tell you how.

The offer is for only one theatre in towns of less than 75,000 population and for only one theatre in a given territory in larger cities.

DO not delay. Write at once.

FILL IN THIS BLANK

Name of Theatre .....
Name of Propr. .....
Street No. .....
City ..... Lic. ..... Ind. .....

Jim Burrows, a stalwart young cowboy, to whom she gives a pair of hand-made gauntlets. They are planning to marry when Morris discovers them, goes to Clayton in a rage and tells him of what he has seen. Clayton instantly orders Burrows off the ranch with many threats and Burrows, furious, declares if he ever applies such names to him again he will kill him. This is overheard by Sue, who calls her father into the ranch-house. Later old Clayton is carrying his saddle into the barn when he is suddenly stricken with heart-failure and dies. Coming upon the body, Morris suddenly conceives a dastardly scheme, drops Burrows' gauntlets beside the body, withdraws to a distance and fires two shots into the dead man. Riding to the sheriff's office, Morris explains matters, the sheriff investigates and the supposed crime is fastened upon Burrows. At the trial Sue is called to the witness-stand and is forced to acknowledge having heard her sweetheart threaten her father's life. The jury returns a verdict of "guilty," and things look black for Burrows. However, Morris is now mortally wounded in a saloon brawl, and, on his death-bed, confesses the truth about Clayton's death and clears Burrows. Later Mrs. Clayton gladly gives her consent to Sue's marriage with Burrows and withdraws silently from the room as Jim takes the girl to his heart.

MELIES.

THE LESSON (July 18).—Ralph, a slave to money-making has no time for the pleasures of home. Finding her happiness at stake, Ethel asks her brother's help. Together they plan a successful scheme to make him believe her dead. Ralph is informed of the sad news and rushes home. He bitterly regrets his neglect of the best wife in the world. Her brother, after giving Ralph a severe lecture, calls Ethel into the room. Ralph, delighted to find her alive, becomes the most devoted husband and strives in every way to make up for the past.

A COWBOY'S PROPOSAL (July 18).—A very comical picture, showing how bashful Stephen finally proposed to the girl of his choice. Having bought a book of instructions, "How to Propose," he practised assiduously on anything in reach. The complications that ensued lead to many difficulties and an accidental discovery, and the clever wit of his intended put the finishing touch to all his troubles.

LUBIN.

THE HALF-BREED'S TREACHERY (July 8).—James Spence, an aged miner, had for months been working on a prospect he had located, but which bid fair to be a forlorn hope. Finally the old man's health gave way and he died. Burying her father, the girl finds herself alone in the world. Pedro Miguel, a drunken half-breed, learning of old man Spence's death, enters the cabin to rob. He is interrupted by the entrance of Elsie. A struggle between the two ensues, and Elsie's screams for help are overheard by Joe Edwards, a young mining prospector. Edwards quickly kicks the half-breed from the cabin. Elsie then tells Edwards of her father's death and of the unprofitable mine. Attracted by Elsie, Edwards offers to give the prospect a whirl as a partner of the girl, and a friendship is thus formed. Edwards located on the claim and starts to work. His efforts are fruitless, and it begins to look as if the property was really worthless. One day, Pedro again drunk, wanders into the neighborhood of the mine. He witnesses an interview between Joe and Elsie and in his drunken mind, inflamed by remembrance of the way in which he had been handled, he determines to be revenged. Drawing his revolver, he creeps up and fires. His aim is spoiled by the liquor he carries, he misses Joe, but hits a keg of gun cotton, which explodes with tremendous force, all but wrecking the mine and burying Joe within the debris. Elsie, who is just about to mount her horse, hears the roar of the explosion and hastens to aid Joe. She digs him from the gravel and dirt which cover him, and returns with him to the cabin. Realizing the need of medical aid, she mounts her horse and quickly returns with the doctor. The latter in removing from Joe's face particles of rock, discovers them to be pure gold. Wonder-struck at the discovery, Elsie, assured by the doctor that Joe's injury is by no means serious, hastily runs back to the mine to see if the good fortune promised is really true. Pedro, who has returned to the scene of the explosion, has also discovered the precious metal, and is filling a bag with nuggets. By a ruse, Elsie gets possession of Pedro's gun, sticks him up and forces him to return with her to the cabin, where the cowboys attend to his case and Joe and Elsie determine to make the partnership a lifelong matter.

THE STOLEN RING (July 10).—Walter Brooks is a clerk at a large hotel. Guests are arriving and leaving. Among the latter are Mr. and Mrs. Walling. Sometime after their departure, a chambermaid brings down a chamois jewel bag left by Mrs. Walling under a pillow in her room. The clerk and maid examine the contents, which consists of a large sum of money and a ring of odd design. The bag is then placed in the safe. This action has been witnessed by Will Taylor, son of the proprietor, who is heavily in debt. He has given his I. O. U. and is unable to meet any part of his obligations. Walter is called away from the office for a moment and, unable to resist the temptation, Taylor steals the money and the ring, substituting crumpled paper for the money. Discovering the loss, Mr. and Mrs. Walling return and are handed the bag. She opens it and Taylor, Sr., is convinced that Brooks has stolen the contents and orders his arrest. He is sent to prison and writes a note to his sweetheart, Grace, a manicurist. She hastens to him and Walter tells his story, describing the ring. In a short time he is released on bail. Will Taylor, in the meantime, has given the ring to Blanche Daix, a woman he is in love with, and she, not knowing the history of the jewel, wears it and goes to the manicure shop where Grace is employed. Grace sees the ring and is greatly agitated. Walter comes to the shop and is told by Grace to follow Blanche. He does so, and communicates with his lawyer and Mr. and Mrs. Walling. They proceed to call on Blanche, who is, of course, surprised. She tells them the ring was a gift and is asked the name of the giver, just as Taylor, Jr., is announced. She points to him and on Mrs. Walling's identifying the ring, he confesses the theft, is placed under arrest and led away leaving the girl to Walter and the ring to Mrs. Walling.

THE SHERIFF'S DAUGHTER (July 11).—The Red-Rock stage has been held up twice by a lone bandit and, as the sheriff and his posse have been unable to catch him, the president of the Phoenix Bank offers a reward of $5,000 for his capture, dead or alive. He also sends to the Pinkerton detective headquarters for a man to help capture the bandit. The man arrives and gets his first clue from the bank president, who suspects the sheriff of Red-Rock. The detective follows up the clue and in an effort to get the resired information, he falls in love with the sheriff's daughter. The manager of the Big Strike Mine is also in love with the sheriff's daughter, but she prefers the detective, whom she believes to be a prospector. As the detective is a stranger in that locality, the sheriff suspects him of being the robber and plans to capture him red-handed. The bank president has arranged with the detective to take the next shipment of gold to Red-Rock by wagon instead of by stage; he also informs the sheriff of the special shipment. Through the medium of his daughter, the erstwhile prospector is informed of this fact, and immediately leaves town, which causes the sheriff to feel sure of his man. The trap is laid by the sheriff to capture or kill the "prospector," likewise the trap is laid by the detective to get the sheriff. The shipment is sent, the sheriff and his deputies lay in waiting for the bandit, who attempts to hold up the wagon, but is shot, and, when his mask is removed, all concerned are surprised to find that the "lone bandit" is none other than the manager of the Big Strike Mine, whom no one suspected. The detective receives the good wishes of the sheriff and the hand of his daughter.

OVER THE HILLS TO THE POOR HOUSE (July 12).—Jim Downs is an habitual drunkard and leaves his home, wife and children. The poor woman in despair writes to her husband, telling him that unless he sends money quickly she and the children will have to seek refuge in the poor house, Saturday. Jim, when he receives the letter, is as usual, three parts full, but he scrawls a letter which reads: "Dear Martha.—Try and not move until Monday, and I will arrange my affairs so that we can all go to the poor house together. Lovingly, Jim."

THE HYPNOTIST (July 12).—The clubs were the only bone of contention between McKendal and his young wife. She insisted that he neglected her, but he resisted all her appeals, and still kept coming home early in the morning. As a last resort, she left her home after his usual appearance at 6 A. M., and went to her parents. Her father was a renowned professor who was convinced that her husband could be cured of his erring ways by hypnotic suggestion. He 'phones a mesmerist, who appears in a flash of fire and smoke. The professor, after his alarm subsides, tells what he desires—it is the reformation of his son-in-law—but the hypnotist misunderstands his explanation and proceeds to put the professor himself under his power. The professor throws years off his shoulders and returns to his college days when he was himself a young-man-about-town. In the midst of his exhilaration, McKendal appears in quest of his wife and the two exit, followed by the hypnotist, the professor's wife and daughter. The professor and his son-in-law jump into an auto for a joy ride, but the power of the hypnotist keeps them under restraint; even when the auto explodes and the two are landed by the side of a railroad track. The hypnotist calms the shrieking mother and daughter, and, by simply waving his arms, restores the professor and his son-in-law to themselves.

THE STRANDED ACTOR (July 13).—Two actors, who are down on their luck and out of an engagement, are walking the ties to the next town, carrying their trunk. They sit down to rest when one of them, who has a nail in his shoe which has been annoying him, sees a newspaper, which he picks up and tears off a piece. The other actor starts to read the paper and an article on the front page attracts his attention. It is to the effect that should John Silas Higgins return to his native village he would find a fortune of $75,000 and his old sweetheart awaiting him. He has an idea immediately, that here is a chance to get a good square meal and possibly some ready money. He at once tells his partner of his scheme and the partner agrees. They go to the edge of a wood and, opening their trunk, proceed to make themselves up to appear like what they suppose the advertised personage would look like. Having gotten themselves up in true western style, they start, and on the way they perceive a bottle of gold paint on a table in front of a second-hand store. This they appropriate, and, picking some stones up from the street, they paint them so that they will look similar to nuggets. Armed with all the proofs (and the get up), that they are fresh from the West, they go to the girl's house, where they are wined and dined. Everything is going nicely until the old girl receives a letter from the real Silas Higgins. She then discovers that they are imposters. She excuses herself in order to notify the police. In the meantime the actors get a peep at the letter that she has left in the adjoining room, and they think it best to be on their way. A lively chase then follows. In order to throw off the pursuers, they try to get away in autos, motor boats, etc. They finally succeed in losing the crowd and make their way to where their trunk is hidden, and quickly change into their street clothes. They have a lively time, and although had a run for it, they are amply repaid by the good square meal that they have had.

SELIG.

UNDER SUSPICION (July 8).—"Danny," an orpan through no fault of his own, becomes a waif of the streets, without home, friends or money. Small in size and young in years, he is unable to secure work and, finally, arrives at a point where he faces starvation. To satisfy the cravings of his little stomach he is forced to steal. For this a strong armed officer of the law arrests him, and the next day he is brought before Judge Lanshaw, of the Juvenile Court, for sentence. Frank Weston, a lawyer, becomes interested in "Danny," and asks permission to adopt him. This is granted and "Danny," overjoyed at the thought of having a really truly father and mother, accompanies him to the Weston home. Mrs. Weston receives him with open arms, and Danny is made clean and comfortable. A love for his new parents is born within his manly little bosom, and he resolves to some day show his appreciation.

Mrs. Weston is reading a book, when the phone rings. Having nothing else at hand, she places a ten dollar bill in the book to mark the place where she was reading. Later, forgetting about the misplaced bill, she discovers its loss and is worried about it. That afternoon she loans the book to a Mrs. Rich, one of her friends. Mrs. Rich drops her pocketbook, which is found and returned by "Danny." Pleased with his honesty Mrs. Rich gives him a crisp new ten dollar bill. Mrs. Weston notices the bill in "Danny's" possession and thinks that he has stolen hers.

"Danny," thinking to surprise his foster parents, buys presents for them with his money. Mrs. Rich discovers the lost bill inside the book and goes to return it to the Weston home in person. She arrives upon the scene, just as the Westons are about to denounce "Danny" for a thief, and by her explanation everything is righted and the shadow of suspicion is lifted for all time from "Danny."

THE VOW OF YSOBEL (July 9).—With the advent of the Gringos, or white people, into Old Mexico, many picturesque, and often-times thrilling romances took places. One in particular that was long remembered on the Mexican border was that of Ysobel Juan and the young American doctor, Frank Livingston.

As was the custom in Mexican families, Don Juan, Ysovel's father, had arranged for her to marry young Jose, the son of a rich neighboring Don. Ysobel, just passing sixteen and with a mind of her own, had other views upon the subject of her own marriage, and Jose did not figure in them. So when the handsome, young Dr. Livingston made his appearance upon the scene and began to cast longing eyes towards Ysobel, that hoydenish young lady straightway fell head over heels in love with him, much to the disgust of Jose. This jealousy found its climax on the day that Ysobel and Livingston went horseback riding together out along the Verduga Gorge.

Jose, filled with hatred and liquor, decided to do away with his white rival. So, in an unwatched moment, Jose, all but severed Livingston's saddle girth. As the happy young couple were passing over a particularly dangerous part of the old trail, the girth gave way, and the young doctor was hurled headlong into the chasm below. Looking over the precipice edge, Ysobel discerned the body of her lover in a tangled mass at the bottom of the gorge, but by some strange act of providence he was still alive. To her screams for help who should answer but Jose. In order to make the Mexican save Livingston's life, Ysobel was forced to promise herself in marriage to him. This she vowed and Livingston was rescued by Jose.

In order to prove how he had accomplished the rescue, he and a party of not too friendly Dons, again returned to the spot of the accident. While explaining the circumstances, Jose was accidently bumped by another rider, and, loosing his balance, he went tumbling over the precipice edge and into the gorge below. When they reached his side he was dead. Livingston soon recovered from his experience, and long and happy were the ceremonies that marked his wedding to Ysobel Juan.

HIS MASTERPIECE (July 11).—Jahn Schmidt, first violinist in the orchestra of the International Opera House, has reached the age when he is being gradually pushed aside by younger blood. He incurs the displeasure of the Prima Donna, who com-

GREAT NORTHERN

RELEASE FOR SATURDAY, JUNE 29th

HOW TO MAKE A REPUTATION

A clever subject in which an artist "dies" in order to live. Length 711 feet

A BATH WITH CONSEQUENCES

A snappy little comedy. Length 287 feet

RELEASE FOR SATURDAY, JULY 6th

THE TWO SISTERS

A dramatic production of excellent quality

ON THE SAME REEL

COPPER INDUSTRY IN SPAIN

An educational subject of unusual interest

SOLD ONLY THROUGH FILM SUPPLY CO., OF AMERICA

GREAT NORTHERN FILM CO., 7 E. 14th St., N. Y.

(NORDISK FILM CO. OF COPENHAGEN.)

LUX FILMS

The Acme of Excellence

Released Friday, July 5, 1912

THE EMPTY HOLSTER

Western Drama --- Length 860 feet

A SPLENDID WESTERN DRAMA

R. PRIEUR, 10 EAST 15th STREET NEW YORK CITY

Telephone, 3427 Stuyvesant

SOLD ONLY THROUGH FILM SUPPLY COMPANY OF AMERICA

plains against his incompetency. This results in his dismissal from the company. The stigma of discord from such an organization is a serious block in the way of similar employment, and, being unsuccessful in his search for work, he devotes all his time to the composition of an opera. When his masterpiece is completed, he is at the end of his financial resources, but is buoyed up with faith in ultimate acceptance and success of his composition. The old story of rebuffs and heartaches is repeated and repeated again, and, as a culmination of his trouble, he finds himself without even a place to lay his tired head.

Hugging his life's work to his breast, he wanders in a sort of a daze through the busy streets. He is knocked down by a passing auto, loses his manuscript, and is carried insensible to the hospital. His manuscript is found by a passer-by, and through a chain of circumstances it falls into the hands of the conductor of Jahn's old orchestra. He, realizing its artistic worth, unscrupuously appropriates it as his own. Under a new title, it is accepted and produced his company, and its first performance takes place the night Jahn is discharged from the hospital as a convalescent. From force of habit, his steps are directed towards his old stage door. As the strains of music float from the house he recognizes his composition, and, in a frenzy, he tries to assert his claim. He is ejected, but invests his last cent in a seat to the gallery, where he witnesses the success of his masterpiece and its supposed composer.

A MAIL ORDER HYPNOTIST (July 12).—Mary Johnson is the center of attraction for the Rubeville farmers' sons, and is especially sought after by Jim Hudson and Lucius Milker. Lucius has the best of it in Mary's affections, and Jim casts about for something to make his stock stronger. He reads in one of the weekly papers the ad. of a correspondence school, which guarantees to teach the wonderful art of hypnotism in thirty lessons. Jim pictures to himself the added advantage he would possess over his rival by the knowledge of this power, and starts to save up his money for this course. Meanwhile he is steadily loosing ground with Mary, while Lucius gains.

At last Jim has money enough to buy the course in hypnotism and he does so. He studies the lessons in his own room and his efforts to hypnotize himself are most amusing. Finally, feeling that he has mastered the subject he starts out to sway his new found power over everyone he comes in contact with. Cows, horses, and chickens are cautiously approached by Jim and on all he attempts to practice his new art. The barnyard inhabitants, however, prove poor subjects, and his experiences in this direction afford many a laugh for the crowd that eagerly follows him. When he finally meets and tries to hypnotize Mary, his rival, Lucius, thinks it time to interfere, and he does so in rather a rough way. Jim, realizing that he has made a fool of himself, gives up all hope of winning Mary, and, tossing his mail order course aside, he turns to his chores on the farm.

THE LOS ANGELES POLICE DEPARTMENT (July 12).—An instructive and entertaining educational subject showing the police drills of a large city.

BIOGRAPH.

AN INDIAN SUMMER (June 8).—The lonely old widower arrives in town and seeks out a pleasant, homelike boarding place. The house he selects may be pleasant and homelike, but most of all it is owned, if not operated, by a widow—her daughter being the real manager. The widow and widower are impressed with each other at first sight, and a very pretty romance is imminent, but it came very near being spoiled. The widower realizes that his hair is both white and scant and so feels that unless he shows a little less age, his chances with the widow are slim. Hence he writes to a hair tonic manufacturer for aid. This letter he tries to keep under cover, but the widow sees his efforts to hide it, and, of course, imagines it is from another woman, so turns about to make him jealous. A most unique trick of fate smooths out the ruffles.

MAN'S GENESIS (July 11).—This subject is a distinct departure from the conventional motion picture production, depicting, as it clearly does, a theory of grave importance—Darwin's argument as to the evolution of man. To introduce the subject, we show an old man telling the story of man to his grandchildren. The story is that of the life of "Bruteforce" and "Weakhands" in the primeval village. The bare fist at this period was the only weapon and, as you may imagine, the law was "might is right." The boy, "Weakhands," stood but small chance against the powerful "Bruteforce," and this condition forced him to exercise his brain, hence it was only through his cunning that he managed to win the girl "Lilywhite," for his lack of prowess made him unpopular as a suitor. "Weakhands" and "Lilywhite," however, are beset with dangers at the hands of "Bruteforce," who would break up their little home. It is now that the woe of "Weakhands" is darkest, and he despairs until by accident he discovers a new force. Here the brain becomes active and the first invention, the stone hammer, is evolved, and the first conflict between brains and brawn results in victory for brains.

PATHE.

PATHE'S WEEKLY, NO 27 (July 1).—Sydney Australia, The Governod General of Australia, Lord Denman, and his wife, Lady Denman, open the Royal Agricultural Show.

Taft, Cal. An oil gusher, flowing 10,000 barrels a day, catches fire and burns fiercely for four days.

Sissone, France. Lieutenant Arrêteau, of the artillery, duplicates his feat of driving tandem 40 untrained horses around the parade grounds.

Chicago, Ill. Ex-President Roosevelt arrives for the Republican National Convention and addresses the crowd from the balcony of the Congress Hotel.

Cokertown, N. Y. The farmers hereabouts are following the new vogue in farming and are using dynamite to remove the boulders in their fields.

Worcester, Mass. The United Commercial Travellers hold their annual convention in this city.

Seattle, Wash. The great Northwestern Development Congress, headed by Louis W. Hill, who recently succeeded his father, James J. Hill, as head of the Great Northern Railway, is received with a shower of roses.

Portland, Ore. The aviator Christofferson, for the Panama Exposition, in San Francisco, flies from the roof of the Multnomah Hotel.

Washington, D. C. A new automatic device for delivering and collecting mail, which needs no one to operate it, is being tried by the Government on the Chesapeake Beach Branch of the Pennsylvania R. R.

Lyons, France. In the auto races here, a sensational accident occurs, in which the mechanician is killed and the driver badly injured.

Among the Exhibitors.

Elizabeth, N. J.—Plans are being prepared for the erection of a new theater here on Elizabeth Ave., near Spring Street.

Toronto, Ont., Can.—G. W. Bedell of 130 Adelaide St., secured a permit for the erection of a moving picture theater to be erected on the northeast corner of Bloor Street and St. Clarens Avenue, at a cost of $25,000.

Buhl, Minn.—Messrs. Rochon & Jones, proprietors of the Star Theater, have purchased the John Neimela Building on State Street, and will convert it into a theater.

Reading, Pa.—Ground has been sold by Charles H. Wieand, on the north side of Cotton Street, on which a moving picture theater will be erected.

Grand Rapids, Mich.—A. M. Cooper has sold the Bijou Theater to Arthur Eswien.

Newcastle, Ind.—William H. Elliott purchased the Alcazar Theater.

Warren, Arkansas.—A new moving picture theater was opened here recently under the management of the J. M. Ensor Film Exchange of Little Rock.

McGregor, Tenn.—Smith & Moorehead have let a contract for the erection of a new opera house here, seating capacity 1,000.

Ordway, Colo.—Phil Patrick, the owner, has spared no expense in fitting up one of the nicest theaters in the valley. The location is the Leary Building, recently vacated by the pool hall. It has been remodeled, with a regular theater front, two exits in the rear, and many other improvements. The seating capacity will accommodate 250 people.

Hickman, Ky.—H. N. Cowgill is converting the old store of Helm & Co. into a moving picture theater.

Fremont, Neb.—The Theater Exchange has purchased the Bijou Moving Picture Theater from Parr Bros.

Reading, Pa.—An addition will be erected to the moving picture theater at 10th and Spring Streets.

Reading, Pa.—Plans have been completed by Architect Calvin James Young for the erection of a new moving picture theater to be erected at 17½ and Cotton Streets, by Frank A. Gould.

Baltimore, Md.—Isaac Cluster, 669 W. Baltimore Street, will erect a moving picture theater at 667 W. Baltimore Street.

Wausau, Wis.—Adolph Holub has purchased the interest of Judd Alexander and Cal. Pier in the Bijou Theater here.

Whitewater, Wis.—A. J. Gilbertson has sold the White Theater to George and Hermon Kahlke, of Elkhorn, who took possession.

Hickman, Ky.—H. N. Cowgill of this city, will be the proprietor and owner of a new motion-picture show in this city. He is busy repairing the old store building of Fuqua, Helm & Co., converting it into a theater.

Fort Wayne, Ind.—Gottie Rosenbaum of Kalamazoo, Mich., will erect a new theater here.

Salt Lake, Utah.—The contract was awarded to the James Stewart & Co., for the erection of a new theater here.

Monticello, Ind.—Mr. and Mrs. Elmer Zink, of Gilman, Ill., purchased the Arc moving picture show from Mr. and Mrs. J. C. Downey.

West Palm Beach, Fla.—Carl Kettler will erect a new moving picture theater, seating capacity 700.

Charleston, W. Va.—J. B. Crowley has awarded a contract to W. A. Abbitt to erect a new theater here.

MOVING PICTURE FILMS FOR SALE.

Over one million feet in stock. Dramas, Comedies, Scenic, Historical. Largest Dealers in new and second-hand films in the United States. Reels from $2.50 up.

Catalogue free for the asking

ACME FILM CO., 132 West 37th St., New York.

FINE ART SLIDES.

We make Advertising, Announcement, Lecture, Scientific, and Slides of every description. Transparencies beautifully colored. High class work only. Send for our new catalogue.

A. J. CLAPHAM, 132 W. 37th St., New York.

"The House of a Thousand Features"

Big stocks of exclusive two and three-reel features; big advertising; reasonable prices.

IMPERIAL FEATURE FILM CO.

121 Fourth Avenue, Pittsburgh, Pa.

INTERNATIONAL FEATURES!!!

SENSATIONAL 2 and 3 REEL MASTER PRODUCTIONS
WRITE FOR LIST
ORDER YOUR COPIES IN ADVANCE
Elegant and Elaborate Posters For All Feature Films

Continuous importations of exclusive and selected features.
Exclusive Territory granted to purchasers of INTERNATIONAL FEATURES, FREE!
Sample prints of our features can be seen in our show rooms, 5 WEST 14th STREET.

INTERNATIONAL FILM TRADERS, Inc.,

5 West 14th St.
New York City

Importers of Exclusive Features, U. S. and Canadian Rights.

Mr. New Jersey Exhibitor

Here is an opportunity for a REAL FEATURE.

Have secured the exclusive State rights for New Jersey on

"A Trip to the Garden of Allah" remarkable motion pictures showing actual scenes and incidents of the most wonderful and elaborate production in the history of the stage.

3000 Feet of Marvelous, Novel and Historic Features taken in the great Sahara Desert. By special permission of Liebler & Co. Elaborate 1, 3 and 8 sheets lithographs, heralds, newspaper cuts; also beautiful lobby display.

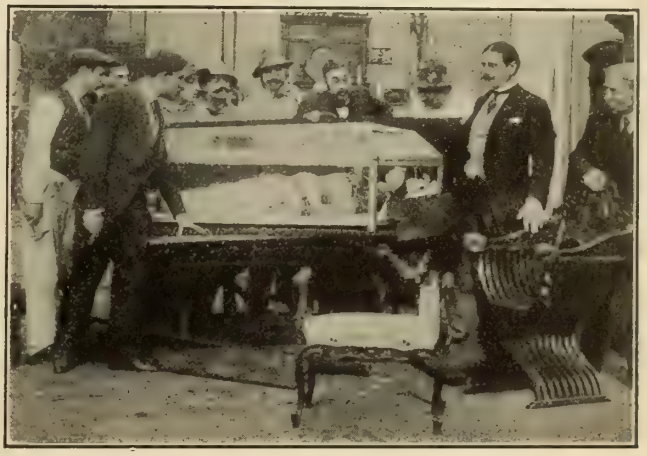
This attraction can be secured on a renting or percentage basis by wire or letter to

Hill Feature Film Co.

Gaiety Building
BROADWAY & 46th ST. NEW YORK

The Glass Coffin
For Rent



This wonderful three reel dramatic feature now ready for booking in Greater New York and New Jersey.

WARNER'S FEATURES

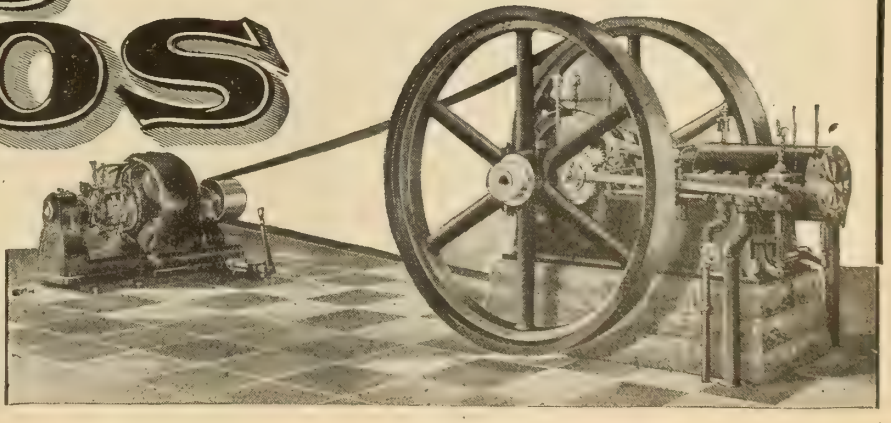
Renting Department, Suite 806-8 Exchange Building
145 West 45th Street New York City

THE FOOS

Special Electric, Gas, Gasoline, and Kerosene Engines

furnish light equal to the best central station service at less than half the cost. Ask us how we can reduce your charges for current from 25 to 75 per cent. Bulletin S. E. 98.

FOOS GAS ENGINE CO., 809 Linden Ave., Springfield, Ohio



Independent Film Stories

THANHOUSER.

THE PORTRAIT OF THE LADY ANNE (July 7).—It hung in the place of honor in the old Colonial house, and the daughter of the family was very proud of it, for she could prove by the likeness that she was a descendant of the proud Lady Anne, who had been a noted belle one hundred years ago.

The portrait had been painted before Lady Anne was married, and only a few years before she died, leaving a broken-hearted husband, and one little child. There were rumors that the Lady Anne had died of a broken heart, because she believed that she had sent one of her disappointed suitors to death, but it was only a tradition, and the girl never believed it.

The girl was the living picture of Lady Anne. Everyone told her so, and she had no reason to doubt it. Naturally she liked to watch the painting, and knowing the other woman's life story, or believing she did, she wondered often what her own would be.

They had a house party at her home one time, and at night there was a dance. The girl, in a spirit of fun, took all the other young women up in the attic and fitted them out with costumes of days gone by. She herself wore the dress in which Lady Anne had posed for her portrait, for it emphasized the resemblance.

At the dance, the girl and her fiance had a quarrel. It seemed most serious to her at the time, although it was only a trifle. Still, she returned him his ring and told him that all was over between them forever. For the moment she believed it herself. So she flounced upstairs, took off her gala dress, and was thoroughly miserable.

The young man was unhappy, too. The others were dancing, but he stood sadly in one corner. A moment later he brightened up, for his sweetheart entered, and with a radiant smile, went over to him. He welcomed her gladly, they danced, and all his troubles were forgotten.

It wasn't the girl he was dancing with, however. She was upstairs in her room at the time. Finally the music drew her out, but as she was not dressed for the party, she slipped out the window and peered in the downstairs room, hoping to see a thoroughly miserable Jack. To her amazement, she saw him dancing with—herself.

She could not comprehend until she had cautiously made her way into the library. Then she saw that the portrait of the Lady Anne was missing and she realized that a miracle had been performed in her behalf. She went back to her room and reverently picked up the gown of the Lady Anne. Out of the pocket dropped a note, written one hundred years ago. She read and understood.

The old legend was true; the Lady Anne had lost the man she loved because of a foolish quarrel, and had died of grief. The girl knew that what she had seen was meant as a lesson to her, and she decided to be guided by it.

The lovers made up and never quarreled again, and they say that the portrait of the Lady Anne was seen to smile on their wedding day, but as one matter of fact individual said, perhaps it was only the reflection of the sun upon the glass.

Perhaps! But the girl does not believe it, and never will.

PA'S MEDICINE (July 9).—Willie West, a small boy, is very fond of his pet rabbit. He is unhappy because Hank (the rabbit) seems to be losing his former good health. When Willie tries to obtain assistance from his family, he quickly discovers that he has chosen the wrong time, for his father is feeling bad himself, and has no sympathy to waste on rabbits. A doctor is also hard-hearted.

Willie is sent to the drug store to fill a perscription for his father, and he decided to see if the medicine will not cure the rabbit. To hide his wrongdoing from his parents, Willie fills the bottle with water.

In the meantime the druggist has discovered that he has made an awful mistake, and put poison in the dose. He goes for the doctor, and the two hasten around to the house, in hopes of being able to save West's life. They find he is still alive, and work hard to keep him from dying. While everybody is busy, Willie enters, and wants to know why the nasty medicine has killed his rabbit instead of curing it. Then there is a general rejoicing, except on the part of Willie.

THE HAZERS HAZED (July 9).—Two new "freshies" arrived at a college town. Some of the boys were at the station and saw the "jays" come in. They were of the very green species, and their arrival was the signal for a score of plans to make the college a very hot place indeed for them. They were welcomed by the students in the presence of their professors with the utmost consideration, but as soon as the dean was out of ear-shot, the unhappy freshmen were thrust into their room and kept prisoners there until night. At midnight, when the professors were all soundly asleep, the "freshies" were roused from their slumbers and given the "third degree" in great shape. They were chased, beaten and abused generally, and were finally locked again in their bedroom, while their tormentors indulged in a drink and a smoke.

Now these particular freshmen resented being "hazed," so they determined to be revenged. They managed to escape from the window of their room and, reaching the college campus, turned in an alarm of fire. The boys in their "frat" room were suddenly disturbed by the firemen climbing through the windows and drenching them with the fire hose. The "freshies" stayed long enough to see the fun, then they "beat it" for the train, and went 'way back home.

NURSIE AND THE KNIGHT (July 12).—The rich little boy was seven years old and his kind Mama gave him a birthday party. A number of children were invited to wish him happy returns of the day, and it promised to be a wonderful event in the child's life.

There was one unpleasant feature, however. The host's cousin, who was a boy of twelve, therefore almost venerable, was a guest, and the prettiest little girl of the party soon became this "old man's darling." As the rich little boy had favored her with his attention it angered him to find that he had a rival in his elderly relative. Trying to make this clear only caused the elder boy to laugh, and brought down on the host a severe reproof from his nurse, and even threats of punishment.

Among the presents given to the birthday boy was a book of fairy stories from the girl of his heart. His mother, at his earnest request, read them to him that night in bed, after his guests had departed, and they made a deep impression upon him. No wonder that the story ran through his sleepy head as he dropped into slumber.

He saw himself a gallant knight, wandering through a strange kingdom and halting when he saw a sign announcing that the King had determined to give his daughter to any brave noble who would slay a terrible dragon.

Did our young hero see the beautiful princess, and was she the "old man's darling" of the birthday party? He did, and she was. Also, they fell desperately in love at first sight, much to the anger of "The Black Duke," who strangely resembled the big cousin and who loved the Princess despite the disparity of their years.

The Dream Knight killed the dragon, but the dastardly dark duke managed to induce the King not to pay the promised reward. The claims of the Knight were ignored and the tears of the Princess disregarded. In fact, she was locked up in her room for daring to think of the stranger.

Now what could a brave knight do under the circumstances? The only knightly thing was to enter the castle, rescue the Princess, and put to the sword all who dared to interfere with him. So this was exactly what our little noble did.

He displayed surprising ability as a swordsman, killed everybody in sight, and carried the girl away in triumph. Then something happened. Nursie appeared. Now, a boy of seven may be very brave, indeed, and able to fight dragons and knights and defy kings and dastard dukes, but when Nursie says "Jump through this," he jumps. So when Nursie blundered into the dream the knights and castles and the romantic surroundings speedily faded away, and all that was left was a sleepy little boy, in his pajamas and in his crib, blinking solemnly and vaguely wondering what had really happened. Then he turned over andwent to sleep again, and this time he did not dream at all.

MAJESTIC.

THE COOK CAME BACK (July 7).—Miss Slim's boarding house is a mecca for old maids who have turned their backs on conceited men forever. The colored cook is the only man allowed in the house, and even he is dispensed with when Miss Slim discovers his family in her kitchen eating heartily while her boarders are clamoring for enough food to keep them from starving. A woman cook is advertised for, and the advertisement falls into the hands of two striking waiters, who, being desperate, arrange a plan whereby one of them can impersonate a woman and thereby get the coveted position. Miss Slim appears to possess a beautiful head of red hair, when, in reality she is as bald as a billiard ball. An afternoon nap by the open window results in her losing her red wig out of the window, and the waiter finding it just when he needed a wig to complete his disguise. He succeeds in getting the position, but during a secret visit of his friend, the cat is let out of the bag, and the colored cook is welcomed back to his old place in Miss Slim's kitchen.

THE WIDOWER'S WIDOW (July 9).—Gordon Trent, widower, is madly in love with Matilda Byron, a vivacious widow. Trent's daughter, Helen, opposes the match, believing that her own place would be usurped in her father's life. At the earnest request of her father, Helen consents to visit her prospective step-mother. During the visit she meets the widow's son, Jack, just out of college, and they fall in love. Helen takes Jack into her confidence and explains to him that she wishes to prevent their parents' marriage if possible. In order to give Jack a reason for interfering, she tells him that her father is bald-headed and wears a wig, thus deceiving his mother. Seeing a chance for mischief and an opportunity to please Helen, Jack exposes the old man, which has the desired effect. As a result of his work, Jack is forbidden to call upon Helen by her father. "Love will find a way," and Jack thinks out a plan to foil the purpose of Trent. The plan succeeds admirably, as it not only makes the marriage of the young people possible, but also that of their parents. In the end nothing remains to mar the happiness of all concerned.

FATHER'S BUST (July 9).—Michael Angelo Mudslinger is a sculptor who has a hard time paying his rent. He is about to be ejected from his studio when a note from one I. Cohen asks him to make a bust of his dear father who died twenty years before. Mudslinger is discouraged when he discovers that he cannot get a picture of Cohen's father, but finally decides to make the bust from a description furnished by the Cohen family. He works hard on the bust and finishes it in short order, much to the astonishment of the janitor who is an interested critic of his work. The sculptor goes to inform his customers that the bust is ready, after instructing the janitor to carefully clean up the studio. The janitor accidentally knocks over the precious bust and is so frightened when he sees the result of the accident, that he proceeds to model one himself. The harder he works the more excited he becomes, and his surprise is great when he sees the bust take its original form, even to the large diamond in its shirt front.

GAUMONT.

WRITTEN IN BLOOD (July 4).—While fighting side by side in the same regiment through the bloody battle of Vauchamps, in which encounter the army of Napoleon defended French soil against the invasion of British soldiers under the command of Wellington, two young fellow lieutenants, Lesparre and Gerard are shot down in the thick of the combat. Both are left for dead on the field after the scrimmage is over, but fortune has willed otherwise and Lesparre regains consciousness at the break of day. Little by little, the terrible events of the day before crowd in on his aching brain. He begins to wonder where his fellow comrade, Lieutenant Gerard could now be. Gaining gradual strength he looks about him and recognizes amongst the heroes strewn on the battlefield the body of his dear friend. With a cry of terror he leaps towards the corpse and frantically presses his ear on its breast in hope that its heart may yet be beating. There seems to be no action, however, and the valiant Lesparre breaks down and weeps over the body of his favorite associate. While fingering his uniform, Lesparre discovers a letter in the prostrate lieutenant's pocket and, pulling it out from its resting place, reads its contents. To his surprise he finds out that it a communication received the day before from the attorneys of the valiant soldier announcing that an inheritance of $800,000 awaits him upon proper identification. This disclosure unbalances the mind of Lesparre and transforms him from friend into fiend. From his own pocket he takes his pocketbook and exchanges it for the letter he had removed from the coat of his comrade, thereby pretending to be Lieutenant Gerard himself.

Months pass by. The war is now over. Lesparre returns to his home town and proceeds at once to claim the inheritance of his unfortunate companion. He bribes two fellow citizens to swear falsely as to his identity and shrewdly obtains the possession of the fortune that rightfully belongs to Lieutenant Gerard. Not fearing any trouble from his comrade whom he left apparently cold in death at Vauchamps, he proceeds to live in the magnificent estate and becomes known throughout the region as the brave lieutenant who had received a nigh-mortal wound during the bloody campaign of the English in France.

In the meantime the rightful Lieutenant Gerard had been carried from the battlefield and sent to a hospital when the army surgeon had discovered faint signs of life in the prostrate form. After the most careful medical attention the lieutenant is saved and rapidly improves in health. He requests leave of convalescence from the hospital for a period of six weeks. In preparing to depart he asks for the letters and effects that had been removed from his clothes while being carried from the field of combat, and to his horror and dismay discovers that the letter directing him to his attorneys in order to claim his inheritance is missing. Instead he finds the pocketbook of Lesparre. He hastens to the lawyer's office, where he is ridiculed as a pretender, but soon succeeds in establishing his identity. The attorneys show him the signed papers in which two tax payers testify that the first claimant was a Gerard. To further complicate matters the heir discovers that one of these false witnesses is no other than the ex-canteen keeper of the regiment, Bersac by name. He hunts him up and discovers him with his wife in the cafe of which he is proprietor. He accuses them of aiding the thief, whereupon they break down and give full confession. Furthermore, they return to Gerard every cent of the money that Lesparre had given them for their perjured testimony, if but he accept their willingness to help him run down the wrong-doer. Gerard assents, and seeks out his former friend. He enters the ground of the mansion alone and, invading the house without being properly presented by the servants, finally meets Lesparre face to face in the study room. The false claimant is frightfully disturbed at the figure of his former comrade, whom he never expected again to see in life, but observing that there is no possible oppor-

Direction J. D. Williams Management Wm. H. Bell

INTERNATIONAL PICTURES

Controlled by

The Greater J. D. Williams Amusement Company, Ltd

Capital, £200,000.

The World's largest dealers in Motion Picture Films, machines and accessories. We are on the market for everything Biographic. No Moving Picture Film and equipment proposition too large for consideration. Our Specialty—Exclusive Australasian Rights on the best long feature subjects produced, and the latest successful supply novelties.

PRINCIPAL EXCHANGES.

610 George Street, Syndey, New South Wales. Melbourne, Brisbane, Perth and Wellington, New Zealand.

Send samples and communications to our purchasing offices as follows—J. A. Hayden, Dewar House, 11 Haymarket, London, England. Louis M. Noto, 2035 Potomac Avenue, Chicago, Ill.

IMPORTANT:—When writing us direct remember that letters with insufficient postage are delayed.

Use our Developing System

A. J. CORCORAN, Inc.

11 John Street, New York

MAKE YOUR OWN FILMS!

Every Exhibitor Can Do It.

Write Us To Show You How.

SPECIAL EVENT FILM CO.

248 West 35th Street, New York

We Buy, Sell and Exchange Moving Picture Cameras, Printers, Perforators.

USE BRADY'S LICENSED POSTER

124 EAST 14th STREET, N.Y.

"La Cinematografia Italiana ed Estera"

IS ITALY'S LEADING PAPER FOR THE ANIMATED PICTURE

PUBLISHED FORTNIGHTLY.

36, 36 and 40 large pages, 8 shillings per annum ($1.60).

Editor-prop'r: Prof. GUALTIERO I. FABRI.

Via Cumiana, 31 (Barriera S. Paolo) Torino, Italy

MOTION PICTURE MACHINES

ALL MAKES.

Full line of supplies. Send for Catalogues and Lists. We repair Machines.

MOTION PICTURE MACHINES WANTED.

HARBACH & CO.,

809 Filbert St. - Philadelphia.

MAN'S DUTY

Unusual War Story, Released Wednesday, July 3rd.

RELIANCE

RIP VAN WINKLE

(2 reels) released Sat., July 6th. Taken in the heart of the Catskill Mountains. Tremendous cast. Special 3 and 1 sheet posters.

COMING RELEASES: "Grandpa," Wed., July 10th. "The Toy 'Phone," Sat., July 13th. "At Cripple Creek," Wed., July 17th. "Love Me, Love My Dog," Sat., July 20th.

Sold only through he Film Supply Co. of America

CARLTON MOTION PICTURE LABORATORIES

540 W. 21st St., N. Y.

CAMERA WANTED

Also a complete A-1 Outfit, Film, etc., for taking Motion Pictures. Can use A-1 CAMERA MAN. Recommended.

Ohio Milano Dantes Inferno Co., Newport, Ky.

THE ENTERPRISE (Portable) CALCIUM GAS OUTFIT

Price with carrying case, $35.00

Is the only Substitute for Electricity for projecting Motion Picture or Stereopticon Views and is the

ONLY SATISFACTORY PORTABLE OUTFIT

because it operates by WATER PRESSURE, IS CONSTANT, REGULAR AND RELIABLE and has no complicated spring valves to corrode, choke up and otherwise get out of order. Is patented.

"OXONE" in SQUARE CAKES is most satisfactory for the production of oxygen gas.

For Sale by Dealers Everywhere.

Enterprise Optical Mfg. Co. MANUFACTURERS 564-572 W. Randolph Street, CHICAGO, ILL.

LECTURES ON SPECIAL FILMS

EACH $1.00 PER COPY Prepared by W. STEPHEN BUSH POSTAGE PAID

Lectures for French-American Film Company

"CAMILLE" BY SARAH BERNHARDT and "MADAME SANS GENE" BY MADAME REJANE

One Dollar for Both (Typewritten)

Also in printed form the following:

HOW TO PUT ON THE PASSION PLAY (Second Edition)

For Pathe Freres World-Renowned Production

HOW TO PUT ON THE CRUSADERS, OR JERUSALEM DELIVERED

For World's Best Film Co., Feature Film (Copyright 1911)

KEY AND COMPLETE LECTURE FOR DANTE'S INFERNO

For Milano Film Co. (Italy), Five-Reel Production

ORDER NOW Only a limited edition of each $1.00 PER COPY

COPYRIGHTED AND FOR SALE ONLY BY

MOVING PICTURE WORLD, Box 226, Madison Square P. O., New York City

tunity of escape, he resorts to a strategem. He feigns entire willingness to turn over his ill-gotten fortune to the rightful owner, and under the guise of friendship, escorts Gerard through the grounds and confines of the property. Amongst other places in which he leads him is the Tower prison, where in a most opportune moment, he locks the unsuspecting lieutenant in a dungeon, lighted only by the few rays of light that penetrate through an iron barred window. The frantic Gerard beats desperately at the doors that prevent his liberty, but to no avail, and is forced to suffer the pangs of tower imprisonment. His only friends are a pair of pigeons who happen to have made their home in a chip in the wall of the dungeon. These, however, have been sent to him as deliverers from Heaven, and finally accomplish his escape. Realizing his aloofness from the rest of the world he sees that his only chance for liberty lies with these little feathered creatures. Accordingly he takes out his handkerchief, tears from it a strip on which he writes with a pin, which he inked in the blood of his own arm the words, "Imprisoned in the Tower. Help."

It so happens that the daughter of the Imperial Prosecutor has also prepared a little nest for these very same pigions and has learned to spend many a happy hour on her balcony taming the little feathered creatures. This day she receives a surprise in the form of a strip of cloth tied to the leg of one of the birds. She takes it off and finds the inscription, "Imprisoned in Tower. Help," inscribed upon it in blood. She bears the silent testimony to her father, who chides her for her fanciful dreams. She, however, is not content, and has grown very suspicious that there must be something wrong in the big Tower prison that looms up in the distance from her home. After tying a return message on the leg of the tiny pigeon to the effect of "Hope," she persuades the Imperial Proscutor to take her to the proprietor of the estate. Upon arriving there they find Lesparre and his two former friends, Mr. and Mrs. Bersac, ex-canteen keeper of the regiment. The latter couple have also grown suspicious at not hearing from Gerard after directing him to the estate which he inherited, but Lesparre has allayed their fears by advising that he has agreed to turn everything over and settle all matters with the rightful heir, and that the latter has gone back to the hospital to fully recuperate. This story does not satisfy the Prosecutor's daughter, however, and she produces the little strip of cloth on which the message has been written in blood. The strategy of Lesparre now dawns clearly upon the ex-canteen keeper. He draws a revolver from its holt and holds it at the head of the designing claimant, commanding him to lead them to the door of the prison and to liberate the prisoner so that he might enjoy the inheritance that had been properly left him. The cowardly lieutenant breaks down in full confession and shrinks from this duty, but is forced to complete it at the point of the revolver. Silently they cross the brige that separates the prison from their home and carefully they descend the long narrow winding stairs approaching the prison cell.

They open the rust-encrusted lock and enter. To their horror they find its occupant to be none other than Lieutenant Gerard, who by this time was almost dead from hunger and consumed by the vermin. Bersac, ex-canteen keeper of the regiment, then assumes the upper hand and, upon the advice of the Imperial Prosecutor, locks Lesparre in the cell and liberates the unfortunate Gerard. Everything is now righted. The dastardly Lesparre is suffering his merited punishment and Gerard is now set free, and soon regains his health and fortune. The strange manner of his liberation endears two forms of life to him beyond all description—the pigeons—and the Imperial Prosecutor's daughter, whom he rewards by making his wife and liege lady of his vast estate and holdings.

RELIANCE.

A MAN'S DUTY (July 3).—When the Civil War was declared, it caused great consternation in the home of John Wilson, as he was of Southern birth, while his wife was a Northern woman, and she favored the Federal cause. Their two sons were asked which side they favored. John, the elder, declared he would fight for the South with his father, while Dick, the younger boy, upheld his mother's cause. Wilson became a Confederate colonel, and John lieutenant under his father's command. Dick left his old home in the uniform of the North. At the Union headquarters there was a call for a spy to enter the Confederate lines. Dick was glad to be given the commission. General Lee, commander of all the Southern forces, was warned of this spy and the leadership of his son and they search the woods for the spy. Dick, in the meantime, had overpowered a Confederate soldier and taken his uniform. The scouting party come upon him and think him one of their soldiers, until John, riding up, recognizes his brother. Then they know he must be the spy they are looking for and he is captured. They bring him back to camp, and Wilson sends his son to the guard house. After a court-martial the spy is scentenced to be shot at sunrise. The father's heart is breaking up, but it is his duty as a man and a soldier. The brother of the condemned boy has one last hope, he will appeal to General Lee for clemency. He rides wildly for hours and finally reaches the headquarters of the Confederates. But upon telling his story, he is refused—Lee will no nothing for a spy. Dick is led out to be shot. In the meantime, however, Lee, thinking the matter over, has experienced a change of heart and he despatches a courier with a reprieve. It arrives just in time to save the boy's life. John, riding back to camp, cannot believe his eyes when he sees his brother alive. He is told of the reprieve and how his wild ride was not in vain after all.

RIP VAN WINKLE (July 6).—Rip's story is too well known to need repitition. How he came home drunk one night during a terrible storm and was driven away from the house by his wife, Gretchen. How he wandered up into the mountains and met Hendrick Hudson and his demons who urged him to drink with them. How he fell asleep after drinking and slept for twenty years, awakening finally to find himself an old man. How his false friend, Derrick Von Beekman, claimed his houses and lands while he was away, by pretending to have a document from Rip turning them all over to him. How Derrick married Gretchen and made her very unhappy. How Rip arrived home after twenty years, just in time to save his wife and his home by producing an old, faded document from his game bag, which proved conclusively that nothing belonged to Derrick. The pretty love story between Rip's daughter Meenie and young Heinrich Vedderm, sweethearts since childhood, carries the same interest that it always did.

GRANDPA (July 10).—Tony is a cross and exacting old man who works on the large dry docks of New York. His pretty daughter, Gertrude, is in love with Captain Jim, whose ship is anchored nearby. While on her way to the docks one day with her father's lunch, Gertrude meets him. They go off for a stroll on the docks and forget all about Tony, who every moment is growing more peevish over the non-appearance of his lunch. When the pair finally turn up, it is way past his lunch hour. This makes him more angry with Captain Jim, whom he always had a grudge in for. The old man forbids him ever to see his daughter again. Jim returns to his ship, but that night he sends a note to Gertrude proposing that they elope. The girl agrees. She and Jim are married and then they wire the old man, who refuses emphatically to forgive them. So they go off on Jim's ship. They return a year later. An old friend sees them and their baby. He rushes off to tell Tony, but Tony wants nothing to do even with the baby. A few more years elapse. Jim and his wife are going on a long cruise and decide to put the little girl, Rosanna, in a convent school. On this cruise the mother and father go down with the ship. The old man hears the news and for the first time he breaks down. Knowing where Rosanna is, he decides to get her and bring her home with him. He goes to the school, but the child takes an aversion to her grandfather. However, she is left in his charge, and in the days that follow the old man does all in his power to win the little one over to him. But he cannot awaken one spark of love in her heart. Breaking down under the weight of remorse, his sobbing attracts the child's attention, and for the first time, goes to him of her own free will and puts her arms about his neck. And the old man knows that he need be lonely no longer.

THE TOY PHONE (July 13).—Mr. Webb, struck by the novelty of a little toy phone offered for sale by a street peddler, buys one for his daughter, Ruth. The child is delighted with her new plaything. Her father shows how it can be run from her bedroom to the nursery of her little friend, Gladys, who lives across the street. On the day after the phone is installed, Mr. Webb has occasion to discharge an impertinent gardner, Pedro. He leaves the house, vowing revenge. On the following day, when Mr. Webb is at the office, the Italian returns and steals into the house. Mrs. Webb is alone sewing in Ruth's room. Pedro enters and secures her hand and foot. He attaches his revolver to the door, so that the first one to enter will set is off. He leaves by the window, closing it after him. The woman is terrified and cannot move. Suddenly she remembers the toy phone close at her side. She calls through it to her little girl, who is playing in Gladys' nursery. Ruth finally hears and understands her mother's cry for help. She rushes to her own home and is about to open the door, which would mean her mother's death, when the mother's warning cry causes her to go around to the window. She cannot reach the window and rushes out wildly for help. She finds a policeman, and he goes with her to the window. In the meantime Mr. Webb has returned home and enters the front door. He goes in search of his wife and decides that she must be in Ruth's room. Just as he puts his hand on the door knob, the policeman enters through the window, and, realizing the situation, he pulls the chair, and Mrs. Webb out of the way as the husband enters. The shot misses her. Pedro, repenting his terrible act, rushes back to the house and arrives just in time to hear the shot fired. He comes to the conclusion at once that Mrs. Webb has been killed and falls on his knees in remorse. The door opens and Mrs. Webb enters with her husband, the policeman, and little Ruth. Mr. Webb wants to have the man arrested, but his wife, seeing that Pedro's grief and remorse are real, prevails upon her husband to let him go free. Pedro falls on his knees beside the little girl whose plaything saved her mother from a horrible death.

COMET.

JENKS AND HIS MOTOR BOAT (July 1).—Abner Jenks, who has just purchased a motor boat, has his wife and sons, one seventeen and the other eight years of age, hasten to the wharf, where the graceful little craft is moored, and board her for a sail. When the family is seated Jenks goes forward with all the assurance of a trained "skipper," turns on the power, but the motor fails to respond. He then summons the young salesman, from whom he purchased the boat, and, after instructing Jenks, the salesman disembarks, and the Jenks family glide merrily over the surface of the water. Even though everything is working nicely, Mrs. Jenks is worried, and has grave doubts, as to the efficiency of her spouse as a sailorman, and demands that he take her ashore. In making the turn, Jenks exhibits great nervousness, and nearly swamps the boat. This increases her terror, and in spite of Jenks' assurance that there is no danger, she refuses to be pacified. Jenks finally succeeds in making a landing, where Mrs. Jenks and the boys leave the boat, as she insists that a trip with Jenks at the helm would be anything but safe.

Angered at her doubts as to his ability to run the boat, Jenks starts off alone; only a few hundred yards are traversed, and he scarcely out of sight of the landing, when the motor again "goes dead." Jenks labors diligently to start it, but in vain, so the trim little craft drifts gracefully away. He goes forward, and makes an examination of the spark plug and igniter. Finding them all right, he next turns his attention to the gasoline tank. He removes the cap, and makes an effort to peer in, but cannot see whether there is sufficient gasoline, so he lights a match and holds it over the opening to illuminate the inside. The lighted end of the match drops into the tank and a terrific explosion follows. The boat is blown to atoms, and Jenks mounts heavenward. He is seen coming down head first. By a miracle he is only slightly injured and succeeds in swimming to the hull of the boat, from which he is rescued by a passing yacht.

Broken in spirits, drenched to the skin and shivering with cold, he is landed at a neighboring boathouse, where a sign painter is employed painting a sign, which reads: "Motor Boat For Sale." Jenks goes to him silently, takes the brush from the startled painter's hands, paints the figure "2" before the word "Motor," adds an apostrophe and the letter "s," returns the brush, points in the direction of the river, and goes from the scene with a woe-begone expression.

THE POUGHKEEPSIE INTERCOLLEGIATE REGATTA (July 8).—Aside from the attendant excitement of the several races, to which the best specimens of brawn and sinew, selected from the following colleges: Cornell, Syracuse, Leland Stanford, University of Pennsylvania, Columbia, University of Wisconsin, lent their efforts, the Comet's cameramen added further interest to the film by securing reproductions of the crews in action, attended by their coaches, Courtney of Cornell, Rice of Columbia, Murphy of Leland Stanford, Ward of University of Pennsylvania, Vail of University of Wisconsin, and Ten Eyck of Syracuse.

A reproduction of the start and finish of the Freshmen four and Freshmen eight, and the 'Varsity four and 'Varsity eight, are also vividly shown. Views of the beautifully situated City of Poughkeepsie, resplendent in flags and bunting, and the most wonderfully constructed grandstand ever erected. This stand in itself is a marvel, being built on forty specially constructed flat cars, with seats pitched to a height of twelve feet; its seating capacity is twelve thousand; the structure is four thousand feet long, and is moved a distance of four miles from the starting point, to a location two miles below the Poughkeepsie bridge.

A mass of gaily decorated craft adorns both sides of the course, over which the race is rowed, in view of more than half a million spectators. Every conceivable sort of craft is pressed into service for this occasion, even many that are borrowed from Long Island Sound, and its tributaries.

REPUBLIC.

THE ALL-SEEING EYE (July 15).—Tom O'Hara, the foreman of the Bleecker Lumber Company, is in love with the daughter of his employer, and, although his suit is looked upon with favor by all, his course of true loves does not run smooth, owing to the tactics pursued by Pete Le Faner, a bully, whom Tom had to thrash more than once for his cowardly attacks.

Le Faner has at one time been deeply in love with Rose Baptiste, the beautiful daughter of a lumberjack, but finally tiring of her beauty, he cast her off. The girl told her father who vowed to avenge her honor. The opportunity came when Le Faner followed Tom and his sweetheart, and then purposely picked a quarrel.

Tom, unable to withstand his taunts, sprang at his insultor and, in a few seconds, the men were locked in a deadly embrace, while the girl rushed to the camp for assistance. Tom succeeds in thrashing Pete until the latter cries for mercy, then leaves him while he follows his sweetheart. As Pete is left alone, the father of the girl he has ruined, rushes upon him and makes him pay with his life for the girl's honor. Rose has in the meantime obtained help and, upon returning to the spot where she left the two men, only the dead body of Pete is found. Tom is at once arrested for the murder and is held for the jury. The conscience of the murderer, however, will not permit him to rest, and in a moment of remorse, he confesses his crime to the sweetheart of the man who is awaiting death in a prison cell.

WANTED SCENARIOS

KINEMACOLOR COMPANY OF AMERICA

MECCA BLDG. 48th & Broadway

Do Not Be Deceived

By Other Preparations of Similar Names—Get the Only Original and give your picture screen an artistic finish that will show your picture as it should be—perfect.

MERCURINE

Be one of the satisfied ones, and send your order at once.

$6 a Gallon

One gallon is sufficient to cover a screen 12 x 16 feet.

SOLE DISTRIBUTORS,

STERNS POSTER & SUPPLY CO.

43 East 21st Street, NEW YORK CITY

Phone Gramercy 6736.

Something New, Wonderful and Great!

Park and Airdome Managers

TAKE NOTICE

Pictures can be shown out of doors with our New Method of Projection.

Audiences under the blue sky in sunshine. Wire or write quick. Be the first.

Address Outdoor Projection Dept.

MOTION PICTURE SCREEN CO.

SHELBYVILLE, IND., U. S. A.

MAJESTIC

TWO SPLIT REELS THAT TALK

Tuesday, July 2nd

"The Flat Upstairs" and "The Burglar Alarm Mat"

Two big round laughs on the same reel.

Sunday, July 7th

THE COOK CAME BACK

A bright comedy full of laughable incidents.

Tuesday, July 9th

THE LOST MESSENGER

A strong drama with beautiful heart interest.

Sunday, July 14th.

FATHER'S BUST and THE WIDOWER'S WIDOW

Both new style and up-to-date comedies with real surprise finishes.

Address all communications to

MAJESTIC MOTION PICTURE CO.,

540 West 21st St., New York.
Sold only through the Film Supply Co. of America.

EXHIBITORS' HEADQUARTERS

CALEHUFF SUPPLY COMPANY

(Incorporated)

50 North Eighth Street, Philadelphia, Pa.

Jobbers in Edison, Powers and Motiograph Machines and Parts

Machines repaired by expert mechanics. Genuine parts only used.

SPECIALTIES

Mirror Screens	Condensers	Gas Making Outfits
Chairs	Edison Transformers	Limes Film Cement
Tickets	Ft. Wayne Compensarcs	Branch General Disinfectant Co.
Pianos	Asbestos State Booths
Bio & Electric Carbons	Asbestos Wire	Scenery, Stage Effects
Special Gundlach Leases	Switches	Theatres Bought, Sold, Rented
	Plugs Spotlights

CHAS. A. CALEHUFF, Pres. and Gen. Mgr.

American Moving Picture Machine Co.

MANUFACTURERS OF THE

STANDARD

Automatic Moving Picture Machine

101-102 Beekman Street New York

POWERS

MATES AND MISMATES (July 5).—Mabel Wentworth and Jack Allison are sweethearts and love each other devotedly, although their parents have other plans for their children and their dream of love is shattered. Mabel is forced to marry Will Howard, a society man, and Alice Middleton is the convenient wife for Jack. The story concerns the two homes with the husband of the gay butterfly repenting the choice of the mother, and Mabel grieving as the true character of her husband is revealed. Jack struggles to maintain his wife in the society she covets and fails. He is about to blow out his brains with a revolver when fate intervenes in another manner. His wife elopes with the husband of his sweetheart, and he is relieved. The wife has proven false and unworthy, and he upbraids his mother for choosing a helpmate so base.

Mabel is leading a life of uneasiness and is miserable. Her husband brings a gay woman of the world to their home and openly flirts with her. There are a series of flirtations and finally an elopement, and Mabel returns to her father, and is grand in her indignation. She tells him all and he is shocked and repentant. He sees the injustice of it all and the saddened life of his cherished daughter. The shock kills him.

The guilty partner and the wife of Jack go rowing and are enjoying their flight when their boat is upset, and they are drowned together with the mother who was instrumental in wrecking the lives of two estimable young people. The story closes with the other couple on an eminence. The glamour has worn off and they quarrel and both are dashed to their death. Babel embarks in a boat to end her existence in a watery grave and Jack appears on the bank bent on self-destruction. He throws himself into the water and is rescued by the girl he has always loved. Barriers removed, they are happy and are free to marry.

TANGLED (July 10).—David Jackson resides on his country estate, and is a widower. With him lives Willie, his little nephew. The story opens with Mrs. Edwards taking an adjoining estate for the summer. She has her little niece, Dorothy, with her. Dodothy and Willie meet and the girl tells the boy they have taken the adjoining house. Elsa Edwards receives a letter that her sweetheart, John Jackson, is coming down to spend the summer with his uncle, and that they will enjoy the country. Jackson meets the charming widow and there is mutual attraction. Dorothy and Willie become fast friends, and there is a trio of love affairs.

The harmony of the situation is broken when the children quarrel over the possession of a tricycle, and the widow and the widower take sides and are estranged. There is another outburst when the children meet at a pharmacy to partake of cooling drinks. Willie places a bug in the glass of Dorothy and she retorts by pouring the bitter decoction into his drink. There is another quarrel and the young lovers part in anger, leading their belligerent little relatives away.

The children go out to fly kites and the kites become entangled in the air just as they have kised and made up. The widow and the widower and the young lovers come on the scene and all become interested in the fate of the kites. There is an ingenious reconcilliation that presents a charming picture—a fitting finale to a very pretty comedy.

A LEAP YEAR DELUSION (July 10).—This subject illustrates how a young man, unfortunate in his love affairs, reads of leap year and of the women proposing. He dozes off to sleep and dreams, and his dream takes on a most satisfying aspect. He is proposed to by a lovely young woman and is in the heighth of his glory when he awakens and discovers that it is all a dream and is brought back to earth and a painful realization of his state of bachelorhood.

NESTOR.

WHEN HEARTS ARE TRUMPS (July 1).—Don Pedro, a wealthy Mexican, has a beautiful daughter, Juanita, who loves Jose, a poor boy. Her father looks with disfavor on his suit for his daughter's hand, preferring that Juanita marry Don Nedro, a wealthy Mexican. On being forbidden the house, Jose writes the following note to Juanita: "Dearest Juanita: I will be waiting for you in the garden. Ever thine, Jose." Just as Juanita starts on her way to meet her lover, Don Nedro appears and endeavors to make love to her. Her father appears at this juncture and effusively greets the rich Mexican, forgetting his daughter. Juanita hastens to her lover, dropping the note as she goes.

Don Nedro, who has long wanted to marry the old gentleman's daughter, suggests that Juanita and he get married immediately and offers Don Pedro gold in return for his daughter. The old man readily accepts, and on searching for Juanita, they come across the note which she has dropped. Hastening to the garden, they find Juanita and Jose. Commanding his daughter to go to her room, he tells her she must marry Don Nedro at once and sends for a priest to perform the ceremony. In the meantime, Jose and Don Nedro have quarreled, and Don Nedro is knocked down.

Juanita, who has been locked in her room, comes out on her balcony and observes Jose anxiously watching her window. They arrange to elope and, on placing a ladder at her window, they disappear down the orange grove. Gardeners, Don Nedro, father and priest give chase to the lovers, and Jose is felled by a blow from Don Nedro. They arrange for the ceremony when Jose appears in their midst on horseback and, snatching Juanita in his arms, he rides swiftly away.

That evening the old man sits and sighs as he thinks of his daughter, thinking he will never see her again, when along come the happy couple, informing him that they are married, and he gladly gives them his blessing.

HARD LUCK BILL (July 3).—An old settler's daughter, Jessie, is the belle of Sycamore Dale. As she comes from the house, Frank whistles for her from one side and Jim from the other, as neither dares to go to the house, having been warned by father. Selecting a spot between her two suitors, Jessie waits for them to appear and then confides to them that the one who reaches the tree first shall have her hand. Instead of allowing Jim to try, she pulls his sleeve as he is getting ready and together they run off, leaving poor Frank to meet the old settler, who has also heard the whistling.

The old man soon finds the lovers and marches Miss Jessie into the house, putting the hired man, Tom, to guard her and telling Big Bill to keep himself in readiness to boot either of her suitors off the place.

At last Jessie manages to get a note off to Jim, reading: "Dear Boy: Meet me on the bridge at 3 o'clock this afternoon and we will elope. Jessie."

Father, however, gets the note, but in order to catch the culprit, he allows it to be delivered. Fortunately, Tom tells Jim of the settler's intentions, so Jim sends the note on to his rival, who promptly appears with horse and buggy at the appointed time and, while Frank is having a few very unhappy moments with the old man, Jim and Jessie ride away in his buggy to the minister's. Here father, Big Bill and Frank soon appear, for the old settler has held up an automobile and forced the driver to take them to the minister's after the eloping couple. The young couple were too quick for them, however, for while they enter the front entrance of the house, the minister, Jim and Jessie hurry out of the back door, jump into the automobile, and there the minister finishes the ceremony, while Frank drives sadly away in his buggy, leaving Big Bill and father to foot it home.

YOUNG WILD WEST ON THE BORDER (July 5).—Young Wild West and his party approach the Mexican border, and, believing themselves to be miles away from any town, they stop at a deserted house and there celebrate the Fourth of July. Pedro, the owner of the property, is informed that strangers have taken possession of the premises and immediately goes to dislodge them. Wild West pays the Mexican and orders him away.

Leaving the Chinese cook in charge of the house, Wild West and his followers go to town. Entering a dance hall, they noticed a display of flags; the Stars and Stripes beneath the Mexican banner. Wild quickly changes the position of the flags and a big rumpus follows. The Mexicans are defeated. Pedro and his men swear to be revenged, and, accordingly, they swoop down upon the deserted house to rob the Americans of all their belongings. Wild West arrives in time to save the Chinaman from the hands of the marauders, while Pedro manages to slip away. Still bent on revenge, Pedro abducts Young Wild West's sweetheart, Arietta, who, after many thrilling incidents, is restored to her friends, while Pedro and his gang are railroaded to prison.

CHAMPION.

THE GYPSY BRIDE (July 8).—Harry Mason, the petted son of a social leader, while out walking with his sister, comes upon the camp of some gypsies. The sister wants her fortune told and Harry goes with her. While there, he meets the daughter of the Gypsy Queen. Love at first sight and many meetings follow. Harry's mother interrupts one of these meetings while passing by in her car, and Harry is ordered to get in and return home. He refuses, but when he does come home, his irate mother demands that he cease his flirtations with the gypsy. Harry assures her it is more serious.

Sometime later, realizing that his mother's consent cannot be gained, Harry marries the girl without it. They are first married according to the custom of her people, a regular Gypsy wedding with the quaint and curious rites of her people, after which they are united by the Church and the State. Being still unable to gain his mother's forgiveness, Harry settles down in a cottage. A year later, a child comes to bless their union. On learning of the arrival of a grand-daughter, the proud old mother hastens to Harry's little cottage to clasp the little one to her breast.

Years go by and all is happiness till one day the wife is out on her way to make some purchases. She is surprised to meet her Gypsy mother at the gate. The tribe was again in camp near the home. The mother is invited to see her grandchild, a girl of six. The presence of the Gypsy woman angers the over-sensitive husband, who has just come in. Then follows the first quarrel between man and wife. The wife begins to regretfully look back over the years of free life spent with her people, and she takes out the costumes she had worn at their first meeting. He enters, prepared to ask forgiveness, but indulgently retires rather than disturb her.

Seated in the little parlor with his daughter on his knee, the young husband falls asleep. The wife returns, pensively takes her violin and softly plays a favorite melody of his. Then he dreams—the quarrel is re-enacted, his young wife returns to her people. He sees her take the child and he follows, arriving in time to separate her from his old rival, whom he engaged in mortal combat. They fight furiously and the rival suffers death. At this juncture the husband awakens, and finds his faithful little wife standing by, playing to him in dreamy attitude.

SOLAX.

WINSOME BUT WISE (July 10).—An impecunious little lady finds herself out West. She had no luck in the East, although she was full of energy and pluck. Her advent in the West begins with a very exciting experience. The coach in which she rides to her little town of promised fortune is held up by a highwayman. The highwayman had been lurking in the neighborhood for some time, and after each of his daring robberies, has been successful in escaping the sheriff and his posse.

After the hold-up of her coach, the sheriff, who goes on the trail of the bandit, is desperate. But his desperation doesn't help him catch the desperado, so he gets the town council to offer a reward of $500 for the capture of the bandit, dead or alive.

Somehow, the impecunious little lady from the East gets an idea into her head that she can catch the bandit. Although all the cowboys laugh at her, she is determined to try and get the $500 which she badly needs.

She sets out, and, after wandering for several days, comes upon the object of her wanderings. The bandit is aware of her approach. She sees him also, but feigns ignorance of his presence, and appears on the scene with suppressed excitement, but seemingly on a stroll. The bandit jumps out and tells her to throw up her hands. He demands her bag, which she throws at him. The bandit opens the bag and begins to laugh as he pulls out a powder puff. She jumps up, snatches the bag from him, from which she takes a little mirror and proceeds to powder her nose: she then places the articles in the bag again and sits down. The bandit is astonished. He returns the contents of the bag, but takes out a roll of bills which he places in his coat pocket. Then he pulls out a lady's pistol and, laughing, compares it with his own. The girl smiles at him over her shoulder. The bandit is flattered. She invites him to sit on the ground beside her, and he does so, placing his gun on the ground near his foot. She pretends to admire the gun and reaches for it, but he puts his foot on it and shakes his head postively. She pouts. The bandit again examines the contents of the bag in which he finds a pair of handcuffs. Looking at her narrowly, he inquires where she got them, and she replies that she found them down the trail. He looks at her for a moment and then decides that she is telling the truth. She takes the handcuffs and looks them over. She asks him how they work and, illustrating his answer, he puts his hand together. Suddenly she calls to him to listen, and as he turns his head, she quickly snaps the handcuffs on his wrists, and snatching up the gun, she holds the furious but helpless bandit at bay. And she gets her reward.

HOTEL HONEYMOON (July 12).—A man who had imbibed a little too freely passes through a hotel lobby and staggers up the stairs. An old maid, with very red hair—mostly artificial—arrives, registers and follows bellboy No. 1 up the stairs. A bride and groom arrive and they are also taken up stairs by bellboy No. 2, the bride dropping a glove unnoticed. The drunk not being a new guest, finds his own room, No. 45, and throws himself on the bed fully dressed. The old maid is shown to room No. 47 by bellboy No. 1, who, not being tipped by her, through revenge, transposes numbers 45 and 47 on the doors. Bellboy No. 2, having shown the bride and groom to No. 49, immediately after emerges from that room, and, as a joke at the expense of the newlyweds, transposes numbers 45 and 49, the three adjacent rooms now showing numbers 47, 49 and 45, reading from left to right.

The bride soon discovers that she has lost a glove, which hubby cheerfully goes in search of. In the lobby, having secured the glove, he comes upon an old friend, whom he tells of his marriage. His friend, as a means of expressing his congratulations, leads him, though he goes reluctantly, off for a drink. The bride becomes impatient at the extended absence of her husband, and determines to go in search of him. In the meantime, the groom bids good-bye to his friend in the lobby and returns. He enters the old maid's room, showing number 49, and as he closes the door, the bride emerges from her room and goes in quest of him. The groom, in the old maid's room, sees, as he supposes, his wife in bed asleep. He steps softly so as not to awaken her, and removes part of his upper clothing. Bellboy No. 1, passing along the corridor, becomes afraid of what might be the consequences of his transposing numbers 45 and 47, and thinking he is remedying his mischief, transposes 47 and 49, the three numbers now arranged as 49, 47 and 45, left to right. The bride is assured of her husband's proximity by the clerk and returns. Upon finding, as she thinks, her husband in bed fully dressed, she calls, and is startled when a strange man sits up and waves silllly at her. She rushes out of the room frightened and

OPEN EVERYTHING!

Let in the Fresh Air and Light. That's the kind of a test we like for the

RADIUM GOLD FIBRE SCREEN

Some of Our Recent Installations:

THE CLEMMAR—Cap. 1800, Seattle
THE MURRETTE—Cap. 1000, Richmond, Ind.
THE PRINCESS (New House) — 1500, Colorado Springs
MOSS & BRILL CIRCUIT—5 screens, including 86th St. Theatre—Cap. 2000

American Theatre Curtain & Supply Co.
Main and Chestnut Sts. ST. LOUIS, MO.
N. H. SPITZER, 32 Union Square, New York City

Every Moving Picture Man Ought To Investigate this Lens Outfit

You ought not to buy your lens outfit off-hand—like a pig in a bag. You ought to investigate because so much depends on your lens outfit—good pictures, good crowds and good profits. It will pay you well to look into the merits of the

Bausch and Lomb Projection Lenses

They help any film to give better results—throw clear, brilliant pictures on the screen—bring the crowds back.

Up-to-date motion picture men will tell you that Bausch & Lomb objectives and condensers are the standard. They know this lens outfit means better pictures and bigger profits. Why not prove this fact yourself? Investigate at once.

Our free Booklet 62D explains many things of value to owners and operators. It's interesting reading. Write for it TODAY.

The Superior Quality of Bausch & Lomb lenses, microscopes, field glasses, projection apparatus, engineering and other scientific instruments is the product of nearly Sixty Years of Experience.

Bausch & Lomb Optical Co.
NEW YORK WASHINGTON CHICAGO SAN FRANCISCO
LONDON ROCHESTER, N.Y. FRANKFORT

ARGUS WEEKLY

Europe and America and Everywhere
Our EYE IS ON YOU!

NEW AND NEWSY
EXHIBIT IT AND IT WILL BE DEMANDED

LIVE AND LIVELY
GET THE FIRST ONE AND YOU WILL GET THE HABIT

KEEP Your EYE OPEN FOR OUR RELEASE DATE

Argus Weekly Office:
4600 Sunset Blvd.

Issued from the Revier Laboratories,
4500 Sunset Blvd., Los Angeles, Cal.

THE CRYSTAL FILM CO.

Makers of

Special Motion Pictures for Advertising, Educational and Other Purposes

PERFORATING PRINTING AND DEVELOPING

EXHIBITORS, WRITE FOR PROPOSITION

We will develop your negatives and make your prints.

THE CRYSTAL FILM CO.
WENDOVER AND PARK AVES., NEW YORK, N. Y.

As the Manager Sees It

This Manager looks prosperous and happy. You will feel the same way when you discard that old juice consuming rheostat and put in a

Fort Wayne Compensarc

It will increase your box office receipts because your patrons will notice at once how much brighter and clearer your pictures are. And what's more, it will

Cut 2-3 from Your Monthly Lighting Bill

That sounds as if we were stretching it, doesn't it? But we are not and just to show you, we will ship you one on 30 days free trial and let you prove it.

If it does not do all we claim for it, ship it back at our expense and it won't cost you one cent.

If this sounds "good" to you, send for our little booklet "Compensarc vs. Rheostat" and find out the particulars.

You are paying the Lighting Company half your profits every day you wait.

Fort Wayne Electric Works
of General Electric Company
1402 Broadway
Fort Wayne, Indiana

WOOD SYSTEMS FWEW FORT WAYNE IND C3

To introduce our new line of stock advertising and announcement slides, we will offer them at 35c each or $4.00 per dozen, postage extra. A postal will bring our catalog. Get our prices on parts, machines, spot lamps, carbons and supplies of all kinds.

ERKER BROS. OPTICAL CO.
604 Olive St., St. Louis, Mo.

In answering advertisements kindly mention the Moving Picture World.

MORTIMER FILM CLEANER

Makes Dirty Films Clean and Bright

The only dry cleaning process—it cleans while film is being re-wound. Positively prevents "rain" and spots. Simple, effective and guaranteed not to injure the film. Cost of operation but one cent per film. No progressive theater or exchange can afford to be without it.

WHAT SOME OF OUR CUSTOMERS SAY

"Worth their weight in gold." Miles Bros., Los Angeles.
"Improves the films at least 75%." Richard Dabb, Shenandoah, Pa.
"We like the cleaners very much." Warioto Film Co., Nashville, Tenn.
"Well worth the money to any motion picture house." Hyman & Hirsch, Chicago.
"It does excellent work." W. E. Greene Film Exch., Boston, Mass.

If your exchange cannot supply you, send orders direct to goes in the direction of the lobby, the drunk following her, but going in the opposite direction.
MORTIMER FILM CLEANER CO., 704 Fidelity Bldg., Portland, Maine.

In the meanwhile the groom has made a disconcerted discovery. He has found the old maid's artificial red hair. His wife's hair is black. He goes inquiringly over to the bed, and it is disclosed to him that he is in a room with a strange woman. He gathers his clothing and steals out without awakening her, and realizes upon seeing No. 47 on her door that he entered the wrong room. He discovers No. 49 on the next door to the left and goes in, to find it empty. This surprises him somewhat, but he concludes his wife has stepped out for but a short while and makes himself at home. There are a number of disconcerting complications before the newlyweds are happily reunited.

IMP.

THE PARSON AND THE MEDICINE MAN (July 8).—The little Indian girl, Fawn, took an aversion to the Medicine Man of her tribe, though commanded by her father to marry him. In effecting her escape from the red man she was befriended by a white, and the white in this case was a kind-hearted parson to whom the little aborigine promptly hands her heart. But the parson was not a very robust specimen of manhood; he was tubercular. He fell sick, and Fawn as she was known, nursed him.

In her ministrations she was discovered by the Indian whose suit she discouraged. He was on the point of dragging her off by main force when the poor parson rose to the occasion and saved the girl at the pistol point. Then there was another struggle in which the jealous Indian, for the time being, was paramount. But help was at hand and he was finally secured before he could carry out his scheme of abducting the unwilling girl.

The clergyman recovers and inasmuch as the girl has probably saved his life, he, out of gratitude, sends her East to school, and the Medicine Man to a reservation.

CAUGHT IN A FLASH (July 11).—Jack Gayboy is in love with Dolly Varden, a famous Broadway favorite, and true to the proverb their love affair fails to run smoothly. The father, Mr. Gayboy, objects to his son's marriage with an actress, though as the picture develops it is shown that he, too, is an admirer of the fair sex.

Jack, knowing his father weakness, arranges with his sweetheart to impersonate a maid in their home, and by a well arranged plan they succeed in securing kodak evidence of the old man's penchant for those whom he considers not in his sphere.

When confronted with proofs of his fondness for the girl, Mr. Gayboy relents and gives his permission to the marriage of Jack and Dolly, which duly takes place.

THE WRONG WEIGH (July 13).—Louis Schnitz and his wife, Lena, are proprietors of a small restaurant, and business is very, very poor; no one seems in need of food, and the only persons who enter the place are those who wish large bills changed. Even the animals plot against the German, for a dog contrives to seal from the counter a prime cut of beef. He and the wife are so angry they rush from the restaurant, determined to wreck vengeance on the guilty one.

While passing a store where scales are displayed an idea occurs to him. He buys a pair and places them in his restaurant, and puts this notice in the window: "You pay 5 cents for each ounce gained; we pay you 10 cents for each ounce lost."

This attracts the attention of a shabby man and he devises a plan to get the better of the German. He loads his pockets with brick, enters the restaurant and is duly weighed. He then orders his dinner and while the couple are preparing the food in the kitchen, he removes the bricks. On again being weighed, it is discovered that he is fifteen pounds lighter than before partaking of the hearty meal, and Schnitz is forced to pay him the sum of $24.00.

After his departure the bricks are found under the table and Schnitz seeing the trick played on him gives chase, hurling the bricks as he runs. His wife follows, also armed with the heavy missiles, and, in her excitement, instead of hitting the man, she succeeds in breaking the window, and the fugitive escapes.

The couple return weary after the long chase and decide the scheme is a failure, so remove the scale and sign, and substitute for the latter one that reads, "Meals, 15c." And business once more thrives and prosperity beams on the Germans.

GEM.

THE MEDAL OF HONOR (July 2).—He was old. His heart was a battlefield where all the wars of the world had been fought and lost or won. He had seen life and heard it—in his ears had rung the shout of victory and the groans of defeat, and despair, songs of merriment and the silence of misery. A thousand times he had been close to the door of death, but Some Power had not permitted him to enter the far away so near. But now he was old, and in its tardy time had come the Medal of Honor that his valor had earned in the distant yesterday. Amid a solemn hush the speaker arose, and in a voice trembling with the emotion of the buried memories of the red days and the crimson carnage, told of the deed that would live after what was said there would be forgotten—how, midst the blinding smoke of musket-rattle and death shots falling thick and fast, in the very

ATTENTION

Exhibitors of Massachusetts, Rhode Island, Connecticut, Maine, New Hampshire and Vermont

The Famous

Bison 101 Features

Are Now at Your Disposal Through the

W. E. Greene Film Exchange, Inc.

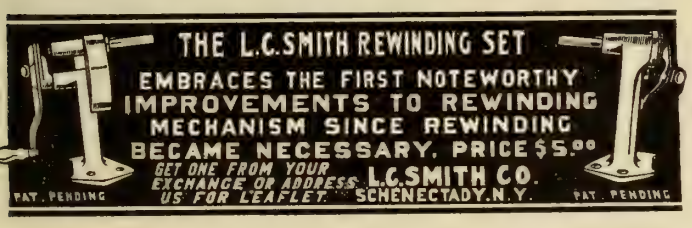
Don't lose any time, but write, wire or call at once for open dates.

W. E. GREENE FILM EXCHANGE, Inc.
228 Tremont Street Boston, Mass.
TELEPHONE, OXFORD 3790-2187

EXHIBITORS, GIVE SUMMER RESORT LOTS AS SOUVENIRS!

20 coupons, costing same as ordinary coupon tickets, entitle holder to 30x80-foot lot at LAKE BREEZE GROVE, near Rogers City, Mich. Suitable for summer home. Perfect title. Warranty deed.

MICHIGAN CENTRAL REALTY CO., Alpena, Mich.



THE L.C.SMITH REWINDING SET
EMBRACES THE FIRST NOTEWORTHY IMPROVEMENTS TO REWINDING MECHANISM SINCE REWINDING BECAME NECESSARY. PRICE $5.00
GET ONE FROM YOUR EXCHANGE OR ADDRESS US FOR LEAFLET.
L.C.SMITH CO.
SCHENECTADY.N.Y.
PAT. PENDING
PAT. PENDING

MAKE 'EM YOURSELF SLIDES

Make them yourself. Written with pen and ink or typewriter. Three minutes to make a slide. Used for advertising slides, to announce future or feature programmes, for chorus slides when chorus slide is missing. We send four colors of gelatin. The slides look well and any one can make them. They are handy also for announcing vaudeville acts. In fact they may be readily used for anything you may wish to say to your audience.

For the sum of three dollars ($3) cash with order, we will send by express, charges not prepaid, or $3.50 by registered mail, prepaid, the following:

24 cover glass, 1 package binder strips, 1 dozen mats, 1 instruction sheet, 1 form sheet and 30 strips assorted colors gelatin—enough for from 300 to 400 slides. Order now. Address

UTILITY TRANSPARENCY CO.
1733 West 9th St., Brooklyn, N. Y.

SCIENTIFIC Indirect Illumination does NOT "cost too much."

The EYE COMFORT System is the ONLY scientific system of Indirect Illumination

And this is the reason!

"The reason" is the interior equipment of EYE COMFORT fixtures,—an example is shown above.

This question of cost depends on three things. You should understand them clearly.

First, the reflectors must be efficient, else operating cost becomes prohibitive. X-RAY EYE COMFORT Reflectors, originated and made only by us, and used exclusively with the EYE COMFORT System, are the most powerful made. They are scientifically designed and built.

Second, the reflectors must be held in exactly the right position with regard to the lamp, otherwise diffusion will be poor and the installation a failure. Above you see how it is done with the EYE COMFORT System.

Third, the installation must be planned by an indirect illumination expert,—no amateur will do. Our experts, with years of experience in doing nothing but this work, are ready to carefully compile an Engineering Report covering the equipment of your theatre with the EYE COMFORT System, This service is free. Use the coupon.

NATIONAL X-RAY REFLECTOR CO.
227 West Jackson Blvd., Chicago, Ill.

Distance, screen to rear of auditorium.....

Ceiling height.....

Width of house.....

Name.....

hell-born roar of battle, with shot and shell screaming their dirge, all forgetful of self, he dashed across the death-line and rescued the colors. Timid, trembling, tenderly he took the medal and pressed it to his heart, while the cheers of the veterans echoed again all the din of the conflict. Only one voice was silent, only one heart envious. He, too, had been brave and valiant, had suffered and attempted much throughout the strife, but he was one trait short of being a hero—he lacked resignation and repression. He looked with covetous eyes upon the medal, and a dangerous greed stole into his heart.

The old hero's grand-daughter was a happy girl when she heard the glad news. Proudly, reverently, she caressed the symbol of suffering and sacrifice. To him the medal was everything.

He became ill. The ecstatic excitement created by the medal may have had lots to do with it. There was no money in the house. It wasn't that the girl valued the medal less, but that she loved him more—so she sold it: sold it for medicine, bartered it for the life that had so often been placed in jeopardy to earn it; sold it to him who envied and coveted it. His life was saved, but he was more than dead when he discovered the loss of the medal. Something in the bereaved mind surrendered to the great grief that overwhelmed him, and he forgot. Forgot all but the medal, and it was pitiful to see him searching, searching, always searching, and searching always in vain. The girl, broken-hearted and desperate, raised the money and tried to redeem the medal, but he refused to part with it. If he had been a younger man he could not resist her tears and the pathetic, sympathetic plea in her sobbing voice, but he was old, old and selfish, selfish and vain. He refused.

At last she went to the Legion of the Medal of Honor and told the truth of the tragedy. The wrong was righted, the hero received back all that he lived for, and that he had so nearly died for.

A PROPHET WITHOUT HONOR (July 4).—The town ridiculed and reviled him. There might have been a few who pitied him. A few others hated him. None loved and very few tolerated him. They considered him shiftless, careless, hopeless. And his wife; she was one of those very rigid, very pious and righteous personages. There was something lacking in her composition, that something that alone makes the world worth living in. She made the villagers' opinion regarding her husband unanimous.

The prophet—you'll know why we call him that a little later—went his way in peace and patience. Meek and reserved in the presence of his wife and town-folks, he would undergo a complete metamorphosis once he left the house and the vicinity. Eyes gleaming with the glory of a great light, shoulders straight with the pride of a vast conquest, his heart beating high with the happy hopes of those who associate with things beyond the earth, he would walk along the road, playing his flute and talking to the cosmos—yes, and hearing the thin, far-away reply.

He was an ambling, rambling prophet. That same gentleness with which he reproached the country boy for swearing at the innocent gate because it would not open, the humble force with which he taught two quarreling sweethearts to smile, the patient firmness with which he exhorted to man who was to elope with another's wife to leave her in her own home with her own happiness—that sweet spirit of human love and tenderness, too spiritual to be recognized in its real value and volume by his foolish neighbors, directed and designed his every act and motive.

And one day a minister of a neighboring parish heard one of his impromptu sermons and asked him to address the congregation at a revival meeting. The sincerity and integrity of his appeal, the genuineness and gentleness of his plea, sank into the hearts of the listeners and whispered solace to their souls. The meeting was a success and the minister wrote to the minister of the prophet's home parish, and recommended that he hold a revival meeting, to be addressed by the same eloquent exhorter.

When the people assembled in the little church saw their shiftless neighbor mount the pulpit they were dumbfounded and horror-stricken. When they heard the words of truth and the tender voice, passionate with the hunger of right, when they looked into the eyes searching theirs, lighted with a divine glow of sympathy and understanding, when they felt the mystic note of common joy and common grief that his voice betrayed, they purged their hearts of the error they had permitted to dwell there, and they took him and his teachings to themselves.

THE UNKNOWN BRIDE (July 17).—When the actress learned that if she married the man his father would disinherit him, she was rather determined for his sake not to marry him. When his father, at the point of death, suddenly had a will drawn up leaving everything to his wife, and then commissioned his attorney to go out and find a woman who would marry him, it was she whom he met and to whom he broached the daring offer. And she accepted. When she learned that she had married the father of the man she loved, and that she had everything and he nothing—they arranged a plan of their own whereby the fortune would be more equally distributed.

ITALA.

A WOMAN'S DUPLICITY (July 6).—Anna Dexter, a country girl, is betrothed to John Galvin, the village blacksmith. Anna is fired with ambition and goes to the city to learn stenography. John is grief-stricken at the parting, and looks forward to her return with an anxious heart.

Anna fails in her first position, but wins her employer's affection. She yields to his impassioned wooing, craving beautiful clothes and the mansion he offers her. After her marriage she stops writing to John, keeping him in ignorance of her unfaithfulness. His anxiety over her silence prompts him to write her a letter telling her he fears she is ill and that he is coming to ascertain the matter.

Lacking the moral courage to tell John of her marriage, she decides to placate him by visiting her old home. Donning the attire which she wore when she left home, she returns to the village. John is overjoyed to see her and pleads with her for an immediate marriage, showing her how he has toiled and saved his money.

Anna puts him off, telling him of her ambitions and urging him to elevate himself in the world. After her departure John, spurred by her words, determines to go to the city, and secure a position in a shop. While walking on the street he sees Anna, handsomely gowned, riding in a carriage with her husband. Amazed, he is petrified for a moment at the sight, and runs after the vehicle. He sees Anna enter her beautiful residence, and looking through a window sees the affectionate attentions of her husband.

Frenzied at the sight he endeavors to enter, but is driven off by the servants, who consider him a madman. He resolves to see Anna at all costs, and a friend promises to assist him.

That evening Anna and her husband dine at a fashionable restaurant. John follows and watches them. After they have returned home John and his friend force an entrance into the house. The husband hears a noise and rushes into the room. John's friend leaps through the window, and is shot by the husband. John grapples with his assailant and the revolver is discharged as Anna rushes into the room, the bullet striking and mortally wounding her. As she expires, she confesses her duplicity and asks the forgiveness of both men. The last scene shows John back at his forge—a broken-hearted man.

Among the Exhibitors

Racine, Wis.—B. H. Baldwin, manager and part owner of the Orpheum Theater on College Avenue, this city, has sold his stock and retired from business. He will be succeeded as manager by A. G. Langlois, who with A. A. Anderson, were the other two stockholders. The Baldwin, third interest, was purchased by Frank H. Miller.

Hibbing, Minn.—C. A. Rhodes, manager and proprietor of the Orpheum Theater here, will open a new vaudeville theater and moving picture show at Crosby, Minn., on the Cuyuna range.

Madison, Wis.—Ninth ward will have a moving picture theater. Mrs. Mary Stang yesterday secured a building permit from the City Clerk for the erection of a theater on Mound Street, at a cost of $5,500.

W. Chicago, Ill.—The new moving picture theater in the Atcherson Building has just opened to the public.

Elm Grove, W. Va.—The new Elite Theater has opened up to the public.

Wall Lake, Ia.—A new theater will be erected here at a cost of $10,000.

Lakeview, Ore.—A new theater will be erected here on Water Street.

Milwaukee, Wis.—A permit to erect a moving picture theater was issued to Frank Rogowski at Twenty-second and Lincoln Avenues. The cost will be $8,000.

Davenpart, Ia.—A contract was awarded to C. Jaeger, who will erect for J. Reimers, a $7,000 moving picture theater on West Third St., between Myrtle and Marquette Sts.

CLASSIFIED ADVERTISEMENTS

Classified Advertisements, three cents per word, cash with order; 50 cents minimum; postage stamps accepted

SITUATION WANTED.

OPERATOR—Desires position out of town, with or without machine. Reasonable salary. OPERATOR, 692 Flushing Ave., Brooklyn, N. Y.

POSITION WANTED—Operator, experienced on Peerless machine, sober and reliable. Will go anywhere. BOX 86, Oshkosh, Wisconsin.

OPERATOR—Desires position anywhere. Experienced on all machines. Can deliver the goods. Best references. Address OPERATOR, 331 Pleasant, Ionia, Michigan.

OPERATOR—Beginner desires position out of city. Familiar with most machines. Reasonable salary to start. Address MR. HARRISON, 120 E. 41st St., Chicago, Ill.

MOVING PICTURE OPERATOR — Non-union, Mass. license. Experienced, sober and reliable; will go anywhere. Address OPERATOR, care of Moving Picture World, New York City.

HELP WANTED.

WANTED—Motion Picture Pianist. One who can play them. Lady or gentleman. Right party will be appreciated. State salary and experience. N. A. WALKER, Mgr., "Peerless" Bradford, Pa.

WANTED—Experienced cameramen in all parts of America to cover current events. Wire immediately ARGUS WEEKLY, Los Angeles, California.

WANTED QUICK—Pianist (transpose sight), who is also comedian. BERNARD'S THEATER, Millbrook, New York.

EQUIPMENT FOR SALE.

Powers No. 5 Model "B" shutter, spiral gears, complete with lenses, lamp house, fire magazines, etc., all in fine condition. $85.00 takes it. M. FREDERICKS, 3557 N. Warnock, Phila., Pa.

Electric Sign, reading Vaudeville 5c. Asbestos Curtain, 2 Powers 5, good condition, for sale cheap. 304 8th Ave., New York City.

Edison Exhibition Complete, $115.00. Costs $175.00. Powers No. 5 complete, $75.00. Costs $175.00. Simplex, New, Shop Worn, $210.00. Costs $275.00. Two 10-hr. "EXCELLO" direct lamps, like new, $80.00. Costs $110.00. STERN'S POSTER, 43 E. 21st St., New York City.

ELECTRIC FANS—12" 110 A. C., $9.50, or D. C. Perfect running order, $7.25. New Fans, 12" D. C. $9.50; A. C., $11.50. Guaranteed. COSMOS ELECTRIC CO., 136 S. Liberty St., New York City.

FOR SALE—Three No. 5 Power's Machines, completely overhauled, excellent condition. Bargains. BOX 417, Montpelier, Vt.

FOR SALE—Moving Picture Camera and Tripod. Guaranteed perfect condition. Address 710, Moving Picture World, Chicago, Ill.

THEATERS FOR SALE OR RENT.

FOR RENT OR SALE—Just completed theatre. Capacity 1000. All furnished, or partner wanted understanding picture and vaudeville business. BOX 66, Pleasantville, N. J.

FOR SALE—New 10c theatre, no competition. County seat, 35 miles from Chicago. Everything first-class. Investigate. GRIGGS, care of Clark Music Co., Syracuse, New York.

MOVING PICTURE THEATRE—1000 seats, for sale or rent. Apply PRINCE MAJESTIC HOTEL, Arverne, L. I.

FOR RENT—Empire Theatre, Watertown, Wisconsin. Capacity 700. Vaudeville or moving pictures. $75.00 per month rent. Centrally located, machine in house, population 10,000.

FOR SALE—Enoch Arden, 2 reels, $25.00. White Slave, 3 reels, $75.00. Girl and the Harp, 3 reels, $125.00. Celebrated Case, 2 reels, $40.00. 100 reels of film, $2.00 per reel. Machines $35.00 up. New Edisons, Powers, Motiographs, $100.00 up. H. DAVIS, Watertown, Wisconsin.

FOR SALE—A live moving picture show in the South. Only show in town of 7000. Cheap rent. Full equipment. Seating capacity of 900. Address "THEATRE," care of Moving Picture World, Chicago, Illinois.

Finely equipped theater seating 430 in city of 12,000. Rent, $1,000 per year for four and a half years. All new since January. Other business. Address, NEW YORK STATE, care of Moving Picture World, New York City.

THEATERS WANTED.

WANTED—Best moving picture theater that $750 cash will handle. Take charge August 1st. R. E. VAUGHAN, Schleswig, Iowa.

WANTED—Moving picture theater, in town of five or six thousand. Anybody knowing of good location notify me. Willing to pay for information. MR. JOHAN JOHANSEN, 311 South 2nd Street, Clinton, Iowa.

MISCELLANEOUS.

WILL SELL for $1,000 cash a half interest in California State rights of the 4-reel $50,000 production of the "Crusaders" or "Jerusalem Delivered." Wonderful money getter. CHAS. JACOBS, 211 W. 2nd Street, Los Angeles, Cal.

FILMS WANTED—Will buy several reels of fire and fire department pictures suitable for Fighting the Flames show. Must be in good condition and cheap. Give full description. E. S. HAMILL, Box 642, De Soto, Mo.

WANTED—"Passion Play." Give price and condition. J. G. HAITAIAN, "Mosswood" Theater, Oakland, Cal.

CORNER BUILDING near 34th Street and 8th Avenue to lease for theater. Particulars of JAMES BAILEY, Agent, No. 3 West 42nd Street, New York City.

The Simpson Solar Screen

Is the best Daylight Screen in existence. Fully covered by U. S. Patent No. 890,101. Don't buy imitations.

ALFRED L. SIMPSON, Inc.
No. 113 W. 132nd St., New York City

Electric Fans

GENERAL ELECTRIC MAKE, 16-inch straight, new, $13.50 each; guaranteed second-hand, $11.50 each; 12-inch new, straight, $11.00 each; new oscillating, $13.75 each. All these for alternating current, 110 volts, 60 cycles. New 12-inch direct current oscillating, 110 or 220 volts, $12.50 each. Several hundred other Dynamos and Motors.
Geo. Bender, 82-84 Center Street, New York

WE HAVE THE N. Y. STATE RIGHTS FOR

The Glass Coffin

Catskill Feature Film Co.
CATSKILL, N. Y.

For Sale

MOTION PICTURE CAMERAS.
I am prepared to accept for practically immediate delivery, cash orders for standard types of English motion picture cameras. Attractive prices and catalogues on application.
R. S. KENNEDY,
640 Broadway - New York, N. Y.

THE TOURNAMENT FILM CO.
TOLEDO, OHIO.
Owners of the following feature films:
1911 Cheyenne Cowboy and Indian Frontier Celebration.
Fall Round-Up on the Y-6 Ranch.
State Rights for These Films for Sale.
Bookings Can Be Made by Writing Us.

Headquarters for

ASBESTOS

CURTAINS and PICTURE BOOTHS
SEND FOR BOOKLET C. W. Trainer Mfg. Co. 39 Pearl St., Boston, Mass.

HERE AT LAST

A place to buy parts for M. P. machines for less
One of our SPECIALS
Intermittent SPROCKETS $1.50 FOR POWERS EDISON Machines
Write for Price List
PITTSBURG M.P. SUPPLY CO., Pittsburg, Pa.

20,000 roll tickets, $1.20; 50 % cored carbons, $1.15; stereopticon objectives, 60c to $3.00; stereopticons, $15; rheostats, $3 to $5; arc lamps, $1.75, $2 and $2.25; condensers, 50c; calcium jets, $2.80; acetylene jets, $2.50; gas generators, $3.50; moving picture objectives, $2.75; jackets, $2. List of moving picture repair parts at fair prices. Sprocket wheels, 85c; films, 1c a foot. Catalogue. All makes of moving picture machines repaired at reasonable prices. L. HETZ, 302 East 23rd St., New York City of local interest—it will make your theater prominent by showing a local feature film from time to time. Buy the "Junior Professional Outfit," with which you can make films better than some of the manufacturers are turning out. The complete outfit can be bought outright, with full instructions how to take, develop and print, my own patents, scores of highly satisfied customers.

"Make your own films"

N. Y. greatest Jobbing laboratory and mechanical workshop, special Films, Titles, cameras rented, special lenses, projecting machines and single arc dissolvers. All motion picture supplies, film stock, condensers, wire lugs, expert picture machine repairing. Write me at once on what you are interested—for catalogues.
EBERHARD SCHNEIDER,
919 Second Avenue, near 14th St., New York.

Ornamental Theatres

PLASTER RELIEF DECORATIONS
Theatres Designed Everywhere
Write for Illustrated Theatre Catalog. Send us Sizes of Theatre for Special Designs

THE DECORATORS SUPPLY CO.
2549 Archer Avenue, :: CHICAGO, ILL.

SONG SLIDES

NORTH AMERICAN SLIDE CO.
23 N. Ninth Street Phila., Pa.
WRECK OF THE TITANIC
20 Colored Slides . $ 8.00
30 Colored Slides . $12.00
Cash with order
SONG SLIDES LIDE LIDE

ZIGOMAR has escaped again!

AND WILL DASH THROUGH
Three Thrilling Reels of New Pictures
TO BE RELEASED SOON BY
The F. & E. Film Company
CLEVELAND

ROLL TICKETS

Daily Capacity Ten Million

SEE THESE PRICES FOR SPECIAL TICKETS

50,000 . . . $ 5.90
100,000 . . . 8.75
200,000 . . . 16.00
500,000 . . . 29.00

CARTER TICKET CO.
DANVERS, - - MASS.
CASH IN ADVANCE—NO C.O.D.

TWO

The ADOPTED

A Drama of Throbbing, Vital phan adopted by some kind= the little girl, Marion, at last to encounter the vindictive stepmother. The story ends cidents which leaves the

Made by PATHÉ FRERES

This is the Third Pathe Feature Film

BOOK SURE

The Orleans Coach

ISSUED JUNE 3d

REELS

CHILD Released July 8th

Interest. The story of an or= hearted ragpickers and how discovers her real father only animosity of her newly found well in a whirl of exciting in= spectator breathless but happy

Released by the General Film Co.

Released by the General Film Company

AND ALSO

A NATION'S PERIL

ISSUED JUNE 24th

-:- Bound Volume -:-

No. 12. April to June 1912

Moving Picture World

$1.50 Each

Postage 60c Extra, or Express Charges Collect. Order Now.

MOVING PICTURE WORLD

Box 226, Mad. Sq. P. O. N. Y. City

POSTERS

Genuine A. B. C.—And All Other Licensed Posters

One-Sheet, 15c.; Three-Sheet, 35c.; Six-Sheet, 70c. Add 1c. Per Sheet for Postage by Mail.

Tom-Boy Bessie, Home Folks, Missionaries in Darkest Africa, Drummer Girl of Vicksburg, Romance of the Border, Modern Portia, Spanish Cavalier, Senorita's Butterfly, Rubes' Easter at Atlantic City, The Illumination, Honeymooners, Lady of the Lake, Railroad Engineer, Sunset Gun, Under a Flag of Truce, Beast at Bay, Outcast Among Outcasts, Wooden Bowl, Honor of the Sword, When Kings Were Law, War's Havoc, Fighting Dan McCool, Turkish-Italian War, Orleans Coach, Temporary Truce, Neighbors, Prisoner of War, Gun Smugglers, Windy Day, Indian's Gratitude, Fighting Dervishes, Lena and the Geese, Spirit Awakening, Martin Chuzzlewit, Passer-By, Arabian Tragedy, Choir of Densmore, Runaways, French Spy, Dash Through the Clouds, Schoolteacher and Waif, Colonel's Escape, Captured by Bedouins, New Physician, What the Drivel Saw.

All Supplies at Rock Bottom Price.

STERN'S POSTER AND SUPPLY COMPANY

43 E. 21st Street Phone Gramercy 6736 New York City

"There Is a Difference"

A Great Difference

Motion Pictures on a Mirror Screen are 1000% clearer, softer and give double the Illumination of any other curtain.

No metallic cast on account of the snow white face. Natural depth and proper tone and perspective. "The mirror does that." Write to-day for prices.

Mirror Screen Co.

Shelbyville, Indiana

Eastern Agent

FRANK MANNING

922 SIXTH AVENUE :: Phone 401 Plaza :: NEW YORK CITY

F. J. REMBUSCH, President

Exclusive Features!

THE ROYAL FEATURE FILM COMPANY

owners of Ohio State Rights on BISON 101 productions. Will release a carefully selected feature each week, including Bisons, and make exclusive contracts for first run in your city.

OUR RELEASES

BLAZING THE TRAIL	Bison, 2 Reels
POST TELEGRAPHER	Bison, 2 Reels
THE CRISIS	Bison, 2 Reels
LIEUTENANT'S LAST FIGHT	Bison, 2 Reels
DEAD MAN'S CHILD	Gt. Northern, 3 Reels
THE OUTCAST	Bison, 2 Reels
MYSTERIES OF SOULS	Gt. Northern, 3 Reels

Watch for future releases and get busy quick before your competitor beats you to it. You will need each one of them at least two days. One, three, six, eight sheets, heralds, booklets, banners, etc.

COMING.

$25,000.00 worth of features now contracted for, including St. George and the Dragon—Call of a Woman—Last of the Frontignacs—Wreck of the Aurora—Haunted Castle.

Nothing but { State rights features / the best to be had } Released by us

302 Schultz Building, High and Hickory Sts., Columbus, O.

NOW READY

The Instruction Booklet On

SCENARIO WRITING

Entitled

"Technique of the Photoplay"

By EPES W. SARGENT

Concise, Comprehensive, Thorough Instruction in All Details

$1.00 Per Copy, Postage Paid, $1.00

Order Direct From

MOVING PICTURE WORLD

125 East 23rd St. New York City

Attraction for Theatres and Summer Hotels

Illustrated Stereopticon Lectures by

Louise M. Marion

between the Films in Picture Theatres. Operator, Lantern Slides and Posters, etc., furnished if desired.

A beautiful poem with 20 pictures on the

Titanic Disaster

also PATRIOTIC poems and others.

LOUISE M. MARION

459 West 23rd Street - NEW YORK

No poems or slides rented.

TERMS REASONABLE

NOTICE FOR THEATRES AND SUMMER HOTELS

FEATURE FILMS FOR SALE

2 3 4 Reels — Feature Productions — 2 3 4 Reels

WRITE FOR LISTS QUICK

SUPERIOR FEATURE FILM CO.

32 Union Sq., New York City

Is Your Theatre Cool? No?

Then install FANS now.
We have all kinds

Fans Fans Fans

State size and kind wanted, also Current

Moving Picture Machines

Supplies and Genuine Repair Parts of all standard makes.

Transformers and Economizers, Mercury Arc Rectifiers.

Current savers of all kinds.

CAN WE SUPPLY QUICK?
TRY US—WITH AN ORDER.

Chicago Projecting Company
107 N. Dearborn St., Chicago.

Operators!

I guarantee quick and satisfactory repair work on all machines. Only genuine parts supplied. Get my prices on ONE DROP OIL and BULL DOG CEMENT, the best articles of their kind on the market.

H. A. MACKIE, Inc.
21 East 14th Street New York
'Phone, 2478 Stuyvesant

EDISON MACHINES

Wanted to hear from all exhibitors using old style Edison machines, either one or two-pin, and we will tell you how cheap you can have it and fitted with outside shutter and chain drive take-up, just like the new type "B" machine. We use nothing but genuine factory parts, and we guarantee a rebuilt machine to give just the same results as a brand new Edison type "B."

REBUILT

NEW MACHINES

We sell all makes, and take old outfits in part payment, regardless of condition. Write for our exchange proposition before you buy a new machine. We can save you money.

Stelzer Bros.

800 Kankakee St., Lincoln, Ill.

"Hook Up with the Winner"

I don't care whether you call it Laemmle Luck, Laemmle Enterprise or Laemmle Anything else, the Big Fact remains that those who hitch their wagon to the Laemmle star are successful. I never saw so much new business in my life as the Laemmle Film Service offices have taken on in the past few weeks. We have simply been swamped, but we've kept on buying and buying film enough to supply the demand.

Rub the Laemmle rabbit's foot on your box office receipts and watch them grow! Write right away and let me tell you just what kind of a service I can give you—a service that will make you independent in every sense of the word—a service that will smash your worries to pieces and boost your good fortune. Let me tell you that you're lucky to own a theater right now. There's nothing I'd like better than to own a hundred theaters, each getting the glorious service the Laemmle offices are now supplying. Hook up with the winner while the hooking's good!

CARL LAEMMLE
PRESIDENT
THE LAEMMLE FILM SERVICE
204 WEST LAKE ST., CHICAGO, ILL.
SYKES BLOCK, MINNEAPOLIS, MINN.
1312 FARNAM ST., OMAHA, NEB.
421 WALNUT ST., DES MOINES, IOWA

THE BIGGEST AND BEST FILM RENTER IN THE WORLD

INDEPENDENT Release Dates

AMERICAN.

June 13—The Simple Love (Dr.).....1000
June 17—The Weaker Brother (Drama).....
June 17—A Fifty-Mile Auto Contest (Sporting)
June 20—The Wordless Message (Drama).....1000
June 24—The Evil Inheritance (Dr.).....
June 27—The Marauders (Dr.).....
July 1—The Girl Back Home (Dr.).....
July 3—An Hour of Terror (Dr.).....1000
July 4—Under False Pretenses (Dr.).....1000
July 6—The Fall of Black Hawk (2 reels, Hist.)1000
July 10—The Fall of Blackhawk (2 reels, Hist.)2000
July 11—The Vanishing Race (Dr.).....1000
July 15—The Fatal Mirror (Dr.).....1000

AMBROSIO.

June 21—The Maniac (Dr.).....
June 28—The Actor's Test (Dr.).....
June 28—Benares, the Sacred City (Sc.).....
July 5—The Legend of the Chrysanthemum (Dr.)
July 5—The Airman (Com.).....

BISON.

June 8—The Outcast (2 reels, Drama).....
June 18—His Punishment (Dr.).....
June 22—On the Warpath (Dr.).....
June 25—His Message (Dr.).....
June 29—The Colonel's Peril (Dr.).....
July 2—The Sheriff of Stony Butte (Dr.).....
July 6—The Restoration (Dr.).....

CHAMPION.

June 10—Camille (2 reels, Dr.).....2000
June 12—A Western Child's Heroism (Dr.).... 950
July 1—Pat's Breeches (Com.).....
July 1—Little Old New York (Hist.).....
July 8—The Gypsy Bride (Dr.).....

COMET.

June 3—My Wife's Birthday (Com.).....1000
June 8—The Isle of Strife—Cuba (Edu.)... .1000
June 10—The Price of Deceit (Dr.)..... 910
June 15—An Interrupted Wedding (Com.).....1000
June 17—The Plucky Ranch Girl (W. Dr.).....1000
June 22—The Tale of a Rubber Boot (Com.)... 925
June 24—A Realistic Rehearsal (Com.)..... 750
June 24—Street Carnival in Jacksonville (Sc.).. 200
June 29—A Wild Rose of the Hills (W. Dr.)..1000
July 1—Jenks and His Motor Boat (Com.)..... 500
July 1—New York Catholic Protectory (Edu.) 500
July 6—A Heroine of Pioneer Days (Dr.) 975
July 8—The Poughkeepsie Intercollegiate Regatta (Sporting).....1000

ECLAIR.

June 16—A Lucky Fright (Dr.).....
June 16—Scenes of Luxor and Thebes in Egypt (Scenic) .....
June 18—How She Became Her Husband's Wife (Drama) .....
June 25—A Romance in Old Kentucky (Dr.)...
June 27—Three Men and a Girl (Com.).....
June 30—Willy Wants a Free Lunch (Com.)..
June 30—Picturesque Portugal (Sc.).....
June 30—Woman's Work (Edu.).....
July 2—The Holy City (Biblical).....
July 4—Hearts and Memories (Dr.).....
July 7—For Love (Dr.).....
July 7—Arabian Theatres (Edu.).....

GEM.

June 11—The Princess Lorraine (2 reels, Dr.)..
June 18—Hill Folks (Dr.).....
June 25—The Reason (Dr.).....
July 2—The Medal of Honor (Drama).....
July 9—Under Two Flags (2 reels, Dr.).....

GAUMONT.

June 18—When the Leaves Fall (Drama).....
June 20—Bells of Paradise (2 reels, Drama)..
June 20—By the Zuyder Zee (Com.).....
June 25—The Auto Smash-up (Dr.).....
June 27—When Money Isn't Money (Com.-Dr.)
July 4—Written in Blood (2 reels, Dr.).....
July 9—The Lion's Revenge (Dr.).....
July 11—Love's Floral Tribute (Dr.).....

GREAT NORTHERN.

June 1—Love At First Sight (Dr.).....
June 8—Those Eyes (Com.).....
June 8—The New Teacher (Drama).....
June 15—The Price of Secrecy (Dr.).....
June 22—Painter and Peasant (Dr.).....
June 29—How to Make a Reputation (Dr.)....
June 29—A Bath With Consequences (Com.)...
July 6—The Two Sisters (Dr.).....
July 6—Copper Industry In Spain (Edu.).....

IMP.

June 17—Fanchon, the Cricket (Drama).....1000
June 20—The Schemers (Drama).....1000
June 22—Printing Uncle Sam's Paper Money (Industrial) 600
June 22—Cowland (Com.-Dr.)..... 400
June 24—The Dividing Line (Dr.).....1000
June 27—A Child's Influence (Dr.).....1000
June 29—His Other Self (Dr.)..... 600
June 29—Portugese Joe (Com.-Dr.)..... 400
July 1—Love, War and a Bonnet (Dr.).....1000
July 4—Betty, the Coxswain (Dr.).....1000
July 6—Home Again (Com.)..... 600
July 6—Printing and Engraving U. S. Government Stamps (Edu.)..... 400
July 8—The Parson and the Medicine Man (Dr.).....1000
July 11—Caught in the Flash (Com.-Dr.).....1000
July 13—The Wrong Weight (Com.)..... 600
July 13—In and Around Chicago, Ill. (Topical.) 400

LUX.

May 24—Arabella's Flight (Com.)..... 291
May 31—The Apache Ball (Dr.)..... 698
May 31—Arabella Works Too Hard (Com.)....
June 7—After Many Years (Dr.)..... 950
June 14—What An Ass (Comedy)..... 514
June 14—Music Mad (Comedy)..... 453
June 21—The Gambler (Dr.)..... 948
June 28—Thou Art the Man (Dr.)..... 721
June 28—By the Cliffs of Etretat (Sc.)..... 259
July 5—The Empty Holster (Dr.)..... 860

ITALA.

(By N. Y. M. P. Co.)

Jan. 27—Toto Enamorato (Com.).....
Feb. 3—The Ascent of the Matterhorn.....
Feb. 3—Anarchical Attempt (Com.).....
Feb. 10—Toto, Door-Keeper (Com.).....
Feb. 10—Hunting Ducks (Sporting).....
Feb. 17—The Italian Army in Tripoli.....
Feb. 17—Making a Cinematograph Scene.....
June 29—The Great Bank Failure (2 reels, Dr.)
July 6—A Woman's Duplicity (Dr.).....

MAJESTIC.

June 18—Hoop-skirts, My Dear (Com.).....
June 18—The Bowery Pearl Fisheries (Com.)..
June 23—Meals By Weight (Com.).....
June 23—The Knight and the Friar (Com.-Dr.)
June 25—Papa's Double (Com.).....
June 30—Getting Rich Quick (Com.).....
July 2—The Flat Upstairs (Com.).....
July 2—The Burglar Alarm Mat (Com.).....
July 7—The Cook Came Back (Com.).....
July 9—The Widower's Widow (Com.-Dr.).....
July 9—Father's Bust (Com.).....

NESTOR.

June 8—Hats and Happiness (Dr.).....
June 12—Those Were Happy Days (Com.).....
June 12—Views of the Hudson Valley (Scenic)
June 7—(Release Cancelled for this Date)....
June 10—The Belle of Bar Z Ranch (Com.)....
June 12—The Squatter's Child (Dr.).....
June 14—The Girl and the Sheriff (Dr.).....
June 17—The Bandit of Tropico (Drama).....
June 19—The Land of Might (Drama).....
June 21—Beneath Western Skies (Drama)....
June 24—The Dawn of Netta (Dr.).....
June 26—Reaping the Whirlwind (Dr.).....
June 28—Young Wild West Leading a Raid (Dr.)
July 1—When Hearts Are Trumps (Dr.).....
July 3—Hard Luck Bill (Com.).....
July 5—Young Wild West on the Border (Dr.)

POWERS.

June 15—Italian Friendship (Dr.) .....
June 19—No Children Wanted (Com.-Dr.).....
June 22—Two Gay Boys (Comedy).....
June 26—Their One Day's Work (Dr.).....
June 26—The Helping Hand (Com.).....
July 3—The Coming Generation (Com.).....
July 5—Mates and Mis-mates (Dr.).....
July 10—Tangled (Com.).....
July 10—A Leap Year Delusion (Com.).....

RELIANCE.

June 1—His Mother's Son (Dr.).....
June 5—Uncle Hiram Visits Washington (Edu.)
June 8—Kaintuck (Dr.) .....
June 12—A Day at the Zoological Gardens (Edu.) .....
June 15—Virginius (2 reels, Dr.).....
June 19—One Man's Love (Drama).....
June 22—The Forbidden Way (Drama).....
June 22—The Pelican (Edu.).....
June 26—Votes for Women (2 reels) (Dr.).....
June 29—Before the White Man Came (Dr.).....
July 3—A Man's Duty (Dr.).....
July 6—Rip Van Winkle (Dr.).....
July 10—Grandpa (Dr.).....
July 13—The Toy 'Phone (Dr.).....

REPUBLIC.

June 1—The Other Man (Dr.).....
June 4—Reparation (Dr.).....
June 8—A Western Triangle (Dr.).....
June 8—Beautiful Palo Duro (Scenic).....
June 11—Was He a Suffragette? (Com.).....
June 15—A Shadow of the Past (Dr.).....
June 18—The Serpent (Drama).....
June 22—Her Father, the Sheriff (Drama).....
June 25—The Queen of May (Dr.).....
June 29—In the Balance (Dr.).....
July 2—Evil Be to Him Who Evil Thinks (Dr.)
July 8—The Gold In the Auto (Dr.).....
July 15—The All-seeing Eye (Dr.).....

REX.

June 9—Tears o' Peggy (Com-Dr.).....
June 13—The Flirt (Drama).....
June 16—The Diamond Path (Drama).....
June 20—The Power of Thought (Dr.).....
June 23—The Voice of the Millions (Dr.).....
June 27—The Weight of a Feather (Dr.).....
June 27—The Weight of a Feather (Dr.).....
June 30—Looking Backward (Dr.).....
July 4—A Prophet Without Honor (Dr.).....
July 7—The Unknown Bride (Dr.).....

SOLAX.

June 12—Micky's Pal (Dr.).....
June 14—The Great Discovery (Com.).....
June 19—Four Friends (Drama).....
June 21—Indian Summer (Comedy).....
June 26—Love's Railroad (Com.).....
June 26—Planting Time (Com.).....
June 28—The Call of the Rose (Dr.).....
July 3—Father and the Boys (Com.).....
July 5—Between Two Fires (Dr.).....
July 10—Winsome But Wise (Com.).....
July 12—Hotel Honeymoon (Com.).....

THANHOUSER.

June 18—The Twins (Drama).....
June 21—Called Back (2-reel Drama).....
June 23—The Farm and the Flat (Com.).....
June 25—In Blossom Time (Dr.).....
June 28—The Professor's Son (Dr.).....
June 30—Doggie's Debut (Dr.).....
July 2—Out of the Dark (Dr.).....
July 5—Ma and Dad (Com.-Dr.).....
July 7—The Portrait of the Lady Anne (Dr.)..
July 9—Pa's Medicine (Com.-Dr.).....
July 9—The Hazers Hazed (Com.).....
July 12—Nursie and the Knight (Com.-Dr.)....

VICTOR.

June 14—Not Like Other Girls (Com.).....

GREAT NORTHERN SPECIAL FEATURE FILM COMPANY.

Feb. 27—The Nihilist's Conspiracy.....
March 18—The Call of a Woman.....
April 8—Cell Thirteen .....
April 22—The Dead Man's Child.....
April 15—The Dead Man's Child, 3 reels (Dr.)

FEATURE AND EDUCATIONAL FILM CO.

Nov. 20—Love and Aviation (Dr.).....
Nov. 20—Zigomar (Dr.).....
Dec. 18—The Love Chase (Com.).....

SHAMROCK.

May 7—A Gypsy's Love (Dr.).....
May 11—Algernon's Busy Day (Com.).....
May 14—On the Verge (Dr.).....
May 18—Algernon's Busy Day (Com.).....
May 21—The Thorny Path (Dr.).....
May 25—A Cold Reception (Com.).....
May 25—The Kissing Germ (Com.).....
May 28—White Fawn (Dr.).....
May 31—A Petticoat Ranch Boss (Com.).....

SPECIAL ROLL TICKETS The Big Ticket. Any Printing Any Colors

5,000 - - $1.25 20,000 - - $4.60 50,000 - - $7.50
10,000 - $2.50 25,000 - - $5.50 100,000 - - $10.00

Get the Samples Stock Tickets, 6 Cents

NATIONAL TICKET COMPANY - - - Shamokin, Pa.

THANHOUSER

RELEASED SUNDAY, JULY 7
IN 2 REELS

"Under Two Flags"

OUIDA'S GREATEST STORY ISSUED AS A STERLING "THANHOUSER CLASSIC" WITH AN ALL-STAR CAST—ALL THE THANHOUSER FAVORITES. FILMED PRECISELY THE WAY OUIDA WROTE IT—EVERY SITUATION THRILLS AND STARTLES.

TONS OF ADVERTISING MATTER READY—TWO ONE-SHEETS, THREE-SHEETS, HERALDS—BILL IT LIKE A CIRCUS AND BEAT THE HEAT.

Through Film Supply Company of America

SPECIAL NOTICE OF INTEREST!

Beginning July 1st

The Continental Kunstfilm of Berlin

WILL RELEASE ALL THEIR TWO, THREE AND FOUR REEL FEATURES THROUGH THE

NEW YORK FILM COMPANY

Sole Agents for U. S., Canada and all America

Every ten days a new feature will be put on market with exclusive rights for exclusive territory. The films will be manufactured in this country by American labor taken from original imported negatives, all of which will be fully protected, registered and copyrighted in Washington.
We announce the following subjects to be released in logical order :—

1st	Release	The Yellow Peril, 3000 feet.
2nd	"	At Night Through Icebergs, 3000 feet.
3rd	"	The Jealous Impersonator, 2000 feet.
4th	"	THE MIRACLE, 3500 feet.

Synopsis, also Samples of Lithographs, will be Mailed Upon Request

NEW YORK FILM COMPANY 12 UNION SQUARE NEW YORK, N. Y.

LICENSED Release Dates

RELEASE DAYS.

Monday—Biograph, Kalem, Lubin, Pathe, Selig, Vitagraph.

Tuesday—Edison, Essanay, C. G. P. C., Cines, Selig, Vitagraph.

Wednesday—Edison, Eclipse, Kalem, Lubin, Pathe, Vitagraph.

Thursday—Biograph, Essanay, Lubin, Melies, Pathe, Selig.

Friday—Edison, Essanay, Kalem, Selig, C. G. P. C., Vitagraph.

Saturday—Edison, Essanay, Cines, Lubin, Pathe, Vitagraph.

BIOGRAPH.

June 13—Neighbors (Com.).....
June 13—Katchem Kate (Com.).....
June 17—Lena and the Geese (Drama).....
June 20—The Spirit Awakened (Drama).....
June 24—A Dash Through the Clouds (Com.)..
June 24—The New Baby (Com.).....
June 27—The School Teacher and the Waif (Com.-Dr.) .....
July 1—Man's Lust for Gold (Dr.).....
July 4—One Round O'Brien (Com.).....
July 4—Trying to Fool Uncle (Com.).....
July 8—An Indian Summer (Dr.).....
July 11—Man's Genesis (Com.).....

CINES.

(G. Kleine.)

June 15—Venice, Italy (Scenic)..... 420
June 18—The Frailty of Man (Dr.)..... 950
June 22—Her Vengeance (Dr.) 1100
June 25—The Girl and the Mayor (Com.)..... 971
June 29—The Wandering Minstrel (Dr.).....1004
July 2—Jenkins Sneezes (Com.)..... 325
July 2—A Violin and a Pipe (Com.)..... 640
July 6—In Wrong (Com.)..... 975
July 9—The Gay Deceivers (Com.)..... 585
July 9—Leah Learns to Dance (Com.)..... 365
July 13—For Her Father's Sake (Dr.)..... 950

EDISON.

June 15—How Father Accomplished His Work (Com.) 570
June 15—Kitty's Hold-Up (Com.)..... 430
June 18—A Man In the Making (Dr.).....1000
June 19—Target Practice of Atlantic Fleet, U. S. Navy (Naval)..... 650
June 19—Apple Pies (Comedy)..... 350
June 21—The Passer-by (Drama).....1000
June 22—The Girl at the Key (Drama).....1000
June 25—The Little Bride of Heaven (Dr.)...1000
June 26—Pennsylvania State Police, Troop "B" (Topical) 500
June 26—The Wooden Indian (Com.)..... 500
June 28—Master and Pupil (Dr.).....1000
June 29—The Father (Dr.).....1000
July 2—The Close of the American Revolution (Hist.).....1000
July 3—Partners for Life (Com.-Dr.).....1000
July 5—The Workman's Lesson (Dr.).....1000
July 6—How the Boys Fought the Indians (Com.)..... 700
July 6—An Intelligent Camera (Com.)..... 300
July 9—After Many Days (Dr.).....1000
July 10—The Artist's Joke (Com.).....1000
July 12—For Valour (Dr.).....1000
July 13—Picturesque Darjeeling, India (Sc.)... 300
July 13—Madame de Mode (Com.)..... 700

ESSANAY.

June 8—A Child of the Purple Sage (Dr.).....1000
June 11—The Mis-sent Letter (Com.).....1000
June 13—The Honeybug's First Quarrel (Com.).1000
June 14—The Passing Shadow (Dr.).....1000
June 15—Western Hearts (Dr.).....1000
June 18—Broncho Billy's Gratitude (Drama)..1000
June 20—The Return of William Marr (Dr.)..1000
June 21—Derby Day at Churchill Downs (Spt.)1000
June 22—The Foreman's Cousin (Drama).....1000
June 25—Billy and the Butler (Com.-Dr.).....1000
June 27—A Guardian's Luck (Com.).....1000
June 28—Springing A Surprise (Com.).....1000
June 29—Broncho Billy and the Indian Maid (Dr.) 1000
July 2—On the Cactus Trail (W. Dr.).....1000
July 4—White Roses (Dr.).....1000
July 5—The Butterfly Net (Com.).....1000
July 6—Broncho Billy's Narrow Escape (Dr.)..1000
July 9—Signal Lights (Dr.).....1000
July 11—Pa Trubell's Troubles (Com.).....1000
July 12—Down Jayville Way (Com.).....1000
July 13—A Story of Montana (Dr.).....1000

KALEM.

June 7—The Pugilist and the Girl (Com.).....1000
June 10—Making Photoplays in Egypt (Vocational) 1000
June 12—The Gun Smugglers (Dr.).....1000
June 14—The Girl Strikers (Dr.).....1000
June 17—The Bag of Gold (Drama).....1000
June 19—An Arabian Tragedy (Drama).....1000
June 21—The Rube Detective (Comedy).....
June 21—The Chauffeur's Dream (Comedy)....
June 24—The Colonel's Escape (Dr.).....1000
June 26—Captured by Bedouins (Dr.).....1000
June 28—The Penalty of Intemperance (Dr.)..1000
July 1—Tragedy of the Desert (2 reels Dr.) (Special).....2000
July 1—The Girl Bandits' Hoodoo (Com.).....1000
July 3—The Filibusterers (Dr.) 1000
July 5—Winning a Widow (Dr.).....1000
July 8—The Organ Grinder (Dr.).....
July 8—Nile Hippopotamus (Edu.).....
July 10—The Bugler of Battery B (Dr.)..... 875
July 10—Hungry Hank's Hallucination (Com.) 125
July 12—Saved by Telephone (Dr.).....
July 12—A Pet of the Cairo Zoo (Edu.).....

LUBIN.

June 13—An Indian's Gratitude (Dr.).....1000
June 15—Her Gift (Dr.).....1000
June 17—The Choir of Densmore (Drama)....1000
June 19—The Widow Casey's Return (Com.)..1000
June 20—The Ingrate (Drama).....1000
June 22—The Runaways (Comedy).....1000
June 24—Over the Divide (Dr.).....1000
June 26—The New Physician (Dr.).....1000
June 27—From Fireman to Engineer (Dr.).....1000
June 28—Bridget's Explanation (Com.).....
June 28—The Tramp Elephant (Com.).....
June 29—What the Driver Saw (Com.).....1000
July 1—The Spoiled Child (Dr.).....1000
July 3—The Prize Essay (Dr.).....1000
July 4—A Child's Prayer (Dr.).....1000
July 5—Just Pretending (Com.).....
July 5—A Pair of Boots (Com.).....
July 6—The Back Window (Com.-Dr.).....1000
July 8—The Halfbreed's Treachery (Dr.).....1000
July 10—The Stolen Ring (Dr.).....1000
July 11—The Sheriff's Daughter (Dr.).....1000
July 12—Over the Hills to the Poor House (Com.).....
July 12—The Hypnotist (Com.).....
July 13—The Stranded Actors (Com.).....1000

MELIES.

May 16—The Swastika (Dr.).....1000
May 23—All Is Fair (Com.).....
May 30—The Rustler's Daughter (Dr.).....1000
June 6—Making Good (Dr.).....1000
June 13—Ghosts At Circle X Camp (Com.)....1000
June 20—Two Loves (Dr.).....1000
June 27—A Woman's Way (Dr.).....1000
July 4—The Cowboy Kid (Dr.).....1000
July 11—The Man Inside (Dr.).....1000
July 18—The Lesson (Dr.).....
July 18—A Cowboy's Proposal (Com.).....

ECLIPSE.

(G. Kleine.)

June 26—The Music Hall Singer (Dr.).....1000
July 3—Scenes in Somerset, England (Sc.).... 200
July 3—The Wax Model (Dr.)..... 800
July 10—A Mysterious Case (Dr.).....1000

PATHE.

June 3—Pathe's Weekly, No. 23 (Topical)....
June 5—The Texan Twins (Com.).....
June 6—The Lure of the Footlights (Dr.)....
June 8—A stern Destiny (Dr.).....
June 10—Pathe's Weekly, No. 24, (Topical)..1000
June 12—Any Old Clothes (Com.).....
June 13—A Redskin's Appeal (Dr.).....
June 15—Niagara Falls (Scenic).....
June 17—Pathe's Weekly No. 25—1912 (Top.)
June 19—The Gambler's Reformation (Dr.)..
June 20—The Fickle Soldier (Drama).....
June 22—An Indian Idyl (Drama).....
June 24—Pathe's Weekly, No. 26, 1912 (Top.)..1000
June 24—A Nation's Peril (Special—2 reels, Dr.)
June 26—True Love (Dr.).....
June 27—Deer Slayers Retribution (Dr.).....
June 29—The Squawman's Sweetheart (Dr.)...
July 1—Pathe's Weekly, No. 27—1912 (Top.) 1000
July 3—Where Jealousy Leads (Com.-Dr.).....
July 4—The Greed of Gold (Dr.).....
July 6—The Wooing of White Fawn (Dr.).....
July 8—Pathe's Weekly, No. 28, 1912 (Top.)
July 8—The Adopted Child (Special Release) (Dr.).....
July 10—On the Brink of the Chasm (Dr.)....
July 11—His Wife's Old Sweetheart (Dr.).....
July 13—The Unwilling Bride (Dr.).....

C. G. P. C.

May 31—Life Among the Mursits (Custom)....
June 4—Max Sets the Fashion (Com.).....
June 4—Costumes of Different Periods (Edu.)
June 7—The Enchanted Fifer (Juvenile).....
June 7—The Irbith (Siberian) Fair (Travel)...
June 11—Trap of Death (Dr.).....
June 11—Cavalry Test Marches in Belgium (Military) .....
June 14—Pepita's Escapades (Com.).....
June 14—Catching Crocodiles on the River Nile (Industrial) .....
June 18—Mimi's Love Story (Drama).....
June 21—The Mystified Pierrot (Com.).....
June 21—London (Scenic).....
June 25—The Death of Saul (Biblical).....
June 28—The Heat Wave (Comedy).....
June 28—The Frog (Scientific).....
July 2—Wild Birds at Home (Edu.).....
July 2—The House of Mystery (Com.).....
July 3—Winter Landscapes in Finland (Scenic)
July 5—The Would-be Hunter's Nightmare (Com.).....
July 5—Hairdressing of Other Days (Edu.)....
July 9—The Geisha's Love Story (Dr.).....
July 12—Max Takes Tonics (Com.).....

SELIG.

June 4—When the Heart Calls (Dr.).....1000
June 6—The Mystery of Room 29 (Dr.).....1000
June 7—Mistaken Identity (Com.)..... 500
June 7—School Days (Com.)..... 500
June 10—The Price of Art (Drama).....1000
June 11—The Old Stage Coach (Drama).....1000
June 13—The Vision Beautiful (Drama).....1000
June 14—Goody Goody Jones (Comedy)..... 500
June 14—Katzenjammer Kids—No. 7—Unwilling Scholars (Comedy)..... 500
June 17—The Professor's Wooing (Drama)...1000
June 18—The Captain of the "Nancy Lee" (Com.-Dr.) 1000
June 20—In Exile (Drama).....1000
June 21—Sheep Shearing In New Mexico (Edu.) 500
June 21—The Katzenjammer Kids No. 8—The Arrival of Cousin Otto (Com.).... 500
June 24—The Adopted Son (Drama).....1000
June 25—Pansy (Com.-Dr.) 1000
June 27—His Father's Bugle (Drama).....
June 27—Elephant Butte Dam at Albuquerque (Educational) .....
June 28—Murray, the Masher (Comedy).....1000
July 1—The Lake of Dreams (Dr.).....1000
July 2—The Cat and the Canary (Com.-Dr.)...1000
July 4—The Last Dance (Dr.).....1000
July 5—Baby Betty (Dr.).....1000
July 8—Under Suspicion (Dr.).....1000
July 9—The Vow of Ysobel (Dr.).....
July 11—His Masterpiece (Dr.).....1000
July 12—A Mail Order Hypnotist (Com.).....
July 12—The Los Angeles Police Department (Top.).....

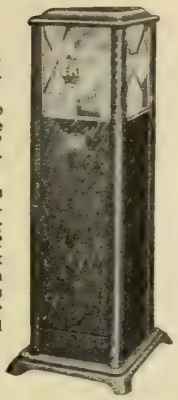
VITAGRAPH.

June 10—Lulu's Doctor (Dr.).....1000
June 11—Pandora's Box (Com.).....1000
June 12—Yellow Bird (Dr.).....1000
June 14—Days of Terror (Hist.-Dr.).....1000
June 17—The Nipper's Lullabye (Drama)....1000
June 17—The French Spy 3 reels; Dr.; Special).3000
June 18—Her Diary (Com.-Drama).....1000
June 19—Chased By Bloodhounds (Com.)..... 600
June 19—Automobile Race at Santa Monica (Topical) 400
June 21—Her Brother (Drama).....1000
June 22—The Gamblers (Drama).....1000
June 24—The Extension Table (Dr.).....1000
June 25—The Carpathia (Topical).....
June 25—Never Again (Comedy).....
June 26—When Roses Wither (Dr.).....1000
June 28—Psuedo Sultan (Comedy).....1000
June 29—At the End of the Trail (Dr.).....1000
July 1—After Many Years (Dr.).....1000
July 2—The Church Across the Way (Dr.)....1000
July 3—Lincoln's Gettysburg Address (Hist.)..1000
July 5—On the Pupil of His Eye (Dr.).....1000
July 6—The Troublesome Step-daughters (Com-Dr.).....1000
July 8—Her Old Sweetheart (Com.-Dr.)..... 500
July 8—Fate's Awful Jest (Dr.)..... 500
July 9—The Curse of the Lake (Dr.).....1000
July 10—A Bunch of Violets (Dr.).....1000
July 12—The Foster Child (Dr.).....1000
July 13—Aunty's Romance (Dr.).....1000

AMERICAN SONG SLIDE & POSTER CO.
549 First National Bank Bldg., Chicago.

Send us your orders for one, three and six sheet posters for licensed films and they will be shipped same day as received. We have absolutely the best song slide service in America.

Security Ticket Box



Built expressly for those who do not require the more expensive "chopper."

Tickets are deposited by patrons upon entering.

Of same construction as Photo-Play Ticket Chopper, minus the defacing mechanism. In place of same Security Ticket Box has trap, which when tripped by attendant drops all tickets into chamber below, this being secured by lock.

Price $35.00

Business Boosters for Exhibitors

Feature Posters, Banners, Heralds, for All Feature Films

Licensed and Independent, Something New Every Week

EIGHT SHEETS 75c THREE SHEETS 35c ONE SHEET POSTERS 15c

(Add 1c per sheet for postage if ordered sent by mail)

A Dash Through the Clouds, The Schoolteacher and Waif, The Colonel's Escape, Captured by Bedouins, The New Physician, What the Driver Saw, Temporary Truce, Windy Day, Martin Chuzzlewit, Gun Smugglers, Neighbors, Indian's Gratitude, Prisoner of War, The Orleans Coach, Tomboy Bessie, Missionaries in Darkest Africa, Romance of the Border, Life With a Circus, Drummer Girl of Vicksburg, Home Folks, Turkish-Italian War, A Modern Portia, The Lady of the Lake, Beast at Bay, Fighting Dervishes of Desert, Senorita's Butterfly, Outcast Among Outcasts, The Honeymooners, Rube's Easter at Atlantic City, Under Flag of Truce, Sunset Gun, Girl with Lantern, Convict Brother, Railroad Engineer, When Kings Were Law, Honor and the Sword, Greater Love, Lena and the Geese, Choir of Densmore, French Spy, Nation's Peril, Arabian Tragedy, Spirit Awakened, Wooden Bowl, Fighting Dan McCool, Coming of Columbus, Treasure Island, Last Rites of Maine, and many others.

And all feature subjects for past and future releases.

REMIT WITH ORDER. NO PERSONAL CHECKS OR C. O. D.

PHOTOPLAY ADVERTISING & SPECIALTY CO., Main Office: 121-123 Fourth Avenue, PITTSBURGH, PA.

BRANCH OFFICES: 1022 Superior Ave., Cleveland, O. 26 W. Naghten St., Columbus O.
Equity Bldg., Detroit, Mich.

SPECIAL OFFER

In order to obtain as wide a distribution, in as short a time as possible, so that our screen may be in evidence in every section of the United States of $25.00 to the first exhibitor purchasing a

We Will Give A Special Discount During the Months of July and Aug.

Perfection Concave Screen

IN EACH OF 100 DIFFERENT TOWNS AND CITIES

This will enable exhibitors to take advantage of this offer during the summer months, the time that is usually devoted to remodeling, decorating and repairing their theatres, and we ask you

If It Is Not Good Business Policy

to throw away the old rag, take advantage of our offer and show your patrons

The Best Picture That Money Can Buy?

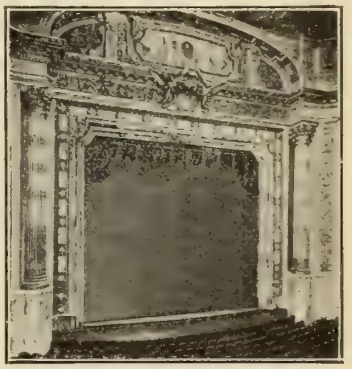
Inventors Specialty Mfg. Co.

620 Ashland Block :: CHICAGO, ILL.

J-M Vitribestos Curtain

Is Virtually a Fire-Wall

J-M Vitribestos Theatre Curtains comply with the Underwriters' requirements of a "movable fire-wall." They consist of a steel structural frame covered on the stage side with Vitribestos fireproof sheets one inch thick, a dead air space of several inches in the center and a sheet of steel next to the audience. The Vitribestos sheets are fastened to strips of steel which form a net-work on the stage side of the curtain. All joints are carefully cemented with fireproof cement.



J-M Vitribestos Curtain in Century Theatre, New York

J-M Vitribestos Curtains will stand the flame of a blow-torch (1500 degrees Fah.) for 15 minutes before the other side of the curtain reaches a temperature of 155 degrees Fah.

We are also prepared to furnish Asbestos Theatre Curtains to meet all requirements.

Write our nearest Branch for booklet on J-M Theatre Necessities.

H. W. JOHNS-MANVILLE CO.

Baltimore, Boston, Buffalo, Chicago, Cincinnati, Cleveland, Dallas, Detroit, Indianapolis, Kansas City, Los Angeles, Milwaukee, Minneapolis, New Orleans, New York, Omaha, Philadelphia, Pittsburgh, San Francisco, Seattle, St. Louis, 1625

For Canada:—THE CANADIAN H. W. JOHNS-MANVILLE CO., LTD.
Toronto, Ont. Montreal, Que. Winnipeg, Man. Vancouver, B. C.

SPECIAL NOTICE

OWING TO THE LARGE AND UNLOOKED-FOR DEMAND FOR POSTERS OF

Pathe's "THE ORLEANS COACH" and Edison's "MARTIN CHUZZLEWIT"

A second edition of one-sheets has been issued. As the supply is limited, let us have your order early.

HANDSOME PHOTO-POSTERS of

Miss Alice Joyce of the Kalem Co. and Mr. John Bunny of the Vitagraph Co.

are now ready for shipment. Exchanges send for Free Samples

A. B. C. COMPANY : : : : : Cleveland. Ohio

Use the Real

Projector Carbon "Biograph"

Brand

L. E. Frorup & Co.

232 Greenwich St., New York City

COLUMBIA Feature Film Co.

Up-to-date feature films—
Prompt service—Low Rates—
Every reel in A1 condition—

Write for special reduced prices

422 N. High St. = Columbus, O.

CONNECTICUT & NEW JERSEY

Bookings in Licensed Theatres only for the Milano (5 reel)

DANTE'S INFERNO

The most wonderful moving picture yet produced without exception. Draws capacity business everywhere. Will bring people to your theatre that were never there before.

WRITE FOR DATES AND TERMS

World's Moving Picture Classics.

Box 485, Madison Square P. O. New York

NOTE: Connecticut and New Jersey only

THINK IT OVER

Increase Your Daily Receipts 50 Per Cent. Reduce Your Current and Carbon Bill 30 Per Cent by Using

MIRROROIDE
Patents Pending

The World's Greatest and Best Projection Surface. Over 60 Per Cent. of the Largest and Best Theaters in the United States and Canada Use

MIRROROIDE

A Mercury Foil Filled Canvas.

Over 1,000 Testimonials the World Over Substantiate Every Claim We Make. Some of Our Screens and Curtains Have Been in Use for Years. They Show No Indication of Peeling or Deteriorating in Any Way. In Fact, They Are Brighter than Ever. That Is Why We Guarantee to Last a Lifetime—to Stand Any Weather, Any Climate, Any Air.

MIRROROIDE

MIRROROIDE

Is Not Aluminum. Naturally No Glare, Eye Strain or Haze. If You Want Perfect Daylight Projection, You Must Use

MIRROROIDE

Let Us Send You Our Large Free Samples. Prove It Yourself. Test Against Any Curtain or Screen You Ever Saw. Is This Not a Fair Test? It Is Possible to Show Pictures in Daylight on the Streets with MIRROROIDE. No Other Curtain or Screen Will Do This. No Other Curtain or Screen Is Sold Under a Life Guarantee.

THINK IT OVER

Coming—Our Latest—a rollable Glass Curtain or Screen. Patents Pending.

The J. H. Genter Co., Newburgh, N. Y.

Von Duprin Self-Releasing Fire Exit Latches

"Made On Honor."

Absolutely Reliable. Safeguard Against Panic Disasters.

Approved by New York Board of Underwriters. City of New York Bureau of Buildings.

Applied on thousands of Buildings in more than 500 Cities in the U. S. A. and Canada.

Send for Catalogue No. 10 D.

VONNEGUT HARDWARE CO.,
General Distributors,
Indianapolis, Ind., U.S.A.
Can you afford to be without them?

Safe Exit is a Universal Demand.

Experienced Director

Strictly high-class man at present engaged desires to make new connection.

Address, EXPERIENCED
1071 St. Nicholas Avenue
Apt. 6A NEW YORK CITY

"ELECTRA" CARBONS

MADE ESPECIALLY FOR MOVING PICTURE WORK

PINK

LABEL

TRADE MARK

GUARANTEE OF PERFECT PROJECTION FOR A.C. & D.C.

SOLE IMPORTER FOR UNITED STATES AND CANADA

HUGO REISINGER

11 BROADWAY NEW YORK CITY

PUBLISHED EVERY THURSDAY

"Das Lichtbild-Theater"

The most up-to-date and most comprehensive Journal of the Cinematograph Industry in Germany.

Editor-Proprietor: KARL NEUMANN

BERLIN 0.17 FRUCHTSTR. 2

Annual subscription abroad, $3.00. Write for specimen copy.

SOMETHING NEW

THE UNBREAKABLE AND WASHABLE E-Z BLANK MICA SLIDE MAKE YOUR OWN ANNOUNCEMENTS

Made of Specially Prepared Mica That Can be Written on as Easily as Paper

PRICE 25 CENTS EACH

BATTERSHALL & OLESON, 39 W. ADAMS ST. CHICAGO, ILL.

WILLIAMSON MOVING PICTURE CAMERAS

Best on the market, guaranteed. Williamson Printers and Perforators guaranteed to do first-class work or money refunded. Come and see our perforator work and have your film perforating done by us.

WHYTE-WHITMAN CO.

36 East 23rd Street, New York City

Repairs

The most modern shop and best picture machine repair men in the country guarantee you promptest service and complete satisfaction. Second-hand machines bought and sold.

Full Line of Supplies

Selling agents for all makes of machines.

Chicago Moving Picture Supply Co. 107 N. Dearborn Street CHICAGO, ILL.

HENNEGAN'S HERALDS

FOR ALL GOOD PICTURES
BEST
MONEY GETTER FOR EXHIBITORS
1000 BLANK $2.00 ADDITIONAL 1000 $1.50
DATING 50¢ PER 1000 SAMPLES FREE
HENNEGAN & CO. CINCINNATI, O.

Yes, We Are Ready to Serve You!

Write for Prices and Lists. Best Features, Service and Price. A trial will convince you. Plenty Pictorial Advertising.

Phone, Write or Call.

We have yet to be shown that our

Asbestos Booths

(Approved by the departments of 12 States)

Can be equaled for Material, Workmanship and Value.

Let us have the pleasure of quoting you for your house.

Sterns Poster & Supply Co.
43 East 21st Street - - New York City
Phone, Gramercy 6736

AgfA

CELLULOID POSITIVE
CELLULOID NEGATIVE
AND
NON-FLAM POSITIVE

(Made Under License of the Patentee)

RAW FILM SUPPLY CO.

15 EAST 26th STREET - - NEW YORK
Tel. Mad. Sq. 7876 Cable Rawfilm New York

STANDARD MOTION PICTURE MACHINERY

PERFORATORS—PRINTERS—CAMERAS—ACCESSORIES DESIGNED AND MANUFACTURED BY

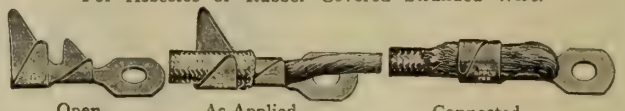
BELL & HOWELL COMPANY

217 West Illinois Street, Chicago, U. S. A.

BELL SOLDERLESS COPPER TERMINALS
For Asbestos or Rubber Covered Stranded Wire.



Open. As Applied. Connected.

Attached with pliers, sure contact, large capacity. The most satisfactory terminal made for use on motion picture arc lamps and rheostat connections. Two sizes: No. 1 (Large) for No. 6 or 8 wire, $1.00 per doz.; No. 2 (Small) for No. 10 or smaller, $0.75 per doz. Sold by most exchanges and dealers, or by mail postpaid. Attractive discounts to the trade. Write for quotations.

MOTION PICTURE SUPPLIES

PHOTOGRAPHIC SUPPLIES — WHOLESALE and RETAIL — THEATRE SEATING

EDISON
MOTIOGRAPH
POWERS
SIMPLEX
STANDARD

MACHINES

ARCO
BIO
ELECTRA
EXCELLO SIEMEN

CARBONS

Ticket Hangers Carrying Cases Machine Parts Asbestos Booths
Reels Rewinders Disinfectants Exit Signs

Everything for the Motion Picture Theatre except the Film

H. A. MACKIE, Inc., 21 East Fourteenth St., Phone Stuyvesant 2478 New York City

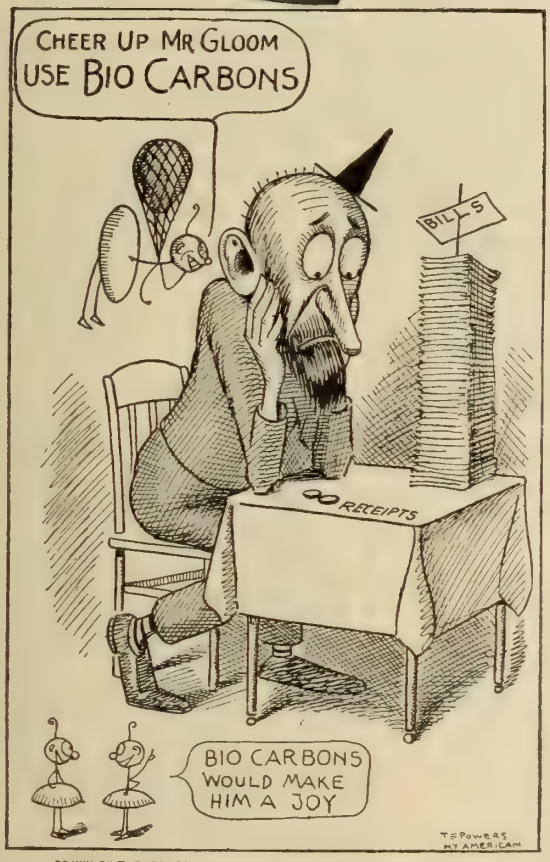
50 REAL JOYS!

Get them from your Exchange or Supply Dealer



DRAWN BY T. E. POWERS, THE FAMOUS CARTOONIST OF THE N. Y. AMERICAN

Mailing Cards of the above Cartoon sent Free to Operators
How many do you want?

BIO RECOGNIZED BIO CARBONS GRADE STANDARD CARBONS

I AM

The Leading Motion Picture

Supply Man

of the World

I Equip Theatres Completely

I have spent $3,000.00 on one edition of HALLBERG'S MOTION PICTURE CATALOGUE, and I have sold several thousand copies to exhibitors and operators for 25c. each, and I have hundreds of letters stating the appreciation of the trade for the information contained in the Catalogue.

There are more copies left for YOU, and will be sent on receipt of 25c.

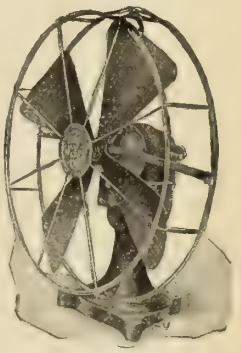
I am jobber of ALL MAKES of Moving Picture Machines

Through my Exchange Department I am prepared to make liberal allowance for your old machine in part payment on purchase price of new M. P. machine of any make.

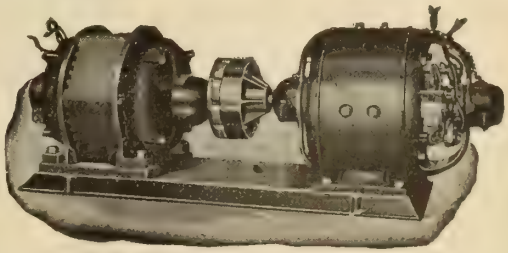


The "Hallberg Electric Economizers" for all circuits, made only by Hallberg, "The Economizer Man," save you the most money on your electric bills and produce the best light possible on your screen. Any information to help you in your difficulties along the above lines cheerfully furnished.

FANS

Ventilating and Exhaust
$7.50 and up

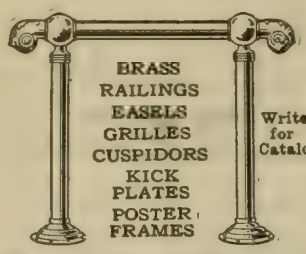
Separate catalogues of different makes of machines, supplies and economizers furnished free upon request, BUT Hallberg's Big Complete Catalogue costs you 25c.



I carry the Largest Complete Stock of
Electra Pink Label Carbons

J. H. HALLBERG
36 E. 23rd St. New York City

McKENNA



McKenna Bros. Brass Co.
PITTSBURGH

OPERA CHAIRS

FOR EVERY PURPOSE
1,000 STYLES
ESTABLISHED 1865
WRITE FOR CAT. NO. 31

115-117 So. Wabash Ave. Chicago, Ill.
The A. H. Andrews Co.
Branches in all Leading Cities
New York Office, 1165 Broadway. Seattle Office, 508-10-12 First Ave., So.
San Francisco Office, 673 Mission St.

SCENARIO WRITERS!

If your scenarios do not sell find out why. Perhaps your manuscript can be rewritten and made saleable, and your mistakes may be corrected in future manuscripts. The author of "Technique of the Photoplay," etc., will give your manuscript personal criticism for a fee of only $2.

Exhibitors!

Submit your difficulties to the author of "The Photoplay Theater," and other articles on management, for advice and suggestion, the result of twenty years' experience in amusement enterprises. Simple questions $1 each.

Epes Winthrop Sargent
Box 70, Madison Square Station
New York City

Get Our Prices Before You Buy

The Wisconsin Seating Company
New London, Wisconsin, U. S. A.

OPERA CHAIRS

GEO. W. BENNETT
34-36 E. 3rd Street
CINCINNATI, OHIO

OH! MR. EXHIBITOR!!

THINK OF THE MOTHERLESS, THE FATHERLESS, AND THE

Childless homes as the result of theater panics. Protect the lives of your patrons by installing our "ANTI-PANIC" THEATER CHAIR. 26 Dead at Cannonsburg, 176 at Boyertown, 575 at Iroquois Theater, Chicago. Make these horrors impossible.
Our chair is a friend to the Public.
It advertises your theater and makes your business grow.
It is a space-saver, life-saver, money-saver. Gives 25% more seating.

IT IS THE ONLY SANITARY CHAIR

It will make your theater all aisles.
It is the world's greatest theater chair, perfected to the highest degree.

Write today for Circular A. THE HARDESTY MFG. CO., Canal Dover, Ohio, U. S. A.

PATHE'S WEEKLY

The Motion Picture Exhibitor's Mascot
ISSUED EVERY MONDAY
Book It Every Week

Make Your Lobby Display Attractive

There is nothing more fascinating to the public than a bright brass frame to display your photos or posters.

We make Lobby and Theatre Fixtures and Brass Rails of every description.

Write for Catalog.

THE NEWMAN MFG. CO.
717-719 Sycamore St., Cincinnati, O.

"EXCELLO"

Flaming Arc Lamp
"EXCELLO" Flaming Carbons
"ELECTRA" Pink Label "

KOERTING & MATHIESEN CO.
22 East 21st St., New York City

CHEAP

STEEL FRAME THEATRE CHAIRS
ABSOLUTELY NON-BREAKABLE

Suitable for small Theatres and Moving Picture Shows. We carry these chairs in stock and can ship immediately.
Second Hand Chairs
Also seating for Out-of-door use.
Address Dept. W

STEEL FURNITURE CO., GRAND RAPIDS, MICH.
New York: 160 5th Ave. Pittsburg: 318 Bissel Block
Philadelphia: 610 Flanders Bldg. Chicago: 352, Dearborn St

THEATRE SEATING—Send for Moving Picture Chair Cat. "V4," Upholstered Chair Cat. "V5."
AMERICAN SEATING COMPANY
Chicago New York Boston Philadelphia

When Your Picture Machine Needs Repairing

Why don't you send it to us?

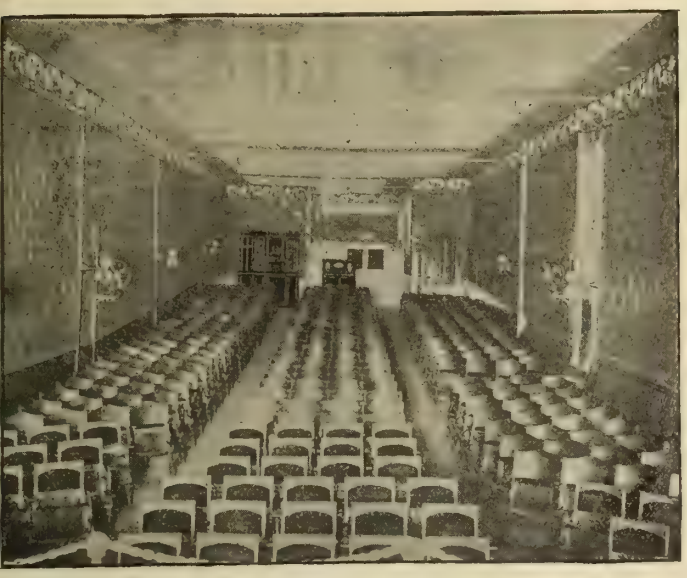
We have the best equipped machine shop in the country and can repair any make of machine. Write us and get acquainted.

We buy second hand machines.

GEO. M. HOKE SUPPLY CO., 176 N. State St., Bet. Lake & Randolph Chicago, Ill.

WURLITZER

World's Largest Mfrs. Established 1856



Wurlitzer PianOrchestra and Mandolin Sextet in Royal Theatre, Lima, O.

Write for 32-page booklet, showing

Wurlitzer Automatic Musical Instruments

in the leading picture theatres of the country.

The Wurlitzer Instruments furnish better music than musicians and reduce expenses. 50 different styles; time payments; big catalog free. If you can't call, write to our nearest branch.

The Rudolph Wurlitzer Company

CINCINNATI 117-121 E. 4th — NEW YORK 25-27 W. 32d — CHICAGO 329-331 S. Wabash — PHILADELPHIA 1335 Chestnut

ST. LOUIS 1169 Olive St. — CLEVELAND 800 Huron Road — BUFFALO 701 Main — LOUISVILLE 426 W. Green — COLUMBUS, O. 57 E. Main

IF

you want to crowd your Theater during the warm weather, you must use

FEATURES

We have hundreds of big productions for RENT, with elaborate advertising matter.

SPECIAL FILM CO.

5 West 14th St. New York

Vacant Dates on Feature Films After July 1st

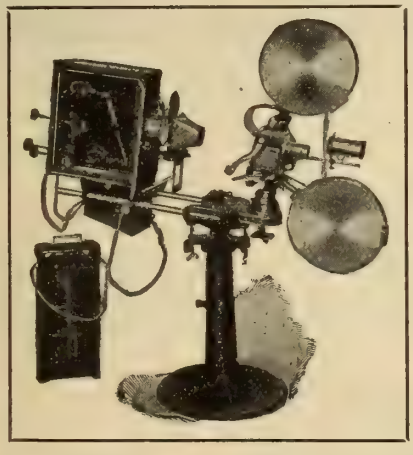
Title	Make	Length Feet	Rental Price per day	Sales Price
Red Rose of the Apache	Pasquali	2400	$15.00	$170.00
Buried Alive	Gaumont	3200	15.00	200.00
Who is Guilty?	Pasquali	1800	10.00	150.00
Prison on the Cliff	Gaumont	2000	10.00	150.00
Flower of the Mormon City	Cosmopolitan	2800	15.00	280.00
The Traitress (Asta Nielsen)	Deutsche Bioscope	3000	15.00	250.00
Retribution " "	" "	3000	15.00	250.00
Gipsy Blood " "	" "	3000	15.00	250.00
Might of Gold " "	" "	3400	15.00	250.00
Peep Behind the Scenes " "	" "	3600	15.00	250.00
Course of True Love " "	" "	3000	15.00	250.00
Great Moment " "	" "	3400	15.00	250.00
An Old Man's Darling, etc " "	" "	2800	15.00	150.00
Romeo and Juliet	Pathe Colored	2700	15.00	175.00
Arson at Sea	" "	2000	10.00	125.00
Henry VIII	" "	3000	15.00	150.00
The Queen's Necklace	" "	2000	10.00	125.00
Temptations of Gay Paris	" "	2000	10.00	125.00
"Cell 13"	Itala	2000	10.00	130.00
The Four Dare Devils	Deutsche Bioscope	3000	15.00	150.00
The Price of Beauty	Gt. Northern	2000	10.00	80.00
Lieut. Rose and the Hidden Treasure	Clarendon	1500	10.00	125.00
Sicilian Blood	Cines	1500	10.00	100.00
The Signal of Distress	Gt. Northern	3000	15.00	150.00
Nursing a Viper	Danish	2000	15.00	200.00
Absalom	Pathe Colored	1500	10.00	100.00
Siege of Calais	" "	2000	10.00	100.00
The Crimson Heart	Lux	1050	5.00	60.00
Lieut. Rose and Moorish Raiders	Clarendon	1000	5.00	60.00
Lieut. Rose and Stolen Battleship	Clarendon	1000	5.00	60.00

A Live and Let Live summer service, 18 reels for $18.00, with posters and banners gratis. Write for list of films for sale at $5.00 and upwards.

G. W. BRADEN BURGH, 231-233 N. 8th St., Philadelphia, Pa.

THOU SHALT NOT STEAL!

The Greatest Living American Has Formed A New Party — His Claims Are Recognized As Just



WE DO NOT FORM A NEW PARTY EVEN THOUGH OUR CLAIMS OF PRIORITY OF IMPROVEMENTS ARE EQUALLY JUST

BUT AGAIN WE REPEAT—We lead in advanced ideas.

AND AGAIN WE REPEAT—Who first brought out the large Modern Lamp House—The Heavy Arc Lamp—The Solid Base—The Large Magazine—The Double Cone Shutter—The Automatic Fire Shutter—Interchangeable Parts—The Motor Attachment—Perfect Film Tension, and many more.

As the smart kid says: "Go to it and copy everything," and when you are all through we will uncover something that will make everybody hump if they still want to copy.

The Enterprise Optical Manufacturing Company

564-572 W. Randolph Street, - - - - CHICAGO, ILL.

America's Popular Photoplayers

Handsome Photographs 11x14 of the Leading Stars of the Firmament

MAURICE COSTELLO
FLORENCE TURNER
JOHN BUNNY
LILLIAN WALKER
MARY PICKFORD
G. M. ANDERSON
GENE GAUNTIER
CRANE WILBUR
ARTHUR JOHNSON
ALICE JOYCE
MARSHALL P. WILDER
MARY FULLER

Complete Set
of 12 for
$2.00
Charges Prepaid

Send Money Order or Bank Draft with Order.
NO
Personal Checks
or C.O.D.

THE LATEST NOVELTY IN MOTION PICTUREDOM. EVERY ONE AN ESTABLISHED FAVORITE. THE LARGEST PHOTOGRAPHS OF THESE STARS EVER SOLD.

ORDER NOW SUPPLY LIMITED

WRITE TO YOUR NEAREST DISTRIBUTOR

FOR SALE EXCLUSIVELY AT THE FOLLOWING OFFICES:

EXHIBITORS' ADV. & SP'C'Y CO.,
30 UNION SQUARE,
NEW YORK.

PHOTOPLAY ADV. & SP'C'Y CO.,
PITTSBURGH, PA.,
AND ALL BRANCH OFFICES.

EXHIBITORS' ADVERTIS'G CO.,
68 WEST WASHINGTON ST.,
CHICAGO, ILL.

G.MÉLIÈS

THE MAN INSIDE

LOVE AND JEALOUSY

Rank, the foreman, tries to turn Edith's love against Alonzo by discharging him, hoping in this way to be free to win her for himself. Meeting with no success, he determines to get rid of Alonzo and, hiding some cattle, accuses Alonzo of being the cattle thief. Leading a gang of cowboys, they surround him in his home intent on lynching him. The house is accidentally set on fire. Edith discovering the plot, hurries to his rescue, too late, however, to save him from the flames. The cowboys, after learning the truth, capture Rank and punish him in the same manner that he proposed to serve Alonzo.

APPROX. 988 FT.

G. MELIES, 204 EAST 38th St., NEW YORK CITY

7-11-12

AHEAD OF THE TIMES

No. 6A

POWER'S LATEST EQUIPMENT

POWER'S CAMERAGRAPH has for fourteen years expressed the best in moving picture machines; our scientific knowledge and broad practical experience have always enabled us to lead the way, and to be first in the field with new ideas. In our new equipment No. 6A the principal features are:

ARC LAMP

100 Amp. capacity.
14 Adjustments.
Take ¾" carbons.
6" Lower.
12" Upper.

LAMP HOUSE

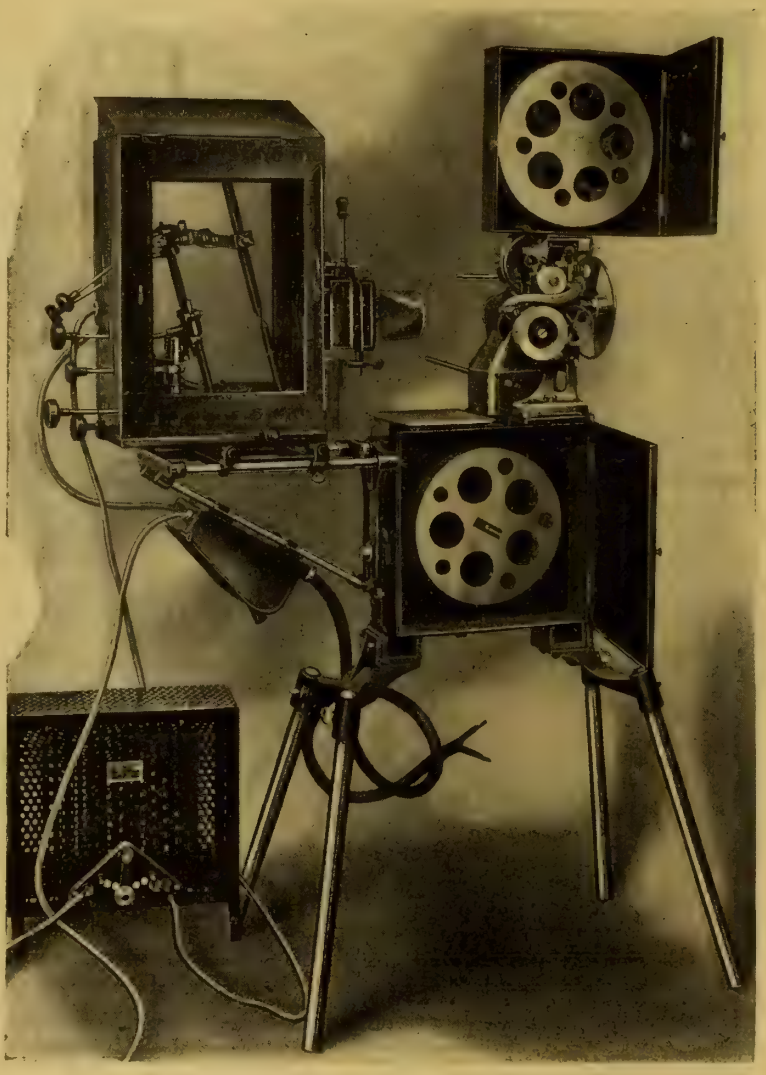
Excellent ventilation.
Large and roomy.
Door each side.
Lamp more accessible.

STAND

Made entirely of iron with 14" lower magazine built into it.
Can be tilted to any desired angle. Absolutely rigid.

FILM SHIELDS

Practically enclose film.



The superior features of POWER'S NO. 6 are recognized everywhere; to these there are now added:

Longer Hours of Work Without Retrimming

Increased Carrying Capacity—Saving in Operating Expense

Absolute Rigidity Thereby Improving Projection

In these improvements simplicity has been adhered to, and the increased ease of operation enables the operator to produce better results on the screen.

NOW READY FOR DELIVERY

SEND FOR CATALOG G AND FULL DETAILS

NICHOLAS POWER COMPANY

90 GOLD STREET, NEW YORK

FOR FOURTEEN YEARS THE LEADING MANUFACTURERS OF MOVING PICTURE MACHINES

CAREY PRESS, N. Y.

Vol. 13. No. 2 July 13. 1912 Price. 10c.

MOVING PICTURE WORLD

THE FILM INDEX

EXHIBITORS' GUIDE

Scene from Thanhouser Two-Reel Production, "Under Two Flags."

125 East 23rd Street New York—Chicago 169 W. Washington St.

THE THANHOUSER

FRIDAY, JULY 26, "Merchant of Venice" in two reels

THREE-A-WEEK

FRIDAY, JULY 26, "Merchant of Venice" in two reels

2 Kinds of One-Sheets, a Three-Sheet and an Eight-Sheet AT YOUR EXCHANGE

"The Merchant of Venice"

IN TWO REELS — FRIDAY, JULY 26

Shakespeare's Masterpiece as a Gorgeous Thanhouser Masterpiece

Illustrated Heralds from HENNEGAN & CO. CINCINNATI, OHIO

THE FOURTH issue of the new SUNDAY RELEASE

The Finger of Scorn

It Will Cease to Point at the Fallen, If This Film Is Heard

RELEASED SUNDAY, JULY 14

RELEASED TUESDAY, JULY 16

Vengeance Is Mine!

A Wife Resists the Temptation to Take the Revenge That Was In Truth the Lord's

RELEASED FRIDAY, JULY 19

The Ranchman and The Hungry Bird

The Bird Wasn't Nearly as Hungry as the Boy Who Stole His Bread — and Found a Friend Thereby

Thanhouser Co., New Rochelle, N. Y.

Send me FREE July Featureframe. I am / am not getting "The Thanhouser News."

Name.....

Address.....

Exchange.....

Coming! "PUT YOURSELF IN HIS PLACE," Charles Reade's Great Story "LUCILLE," By Owen Meredith In 2 Reels

THANHOUSER COMPANY

NEW ROCHELLE, NEW YORK

Film Supply Company, Agents for U. S. and Canada

FILM SUPPLY CO. OF AMERICA

FOUR-A-WEEK ESSANAY

THE NOMINATION

OF PUBLIC APPROVAL

WON!

BY

ESSANAY PHOTOPLAY FEATURES!

Released Tuesday, July 9th

"Signal Lights"

A thrilling railroad melodrama in which a little child is the heroine, frustrates an attempted hold-up of the fast express and saves a valuable shipment of gold-bullion! Teems with excitement and the real old-fashioned nerve-tingles! Baby Lynch, Martha Russell and Francis X. Bushman in feature roles!

Released Thursday, July 11th

"Pa Trubell's Troubles"

Some troubles, take our word for it! The poor old boob tries to stop his daughter from eloping, mistakes both his son and the butler for victim-son-in-law, gets a pair of black eyes and other things too numerous to mention! The funniest sight in the world—your audiences roaring with mirth over this one!

Released Friday, July 12th

"Down Jayville Way"

Absolutely a revelation in rural comedy! Production, cast, interpretation, photography—all of the most excellent sort! A picture we feel proud to boost to wide-awake exhibitors! 'Nuff sed! Get it!

Released Saturday, July 13th

"A Story of Montana"

The entire film-world appreciates good Western photoplays. Essanay and G. M. Anderson were first in the field and stand pre-eminent! Here is a gripping dramatic subject, portrayed in the heart of the West, powerful in plot and presenting Mr. Anderson in another of his famous characterizations!

THAT MAGNIFICENT FILM-PAGEANT

"The Fall of Montezuma"

(In Three Reels)

COMING SOON! COMING SOON!

3 Sheet Posters

of "A Story of Montana," in full four colors, beautifully lithographed, 35 cents each. Order from your exchange or direct from Morgan Lithograph Company, Cleveland, Ohio.

Hurry your orders for those splendid one-sheet posters of G. M. Anderson! Going fast and not many left! Great for your classy lobby display.

How about the Anderson postal photos for your souvenir night? Also postal photos of Francis X. Bushman in two poses! Give 'em the best, Mr. Exhibitor!

Hustle in your name for Essanay's Great Monthly Advance-Notice Sheets!.

ESSANAY FILM MANUFACTURING CO.

521 First National Bank Bldg., Chicago, Ill.

BRANCH OFFICES IN

LONDON PARIS BERLIN BARCELONA

Olympic Games!

Mr. Showman Don't Miss This Live Wire!!

Ready for Delivery July 6th== Two Weeks Ahead of All Others!

Showing former stadium, royal visitors, cheering thousands. Americans winning the championship of the world.

Showing the following events: 100, 400 and 800 metre races, hurdles, shot putting, pole vaulting, discus and javeline throwing, high diving, jumps, etc., etc.

Some of our athletes in this year's struggle for supremacy of the world. Striking lithographs which will make this FEATURE A BIG, QUICK MONEY MAKER. Nine hundred feet perfect photography beautifully tinted.

Beginning the 6th of July, for three weeks, every newspaper in the United States will be filled with daily news of the Olympic games. You get this advertising for this feature reel FREE OF CHARGE which otherwise could not be purchased at any price.

NOW HERE IS THE SURPRISE FOR YOU—ONLY $95. FOR THIS WONDERFUL FEATURE INCLUDING 30 POSTERS!!

SHIPPED IMMEDIATELY ON RECEIPT OF $30. DEPOSIT, BALANCE C. O. D. SUBJECT TO EXAMINATION, IF YOU CAN ARRANGE THIS WITH YOUR EXPRESS CO.

GET WISE AND BE THE FIRST TO CLEAN UP! DON'T LOSE A MINUTE! WIRE DEPOSIT NOW!

WE ARE THE FIRST ON THE MARKET! NOW IT IS UP TO YOU!

OLYMPIC GAMES FILM CO.

SUITE 809, EXCHANGE BLDG., 145 W. 45th ST., NEW YORK CITY

MONDAY, JULY, 8

Imp "THE PARSON AND THE MEDICINE MAN."	Nestor "THE FLOWER OF THE FOREST"	Champion "THE GYPSY BRIDE"

TUESDAY, JULY 9

Gem "UNDER TWO FLAGS" Two Reels	Bison "RECONCILED"	Eclair "A DOUBLE MISUNDERSTANDING"

WEDNESDAY, JULY 10

Powers "TANGLED" "LEAP YEAR DELUSION"	Nestor "A GENTLEMAN OF FORTUNE"	The Animated Weekly

THURSDAY, JULY 11

Rex "THE GREATER LOVE"	Imp "CAUGHT IN A FLASH"	Eclair "THE CEDARVILLE SCANDAL"

FRIDAY, JULY 12

Victor "IN SWIFT WATERS"	Powers "GETTING EVEN"	Nestor "YOUNG WILD WEST CORNERED BY APACHES"

SATURDAY, JULY 13

Bison "JUST IN TIME"	Imp "THE WRONG WEIGH" "GOV. WILSON AT HIS SUMMER HOME"	Milano "THE WOLF'S PREY" Two Reels

SUNDAY, JULY 14

Rex "THE MOTHER HEART"	Eclair "ARTFUL GONTRAN"	ACROSS THE CAUCASUS

THE EXHIBITOR'S PROGRAM

The UNIVERSAL Program

IMP

"The Parson and the Medicine Man"

Monday, July 8

A young Indian girl falls in love with a minister and saves his life. He in gratitude sends her to the East to be educated.

"Caught in a Flash"

Thursday, July 11

A father's consent is secured to a son's marriage through a clever ruse in which a pretty house maid, a flash-light photograph and a wife's home-coming figure.

"The Wrong Weigh"

Saturday, July 13

Wit is pitted against wit in this picture. A German restaurateur originates a plan to charge by weight, gained after meals, but soon abandons it when he finds himself outwitted by his customers.

Governer Wilson at His Summer Home

An interesting picture showing the Democratic Candidate for President of the United States, at his summer home at Sea Girt, N. J., giving an excellent representation of this popular candidate in his home environments.

MILANO

"The Wolf's Prey"

TWO REELS

Saturday, July 13

A society drama which shows the evils of dueling and gambling; the scenes are placed in fashionable life in a large Italian city.

NESTOR

"The Flower of the Forest"

Monday, July 8

A picturesquely staged drama in which the perfidy of a heartless young man is portrayed. A series of thrilling episodes in which a pretty Indian maiden effects the rescue of a hunter who professes love and later spurns her.

"A Gentleman of Fortune"

Wednesday, July 10

A picture of an outlaw and a child taken amid beautiful surroundings. A child's influence plays an important part in the regeneration of a bandit.

"Young Wild West Cornered by Apaches"

Friday, July 12

A story of strife between Indian tribes which was ended by the peaceful intervention of American soldiers.

REX

"The Greater Love"

Thursday, July 11

When the invalid wife discovered that her husband loved another woman, she deliberately threw her medicine away and decided to die so as to eliminate the only obstacle in the path of her husband's happiness.

"The Mother Heart"

Sunday, July 14

Her child died, and her heart hungered for the lost loved mite. One day she saw a woman, with lines of toil and care on her face, carrying a baby. She became a friend of the baby—and its mother. The father of the child was brutal, a drunkard and almost inhuman. The bereaved woman eventually gains the child and takes it to her heart.

Universal Film Mfg. Co., 1 UNION SQUARE NEW YORK CITY

for the Week of JULY 8

VICTOR

"In Swift Waters"

Friday, July 12

Miss Florence Lawrence, the world's most famous motion picture actress, appears in this delightfully pretty comedy. It is just the kind of a picture that enables Miss Lawrence to portray her many qualifications.

BISON

"Reconciled"

Tuesday, July 9

A Western drama in which a child's influence plays an important part. The story deals with the reuniting of three generations under very pathetic circumstances.

"Just in Time"

Saturday, July 13

Staged in the West, portrayed by a brilliant company, this picture is the type of drama that is so eagerly sought after. It deals with the rewards that come of love of parents and the fate that must befall the high strung, egotistical child, whose love of self supersedes the regard due to parents.

CHAMPION

"The Gypsy Bride"

Monday, July 8

A gypsy girl marries against the wishes of her tribe, but ultimately finds happiness with her husband.

GEM

"Under Two Flags"

TWO REELS

Tuesday, July 9

A French vivandiere sacrifices her life in order to save her English lover. A brilliant picture of French army life in Algeria.

ECLAIR

"A Double Misunderstanding"

Tuesday, July 9

The love affair of a young couple involves the meeting of their respective guardians and the ultimate infatuation of the elder couple. Though opposed to the match at first, circumstances favor the young folks and the consent is secured after an amusing situation.

"The Cedarville Scandal"

Thursday, July 11

An old bachelor becomes the temporary custodian of a baby and creates a world of trouble for himself through his good nature.

"Artful Contran"

Sunday, July 14

A spirited comedy in which a jealous lover, who is a practical joker, endeavors to embarrass his rival, but succeeds in placing himself in a serious predicament from which his friend rescues him, much to his displeasure.

"Across the Caucasus"

Showing the inhabitants of a very beautiful country while engaged in their trades and customs.

POWERS

"Tangled"

Wednesday, July 10

The entanglements of a number of friends are removed by the aid of some little children who convert discord into harmony.

"Leap Year Delusion"

In which an old man dreams that he is pursued by many pretty girls for his wealth. He awakes to find himself confronted by a burglar who is captured by his housekeeper, with whom he actually falls violently in love.

"Getting Even"

Friday, July 12

A lively comedy showing the antics of some city folks who have much fun at the expense of their country cousins. A practical joke almost brings the fun-makers to grief, but it all ends happily without mishap.

Universal Film Mfg. Co., 1 UNION SQUARE NEW YORK CITY

DEATH TO JUNK!!

TWENTY-FIVE PER CENT of the Moving Picture Theatres of America, or over 3,000 exhibitors, are dealing with rentors who do not buy a program of new films.

Are You One of These?

Let us tell you the name of a real exchange, big enough and strong enough to buy our great program in your territory.

Don't jeopardize your future by exhibiting old and questionable films supplied by small and discredited exchanges.

Patronize the office that buys EIGHTEEN OR MORE new releases.

We Have Authorized Agents Who Will Supply This Program

MONDAY—AMERICAN, COMET, ALL STAR
TUESDAY—THANHOUSER, MAJESTIC, GAUMONT
WEDNESDAY—RELIANCE, SOLAX, AMERICAN, GAUMONT WEEKLY
THURSDAY—AMERICAN, ALL STAR, GAUMONT
FRIDAY—THANHOUSER, SOLAX, LUX
SATURDAY—GREAT NOTHERN, RELIANCE, COMET
SUNDAY—THANHOUSER, MAJESTIC

FILM SUPPLY CO. OF AMERICA

"The Exhibitor Be Pleased"
OUR SLOGAN
Address all communications
133-135 West 44th Street, New York

The Most Wonderful Horse in the World Displays More Than Human Intelligence

IN

"The EQUINE SPY"

TWO REELS

AN ORIGINAL STORY WRITTEN BY A WELL-KNOWN MAGAZINE WRITER AS A VEHICLE FOR THIS REMARKABLE ANIMAL.

"DON" A HORSE WORTH $10,000

"DON" has made a fortune for his master. He is considered the most perfect type of the performing horse. He got $500.00 a week in vaudeville and "big time."

Released Wednesday, August 23rd

"The Equine Spy" is a romance of the Civil War. In it the horse steals papers and ammunition, carries messages, lights bonfires and does everything but talk.

Released through Film Supply Company of America

OTHER FEATURES

Wednesday, July 17th - - SLIPPERY JIM.—Jim is a crook who is turned over to the police by his own wife. Sensational Melodrama, with remarkable situations.

Friday, July 19th - - - THE FOUR FLUSH ACTOR.—A story full of fine humor and farcical situations. One of those comedies for which Solax is famous. All-star comedy cast.

FILM SUPPLY CO. OF AMERICA

Solax Company

CONGRESS AVENUE
FLUSHING, - N. Y.

REMEMBER 3 SMASHING WESTERN AMERICANS EVERY WEEK

Those Strong, Dramatic, Gripping, Western "Americans" with the Business Kick — The Kind That Mean Better Pleased Patrons and More of Them, Are Obtained Only by Demanding That You Get Them, Three=Each=Week. Insist Upon It — Then Watch Your Weekly Balance Rise!

In the Nick of Time

Released Wednesday, July 17, 1912.

A Magnificent "Western" full of Fight, fine strategy and excellent situations. A film that will delight with its breezy out-of-door action and entertain with its charming story. Don't fail to book it.

The Tell-Tale Shells

A real masterpiece among "Westerns" intended to liven up an audience "picture-tired." Two shells, dropped from an assassin's gun, give a clever sheriff the clew by which a baffling mystery was unraveled and an innocent man was freed. You will like it—so will your audience. It's engaging grip will please. Distinctly an out-of-the-ordinary photoplay.

"THE FALL OF BLACKHAWK"

That gigantic, TWO-REEL MASTERPIECE, which portrays such great American characters as ABRAHAM LINCOLN, JEFFERSON DAVIS, ZACHARY TAYLOR and GEN. WINFIELD SCOTT will be ready for shipment at once.

STATE RIGHTS ARE VANISHING RAPIDLY

just as you would imagine where so splendid a money-making subject was offered discriminating buyers. Some excellent states still open. If you overlook this you will regret it.

COMING

THE BATTLE-GROUND

(Released Wednesday, August 7, 1912.)

A two-reel subject that will echo around the world. A problem-play that for genuine pathos, tragedy and heart interest never has been surpassed. Watch announcements.

FILM SUPPLY CO. OF AMERICA

American Film Mfg. Co.

FIFTH FLOOR, ASHLAND BLOCK : : CHICAGO

LUX FILMS

The Film the Exhibitor Demands

Released Friday, July 12, 1912

SPIFFKIN'S NEW JOB

COMEDY — LENGTH 567 FEET

PONTO'S LITTLE JOKE

COMEDY — LENGTH 393 FEET

A RIOT OF LAUGHTER AND SURPRISES

R. PRIEUR, 10 EAST 15th STREET NEW YORK CITY

Telephone, 3427 Stuyvesant

FILM SUPPLY CO. OF AMERICA

SOLD ONLY THROUGH FILM SUPPLY COMPANY OF AMERICA

GREAT NORTHERN

RELEASE FOR SATURDAY, JULY 6th

THE TWO SISTERS

A dramatic production of excellent quality.

On the same reel:

COPPER INDUSTRY IN SPAIN

An educational subject of unusual interest

RELEASE FOR SATURDAY, JULY 13th

CIRCUMSTANTIAL EVIDENCE

A dramatic production with a strong plot—Length 694 feet.

On the same reel:

MOVING PICTURES

Comedy—length 305 feet.

RELEASE FOR SATURDAY, JULY 20th

ALMOST A TRAGEDY

A comedy-drama—Length 666 feet. On the same reel:

UNCLE REUBEN GOES TO TOWN

Comedy—Length 332 feet.

GREAT NORTHERN FILMS CO. COPENHAGEN

SOLD ONLY THROUGH FILM SUPPLY CO., OF AMERICA

GREAT NORTHERN FILM CO., 7 E. 14th St., N. Y.

(NORDISK FILM CO. OF COPENHAGEN.)

FILM SUPPLY CO. OF AMERICA

ECLAIR FILMS

PERSISTENTLY PERFECT PHOTOGRAPHY

TUESDAY, JULY 16th

"THE DREAMERS"

A Heart-Touching Drama Exquisitely Produced

SUNDAY, JULY 21st

"RIZZIO"

In Which Figures Mary, Queen of Scots. A Story of Court Intrigue and Royal Love

THURSDAY, JULY 18th

"That Loving Man"

A Comedy Which Will Make Them Laugh At Love

AND COMING

"ROBIN HOOD"

Now Being Produced in Eclair Fashion—A Great Story by a Great Producing Company

ECLAIR FILM CO., 225 W. 42d St., New York City

HAVE YOU INQUIRED

ABOUT THE THREE REEL MASTERPIECE

BLANCHE WALSH

IN TOLSTOY'S

RESURRECTION

If you didn't you are missing information about the biggest money making feature ever produced

Exclusive Territory Only

MASKO FILM COMPANY, 145 W. 45th St., New York

THE KING of the PLAINS

BUFFALO BILL

The Man who first tread the path of civilization of the Great West.

See the most famous and thrilling adventures of this great Indian fighter and scout in three wonderful reels portraying life on the plains as it used to be.

This picture good for all time to come, and will positively attract people to the box office.

Wire for choice territory

BUFFALO BILL & PAWNEE BILL FILM CO.,

145 WEST 45th STREET, NEW YORK CITY

KLEINE

Cines and Urban-Eclipse

RELEASES FOR NEXT WEEK

ECLIPSE, WEDNESDAY, JULY 17, 1912

THE GRANDMOTHER

A tender story which will go straight to the hearts of your audience. Feature it; your patrons will send their friends to see the film.

CINES, TUESDAY, JULY 16, 1912

DISOWNED

A powerful drama, exceptionally well acted, telling of a girl who marries against her parents' wishes.

CINES, SATURDAY, JULY 20, 1912

The Part the Servant Played

The old servitor successfully manages the family affairs. A first-class comedy-drama.

ECLIPSE

Advance Synopses Free. Write to

CINES

GEORGE KLEINE

166 North State St. Chicago

Licensed by Motion Picture Patents Co.

LUBIN FILMS

RELEASED WEDNESDAY, JULY 10, 1912.
Length 1060 Feet.

"THE STOLEN RING"

Mr. and Mrs. Walling on leaving the Grand Hotel forget a jewel bag containing a large sum of money and a ring of odd design. The chambermaid delivers it at the desk and Walter Brooks, the clerk, places it in the safe. The landlord's son, who is going the pace, steals the money and ring and the clerk is arrested. Grace Davis, who is a manicurist and in love with Brooks, sees the ring on the finger of one of her customers, she quickly informs her sweetheart, who is liberated and the landlord's son sent to jail.

RELEASED THURSDAY, JULY 11, 1912.
Length 1060 Feet.

THE SHERIFF'S DAUGHTER

The Red Rock Stage has been held up twice by a lone bandit whom the sheriff has failed to catch. The president of the bank employs Gilbert Harnes, a Pinkerton man. The president suspects the sheriff himself, and the sheriff seeing a stranger in the camp suspects Harnes. The next transfer is made by wagon instead of the stage and both sleuths are on the job. The bandit is shot and, being unmasked, is discovered to be Jim Wallace, the manager of the mine. The sheriff congratulates the Pinkerton man and makes him a present of his pretty daughter.

RELEASED FRIDAY, JULY 12th, 1912.

Length 688 Feet.

"THE HYPNOTIST"

James McKendal and his wife Emma would have been fairly happy, but for the husband's attachment to the clubs. Emma could not stand it and finally left the home and went to her father. The old man thought he could cure his son-in-law by hypnotic suggestion and enlisted the service of a famous mesmerist. The mesmerist made a mistake and thought it was the old man who needed treatment. Many funny incidents occurred, but in the end all were happy.

COMEDY Length 368 Feet. LUBIN FILM

Over The Hills To The Poor House

Jim Downs, who is a drunkard, and is away from home in another city, receives a letter from his wife that if he does not send some money she and the children will have to go to the poor house on Saturday. A couple of days later she receives a reply in which her husband begs her to wait until Monday, he will be home and they will all go to the poorhouse together.

RELEASED SATURDAY, JULY 13th, 1912.
Length about 1000 Feet.

The STRANDED ACTORS

Two stranded actors walking the track happen on a piece of newspaper and read that Silas Higgins is wanted to receive a bequest of $75,000 and meet his boyhood sweetheart. Dressing themselves in Western prospector style they present themselves, but quickly are confronted with a letter from the true Higgins and have to make tracks for safety.

RELEASED MONDAY, JULY 15th, 1912.
Length about 1000 Feet.

"HONOR THY FATHER"

By WALLACE C. CLIFTON.

A beautiful story of filial affection. Through reverses in fortune Caleb Harris and his wife become poor and their son John insists on taking them to his home, the old man is proud and refuses, but John, by a ruse, accomplishes his wish and the old folks are made happy.

EXTREMELY BEAUTIFUL ONE and THREE SHEET POSTERS of our PHOTO-PLAYS, printed in FIVE COLORS, can be obtained from the A. B. C. COMPANY, CLEVELAND, OHIO. These handsome bills will offer a GREAT ADVANTAGE to your Theatre.

LUBIN MANUFACTURING COMPANY,

Chicago: 154 West Lake St. B. Nichols, 86 Wardour St., London, W., England.

MODEL NEW STUDIOS
20th and Indiana Avenues
Philadelphia, Pa.
Berlin, 35 Friedrich Str.

VITAGRAPH

"Her Old Sweetheart"
"Fate's Awful Jest"

Monday, July 8th

1. Oh, Joy! Thrilling and romantic experience of an old maid.
2. A surprise. The unlooked-for and fatal consequences of revenge.

Tuesday, July 9th

"The Curse of the Lake"

A miracle of nature. A legend of the Far West. The spirit of a beautiful Indian girl returns to the white man who deserted her. He and his son die. Their death is accepted as an evidence of the Great Spirit's displeasure.

Wednesday, July 10th

"A Bunch of Violets"

Very sweet and acceptable. A lonely and unhappy actress is influenced for good by the love they convey from a little girl.

Friday, July 12th

"The Foster Child"

Something to be proud of. He honors his foster parents. He is reclaimed by his mother, who deserted him, and honors her.

Saturday, July 13th

"Aunty's Romance"

Happy recollections that bring joy to all. Aunty's experiences lead two estranged lovers to become reunited and happy.

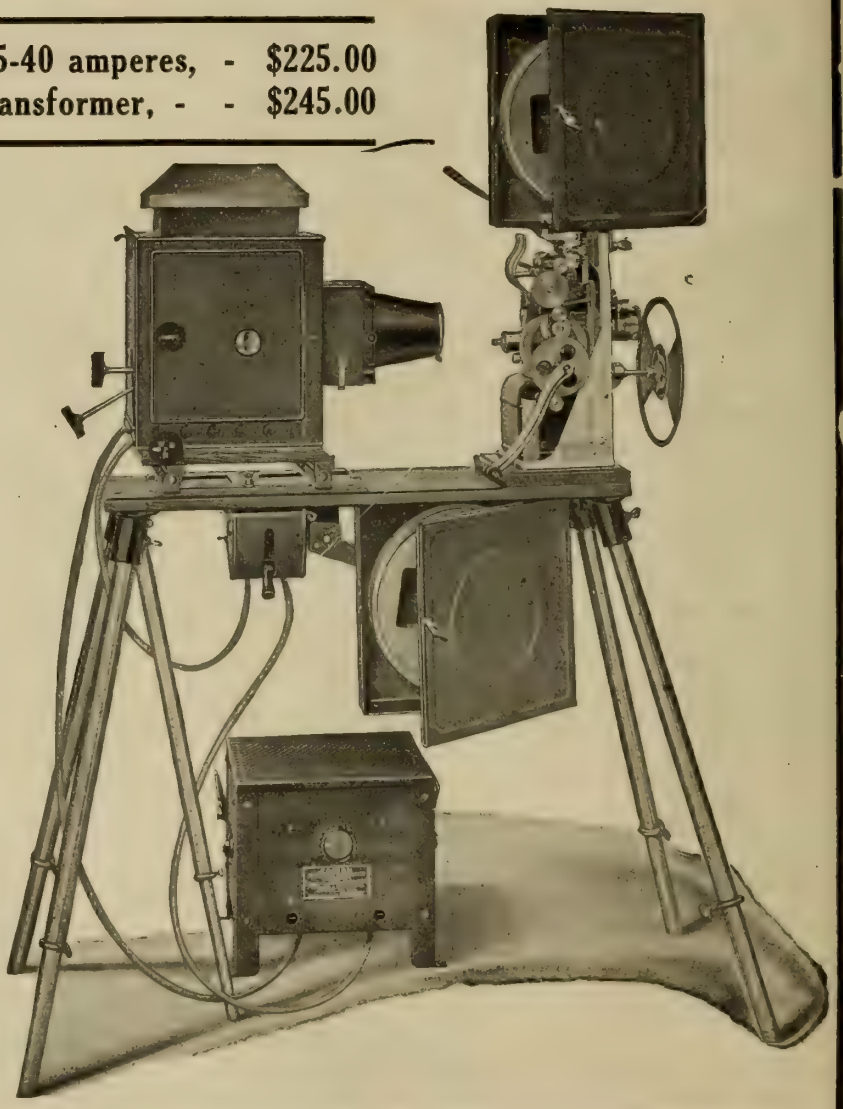
NEXT WEEK	NEXT WEEK
"CONSCIENCE," or "THE CHAMBER OF HORRORS."—Dramatic.	MONDAY, JULY 15th.
"A PERSISTENT LOVER." / "A LIVELY AFFAIR." Split Reel.	TUESDAY, JULY 16th.
"THE REDEMPTION OF RED RUBE."—Western.	WEDNESDAY, JULY 17th.
"HONOR THY FATHER."—Friend in need.	FRIDAY, JULY 19th.
"ROCK OF AGES."—Soulful drama.	SATURDAY, JULY 20th.

THE EDISON KINETOSCOPE

Underwriters' Type "B"

Is the only machine equipped with hardened steel bearings and shafts throughout and is the only one in which all the shafts run in hardened bearings. That is why it stands up under the steady daily grind that kills machines of inferior construction. There are other special features: Adjustable Outside Revolving Shutter, Chain Take-Up, Extra Large House with square condenser holder, Double Magazine Rollers, Heavy Brass Terminals on connecting cords, set of Heavy Extension Legs, four of which are 1 1-4 inches in diameter. A very substantial stand.

Price, with Rheostat, 110 volt, 25-40 amperes, - $225.00
Price, with 110 volt, 60 Cycle Transformer, - - $245.00



Current Edison Films

TELL YOUR EXCHANGE
YOU WANT THEM.

July 12—"For Valor," by Talbot Mundy. 1,000 feet. Dramatic.
" 15—"Picturesque Darjeeling, India, in the Himalayan Mountains." 300 feet. Scenic.
" 15—"Madame de Mode," by J. W. Culbertson. 700 feet. Comedy.
" 16—"Nerves and the Man," from "Daybreak," by James Oppenheim. 1,000 feet. Dramatic.
" 17—"Revenge is Sweet." 600 feet. Comedy.
" —"The Maple Sugar Industry at Thompson, Pa." 400 feet. Industrial.
" 19—"The Necklace of Crushed Rose Leaves. 1,000 feet. Dramatic.
" 20—"The Little Artist of the Market," from The New York Sunday Times. 1,000 feet. Dramatic.
" 23—"The Sketch With the Thumb Print," by Harry Furniss. 1,000 feet. Dramatic.
" 24—"The Grouch." 985 feet. Comedy-Drama.
" 26—"The Escape from Bondage," by Bannister Merwin. Being the first story of "What Happened to Mary," produced in collaboration with "The Ladies' World." (This story appears in the August number.) 1,000 feet. Dramatic.
" 27—"The Relief of Lucknow." (The Indian Mutiny, 1857.) 1,000 feet. Historical-Drama.
" 30—"More Precious Than Gold." 1,000 feet. Dramatic.
" 31—"When She Was About Sixteen," by James Whitcomb Riley. 1,000 feet. Comedy.

Thomas A Edison
INCORPORATED

239 Lakeside Ave., Orange, N. J.

The Leading Motion Picture Producer of the World

SELIG SELIG SELIG SELIG

FOLLOW THE FLAG

July 15th

EXTRA SPECIAL FEATURE

The Pennant Puzzle

An original baseball comedy in which over 500 members of the National Press Association took part. The plot is immense. The situations are excruciating. In short, it is one long, hearty laugh. See your home city editor play his part. Don't Fail to Book This.

About 1000 Feet

July 16th

The Girl and The Cowboy

A real drama of the real West. Picturing the pathetic romance of a Western cowman who was stricken blind while lost in the middle of a desert. Very dramatic and exceptionally well acted.

About 1000 Feet

COMING COMING

THEY ARE ON THE WAY

"THE COUNT OF MONTE CRISTO"

SELIG'S SPECTACULAR MELODRAMATIC MASTERPIECE IN 3 REELS

"KINGS OF THE FOREST"

Selig's Wild Animal Masterpiece

TRADE MARK

July 18th

The Polo Substitute

Another great Selig Single Reel Feature. Showing the exciting game of polo as it is played at the International matches. The real game was photographed, and three well-known English lords played in it.

About 1000 Feet

July 19th

A Day Off

Two deceitful hubbies take a day off and their experiences are most comical. Their wives turn the tables on them, however, and the result of their truancy is especially amusing. A reel full of real laughs.

About 1000 feet

Selig Polyscope Co. TRADE S MARK Chicago U.S.A.

EUROPEAN OFFICES

LONDON — BERLIN — ST PETERSBURG.

KALEM

The Thief

A picture that will be notable for fine acting and a good moral

Released Monday, July 22nd

Fantasca, The Gipsy

The thrilling story of a band of wanderers

Released Wednesday, July 24th

A Political Kidnaping

This graphic photoplay is full of action and is a distinct novelty

Released Friday, July 26th

Coarse Screen half-tone cuts of principal Kalem players for advertising purposes, 40c and 60c each, postage prepaid

Photos of Kalem favorites, 15c each, $1.50 per dozen

KALEM COMPANY

INCORPORATED

NEW YORK, 235-239 W. 23rd St.
86 Wardour St., LONDON, W.
BERLIN, 35 Friedrich Str.
PARIS, 13 Rue du Faubourg Montmartre

MOVING PICTURE WORLD

J. P. Chalmers, Founder.

Published by
CHALMERS PUBLISHING COMPANY,
J. P. CHALMERS, SR., PRES.; E. J. CHALMERS, SEC. AND TREAS.; JOHN WYLIE, VICE-PRES. AND GEN. MANAGER.
The office of the company is the address of the officers.

Telephone call, 1343-1344 Gramercy
125 E. 23rd Street (Beach Building), NEW YORK

Entered at the General Post Office in New York City as Second Class Matter.

SUBSCRIPTION RATES: $3.00 per year. Post free in the United States, Mexico, Hawaii, Porto Rico and the Philippine Islands. Canada, $3.50. Foreign Countries, $4.00, Post Paid.

WESTERN OFFICE: 169 W. Washington St. (Post Bldg.), Chicago, Ill. Phone, Main 3145. Automatic Phone 32732.

DISPLAY ADVERTISING RATES ON APPLICATION.

CLASSIFIED ADVERTISEMENTS (No Display), Three Cents per Word; Minimum Charge, 50c.

Address all correspondence "Moving Picture World, P. O. Box 226, Madison Square, New York," and not to individuals.

Vol. 13 JULY 13, 1912 No. 2

INDEX TO CONTENTS.

ADVERTISING FOR EXHIBITORS 136
AMONG THE EXHIBITORS 166
ANOTHER INDEPENDENT SPLIT.....129

CALENDAR OF INDEPENDENT RELEASES..156
CALENDAR OF LICENSED RELEASES.....157
CHICAGO LETTER 128
COMMENTS ON THE FILMS (Independent)....148
COMMENTS ON THE FILMS (Licensed).....147
CORRESPONDENCE 159

DOINGS IN LOS ANGELES.....132

EVENING AT THE PICTURE SHOW, AN....149

FACTS AND COMMENTS 120

INDIANAPOLIS 160
IN THE MISSISSIPPI VALLEY.....159

INDEPENDENT FILM STORIES.....180
INDEPENDENT RELEASE DATES.....188
INQUIRIES 139

LICENSED FILM STORIES.....170
LICENSED RELEASE DATES.....190
LOUISVILLE 162

MANUFACTURERS ADVANCE NOTES 154
MEANING AND VALUE OF A CONVENTION..121
"MONEY KINGS, THE" (Vitagraph).....134
MOTION PICTURE EXHIBITORS' LEAGUE..127
MICHIGAN 164
MUSIC FOR THE PICTURE.....150

NEW ENGLAND 164

OREGON 164

PHILADELPHIA 160
PHOTOPLAYWRIGHT, THE 138
PROJECTION DEPARTMENT 140

SAN FRANCISCO 164
"SIEGE OF PETERSBURG, THE" (Kalem)....151
ST. LOUIS 162
STORIES OF THE FILMS (Independent).....180
STORIES OF THE FILMS (Licensed).....170
SONG SLIDE RELEASES.....168
SO. BETHLEHEM, PA. 164
STUDIO SAUNTERINGS, By Louis Reeves Harrison 123

TERRE HAUTE 162
TOLEDO 164

WHY MOST PLAYS FAIL, By Louis Reeves Harrison 122

INDEX TO ADVERTISERS.

CARBON IMPORTERS.
FRORUP, L. E. 195
KIEWERT, CHAS. L. 177
REISINGER, HUGO 177

ELECTRICAL AND MECHANICAL EQUIPMENT.
BENDER, GEO. 183
CHICAGO M. P. SUPPLY CO. 192
DETROIT MOTOR CAR CO. 193
ENTERPRISE OPTICAL CO. 193
FOOS GAS ENGINE CO. 189
FORT WAYNE ELECTRICAL CO. 192
HALLBERG, J. H. 197
MACKIE CO., INC. 194
MOORE-HUBBLE & CO. 173
SCHNEIDER, E. 193
STERN MANUFACTURING CO. 192

FILM IMPORTERS AND DEALERS.
INTERNATIONAL FILM TRADERS. 189
WESTERN FILM BROKERS 178

FIREPROOF APPARATUS.
TRAINER, C. W. 178

FILM EXCHANGES.
ACME FILM CO. 193
BRADENBURG, GEO. 189
CALEHUFF, CHAS. 168
EASTERN FEATURE FILM CO. 156
GREENE, W. E. 175
H. & H. FILM CO. 192
HETZ, L. 192
LAEMMLE FILM SERVICE 179
ROYAL FEATURE FILM CO. 181

FILM MANUFACTURERS.
CRYSTAL FILM CO. 175

INDEPENDENT FILM MANUFACTURERS. (Film Supply Co.)
AMERICAN 110
ECLAIR FILM CO. 112
FILM SUPPLY CO. OF AMERICA. 108
GAUMONT 173
GREAT NORTHERN 111
LUX 111
MAJESTIC 175
RELIANCE 193
SOLAX 109
THANHOUSER 102

INDEPENDENT FILM MANUFACTURERS. (Universal.)
CRYSTAL FIL MCO. 175
UNIVERSAL FILM CO. 105-106-107-169

LICENSED FILM MANUFACTURERS.
EDISON 116
ESSANAY 103
KALEM 118-161
KLEINE 113
LUBIN 114
MELIES 199
PATHE FRERES 186-187-192
SELIG 117
VITAGRAPH 115-163

MISCELLANEOUS.
A. B. C. CO. 191
AMERICAN SONG SLIDE & POSTER CO. 190
AMUSEMENT SUPPLY CO. 193
BARTON, DAN 195
BRADY, A. 192
CARTER TICKET CO. 183
CLASSIFIED ADVERTISEMENTS 184
CORCORAN, A. J. 165
EXHIBITORS' ADVERTISING CO. 198
EXHIBITORS' ADV. & SPECIALTY CO. 158
FEATURE FILM BOOKING OFFICES. 181
HARBACH & CO. 178
HENNEGAN & CO. 194
HOKE, GEO. M. 196
INTERNATIONAL NEWS SERVICE. 158
KEYSTONE TICKET CO. 192
McKENNA BROS. BRASS CO. 193
NATIONAL TICKET CO. 188
NATIONAL X-RAY REFLECTOR CO. 191
NEWMAN MFG. CO. 193
PARISIAN MFG. & FILM RENOVATING CO..168
PHOTOPLAY ADV. & SPECIALTY CO. 191
PIONEER 179
PITTSBURGH M. P. SUPPLY CO. 192
RAW FILM SUPPLY CO. 194
SARGENT, E. W. 196
SMITH, L. C. 192
STEBBINS, C. M. 178
STERN POSTER CO. 191-195
SUREHOLD SHUTTER CO. 193
TECHNIQUE OF THE PHOTOPLAY. 191
THOMAS, A. G. 189
THREE IN ONE OIL CO. 177
U. S. FACTORIES CO. 179
VISCO MOTOR OIL CO. 192
WILLIAMS, J. D. 192
ZENITH MFG. CO. 158

LENS MANUFACTURERS.
GUNDLACH-MANHATTAN CO. 158

LECTURERS.
ADAMS, G. M. 192
MARION, L. M. 191

MOVING PICTURE MACHINE MANUFACTURERS.
AMERICAN 194
EDISON 116
MOTIOGRAPH 185
POWER'S CAMERAGRAPH 200
SIMPLEX 158

MUSICAL INSTRUMENTS.
DEAGAN, J. C. 183
SINN, C. E. 183
WURLITZER, RUDOLPH 185

OPERA CHAIR MANUFACTURERS.
AMERICAN SEATING CO. 196
ANDREWS, A. H. 196
BENNETT, GEO. 196
HARDESTY CHAIR CO. 196
STAFFORD, E. H. 196
STEEL FURNITURE CO. 196
WISCONSIN LUMBER CO. 196

PROJECTION SCREENS.
AMERICAN THEATER CURTAIN CO. 185
INVENTORS' SPECIALTY CO. 197
MIRROROIDE CO. 175
MOTION PICTURE SCREEN CO. 197

SONG AND ADVERTISING SLIDE MFRS.
BATTERSHALL & OLESON 168
KANSAS CITY SLIDE CO. 196
LEVI CO., INC. 168
NIAGARA SLIDE CO. 193
SCOTT & VAN ALTENA CO. 168
SIMPSON, A. L. 185
UTILITY TRANSPARENCY CO. 173

FEATURE FILMS (Released by).
AMERICA'S FEATURE FILM CO. 195
BUFFALO BILL CO. 113
CROWN FEATURE FILM CO. 181
FEATURE & EDUCATIONAL FILM CO. 192
FEATURE FILM CO. (New Orleans) 189
FEATURE FILM CO. (Toledo) 183
FRENCH-AMERICAN FILM CO. 192
GARDEN OF ALLAH 165
GENERAL FILM PUB. & SALES CO. 181
IMPERIAL FEATURE FILM CO. 195
INTERNATIONAL FILM TRADERS 189
KINEMACOLOR CO. OF AMERICA. 194
MASKO FILM CO. 112
NEW YORK FILM CO. 167
OLYMPIC GAMES 194
ROYAL F. F. CO. 181
SPECIAL FILM CO. 173
STAR FEATURE FILM CO. 189
SUPERIOR FEATURE FILM CO. 179
TOURNAMENT FILM CO. 178
UNIVERSAL FEATURES 167
U. S. FEATURE FILM CO. 192
WARNER FEATURE FILM CO. 179
WORLD'S MOVING PICTURE CLASSICS. 177

THEATRICAL ARCHITECTS.
DECORATORS' SUPPLY CO. 183

Facts and Comments

WHERE is that overwhelming demand for a more rigid and specific censorship of motion pictures in the boroughs of Greater New York? To judge by the many measures for the more stringent regulations of motion pictures emanating from that perennial source of statesmanship, known as the Board of Aldermen, the gentle reader is tempted to believe that the public "is crying for it" and "won't be happy until it gets it." As a plain matter of fact there has never been a time in the history of the motion picture when the craze for censorship was less justified and less apparent. Let us look at the news again. It appears then that the public is not worried about the censorship of motion pictures, but that the Society for the Prevention of Crime is. That dear old S. P. C. Evidently business is bad with these perpetual "witchfinders." They are running out of "good copy" for the newspapers. Their press agent must stir some benevolent old ladies and gentlemen into bequeathing something to this more or less useful society. Says the press agent of the society: "The principal objection which is made to this proposed censorship is that it is too good and too effective and so cannot be passed because of the influence of business and corrupt political opposition." We are used to having the worthy press agent point out the wide and impossible gulf that divides the S. P. C. from ordinary humanity. We have often heard the familiar chorus: "Of course you can never be like us, but be as like us as you can."

*

The latest proposition in censorship is to have teachers of public schools and members of the department of education inspect the films. If they approve, a letter is sent to the Bureau of Licenses and the films may be shown, otherwise it will be a criminal offence to show them. If the films shown excite the special admiration of the inspectors they may be used even on Sundays. No other films but these specially approved for Sunday use can be shown on Sunday. Now we do not doubt in the least, that the proposed board of censorship would be actuated by the best motives. We doubt very seriously, however, whether teachers, dealing constantly with the minds of children, will be able to take such a broad and liberal view as the situation requires. Then again it may be asked: "Wherein has the present method failed as signally as to justify this unceremonious disregard of its work? How has it incurred such lack of confidence?

*

While we do not for one moment believe that any of this crude and ill-digested mass of "reform measures" will ever be enacted into laws, and while we greatly doubt the legal power of the Board of Aldermen to pass any such laws as these proposed by the Society for the Prevention of Crime, we think this present occasion proper and fitting for a word of sincere and honest advice to the manufacturers. There would be no irresponsible outcry against motion pictures and all this silly agitation would probably never been heard of, if the manufacturers or some of them had not for years persisted in a policy of "No publicity." In other words, it is unwise in these days as well to hide your light under a bushel. Time and again friends of the motion picture, among them hosts of readers of the MOVING PICTURE WORLD, had to do missionary work in their own circles in order to make known the excellence of certain motion pictures. No systematic campaign of education has ever been conducted by those who should be most deeply interested in the reputation of the motion picture; i. e., by the manufacturers of motion pictures. Nothing was done to enlighten and influence public opinion by means of the daily press. It is true, that the pictures were constantly improving, that this great industrial art was making marvelous progress, that the personnel of the men interested in the exhibiting end of the business was steadily getting better, but no effort has been made to force this information into the daily press. Some of the manufacturers especially were doing great things and winning golden opinions among the motion picture patrons, but these very manufacturers pursued a policy of "No publicity." Not only was there no initiative to promote wholesome and deserved publicity for the motion picture, but every effort to promote such publicity was frowned upon and discouraged. The result is that the moving picture industry is in too many quarters either misunderstood or not understood at all; its purposes and ideals are not sufficiently known. If in the past we had fostered a good system of promoting publicity, if we had built up a strong public opinion in favor of the motion picture, if we had told the world at large of the great and wonderful things that the American manufacturers were doing, the hue and cry of these reform jacks and jills would be laughed down in a perfect storm of Homeric hilarity.

*

The sooner we realize that in these days no corporation is great enough to be careless of public opinion, the better it will be in the future. There are a lot of corporations that have learned this to their profit. It always pays to take the public into your confidence, especially if you cater to the amusement of the public in a free and democratic country. Even the great traction companies of New York, Philadelphia and Chicago do not deem it beneath their dignity to explain things to the public in large paid advertisements which appear in the daily press. Let us shout the merits of our good films from the housetops. Let the news of great doings in American filmdom find its way into the daily papers of the whole country. Properly prepared and presented, competent information about the doings of American manufacturers would be welcomed in every newspaper office in the country. The manufacturers of motion pictures have the means and the men to put this plan into speedy motion. Such a campaign would be a distinct benefit to every one interested in any way in either the making or showing of motion pictures.

*

Let it be said in conclusion that the vast majority of American film makers are not in need of censorship at all. Out of their studios have come thousands of films which have reflected credit on the American name. They have realized their responsibilities and their great powers for good and they have lived in constant remembrance of these responsibilities. Let these carping critics name the films, which would justify this quasi police surveillance of a body of men, who yield to no other body in any field of human endeavor in point of character, intelligence or public spirit. To be sure, they are in the business for a return on their investment, but as their works show, they would scorn to enrich themselves at the cost of public morality and decency. On the contrary, they have done an incalculable amount of good. They have made lighter the burdens of those who struggle against poverty; they have brought cheer and sunshine into many a lonely heart and have helped to expand human sympathy and drive away ignorance and prejudice. When the Society for the Prevention of Crime is able to show such results of its work we will be in better mood to listen to its criticisms of the motion picture.

The Meaning and Value of a Convention.

CONVENTIONS have now come to be of great and widespread importance, also any organization which can so grow and bring together its numerously subdivided bodies is of importance. A convention is the highest form of successful amalgamation and when once called together and established, marks the beginning of a universal control for the good, of all of its adherents.

No event more thoroughly emphasizes a "coming of age" than a convention. An immature, undeveloped organization, cannot command the necessary capability or power requisite for convention purposes; deep strength and broad influences alone gather force equal to the far-reaching effects of convention purposes.

Leaders are always required in all walks of life, and under all conditions of society. The pressure of growing conditions forces to the front men of ripe experience with strong minds, and high purposes; actuated by reasonable and ambitious aims, to develop the best among the rank and file of those of kindred pursuits. Outgrowing the original confines of their beginnings, these personalities forge to the front and often become national in both influence and reputation. The school of leadership is one of the most trying and thorough, so that it is usually safe to assume that under modern democratic conditions personal authority and self-aggrandizement are impossible.

The truth of the strong principles of "government by the consent of the governed" is nowhere more apparent than in conventional assemblies. Here having come together for mutual profit, competition of highest thought and suggestion is keen. The greatest possible good for the greatest possible number is sought, those principles which can produce such results are introduced, binding themselves to those principles as rules of guidance, laws are enacted, and by consent enforced, to obtain the end sought. In the broader field of inductive legislation, conventions are authorized to speak to state and national governments concerning the adoption of such laws as may best serve not only their own interests, but also the best interests of the public at large.

True growth is educational; progress is the enemy of error; attainment is the foe of deterioration. Always advancing, the moving picture has risen to one of its highest possibilities now that it has become necessary to hold conventions for the purpose of doing for it all that a convention can do as instanced in the preceding notes. No one valued more highly the convention value to the moving picture than did the late editor of the MOVING PICTURE WORLD; indeed it may be said that he became a martyr to the cause, for nothing but the great value of a convention as he knew it, could have torn him away from his multitudinous duties to go so far and devote so much time if the issues were not of paramount importance.

Moving pictures have now reached such maturity that their management is beyond the limits of the few. So complex has become this great enterprise that exceeding all anticipations, whether viewed from an industrial, commercial, amusement or educational point, it is too big and too important to remain subject to individual conditions. In convention assembled it now becomes the property of the people. Men of no mean ability are becoming leaders, molding opinions and formulating plans to place applied cinematography in the front ranks of the sciences and arts.

Drawn from all grades of life the moving picture is now in the hands of the capitalist, the lawmaker, the scientist, the scholar, the artist and the artisan. The product of the centuries, it first descended to mean depths, only staying there long enough to prove its superiority to such incongenial surroundings in unworthy hands; it now has arisen to take its rightful place among the accepted and proved requirements of the most enlightened days of the world's history. From the moving picture conventions there will go forth rules and regulations which shall govern all branches of the work, taking from questionable debate that which can now be wisely and profitably determined. The highest conventional point will have been reached when its educational features shall have become clearly defined. The power of the convention will educate moving picture people, while the moving picture people will also bring the moving picture to the front as the great educator. Two great present-day hindrances to moving pictures, i. e., inordinate criticism, and incapable censorship, will be eliminated by the power of convention work. The atmosphere of a genuine convention is powerfully antiseptic, and pregnant with newer and purer life and ideals.

Now that we have state conventions with a prospect of even a national, and later no doubt an international convention, the moving picture has reached a zenith. Nothing in its previous history is of such importance, nothing in the future can more enhance its value; its best life and noblest purposes are assured.

An annual convention is at once a filter and a feeder; it eliminates these errors; it instils the better nature. No lover of the pictures now need be fearful lest any mishap deprive the pictures of their value; the convention is as safe as a sacred trust.

If it were necessary to mark the most distinctive work of future conventions it is easy to predict that it will be along educational lines. There is a limit to the managerial and the mechanical, there are boundaries for the commercial and productive, there is no end to the educational. In the years to come vast fields of learning must be traversed, ever and greater possibilities accomplished; the present-day halting and labored—progress will have passed away, and what at present the moving picture has not been able to accomplish, will eventually be realized by means of the open door of the moving picture in convention.

W. H. J.

A GERMAN TRIBUTE TO THE LATE JAMES P. CHALMERS.

A pioneer of the moving picture industry has gone from among us, a man who rose from modest beginnings to a mighty influence. Unmoved alike by envious enemies or tempting friends, he followed the right path. He was a noble character, the founder and editor of THE MOVING PICTURE WORLD, James P. Chalmers. He was one of the noblest of men. Peace be to his ashes.—Dr. Berthold A. Baer in "Der Kinematograph."

Why Some Plays Fail

By Louis Reeves Harrison.

IT is claimed that 99 per cent. of all the photoplays launched sink at once through weak or faulty construction. They may have some good material in them, but most of it is unfit for use and so badly put together as to be of no value whatever. What I have to say on this subject, however, pertains exclusively to those which appear on the screen, the ones we generously and hopefully tolerate.

It is commonly supposed that producers are indifferent to photodramatic quality in releases that sell well through clever commercial arrangements, but I have no reason to think this is true. Nearly every manufacturer I have met is alive to the necessity of turning out superior goods—high merit is half the sale—and not a few of them have exhibited anxiety to improve on what they are doing. This does not mean, however, that any of them have more than a vague idea of proportioning expenditures.

Hundreds of dollars are thrown away on burning houses, autos, bridges or other structures which give the spectator a mere glimpse of what is going on and no thrill whatever. People in front know that destruction of that kind is more or less of a fake, and it is absolutely without effect unless the action calls for it strongly. But this is a trifling waste of money that might be otherwise better employed when compared to the lack of system in staging a piece.

In illustration of a very common expenditure without adequate return let us deal with a concern able to carry a few leading actors on salary and pay special types five dollars a day. It would be astounding to those not familiar with studio methods if I could truly state the days that actors—in many cases where they are made up and in costume—are compelled to remain idle when ready and willing to do what is required of them. Many have told me that this outlay is double or treble what it should be for no better reason than the inability of those in charge to adjust the settings to the call for characters.

The gist of all this lavish expenditure on details unimportant to those in front, or of unwise use of those supposed to portray the action, lies in a false economy at the outset in not providing amply for the selection of what is to be acted. One good scenario editor is worth a whole force engaged in sorting over the ruck of those who do not know the first principles of dramatic construction. Such an editor working in combination with an art director—he is the most needed man in the business—could so well provide the starting point that work all along the line would be facilitated, leaving stage directors to their specific duties.

Once a play is started, the art director must see it through the stage presentation from both the eliminating and the suggestive point of view of a critic. He is the main responsible factor in the removal of the hackneyed and artificial devices of old theatrical men and the substitution of what gives freshness, variety and vigor to what is rarely comprehended as a distinctive art in itself. Very many plays begin with the timeworn subterfuge of a letter supposed to explain the feeble situation. One may assume the presence of a small percentage of weak-minded individuals in a mixed audience, but normal people prefer to do some thinking for themselves and prefer photo-action that explains itself. Stale and strained explanatory devices are made necessary by the lack of dramatic quality in the story to be told on the screen.

By putting more money into what is to be developed, producers will find the development itself less difficult and expensive. But no producer can expect at this stage of the game to get hundred dollar plays for twenty-five dollars, though it would not be unfair to pay fifty down and fifty on presentation if the dramatic critics approved—whatever their faults, dramatic critics are not insincere. This second payment is often made by publishers with results that might be expected. Authors return the compliment in loyalty as well as quality.

As soon as photoplaywrights feel justified by fair compensation in putting forth their best efforts the present scarcity of original scenarios will be relieved, and such efforts will lead to a lessened subsequent expenditure that will largely overbalance the increased first outlay. Most of those who started well and should have been nurtured have been half starved or driven to more profitable fields of work, but there are plenty of men who can rise to the occasion when one comes into existence. Present rates for splendid plays are farcical.

There are no schools in which playwriting can be learned. It is largely a question of telling a story cleverly or entertainingly or forcibly or impressively on the screen, and the fact that all producers go to writers of fiction for their adaptations shows that writers of fiction can use the new medium after acquiring the knack. Those of us who have converted published stories into photoplays and photoplays into magazine stories realize that the whole thing is less a matter of form than of mental concentration.

It is well nigh impossible for any successful author of stories told in print or on the screen to name the forces at work in the process of composition. What is called imagination may be a rearrangement of ideas and incidents drawn from a hundred recollections or he may start with the abstract and give it form through dwelling on it with sympathetic interest. The main thing is to construct a torch that will light other minds. To do this he must be capable of understanding that an abstract element should be interwoven with the human characterization and the exposition of the plot, the foreshadowing of events, the element of suspense and all else that contributes to curiosity, interest and satisfaction.

It is something of an art to tell a good story in any form, yet it should not be difficult for any master of the literary charm to exert it with equal power in this new medium, but there must be one or more "pursuing thoughts" to light the way and effect an after-glow. Those authors who are accustomed to cover a bare skeleton with fancy verbal draperies and fool the editor with dialects will find it difficult to write photoplays, where there must be something doing most of the time.

Most plays would not fail if they presented an absorbing segment of human experience that we all recognize or showed the working out of a theme kindling our sympathies, whether the setting be ancient or modern, or aroused our keen expectancy not to be ultimately disappointed by stale conclusion, and they may be of any time and place if interest is held by the art of the story teller to an end that makes a lasting impression of value to-day. It is not enough to copy what some other man has done some other time.

We need not expect variety except from the original author, and his work is not to be had for the mere asking. We need not expect strength from the weak and inexperienced. We need not look for truth from the insincere nor what is fresh from those long run stale in theatrical quackery. Charm and vigor must exist in the scenario or the story is rarely worth development and presentation.

Studio Saunterings

By Louis Reeves Harrison.

AMONG the producers of moving pictures there is one, Edwin Thanhouser, who is widely known by his works and in the theatrical profession, who was one of the first of the independents, and who was actually the first of them to erect a large factory, yet events have so shaped themselves that I met him personally for the first time after his plant was sold and he was getting ready to retire from the business.

The only time we came near becoming acquainted was when I was asked to convert one of his playlets into the form of a magazine story last winter. It was "The Guilty Baby," and I was very anxious to see him about it for some reason or other—possibly I could not bear the thought of one so young having "A Blot in the 'Scutcheon"—but we failed to connect and the pleasure of meeting Mr. Thanhouser for the first time was reserved for a studio sauntering.

I was prepared to meet a very interesting individual and was not at all disappointed when I strolled into his place at New Rochelle and was received by the head of the business with a courtesy that was charmingly unaffected. While Mr. Thanhouser is a thorough business man, one who gives close attention to the multitudinous details of production in all its departments, he has none of that pseudo-importance of manner often shown by men who have risen by their own efforts to leadership and wealth.

MR. EDWIN THANHOUSER,
Founder of the Thanhouser Company.

Possibly his modest attitude is due to a wide and varied experience. He was at one time an actor, played under Charles Frohman and David Belasco, even under the late Alexander Salvini. Later he conducted his own stock company in Milwaukee, in Atlanta and in Chicago. In the first-named city he made a record, that of giving 3,500 performances without closing his theater. He was also the first theatrical manager in this country to produce on the stage Ibsen's "Pillars of Society" in English.

While it is not at all remarkable that he should enter upon the production of moving pictures, it has always been a matter of interest to me how such men found their way successfully in this new art. It is a matter which engages both attention and curiosity, this turning from the beaten path into some venturesome side issue, so I asked Mr. Thanhouser how it all happened.

He replied very modestly as follows:

"About five years ago while on a visit to New York, in connection with one of my various dramatic stock companies in the West, I met a fellow-actor, one who had formerly been associated with me in the same company. His recent connection with one of the moving picture manufacturers greatly interested me and at his suggestion I investigated the then budding industry. My large theatrical interests in the West kept me from seriously entering the moving picture field at that time, but when I sold out my theatrical interests, I came East and immediately started activities in the moving picture field."

Very few of those who have entered upon the preparation of plays for the screen can boast of any such record—I'll take back that word "boast," as I have heard more bragging from old theatrical men than any other class in the business, whereas I had difficulty in eliciting these few facts from Mr. Thanhouser. I will start over again and assert that I have met very few men so well equipped by taste and experience for the production of moving pictures as the one I am writing about.

It is obvious that what such a man learned in his varied capacities, as actor, stage director, manager, and producer of stage plays, must be of high value in his present undertaking, but Mr. Thanhouser has undoubtedly learned a great deal that he never knew or even dreamed of since he began releasing photoplay reels.

Aside from the business and mechanical problems to be solved there have been artistic difficulties which he has overcome, and the greatest of these are yet unborn. While success must be gratifying to those whose labors in this field have been generously rewarded, the greater achievements of the future must emanate from men of advanced ideals whether they act alone or in connection with the first explorers—those who have blazed the way through technical difficulties.

I have been prophetic enough on this subject for the past two years. Those who keep posted realize what I mean when I give utterance to well-founded faith in tremendous improvements yet to come. On this account I cannot help feeling regret that Mr. Thanhouser has disposed of his plant and expects to enter upon a period of recreation about the first of next December. He is really going to quit and actually intends to enjoy himself for awhile at home or abroad, but perhaps he will miss the pictures almost as much as they miss him.

In preparation for this event he has gathered together some very efficient directors, including Lucius Henderson, who has been engaged in completing the two-reel subject, "Under Two Flags"; George Le Soir, whose thorough and painstaking work is beginning to be felt, and delightful Jay Hunt, whose theater lore is so rich that he staggered me when we became reminiscent.

I must add to these strong personalities one of those who always stands half way between the studio and that outside the gate, one of those friend makers like Mr. Dougherty, of the Biograph Company; Mr. Spedon, of the Vitagraph Company; Mr. Hoagland, of Pathe Freres;

Tom Cochrane, Levine and other amiable buffers who survive on hard knocks; I refer in this case to smiling Bert Adler. It was he who met me at the door with a glad hand, who piloted me through the picturesque studio and who brought me all the way back from New Rochelle to the perils of New York.

Mr. Adler has no peer in the kindness he extends to outsiders, but he seems to take his cue from those in authority—my very first impression of the place was that it housed a happy family. There is an air of refinement and cleanliness about this studio, which exerts a powerful though invisible influence upon all connected with it and seems to percolate into the pictures themselves.

After all I have said against adaptations as compared to original plays of modern purpose and strong sympathetic interest, I am compelled to admire such screen presentations as those shown me at the Thanhouser Studio, especially two new releases, "The Merchant of Venice" and "Under Two Flags." Of the former I shall have something to say in a future number—I was strongly attracted by its costumes and settings, and openly praised its exteriors on the spot, but I may as well go into details about an earlier release, one which may be ready by the time this article sees print.

"Under Two Flags," an adaptation from the novel of that name by Ouida, was in process. I could only see fragments of it during this visit, but it seems to be one of the most ambitious plays of this kind the Thanhouser Company has yet attempted. It tells the story known to most of us of the Hon. Bertie Cecil, a popular officer of the English Life Guards, who generously takes upon himself the crime of forgery committed by his younger brother, a weak-minded young man involved in financial difficulties. Bertie escapes from the officers of the law and gives up the protection of the flag he has served, thereby ruining his own career for motives which have never been entirely satisfactory to readers of the novel.

A railroad accident in which he is supposed to have perished stops all pursuit and eliminates his identity for a number of years. He in truth reaches Algeria and enlists in the French Foreign Legion. There he wins fame for bravery, but fails of promotion through having aroused the hatred of his colonel. He only reaches the grade of corporal after a service of twelve years under the French flag.

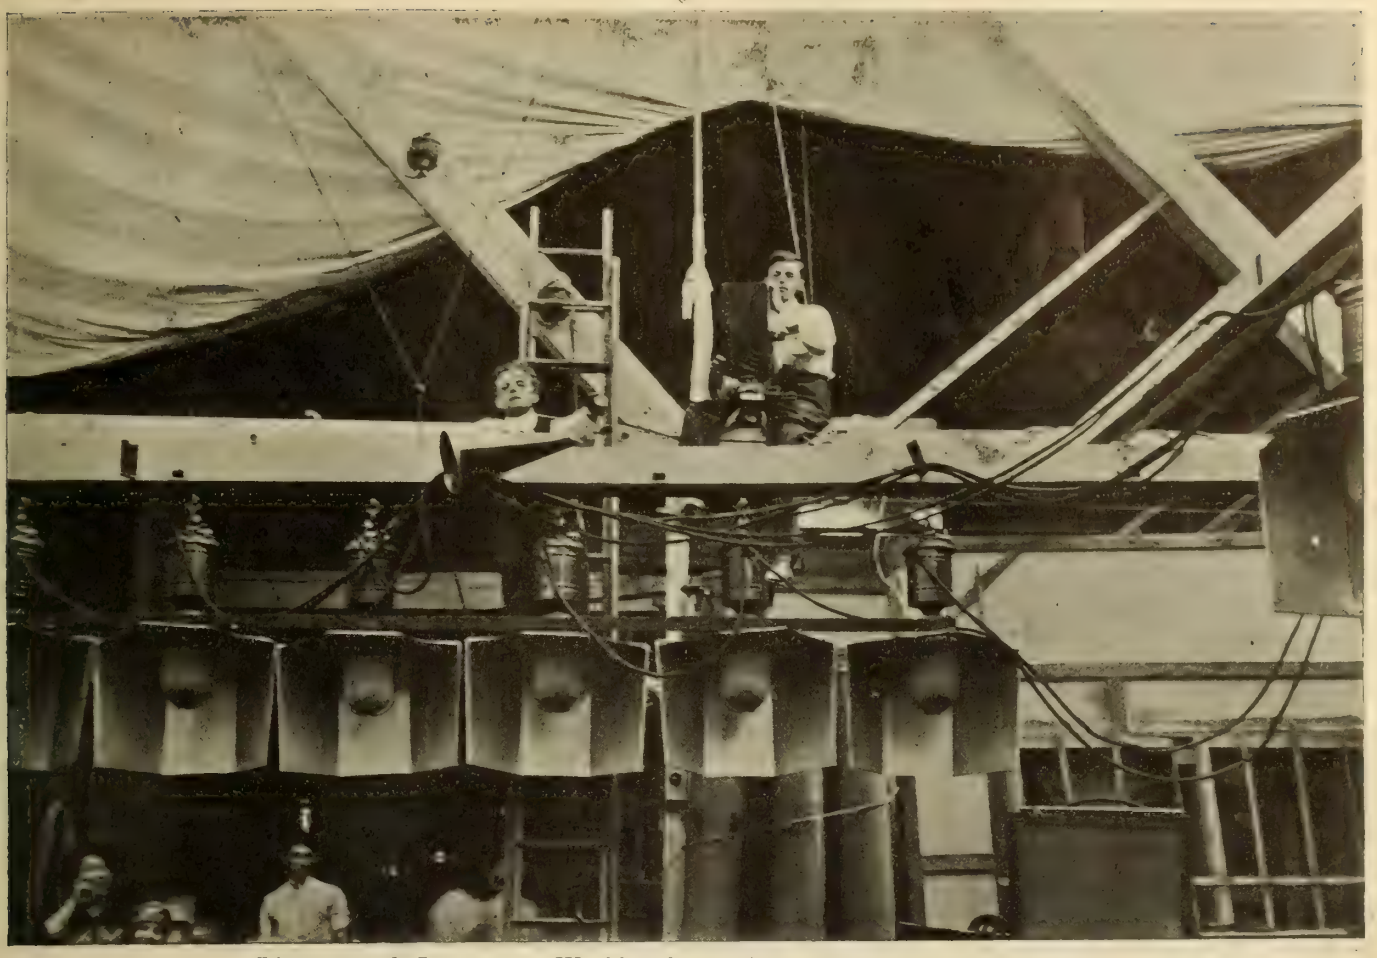
In this new existence he meets a beautiful young vivandiere named Cigarette, who falls in love with him. She eventually saves him and his detachment from destruction by the hostile Arabs and for this act is made a member of the Legion of Honor. During the presentation of the much-coveted ribbon, which is the insignia of that order, there are a number of English people of prominence watching the ceremony, and Cigarette notices that Bertie Cecil recognizes them.

One of the ladies in this party of English visitors is the sister of Cecil's most intimate friend in the Guards, who has at one time given Cecil her purse, containing all she owned, in sympathy, and he has preserved the purse, as well as the tender memory of the girl herself.

This recognition becomes mutual and the English girl meets Cecil secretly, where they are surprised by the unfriendly colonel. His superior officer makes a suggestive remark and is knocked down by Cecil. The latter is tried by court-martial for this serious offense and is condemned to death.

Cigarette now appears in the principal role of sympathetic interest. In Frank Stockton's famous story, "The Lady or the Tiger," a woman is called upon to decide the fate of the man she loves. It is up to her to decide, when he is placed in a room in an arena, whether a door shall be opened that will allow wild beasts to destroy him or another door opened which will place him in the arms of the woman he loves. Stockton lets the reader decide, but Cigarette settles the question in an example of noble magnanimity. She rides like a fiend to reach the headquarters of the marshal who decorated her with the Legion of Honor and wins a pardon for the brave soldier. On her return she encounters a sandstorm, dares enter the camp of hostile Arabs when her horse is exhausted, secures a fresh mount and reaches camp just as the firing squad is about to execute the prisoner. She rushes in front of him, waving the pardon, and is shot down in his stead.

Rehearsing a Scene While It Is Being Set Up.



Director and Cameraman Working from Girder to Secure a Novel Effect.

Such is the story of "Under Two Flags," made fascinating to thousands of readers by the novelist's skill in depicting scenes of highest dramatic value, but I doubt if any moving picture producer can satisfactorily cover the many incongruities of this story. There is nothing particularly valuable to society in the degradation of a clean character for the sake of a feeble one, and Cigarette's highly theatrical death would be an impossibility under any circumstances. It is rankly impossible that a squad of soldiers detailed to shoot a prisoner would pour their entire volley into the body of a woman giving every evidence that she had secured his pardon. I do not know how the Thanhouser play will end and this episode is probably not very important, but it is one of many such scenes which make adaptations from old stories that lack strength of appeal to modern intelligence.

Poignant scenes or situations of sorrow reach out with their purifying effect most powerfully when they pertain to life as we all recognize it. If our sympathies are not quickened by some similar experience in our own lives these scenes and situations must be consistent in every detail so that we can imagine they are presented as if they actually occurred.

In nearly every studio I have visited I come across enthusiasts who point out the merits of the pictures exhibited and explain how wonderful it all is. It is wonderful. Almost every detail of the evolution of this new art is amazing to those deeply absorbed in the production of photodramas, but my point of view is that of people who go to the little theater by millions and go there thousands of times, comparing the thousands of plays turned out every year irrespective of brand.

I find those who make a business of studying motion picture audiences closely are agreed that, aside from farce comedies, very few pictures get further than the screen, where they are watched with hopeful curiosity, good-natured toleration, or a form of ironical amusement. The people in front have no idea of the tremendous expenditure of time, taste, energy and money put into these photoplays; they are only concerned with results and must be entertained in accord with their way of thinking. Their way of thinking is of the hopes, trials and struggles of to-day, not of what concerned other people in other lands and other times.

The resurrection of old plays and revival of old novels is educational in a way and the high-sounding names of past celebrity may serve to impress the unthinking, but such plays stay on the screen—they are either studied or merely tolerated—and they never set throbbing the great common heart of humanity.

I must admit that the plays going over and gripping the hearts of moving picture audiences are painfully few and far between, but they appear now and then like brilliant little torches to light our way in the evolution of this fascinating art. When they do come the audiences sit enthralled, and remembrance of these illuminating exceptions is what brings the people back again, forever hoping for the charm and variety of what is new.

Battle Scene from Thanhouser's "Under Two Flags."

The Thanhouser products show dignity of conception and execution, but I do not think that they are the best Mr. Thanhouser can do by any means. He has gone so far into the development of the photodrama that I would like to see him continue or to have him come back some day and start in fresh and strong with plays of modern theme or of progressive spirit. Those he has turned out are a credit to his taste and intelligence and they bear the marks of his skill and training, but we are a long ways from the ultimate and I think many will join me in saying to him when he goes away for rest and recreation what he was kind enough to say to me at parting—"I hope you will repeat the visit and stay with us longer."

MAJESTIC STUDIO NOTES.

Mr. Robert Goodman has joined the producing staff at the Twenty-first Street plant. Mr. Goodman was formerly scenario editor and producer for the Melies Company in California where his work as a producer of Western picture stories earned for him a high reputation.

Miss Anna Lehr has been added to the Majestic Studio forces. Miss Lehr is a splendid actress and had her first picture training with the famous original Biograph stock company. Besides being a good actress, Miss Lehr is an extremely pretty girl, whose smile is like the summer sunshine.

The Majestic management has purchased another new six-cylinder, seven-passenger car, to be used for transporting actors and props for the regular out-door work of the company.

"GARDEN OF ALLAH" GOES WELL.

Mr. J. P. Read, Jr., of The Garden of Allah Film Co., reports rapid sales of territory for his three-reel feature, "A Trip to the Garden of Allah." The play, following its successful season at the Century Theater will be produced in Chicago, Cincinnati, Cleveland, Pittsburg, Philadelphia and Boston this coming season. One of the foremost and best-known lecturers in America is negotiating with Mr. Read to secure the rights for using this feature at such high class places as the Carnegie Lyceum in New York City, where it will probably open within the next few weeks. Mr. Read has received many offers to exhibit his production in some of the leading Broadway theaters.

"DON," THE WONDERFUL HORSE.

"Don," the horse that has been appearing in vaudeville and earning $500 a week and whose value is said to be more than $10,000, plays the leading role in "The Equine Spy," the Solax two-reel feature release of August 23.

The horse does wonderful, almost unimaginable "stunts." He carries messages, steals papers and ammunition. He displays more intelligence that some human beings. The owner of "Don" values him at $10,000. A horse with an earning capacity of $500 a week or $20,000 a "vaudeville year" is surely worth $10,000, if not more.

"Don" is a fine-looking horse, jet black, lean, a thoroughbred and has all the characteristics of a racehorse. He is a fine specimen and possesses that nervousness always so evident in high bred animals. Anyone with red blood gets a thrill of pleasure after a glimpse of graceful "Don" going across a stretch of country bearing on his back wounded Darwin Karr or carrying Fannie Simpson to Karr's rescue.

BOAT SHOW IN HOLLAND.

A Dutch barge owner, of Rotterdam, Holland, who had a boat that was unseaworthy and too old for traffic, fitted it up inside as a cinematograph hall, and the barge is now being towed up and down the Maas and the Dutch canals, visiting every town and out of the way village. The people flock in great numbers to see the moving pictures, which they had no chance of doing before. He is coining money.

ing toward the bridge to join her. There was no picking of steps for him, excepting the one for his right foot. He struck it fair in the center and the cold water immediately afterward.

He was drowning most beautifully when the old miller plunged to the rescue.

What a chorus of yells and storms of hand applause now broke from the sedate quill pushers and their fair companions!

"Quiet! Quiet!" roared Producer Eagle, who wanted to tell his camera men when to end the scene. But he might as well have invoked the storm.

When the din ceased, Mr. Eagle asked the camera men if they had heard his instructions. On being answered in the negative, he said with philosophic calm, "I knew you couldn't."

The next experience reserved for the visitors was that of taking part in the production of a moving picture. "The Pennant Puzzle" was the title of the subject and preparations had been made beforehand for the seating of the guests in an improvised grandstand. Chauncey D. Herbert, the producer, instructed the sightseers just what to do, and especially enjoined them that they should put plenty of ginger into the action.

The scene was supposed to show the action of a frenzied lot of baseball fans who were adverse to the umpire's decision. The newspaper men and their lady friends acted their parts to perfection, as will be seen when the film is released. Fists were shaken, and angry glances and cushions were thrown, at the offending official. Then as the excitement grew fiercer, part of the mob rushed into the ground and knocked him down. Producer Herbert restored quiet and complimented the visitors on the realism of their efforts.

About two hours and twenty-eight minutes after the arrival of the visitors, it was announced that the moving pictures taken of them at the entrance was ready and would be shown in the private projection room of the plant. It took about an hour before all the visitors could gain entrance, and much laughter and applause marked the running off of the film.

About six o'clock the well pleased sightseers left for Riverview Park, where they spent the evening.

The Pittsburgh Convention.

William J. Sweeney, who attended the convention held at Pittsburgh, June 24 and 25, reported to me that the proceedings were enthusiastic and conservative, also that the members present were thoroughly representative of the entire state of Pennsylvania. About 200 were present. M. A. Neff, national president, and C. M. Christiansen, national secretary, were there in their official capacities. Sam Morris, the national vice-president from Ohio, was also present. Prominent among the delegates in attendance were: J. H. Mercer, Wilmerding; John Wick, Jr., Kittaning; James Smith, Hazelwood; Mr. L. E. Wick, Vandergrift; Mr. Lotto, Beaver Falls; Harry Klehm, Henry Poke, Charles Bennett, Mr. Delves, Ed. Fisher and C. Bennett, all of Pittsburgh; Mr. C. Jeffries, Philadelphia, and H. A. Victor, McKeesport.

Pennsylvania will send a large contingent to the Chicago convention, those from Philadelphia and Pittsburgh promising to be especially large. The Philadelphia representation will be headed by Dr. W. Stuempfig, who intends making arrangements for special cars in which delegates will be taken up while the train is en route.

Mr. Sweeney is elated over the prospects of the convention and gives it as his opinion that the meeting will far exceed the highest hopes of the members, so far as numbers are concerned. He states that things are going along very smoothly and satisfactorily, and that every committeeman is giving the best work that is in him to make the convention a notable success.

Chicago Film Brevities.

Ben Michaels, one of the owners of the Western Feature Film Company and the Oriental Film Company, of San Francisco, also the owner of the Silver Palace Theater, Royal Palace Theater, Gold Palace Theater, Shanghai Theater and California Theater, all of San Frncisco, paid a very pleasant call at the World office last week. Mr. Michaels, is the accredited delegate of the California League to the national convention here. He will leave for the East shortly and will return to Chicago in time for the convention.

* * *

The manager of the machine department of the Kleine Optical Company advises me that the month of June has been marked by a very active business. Forty-five projecting machines, including Powers, Edengraph, and Edison, were sold.

Another "Independent" Split.

Ranks of the Universal Company Thrown Into Disorder by Withdrawal of New York M. P. Company.

Another sensation was sprung in Independent motion picture circles on Thursday, June 27, by the withdrawal of the New York Motion Picture Company, better known as the "Bison," from the recently formed Universal Film Manufacturing Company. An immediate result of that withdrawal was a battle royal for the possession of the New York M. P. Company's plant at 251 West 19th Street and the arrest of some of the attacking forces, which were headed by P. A. Powers, of the Universal Company. The persons apprehended were taken to the night court and discharged, but the New York M. P. Company were left in possession of the plant.

Failing in the attempt to gain forcible possession of the Bison plant the officers of the Universal Company took their cause into court and secured a temporary injunction against the Bison people, prohibiting them from advertising and marketing film until such time as the ownership of the plant could be properly decided. The hearing was set for Wednesday, July 3.

Claiming that Messrs. Baumann and Kessel and other employees of the Bison Company had unlawfully removed property of the Universal Company from the premises at 251 West 19th Street, the latter concern caused Messrs. Baumann and Kessel to be arrested upon the charge of grand larceny. These cases were set over till July 9 to await the decision of the Court in the injunction matter.

The Universal Company followed up its injunction proceedings against the Bison people by cancelling the orders of the Empire Film Exchange, owned by Messrs. Baumann and Kessel, for film. This action brought forth an injunction against the Universal to compel it to continue to fill the orders of the Empire.

In line with the action of the Universal in attempting to secure possession of the Bison plant in New York City, W. H. Swanson was despatched to Los Angeles to take possession of the Bison plant there. But the Bison people were prepared for this move and advised their employees by wire to resist all attempts at seizure, at the same time sending H. J. Streyckmans to Los Angeles to reinforce those already on the ground.

Regarding the conflicting claims of the several interests involved the Moving Picture World does not venture an opinion. The matter is now in the courts and will be properly sifted and adjudicated in due time. As to releases the Universal management declares that it will continue to release a full program as advertised, including Bison, Ambrosio and Itala, regardless of the deflection of the New York Film Company.

There is considerable uncertainty as to the causes for the rupture. On this difference of opinion there will probably be no agreement. The resignation of Mr. J. E. Brulatour is said to have started the trouble and that incident is said to have been precipitated by the unwillingness of certain factors to consummate the contract with the Eclair Company for its American plant. As the matter stands now the Eclair Company is not in the Universal. Mr. Brulatour has gone to Paris, but will continue to represent the Eastman Company in its dealings with the Independent manufacturers.

Film Supply Co. Non-Committal.

Regarding the split in the ranks of the Universal Company the members of the Film Supply Company are not saying much. They are unanimous, in the statement that they have enough to keep them busy supplying pictures to a constantly increasing number of exhibitors. Many new exchanges have been established throughout the United States and the average of sales has increased steadily since the company started business.

There is a business-like air in the company's offices that approaches that which pervades No. 80 Fifth Avenue.

INJUNCTIONS HEARD.

In the matter of the petition of the Universal Film Co. for an injunction to prevent the New York Motion Picture Co. from advertising and selling pictures, Justice Gavigan, in the Supreme Court, Wednesday, July 3, modified the terms of the injunction to permit the New York Motion Picture Co. to advertise and sell its pictures, pending the trial of the case, but forbids it from disposing of any of its property.

In the case of the petition of the Empire Film Exchange to compel the Universal to deliver its regular releases, Justice Gavigan dissolved the temporary injunction upon the ground that there was no contract between the parties to the action. This leaves the Empire without Universal pictures.

"The Danger Line"—(Cines)

Reviewed by Jas. S. McQuade.

IF one were to ask for the title of a film that would stand the strictest scrutiny for a well connected story, clearly and directly told, and for acting and action that bring out strongly the characters and incidents, I would not hesitate to name "The Danger Line," by Cines, which will be released by George Kleine on August 10.

The acting is especially admirable, it is so well poised, restrained, expressive and dignified. Mlle. de Leka, in the part of Mrs. Berni, the wife who thinks she is neglected because her busy lawyer husband has so little time to devote to her, is a splendid acquisition to the Cines studio forces. She is from the Theater Capucines, Paris, and one would not require this knowledge to determine her nationality; for the vivacity and emotionalism displayed in her impersonation are sufficient to tell it.

Mlle. de Leka has a face so expressive that it reflects her every thought at will. Just watch that scene where her brother Paul interrupts the tete a tete, which has developed into a kissing bee, between the wife and the unscrupulous Robert. All the wiles and smiles of a good woman, who has stooped to folly and is endeavoring to hide her secret, are employed in the most natural manner. There is also skillfully shown the nervousness of manner due to the unlooked for interruption and to the anxiety that her brother shall have his suspicions quieted.

The supper scene, which reveals the true character of Robert, is another bit of finished acting. Appetite and the glow of enjoyment flee at once when Mrs. Berni sees Robert at table with another woman. When the brawl between them comes, Mrs. Berni totters from the room on the arm of her brother, in horror and self loathing. The mental torture and struggle for self-control are seen in the blanched face and shrinking figure.

Lorenzo Lupi is a pantomimic actor of fine dignity and force. Indeed, the pantomime is confined to facial expression alone, as gesture is rarely used in his fine impersonation of Paul. The Robert of Guido Serene is a well studied part, marked by artistic touches that betray the finished actor. He will be remembered by his success in the title role of "The Inventor's Secret." Mr. Berni, the solicitor, who appears only in two short scenes of the production, is presented to the life by Carlo Moltini, whose great characterization of Brutus, in the Cines subject of that title, will always remain a classic in photoplay acting.

Properly projected, there will be no ground for adverse criticism of this one-reel film, which is stamped by excellent photography throughout.

Mrs. Berni, the wife of a hard-working solicitor, feels neglected because he cannot spare more of his time with her. A little vain, and fond of the society and admiration of the opposite sex, she shows preference for an acquaintance, Robert, an attractive young man about town. Robert has little money, but an extraordinary disposition for spending it.

He makes violent love to Mrs. Berni, who is flattered by his attentions, but is foiled by her brother, Paul, who has learned of her infatuation. Paul calls on his brother-in-law with the hope of influencing him to spend more of his time with his wife, but the lawyer pleads pressing business. Then Paul takes the matter into his own hands.

While in his office one day, Robert calls to borrow money. Paul refuses him. The spendthrift then requests a loan from Mrs. Berni, after one of his love scenes. She immediately calls on her brother Paul, and requests the amount. Paul guesses her purpose, but hands her the money.

Determined to save his sister, Paul calls on an actress whom he knows had at one time been admired by Robert. From her he learns that she has been spurned by her old-time admirer. Learning that Paul's sister is intended as the next victim, she promises to help him and have revenge on Robert. She writes a letter to Robert, asking him to give her a farewell dinner in a fashionable hotel, as she is leaving for another city. Robert complies and the evening is set.

Informed of the date, Paul takes his sister on the same evening to the same cafe, securing a table where his sister can observe Robert and his companions without being discovered. On the entry of the party, Mrs. Berni at once recognizes Robert's voice and gasps in surprise as she watches him go to his table with the other men and women of his party. Paul, whose back is turned to the roisterers, pretends to be ignorant of their presence, but gloats inwardly over the disillusionment of his sister. As the dinner at the other table progresses, Robert and his former flame engage in a wordy conflict. This soon develops into a physical encounter that is stopped by the intervention of the other guests of the party. Mrs. Berni is shocked and horrified at the revelation of Robert's true character, and asks Paul to assist her from the room. He escorts her home, and suspecting that, in her despair over her folly, she might do herself an injury, he conducts her little boy into the room to which she had retired. The sight of the child gives her a sweeter view of life and she presses him to her heart. Thanks to her brother, Paul, the danger line was passed.

Scene from "The Danger Line" (Cines).

GLEANINGS FROM ALL OVER.

J. J. Bush, of the Vitagraph, was recently in Colorado Springs taking pictures of points of general interest. He also made a trip over the Short Line to Cripple Creek and used his camera a good bit of the way. He afterward went on to La Junta, where he met a large gathering of Vitagraphers, who will later return to Colorado Springs, where they will remain most of the summer, staging Western comedies and dramas.

The organized German theatrical managers in Berlin have decreed that none of the actors in their employ shall appear in moving pictures. This action, of course, affects only those connected with the regular dramatic companies and can have no effect on those prominent independent actors who recently have been appearing in scenes from classic plays.

A recent dispatch from London gave a description of a demonstration at the Royal Institution by Professor William Stirling of an invention by means of which cinematograph films and gramophone records can be presented simultaneously, with sounds and movements in perfect unison. Professor Stirling said that the invention, which was due to the ingenuity of M. Leon Gaumont and his collaborators, comprised two electric motors of identical pattern for driving the gramophone and the cinematograph. There was a special arrangement by which any want of accord between the sound and the movement could be immediately rectified. Records were shown of a cock crowing, a person speaking through a telephone and a man playing a banjo.

MAJOR LILLIE WARNS EXHIBITORS.

The Moving Picture World,
New York City, N. Y.

Gentlemen—The fact that Judge Gerard denied a temporary injunction pending the trial of our action against the Buffalo Bill & Pawnee Bill Film Company, will not relieve the present exhibitors of the moving pictures of the "Life of Buffalo Bill" of responsibility, for they will, without doubt, be compelled to account to us in the end for their use.

We have appealed the case to the Appellate Division of the Supreme Court and there is no doubt or question in our minds what the final outcome will be.

We will endeavor to have the question decided as quickly as possible in order that intending purchasers of these films may be protected from future complications. Very truly yours, G. W. Lillie, manager Buffalo Bill's Wild West & Pawnee Bill's Great Far East Company.

NEW BELLEVILLE, ILL., THEATER.

The Louise Amusement Company, of which Louis Landan, Jr., is president, E. A. Dodge, vice-president and A. B. Garvin, secretary and treasurer, broke ground at Belleville, Ill., on Monday, July 1, for their new theater. The house will cost $50,000 and will have a seating capacity of 2,245. The structure will be 74 feet by 140 feet. It will have a balcony and twenty-eight boxes. Charles Pauley & Son are the architects. Moving pictures, vaudeville, dramas and musical comedies will be shown at different times at the house. The admission price will be ten cents.

BLANCHE WALSH IN PICTURES.

The Masko Film Company, of New York, announces that it will soon release a three-reel production of Tolstoy's famous story, "Resurrection," with Blanche Walsh in the leading part, together with Russian dancers and players. It will be remembered that Miss Walsh created her part in this play, which was first presented in the Victoria Theater several years ago and enjoyed a long run. Miss Walsh is widely and favorably known to American theatergoers and her appearance in this picture should attract considerable attention. The World will review this picture at length in a subsequent issue.

CHILDREN OF THE PHOTOPLAY.

One of the Lubin troupes, directed by Joseph Smiley. Most of the company are children under 9 years of age. The small figure second from the left is the famous Roswell "Buster" Johnson, only 3½ years old and playing star roles.

Doings In Los Angeles.

Preparing for National Municipal League Convention—Kalem Boer War Picture—Much Other News.

DR. DANA W. BARTLETT, a pioneer social settlement worker of national prominence, and head of all the Bethlehem Institutions in Southern California, has just returned to Los Angeles after an absence of more than two months.

He visited most of the large cities of the East, primarily to gather material for the municipal exhibit which is to be held in this city during the national convention of the National Municipal League next month, but also to investigate along lines in which he is interested—social problems in all their phases.

"The most interesting investigation I made while I was gone related to the moving picture industry," he says. "I made it my business to attend a great many of the moving picture shows in the poorer sections of fifteen large cities—Chicago, Denver, Kansas City, Milwaukee, Washington, Philadelphia, Boston and New York among others—and in not one of the hundreds of theaters I attended did I see a single reel shown that I would not be willing to exhibit in my own church. I tell you that means a great deal for the moving picture industry.

"The public at large may not realize what a tremendous force the pictures are exerting in our large congested cities to-day, but the settlement workers are keenly alive to the situation and they rejoice that the pictures have come. Regardless of what they may have been in the past, their tendency now is along educational lines, or toward thoughtful uplifting drama and clean, wholesome comedy.

"They are doing the world good because, for one thing, they are destroying the influence of the saloon, not by combatting it but by providing a beneficial substitute for it. The man who formerly spent his idle time in a saloon now goes to a picture show, and with what vastly different results. Instead of squandering his money and suffering from the after-effects of intoxication, he spends a nickel for an hour's enjoyable entertainment and possibly gets also some helpful suggestion or some elevating idea. Where the toiler formerly went to the saloon in the evening he now takes his family to a picture show.

"One other phase of the same question that has come to my attention is the attitude of traveling men toward it. They are the greatest boosters of the moving pictures that I have met and most of them keep track of what the several companies are doing and know the names of many of the players. I think they are the steadiest and most loyal class of patrons."

The New "Argus Weekly."

Plans are on foot for launching a new world record of news events which will be marketed from this city, where the head offices will be. It will be known as the Argus Weekly and will make its appearance probably before this appears in print. The men who are back of the enterprise have been quietly but energetically at work for more than a year. In that time they have established agencies in Japan and China, Australia, the Malay Peninsula, India, South Africa, Egypt, Italy, France, Germany, Sweden, England, Canada, Mexico, Buenos Aires, and in addition have camera men already at work in nine of the principal cities of the United States. The late W. H. Harbeck was interested in the company and when he went down recently in the wreck of the Titanic was returning from an extended European tour during which he had been photographing famous scenes and buildings for the company. His films were lost with him.

The new company expects to gain some advantages from the fact that it will devote its entire time and energies to the production of news pictures, whereas all of the other companies producing pictures of the same kind are doing it as a side line and consequently cannot give it the same careful attention. Whether there is anything in this argument, time and experience alone will tell, but it sounds plausible.

The photographers who are stationed in the various parts of the world have been instructed to take only pictures of worldwide significance and to eliminate everything but the kernel of the picture. If it is an accident to an airship, for instance, only the actual accident is wanted, not the preliminary flights or scenes after the excitement is over.

The weekly will contain 1,000 feet of film and will sell for $100. It will be sold to all independent exchanges that order it. Contracts have already been signed up with 28 exchanges in this country, it is announced. The officers of the company are: President, L. L. Burns; vice-president and general manager, Harry Revier; secretary, H. K. Eakle; treasurer, E. J. Vallejo.

Kalem Doing Boer War Picture.

"The Battle of Paardeburg," one of the spectacular engagements of the Boer War, is to be reproduced by the Kalem Company as a two-reel subject. George H. Melford, manager of the Kalem forces at Glendale, is making preparations to begin work on the production within two weeks.

His determination to attempt it was brought about in an interesting way. Gen. C. Rhys Price, veteran of the Boer war and the late revolution in Mexico, has been appearing in a number of Mexican war pictures which Melford has produced. Gen. Price was in the celebrated engagement at Paardeburg. A few weeks ago while traveling through the San Fernando valley near Tropico, only a few miles from the Kalem studio, he discovered a topographical situation which exactly parallels the battlefield of Paardeburg. He mentioned the fact to Melford. The latter has had in his possession for some time a photoplay dealing with the Boer War and calling for a battle scene. He decided at once to combine the idea suggested by Price with the Boer War story and the two-reel production which is to be called "On Opposite Sides" will be the result..

Gen. C. Rhys Price.

Costumes and properties have been ordered and the locations have been picked out for all the scenes. There will be practically no studio work in connection with it. "We're going to do this right," Melford says, "and we expect it to cost every cent of $10,000, but it will be worth the money."

Melford and his company have finished two other reels this week. One is an Indian story dealing with pioneer life in the West and the other is a story laid in Kentucky, with a horse race as the exciting scene. In this, Melford obtained a novel effect by loading the camera in an automobile and taking one scene from the back of the racing car with five Kentucky thoroughbreds mounted by jockeys and running huddled together at breackneck speed just behind the camera.

New Kalem Leading Lady.

The Kalem Company has experienced a great misfortune and a piece of rare good luck in the last week according to Melford. The misfortune was that Alice Joyce, the leading woman, wanted to see whether things have changed in the East since she left "ages ago" and went back to work with the Eastern company. The good luck was that Melford was able to engage a new leading lady at once, and a good one, Miss Mae Marsh, formerly of the Biograph and later of the Imp. Princess Mona Dark Feather, formerly of the Selig Company, has also joined to play Indian leads.

To Revise Los Angeles Picture Ordinance.

Exhibitors of Los Angeles will no doubt be delighted to learn that the city council has taken steps to redraft and simplify the antiquated ordinance which now regulates motion picture theaters. The city attorney and the building superintendent are working on the new draft which will soon be presented to the council. The present ordinance was originated nearly ten years ago. From time to time it has been amended, but the amendments have tended to make it more complicated and unworkable rather than to simplify it. As it stands, it is a relic of the days when the motion picture industry was in its infancy. A move is also on foot to strike out the provision which prohibits children attending the theaters unaccompanied by parents or guardians. This section, like many others, necessarily is practically a dead letter, and no attempts are made to enforce it. A few of the exhibitors take the precaution to send in some adult to act as the temporary guardian of a child, but many ignore it entirely. It was passed years ago, before there was any censorship of films, but now that the national board of censors is on the job and its decisions are subject to review by a local board, there is no possibility of any questionable film getting past and consequently no occasion to bar children from a form of amusement that is entertaining and profitable.

Fox Picture Company Resumes.

L. L. Burns, of the Fox Motion Picture Co., which suspended operations temporarily about two months ago, announces that the company is about to resume the manufacture of dramatic, comedy and feature films, beginning in about two weeks. Arrangements have been made to release its product through the Producers' Film Co., which Mr. Burns says is now securely established with a line of exchanges of its own. The Fox Company, by the way is the one that made the pictures of Nat Goodwin in "Nathan Hale," over which there has been a controversy lately and threats of suit for copyright. "We employed Goodwin to act in this picture long before there was any thought of his appearing in the Oliver Twist pictures," Mr. Burns said. "We paid him for his services. Afterward he went to New York and made a contract with someone else to appear exclusively under another management. We do not think there is any merit in a contention that his contract with the other people prevents the exhibition of the previous pictures, which we bought and paid for."

"Q" Houses Go Independent.

The "Q" houses, owned and operated by the Quinn Brothers, after having used Licensed pictures ever since they came under the present management, are announcing exclusive Independent programs this week and will show nothing but Independent films hereafter. The change happened, as was forecasted last week, because the "Q" theaters showed the Sunset Weekly, the new motion picture weekly reviewing news events in Southern California. The weekly is being made by an independent company and when the Quinn Brothers put it on, the Patents Company canceled their license for all their houses. It is understood that after they were notified that they could not longer have the Licensed service they made a formal tender of their money and a demand for the service, which, of course, was refused by the local exchange of the General Film Co. It is also a matter of common knowledge among the exhibitors that they have placed their case in the hands of one of the most noted attorneys in California and intend to make a test of it if possible under the Sherman Act.

Brevities.

The Independents are getting a strong footing in San Diego. Three new theaters, all of them big ones, have just opened there and are showing the films of the independent manufacturers. The Casino is now running under the management of the Casino Amusement Co., which includes Frank R. Faber, G. Irving Richardson and George E. Kearns. The Grant Theater has been turned over from stock to motion pictures and is operating under the management of F. W. Ruhnow. The third house has been opened in the business district by W. H. Hilts.

The Grand Opera House in this city, for years a musical comedy theater, is now showing motion pictures exclusively. Most of its programs are made up of features such as the Chinese revolution and other Independent films.

The name of Tally's Broadway Theater, which was recently taken over by the Quinn Brothers and added to the "Q" chain of downtown houses, was changed this week to the Colonial. The new name was selected in a prize competition in which there were nearly 200 competitors. The jury when it selected the name "Colonial" found that fourteen persons had sent in the name, and the prize money was divided.

Fred Crome, said by the daily newspapers to be a moving picture actor residing in Hollywood, was drowned in the surf while bathing at Long Beach, June 23. There are only two motion picture companies at Hollywood, the Nestor and the Lubin. The Nestor offices report that Crome was not connected with their company. The Lubin plant is temporarily closed and the members of the company seem to have scattered. Inquiry among the other companies in this vicinity failed to identify the drowned man as belonging to the motion picture industry. He was about 35 years old and came here from Salt Lake City, where his parents live.

POWELL.

GEORGE KLEINE'S CINES AND ECLIPSE RELEASES.

The Cines for Tuesday, July 9th, is a split reel containing two highly amusing farces, "The Gay Deceivers" and "Leah Learns to Dance." Mr. George Gambardelli in the role of Tony Stout, apparently a sedate married man, and his son-in-law, Fritz, have a high old time flirting with two coquettish young milliners unknown to each other and are mightily surprised when they chance to meet at the home of the girls. Under the circumstances they are obliged to overlook their digressions and swear to stick by each other through thick and thin. It soon develops that their mutual loyalty is stretched to the utmost, when on the following day the charming young milliners on calling at the house to deliver hats to the wives of the gay Lotharios find their recreant sweethearts there, and on discovering that they are married men there is a general scene of excitement, and a battle royal takes place. The fun is fast and furious and the picture will get many laughs. The second comedy on the reel, "Leah Learns to Dance," is one in which the popular Cines comedienne, Leah, is shown as a novice at the terpsichorean art and, after engaging lessons with a famous dancing master, becomes so enthused and develops such tireless energy that at a ball which she attends she sets such a pace that those partners unfortunate enough to dance with her are completely done up. This subject is one big laugh from start to finish.

The Eclipse release of Wednesday, July 10th, is one of those powerful dramas for which this splendid and talented organization is noted. A number of actors of the highest class are seen in this picture, the title of which is "A Mysterious Case." A poor inventor calls on his brother in an endeavor to borrow money to carry on his experiments, but is refused. After he leaves the house his brother in some mysterious manner is seriously injured. Of course, the inventor, having been seen leaving the house, is suspected and arrested. The story and action from this point is very intense, and the interest cannot fail to be sustained in following the development of the plot to find out in what manner the brother becomes injured; how the inventor's daughter in her official position as telegraph operator is obliged to convey the message ordering her father's arrest, and finally how the mystery is solved. The plot of the story is well sustained and the acting consistent throughout.

The Cines players will be seen Saturday, July 13th, in a highly interesting light drama entitled "For Her Father's Sake." Dorothy Ferrari, as the daughter of the Marquis, plays the leading role in a very convincing manner, while Lorenzo Lupi enacts the father with dignity and reserve. The daughter, for her father's sake, expresses her willingness to sacrifice herself and marry the son of her father's creditor, on the condition that the note held against the father, and which he is unable to pay is cancelled.

The creditor's son, who truly loves the girl, on learning that she is willing to marry him only as a bargain, refuses the offer and reproaches his father for making such an arrangement. A little later, however, it develops that the girl finds she really has a liking for the young man and misses his former attentions. In a way, that only lovers know, the young people get together and make a little bargain all their own. The story is amusing as well as interesting and splendidly acted in scenes of beautiful settings for which this company is becoming well known.

PATHE BASEBALL TEAM DEFEATS LUBIN.

The Pathe team, so far this season the champions of all the moving picture baseball teams, greatly surprised the Lubin players June 30 at National League Park, Philadelphia. The game was attended by a thousand or more enthusiastic friends and employees of the Lubin firm, and a good number of the Pathe Company, who, through the courtesy of Mr. Berst, went all the way to Philadelphia to witness the game. Harry Sanger pitched a faultless game for the Pathe, holding the Lubin team down to one run, which came in on the catcher's error. There was no end of sensational features, including a triple play neatly executed by the Pathe, when the Lubin team had three men on base, and no outs.

$55,000 MOVING PICTURE HOUSE FOR SAN PEDRO.

Luke Kelley will erect on his property at Pablos Verdes and Sixth Street, San Pedro, Cal., for the Globe Amusement Company, a $55,000 moving picture theater to be known as the Globe Theater No. 5. This house will have large rooms over the auditorium, and will be one of the most beautiful structures in San Pedro. The architect is A. Lawrence Valk.

"The Money King"

A Three-Reel Vitagraph Dramatic Feature, Introducing the Hydro-Aeroplane in a Logical Way.

HIGH finance does not appear to advantage in this melodramatic photoplay. In fact, the motives underlying big business are held up to public inspection. If all these things can be true of men who sit in such high places as the President's cabinet, then, indeed, our country is in a bad way. That is, if this picture pertains to America. The evidence points very strongly that way. When we see the double of Big Bill Taft walk out and take his seat at a cabinet meeting, there is little left to infer. With a steel trust magnate sitting next to the President in cabinet session, and double-crossing the man who honored him with a portfolio, there are some who may get from this picture a queer idea of American official life.

Still, the idea is not so much what does exist in the inner circles of political life in America, but what might exist. The picture shows that it is entirely possible for a President of the United States to place confidence in men who are unscrupulous enough to turn that confidence to their own profit at his expense. The basic idea in this three-reel production is that of a young diplomat sent to represent his country at a Hague peace conference, having as its object the aversion of an impending European war. His instructions from the President are to sue for peace at any and all events. Against the President's instructions there are large steel interests which would be deprived of stupendous orders for steel should the war not take place. The steel people's object under the circumstances is to forestall the influence of the president in settling the overtures for peace.

By a coincidence the young envoy selected by the President is the fiancé of the daughter of the steel baron who is a member of the President's cabinet. He is welcomed to the family circle of that very wealthy man, which includes his nephew, an aviator who is an expert in his line, and has recently completed a hydro-aeroplane which is a success. The young inventor takes great pleasure in exhibiting his flying machine, and, early in the picture, he is to be seen explaining to his fair young cousin and her fiancé the workings of his ingenious craft. It is while in the aviator's workshop that word comes to the young diplomatic attaché that he has been selected to represent his country at the Hague peace tribunal. His orders are to sail for Europe forthwith, which he does, with the blessings of his sweetheart and also those of her father, insofar as his feelings will permit of it. That is to say, being interested in steel and the building of battleships, it is his hope that war will be declared.

In the very next scene, the young peace envoy is seen addressing the committee at the Hague tribunal. At this point we feel called upon to say that the sudden transition of the young man from the home of his future bride to a chamber in the Hague Temple of Peace is so sudden that the sense of his having taken a long journey is not felt. It would have been quite easy, while the company was around the pier, to have taken an additional scene, showing the young man embarking for Europe. We would advise the Vitagraph Company, just for the sake of briny atmosphere in the first reel, to produce such a scene while there is yet time, before the picture is released. This may seem a strained point, but it should not be forgotten that a moving picture should, as far as possible, be told by action rather than by subtitles.

At the Hague tribunal the young diplomat makes such an impression upon the assembled representatives of the powers that they accept the President's plan put forth by him. Four weeks are given to the United States representative to return to America for the President's signature upon the document. His unexpected return trip brings much happiness to the envoy and his sweetneart, as it gives them an unexpected meeting. The President's signature is quickly obtained, but the difficulty comes when the young man is about to return to Europe. The steel interests are determined that the peace treaty shall not be ratified by the President, even if they have to resort to underhanded means. They know, if they can keep the President's ratification away from the Hague until the four weeks are up, that war will be declared by the nations involved. A plan to delay the negotiations is hatched up on short notice by a number of high financiers and they resort to a piece of diplomatic finesseing that is not altogether new—that of using a woman to bring about the undoing of a government official.

Scene from a Vitagraph Production, "The Money King."

The woman selected by the financiers is shrewd and clever; one well accustomed to diplomatic intrigue. In short, a professional spy. This woman is introduced to the young peace envoy at an embassy ball the night before his steamer sails for Europe. Plenty of opportunity is given him to fall into the woman's wiles. The adventuress is assisted by the steel king, who keeps his daughter out of the way the better part of the evening. When her opportunity arrives, the adventuress, by a clever ruse, gets the document that she is seeking. It is the ratification of the peace treaty, signed by the President. In its place she leaves an exact counterpart of the paper without the President's signature.

Next morning the adventuress presents herself at the steel king's residence to collect her fee and deliver the document. The steel magnate with much satisfaction pays her well and deposits the coveted paper in his safe. His daughter in the next room accidentally overhears the conversation between her father and the strange woman, whom she had met for the first time only the night before, and whom she then suspected. At that very moment she is expected at the steamer by her lover, who is to sail. But now that she realizes what a predicament he is in, she determines to remain at home and get those papers out of the safe where her father has left them. It has been her custom for some time past to have her father lock her jewelry in the safe. Acting on the impulse, she hastens to her room and gathers up some of her valuables and brings them to her father with the request that he put them away. No sooner has he opened the safe than she requests him hastily to get the steamer on the telephone, so that she will lose no time. While his back is turned she substitutes a blank paper for the documents, which she takes and conceals about her person.

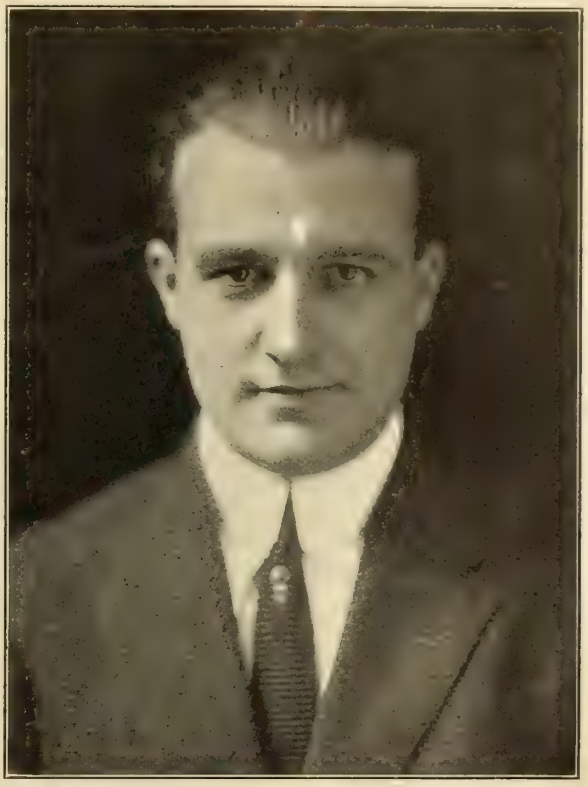
The loyal girl hastens by motor to the pier, only to arrive there after the steamer has sailed. Matters look bad indeed for the success of the young peace envoy, but the girl is resourceful as well as very lucky. Like a flash the hydro-aeroplane comes into her mind. She knows where her cousin is experimenting with his wonderful craft, and there she directs the chauffeur to speed with all haste, first stopping, however, at a wireless telegraph station, from which she sends a message to her lover on board the outgoing steamer, telling him that he has the wrong paper and to watch for the hydro-aeroplane. At the wharf she finds the youthful inventor, happy about his work, little expecting a trip at sea. The excited girl manages to convey to her astonished cousin the necessity of overtaking the vessel and delivering the paper, which she hands him.

Without delay the amphibious vessel is launched and on its way. It soars into the air and is plainly seen bearing down upon the great ocean liner as it steams out of the Narrows. The anxious diplomat on board catches sight of the hydro-aeroplane, which, to his tormented mind, seems like an angel from Heaven. There is great excitement on the vessel as the huge mechanical bird glides gracefully upon the water beside the boat. In a few moments the document is delivered and the future reputation of the young American diplomat is saved from the disgrace of incompetency. His salvation, however, is due to the loyalty of his sweetheart, who deliberately cut her own father out of a chance to gather millions, had she not acted as she did.

The interest in the picture, starting at a normal point, increases until, by the time the second reel is ended, some impatience is felt for the third reel to begin. The last reel, showing the hydro-aeroplane flights, is the one that makes the whole production worth while, especially that portion which shows the great ocean liner in the foreground, and from the far horizon in the rear the bird-like vessel is seen rising high above the rigging of the ship. This particular scene is a feat of photography that emphasizes the great possibilities that the motion picture enjoys over the mechanical limitations of the theater. H. F. H.

GARWOOD REJOINS THANHOUSER.

William, alias "Billy," Garwood is again a Thanhouserite. This "info" is official. Garwood is back in New Rochelle, working hard, and will shortly be seen in "Vengeance is Mine," the first finished film of his new Thanhouser work. Of his pictures of a year ago, fans will perhaps best remember "Adrift," "Checkmate," "For Her Sake," "Baseball in Bloomers," "Pasha's Daughter," and "Cally's Comet."



WILLIAM GARWOOD.

Another old Thanhouserite back in the ranks is Riley Chamberlin. Mr. Chamberlin, however, was never in Mr. Thanhouser's employ in his film producing, but for many years served as principal comedian with the Thanhouser stock company at Milwaukee. He will play comedy parts with the film company. His first appearance is in "Why Tom Signed the Pledge," released Friday, June 14.

QUAKER EXCHANGE IN NEW HANDS.

The Quaker Film Exchange, of Philadelphia, which has been under the management of George Graff for the past few years, recently changed hands, having been bought by M. Lessy, of the Philadelphia Film Exchange, and George W. Benethum, of the Exhibitors' Film Service Company, of Wilkes-Barre, Pa. The Quaker Film Exchange will remain at the present address under the management of Geo. H. Kline.

Upon resigning as manager of the Quaker Film Exchange, Mr. Geo. Graff bought an interest in the Star Feature Film Exchange, which has only been opened a few weeks, and will act as the Philadelphia manager. Mr. Graff is an experienced feature film man, and no doubt his presence with the new concern will be a big factor as a business getter.

The Star Exchange up to the present time is rushed with orders for their excellent features, and it is not possible as yet to supply the exhibitors until all the films arrive in this country, as all the films are imported. The Star will open offices in all the leading cities within the next few months so as to be able to supply the exhibitors with features on short notice.

RELIANCE COMPANY IN CATSKILLS.

On Saturday, June 22, the Reliance company of players packed their bags for a trip to the Catskill Mountains, where they will produce a number of excellent subjects with the delightful scenes of that picturesque region for backgrounds. The trip is planned to last about five weeks. The company is under the direction of Mr. O'Sullivan.

Advertising for Exhibitors

Conducted by EPES WINTHROP SARGENT.

With English Features.

WE are indebted to Mr. Nichols, of the Moving Picture Sales Agency, London, for a very interesting and complete collection of the material put out by his house, English agents for the Biograph, Kalem and Lubin Companies, as well as Empire and B. and C. Mr. Nichols writes: "Advertising and pushing the sale of films in this country and on the continent are done along quite different lines than those in vogue in the United States of America," and he backs his explanation up with several pounds of Exhibit A that would gladden the heart of any American exhibitor and delight the heart of the photoplay fan who can't understand why the Biograph does not give out names. Abroad you can get Biograph names, not always the real names of the players, and postcards and things.

The essential difference between American and English methods is that in England the open market obtains and the agent who would make sales must create and keep alive a demand that backs up with force his own arguments. Over here a manufacturer arranges with the A. B. C. Company to make one or one and three sheets, and leaves the rest to Arthur Jacobs and those who follow in his wake, leaving it to the house management and exchange to arrange for paper. The English agent looks after the paper and gets out all sorts of novelties to create and keep alive the demand for his product, and those who cling to the antiquated theory that the English are behind their American cousins in the matter of paper should alter their opinions. There was a time a quarter century ago when Lacy and Arthur took "A Still Alarm" to England that the spirited 28 sheet of the engine was a nine-day wonder, but since then things have changed, and were it not for the heavy duty on paper it might pay to bring some of this over, though Mr. Nichols does not supply prices.

Some of the Samples.

One notable fact is that the paper is of better stock than over here. It is slightly heavier and of a better finish. One set of paper seems to have been designed for hot weather use and one line is worth a lot as an argument. It reads:

If we couldn't keep our THEATER
COOL
We wouldn't keep it open.

the rest of the legend being, "Come inside and think you're at the North Pole. Kalem showing to-day." There are several in the set using the trade-marks of the various companies (and these trade marks, by the way, are more extensively played up than they are here). These are 8½ inches wide by 28 long, a size largely favored. Another set is midway between a half and a whole sheet, and one reads:

Weather hot
Ought to go
Coolest spot
Picture show

There are some who will contend that this is poetry, but we leave you at liberty to form your own judgment. Of course, there follows the inevitable trade-mark ten inches high. It can be seen across the street.

Bulletin Frames.

A really artistic piece of paper is a bulletin frame 18 by 28 with space for the regulation bulletin. A printed card offers free bulletins and the sheet may be used repeatedly. One before us is deep red and brown on light blue, and it is both showy and in good taste; an uncommon combination.

The bulletins are about the size issued by Lubin, Selig and others over here, and are passed about very freely.

The favorite photoplayers are shown on what corresponds to our one sheets, being not unlike the series prepared by Jacobs, but the faces are larger and beyond the type printing there is nothing to stand out, the frame design being in light blue that does not detract from print or portrait.

Portrait frames are cheap, a framed set of ten to be used as frame or easel costing about three dollars, and sets of eight being priced at $2.50. Gummed stickers of favorites and trade-marks are sent free in generous quantity and a card on the envelope invites the recipient to send for more when the supply is exhausted.

Frames for one and three sheets or a sort familiar here may be had in plentiful assortment.

More Portraits.

Postcards of all the players are to be had at a penny each, which corresponds to the prices quoted here, though the grade of work is somewhat better, and postcards are given with the sixpenny boxes of chocolates, the candy being supplied by the Sales Agency direct and not through a confectioner. The postcard craze in England is even more virulent than over here, and postcards are valuable in holding interest. Souvenir folding fans printed with the theater's advertisement and giving 18 half-tones of the stars are quoted at about $30 a thousand, and there is a strip bulletin 8½ by 28 for each release, these generally being fitted into frames.

It is a splendid layout of work and we hope that Mr. Nichols will keep us advised of his new ideas and give us details. With E. H. Montague looking after the Selig interests and Mr. Nichols on the job for his company, it must be pleasant for the English exhibitor.

Where Winstock Was.

We advertised for some old friends of this department the other day. Mr. Chaney still sleeps and Wesley, who says so, is snoring, but Melvin G. Winstock rises to remark that he has been busy with a $25,000 production in connection with a recent celebration in Portland, Oreg. He staged an outdoor production based on a locally produced novel with 500 supers, 250 Indians, and a two hundred foot stage. They played to 27,000 persons in two nights, and then had to give two performances for those turned away on the scheduled nights. That's going some even for the head of a photoplay circuit and now Winstock is certain that $25,000 would not tempt him to take on the worry again.

It does not appear that all this has a place in an advertising story, but it has. It backs up our point that it pays to become identified as one of the live wires of a city. Winstock is general manager of the People's Amusement Co., as most of our readers know. Every time he does something out of the ordinary run he gains the prestige for his houses, and this indirect advertising is far more valuable than billboards or newspaper ads. People argue that a man who can stage a performance with nearly 900 persons and 360 horses should be able to run his theaters right, and they regard the theaters as local institutions because the manager has established himself as one of the city's progressives. What Montgomery has done down South Winstock is doing in the West, but the North Atlantic coast is singularly lacking in men of this calibre in the photoplay theaters, though there is no reason other than a disinclination to activity.

The Convict Scored.

Mr. Winstock adds:

> I desire to tell you that "The Convict's Parole" was a great drawing card, and drew more people in one day than "Columbus" drew throughout a four-day run. "The Convict's Parole" was an unalloyed success and has proved to be a record-breaker everywhere out here, and the peculiar part of it was that I did not advertise it at all as I had intended doing, as I was afraid it might mitigate against the success of "Columbus," which cost us a heavy price and consequently had to be advertised extra.

"The Convict's Parole" was pretty liberally advertised before the Columbus reel was dated for release and every man, woman and child in the valley of the Columbia knew that it was the joint product of Winstock and the Governor of the State.

Speaking of Columbus.

And speaking of the "Coming of Columbus" here is a little card from the Gem Theater, Greenwood, Miss. They write:

> We have been reading with a great deal of interest your column devoted to advertising. We have been especially attentive to the "Coming of Columbus" advertising. We enclose herewith a little card that we had distributed secretly among our patrons, which we think was very effective. The subject is to be shown here the 26th.

We think that most persons can study it out. If you can't send a self-addressed postal and the answer will be given you.

1 4 9 2
6 2 6 1 9 1 2

Got Your Curiosity Up and Going
Easy to Solve If You Only Stay Awake
Make Sure of All Announcements and Keep Mum

THEN YOU'LL DISCOVER

The Columbus reel does not lend itself readily to catch advertising, but this is clever, and not lacking in dignity.

Kalem Music.

The other day the Kalem Company sent all Licensed exhibitors a small poster announcing special music for a Kalem feature. It is a handy sized strip and should be mounted on cardboard to be kept for those Kalem features for which scores are provided by the company. Get the music as soon as it is advertised and let your players become familiar with it, then, when you get the release put out the card and you'll be surprised to find that special music will add to the pull of the reel. The moderate price makes it possible for the smallest house to stock the music and, unless your pianist plays by ear and main strength, the music will appeal. If you have that sort of pianist get another.

A Washington Program.

Charles R. Morris, of Washington, D. C., sends four programs and this note:

I enclose herewith the first four of our programs to show how we have made use of considerable of the matter in your Advertising Section, and from the Stories of the Films and "Comments." These have been a paying proposition and our attendance is increasing steadily. Our advertising doesn't quite pay the whole cost of the programs, but we are glad to stand the difference.

I read your hints to advertisers carefully and find them of immense value.

We have long held to the theory that a manager stamps his house with his personality and we are sorry that the Standard Airdrome is not right around the corner from us, because we know it's the sort of place we should enjoy visiting every night.

The program is a sheet of fair typographical appearance, though the heading lacks dignity and solidity. It is apparently home-drawn, with a line about two points wide; which is not heavy enough. The sheet is 7 by 9 inches with two-inch ads top and bottom of all but the first page. There is a brief but meaty editorial announcement. In the first issue it is announced that the program will be a permanent feature if it is found to pay, and it is added that "to our regular patrons it will give a better idea of the picture than can be had from a poster or other announcement in front of the Airdrome." It not only does, but it conveys this idea in a striking form. It is not pretentious and but two or three lines can be given to each of the two reels selected for announcement each day (three being given daily except Thursday, when there are four), but these are so framed that every word works for the management.

Getting Chatty.

It is not the coldly formal announcement that some seem to think is wanted, nor is it the offensively familiar slang that others affect. The note of intimacy is exactly sounded, and it is precisely as though the manager took you into his office and talked things over with you.

The second issue starts off with "We are greatly pleased with the way our program was received. Don't be afraid that there will not be room for you. We can seat 550 people, and will put in more benches if necessary, and run the show as long as anyone wants to come in."

That sort of thing makes you want to go, and to go feeling that you will be made welcome.

The same chatty style runs through the announcement. With the first of the new Max reels you are reminded that he is an old friend come back and wherever possible your interest is especially aroused. We think a few excerpts will be welcome. These are taken more or less at random:

THEIR HERO .....EDISON

There are not many who have not read and laughed over the delightful school boy stories by Geo. Fitch, entitled "At good old Siwash." This is the second of these stories that the Edison Company has filmed and those who saw the first one, called "The funeral that flashed in the pan," will need no urging to get them out to see this one. This is the story of a great football hero who did not turn out to be much of a success in the business world and some very amusing situations occur as the result of his being thrown in contact with his worshippers.

A ROYAL WHIM .....C. G. P. C.

We do not believe this reel is such as our patrons care to see and we shall try to have another substituted for it, but can not announce it at this time.

Some of our lady patrons have complained that the smoking by the gentlemen in all parts of the Park is very objectionable and that they can not continue to come to Standard if they have to put up with it.

We do not wish to deprive the gentlemen of the privilege of smoking, but we do not think it is unreasonable to ask that they do so on the rear benches, so that those who find tobacco smoke unpleasant can find seats towards the front, where they will not have to come in contact with it directly. A compliance with this request will be much appreciated by all.

It was also brought to our attention that some of the benches were not as clean as they should be and that some of the ladies soiled their dresses in consequence thereof. We now have a regular squad of boys who go over and wipe off all benches before the show, every evening, and we also have a goodly supply of old newspapers which any lady may have for the asking, to further protect her clothes.

THE FIGHTING DERVISHES OF THE DESERT——.KALEM

We wish to call particular attention to this SPECIAL reel. All of the pictures in it were made in the ancient Bible town of Thebes and on the Sahara Desert. It depicts the real life of the desert, a genuine Arab encampment, the fanatical Dervishes with their fleet-footed camels, a true presentation of a Coptic religious service, and much more of great interest. This is not a travelogue, but the Kalem Company have woven a story into these historic settings in such a way as to make it educational, historical and dramatic. It should not be missed.

THE GENT FROM HONDURAS.....KALEM

A week ago last Thursday we showed "A Bucktown Romance" and those who saw it will remember how poor Roost got awfully left on getting a girl. Well, this same Roost tries again and this time he is to have his dusky gal's hand if he will introduce her to "The Gent from Honduras." When he does, Roost has to take another walk and now he's looking for another gal.

Mr. Morris will please put us on the mailing list. We don't want to miss an issue until the cold weather comes. By that time he should have a winter house.

Hustling in Utah.

We have received the first two issues of the Rex Animated Review, published by the Rex theater, Salt Lake City. There is plenty of real reading matter in the Review and it scarcely needs the circulation scheme of numbering the copies and announcing that the winning number will draw a five-pound box of candy. The chief value of the scheme is that the number is not announced. You must present the paper at the box office to find out, and having come that far, the chances are that you will pass in. Another scheme is covered in this advertisement which comes rather late for the present season, but is worth remembering. It runs:

How Is Your Conduct Boys and Girls?
Bring your school report for May to the REX.
If it shows an average of 75 per cent. we will let you see the BIG REX SHOW FREE any afternoon but Sunday.

Both schemes should prove profitable without having a back kick as so many schemes seem to be afflicted with. The weekly paper scheme is only for the larger houses, but where it can be worked it is a most valuable feature when done properly and the Rex is "right."

GAUSMAN IN METRO LITHOGRAPH CO.

Mr. James A. Gausman, for the past three years office manager for the New York Motion Picture Company, of New York, has resigned to join the recently organized Metro Lithograph Co., of New York, and becomes one of the board of officers with Mr. George J. Cooke and Robert Joste.

The new company has a modern plant, fully equipped for every class of poster work and will give special attention to the requirements of the motion picture makers. A special department has been established to handle this branch of the business and, by means of a special process, exact reproductions of photographs can be turned out in one day.

JAMES A. GAUSMAN.

Messrs. Cooke and Joste are lithographers of long experience, having been identified with the old Metropolitan Litho Co. before its absorption by the lithograph trust. Mr. Gausman is well known in the moving picture business and has a wide circle of friends in the trade. The new combination should be a strong one and of great assistance to picture men in this territory who want quick action on their poster work.

John P. Filbert, Southern California distributor of Edison kinetoscopes, gave an interesting demonstration of the Edison Home Kinetoscope before the Pacific Association of Railway Claim Agents at the Los Angeles convention, and convinced a great many of them that the machine can be employed with advantage in demonstrating new ideas to railroad employees.

The PHOTOPLAYWRIGHT

CONDUCTED BY EPES WINTHROP SARGENT

Something About Leaders.

Here is one of the leader sheets for a forthcoming Edison release that should interest those who study the matter of inserts. The figures to the left are the lengths in feet, and those next following the number of the leader. It will be noticed that twelve feet are allowed for the first title and five feet for the Censorship tag, the other lengths depending on the wording of the insert.

THE CLOSE OF THE AMERICAN REVOLUTION.

United States History Series Number Nine.

Feet.
10	1	In Virginia. Jack Jouett, an American patroit, visiting Dr. Walker, June, 1781. Jack Jouett, Benjamin Wilson.
6	2	The approach of the British troops. Colonel Tarleton, Richard Neill
6	3	Jouett feigns drunkenness in order to learn the British plans.
15	4	Jouett starts to warn the Virginia Assembly. This ride is as important in history, though not so well known, as that of Paul Revere.
15	5	Thomas Jefferson receives warning. (This is the original Jefferson house at Monticello). Thomas Jefferson, Marc MacDermott. His Wife, Miriam Nesbitt.
5	6	A detachment sent to capture Thomas Jefferson.
10	7	Jefferson escapes through an underground passage. This has been preserved from 1781.
7	8	The Virginia Assembly at the Old Swan Tavern, Charlottesville.
5	9	The President insists upon an orderly adjournment.
12	10	Four months later. The surrender of Cornwallis at Yorktown, October 19, 1781. General George Washington, Charles Ogle.
7	11	General George Washington, the Father of His Country, and his staff.
5		Board of Censorship.

Letter—made on board—15 feet.

Lord Cornwallis:

Am now within forty miles of Charlottesville, Thomas Jefferson and the entire Virginia Assembly will be my prisoners to-day

TARLETON.

Similarity of Plots.

We offer this article by Miss Pauline Grace Hunt, of San Jose, Cal., because she recites the experience of almost every photoplaywright. Were Miss Hunt red hea——, we mean auburn tressed, the chances are that she would have charged wholesale theft, but she is a newspaper woman and magazine writer and probably knows herself what quantities of duplicates are received.

To take the Rex release for an example; we have personally read some thirty or forty stories in which old-fashioned clocks were used as the hiding place for wills or valuables, and it would be difficult to conceive a lumber camp story in which the use of a falling tree is not suggested when the mortal coil is to be shuffled off. Judge Frank K. Shaw, of Waterville, Me., welcomed the Edison players last winter, being a photoplaywright himself, and we think the campaign must have been planned before the Hunt script was received at the Edison studio.

We think that Miss Hunt is rather precipitate in destroying her script because one main incident has been used. When a company writes that it is about to release the same thing they are sending back to us, we find out just what the confliction is, and if it is not serious we send it somewhere else, adding the explanation that it has been rejected by a stated company because of a similarity to one of their pending releases, and we have not found that it hurt the sale much.

Now let's listen to Miss Hunt:

> "I have written something like thirty scenarios since last September, upon which date I was exposed to the dread disease. Some of these have been adaptations, others original or what I proudly believed were original. Out of this number I have had but four scripts accepted, Edison being my first purchaser Praise his name! The remaining number, with the exception of two or three, have been destroyed for reasons which follow: On October 12, 1911, I sent the Rex Company a scenario entitled "The Old Clock's Secret," the old Grandfather having hid his will in his clock. The plot was returned with a very courteous note of rejection, bless their hearts; they encourage all amateurs very sweetly. On May 30th, this year, this company releases "Grandfather's Clock," the plot of which is similar but in no wise a theft, notwithstanding my scenario has been destroyed, for if I should submit it now some editor would think I had liked Rex's play and written one like it. When I saw the big type "Will found in a clock," it gave me a little start, I confess, but who thinks of an old Grandfather but thinks, too, of Grandfather's clock, which "Stopped short, never to go again when the old man died?" And isn't it the most natural thing in the world for him to hide a keep sake in his old clock? Doesn't everybody do it? Then why should I claim any originality upon such a theme and howl thief?
>
> "On January 9th, this year, I sent Edison a scenario entitled 'Nell, the Woodman's Daughter,' the scenes laid in Maine woods, at which location I learned through your magazine they had a company installed. The scenario was returned promptly, reaching me February 9th. On May 28th, they released a picture entitled 'Jim's Wife,' made in Maine woods, the incident of which tale are so similar to my story that BINGO! mine suffered death this morning immediately after reading their synopsis. The striking similarity is that in my story Nell's father was killed by a falling tree, and in their's, Nell's husband was killed by a falling tree. it is quite probably that their picture was in process of manufacture at the time my work was received. Their plot is much stronger than mine, and I hope to see a better picture than mine would have made.
>
> "Bison's 'Outcast,' released yesterday, the 8th, bears so great a similarity to 'In His Steps,' a scenario I submitted to them on March 14th and which was immediately turned back, that I destroyed it to-day after reading their synopsis in my Moving Picture World. Still others I have destroyed for similar reasons.
>
> "I present these facts for the benefit of 'howlers,' and am firm in the belief that if scenario writers would pay more attention to reading the synopsis of pictures already made and try to keep in mind what is fresh, and try to keep track of the film companies, and be reasonable about how much time is consumed by mail in transit, they would have fewer things to complain of and would feel a greater sympathy for the editors of negative production.
>
> "A woman came to me not long since with several scenarios with the request that I read them and tell her why I thought they had been returned. The first page I read and asked her: 'Where is your plot? I do not find it in the synopsis?' She replied that there was really no plot, that it was narrative. I said: 'But you must have a plot, a theme, a story to tell or there would be no interest in the thing.' She said that her scenario was an allegory in imitation of Dante's 'Infernio,' and that Dante's 'Inferno' was simple narrative. I laughed and she said: 'Probably it is too deep for you.' I admitted it was and told her I could give her no advice upon things which were too deep for me. When she told me where she had previously sent it, to one of the leading film manufacturers, I took great courage in my own work, and felt the fondest sympathy for all scenario readers."

Strange, But True.

Here is a communication from Gardner Shelley, of Detroit, reproduced, with the kind assistance of the printer in the fashion in which he wrote it; not because we think it is the way Mr. Shelley habitually writes, but because it is cleverly done. Mr. Shelley puts his finger on a vital point when he writes:

> Dear Sir—i notice in your magazine you publish letters from people who rite moving picture shows and are always nocking kickkers. i don't want you to think i am a fellow that kicks all the time because i aint. i just want to register a little nock agenst these filum makers and i want you to publish this so they will all read it as i wont waste any more stamps onthem. i no all about these picture concerns and i think they are a bunch of crooks. i rote a show and sent it to one place andthey sent it back and said it had to be tiperitten on a slip of paper, now just to showyou they were crooks i will tell you what i done then,; i sent it back tiperitten after i got a tiperiter on time and paid 2 dollars down. Then this bunch returns my show with another slip saying it wasnot avalebal. i gess i wasted about 2 dollars more on stampps by this time on it, and i think they are all crooks thank you.
>
> yours in the bonds
>
> GARDNER SHELLEY.

The practice of requiring that all scripts be typed is good usage, and authors should get their work in proper form before they send it out, but we think that in studios where scripts are turned back to be typed some judgment should be exercised in the matter. There are scripts that are hopeless, written by men who probably never can write, and here the silent return would be merciful. Other editors ask that typewritten scripts be supplied when they think that there might be a chance for a sale if they can pass the idea along to the director and act in good faith, but it bumps the unfortunate author none the less, when the script comes home a second time.

And just a word on typewriting cost.

Why send your script to some advertising concern when you can have the work more cheaply done at home? In the cities almost every large office building houses one or more public stenographers who will do the work cheaply. We pay fifteen cents a page for single spacing and ten cents a page for double spacing and one carbon is supplied free. This price can be duplicated in every town in the country, and where there is no public stenographer it is always possible to find some lawyer's clerk who will tell where the work can be done. As a script should not exceed five pages, the cost should not be more than seventy-five cents. Why pay two dollars, or a dollar and a half?

Nestor Is Hustling.

Under a recent date Richard Willis, photoplay editor for the Nestor Company, writes:

> We are a busy bunch these days and it is not an unusual thing for three scenes to be turned at the same time on the huge stage. This morning Mr. Farney took out a company of more than one hundred into the hills for a spectacular Western drama which includes a big mob scene. Jack Conway, Viola Barry, William Clifford, William Rino and the clever child player, Fay V. Brierly, have the principal parts. Mr. Christie took out twenty men and Mr. Ricketts started in the autos with his dramatic company.

Timing the Scenes.

Some time ago we published a suggestion that authors try to visualize scenes and time them with a stop watch to see how close they could come to the twenty minutes allowed. It is a good idea, but it takes a little study to be able to visualize properly. Most writers make the mistake of seeing the action move too slowly and they underwrite, some go to the other extreme and forget to allow for the by-play that will probably be put in.

Unless you can come pretty close to writing a script that can be produced almost without change the probabilities are that you cannot do more than approximate the action that will appear on the screen, but there are a few general rules that can be applied in all cases.

It is well to remember that the full reel runs 1,000 feet and this means approximately the same number of seconds or about sixteen minutes and forty seconds. There will be fifteen to twenty feet for the title and Censorship tag and at least twenty feet of leader. Make it a flat sixteen minutes. Out of this must come extra leader, letters and all other explanatory matter and the action of the photoplay.

If you write sixteen scenes you will have sixty feet for each scene. But some of the scenes will be short ones; a man leaving a house; just the flash of someone that would become tiresome if it ran its full share of the sixteen minutes. Perhaps the scene will run but fifteen seconds. This gives you forty-five feet-seconds to add to some big scene. That does not seem very much, but you will be surprised to find how much action you can compress into a minute and a half. Time some scenes in the photoplay theater, and you'll find that the scene you thought ran three or four minutes did not last half that time. You can get a stop watch for five dollars that is accurate enough for your need. Take this to the theater and time every other scene, since you cannot well time every scene. Your own watch with its second hand will do if your eyes are quick. You'll soon find that you can gauge the time.

After you have made your first draft go over it and estimate the time it takes. Allow 15 to 25 feet for letters (though it it best to write a letter that will go in 15 feet), and three feet for the first line and two feet for other lines of leader. If you have too much stuff—and the chances are that you'll find that you have, cut out the non-essentials; cut down below your limit, and then build up the big scenes. You'll soon be able to turn out a script that falls within the length and has the length of scene proportioned to the importance of the scene.

You might paste this over your desk:

You have 1,000 feet, all told.

It is not the number of scenes, but the length of those scenes that counts. Twenty ten-foot scenes will run 200 feet. Ten twenty-foot scenes will run just as long.

The number of words or the length of the manuscript does not matter. You may need 100 words to describe a ten-foot scene and ten in which to suggest the hundred-foot scene.

All action plays more quickly than it seems to. Comedy action plays more rapidly than dramatic work, and the intense scenes will either quicken or retard the average of action, according to the nature of the scene.

Changing the Name.

Hereafter the Scenario Magazine will be known as The Photoplay Author, and the subscription price will be advanced, to cover the cost of new departments and features. The June issue shows a decided improvement over the first two and better editorial form. The change of title is due to the decision to substitute photoplay for scenario in accordance with correct usage.

Add One.

Add another to your list of get-you-rich-quick concerns. It is said that a certain class of persons are born at the rate of one a minute, but the raps for this unfortunate class seem to increase more rapidly than that birth rate. This newest contribution is located somewhere up near Yonkers, though it uses the magic "New York City" for an address and it is a combined criticism, corrective and sales institution. It is more honest than most in that it admits that only the exceptional story commands $100, while some of these benevolent institutions seek to convey the impression that this is the usual price. Here is the proposition:

> Our staff of expert scenario critics will examine all manuscripts submitted and we guarantee not less than twenty-five ($25.00) dollars for any story accepted; stories having merit will be given special attention, as it is our purpose to assist you by pointing out defects and suggesting corrections. Our terms for examination and advice are five ($5.00) dollars annually, and subscribers may submit questions in addition to manuscripts if they desire. We also charge a small commission of five (5) per cent. for all scenarios sold for our clients.

The statement is made that the demand for photoplays exceeds the supply. Possibly the director has in mind Essanay, which is over-stocked, Selig, which buys little or nothing, or some of the others. There is a market, but directors are not now sitting on the office steps watching for the postman in the hope that he may have a script or two in his bag.

That guarantee means nothing, for there seems to be nothing to guarantee the guarantor, and no one who really knows the business will honestly undertake to guarantee the sale of any script; no matter how good it may be. The offer of unlimited service at $5 a year is too little for good work, but too much for the service probably offered, and no one who can write really good scripts needs a sales agent.

Add another to your list.

The Dinner.

Other matters have retarded action on the photoplaywright's dinner, but we expect to be able, by the time this appears, to get together with Spectator (who is the daddy of the dinner), and formulate the plans. Acceptances have come in from as far away as Philadelphia and Norwich, and it looks as though the gathering would be a representative one. If you have not already done so, please send in your name and address.

INQUIRIES

NOTE—No questions can be replied to by mail. Look for your answers here. A list of studio addresses, kept up-to-date, will be sent if a stamped and addressed return envelope accompanies the request.

D. A.—The Edison Company released a one-reel "She" in October, 1908. They never released a "Zigomar," but did release a "Sugomar," or "Sugomar," in September, 1908.

QUEENIE—The player you mention is with Edison, has been with Edison and will continue to be with Edison.

C. E. M.—It was George Gebhardt, Jr., who played Strongheart in Pathé's "A Redskin's Appeal." You will probably remember him as having been with Bison.

M. F. A.—Miss Mabel Loveridge was Mabel in Essanay's "Western Hearts." We do not recall Warren Kerrigan with Essanay though we are not positive.

L. A. K.—We'll send you a postcard portrait of a Biograph player if you'll send us any statement in the publication mentioned to the effect that Arthur Johnson and Maurice Costello are dead. The reverse was probably what was printed and you read it in a hurry. Mr. Costello has been reported killed 43 times in the month of June, but it does not appear to have affected his health. Mr. Johnson has been killed less frequently lately, but it didn't take there, either. Both players are alive; very much alive.

DORRIS E.—Helen Costello was the child in Vitagraph's "The Church Across the Way." Earle Williams played John Mason in the same play. We understand that Mr. Johnson is well liked by the Lubin players, which argues that he is no grouch, but we do not carry our investigations to this extreme. No time has been set for the return of John Bunny. In an English interview he made the statement that he would remain over there as long as it semed profitable. Sure we know about Miss Lawrence's whereabouts, and have printed as much in this paper in black ink. "Her whereabouts," during working hours, is in the vicinity of the Victor Film Company, which she heads. Turn back a few issues to a long interview with Miss Turner. Please don't tell us that you read the questions and answers "every month." This is a weekly, coming out every Saturday, ten cents an issue, or three dollars for 52 issues by mail postpaid. If you think it's a monthly, you're being cheated out of 40 good issues a year.

K. R. E.—We have answered this question before, but it seems to be one that interests our rapidly increasing circle of readers, so here goes for the benefit of the newcomers. There is just one way to get a position as cameraman with a motion picture concern. You "get next" to some cameraman, or some official of a company. For a time you act as helper and then, by degrees your are broken in to the work and finally are permitted to spoil a few thousand feet of film in experimental work. Experience is the only teacher and no volume in print or yet to be printed, can do more than give you some general hints. The prime qualifications are: first of all, a knowledge of skylight and field photography, then, steadiness of nerve, a knowledge or "sense" of artistic composition, which really means an ability to pick out pretty views and the best point of view, and last of all, patience and a willingness to be taught much you think you already know. We have "willing ears" for any serious question, and regret that we cannot give you a "short-cut." Query the company you mention as to the possible route of the field staff, enclosing a reply envelope.

C. H. W.—And here's the running mate to the above question! There are no schools that can really teach motion picture acting though there are some that profess to do so. As a general thing only professionally trained actors from the dramatic stage are selected by the studios, though now and then some promising amateur is given a chance. Miss Frances Ne Moyer of the Lubin Company, for example, never was on the stage, but she worked so well in some of the Jacksonville pictures, when untrained extra girls were needed for some of the comedies, that she was taken into the regular company as well as her sister, Margaret. She just happened to be visiting in Jacksonville, but it meant an opening. These accidents are rare.

GLADYS.—Many of the Independent exchanges handle the releases of both the Universal and Film Supply. The Thanhouser Company recently advertised that it wanted to hear from people in territory where the Film Supply reels were not shown. We would suggest that you write.

A. S.—You fail to state the character. Miss Ormi Hawley had the lead in Lubin's "The Choir of Densmore," but we fail to note her resemblance to Miss Lawrence. The Victor Company is an Independent company, a part of the Universal Company. Send a stamped and addressed envelope for the addresses.

OLGA.—The player you ask about still lives and works for the same company. The remarkable interest suddenly aroused in his identity has caused inquiry editors to grow suspicious, and his name does not appear. The Victor Films are made in New York City.

K. W. C.—Miss Lillian Christy was the settler's daughter in Bison's "The Post Telegrapher," and Miss Anna Little the colonel's daughter. George Periolat was the doctor in American's "The Thread of Life."

R. A. S.—We can furnish the London address, but it will do you no good if it is postcards you want. Some of these will soon be obtainable from the Powers Company, which has engaged several of the former Biograph players. Up to the end of July the Essanay title does not appear. Your last question is answered by the last issue. This sometimes happens.

FOCUS—Frank Lanning is in vaudeville.

H. S. T.—Write some dramatic paper for the dramatic data. No records were made of the casts of any plays of four years ago and general interest in back numbers does not warrant us requesting the company to make the tedious research that would be involved. Sorry. Simple when you know it. Miss Blanche Sweet is known to the English fans as Daphne Wayne, just as the others of the company are known by names other than their own. It is not unusual to get old Edisons and more recent Kalems in both of which Guy Coombs appeared.

L. G.—It is generally understood that in a contest all photoplays not winning prizes may be purchased at regular rates if the company so desires. It is sufficient to mark a photoplay to the contest editor and let it go at that.

G. M. B.—The Powers contest is on the level, but keep away from all prize offers that are not backed by some established maker of photoplays. They are all schemes run by correspondence schools or sales bureaus.

C. R. L.—The picture you mention was made abroad and so no reliable data can be supplied by the American agents of the films.

M. H.—The prevalence of Moores seems to be a coincidence.

H. L. K.—Yes, that's "nice light paper," but it is going to keep the Recording Angel busy when your scripts arrive in the studios. Get what is known as 20-pound paper and your scripts will be read. You'll save in the number of stamps you use, but lose the full value of your stamps invested since the script will not be read.

THEATER CHANGES HANDS.

J. J. Forsythe, owner and proprietor of the Empire Theater, Shamokin, Pa., has disposed of his lease to George Treibly, who took possession.

Projection Department

Edited by F. H. RICHARDSON.

Projection Machine Mechanisms—Part V.

FOLLOWING, we present instructions on the 1912 model of the Motiograph machine, this being the last of the series of instructions. These instructions are a part and parcel of the new operators' and managers handbook, which will be issued about September 1st.

At first glance these instructions may seem very complicated and difficult. This view, however, vanishes when one comes to consider the fact that it is seldom necessary to employ more than one instruction at a time, thus: the operator has occasion (let us suppose) to renew ball-arbor 055, P 5, and its sockets. All he needs is the instruction, or instructions, necessary to enable him to remove and replace ball-arbor and its sockets. Having accomplished this operation once, he is not likely to forget how to do it the second time. And so it is with the other instructions. Ordinarily only one, two or three instructions will be involved in any one operation. It has been my design to give full instructions, covering anything the operator will ever be called upon to do in connection with the machine head, and to give them so plainly that even the small town exhibitor who is unable to employ a really competent operator may be able to successfully perform the various necessary things in connection with his machine. The numbers refer to plates and parts, thus: 16A, P 2, means that part 16A will be found on plate 2. Always note carefully just how the parts of a machine are placed before removing them; you will then experience much less trouble in replacing same.

Instructions for the Motiograph, 1912 Model.

(Copyright by F. H. Richardson, 1912. All rights reserved.)

No. 1.—Gear Cover, 3A, P 1, may be removed by loosening thumb screws, 231 and 232, P 3, and 233, P 5. The cover may then be lifted away exposing the gears, flywheel and automatic fire shutter governor.

No. 2.—The Whole Mechanism can be swung around on its base by loosening the hand wheel bolt underneath baseboard slightly, then raising pin, 283, P 1.

No. 3.—Front Plate 172, P 4, is removed by loosening thumb screws (two of them), 99A, P 4, and lifting spring, 275, P 4, at the same time pulling top of front plate forward. It may then be lifted off of screws 99A, P 4.

No. 4.—The Gate Is Opened by pressing on knob, 125, P 1. This knob is the end of the gate-latch rod, which extends across the machine, as may be seen by removing front plate 172, P 4, see instruction No. 3, and looking inside the mechanism. Gate-latch screw No. 220, P 1, is threaded into this rod, and may be removed with a screw driver. On the inner end of the gate-latch rod 125, P 1, is a spiral spring. To remove this spring it is necessary to remove rod 125, P 1. To remove this rod, first take out gate latch screw 220, P 1. Next remove the front plate 172, P 4, see instruction 3, and, looking inside the machine you will see, on the rod, against the casting at the left hand side, a brass collar held in place by one set screw. Loosen this set screw and the whole rod may then be pulled out. To replace same, insert rod in its hole, on left-hand side, then slip first the collar, and then the spring on the rod, and enter the end of the rod in its hole on the right hand or gear side. Put the latch in and shut gate; then set the collar up snugly against the casting on left-hand side, tightening its set screw, and the job is done.

No. 5.—To Remove Gate, take out ball screws, 127, P 1, and 127, P 3, which act as the gate hinge. Lift the rack-bar, 168, P 1, off governor crank shaft, 83, P 1. Gate may then be lifted away. In replacing same, do not forget to connect rack-bar, 168, P 1, and governor crank shaft, 83, P 1.

No. 6.—The Aperture Plate, 162A, P 3, is removed by taking out screws (four of them), 217, P 3. The screws are small, therefore be careful or you will lose them. Better lay a piece of paper underneath first to catch them should they fall.

No. 7.—Tension Springs and Shoes. The tension shoes, 96A, P 3, are held in place by tension spring, 174A, P 1, which is one piece, and also applies pressure to the shoes. Both the shoes and spring may be removed for adjustment or replacement as follows: (a) Remove gate as per instructions, 3; (b) loosen screw, 294½, P 2, and swing cooling plate, 97A, P 2, out of the way, then raise fire shutter, 163, P 1; (c) remove the two screws, 221 P 1, which releases both the shoes and spring, which may now be removed. In removing same, note carefully how the spring locks into the shoes. If a tighter tension is required it may be obtained by bending both ends of spring, 174A, P 1, down slightly so that when replaced the center of spring where screws, 221, P 1, enter will be higher than the ends. The more the spring is bent, the tighter the tension will be. If less tension is required bend spring the opposite way from the above instruction. In replacing same it matters not which shoe goes on the right or which goes on the left side, but the notches in which the spring fits must point downward. The side of spring, 174A, P 1, marked "Patent applied for" goes out—that is to say, the other side goes toward the gate.

No. 8.—To Remove Upper Sprocket, 106, P 5, remove (not loosen, but remove) screw 204, P 5. The sprocket may then be pulled off, and its shaft, 51A, P 5, may be pulled out to the left, first having removed gear cover (see instruction No. 1). In replacing the sprocket the end with an off-set hub goes inside against the casting hub; if put on the other way, the sprocket will be out of line with aperture.

No. 9.—Upper Sprocket Idler Bracket, 24, P 5, may be removed by (a) loosening screws, 227 and 265, P 5, and removing screw, 249, P 5. The whole may then be pulled out. Let it be understood that when the instruction says remove a screw, remove it; loosening it will not do. It must be taken out entirely.

Idler roller, 108, P 5, is held away from the sprocket by screw, 241½, P 5, which is locked by lock-nut, 241, P 5. Idler roller, 108, P 5, may be removed from its spindle by taking out screw, 223, P 5.

No. 10.—Lower Sprocket, 106, P 5, may be removed by taking out screw in hub of sprocket. If it is also desired to remove its shaft, 52A, P 4, carrying belt pulley, 20, P 1, it will first be necessary to follow instructions No. 16 and 19. Having done so you will see, down in a pocket inside the frame casting, gear, 17A, P 2, which drives shaft, 52A, P 4. Loosen the set screw in the hub of this gear, which is deeply countersunk into the shaft, hence must be backed out for some distance, and the shaft may then be pulled out. In replacing same, be sure you get set-screw which holds gear, 17A, P 2, properly located in its countersink in the shaft.

No. 11.—Framing Lever Casting, 11A, P 3, may be removed by removing screw, 76, P 3.

No. 12.—Lower Idler Bracket, 25A, P 5, may be removed by: (a) follow instruction No. 11; (b) remove lower sprocket, 106, P 5, as per instruction No. 10; (c) remove screw, 249, P 5 (screws 227, 249 and 265 have same numbers for both upper and lower bracket); (d) loosen screws, 227 and 265, P 5; (e) slacken off on screw, 241¾, P 5, until head of center roller will pass the drop in the casting on the left, the bracket may then be slipped out. In replacing same, be sure to set screws, 265 and 227, P 5, up tightly, and adjust screw, 249, until the proper tension of bracket is obtained, this should be just tight enough to keep the film in position on lower sprocket at all times. Adjust screw, 241¾, P 5, so that the top and front roller will set away from the sprocket by twice the thickness of a film. The shaft of the rear roller, 108, P 3, is on an eccentric and may be adjusted to the proper distance from sprocket by loosening screw, 25½, P 3, and turn same with a screw driver by means of screw, 223, P 5, of rear roller.

No. 13.—Shutter Blades, 170A and 171A, P 5, may be removed by: (a) loosening the two screws in hub of outer leaf, 170A, P 5, and pulling same from its spindle, 38A, P 5 and 7. The inner half 171A, P 5, may then be removed by taking out the three flat-head screws, 48A, P 7, in the face of its brass hub on gear 46A, P 7.

No. 14.—Shutter Driving Gear, 45A, P 5, and its mate, 46A, P 7, on shutter shaft, 38A, P 5 and 7, may be removed as follows: (a) Remove shutter blades as per instruction No. 13; (b) remove the small screw 41A, P 5, in center of face of gear, 45A, P 5; (c) remove the bridge as per instruction No. 13 and pull out the shutter drive shaft and gear, 287, P 2. This will release gear 45A, P 5. The gear 46A, P 7, into which gear 45A, P 5, meshes, same being on shutter spindle 38A, P 5, may then be removed as follows: (a) Remove aperture plate as per instruction No. 4 and looking in through the hole you will see two screws, 206A, P 7, in the hub of the gear 46A, P 7, behind the inner shutter blade. Loosen these and the gear may be slipped off.

No. 15.—After removing gear 45A, P 5, and its mate, 46A, P 7, as per instruction No. 14, you will see the face of a brass boxing about one inch in diameter from which projects shutter spindles No. 38A and 39A, P 5 and 7. In its face is a screw. Don't touch this screw, as it is the head of a small spindle, the brass boxing being in reality a casing and boxing combined, inside of which are four small gears. It is not advisable that the operator attempt to make any repairs on this device. It is extremely unlikely that anything will ever happen to it and if kept properly lubricated it is subject to very little wear. However, should you find that one shutter blade can be moved considerably circumferentially while the other is held stationary, it is evidence of wear in the gears or spindles inside the brass casing, although more or less play will be in evidence even in the new ones, owing to the number of gears necessary to revolve the two shutter wings in opposite directions. You can order another complete casing from the factory—that is to say, with the gears, etc., assembled therein—and remove the old one as follows: (a) follow instructions 13, 14, 16 and 28. You will then see the back end of the shutter gear casing 288, P 7. Into the top of its circumference is screwed a flathead machine screw No. 93A, P 7; a larger one 92A, P 7, is at the bottom screwed into main frame. Remove screw 93A, P 7, and shove the whole casing out on the shutter side. It is unnecessary to touch screw 92A, P 7, to remove casing. Insert the new casing, replace screw 93A, P 7, and screw it up gently. If screwed too tight the head of screw is liable to break off. This will bring the gear casing back into position against the head of screw No. 92A, P 7; replace gear 46A, P 7, push it on as far as it will go and tighten screws 206A, P 7, replace shutter drive shaft and gear No. 287, P 2, then replace gear 45A, P 5, being sure to engage the tongue on the steel plate in the center of gear 45A, P 5, with the groove of the same size on shaft 287, P 2, and replace screw 41A, P 5, and screw it up tight. The teeth of the two gears 45A, P 5, and 46A, P 7, should now mesh properly; that is, the teeth of the two gears should be flush with each other. If the gear 46A, P 7, extends into the shutter side of mechanism too far, so that the teeth on it extend over the teeth of gear 45A, P 5, it may be drawn back by loosening screw 92A, P 7, and tightening screw 93A, P 7, each one a little at a time, drawing back the whole gear case until the teeth of the gears are flush with each other. Be sure that both screws 92A and 93A, P 7, are tight. If the teeth on the gears 45A, P 5, and 46A, P 7, are too far apart, so that there is too much lost motion between them, loosen screw 103A, P 5, and screw 93A, P 7, then push the shutter drive shaft and gear 287A, P 2, and the shutter gear case 288, P 7, over toward the shutter side of mechanism, both at the same time until the gears are just close enough together so they will not bind and may be turned freely with the fingers and so the gears will run flush with each other, then hold them in this position and tighten screws 103A, P 5, and 92A, P 5, and 93A, P 7. Now replace the gears and gear bridge, then replace the shutter wings by following instruction 13 and 28. Set the shutters as per instruction No. 50.

No. 16.—The Bridge, 4A, P 4 and 5, may be removed by (a) loosening screws (three of them) 224, P 4, backing them out about a half inch; (b) gently and evenly prying the bridge off with the point of a screw-driver, or working it outward with the fingers until it comes away from the main frame of mechanism; (c) then turn the screws all the way out of main frame. It is unnecessary to remove them from the bridge, as they are necked in order that they may be left in the bridge to prevent them from becoming lost.

No. 17.—Gear 87½, P 4, is removed by taking out screw 129, P 4, which serves also as its spindle.

No. 18.—Main Gear 15A, P 4, is removed by (a) removing gear bridge as per instruction No. 16; (b) pulling same from its shaft.

No. 19.—Balance Wheel No. 14, P 4 and 6, may be removed by (a) removing bridge as per instructions No. 16; (b) removing screws 205 (two of them), P 2. Screws 205 are deeply countersunk into the shaft, hence must be removed entirely before balance wheel will be released.

No. 20.—Gear No. 84A, P 2 and 4, and Governor Drive Shaft 40A, P 2, may be removed by (a) following instruction No. 16; (b) driving out taper pin 135, P 4.

No. 21.—Any of the Three Bushings in the Bridge may be removed simply by loosening their respective set screws (three of them) 225, P 2. A new bushing may then be set into place.

No. 22.—Gear Sleeve 62 A, P 2, may be removed by (a) following instruction No. 16, P 19, and then removing the screw near the outer end of the sleeve and the one in the center of the sleeve on the latest model 1912 machine, earlier models have but the one near the outer end of the sleeve. The gear sleeve will then slip off the smaller center balance shaft, 61A, P 2.

No. 23.—Balance Wheel Shaft 61A, P 2, may be removed by following instructions No. 22 and then removing the framing carriage as per instruction No. 35. The spindle may then be slipped out into the interior of the machine. The inner bearing or bushing which carries this spindle may be removed by loosening screw 276, P 1, drawing it back quite far, as it is deeply countersunk into bushing. Place a strip of hard wood through the opening on right hand side of mechanism when facing to the front and against the bushing, tap it lightly with a hammer, pushing it out toward the gear side.

No. 24.—Idler Gear 18A, P 2, may be removed by (a) following instruction 16 and 19 (b) removing screw 129, P 2.

No. 25.—Governor Crank Arbor 83A, P 3 and 7, may be removed by following instruction No. 5, 16, 18 and 28, and then loosening screw 200, P 2 and 7, the arbor may then be pulled out through rear of mechanism.

No. 26.—The Automatic Fire Shutter Governor may be removed by proceeding as per instruction No. 25. When the crank arbor is pulled out it also releases the governor.

No. 27.—Adjustment of Governor and Fire Proof Shutter. (a) Remove front plate as per instruction No. 3, (b) loosen screws 225 and 235, P 5, which releases the two bushings 193A, P 4, and 194, P 5. (c) Hold the bushings between the thumb and finger and slide them, together with the governor, slightly toward the gear bridge 4A, P 4. Looking through the front of mechanism, through the aperture opening in aperture plate 162A, P 3, the fire shutter 163, P 1, will now be observed slightly raised. (d) Still holding the bushings between the thumb and finger, slide them together with the governor slowly back toward the shutters until the fire shutter 163, P 1, just barely rests on stud B, P 1. (e) Hold them in this position and tighten screw 235, P 5. (f) Hold bushing 193A, P 4, lightly against the shoulder of the governor shaft 65A, P 2, and tighten screw 225, P 5. There should be very little or no end play of the governor shaft 65A, P 2, when screws 225 and 235, P 5, have been tightened, but be sure that the governor shaft turns freely when the machine is in operation. Otherwise machine will turn hard and will cause unnecessary wear on the gears. If properly adjusted as above, the fire shutter 163, P 1, will readily raise all the way up and rest on stud A as shown in P 1, when machine is in operation, and will just as readily drop all the way down and rest on stud B, P 1, when machine is stopped. The raising of the automatic fire shutter is accomplished by the spreading apart of the governor balls 111, P 4, when machine is put in motion, pulling the roller guide 110, which is located on the opposite end of governor shaft 65, P 2, from gear 90, P 2, toward them, same being connected with governor crank shaft 19, P 2 and 7, which is fastened to governor crank arbor 83, P 3 and 7, and is connected to rack bar 168, P 1, same being in turn connected with a small gear on fire shutter 163, P 1, all of which work together automatically. When the machine is stopped, the governor balls are brought together by the governor spring 175, P 6, which again lowers the fire shutter. The fire shutter 163, P 1, and rack bar 168, P 1, may be removed by first removing gate as per instruction No. 5, then removing the two small flat-head screws on the inside of gate, and the three small round-head screws on the outside of gate, then lay the gate upon a table or upon a base-board with the tension shoes 96A, P 3, down and lift off the heat shield 164A, P 2. The rack-bar 168, P 1, and shutter and gear 163, P 1 may now be lifted off. The shutter and gear are fastened together and are listed as one only, 163. To replace same, be sure that the small pivot on the gear side of shutter enters the hole for same in the main frame of gate. Then place the rack bar in position, having the shutter raised all the way up, place the first two teeth on end of rack bar, engaged with the two top teeth on the gear, replace the heat shield, being careful that the pivot on upper side of shutter enters hole for same in heat shield and replace all the screws.

No. 28.—Gear 16A, P 2, is removed by following instruction No. 16, 18 and 19, and then removing screw 129, P 2.

No. 29.—Main Crank Shaft 58, P 4, may be removed by taking off bridge as per instruction 16, and pulling gear 15A from its shaft. Next remove the crank by loosening screw 154, P 1; push rod 94, P 5, down, and pulling outward on the crank. Crank shaft 58, P 4, may then be pulled out from the gear side.

No. 30.—To Remove Bevel Gear 86½, P 2, loosen the set screw in its hub, backing the same out for a considerable distance, as it is deeply countersunk in the shaft. Its spindle 57, P 2, the top end of which is shown at 57, P 5, may then be raised out, which will release the gear. It also releases bevel gear O85, P 2.

No. 31.—Bevel Gear O85, P 2, may be removed by following instructions No. 29 and 30. This releases this gear, which may then be taken out.

No. 32.—Take-Up Belt Pulley 20, P 4 and 5, may be removed by loosening the set screw in its face.

No. 33.—Guide Roller at Top of Gate, 116A and 116½A, P 3, together with the small spiral spring inside of the hub of 116½A, may be removed by driving out the spindle which holds same. These rollers should be removed if at any time the film wears a flat spot or spots on the surface of their inside hub. This, however, is unlikely to occur, since the rollers are of hardened steel.

No. 34.—Latch Pin 296, P 5, is for the purpose of releasing side plate 120 A, P 5. Raise pin 296 up, and side plate No. 120A will be released and can be removed, exposing the side of the framing carriage, thus allowing you to get at oil cup 112, P 1 and 4, in the top of the framing carriage. This oil cup supplies lubrication to the Geneva movement which runs in the oil-well, shown at O5, P 6, the same being detached from the rest of the carriage, in the latter illustration. The knob of latch pin 296, P 5, may be unscrewed, which allows the pin to drop out from below, revealing a spiral spring on its stem. Hold the bottom of the pin with a pair of pliers while you unscrew the knurled top.

No. 35.—Removing and Replacing the Framing-Carriage. To remove the framing carriage, proceed as follows: (a) follow instruction No. 34; (b) loosen screws 216, P 6, and remove framing-carriage slide rod 72, P 6, the carriage may then be lifted out through the opening made by removing side plate 120A, P 5. To replace the framing carriage, just reverse the above-described process, being sure however, to enter guide rod 71, P 5, in slot X, P 4, and to get ball arbor O55, P 5 and 6 properly entered in knuckle joint socket O56, P 4, and balance wheel shaft socket 61A, P 5, Plate 2.

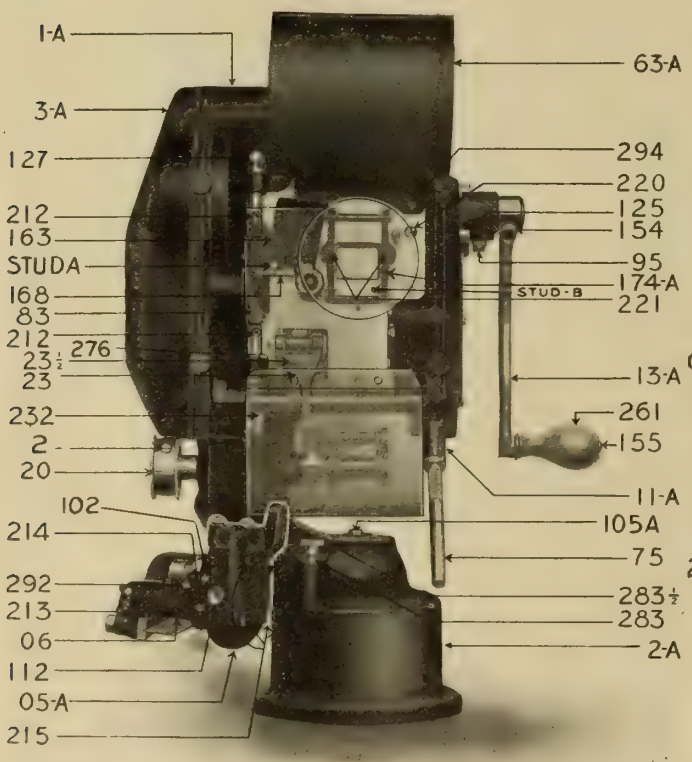

Plate 1.

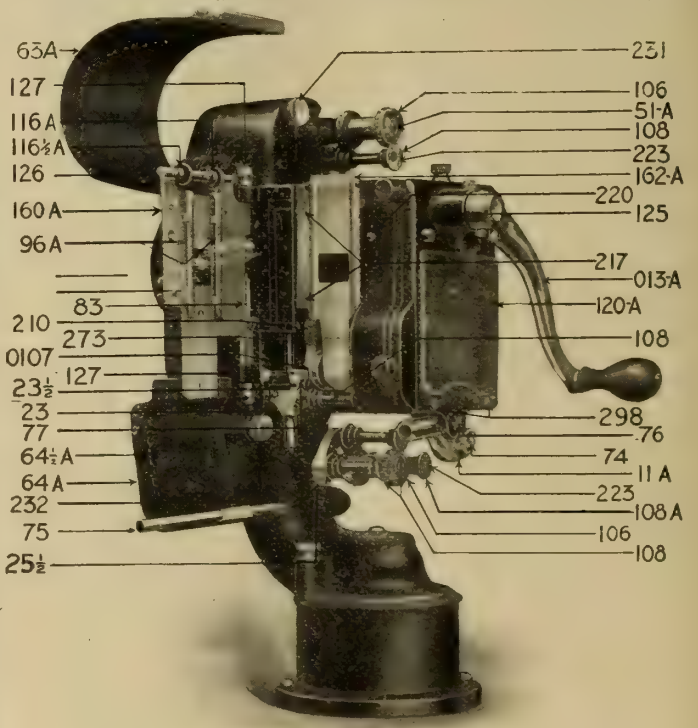

Plate 3.

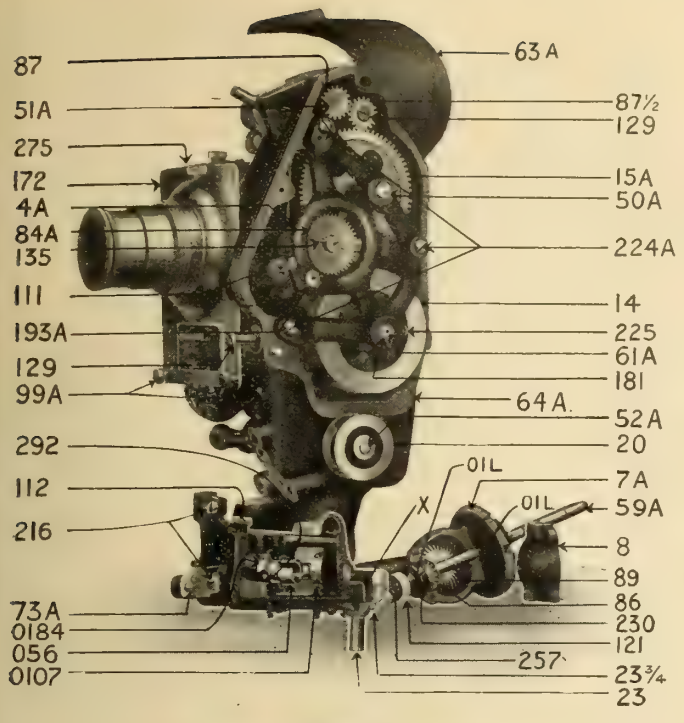

Plate 4.

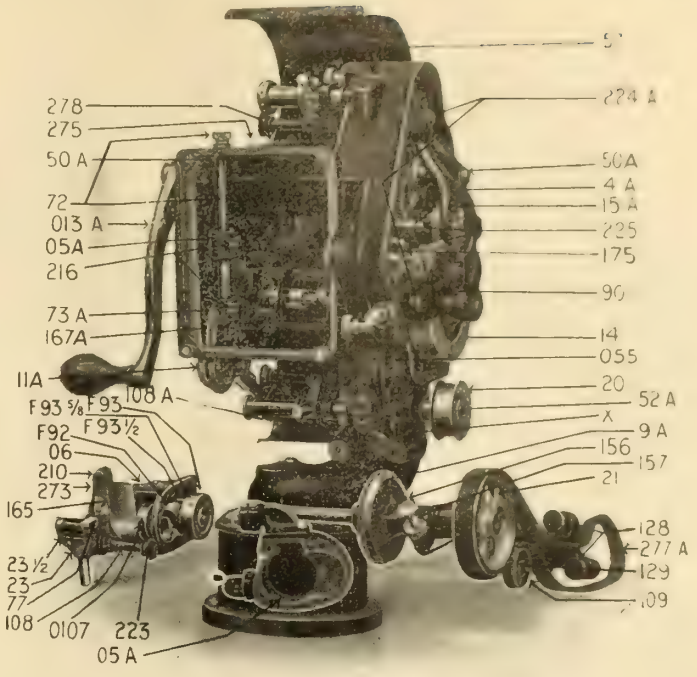

Plate 6.

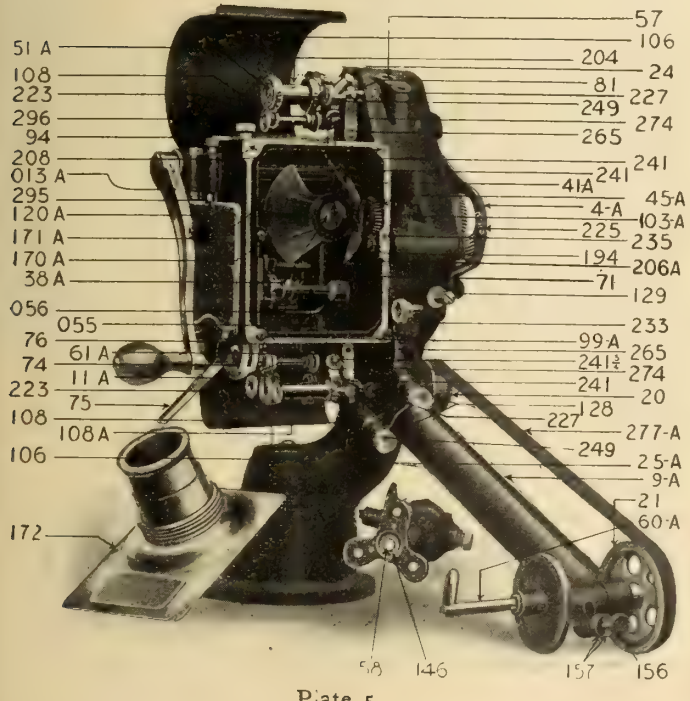

Plate 5.

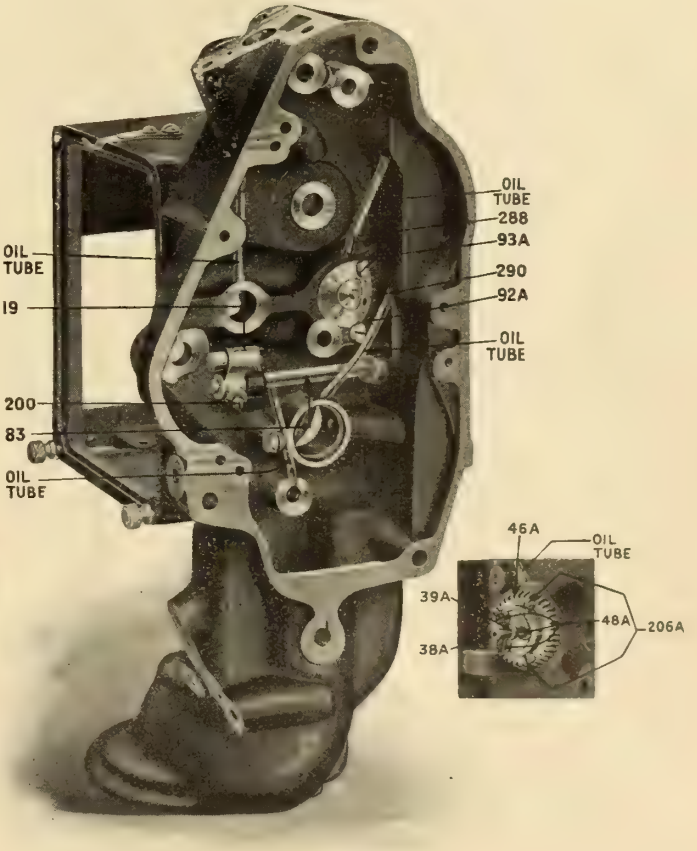

Plate 7.

by taking the small square block between the thumb and finger of the right hand and guiding it into slot of socket. The ball arbor O55, P 5 and 6, is the same at both ends, therefore it does not matter which end goes in O56 or 61A socket. After replacing the carriage, screws 216, P 6, should be tightened up until the framing lever works right; that is to say, until the framing-carriage does not work too hard or too easy. If it works too easy, it is liable to work down of its own accord while machine is in operation, thus causing picture to get out of frame.

No. 36.—Adjusting the Geneva Movement. Intermittent sprocket O107, P 3, should have just a little circumferential play. If set up too tight when machine is cold, there may be a slight binding after the machine warms up, due to expansion of the parts through heat. This play, however, should be very slight, and, when through wear of parts it becomes too great, it may be eliminated as follows: On P 4, we see the framing-carriage lying at the base of the machine and part O184 thereon is the eccentric bushing which carries the shaft to which is affixed cam F93, P 6. Eccentric bushing O184, P 4, is held in position by three screws No. 102, P 1, and 292, P 4. 102, P 1, being the set screw, and the two screws 292, P 4, are the adjusting screws. To eliminate the lost motion in the intermittent sprocket, proceed as follows: (a) after having removed framing-carriage as per instruction No. 35, loosen screw 102, P 1; (b) loosen the lower adjusting screw 292, P 4, slightly, then tighten the upper adjusting screw 292, P 4; this operation may be repeated, loosening the upper and tightening the lower screw a little at a time until the proper adjustment is obtained. In case it is brought up too tight simply reverse the above operation by loosening the top screw 292, P 4, and tightening the lower one, 292, P 4. By this method a very much finer adjustment may be obtained than by the old method of simply turning the eccentric bushing. After the proper adjustment is obtained, be sure and retighten set-screw 102, P 1; in fact, have all screws perfectly tight before replacing framing carriage.

No. 37.—The Star F92 and Cam F93, P 6, may be gotten at by removing screws 215 (four of them), P 1, which releases the oil-well cover or vertical part of framing carriage O5A, P 6.

No. 38.—Note: Directions follow for the removal and renewal of cam, star and intermittent sprocket, and their bushings. I do not, however, advise this; it is much better to purchase an extra framing carriage, and when anything goes wrong with the old one, or when excessive wear develops in the bushings, spindles, intermittent sprocket, or other parts, insert the new carriage in the machine and send the old one to the factory by registered mail for repairs. It is, of course, possible that the operator can and will make the necessary repairs in an entirely satisfactory manner. Still, when one considers the delicacy of the parts, and the fine adjustment necessary, one readily sees that is can be best done at the factory, where all kinds of tools, and men skilled in this class of work, are available.

No. 39.—Ball Socket O56, P 4, may be removed as follows: (a) follow instructions Nos. 35 and 37, (b) remove screw 293, which holds socket O56, P 4, on cam shaft. In the center of ball socket O56 will be seen the end of the cam shaft. The end of the cam shaft and the shaft opening in the ball socket are slightly tapered; (c) place on the end of the cam shaft a punch of brass or hard wood or of very soft steel will do, tap lightly with a hammer; this will release the socket from the cam shaft. The end of the punch must never be rounded but should be perfectly flat and preferably should have a hole in the center so as not to flatten down the leather cushion. Never, under any circumstances, use a hard steel punch, and be careful that the punch sets square on the shaft. A special three-piece vest-pocket size punch or tool set for this purpose may be obtained from the manufacturers of the Motiograph for $1.00. This punch, in fact, is three punches of three different sizes, with three different size holes and may be stuck together or assembled in one piece and carried in the pocket the same as a pencil. Place the new socket on the end of cam shaft and through the hole for screw 293, which holds socket to the shaft, observe that the hole sets accurately over the countersink in shaft; then with the framing-carriage in an upright position rest the cam on a suitable solid support, and with a piece of hard wood or brass placed on top of the socket, or by use of the vest pocket punch, tap it lightly with a hammer in order to bring it firmly into place; then insert the screw 293 and screw it down very tight; if lightly driven on in this manner into proper position, and the screw firmly tightened, there is no danger of its ever coming loose.

No. 40.—The Cam and Shaft, F93, P 6, may be removed and replaced as follows: (a) follow instruction 39; (b) remove the old cam by pulling the shaft out of eccentric bushing O184, P 6, by taking hold of cam F93, P 4, insert new cam and replace socket as per instruction No. 39.

No. 41.—The Star and Shaft F92, P 6, may be removed and replaced as follows: (a) follow instructions Nos. 40 and 46; (b) remove screws 43A (two of them) which will be found in the hub of intermittent sprocket O107, P 3, just underneath the apron or stripper plate 165, P 6; then by taking hold of the star wheel F92, P 6, pull it out and insert new one, being careful to get the screw holes in the shaft right side up. Keep in mind the fact that steady pictures depend more on the absolute accuracy of the intermittent sprocket and the star and cam than on any other part of the machine, hence it is of the most vital importance that the greatest care should be exercised in order to maintain the accuracy that is absolutely necessary to the production of good work. As the fitting of the cam to its shaft is an operation that cannot be well done without special facilities, the manufacturers have combined these two parts as one and they are so listed in the parts price list, and no operator or mechanic should, without the special facilities, undertake to separate the cam from its shaft and expect to fit another in a way that will do accurate work. The Geneva driver pin F93½, P 6, may be removed for replacement by loosening screw No. F93⅝, P 6, which holds it in position. The star and shaft is made in one solid piece and is very accurately ground by high-grade automatic machinery.

No. 42.—The Intermittent Sprocket O107, P 4, may be removed and replaced as follows: Follow instructions Nos. 39, 40 and 41.

The life of the intermittent sprocket on the latest improved 1912 framing device called the Model W has been increased by a special hardening process perfected by the manufacturers of the Motiograph. In order to use this sprocket on the 1909, 1910 and 1911 models it will be necessary to also purchase the star and shaft or to send in the one which is intended to use with same to the manufacturers in order that the screw holes may be drilled out properly and the sprocket lined up as the hub of said sprocket is slightly larger than formerly and the screws run clear through.

No. 43.—The Eccentric Bushing O184, P 4, may be removed and replaced as follows: (a) follow instruction 39; (b) loosen screws 102, P 1, and 292, Ps 1 and 4 and push bushing out toward sprocket and insert new bushing.

No. 44.—The Large Bushing O28, which will be found just underneath the star, F92, which supports the star shaft may be removed and replaced as follows: (a) follow instruction 41; (b) loosen screw No. 214, P 1; (c) push bushing out toward the star wheel side, then insert new bushing.

No. 45.—Small Bushing O183, P 4, may be removed and replaced as follows: (a) follow instruction No. 41; (b) loosen screw No. 213, P 1; (c) push bushing out, then insert new bushing.

No. 46.—The Apron or Stripper Plate 165, P 6, is released by removing three screws which hold it at its lower end.

No. 47.—Intermittent Idler Bracket 23, P 6, may be released by removing joint pin 77, P 6. The distance intermittent idler 108, P 6, is held away from the sprocket, is controlled by screw 23½, P 6, which is in turn held in place by set screw 23¾, P 4. It should be set away from sprocket by about twice the thickness of a film.

No. 48.—Governor Shaft Bushing 194, P 5, is held in place by set-screw 235, P 5. By loosening this set-screw, the bushing may be adjusted or removed. Note the oil hole in the face of this bushing and in putting in a new one, or adjusting the old one, be sure to keep it at the top.

No. 49.—Ball Arbor or Shaft, O55, P 5, works at high speed, hence it is quite likely that in the course of time the square blocks and the slot in which they fit may become worn. This will cause considerable noise, and if allowed to become too badly worn may also cause picture to jump, especially when trying to speed up a little. It may be remedied by obtaining a new ball arbor O55, P 5, and if necessary socket for same. The latest style sockets are much larger than formerly, and are hardened. The latest style ball arbor or shaft is made so that the square blocks called trunnions and numbered O55½ may be removed and replaced without replacing the entire ball arbor, providing the ball part is not too badly worn. The right-hand socket 61A, P 5, is a part of flywheel shaft. It may be removed by following instruction No. 23.

No. 50.—Setting the Shutter. Setting the No. 1 intermittent double cone shutters on the No. 1-A Motiograph, model, 1912: The principle of setting the shutters on the Motiograph is the same as any other motion picture machine; that is, the larger wings of the shutters should cover the light opening or aperture, as nearly as possible during the time the intermittent sprocket and film are in motion and the smaller wings should pass during the exposure while the film is at rest. It is not necessary to pay any attention to the small wings when setting the shutters, as they take care of themselves and are only intended as interruptors of the light, which reduces the flicker in the picture to a minimum. To set the shutters, proceed as follows: (a) follow instruction No. 3; (b) remove the outer shutter wing 171A, P 5, by loosening screws 206A, P 5, and pull shutter from its shaft; (c) loosen screws No. 48A, P 7, leaving them just loose enough so the inner shutter 170A, P 5, may be turned by hand, but tight enough so that it will not move of its own accord; (d) remove gear cover as per instruction No. 1; (e) take hold of the balance wheel and turn the mechanism in the same direction as when in operation. Turn very slowly until the intermittent sprocket is just barely ready to start moving, after which set the lower edge of the large wing of the inner shutter 170, P 5, about ⅛" above the center of the aperture opening, when looking on a horizontal line through the center of the aperture. Now revolve the mechanism slowly in the direction it runs, observing when the intermittent sprocket stops that the top edge of the large wing of the inner shutter 170A, P 5, is about ⅛" below the center of the aperture opening; tighten screws firmly, after which revolve the mechanism until the inner shutter is at the original position; that is, the lower edge of the large wing should be about ⅛" above the center of the aperture; replace the outer shutter 171A, P 5, on the shaft; tighten screws 206A, P 5, partially in the same manner as was done with the inner shutter; set the top edge of the large wing about ⅛" below the center of the aperture opening, after which tighten the screws firmly. The space between the two large wings of the shutters should be exactly the same width when the intermittent sprocket is just ready to start (but not started) as it is just as the intermittent sprocket has come to rest after turning, and said space should be exactly in the center of the aperture opening when looking on a line parallel through the aperture opening. After the setting of the shutters has once been done, it will be found very simple and easy to repeat.

No. 51.—Sprocket idlers 108 (all sprocket idlers have same number) must be set away from their respective sprockets by about twice the thickness of an ordinary film. This, however, does not apply to the front idler of lower bracket (front means the lens side of the machine) which may set as much as ⅛" away from the sprocket. The distance of the idlers from the lower sprocket is governed by screw No. 241¾, P 5, and that of the upper idler is governed by screw 241½, P 5. After the proper adjustment is obtained, both may be set by means of the lock-nut 241, P 5. All idler rollers are now made of hardened steel.

No. 52.—The Sprocket Teeth. The teeth of the intermittent sprocket O107, P 3, are subject to the heavy wear, due to pulling the film down against the pressure of the tension springs. This has the effect of cutting away the metal on one side of the teeth. It is called "undercutting." If this wear is of considerable extent, it is likely to render the picture unsteady on the screen, as well as to be very hard on the perforations of the film itself. An intermittent sprocket should never be used after its teeth have become worn to any considerable extent. An extra framing-carriage complete should be kept on hand, ready to insert in the machine. This extra carriage will cost you only a few dollars, and it is well worth the money. The teeth of the upper and lower sprockets 106, P 3, and 106, P 3 (upper and lower having the same number), are also subject to considerable wear, particularly those of the lower sprocket. These sprockets cannot be turned end for end when the teeth become worn. But the wear upon the teeth of the upper and lower sprocket is on opposite side; hence, these two sprockets may be changed, one for the other, when they become worn, thus presenting a new and unworn side of the teeth to the film. The sprocket teeth should be carefully watched. Don't depend on your naked eye, but examine them through a condenser lens which will magnify them and show you more clearly their true condition.

It does not, from any point of view, pay to run a machine with badly worn sprocket teeth. Particularly does this apply to the intermittent and the lower sprockets.

No. 53.—The Face of Sprockets should be kept very clean. Dirt on the face of the intermittent sprocket will cause the picture to jump. Dirt on the face of the upper and lower sprocket has a tendency to cause the loss of the loops. An ordinary tooth brush is the best thing to clean the sprockets. They should be thoroughly cleaned once every day.

No. 54.—Framing-Carriage. Should your framing-carriage work too easily and have a tendency to drop, the matter may be remedied by tightening screws 216, P 6. If the framing-carriage works too hard, of course these screws should be loosened slightly.

No. 55.—Lower Reel Arm 9A, P 5, is attached to the machine by thumb screws 128, P 5, and a third, similar one which does not show in the illustration. Pulley 21, P 6, which drives the take-up reel in the lower magazine, is driven by a flat belt, 227A, Ps 5 and 6, tension to which is supplied by idler pulley 109, P 6. (Note: Oil hole in the face of pulley 109, and don't overlook it in oiling.) The amount of tension which pulley 129, P 6, will supply to belt 227A, P 6, is governed by adjusting screw 156, Ps 4 and 5. After adjusting belt tension, set up lock-nuts 157, Ps 5 and 6, tightly. Only sufficient tension should be given to enable belt to revolve the lower reel, until all the film is taken up. Anything more than this is excessive, and highly undesirable from any and every point of view. Too much tension on the take-up will have a decided tendency to cause losing of the lower loop; also it is very hard on the film, sprocket holes, and makes the machine run unduly hard, also causing unnecessary wear on the lower sprocket. The Motiograph take-up belt may be allowed to run very slack. If it shows a tendency to get hard and stiff, a few drops of oil will soften it.

No. 56.—Take-Up Drive Pulley 21, P 6, and Its Shaft 68, P 5, and the Bracket Carrying Idler Pulley 109, may be removed by taking out the set-screw in the hub of pulley 109. This releases all the parts. Before taking the pulley off, carefully note the position of the bracket carrying idler pulley 109, P 6; also note the washer between the pulley hub and the idler bracket casting, and don't forget to replace same when the parts are put together again; also note the flat spot in the spindle into which set-screw in hub of pulley should fit. Lower magazine fits over and around casting 9A, P 5, and is held thereto by thumb-screws in the magazine spider casting. Note: It will, of course, be understood that the lower reel arm, framing-carriage, etc., shown at the base of the machine in P 6, and the various parts shown at the base of the machine in other plates, are not in their normal position, but merely laid down by the side of the machine for the purpose of illustration. For instance, in P 6, we see one view of the lower-reel arm, and in P 5 we see another view of it. But in the latter view the reel-arm is in place on the machine.

No. 57.—The Rewinder. Rewinding is done on the machine itself, the same being accomplished by shifting the two magazines so that their fire-traps are in line with each other, the film passing directly from the lower to the upper magazine, in front of the mechanism, the upper reel being revolved by the machine crank O13, P 5. The two magazines are both shifted simultaneously, or at the same time, by lifting the stop-bolt in the spider of the upper magazine, the lower magazine being connected to the upper by a shift-bar; turning the upper magazine also turns the lower. In P 2, we see the lower end of upper reel-arm 7A in place on the machine. We also see bevel gear 86½, P 2, which drives socket spindle 57, P 2, top of which is seen at 57, P 6. Socket spindle 57, P 2, in turn, imparts motion to a shaft extending up through the center of reel arm 7A, P 2, the lower end of which is shown at 58, P 5. In P 5, we have a view of the lower end of reel-arm 7A, which lies beside the machine. Pin 146, P 5, fits in the slot in the top of socket shaft 57, Ps 5 and 6. In P 4, we have a view of top reel-arm 7A with gear cap 8A, P 4, removed. This cap is released by removing four screws in its upper surface and carefully prying it off.

No. 58.—The Rewinder Acts as Follows: When machine crank O13, P 5, is clear in, as shown, it drives the mechanism and is not engaged with the rewinder. By shoving down the push-rod 94, P 5, at the same time revolving the crank and pulling outward on it, the crank and crankshaft will be moved outward by about ¼". In P 2, we see a view of main driving gear 15A, which is shown in its place in the machine on P 4. In the face of its hub, you will see four slots Y, P 2. Looking at bevel gear O85, P 2, you will see four similar slots in its hub. You will also see a pin through the crankshaft in front of gear O85, P 2. The operation is as follows: When the crank is shoved clear in, this pin engages with two of the slots Y, P 2, which locks the crankshaft with gear 15A, P 4, and revolves the mechanism itself. When push-rod 94, P 5, is depressed and the crank revolved while pulling outward on it, the crankshaft and crank slip outward, thus disengaging the pin from the slots in gear 15A, P 4, and engaging it with the slots in gear O85, P 2. This releases the mechanism, which no longer revolves when the crank is turned, and locks the crank to gear O85, P 2, which revolves the rewind. This may seem to be a little complicated, but it is in reality very simple, and will be easily followed through the various illustrations at the same time examining your own machine.

No. 59.—Bevel Gear 86, P 4, and Shaft 59A, P 4, is removed by (a) loosening set-screw in the hub of the brass gear; (b) removing screw 257, P 4, in end of the shaft.

No. 60.—Bevel Gear 89 and the Vertical Shaft to Which It Is Attached may be removed by taking out pin 146, P 5, first having removed bevel pin on 86, P 4, as per instruction No. 59.

No. 61.—The Bushing at the Upper End of Vertical Shaft 58, P 5, is held in place by a set-screw just below the bulge in the casting. Note the oil holes on the face of upper reel-arm 7A, and don't overlook them in oiling.

No. 62.—Oil. Many of the machine parts work at high speed and they all have more or less heavy labor to perform. It therefore follows that they should receive adequate lubrication; "adequate lubrication," however, does not mean that the bearings should be flooded with oil. One drop of oil is sufficient on any motion picture mechanism bearing. Anything more than this simply runs off and makes a mess. Use good oil. The use of very thin oil and much advertised patent oil should be avoided. A good grade of light dynamo oil is best. This applies to everything except the intermittent movement oil-well, in which a good grade of vaseline or other equally efficient lubricant should be used. If vaseline is used, it may be heated and put in, in the usual way, through oil-cup 112, P 1, or by removing the vertical casing O5, P 6, by following instruction No. 37, and force the vaseline in around the Geneva star and cam.

No. 63.—Keep the Machine Clean. A dirty, oily, smeary mechanism is very good evidence of a careless operator, and the careless operator is usually a poor operator, regardless of how much he may know. It only takes a few moments each day to wipe the machine off clean, and it should by all means be done. It is an excellent scheme to lay a small square of heavy blotting paper inside the mechanism, which can be renewed every day. It will absorb the surplus oil and help to keep things clean.

NAMES AND NUMBERS OF PARTS FOR THE MOTIOGRAPH, No. 1A MODEL, 1912.

Order Parts by Number Only, but Where Number is Preceded by a Letter, the Letter Is an Integral Part of the Number. In Ordering Parts, Be Sure to Give the Serial Number of Your Machine.

M No.
1-A Main Frame Casting of Mechanism.
2-A Sub Base for Wood Base Board.
3-A Gear Cover.
4-A Gear Bridge.
05-A Framing Device, Vertical Casting.
06-A Framing Device, Horizontal Casting.
7-A Upper Reel Arm, Casting Only.
8-A Upper Reel Arm Cap.
9-A Lower Reel Arm, Casting Only.
10-A Take-up Belt Tension Idler Bracket.
11-A Framing Lever Casting.
12-A Hand Bolt to Clamp Mechanism to Base.
13-A Crank Hanlde, Casting Only.
013-A Crank handle Complete.
14 Balance Wheel.
15-A Main Gear.
16-A Double Gear Between Main Gear and Balance Shaft Gear.
17-A Gear on Lower Sprocket Shaft.
18-A Gear Between Balance Shaft Gear and Lower Sprocket Shaft Gear.
19 Governor Crank, Complete.
20 Small Belt Pulley and Screw.
21 Large Belt Pulley and Screw.
22 Stereo Lens Mount Ring.
22½ Thumb Screw for Stereo Lens Mount Ring.
23 Intermittent Roller Bracket and Shaft.
23¼ Screw to Bind Roller Shaft in Intermittent Bracket.
23½ Adjusting Screw Intermittent Roller Bracket.
23¾ Screw to Bind 23½ Screw.
24 Roller Bracket, Upper, With Shaft.
24½ Screw to Bind Roller Shaft in Upper Bracket.
25-A Roller Bracket, Lower, with Shafts.
25¼ Screw to Bind Rear Roller Shaft in Lower Bracket.
25½ Screw to Bind Front Eccentric Roller Shaft in Lower Bracket.
028 Bushing, Large for Intermittent Shaft.
29 Magazine Latch, Large Piece.
26½ Spring for Magazine Latch.
30 Magazine Latch, Small Piece.
31 and 32 Magazine Hinge.
33-A Fire Trap, Casting Only.
33-CT Fire Trap Complete, With Rollers.
F-33½ Spider Casting Only, for Upper Magazine.
F-33¾ " " " " Lower "
37 Stereo Lens Arm Bracket.
38-A Shutter Shaft and Gear, Solid.
39-A Shutter Shaft and Gear, Main, Hollow.
40-A Governor Drive Shaft.
41-A Shutter Drive Shaft Screw.
F-41 Shift Bar Between Magazines.
42-A Bushing for Governor Drive Shaft.
F-42 Plunger Pin, Upper Spider.
43-A Screws for Intermittent Sprocket Each.
44-A Screw for Gear on Upper Sprocket Shaft.
45-A Bevel Gear on Shutter Drive Shaft.
46-A Bevel Gear on Shutter Shaft.
47-A Intermediate Gears in Shutter Gear Case.
48-A Screws for Clamping Inner Shutter Wing on Gear Hub.
50-A Crank Shaft with Pin.
51-A Upper Sprocket Shaft.
F-51 Spring for Plunger Pin, Upper Spider.
52-A Lower Sprocket Shaft.
055 Ball Shaft, Hardened.
055½ Trunion for New Style, Hardened 055.
056 Socket on Geneva Cam Shaft. Hardened.
57 Reel Arm Socket Shaft.
58 Vertical Shaft Inside Upper Reel Arm.
59-A Upper Reel Shaft.
60-A Lower Reel Shaft.
61-A Balance Shaft and Hardened Socket, One Piece, Including Spring Plunger.
61½-A Spring Plunger for new 61A.
62-A Gear and Sleeve on Balance Wheel Shaft.
63-A Upper Fire Shield.
64-A Lower " "
65 Governor Shaft.
65-G.C. Governor Complete.
69-A Bushing for Shutter Drive Shaft.
71 Framing Device, Guide Rod.
72 Framing Device Slide Rod, Long, with Head.
73-A Pin Connecting Link, Framing Device.
74 Framing Lever Connecting Screw.
75 Framing Lever Handle.
76 Screw to Hold Framing Lever in Frame.
77 Intermittent Roller Bracket Joint Pin.
80-A Bushing for Shutter Gear Case (Rear).
81 Shaft for Roller Brackets.
83 Governor Crank Shaft.
84-A Gear on Governor Drive Shaft.
085 Bevel Gear on Crank Shaft.
86 Bevel Gear on Upper Reel Shaft.
86½ Bevel Gear on Rewind Socket Shaft.
87 Gear on Upper Sprocket Shaft.
87½ Intermediate Gear, Small.
89 Bevel Gear on Vertical Shaft in Upper Reel Arm.
90 Gear on Governor Shaft and Hub.
91 Stereopticon Slide Rod to Hold Lens Ring.
91½-M Wing Nut and Washer for No. 91.
92-A Screw to Locate Shutter Gear Case.
F-92 Geneva Star and Shaft in One Piece, 1912.
93-A Screw to Retain Shutter Gear Case in Frame.
F-93 Geneva Cam and Shaft Complete for 1912.
F-93½ Geneva Cam Pin, Hardened.
F-93⅝ Screw to Hold Pin in Cam.
94 Push Rod for Rewind Shift of Crank.
95 Locking Pin for Rewind Shift.
96-A Film Tension Shoes.
97-A Round Aperture Heat Arrester on Film Gate.
99-A Thumb Screw for Front Plate (two).
102 Screw to Clamp Eccentric Bushing in Framer.
103-A Screw to Clamp Shutter Drive Bushing.
105-A Cap for Hole, When Changing Over, '09 Screw for Clamping Mechanism to Base.
106 Sprocket, Upper or Lower.
0107 Sprocket, Intermittent on Framing Device.
108 Idler Rolls, Hardened Steel.
108-A Idler Film Roll, Hardened, Lower Roller Bracket.
109 Tension Pulley for Take-up Belt.
110 Roller Guide on Governor Shaft.
111 Governor Balls, Brass (two).
112 Oil Cup on Framing Device.
114-A Shutter Gear Casing Complete with Gears.
116 Roller, Complete, for Top of Gate with Shaft and Spring.
116-A Roller, Top of Gate, Solid End. Hardened.
116½-A Roller, Top of Gate, Spring End Hardened.
118-A Spring for Plunger, to Locate Mechanism on Base.
119 Center Pin in Hinge of Magazine.
120-A Side Plate to Hold License Plate.
121 Nut, Upper Reel Shaft.
123 Collar on Gate Latch Rod.
F-124 Screws to Connect Shift Bar to Magazine Spiders.
125 Gate Latch Rod.
126 Shaft for No. 116.
127 Ball Screw for Gate Hinge.
128 Screws to Fasten Upper or Lower Reel Arm to Frame.
129 Shaft Screw, Hardened, for Gear or for Belt Tension Pulley or Stereo. Lens Bracket.
133 Pin in Governor Shaft.
135 Pin for Governor Drive Gear.
146 Pin in Vertical Shaft in Upper Reel Arm.
148 Pin in Gear on Governor Shaft.
154 Screw to Fasten Crank to Shaft.
155 Screw to Hold Wood Handle on Stud.
156 Adjusting Screw for Take-up Belt Tension Pulley.
157 Lock Nut for Screw No. 156.
158 Pin in Gear on Shaft Inside Upper Reel Arm.
160-A Main Frame of Film Gate.
162-A Aperture Plate.
163 Automatic Fire Shutter and Gear.
164-A Heat Shield on Gate.
165 Apron or Stripper Plate on Framing Device.
167-A Link to Connect Framing Device with No. 11-A.
168 Rack Bar for Fire Shutter.
169 Governor Strips.
170-A Shutter Wing (Inner).
171-A Shutter Wing (Outer) with Collet and Screws.
172 Front Plate.
F-173 Stud in Crank for Wood Handle.
174-A Film Tension Spring to Hold No. 96-A.
175 Governor Spring.
176 Collar on Vertical Shaft Inside Upper Reel Arm.
178 Large Bushing, Bronze, on Vertical Shaft in Upper Reel Arm.
181 Small Bushing in Gear Bridge for Balance Wheel Shaft.
182-A Large Bushing in Main Frame for Balance Wheel Shaft.
183 Small Bushing for Intermittent Sprocket Shaft.
0184 Eccentric Bushing for Framing Device.
193-A Bushing in Bridge for Governor Shaft.
194 Bushing in Frame for Governor Shaft.
198 Small Bushings in Reel Arm.
200 Screw in Governor Crank.
202 Locating Screw for Idler Bracket Spring.
204 Screw for Sprockets, Upper or Lower.
205 Screw for Balance Wheel.
206-A Screw for Shutter Wing Collet.
207 Screw for Upper Reel Arm Cap.
208 Locating Screw for Front Plate.
209 Screw to Fasten Magazines to Spiders.
210 Screw for Springs on Framing Device.
211 Screw for Fastening Apron or Stripper Plate on Framer.
212 Screw to Fasten Heat Shield to Gate.
213 Screw to Clamp Small Bushing, in Framing Device.
214 Screw to Clamp Large Bushing, in Framing Device.
215 Screw to Hold No. 05 Vertical Casting to No. 06 Horizontal Casting of Framing Device.
216 Screw to Hold Framing Device in Position on Slide Rod.
217 Screw for Aperture Plate.
218 Screw for Lower Fire Shield.
219 Screw for Studs on Gate.
220 Screw for Gate Latch.
221 Screw for Film Tension Spring.
222 Screw to Hold Round Aperture Heat Arrester to No. 164-A.
223 Screw to Hold Idler Roller on Shafts.
224-A Screw to Hold Bridge on Main Frame.
225 Screw to Hold Bushings in Bridge.
227 Locating Screw, for Roller Brackets.
230 Screw in Reel Shaft Bevel Gear.
231 Screw for Gear Cover, Upper.
232 Screw for Gear Cover, Rear.
233 Screw for Gear Cover, Front.
235 Screw to Clamp Governor Bushing in Frame.
237-M Screw for Attaching Magazine to Reel Arm.
238-A Magazine Body and Cover.
241 Lock Nut on Roller Bracket Adjusting Screw.
241½ Adjusting Screw, Upper Roller Bracket.
241¾ Adjusting Screw, Lower Roller Bracket.
244 Screw for Locating Crank Handle.
245 Set Screw in Gear on Rewind Socket Shaft in Frame.
248 Safety Cap for Crank Shaft, Wood.
249 Screw to Hold Roller Bracket in Place.
251-A Roller for Magazine Fire Trap.
253-A Shaft for Roll in Magazine Fire Trap.
255 Screw to Hold Traps to Magazines.
257 Screw for Nut on Reel Shaft.
258½ Spring for Gate Latch Rod.
259 Set Screw to Bind Bushing in Reel Arm.
261 Wood Handle for Crank.
262 Screw in Framing Device Casting Guide Rod Slot.
263 Screw for Small Belt Pulley.
265 Screw for Roller Bracket Springs.
268 Screw in Magazine Latch.
273 Springs for Intermittent Roller Bracket (2 Pieces).
274 Spring for Upper and Lower Roller Bracket (3 Pieces).
275 Spring to Hold Front Plate (2 Pieces).
276 Set Screw to Fasten Large Balance Shaft Bushing in Main Frame.
277-A Take-up Belt.
278 Screw for No. 275 Springs, Front Plate.
283 Plunger to Locate Mechanism on Base.
283½ Locating Plunger Head.
284 Spring for Push Rod, Rewind Shift.
285 Balance Shaft Screws.
286 Motor Drive Arbor.
287-A Shutter Drive Shaft and Gear.
288 Shutter Gear Case.
289 Screws to Clamp Bushing in Shutter Gear Case.
290 Shaft for Intermediate Gears in Shutter Gear Case.
291 Screw in Gear on Lower Sprocket Shaft.
292 Adjusting Screw for Eccentric Bushing in Framing Device.
293 Screw for Socket on Geneva Drive Shaft.
294 Screw for Upper Fire Shield.
294½ Screw for Heat Arrester Gate.
295 Latch Pin for Side Plate.
296 Nut for Latch Pin.
297 Spring for Latch Pin.
298 Screw for Side Plate.
299 Bushing for Shutter Gear Case (Front).

Comments on the Films

Licensed.

"THE MUSIC HALL SINGER" (Eclipse), June 26.—An often-used melodramatic formula furnishes the plot of this picture, which has a grace of its own and some very charming scenes. The singer and her musical husband are very poor. She meets the director of the opera and becomes famous as a singer of classic music, and straightway forgets her husband, who in a later scene, rescues her from a burning theater. It has been skillfully produced and is a picture that, though hardly fresh, will please many spectators. The photography is good.

"THE PENALTY OF INTEMPERANCE" (Kalem), June 28.—The skill with which this picture was made lifts it out of the tract class. It is a dignified, well-acted film, and not a mawkish, drunkard's conversion picture. The drunkard is "awakened" to a sense of his horrible short-coming, but it comes about in a realistic, convincing way, and after a very tragic but truthful statement of his case. Mr. Donald Mackensie and Miss Neilsen play the leads, as the drunkard and his wife, very poor people. Miss Neilsen's work, in its suggestion of the pathetic, is very effective, but the whole cast does very well indeed. The scene maker shows commendable restraint. We commend it as a good offering.

"MASTER AND PUPIL" (Edison), June 28.—Stories dealing with artists and studio life have attracted scenario writers and producers, but most of these pictures have too plainly betrayed a lack of real acquaintance with the subject. This Edison release is another in which Mr. Harry Furniss leads, and Mr. Furniss is to the manner born. The picture shows it; it rings true from first to last. It has also human qualities in marked degree and is, we think, on this account the very best picture of its kind that we have seen. It is a story in which the interest centers in the relationship of a pupil with his master. In all of this it is most delightful and full of past experience; and in the way it is brought out, full of kindliness and human sympathy. There is a secondary interest which is also good; but, if the picture has weakness, it lies in this love story. The chief theme is so worthy that some may doubt whether it were wise to divide the attention. From the showman's viewpoint and that of the average spectator it was the best thing to do. Beside Mr. Furniss, Miss Mary Fuller and Mr. Wadsworth play the important roles. Miss Fuller is very charming as the master's daughter and the pupil's sweetheart. It is a gem; good on all counts.

"THE PSEUDO SULTAN" (Vitagraph), June 28.—An amusing Bunnygraph, in which Flora Finch materially assists in the mirth. Bunny, shipwrecked, drifts ashore, and is put in a cell. He escapes as he is about to be arraigned, and in his wanderings through the palace comes upon the widowed Sultana, just awakening from a trance. As she has been informed she is to marry the first man she sees upon awakening, Bunny, of course, is the one. Bunny's trials in attempting to become one of the faithful, his failure, and his visit to the harem, under the escort of the Sultana, and his forcible withdrawal, in spite of his tearful entreaties, from the company of so many charming damsels—by the beard, too—are some of the laugh-provoking incidents. Bunny escapes on horseback; the journey must have been as painful to the horse as to his rider.

"SPRINGING A SURPRISE" (Essanay), June 28.—A lively comedy, with Howard Missimer at his best. The story is of a woman-hating uncle, who was taken into camp by a nephew who had incurred his displeasure by falling in love and marrying.

"THE SCHOOL TEACHER AND THE WAIF" (Biograph), June 27.—Little Mary Pickford plays in this picture a pathetic, but very attractive waif, "Mad-cap Madge," who is forced to go to school. She is a very original harem-scarem who is the butt of the other school children. The plot of the story is very simple. She falls in love with a traveling patent medicine man. The teacher (a man) saves her from making a false step and falls in love with her himself. In the way the changing situation is developed, and in the quality of the acting, there is much Biograph atmosphere, but while part is as fine as can be, parts (the schoolhouse scenes), are very conventional. The waif is a praiseworthy bit of work; the school teacher is disappointing. As a whole, for its story, for its human-nature, and for its scene-making, including photography, we commend it as an excellent offering. It will please.

"A GUARDIAN'S LUCK" (Essanay), June 27.—A farce comedy with one or two very comic situations, but which, as a whole, is not up to Essanay standard, a high one. It is a love story (Miss Prout and Mr. Stepplings play the leads in this), and there is a foolish guardian. There are also two children's roles. These kids are likable, but have little to do with the plot. The acting and photography are very good.

"FROM FIREMAN TO ENGINEER" (Lubin), June 27.—A fresh railroad story. We can commend it as a desirable offering. A large audience watched it with interest and the comments of strangers near us were favorable. It has the elements of popularity. The story is simple, human and straightforward, with very little that is melodramatic. A young fireman is in love. The girl's father refuses him, because he isn't an engineer. He vainly applies to the superintendent for an engine. The superintendent's little girl gets up on an engine and starts it. The fireman takes, by force, another engine and, after a chase down the track, saves the child at the risk of his life. The actor himself ran some risk, though the locomotives were going slowly when he climbed from one to the other. It is pretty well photographed. A good picture to show.

"THE DEER-SLAYER'S RETRIBUTION" (Pathe), June 27.—A melodramatic Indian picture with a jealous villain, who hates his successful rival for the love of a pretty squaw. The villain kills a white soldier for whiskey and then, as is common in melodramas, manages to get the other brave suspected. The crime is brought home to the evil-doer in the end. The character of this Indian villain is fresh and very interesting. There are many good things in the picture, as a whole, and much human truth, and both situation and the way it is developed are not improbable. It has, however, a good many little improbabilities, things that were unnecessary, and that a very little added carefulness would have corrected. The brave's carelessness in losing his war-club was the first of these. Another was the awkward way the scenes were arranged at the army post, especially when a sergeant had to report to his captain. Yet, in spite of these short-comings, it is a likable picture and a good offering. It is well acted and well photographed.

"ELEPHANT BUTTE DAM AT ALBUQUERQUE" (Selig), June 27.—A well-photographed and interesting topical picture of a big irrigation project. It gives a very acceptable glimpse of the engineers and their men at work. It is short.

"HIS FATHER'S BUGLE" (Selig), June 27.—An emotional picture of two wars. A mother tells a civil war story to a little boy of how his father by a brave deed won a bugle. The boy grows up and leads his regiment to victory up San Juan Hill and dies. His comrades bring the bugle home again to his mother and give her his dying message. It is simple, clear and fairly effective, although the battle scenes are not very realistic. It has good photography and is an acceptable offering.

"THE NEW PHYSICIAN" (Lubin), June 26.—Fourteen pretty girls, with their nighties on and with bare arms and their hair loose make the feature of this picture. There was a new physician in town and the village girls all played sick. They carried loads of 'em to the hospital. Mr. Arthur Johnson plays the doctor. It is intended to be a comedy of happenings, extremely unconvincing. There is too much in it that is not preposterous enough to be funny; some of it is, however. It is not coarse at all and it is well photographed.

"PENNSYLVANIA STATE POLICE, TROOP B" (Edison), June 26.—This is a half-reel of interesting pictures of a division of an organization the fame of which is by no means confined to its own section of the country. There are scenes in which the troop is patrolling the highways, indulging in target practice, mounted drill, answering a hurry call, and portraying a recent incident in which there was some lively gun play.

"THE WOODEN INDIAN" (Edison), June 26.—Comedy of the improbable sort, but nevertheless amusing.

"PANSY" (Selig), June 25.—A comedy-drama, in which the Selig menagerie is drawn upon for two bears, one tame and one alleged not to be. The latter certainly can climb a tree, as was discovered by the sure-thing hunter who had planned to have motion pictures taken of his capture of the tame animal. The pictures show how the non-tame bear, substituted for the less ferocious creature, turned the tables and put to rout the politician who was seeking recreation. The picture also shows how the camera man got even when the disgruntled would-be statesman refused to buy the film.

"THE DEATH OF SAUL" (C. G. P. C.), June 25.—A Biblical film, hand-colored. The setting is elaborate, in keeping with this company's spectacular productions, and there are some superb scenes. Especially is this true of the massacre; the scene where Saul seeks the witch of Endor; where the witch evokes the spirit of Samuel, the battle, and the death of Saul.

"WHEN ROSES WITHER" (Vitagraph), June 26.—Mrs. Maurice is interesting in a drama of which pathos is the chief note. Costello and Miss Young carry out their parts acceptably, but it cannot be said there is much to be said of the story as a story.

"TRUE LOVE" (Pathe), June 26.—The old story of the poor young man and the rich young man in love with the same girl. There is a variation, however, in that when the girl is taken ill the well-to-do young man refuses to give financial aid to her father. The rival gives up his savings. When it is decided blood transfusion is necessary, the rich lover declines to be a party to it. The poor lover yields his blood in a realistic scene. The girl survives. The man dies. The author had the hardihood to represent the surviving lover seeking to marry the girl, but had the saving sense to portray her as declining. The acting is good.

"CAPTURED BY BEDOUINS" (Kalem), June 26.—A story of the desert, written and played by Gene Gauntier, under the direction of Sidney Olcott. There is a fine picture of the promenade deck of the Adriatic, showing a wide expanse of ocean, and not another craft in sight. The scene shifts to Cairo and then to the desert, including a visit to the Sphinx. Some of the fine desert pictures are marred by an absence of light, although they presumably represent night scenes, but the beholder is led to believe the attempt to indicate darkness was overdone in the laboratory. Nevertheless the picture is well worth seeing.

"A WOMAN'S WAY" (Melies), June 27.—A picture opening in burlesque vein and closing with a bit of dandy comedy. It was not till the very last scene that a woman's way of doing things was fully revealed. A woman was elected sheriff. She gets shot in the arm by a bandit dressed like a woman, and her daughter goes out to get the bandit. She gets him, but finds that he is her lover. After she has him safe in prison, she repents and wants to release him, but because he wants her to unlock the door she decides not to. Its best qualities are the pleasing personalities of the players and the excellent photographs of well-chosen scenes.

"THE HEAT WAVE" (C. G. P. C.), June 28.—A very farcical picture of a hot day. The populace go about in bathing suits and bath tubs on wheels.

"THE FROG" (C. G. P. C.), June 28.—A very excellent scientific picture whose maker deserves great credit. The average spectator will know a good deal about the world, if this sort of thing keeps up.

"THE FATHER" (Edison), June 29.—Scenario by Bannister Merwin. A story of a poor clerk who betrays his employer's secret for a large bribe in order to send his only daughter, who is sick, to the South. There is nothing new in this situation except what is due to skill in handling scenes or the plot. The denouement shows the clerk rewarded for his crime. It is true, as a wise poet has said, that mankind can find charity in man for his short-comings and not in man alone, for the gods, too, pity; but their pity doesn't abrogate the ten commandments. The world is so full of sentimentality to-day that this denouement will probably please nine spectators out of ten, and chiefly because they don't consider. Emma Goldman would call it just and right, but even if we all agreed with her, it wouldn't make it so. It is simple unvarnished anarchy. The picture is well acted by John Sturgeon, as the father; Mrs. Wallace Erskine, as the mother; Miss Learn, as the daughter; Mr. Chas. Ogle as the employer; Mr. Rob. Brower, as the doctor, and Mr. Wm. Betchtel, as the briber. It is well photographed.

"BRONCHO BILLY AND THE INDIAN MAID" (Essanay), June 29.—A story dealing with a phase of the eternal masculine and feminine. There is a touch of romance in it, but it is not an avowed love story. Billy helps the maid when her father is drunk. She shoots the villain whom she sees aiming at Billy. Billy makes it seem as though he had killed the villain—it made the shooting easier to explain. It has the quality of other "Broncho Billy" pictures, but its scenario and especially its situation is not so vital as some of them have been. The photography is good.

"THE WANDERING MINSTREL" (Cines), June 29.—An idylic picture with some realistic scenes. It is not dramatic, but the situation is clear. It depends largely on its scenes, many of which the producer has made poetic by skillful lighting. Good acting helps it out some and it will furnish entertainment. Some of the scenes are poorly photographed, but others are excellently taken.

"THE SQUAWMAN'S SWEETHEART" (Pathe), June 29.—A picture in which we can find no clearly marked object. It fails to appeal to the spectator's sense of justice and it also has many small shortcomings. The photography is good and it has some very pretty scenes.

"AT THE END OF THE TRAIL" (Vitagraph), June 29.—A Western whose object is to show how surely and how quickly an evil-doer's deeds can sometimes draw around him a net. The scenes are mostly in the mesquite-tufted desert. It is fairly well made, acted and photographed.

"MAN'S LUST FOR GOLD" (Biograph), July 1.—A picture that is largely a series of loosely connected scenes, but it has a good melodramatic episode as a finale. Its object is to show how for one transgressor the way was very hard. It is a picture that will be popular; it has the stir of epic life, the search for gold in the desert, thirst and Indian attack. The scenes are skillfully handled and well photographed.

"PATHE'S WEEKLY NO. 27."—The features of this number are the fatal automobile accident in Lyons, France; the night photographs of the burning oil gusher at Taft, Cal., and the driving tandem in Roman style, by Lieutenant Arreteau, of the French artillery, of forty untrained horses, four abreast. Other notable scenes were the demonstration of the new automatic device for collecting and dropping mail by moving trains and the "taking off" by Aviator Christofferson from a platform erected on the roof of an Oregon hotel. The automobile picture is a rare one, the camera showing the full details of a frightful smash—horrible, yet, after all, news. Also there is shown a picture of President Taft at work in his office; the photograph is notable in that the expression is thoroughly businesslike—there is an utter absence of the famous smile.

"WHAT THE DRIVER SAW" (Lubin), June 29.—Peter Lang is the driver of the hansom cab, which officiates in interesting happenings leading up to the marriage of May and Harry and the consequent defeat of Lord Mildmay. May Buckley and Harry Myers are the principals. The wife of the officiating clergyman—and, by the way, there was no other witness to the ceremony—became alarmed at the prolonged or rather protracted kiss indulged in by the newly married couple and tried to pry the two apart. The work of all in the cast is good.

"AFTER MANY YEARS" (Vitagraph), July 1.—Anne Schaefer and George C. Stanley are featured in this Western drama. An unterrified infant takes a creditable part also. There is good acting and some Western scenery.

"THE SPOILED CHILD" (Lubin), July 1.—A very satisfying picture whose interest centers in a situation that is human, although, in order to make it dramatic, it has been exaggerated. Two small boys (they are played excellently) are brothers. One is favored by their young parents (Arthur Johnson plays father; Lottie Brisco, mother), and, because he is spoiled, grows more and more selfish. It is not a deep picture, but a pleasing and pretty one. This is partly because of good acting and perfect photography.

Independent.

"AT CRIPPLE CREEK" (Reliance), July 17.—Two reels of lurid Western drama. The opening is a saloon scene, in which Dynamite Ann announces that she has decided to reform. As proof of that intention she assumes the care of two motherless children and also acts as protector to an orphan girl who has been lured to the mining camp by means of a false advertisement. There are one or two Indians, some bad men, some good men; an interior of a mine, which is reached by means of a basket and windlass. A child is kidnapped and thrown over a cliff, and is marvelously caught uninjured by a good Indian. There is a double wedding at the conclusion and simultaneously Dynamite Ann meets her death by a rifle shot. She is just able to request that her epitaph be "Dynamite Ann. She died right." There is some good photography and mountain scenery. One especially good picture is of a field of waving grain.

"FATHER AND THE BOYS" (Solax), July 3.—A fine comedy, with excellent photography. There are laughs aplenty. Blanche Cornwall, Billy Quirk and Lee Beggs are featured. Billy Quirk puts over one on the father and then on the older brother (Darwin Karr), and uses the latter's automobile for the honeymoon.

"THE SILENT CASTLE" (Gaumont), July 11.—A hand-colored film of remarkable beauty. There is a great ivy-covered castle, flanked by green lawns and a placid, walled stream. In its ingenuity the plot is worthy of the best French traditions. The story opens with Paul Aubrey, who has tired of the society of his wife, sitting with her at a table. He is reading a book, in which is described this remarkable castle. He falls asleep. We see him sitting in his chair, on the right half of the curtain, and on the left, through a clever piece of double exposure, he is seen riding horseback along the front of this castle. The camera follows him until he dismounts and enters the castle.

There are many persons in the structure, but all are motionless. It is like an animated figure in a still picture. In the sorcerer's room Paul accidentally drops a glass tube, and following the explosion the sorcerer appears. He gives Paul a drink of wine and informs him that with a ring he hands him he may restore to life the most beautiful of women. Paul comes upon a silent wedding feast. He restores the veiled bride, but she refuses to uncover her face. As they walk about the grounds the couple peer into the mirrorlike surface of the stream and Paul sees in the water the face of the bride. The two mount the horse of Paul and return to Paul's home. They enter the room where Paul sits asleep. As the bride removes her veil, disclosing a face of marvelous beauty, Paul's wife enters the room and kisses her sleeping husband. The vision vanishes, Paul awakes, greets his wife, and concludes she is, after all, the one for him—that the happiness of real life is greater than that of his dream.

"ANIMATED WEEKLY," June 24.—Interesting pictures of scenes at the Republican National Convention form the major portion of this week's list. One of the most notable pictures is that of the temporary $50,000 plant of the Christian Science Monitor of Boston, something novel even in daily newspaper enterprise. There was also a panoramic picture of the crowded convention hall.

"BETWEEN TWO FIRES" (Solax), July 5.—Drama that holds. There is an ingenious plot, and it is well brought out by Lee Beggs and Blanche Cornwall.

"PAT'S BREECHES" (Champion), July 1.—A farce comedy whose chief character is Pat, a street sweeper. He gets his breeches wet in the stream from a hose and schemes with the cook at a neighboring house to get them dried. Pat and his breeches both have amusing, but not very convincing adventures. It furnishes light, harmless entertainment, is well photographed and probably will be acceptable to most audiences.

"LITTLE OLD NEW YORK" (Champion), July 1.—A short series of views of East Side life in the Metropolis. A picture of the Hebrew market and the Chinese market are included, and, as though by way of contrast, a picture of the rich man's market, Wall Street, are given. It is well photographed, instructive and will be welcome in most places.

"WHEN HEARTS ARE TRUMPS" (Nestor), July 1.—An artistic romance in old Mexican costume, produced by Mr. Christie. It is set in a very elaborate, formal park, or private estate, of great beauty. In outline, the plot is old; it has served many pictures. There are a few unexpected twists in its development. We have the pretty heroine, her ambitious father, the rich lover and the poor lover. The picture's freshness comes in the way the elopement is handled. There is no vivid character drawing, but the situation is made very clear. The photographs are perfect.

"HISTORIC SAN DIEGO" (Nestor), July 1.—A short film with some good views of spots in San Diego with historic associations.

"HARD LUCK BILL" (Nestor), July 3.—A romantic comedy produced by Milton Fahrney, which is most amusingly wide-awake from the very start. It is an elopement picture, unusually clever in incidents. The sources of the fun it gives are; first, the characters. These are very natural, very human, and in the way they are contrasted show a moving picture maker who knows both his business and humanity. Secondly, these characters find in the picture a natural development in the story's action. Thirdly, the scenes are excellent and in them, the story is smoothly and clearly woven. The photography is, as usual, very good. It is a desirable offering. We enjoyed it very much.

"HEARTS AND MEMORIES" (Eclair), July 4.—A rural picture in which a scientist, on vacation, is, without intending it, a disturbing factor in a love story. He does his best to mend the trouble and time does the rest. There is nothing improbable in this situation, but the characters, as set forth, do not fit very convincingly into this particular story. The farmer, father of the heroine, is very poorly drawn; the girl herself and her country sweetheart are also not very convincing, but the girl's mother is perfectly set forth. The weakness in drawing these characters gives the picture a very artificial atmosphere. There are some pretty scenes and the photography is fair.

"THE SHERIFF OF STONY BUTTE" (Bison 101), July 2.—A love story of the West. The sheriff is shown as in love with a pretty girl of the valley. Her preferred lover is called Meynard. As the story develops, after a few scenes of love making, including a village dance, the sheriff discovers that Maynard is "Silver Spur," a notorious bandit who is "wanted." The climax comes when he attempts to arrest the man at the girl's house. It and the denouement are quite fresh. The picture is a good, interesting release; it is acceptably romantic; doesn't transgress the laws of probability, on the one hand, nor the laws of morality, on the other. It doesn't drag and both acting and scene-making are good. The photography is excellent.

"YOUNG WILD WEST LEADING A RAID" (Nestor), June 28.—A picture illustrating a typical wild West penny dreadful. One would naturally expect such a picture to be done in the burlesque vein; for otherwise, its appeal will be mostly to the gallery. As it is, it lacks amusing exaggeration, yet is exaggerated enough to be quite unconvincing to normal spectators. Yet none can deny that it is speedy and has an entertaining snap. The camera work is fair. Mr. Geo. Field plays "Young Wild West;" Miss Victoria Forde plays the heroine; Mr. Russel Basset plays a prominent role as the village mayor.

"THE COLONEL'S PERIL" (Bison 101), June 29.—A very thrilling picture, telling a love story of army life on the early frontier, and with incidents from an Indian raid that are fresh, natural and convincing. The Bison people have specialized on this kind of picture. They can do other things also, but they do frontier war scenes extremely well. This is only a one-reel offering, but it shows their work at its best.

The heroine of the picture (Miss Grandin) is daughter of an army sergeant. The hero, a good-looking young man, is the colonel's son. It opens with a few scenes at the post. The colonel learns of the romance and sends the boy away to an Eastern college. The son gets tired of it and enlists as a common soldier. He becomes a sergeant and is transferred to his father's post. The scenes that follow his arrival are very convincing, and at once the picture opens into a series of real thrills. The soldiers are called out to punish red-skins who have raided a settlement. The son heroically saves his father's life. The climax is fine as is the pretty, poetic denouement. The photography is good.

"CLOWNLAND" (Imp), June 22.—A circus picture with a newsboy for a hero and a big, first-class show for background. This little newsie has acted before in Imp pictures and is very clever. He has a very vivid dream of the antics of a lot of clowns. It is a good, well-made and very pleasing picture, well photographed and desirab'e.

CHARLES SIMONE.

Among the little army of boosters for the pictures will be found a clever and energetic young hustler, Mr. Charles Simone, who has been identified with the Nestor Company for some time. Mr. Simone is a favored child of Sunny Italy, hailing from Castellana. He received a liberal education in his native land and was studying for the priesthood when the call of the New World brought him to America. He soon mastered the English language and has since written a number of vaudeville acts and picture plays. As business manager of the Nestor Film Company he has done much to bring that brand of pictures to favorable notice. Possessing a pleasing manner, Mr. Simone has made many friends in the business and deserves great credit and confidence.

AN EVENING AT THE PICTURE SHOW.

On a recent evening I took my usual three-quarter-mile stroll down beautiful, shaded St. Mark's Avenue, Brooklyn, to Nostrand Avenue, to see some of Proprietor Machat's pictures. I was repaid. Here was the program:

"Lonesome Robert," Essanay; "Mysterious Egypt" and "Ranch Girls on a Rampage," Kalem; "The Puppet's Hour," Lubin; "Logging in the Maine Woods," Edison; "Jane Shore," C. G. P. C.

That, it is submitted to any exhibitor, is a good program. There is not a weak member in it. If there was a serious criticism to be offered, this writer would put it on Kalem for tacking on to the superb "Mysterious Egypt" such a jumble of hoydenish racketeers as the rampageous ranch girls. It was beyond question a descent from the sublime to the extremely ridiculous.

"Lonesome Robert" is a healthy drama, and it carries a healthy moral—that of kindness to the invalided. It demonstrates the truth in the old story of casting bread upon the waters. And, by the way, the lad who portrayed the cripple did his part exceedingly well, as likewise did all his associates theirs. In "The Puppet's Hour" there was a director's slip. It is not an uncommon one, either. A man in sound health, apparently 30 years old, sits down at a table and writes two notes. The chirography thrown on the screen is in the round, immature, characterless hand of a girl of ten! Offsetting this is the scene of the girl jilted because of her plainness, sitting in the red glow of an open grate burning old love letters—a picture as pathetic as it was effective, as appealing as it was dramatic. "Jane Shore" was well worthy of the embellishment of hand coloring. In depicting the old days the Continental companies have their American competitors at a disadvantage, for of the centuries-old gray walls we have none.

Come now to Edison's "Logging in the Maine Woods." Here is a film! We all know news print paper comes from the woods. But how many have any intelligent idea as to how that timber is conveyed from the spot where it first comes in contact with the axe? In this reel there is some marvelous photography—especially in the scene where the camera is placed at the back of the pile of logs being drawn by the horses.

Coming out of the show I complimented Mr. Machat on his program. "I am glad you liked it," he said. "I always try to have at least one educational feature; and if there are five persons in the audience who appreciate it I am repaid.

"How do I select my programs? Well, I have the manufacturers' announcements. These I go over carefully. Then I wait for my Moving Picture World. The 'Comments on the Films' tell the story. Do I rely on 'Comments'? Absolutely. Split reels? Well, I think there is one matter manufacturers should avoid. That is using in the second film the same people who figured in the first. It breaks the illusion. Changing scenes and costumes and disguising the characters makes no difference."

Chatting about plays and players, the writer confessed he was a Bunnyfiend. "Yes," said Mr. Machat, "I have a lot of them here. Why, do you know, I offered John Bunny fifty dollars if he would come up here some evening and just smile and shake hands with my people."

"And what was the answer?"

"He just smiled."

BLAIS.

A REAL LIVE BALLYHOO.

The Crystal Hall and Unique theaters on 14th Street, New York, the property of the Automatic Vaudeville Company, of which Mr. L. Kohn is president, have just completed arrangements for about the liveliest ballyhoo that any New York motion picture house has yet seen. They have planned in conjunction with the July 2nd Gaumont hand-colored release, "The Lion's Revenge," to exhibit a large caged male lion in the lobby of both their theaters. William Shork and John Flannigan, respectively managers of the Crystal Hall and Unique theaters, secured permission from the city executives to offer this live jungle ballyhoo on July 4th in the first house and the 17th in the second house. The beast is to be procured from the animal importing firm of Louis Ruhe, 48 Grand Street, New York City. By placing the lion in his lobby on July 4th and also by an attractive display of posters on "The Lion's Revenge," Mr. Shork predicts that an usually dull motion picture day will be positively converted into one of great profit through his novel advertising scheme. At the Unique Theater the entrance to the theater is being rearranged so as to accommodate the Jungle Ballyhoo in a position that will command quicker attention from the passing public.

Music for the Picture

BY CLARENCE E. SINN.

THE Republican convention added several people to our transient population last week, and the picture theaters—at least those in the loop district—gathered in many dimes and nickels from the least insane of the milling mob.

I dropped into the Fine Arts Building over on Michigan Avenue one night and saw a mighty good show. The projection was good, so far as I am able to judge; at any rate, the picture was clear and steady. The program was made up of six reels of recent Licensed releases—a well-selected variety, by the way, and the music was of a high-class order. Mr. Lincoln J. Carter, the manager, is an old-time theatrical manager, author and producer, and a few years ago was considered a master in scenic realism. Remembering this realistic tendency, I rather expected to find it showing itself in elaborate sound effects. But not so. Mr. Carter is one of those who defines the motion picture as "silent drama," and he says it is "sheer nonsense to add some of the noises indicated by the picture and leave out the others which are just as plainly suggested." His audience apparently agrees with him, and that is the test, of course. It all depends on your audience. I believe if you are playing to an audience that doesn't care for sound effects (and many people do not), leave 'em out. If they like them, put 'em in. Mr. Carter does, however, like good music with his pictures and has secured the services of two excellent pianists, Mr. Paul Malcolm and Miss Laura Gansel.

The program is shown two days except the Sunday bill, which is run for that day only. June 19th and 20th was as follows: "The Nipper's Lullaby" (Vitagraph), "The Choir of Densmore" (Lubin), "Her Diary" (Vitagraph), "Broncho Billy's Gratitude" (Essanay), "A Man in the Making" (Edison), and "Target Practice of Atlantic Fleet" (Edison). This last was shown without musical accompaniment. I caught the music to but one picture, which Miss Gansel accompanied as follows:

"A MAN IN THE MAKING" (Edison).

1. Neutral (Allegretto) till after "A Raid" (when crowd rushes out of gambling room). Then:
2. Agitato (light) till after he jumps wall and girl faces him.
3. Sentimental till "Breaking Away."
4. Stein Song till "Her House."
5. Sentimental when he enters his own room. "Her Bright Smile Haunts Me Still" till "Dick Hears of the Y. M. C. A."
6. Sentimental till three men meet.
7. Neutral-long (allegretto or light waltz) till gymnasium scene.
8. March movement (timed with action) till change of scene.
9. Plaintive till "The Other Fellow Has Joined, Etc."
10. Allegro moderato till change of scene.
11. Neutral (waltz or allegretto) till close.

* * *

I passed part of a day in Milwaukee in my annual jaunt to surrounding towns, and spent a few profitable hours at some of the many excellent picture theaters. The Alhambra is the leading house there, and its excellent orchestra has been often mentioned in these pages. This is one of the attractions of the house. Another which does not come under the head of music impressed me very much, and that is the play-room for the little tots. It is spacious, contains swings, cradles, a sand pile, a toboggan and other things to amuse the kiddies while mamma is enjoying the pictures, and is in charge of a nurse.

The Princess Theater is another picture theater of the Saxe enterprises. They have an excellent orchestra under the direction of Mr. Louis De Santis, consisting (like the Alhambra) of violin, piano (and organ), flute, clarinet and drums. They follow the pictures with care and intelligence and their work is a feature of the program. They make it a point whenever possible to accompany one dramatic picture with the organ alone, which instrument is handled in a capable manner. Indeed, I found the music for the pictures in Milwaukee to be of a high order throughout. "The American," a smaller house near the Princess, in which one would expect to find piano alone or piano and drums at most, has a violin as well. The music here was much better than the average and fitted the picture. The "Vaudette," the "Butterfly," and other houses I am told employ orchestras, but as my time was limited I did not see or hear them.

* * *

Suggestions are offered for music to Kalem's "An Arabian Tragedy":

1. Oriental ("Mystic Shrine" or "Imam") till caption, "The Deserted Wife."
2. "In a Lotus Field" (Bratton) till "One Year Later."
3. "Moorish Parade" till letter is shown; then—
4. Sentimental till "Ayab with a Number, Etc."
5. "Hindoo Priest's Incantation" (Bendix) till "Next Morning."
6. "In the Soudan" (first half only) till "Haunted by the Vision."
7. Second half of same number—short—till "Fatima Starts on Her Quest."
8. Pathetic till camels seen running.
9. Short agitato (semi-mysterious) till she dismounts.
10. Plaintive till close.

HORSLEY IN THE AIR?

"Up in the air." There's where the film situation has been for the past few weeks. David Horsley, maker of "The Worthwhile Film," has the faculty of anticipating events, and some time ago he went up in the air with the well-known aviator Glenn Martin. He enjoyed the sensation so much that he continued taking aerial flights until now Mr. Horsley can manage any sort of bucking aeroplane. The above illustration shows Mr. Horsley in the airship "Nestoria," in which he soon hopes to make some transcontinental trips, journeying back and forth from the Nestor plant at Bayonne, N. J., to the Nestor Studios at Hollywood, Cal.

David Horsley as Aviator.

ROCHELLE, ILL., GETS $8,000 PICTURE HOUSE.

A. Yeager, Mrs. A. Kenneth Godshall and Wesley Yeager are building an $8,000 picture house on Washington Street, Rochelle, Ill., which will seat 400.

"The Siege of Petersburg" (Kalem)

Reviewed by Louis Reeves Harrison.

IN a study of military events I think it would be a wise plan to direct all energies toward the causes, actions and results of battles or depict the services and fortunes of leaders and real heroes rather than merely inject a mediocre story to be supported by the clash of armed forces. Such a presentation on the screen might stir the blood of those witnessing it and, at the same time offer something of value in historical stimulus or even prove instructive.

It is in most of us to feel a deep interest in those great struggles which have decided the fate of nations, though our sentiments may grow out of a destructive tendency of the human race. The fighting instinct is in all of us—it is the real principle of war—and it becomes highly dramatic in strong presentations because it represents tremendous forces set in motion by the grim necessities of survival. It fascinates while it appalls and stirs our blood though it may involve the shedding of that in the veins of our bravest and best men.

In such photoplays a private quite as well as an officer can be taken for the central figure if his character is elevated by showing that fine motives called him into service and actuated him in the discharge of his duty. The audience likes to follow the fortunes of a soldier through this exciting kind of experience, no matter how dark the background and no matter what the sacrifices or triumphs, but he should play up to the higher importance of events wherever the play is designed to have true historical value.

The play in review, "The Siege of Petersburg," would obtain a stronger grip at the outset if the high action began earlier. There is an undeniable attraction in a play which starts with movement, especially when it is located in war times, and keeps going while introductions are being made, and the ancient triangle—two men and a woman—in this case could be easily handled while the stirring events are in progress. Then the old story of two men in love with the same woman with a sacrifice made by the successful suitor in favor of the other fellow from motives of gratitude would be more spirited.

In the Kalem production the cast is as follows:

Judge Pemberton.....Harry Hallam
Mrs. Pemberton.....Helen Lindroth
Charlotte Pemberton, their daughter.....Anna Nilsson
Maury Van Dorn, Lieutenant, C. S. A.....Guy Coombs
Dan Frost (poor white trash).....Hal Clements
Milly, his sister.....Marian Cooper
General Mahone.....J. Barstow Budworth
Mammy Jennie.....Carl Hobby
Sam.....Eddie Cook

The first part of this release is subtitled to cover the period immediately preceding the Battle of Appomattox, when Grant's forces were advancing on Petersburg, and starts with Charlotte Pemberton's engagement announcement. She entrusts her future into the keeping of Lieut. Van Dorn. Now the second man comes on the scene in the person of Dan Frost, ruined by war and moving into Petersburg with his crippled sister, a character probably created to show why he was staying at home while all other able-bodied men had long before taken the field. No sympathy is excited by his being "ruined" under circumstances where that was the common fate of brave men risking their lives for the cause. Frost, to be a genuine hero, should have been shown from the outset as having obeyed the common impulse of the time, one that enobled ambition and dignified manhood. He is given a vacant cabin on the Pemberton plantation and proceeds to fall in love with his benefactor's daughter.

Van Dorn and Charlotte make an effort to relieve the pressing necessities of the lame girl, but Frost refuses to see anything but patronizing charity in their act of kindness. Van Dorn gets caught in a rainstorm which dashes furiously on the cabin window and comes straight down where seen through the door, and he seeks shelter within it while the lame girl is there alone and unprotected. In evidence of his tender-hearted charity and pure sympathy for Milly, the lame sister of Frost, the young Southern officer kisses her ardently as Frost appears on the scene. Frost lets him go unkicked.

Van Dorn now returns to his company, having become engaged to one girl and kissed another, and the audience in front sits wondering where it is to find the central figure of sympathetic interest. Frost now decides to enlist—the war is nearly over—so he leaves the blind sister in charge of Judge Pemberton and joins the army. Before leaving he kisses Miss Charlotte Pemberton and we are led to infer that she liked his style so well that she wanted more of the same kind.

These incidents cover nine full scenes and three-quarters of the first reel, whereas they could have been done in one, leaving greater space for the finer action cramped into the final three scenes with some idea of the status of military affairs at that time and place. While Charlotte was announcing her engagement to Van Dorn, in Scene One, Frost could have appeared in the uniform of a soldier and consigned his lame sister to Judge Pemberton as an old friend. Frost's attitude toward Charlotte could have been shown on the spot in the manner with which he received the announcement of her engagement, and he could have stolen a kiss at parting in desperation, a tiny compensation for what he had lost while away fighting for his country.

In the old-fashioned novel the artist detailed to embellish it with pictures had to wait until the author had dragged his hero through a dozen or so of biographical chapters before there was anything to illustrate that would stimulate curiosity or interest, but the playwright deals less with any such dull and protracted series of events than with a short, sharp crisis in human affairs. He must demonstrate his skill from the outset by starting the action in a clear and interesting manner, while enforcing the characterization by impressionist methods.

The three last scenes of the first reel are fairly crowded with pictures of war such as the audience enjoys. A Federal detachment attempts to obtain control of a bridge over the Appomattox River—a rude map of the situation could have been shown for educational purposes—and a lively engagement follows. A fire bomb starts flames at the center, where Van Dorn becomes involved and wounded. Frost now appears as a hero in a rescue that is as good as any shown in battle, and we begin to sit up.

Scene from Kalem Production "The Siege of Petersburg."

The finest scene in the play occurs when Frost is dragging Van Dorn across the burning bridge and it gives way, dropping both into the supporting timbers. Frost's struggle to lift Van Dorn back again might well have been photographed in small scope. It was done amid real flames in addition to smoke provided for such occasions and by an actor of fine type. Hal Clements, as "Dan Frost," is by far the most impressive figure in the play, enlisting attention by personality where the characterization is too weak to deserve the name.

The second reel is subtitled as covering the great mining operations incident to the siege, and the action is supposed to take place "one year later." It is chiefly concerned with the digging of a famous tunnel beneath the Confederate trenches, an act which scared the good citizens of Petersburg nearly out of their senses but did no material damage to the army of defense. We are shown the tunnel in process of construction, the work of a spy in locating it, his report, and the efforts made to place it by Confederate officers. In order to keep the Federal force in ignorance of the discovery, a battery is kept in action near the mine, and Frost is among those serving the guns.

Scene from "The Siege of Petersburg" (Kalem).

Van Dorn now sees his opportunity. He has learned that Charlotte no longer loves him and that she loves Frost. He forges an order removing Frost from the post of danger and takes the latter's place, well knowing that he may lose his life by so doing. There is a magnificent explosion and Federal troops are seen coming through the breech it caused. It looks easy for them at first, but the Confederates are ready for them and a veritable slaughter ensues, ending in a repulse of the bluecoats.

All this, if my memory serves me right, is historically correct and correspondingly valuable. I cannot help praising the director for his hard work in all such details and his fidelity to truth where it is indicated. Van Dorn is killed by the explosion and Frost gets the girl he kissed so effectively.

I have mentioned the historical play at the beginning of this review as of most value when the principal events are logically shown and not involved with the fortunes of minor characters unless one alone participates as a marked central figure. There is another kind of play which should not be confused with those titled, so as to give the impression that they are pictures of events actually occurring and it may carry a more impressive lesson, although war is merely used as a background.

In such plays we are directly concerned with the effect of war on the individual. We may show its cruelty, its ferocity, its outrages, its oppression, and yet ennoble those who fought for principle. We may show how progress is achieved by the overthrow of the oppressor; how outrage and wrong may have been punished; how brutal arrogance and despotic cruelty have been relegated to the dark ages. We may take up the noble and self-denying part that women play, the physical suffering and hardships they endure with fortitude, or how they filled the gaps and ravages of war. We may contrast their tender offices with man's harsh ones, their reparative work with his of destruction.

Strong plays of that kind must have a purpose back of the story told, but the story can easily dominate the situation and only use scenes of violence for dramatic setting. I commend such photodramas to the Kalem Company because they have in Kenean Buel a director equipped by experience to put them over, because they are more satisfying to the average audience than semi-historical ones, and because we have nearly outgrown the need of war unless it be directed against those who ruthlessly destroy so much human joy that should be the common portion. Earth needs:

"Sons to construct and daughters to adorn
"A beautiful, new world where there shall be
"Fewer and finer people, happiness
"And opportunity and peace for all."

"THE UNKNOWN BRIDE" (Rex).

Rather a fanciful tale this. It hovers near the line of improbability, although being within the limits of possibility. The general idea of the story is the aversion of a wealthy old man to his son's attachment to a dashing and beautiful actress. It is a Marion Leonard picture, in which that stunning young lady plays the part of the music hall artiste.

The old gentleman and his son quarrel a great deal about the young actress and the father in anger finally disinherits the son and determines to get married to make sure the son can never inherit his wealth. In reality, however, the show girl is far from being the frivolous creature that the old man imagines her to be. She leads a frugal life at home and is a lady of good principles. When she learns that her lover is to be disinherited on her account, this girl decides to give him up rather than be the cause of his undoing.

Meanwhile the old gentleman is casting about for a wife. Anyone will do. He would rather his money should go to a beggar than fall into the hands of a designing actress. He has agents going about asking young women if they would like to marry an old man with lots of money. One of the first of the agents accosts the actress and makes her the same offer. In her despondent frame of mind she is willing to seize the opportunity in order to place an effectual barrier between herself and the man she does not wish to harm. She marries the old man. Right after the ceremony he dies and leaves her all his money. Thus is the son cut off without a cent, but strange to say he suffers no financial embarrassment. He marries the widow.

The same theme might have been worked out as a comedy, but in this case it is given a dramatic turn which is quite satisfactory.

NEW INSTALLATIONS FURNISHED BY HALLBERG.

Among the new installations furnished during the past week, J. H. Hallberg, "The Economizer Man," reports the following:

T. H. Dakin & Son, New Berlin, N. Y., one simplex moving picture machine, with Hallberg A. C. economizer and full line of supplies. Haines & Wyman, Dexter, Maine, one Powers No. 6, with Hallberg A. C. economizer and supplies. David Miller, Jersey City, No. 4 Standard. Covert & Diamond, Mt. Union, Pa., No. 5 Powers. H. Hirschfield, Philadelphia, one Edison and one Powers mechanisms; Chas. Beseler Company, New York, one Edison mechanism.

NEW FEATURE FILM EXCHANGE.

Oscar H. Bittner is general manager, and Oliver F. Bittner, secretary and treasurer of the Eastern Feature Film Exchange, of Mauch Chunk, Pa., recently organized to dispense feature films. The company has secured "Gypsy Blood" for Eastern Pennsylvania and Delaware, and "The Auto Bandits of Paris" for Eastern Pennsylvania. Exclusive features will be the policy of the new exchange, one of which will be released each week. Up to date, business has been very satisfactory.

JOINS POWERS PLAYERS.

Edwin August, a Former Biograph Star, Has Been Secured To Pose for the Universal Film Manufacturing Company.

Going on the assumption that the best talent is none too good for the Independents, Edwin August has been secured to play leads in the Powers Picture Plays. That Mr. August will be a valuable acquisition to the Powers Stock Company goes without saying, for he is one of the best known leading men now posing before the camera. He was for seven months leading man in the Edison Stock Company, appearing in notable films, having an important role in "David Copperfield," "The Big Scoop," "With Bridges Burned," "Stars and Stripes" and "The Little Fiddler."

Edwin August.

Going from the Edison Company to the Biograph players he has played leads for the last two years, appearing in important roles in "The Golden Slipper," "The Smile of a Child," "His Lesson," "The Revenue Man and the Girl," "The Eternal Mother," "A Blot in the 'Scutcheon," "A Country Cupid," "Simple Charity," "Conscience," "A Wreath of Orange Blossoms," "The School Teacher," "The Waif," "The Trail of Books," and "Madam Rex."

The legitimate stage experience of Mr. August has fitted him admirably for the pictures, as he was with Otis Skinner for two years and with Mrs. Leslie Carter, and in the revival of "Shore Acres." He was in the original production of "Going Some" and in various stock companies, notably with Belasco, in Los Angeles, Studebaker, in Chicago, and with Melbourne MacDowell, in St. Louis. He was a member of the Brady Company in "Way Down East" for two years, playing leads one season and heavy the next. He will be under the direction of Mr. Frank Powell in the Powers Picture Plays.

MAJESTIC CHANGES RELEASES.

The Majestic Film Company announces that it will release, on July 9, "The Lost Messenger" in place of its split reel, containing two comedies, "Father's Bust" and "The Widower's Widow," which reel is now scheduled for release on July 14. Synopsis of "The Lost Messenger" will be found in this issue, while descriptions of "Father's Bust" and "The Widower's Widow" can be found on page 74 of our last week's issue.

MISS GENE GAUNTIER RETURNS.

Miss Gene Gauntier, one of the Kalem favorites, who has been playing with the Kalem company in Egypt and the Holyland for the past six months, arrived in New York on Friday, June 28, on a brief vacation. Miss Gauntier's chief mission in returning at this time was to bring the negatives of the five-reel subject dealing with the life of Christ, taken by the Kalem company in the Holyland. Miss Gauntier is at present at the home of her parents in Kansas City, Mo. She will return to New York to assist in assembling the scenes of the big picture and will then join the Kalem players in Ireland.

Miss Gene Gauntier.

WARNER'S FEATURES HAS MANY BRANCH OFFICES.

Mr. Warner, of Warner's Features, has just returned from an extensive western trip during which he established Warner's Features branch offices at Cleveland, O., Pittsburgh, Pa., Indianapolis, Ind., St. Louis, Mo., and Philadelphia, Pa. By August 1st offices will be established in every principal city in the United States. Mr. Warner promises some interesting announcements for exhibitors in next week's MOVING PICTURE WORLD.

A SOUTH AMERICAN EXPEDITION.

Captain Fritz Duquesne, author, hunter and soldier of fortune, is said to be on his way to the wilds of South America to make motion pictures. The expedition is under the auspices of the General Film Publicity & Sales Company, of New York. A series of pictures from the unknown places in South America should be of great interest.

SOME BIG PIECE OF GLASS.

The Mirror Picture Screen Company has installed one of its screens in the Grand Theatre, Rochester, N. Y. This particular screen is 14 feet high, but our informant does not state the width. Presumably it is 18 or 20 feet in width. Another order is being filled for a theater at Rockaway Beach, N. Y., which will belong to the record breaking class.

AMERICAN IN MARKET FOR INDIAN STORIES.

With its two Western companies, one in Santa Barbara and the other in Chicago, the American Film Mfg. Co. announces itself in the market for some good Indian stories of one-reel length. Good prices will be paid for acceptable manuscript.

Manufacturers Advance Notes

"FOR VALOUR" (Edison).

Lovers of the strenuous in photoplay will be pleased with the Edison picture entitled, "For Valour," written by Talbot Mundy and produced by Mr. J. S. Dawley's company in the Bermudas. The action centers around a girl, Rosie Webster, impersonated by Laura Sawyer. Two British soldiers, "Rat" Brunton (Richard Neill), popular with the girls, but said to be a coward at heart, and Bill Swanwick (Benjamin Wilson) honest, but shy, are in love with Rosie, who divides her favors fairly between them, until she finally gives her heart to Brunton. About this time, orders come from headquarters directing the men to proceed to South Africa, where they expect to see active service. The prospect of losing her lover is very distressing to Rosie and she parts with him with reluctance, but exacts a promise from honest Bill Swanwick to look out for her intended, and bring him safely back to her.

The scene is transferred to Africa, and the detachment to which the two boys belong is ordered to storm a difficult position held by the enemy. In this scene the members of the second battalion of the Queen's Regiment, stationed at Bermuda, is pressed into service, and there is some realistic fighting portrayed in the picture as the trained soldiers swarm up the hill and drive the Arabs at the point of the bayonet. In the scrimmage "Rat" Brunton's true character appears. Swanwick has been wounded, and for a wounded man to fall into the hands of the Arabs is certain death. He has saved Brunton already by his alertness, but when he goes down, Brunton is about to fly, panic stricken from the field. Drawing a revolver, Swanwick compels Brunton to carry him to safety.

Scene from "For Valour" (Edison).

Witnessing the act, the Colonel believes Brunton to be the hero and awards him a medal for bravery. Swanwick, for the honor of the regiment, refuses to expose his comrade's treachery. After the difficulty is over, the attachment returns to its former post, and Brunton exhibits his medal with some show of pride to Rosie, who looks upon him as a real hero. At this point Swanwick appears and compels Brunton to tell the true story of the incident. This, of course, turns Rosie's love to hate and honest Bill Swanwick wins out in the end.

This picture was taken at a time when the famous Bermuda lilies were in full bloom, and some very beautiful scenes are shown of the field of lilies. The rugged shores of the Bermuda Islands contribute to the beauty and grandeur of the scenic effects. For realism, the fight between the soldiers and the Arabs could hardly be improved upon in actual warfare. Altogether it is an excellent picture with a good story, adequately portrayed.

"DOWN JAYVILLE WAY." (Essanay).

This splendid Essanay production is unquestionably a revelation in rural comedy. Using the simplest of plots, a charming story has been constructed rich in comedy values, perfect in point of interpretation and a triumph of artistic photography.

The tale concerns two country boys who love the same girl. She cannot decide her choice, neither can her father until he says the one who gets the minister first can marry her. Of course, a great race ensues, both bring the parson back and the point is still undecided. However, the minister solves the difficulty by falling in love with the maid himself, asks the old people's consent to their marriage, they heartily agree, and the couple drive off to procure a license. A moment later the two boys are led out to the road by the old farmer, who points out the disappearing buggy wherein sits the minister with his arm about the maid. Realizing they have been badly stung, the boys make up their old grudge, lock arms and amble into town. Here they meet their old girls, who instantly snub them and flirt off. But the boys are desperate, overtake them and after some explaining and much persuasion win them back and a double wedding ensues.

As will be readily seen, the story is charmingly simple, and thoroughly rural. The production abounds in beautiful views of country scenery, and the photography throughout is of the highest quality and of rich tonal value. John Steppling and Howard Missimer create a barrel of laughs to the foot in the roles of the two lovers; Lillian Branscombe is captivating as the girl; Dwight Mead plays the minister, and Harry Cashman and Helen Dunbar the old folks.

Scene from "Down Jayville Way" (Essanay).

The picture will be released Friday, July 12th.

"SIGNAL LIGHTS" (Essanay).

A thrilling railroad melodrama is always intensely interesting to all lovers of good photoplays, and this subject from the Essanay Eastern Stock Company is splendid in plot-strength and power.

Jim Drake, station agent at Winslow Junction, has a little baby girl, Sue, and the tot comes with her mother each day when daddy's lunch is brought. Sue takes great interest in daddy's work, and Jim stands her up on the table and shows her how to operate the chains that turn the signal lights outside. She is delighted and becomes quite expert. One night Mrs. Drake is called away to nurse a neighbor's sick child and leaves Sue sleeping in the house. Awakening, and finding herself alone, the little one determines to go to her daddy at the station. Meanwhile, Jim receives a notice from the Division superintendent that No. 6 is running as a

"special" with bullion from Goldfield and will not stop at the Junction. Setting the signal for a clear track, he lights his pipe and starts to read his paper. Two tramps find the message that Drake has carelessly dropped from his pocket on the platform, hold him up at gun's point, bind and gag him and thrust him under the table. Turning the signal light to stop the train, they hide near by and wait. Meanwhile, little Sue comes to the station, enters, cannot find her daddy, sees the signal light chains, climbs up on the table and unconsciously turns the danger signal back to "clear track ahead." A few moments later the "special" roars through the Junction, and the baffled tramps, seeing the reversed signal, hasten away with muttered curses. Searching for Sue, Mrs. Drake comes into the station office, releases Jim, and the delighted agent clasps little Sue to his breast when she tells him she reversed the signal and thereby foiled the attempted robbery.

Scene from "Signal Lights" (Essanay).

Francis X. Bushman is splendid in the role of Drake; Martha Russell is the wife, and Baby Lynch, a wonderfully clever child actress, carries off the heroine honors in a way that will delight all picture-lovers who see the film. The two tramps are played by Frank Dayton and Bryant Washburn.

The production has been put on with all attention to detail. The reversing of the signal lights is vividly shown, and the film has been tinted in a most clever manner to bring out the wonderful effects absolutely true to life. The photography is splendid and of the finest quality. The film is booked for release Tuesday, July 9th.

HULSEY BUILDS ANOTHER PICTURE HOUSE.

Mr. E. H. Hulsey, who owns and operates picture houses in Galveston, Houston, Oklahoma City and elsewhere, announces that he has purchased the building at Elm and Akard Streets, Dallas, Tex., and will convert it into a first class picture house. The expenditure will involve about $40,000, and no expense will be spared in giving the structure all modern improvements. One of the features of the house will be a $5,000 pipe organ.

"UNDER TWO FLAGS."

A Gem Two-Reel Picture by Director Nicholls—Picturesque and Oriental.

Ouida's novel, "Under Two Flags," enjoyed a worldwide popularity only a few years ago. As a play it was among the big successes of the season during which it appeared. As a photoplay, the same thing, without words, has enough life left in it to make it a strong drama of action and virility. It is probable that the element of action which the story contains is what made it a good novel as well as a good play. This picture, which was seen during the current week, is singularly independent of sub-titles. In fact, there were none at all in the print seen by the reviewer, and the story told itself well enough. However, there must be sub-titles where there are lapses of time, and such are the only ones needed in the cinematographic reproduction of "Under Two Flags."

The scenes in the latter half of the story afford opportunities for oriental effects, by virtue of the fact that the scenes are laid in northern Africa, somewhere near the desert. The conflicts between the French soldiers and the fighting dervishes are extremely well arranged and handled. The producer has succeeded well in simulating the barren waste of desert sand. A standstorm also is cleverly done by the aid of photographic manipulation. The scenes portraying soldiery and clashes of arms are especially well handled and full of rapid action.

Scene from "Under Two Flags" (Gem).

The principal character, of course, is "Cigarette," an orphan girl, known among the soldiers as the child of the army and a soldier of France, a part which is skillfully taken by Miss Vivian Preston, a talented young actress. The part of the errant soldier is done extremely well by Mr. Hershale Mayal.

The picture closes with the apparition of a rude wooden cross marking a grave in the desert, bearing the inscription, "Cigarette, Child of the Army—Soldier of France."

It will be a strong feature full of red blood of life—one that can be advertised on its merits as a thrilling picture play.

HAS AUTOMOBILE PATRONAGE.

The Knickerbocker Playhouse, situated at the corner of Euclid Avenue and Eighty-Third Street, Cleveland, Ohio, boasts of an automobile patronage. The location of the Knickerbocker Playhouse is in the strictly residential neighborhood of fashionable East Cleveland. The seating capacity of the house is 1100. Orchestra and balcony prices are 10 and 20 cents, while 35 cents is charged for the auto boxes at the rear. The Knickerbocker's policy is first-run Independent pictures. A seven-piece string orchestra furnishes music. E. N. Downs is the manager.

AMERICAN MOVES ITS WESTERN STUDIO.

The American Film Mfg. Co. moved its Western studio last week from La Mesa to Santa Barbara, So. Calif. The new location will give the Western company equally good backgrounds for its pictures. The actuating reason for the move was the fact that nearly all good locations in and about La Mesa had been extensively used in "Flying A" pictures.

Calendar of Independent Releases.

Releasing Through Universal Company.

CURRENT RELEASES.

SUNDAY, JULY 7th, 1912.

REX—The Unknown Bride (Drama) .....
ECLAIR—For Love (Drama) .....
ECLAIR—Arabian Theaters (Educational) .....

MONDAY, JULY 8th, 1912.

IMP—The Parson and the Medicine Man (Drama) ...1000
NESTOR—The Flower of the Forest (Drama) .....
CHAMPION—The Gypsy Bride (Drama) .....

TUESDAY, JULY 9th, 1912.

ECLAIR—A Double Misunderstanding (Com.-Dr.).....
BISON—Reconciled (Drama) .....
GEM—Under Two Flags (2 Reels—Drama) .....

WEDNESDAY, JULY 10th, 1912.

NESTOR—A Gentleman of Fortune (Drama) .....
POWERS—Tangled (Comedy) .....
POWERS—A Leap Year Delusion (Comedy) .....

THURSDAY, JULY 11th, 1912.

ECLAIR—The Cedarville Scandal (Com.) .....
IMP—Caught in the Flash (Com.-Dr.) 1000
REX—The Greater Love (Drama) .....

FRIDAY, JULY 12th, 1912.

AMBROSIO—(No Release This Date) .....
NESTOR—Young Wild West Cornered by Apaches (Drama) .....
POWERS—Her Life Story (Dr.) .....
VICTOR—In Swift Waters (Dr.) .....

SATURDAY, JULY 13th, 1912.

BISON—Just in Time (Drama) .....
IMP—The Wrong Weigh (Comedy)..... 600
IMP—Gov. Wilson at His Summer Home (Topical).....
MILANO—The Wolf's Prey (2 Reels—Dr.) .....

ADVANCE RELEASES.

SUNDAY, JULY 14th, 1912.

REX—The Mother Heart (Drama) .....
ECLAIR—Artful Contran (Comedy) .....
ECLAIR—Across the Caucasus (Scenic) .....

MONDAY, JULY 15th, 1912.

IMP—Hearts in Conflict (Drama) 1000
NESTOR—(Title Not Reported) .....
CHAMPION—The Call of the West (Drama) .....

TUESDAY, JULY 16th, 1912.

ECLAIR—The Dreamers (Drama) .....
BISON—(Title Not Reported) .....
GEM—Under Two Flags (2-Reel Drama) .....

WEDNESDAY, JULY 17th, 1912.

NESTOR—(Title Not Reported) .....
POWERS—Getting Even (Comedy) .....

THURSDAY, JULY 18th, 1912.

ECLAIR—That Loving Man (Comedy) .....
IMP—Winning the Latonia Derby (Drama) 1000
REX—(Title Not Reported) .....

FRIDAY, JULY 19th, 1912.

AMBROSIO—(No Release This Date) .....
NESTOR—(Title Not Reported) .....
POWERS—(Title Not Reported) .....
VICTORA—(Title Not Reported) .....

SATURDAY, JULY 20th, 1912.

BISON—(Title Not Reported) .....
IMP—Building a Church in a Day (Vocational) 400
IMP—The Foreign Invasion (Comedy) 600
MILANO—(Title Not Reported) .....

Releasing Through Film Supply Company.

CURRENT RELEASES.

SUNDAY, JULY 7th, 1912.

MAJESTIC—The Cook Came Back (Comedy).....
THANHOUSER—The Portrait of Lady Anne (Drama)...

MONDAY, JULY 8th, 1912.

AMERICAN—Where There's a Heart (Drama).....1000
COMET—The Poughkeepsie Intercollegiate Regatta (Sporting) 1000

TUESDAY, JULY 9th, 1912.

GAUMONT—The Lion's Revenge (Drama).....
MAJESTIC—The Lost Messenger (Drama).....
THANHOUSER—Pa's Medicine (Com.-Dr.).....
THANHOUSER—The Hazers Hazed (Comedy).....

WEDNESDAY, JULY 10th, 1912.

AMERICAN—The Fall of Black Hawk (2 Reels—His.)....2000
GAUMONT—Gaumont Weekly (Topical).....
RELIANCE—Grandpa (Drama).....
SOLAX—Winsome but Wise (Comedy).....

THURSDAY, JULY 11th, 1912.

AMERICAN—The Vanishing Race (Drama).....1000
GAUMONT—Love's Floral Tribute (Drama).....

FRIDAY, JULY 12th, 1912.

LUX—Spiffkin's New Job (Comedy)..... 567
LUX—Ponto's Little Joke (Comedy)..... 393
SOLAX—Hotel Honeymoon (Comedy).....
THANHOUSER—Nursie and the Knight (Com.-Dr.).....

SATURDAY, JULY 13th, 1912.

GREAT NORTHERN—Circumstantial Evidence (Drama).
GREAT NORTHERN—Moving Pictures (Comedy).....
COMET—Lights and Shadows of Old Kentucky (Drama)..1000
RELIANCE—The Toy Phone (Drama).....

ADVANCE RELEASES.

SUNDAY, JULY 14th, 1912.

MAJESTIC—Father's Bust (Comedy) .....
MAJESTIC—The Widower's Widow (Comedy) .....
THANHOUSER—The Finger of Scorn (Drama) .....

MONDAY, JULY 15th, 1912.

AMERICAN—The Fatal Mirror (Drama) 1000
COMET—Reggie Breaks the College Rules (Comedy).1000

TUESDAY, JULY 16th, 1912.

GAUMONT—Love's Surest Proof (Drama) .....
MAJESTIC—In Her Brother's Defense (Drama).....
THANHOUSER—Vengeance Is Mine (Drama) .....

WEDNESDAY, JULY 17th, 1912.

AMERICAN—In the Nick of Time (Drama) .....
GAUMONT—Gaumont Weekly (Topical) .....
RELIANCE—At Cripple Creek (Drama) .....
SOLAX—Slippery Jim (Drama) .....

THURSDAY, JULY 18th, 1912.

AMERICAN—(Title Not Reported) .....
GAUMONT—A Mid-Channel Romance (Drama) .....

FRIDAY, JULY 19th, 1912.

LUX—Stones That Rebound (Drama) 970
SOLAX—The Four Flush Actor (Comedy) .....
THANHOUSER—The Ranchman and the Hungry Bird (Comedy-Drama) .....

SATURDAY, JULY 20th, 1912.

GREAT NORTHERN—Almost a Tragedy (Com.-Dr.)
GREAT NORTHERN—Uncle Reuben Goes to Town (Comedy) .....
COMET—(Title Not Given) .....
RELIANCE—Love Me, Love My Dog (Comedy-Dr.)..

VITAGRAPH NOTES.

Captain A. E. Smith returned from California on Monday, July 1st. He reports everything in fine shape at Santa Monica and the Vitagraph Western company, under the command of Rollin D. Sturgeos is flourishing like a green bay tree.

"As You Like It," with Rose Coghlan as Rosalind, was produced this week in the Italian Garden of Commodore J. Stuart Blackton's residence. Rose looked quite youthful in tights and jacket. Jimmy Young and Maurice Costello made a very shapely support and it's a question who will attract the most attention in this histrionic masterpiece of Shakespearean art.

"Rip Van Winkle" as produced by the Vitagraph players and Robert McQuade in the title role is now ready for release and it will be looked forward to with much anticipation. Miss Rose E. Tapley makes a very attractive and impressive Lena. Altogether it is a splendid and realistic portrayal of Washington Irving's celebrated story. It is a two-reel subject.

"Beau Brummell" (James Young as Beau) is a great piece of work. Every feature of it is well done; acting, scenery and costuming are excellent. The story is one of intense interest and it is told in two reels.

EXCLUSIVE BOOKINGS.

THE AUTO BANDITS OF PARIS—The Great Two-Reel Sensation.
TOM BUTLER—The Big Detective Production in 3 Parts.
GIPSY BLOOD—In 3 Parts, with Asta Nielsen, the World's Greatest Actress, in the Title Role.
THE WESTERN TWINS FALL ROUND-UP—In 3 Parts. 1911 CHEYENNE—In 3 Parts. Write or wire for open dates.
EASTERN FEATURE FILM EXCHANGE, Mauch Chunk, Pa.

Calendar of Licensed Releases.

CURRENT RELEASES.

MONDAY, JULY 8th, 1912.

BIOGRAPH—An Indian Summer (Drama) .....
KALEM—The Organ Grinder (Drama) .....
KALEM—Nile Hippopotamus (Educational) .....
LUBIN—The Halfbreed's Treachery (Drama) 1000
PATHE—Pathe's Weekly No. 28, 1912 (Topical) 1000
PATHE—The Adopted Child (Drama) (Sp. Release)...
SELIG—Under Suspicion (Drama) 1000
VITAGRAPH—Her Old Sweetheart (Com.-Drama).... 500
VITAGRAPH—Fate's Awful Jest (Drama) 500

TUESDAY, JULY 9th, 1912.

EDISON—After Many Days (Drama) 1000
ESSANAY—Signal Lights (Drama) 1000
C. G. P. C.—The Geisha's Love Story (Drama) .....
CINES—The Gay Deceivers (Comedy) 585
CINES—Leah Learns to Dance (Comedy) 365
SELIG—The Vow of Ysobel (Drama) 1000
VITAGRAPH—The Curse of the Lake (Drama) 1000

WEDNESDAY, JULY 10th, 1912.

EDISON—The Artist's Joke (Comedy) 1000
ECLIPSE—A Mysterious Case (Drama) 1000
KALEM—The Bugler of Battery B (Drama) 875
KALEM—Hungry Hank's Hallucination (Comedy).... 125
LUBIN—The Stolen Ring (Drama) 1000
PATHE—On the Brink of the Chasm (Drama) .....
VITAGRAPH—A Bunch of Violets (Drama) 1000

THURSDAY, JULY 11th, 1912.

BIOGRAPH—Man's Genesis (Comedy) .....
ESSANAY—Pa Trubell's Troubles (Comedy) 1000
LUBIN—The Sheriff's Daughter (Drama) 1000
MELIES—The Man Inside (Drama) 1000
PATHE—His Wife's Old Sweetheart (Drama) .....
SELIG—His Masterpiece (Drama) 1000

FRIDAY, JULY 12th, 1912.

EDISON—For Valor (Drama) 1000
ESSANAY—Down Jayville Way (Comedy) 1000
KALEM—Saved by Telephone (Drama) .....
KALEM—A Pet of the Cairo Zoo (Edu.) .....
LUBIN—Over the Hills to the Poor House (Comedy)
LUBIN—The Hypnotist (Comedy) .....
SELIG—A Mail Order Hypnotist (Comedy) .....
SELIG—The Los Angeles Police Department (Topical)
C. G. P. C.—Max Takes Tonics (Comedy) .....
VITAGRAPH—The Foster Child (Drama) 1000

SATURDAY, JULY 13th, 1912.

EDISON—Picturesque Darjeeling, India (Scenic) 300
EDISON—Madame de Mode (Comedy)) 700
ESSANAY—A Story of Montana (Drama) 1000
CINES—For Her Father's Sake (Drama) 950
LUBIN—The Stranded Actors (Comedy) 1000
PATHE—The Unwilling Bride (Drama) .....
VITAGRAPH—Aunty's Romance (Drama) 1000

ADVANCE RELEASES.

MONDAY, JULY 15th, 1912.

BIOGRAPH—The Speed Demon (Comedy) .....
BIOGRAPH—His Own Fault (Comedy) .....
KALEM—The Lair of the Wolf (Drama) 1000
LUBIN—Honor Thy Father (Drama) 1000
PATHE—Pathe's Weekly No. 29 (Topical) .....
SELIG—The Pennant Puzzle (Comedy) 1000
VITAGRAPH—A Mission of Diplomacy (3 reels Dr.) 3000
VITAGRAPH—Conscience (Drama) 1000

TUESDAY, JULY 16th, 1912.

EDISON—Nerves and the Man (Drama) 1000
ESSANAY—The Smuggler's Daughter (Drama) 1000
C. G. P. C.—The Mosquito (Edu.) .....
C. G. P. C.—Whiffles Mourns His Twin (Comedy) .....
CINES—Disowned (Drama) 1050
SELIG—The Girl and the Cowboy (Drama) 1000
VITAGRAPH—A Persistent Lover (Comedy) 400
VITAGRAPH—A Lively Affair (Comedy) 650

WEDNESDAY, JULY 17th, 1912.

EDISON—Revenge is Sweet (Drama) 600
EDISON—The Maple Sugar Industry at Thompson, Pa. (Ind.) 400
ECLIPSE—The Grandmother (Drama) 1060
KALEM—The Suffragette Sheriff (Comedy) 1000
LUBIN—The Senorita's Remorse (Drama) 1000
PATHE—A Question of Size (Comedy) .....
VITAGRAPH—The Redemption of Red Rube (Drama)...1000

THURSDAY, JULY 18th, 1912.

BIOGRAPH—Heaven Avenges (Drama) .....
ESSANAY—Cupid's Quartette (Comedy) 1000
LUBIN—Together (Drama) 1000
MELIES—The Lesson (Drama) .....
MELIES—A Cowboy's Proposal (Comedy) .....
PATHE—The Brave Little Indian (Drama) .....
SELIG—The Polo Substitute (Sporting) 1000

FRIDAY, JULY 19th, 1912.

EDISON—The Necklace of Crushed Rose Leaves (Drama).1000
ESSANAY—Hearts of Men (Drama) 1000
KALEM—A Prisoner of the Harem (Drama) .....
KALEM—Egyptian Sports (Sporting) .....
LUBIN—Buster's Dream (Comedy) .....
LUBIN—The Uninvited Guest (Comedy) .....
SELIG—A Day Off (Comedy) 1000
C. G. P. C.—The End of Robespierre (Hist. Dr.) .....
VITAGRAPH—Honor Thy Father (Drama) 1000

SATURDAY, JULY 20th, 1912.

EDISON—The Little Artist from the Market (Drama)....1000
ESSANAY—A Wife of the Hills (Drama) 1000
CINES—The Part the Servant Played (Com.-Dr.) 1000
LUBIN—A Western Courtship (Drama) 1000
PATHE—The Half-Breed's Foster Sister (Drama) .....
VITAGRAPH—Rock of Ages (Drama) 1000
VITAGRAPH—The Money Kings (Special three-reel Release) (Drama) .....

PATHE'S WEEKLY LOBBY DISPLAY

We furnish every week in advance five beautiful, mounted photographs, each 14 x 17, showing scenes from the Pathe Weekly Film. Hang these pictures OUTSIDE. They SEND THE PEOPLE INSIDE.

Samples on exhibition at all exchanges. Write at once for particulars to

INTERNATIONAL NEWS SERVICE, : - 200 William St., New York City

POPULAR PHOTO PLAYERS

Full Sheet Posters in Colors of Costello, Bunny, Joyce, Gauntier, Turner, Anderson, Johnson, Fuller, and other favorites. Complete set of 10 for $1.50 Prepaid.

Feature Posters for Feature Films

One sheets 15c. Three sheets 35c. Six sheets 70c. Add 1c per sheet for prepaid postage.
Indian Summer, Halfbreed's Treachery, Bugler of Battery B, Stolen Ring, Man's Genesis, Sheriff's Daughter, Hypnotist, Stranded Actors, Man's Lust for Gold, Tragedy of Desert, Close of American Revolution, Prize Essay, One Round O'Brien, Child's Prayer, Back Window, Broncho Billy and Indian Maid, Derby Day at Churchill Downs, Dash Through the Clouds, New Physician, What the Driver Saw, Captured by Bedouins, Colonel's Escape, School Teacher and the Waif, Nation's Peril, Lena and the Geese, Choir of Densmore, French Spy, Arabian Tragedy, Spirit Awakened, The Passer-By, The Runaways, Windy Day, Gun Smugglers, Neighbors, Indian's Gratitude, Prisoner of War, The Orleans Coach, Tomboy Bessie, Missionaries in Darkest Africa, Drummer Girl of Vicksburg, Adopted Child, Fighting Dervishes, Under Flag of Truce, Convict Brother, Fighting Dan McCool, Coming of Columbus, and many others. Send for complete list.

"If It's Anything to Advertise a Picture Theater, We Have It."

EXHIBITORS' ADVERTISING & SPECIALTY CO., 30 Union Square, New York

THREE-SHEET POSTER FRAMES

Reading Special Features, Extra Features, Extra Attraction. To-Day's Newest Feature, Special Attraction, Coming Soon, and other sayings. Complete set of 10 for $1.20 Postage Paid.

"AN HOUR OF TERROR" (American).

"An Hour of Terror" is the title of the first American release on its new Wednesday schedule. W. D. Emerson, formerly of Selig's, is the new producer to whom credit for this first effort belongs. It is an Indian tale, replete with those features demanded in good Western stories. Away off on the frontier, the lonesome railroad agent pointed a direction to the prospectors and went inside. Two Indians promptly cut the wire with tomahawks and later killed one of the prospectors. An Indian uprising closely followed these events and a great ranch was given over to the flames and marauders. Two women and two ranchers reached the shelter of the railroad station only to find the wire cut. There was a battle, savages set fire to the little station and with cartridges nearly gone, the ranchers held the remaining two for the women. But the news had carried and while the women stood with bared breasts expecting the merciful bullet, help came, ending that awful "Hour of Terror."

DADDY RICHARDSON, OF SELIG PLAYERS, RECOVERS.

Frank Richardson, the famous Western stage driver and pioneer, who is a feature of the Selig Los Angeles studio, has returned to work after a sojourn of several weeks at Murietta Hot Springs. He was on the verge of a prostrating illness when he left for the health resort, but is now himself again.

FEATURE BOOKING OFFICE ESTABLISHED.

Quite a new departure in the film business is embodied in an advertisement in this issue announcing the establishment of a feature film booking office. By means of the new arrangement theater managers can secure the best features on specific days and be amply provided with sufficient advertising stuff to enable them to advertise their show ahead.

There exists not a doubt as to the drawing power of the feature film when properly produced, and from the experience of the firm associated with the Feature Film Booking house the business should be carefully handled and be rendered profitable alike to the feature owner and theater.

The Sign That is Making Good

CHANGEABLE ILLUMINATED PROGRAM SIGN

"PATENTED"

Easily operated, Quickly Changed, Inexpensive

St. Joseph, Mo., Dec. 12th, 1911.
Zenith Mfg. Co., Cincinnati, O.
Gentlemen:—
Your sign received and well pleased with it. Think it is the best thing in the way of a program sign I have ever seen. It is only a matter of time when all the first-class vaudeville and moving picture theatres will be using a sign of this class, as I have figured I can more than save the cost of your sign in six months. The letters show up very plain and is surprising how quick one can change the wording in the entire program. In fact the entire sign can be changed while they were taking the list of acts and pictures to the printer.
Yours truly,
(Signed) FRED. COSMAN Mgr.
Majestic Theatre.

Write for descriptive matter

ZENITH MANUFACTURING CO.
P.O. Box 252 Cincinnati, Ohio

Gundlach Projection Lenses Guarantee You the Sharpest and Most Brilliant Picture it is Possible to Produce.

If you want to improve your picture just order a lens for trial subject to approval and see the result with your own eyes. If you give the height and width of the screen, the size of the picture wanted and the distance from the machine to the centre of the screen we can furnish a lens of the exact focus for your operating conditions.

Many Exhibitors have found it an advantage to ask our advice about lenses before equipping new Theatres. Do not be afraid of a long throw. No matter what the distance is to the screen we can supply lenses of suitable focus and great illuminating power. All the best theatres in Rochester use our lenses and every customer has been satisfied of their superiority to ordinary lenses. THE LENS MAKES THE PICTURE, and you cannot get the best result out of the film unless you use Gundlach Lenses.

You can order through any Film Exchange or Dealer in Motion Picture Supplies.

Gundlach Projection Lenses will be furnished to order with the following machines subject to a little higher price than ordinary lenses: Powers Cameragraph, The Motiograph, The Simplex, The American Standard, The Edison. Our Lenses are used by the Kinemacolor Co. and a large number of the finest theatres in the United States and Canada.

GUNDLACH-MANHATTAN OPTICAL CO., 808 Clinton Ave. So., Rochester, N. Y.

Correspondence

IN THE MISSISSIPPI VALLEY.

As soon as the date of the referendum election upon the Sunday theater question at Elgin was announced, the pastors began their campaign. The theater-owners decided to wait until just before election and wind up fast and furious. The pulpit editorials and newspaper advertising of the foes of the Sabbath show fought the opening because it ultimately led to a wide-open town.

New zest was given to the Sunday fight at Clinton, Ill., when Judge Cochran, in the Circuit Court, instructed the jury, which heard the case of The City of Clinton against Joaquin Wilson, proprietor of the Star Theater, to return a verdict for the defendant. The ordinance, the judge declared, was class legislation and unconstitutional. City Attorney Gray appealed the case and as the same ordinance is in vogue throughout Illinois, the Supreme Court may be called upon for a decision. The city attorney further announced that if any moving picture shows attempted to open on Sunday, writs of injunction against them would be sought.

Portage, Wis., too, is in the midst of a seven-day battle which was precipitated by the Sunday opening of the theaters, and the subsequent determination of the church representatives to do something about it.

C. E. Zink, who has been in the moving picture business at Gilman, Ill., for several years, has sold his business to J. R. Wheadon. Zink bought a show at Monticello, Ind.

C. H. Hutton of Bangor, Mich., brings experience to his new moving picture house at Mt. Carroll, Ill., which he purchased of Floyd Olson.

C. G. Harrison, new owner of the Lyric Theater at Sterling, Ill., is an experienced builder, and will remodel the house which he recently purchased from John Adair. The mechanical orchestra may be ousted for a piano with human touch.

The Northwest Davenport Turner Society of Davenport, Iowa, is planning to erect a moving picture theater adjoining its society hall and provide entertainment for the neighborhood. It could be used as a summer garden, and a place to hold the calisthenic exhibitions.

The South End Business Men's Association of Cedar Rapids, Iowa, offered a helping hand in the opening of the new Olympic Theater at Third Street and Twelfth Avenue, June 17. A program was made up of addresses by the mayor and other city officials, bankers and others. Special films were secured.

Ned Dolan of Bloomington, Ill., was named trustee by Referee in Bankruptcy, E. S. Robinson of Springfield, Ill., in the case of Charles E. and Cora E. Morton. They had been conducting 5-cent picture shows in small towns adjoining Bloomington, and scheduled to the court liabilities of $3,000, with no assets.

John Lux has closed the Family Theater at Marora, Ill., and moved the outfit to Minonk, Ill.

The Orpheum Theater, Champaign, Ill., has been abandoned for amusement purposes. The building will be demolished probably next year. It played Independent pictures in connection with vaudeville.

Charles Lamb of Aurora, Ill., has resigned his position as manager of the Grand Opera House in that city to accept a similar position at the Grand in Rockford, Ill. J. T. Henderson, formerly of Joliet, will manage the Aurora house.

George Slothower, manager of the Princess Theater, Dixon, Ill., and Miss Bertha Haas of Swissville, Ill., were recently married at Dixon.

A. L. Orr has again taken over the management of the Dwight Opera House at Dwight, Ill.

The Illinois Theater, Urbana, Ill., in its summer regime of pictures, will get ten cents for four Independent reels and a news slide service.

The Princess, Peoria, Ill., announces that for all Sunday afternoon performances the price will be five cents to all, but after six P. M., the regular admission will be restored.

The Sperry airdome, using Independent service, has been opened at La Harpe, Ill., with the following force: operator, Harry Ford, Bushnell; singer, Miss Ethel Goetze, Colchester; pianist, Mrs. Rubie Morford and Miss Florence Headen, ticket seller.

Sheriff Shaffenacher of Logan county, appointed Gus Marcucci of Lincoln, Ill., custodian of the property of the Princess Theater at Lincoln, Ill., which the sheriff levied upon by virtue of an execution placed in his hands by E. W. Bates, who had a judgment for $150 against Swanland & Silva, the owners of the theater.

The young people of the South Park, Salem, Lutheran church of Rockford, Ill., chose for the subject of a debate:—"Resolved that the nickel theaters have done more injury to the church than the saloons." The negative won. But the Rockford Republic refuses to believe that such a subject was debated seriously. The young folk may have taken it as a wit sharpener. Two Rockford papers are insistent that there is a place in American lives for the picture show. One adds: "It is for the people to mould it and use it to the best advantage." The other comments: "Motion pictures as exhibited in a community are what the people of the community want. In this city the demand is for a high grade."

The Great Northern Railway pictures were shown before the Commercial Club at Fargo, N. D.

Mr. and Mrs. William Brown of Wood River, Ill., will reopen their picture show at that place in September.

J. M. Morrow, 53 years old, proprietor of the Bijou Moving Picture Show at Salem, Ill., died June 7, at his home in that city, of heart disease.

The Lyric Theater, has moved into new quarters at Gibson City, Ill. Each person at the reopening was presented with a carnation.

Hillsboro, Ill., will have no airdome it is reported. L. G. Settle, of Sullivan, Ill., had plans to start there and when Edward Fellis, somewhat of a magnate, got his hat into the ring, it was decided two could not pay, and Fellis' houses will be undisturbed.

The Yale Sign and Advertising Company of St. Louis, Mo., has been incorporated with capital stock of $4,000, to buy, sell and operate moving picture shows, barber shops, advertising and painting companies, etc. The incorporators are: F. B. Call, E. Donnelly and B. Done.

If your ticket numbers at the Gem, at Beardstown, Ill., end in "5" or "0," they are good for either 5 or 10 cents' worth of ice cream soda at a local parlor.

Burr H. Swan, that live-wire at Pittsfield, Ill., is going to bring down a carload of fresh-air babies from Chicago to his home town for a two-weeks' outing. He isn't doing it to advertise his moving picture show either; anybody that has ever tried to place a lot of city youngsters in good homes knows what time and diplomacy it takes.

J. W. Smith, former manager of the Central Opera House at McHenry, Ill., has opened an airdome at Riverside park in that place and will give picture shows Tuesday, Thursday, Saturday and Sunday nights.

Allender & Cramer have opened the Nemo Moving Picture Theater on North Main Street, Burlington, Iowa.

The Star Theater, larger, more comfortable and more modern, is now housed in the Patterson Building, at Wyoming, Ill.

The announcement that the chief of police and his assistants of Springfield, Ill., will carefully exercise a censorship over the morals of moving pictures in that city, leads to gentle smiles among those acquainted with the situation. Editor Bender of The News, is willing to let them censor, but wants a few suggestive plays hit, and reductions made in the number of "damns" and "O, hells" on the "legitimate" stage.

Investigation at Beardstown, Ill., following the theft of an entire moving picture outfit from the Grand Opera House, suggests that the practice of traveling companies stripping the theaters of lenses is not uncommon. The owner of the Edison machine in the Beardstown house, discovered its loss and reported it, whereupon two other theater owners recalled that they had been offered lenses by a young fellow with a traveling hypnotic exhibition. He said the "professor" gave them to him in lieu of pay. The hotel room which had been occupied by the suspect was searched and two lenses were found, but these were not the Beardstown property. The Beardstown machine was recovered at Arenzville, a nearby town, where the thief had attempted to express it to Kansas City. It was also ascertained that the youth had been in the habit of selling valuable lenses to photographers for $1.50 each. Rollin Gunion plead guilty at Paris, Ill., before Judge Thompson in the Edgar County Circuit Court, and was given a fine of $100 and a sentence of one day in the county jail for the theft of a moving picture machine from the Billiken theater in Paris last winter. Gunion was trailed through three states before he was captured.

Charles Corey has purchased a half-interest in the North End Family Theater at Princeton, Ill., and the firm name is now Ater & Corey.

Plans for a new opera house at Wall Lake, Iowa, are being drawn by Architect James R. Cox of Estherville, Iowa.

It's rather nice when the editor of the Pike County Democrat at Pittsfield, Ill., says this about Manager Bur Swan, who is also a newspaper man: "Cinderella was in truth a dollar show for a dime, and if the big $50,000 production, 'The Coming of Columbus,' proves as good, and no doubt it will, no one should fail to attend."

The Watchtower and Campbell's Island Park Company of Rock Island, Ill., have been incorporated with capital stock of $2,500, to operate amusement resorts. The incorporators are Joseph F. Porter, H. E. Weeks and John G. Huntoon.

It is announced in Mt. Vernon, Ill., that Marshall, Field & Company, the big Chicago wholesale and retail dry goods store, engaged the Essanay Company to make some industrial pictures of the plant of the Illinois Knitting Company, at Mt. Vernon.

The Grand Photoplay house, Rock Falls, Ill., gave the local baseball team a benefit performance June 7.

Messrs. Nathan and Greenberg, of the Lyceum Theater, Peoria, Ill., played a prominent part in the ceremonies incident to the dedication of the new press of the Peoria Herald-Transcript.

Charles J. Isele, manager of the Majestic Theater, at Peoria, Ill., and Miss Lillian Shepard were married June 2, at Chicago.

"Each church and Sunday school should stop criticizing the moving picture show and should get one of its own." This is what Rev. E. Valiant, pastor of the First Baptist church of Waterloo, Iowa, told the delegates to the Iowa State Sunday School Convention. The address, which was given at the Majestic Theater in Waterloo, was followed by Biblical pictures. Rev. Mr. Valiant said that the Sunday school must meet the desire of the children for real life and action. They want to see things and they want entertainment, and if they cannot get these things in the churches, they will go elsewhere. It was pointed out that the use of educational films would be invaluable in promoting the mission work.

The Airdome has opened at Clinton, Iowa, with pictures.

The city license board of Madison, Wis., has fixed the license fee of moving picture houses charging five cents admission, at $50 a year. Photoplay theaters charging not more than ten cents, will be taxed $100 a year.

The Majestic Theater, Waterloo, Iowa, is now playing three reels of pictures for five cents.

Judge Edward F. Dunne, of Chicago, Democratic candidate for Governor of Illinois, was worked into a scenario recently, and will pay the expense of making a moving picture campaign in Illinois. His opponent, Governor Charles S. Dineen, and some of his lieutenants, were snapped on the capitol steps at Springfield a few weeks ago in the Industrial Company's film, "Springfield in Motion," and are now being exhibited about the state.

Miss Grace Banks is the pianist at the new Rex Theater in State Street, Rockford, Ill.

Zed Reddish, who has been in the moving picture business at Jerseyville for some time, is operating a three-reel and vaudeville show at Fieldon, Ill., three nights a week.

The Brumby Amusement Company of St. Louis, Mo. has been incorporated with capital stock of $2,000. The incorporators are: W. V. Brumby, John Ellman and George O. Rogers.

A. C. Tudor has sold his interest in the Family Theater at Rock Island, Ill., and purchased the Family Moving Picture Theater at Clinton, Ia.

Isadore Burnstine and William Evans have dissolved partnership in the ownership of the Capital Theater, East Washington Street, Springfield, Ill. Evans is succeeded by Joseph W. Shepherd of Springfield.

Frank Whiteleather and Fred Wolf have opened an airdome at Monmouth, Ill., giving in addition to other attractions, two reels of pictures.

E. E. Alger of the Crystal, Paxton, Ill., has installed his own light plant.

C. I. Ramsdell, manager for the General Film Company at Omaha, Neb., jumped into the air and came down on the hood of an automobile which almost ran him down. Ramsdell was waiting for a street car to pass when he looked up and saw the motor bearing down on him. He could jump but one way—on the hot radiator. A young woman drove the car.

Mayor A. A. Smith of Sioux City, Iowa, announces himself as satisfied with the class of pictures shown in that city. The testimonial was elicited by the recommendation of United States District Attorney R. F. F. Faville, that each city in Iowa have a board of censors.

Peoria, Ill., will receive some boosting as a convention city, because the United Motion Picture Company stayed several days and got the state G. A. R., the National Travelers Protective Association, and the antics of assembled Mystic Shriners.

The Princess Theater, Quincy, Ill., has installed a pipe organ. It is reported the Lyric Theater, Jacksonville, has been in financial difficulties and the fixtures were announced for sale. The partnership of Jacoby & Thompson was recently dissolved, and V. E. Thompson, the remaining partner, was said to have been making a brave fight when closed up.

The Frank J. Cowling Company has gone out of the show business at Mt, Carmel, Ill., having sold its equipment to the newly incorporated Colonial Amusement Company of Harrisburg, Ill., which has leased Knell Hall in Mt. Carmel, for a picture show.

The Lillian Amusement Company of Granite City, Ill., has been incorporated with Capital Stock of $2,000, to conduct general vaudeville and moving picture show business. The incorporators are: Louis Landau, Jr., Thomas Gray, Cecile Dodge, Edson A. Dodge and A. B. Garvin.

W. E. Galvin has opened an airdome at Villa Grove, Ill. Mrs. George Sanders is pianist.

William Gallagher of Litchfield, Ill., has opened a moving picture show in Bloomington, Ill.

Not only will Police Lieutenant Thomas Hayes censor the pictures at the photoplay houses and airdomes in Omaha, Neb., but he will watch carefully, lest the pianos in the theaters become loud at inopportune times.

Miss Katherine Davis is now the owner of the Opera House at Mt. Sterling, Ill., which she purchased for $14,000. She has leased it to her uncle, Richard Davis, who conducts a moving picture show.

Loren Neal of Hillsboro, Ill., and Dorothy Williams, owner of a moving picture show at Twenty-fifth and State Streets, East St. Louis, Ill., were married on the stage at the theater, it is reported. Neal was an employe of the house.

The Appollo Opera House, Princeton, Ill., is now giving two vaudeville acts and two reels of pictures. It is under the management of Edwin Oppenheim, William Ater, formerly of the Family, and Louis Murphy, of the Majestic in Sp[illegible] Valley, Ill.

Prickett & Paine have erected a new theater at Crystal Lake, Ill.

A message from Perry, Iowa, stated that U. S. Marshal Bidwell seized the film "Crusaders or Jerusalem Delivered," in the Albert Walters Theater, at the request of the World's Best Film Company, which has the copyright, and asked for the injunction.

C. J. Remington of Chicago, has purchased the stock of A. D. McConnell in the Majestic Theater and Monona Park Vaudeville at Madison, Wis.

The Varsity, at Havana, Ill., will remain open all summer, contrary to its usual policy.

Six & Yock, Perry, Ill., have abandoned the Columbia for the summer, taking their patrons to their airdome.

The merchants of Arthur, Ill., secured 9,000 feet of moving pictures for a Fourth of July attraction.

The Princess, Freeport, Ill., has installed the indirect lighting system.

The Bohemian Amusement Company of East St. Louis, Ill., has been incorporated with capital stock of $5,000, to maintain and operate an amusement company. The incorporators are: Frank J. Burian, Emil Levitus, James Chodora, John Dvoark, Jim Schvab, Vaclav Korba.

Mrs. Henry Cramer of Sterling, Ill., past ninety-three, insisted upon seeing the pictures again at the first photoplay show in Rock Falls, Ill.

The Coliseum at Danville, Ill., idle for three years, is to be a vaudeville house, with Harvey B. Day, formerly manager of the Grand in that city, in charge.

M. H. Harris is now manager of both the Princess and the Gem Theaters at Beardstown, Ill., although he has not purchased the latter house. At the Princess, two vaudeville acts and two reels of pictures will be given for ten cents. Each adult will get a coupon, which, with five cents, will admit him to the Gem any time but Saturday night.

F. H. MADISON.

PHILADELPHIA.

BOYERTOWN, PA., is now assured of an amusement house in the center of the town. J. William Scheaffer has leased a plot of ground and will have a one-story brick building erected, with a handsomely decorated front, which a local concern has in turn leased for a moving picture theater. It is expected that the theater will be completed in the course of a few months.

West Philadelphia is again to have another theater, as plans are now being prepared. The site will be Nos. 23-37 North Fifty-second Street. The new theater will have a frontage of 80 feet, and a depth of 160, and will cost about $100,000. The backers have not been disclosed.

Permission has been granted to the Historical Pageant Association to take moving pictures of the pageant to be given on Belmont Plateau by the committee of Police of the Fairmount Park Commissioners at a recent meeting.

Allentown, Pa., is about to have a new moving picture theater, which will be owned and managed by Roxberry & Manley. The new theater will be the most modern one in Allentown, and everything for the patrons' comfort has been taken care of.

It is expected that the fire commission which has been appointed by the Mayor will have the film of the Equitable Fire in New York in this city before long, to exhibit before the local fire department.

Edward Kraupa, of the Monarch Film Exchange, has been appointed chairman of the entertainment committee of the East End Republican Club, for its annual Fourth of July celebration. Most all the theater managers are members of this club and they say that it is a good boost for their respective houses, as it draws people to that section of the city.

The many friends of Walter G. Murry of the Coliseum Theater, West Philadelphia, Pa., are very much pleased to see him about again. Mr. Murry has been in the hospital for several weeks, suffering with a complication of diseases, and it was feared that an operation would be necessary but the doctors by careful attention overcame the necessity of it.

The Woodland Park Theater of Camden, N. J., which is under the management of Mr. J. Dudley, has layed aside vaudeville for the summer season, and will show moving pictures.

Franklin W. S. Patschke, a relative of the late General J. P. S. Gobin, died a few days ago of pulmonary ailments, after a long illness. He was Thirty-one years of age and single. For a time he was associated with his brother-in-law Major J. M. Shindel, of Lebanon, in the management of a chain of moving picture shows in the coal regions.

The city of Chester is short one more theater, by the closing down of the Family Theater.

The Theatorium of Chester, formerly a ten-cent house, has reduced the price to five cents, and is showing a big bill of vaudeville and pictures.

The Majestic, in Gloucester, has been closed, owing to financial conditions. This theater was one of the most popular at one time, and enjoyed a very large patronage. George Miller was the manager.

Director of Public Safety Porter, announced that a New York expert is to investigate his department, with special attention to police and fire departments. The aim is to make this city's police and fire protection the very best in the country.

The People's Theater, of 2467 Kensington Avenue, has closed down the vaudeville end for the year, and is showing feature films, under the management of John Hart.

Morris Shuff, acting as manager, will open the Tacony Hippodrome next week with motion pictures.

Reading is to have a new theater, which is in course of construction. Frank A. Gould, who has a wide range of experience in the moving picture line, is the owner of the new house. A Number 6 Powers machine has been bought for the theater.

F. E. Schuier, manager of the Palace Theater, of East Greenville, has left that city and will reside in Lancaster, his former home.

Mrs. Charles Lanning, wife of the manager of the Auditorium Theater, of Burlington, N. J., was terribly burned in an explosion of gasoline, while cleaning gloves, and is in a very serious condition, with very little hope for her recovery.

The excavations for the moving picture theater of Paul A. Harmon, of Reading, Pa., is being set back by the heavy rains in that section, causing the ground to cave in. It is expected that the theater will be completed about the middle of the summer.

Mr. M. Hoffman has taken over the Columbia Theater, at Third and Green Streets, which he will open in conjunction with the Wharton Street Theater at Twelfth and Wharton Streets.

The Star Feature Film Company, which has just opened offices in the Heed Building, has sent a number of feature films out on the road recently. One of the new features of this concern is the packing of films and banners, so as to make them fireproof and also make them more easy to handle. They will open another office in Washington to take care of their Southern business.

The Victoria Theater, located at Ninth and Market Streets, has closed down the vaudeville for the summer season, and will show moving pictures. This leaves no vaudeville in the central section of the city, as the Palace theater closed down several weeks ago.

With the closing of the Colonial Theater for the summer season, Al White will devote most of his time to his picture house at Wildwood, N. J. The Philadelphia house will remain closed till Labor Day, when the usual pictures and vaudeville will be shown and acted again.

G. H. Blaker, one of Wildwoods oldest amusement promoters, was a visitor in Philadelphia recently.

F. C. Clark, who has been demonstrating the Enterprise Optical Manufacturing Company's machine at the Calehuff Supply Company, departed for Atlantic City, where he will demonstrate at the Million Dollar Pier for a week, and then will return to Philadelphia. Mr. Clark met with very good success while at the Calehuff Company, and the operators were pleased with the working of the machine.

A charter has been granted to the Colonial Theater of Lancaster, Pa., which will open in the near future. The Company has a capital of $5,000.

F. M. Swett, of the Nicholas Power Company, of New York City, was a visitor in Philadelphia recently.

W. L. Belle of the Cadet Amusement Company of Reading, was a local visitor recently and reported conditions good in and about Reading.

Henry L. Brown has been awarded a contract by Architect A. E. Westover, of this city, for the erection of a $60,000 theater in New Brunswick, N. J., for B. F. Keith.

The Contemplated settlement of the suit brought by F. E. Nixon-Nirdlinger, against Louis W. Cahan and Marshall W. Taylor, with respect to the ownership of the Orpheum Theater on Chelton Avenue, Germantown, has fallen through. Announcement was made by Harry E. Sundheim, counsel for Mr. Nirdlinger, that all negotiations looking to a settlement were off, and that the trial of the case would be continued in the Common Pleas Court No. 3.

The new open air moving picture place, which has been opened up at Harrisburg, is rapidly gaining in popularity. The Allison Airdome, as it is named, is the first moving picture place of the kind to be established in that city.

The Royal Palace, at 27th and Girard Avenue, is one of the newer picture houses in Philadelphia, and was built at a cost of about $27,000, and is a model house. The house seats 500, and has a matinee daily. M. Spiers, the owner of the theater, is also the owner of the Girard Palace, at Girard Avenue and Crease Street, which is built along the same lines, although it has a larger seating capacity. Both theaters were supplied by the Calehuff Supply Company with Mirror Screens, four Edison machines and transformers. The Girard Palace is under the management of S. Spiers, who is one of the most popular managers in the City.

Since the advent of the reform administration in this city, managers of the moving picture places have been working hand in hand with the authorities, and the result is that the houses are safer and better in every way than they have been for years. The department of public safety, which has charge of the inspection, is loud in its praises of the proprietors of the various play houses for their prompt and efficient response to all suggestions made. Thoughtful men point out that this is bound to have an effect in halting any legislation adverse to the moving picture business which is brought up from time to time in the State legislative bodies and city councils. Such legislation, where the conditions are uniformly as good as they are in this city, will be prevented, however, by an enlightened public opinion, guided and directed by the proper kind of publicity. Director of Public Safety George D. Potter, declared recently that the managers of the moving picture houses were themselves as responsible as any one else for the high state of excellence in which the places are kept. "The vast majority of houses and especially the big ones, which are run by men who are members of organizations and associations, met us more than half way in our inspection," said Mr. Porter. "They are willing to adopt every suggestion we made. When our administration first came into office, however, we found scores of complaints which had been lodged here and we began to run them down. Out of the entire number there were only five or six houses which had to be closed. These houses were small and important ones. We make two inspections every week. One is made by the electrical bureau, which goes over the apparatus, and the other is made by the fire marshal's office, which inspects the exits and entrances. I am glad to say that the law is being complied with in every respect."

M. A. Neff, president of the Motion Picture Exhibitor's League of America, addressed the local members recently on matters relating to the national convention to be held in Chicago. He was enthusiastically received. The local organization is composed of the leading moving picture exhibitors of Eastern Pennsylvania.

Edward A. Jefferies, of the Royal Photoplay Theater, was elected to represent the members of the Exhibitors' League, of Pennsylvania, at the convention of the national body in Chicago.

The Calehuff Supply Company has made a number of deliveries of the new No. 6 A Powers machine in and about the city, and in the course of the next few weeks will put out at least a half dozen more.

Thomashefsky's Arch Street Theater has opened up with the most up-to-date feature films, and is showing to large crowds.

Robert W. Taylor has been elected to represent the Operators' Union at the convention, which is being held at Peoria, Ill., by the local Union.

The Verdi Theater, located at No. 713 Christian Street, has been sold by J. Childs, who has owned it for a number of years, to C. Schugar.

The Palace Theater management, who are charging ten and twenty cents for pictures, have felt no fall-off in patronage since they closed down the vaudeville.

One of the most novel ways of advertising an article has been started by the Arnold Bread Company of Reading, Pa., which is advertising in all the papers in that vicinity, that for five labels taken from their bread, they are entitled to one show at the Crescent Theater. The labels will be redeemed by the Baking company.

CLEMENT H. CONGDON.

INDIANAPOLIS.

FRANK TARKINGTON BAKER, dramatic editor of The Indianapolis News, has been appointed by Mayor Shank to represent the mayor in all conferences and public movements to regulate the moving picture theater business. It is Baker's plan to work hand in hand with the moving picture theater owners and managers, believing that they are as anxious as the general public to conduct the business on the highest possible plane. Later on, Baker will be the city's representative on a court of appeals, the other member of which will be appointed by the Indianapolis Moving Picture Managers' Association. This court will pass upon and take action on films against which complaints may be made as being objectionable.

About seven hundred city officials and employes were the guests of Councilman George B. Rubens at a moving picture theater party at the Orpheum Theater, through the courtesy of Dickson & Talbott, the proprietors, on the evening of June 14. For two performances the theater was turned over to Rubens and his guests, among whom was Mayor Shank. Among the films shown was the Indianapolis Municipal Parade, the recent parade of Elks at Anderson, Ind., and "A Temporary Truse." An outlaw film, "Seeing Joliet, Ill.," was also shown. This film was taken at the direction of Rubens and his brother, L. M. Rubens, who are interested in a string of moving picture theaters in Illinois, among which is the Crystal Stairs in Joliet, and the Fox at Aurora.

Members of the Indianapolis Moving Picture Managers' Association are forbidding children under fifteen years of age in their theaters after 9 P. M., in an effort to aid the police department in enforcing the curfew ordinance. Judge James A. Collins, of police court, has praised the moving picture theater people for their co-operation.

The H. Lieber Company recently showed a number of educational films at Shortridge High School before the advanced English classes of that institution. Among the films shown was "The Tale of Two Cities." Moving pictures are rapidly gaining a foothold in the Indianapolis public schools and are meeting with much encouragement.

Frank J. Rembusch, who owns two motion picture houses in this city, and the Alhambra in Shelbyville, has obtained a long time lease on the Shelbyville Opera House, which he will convert into a high grade motion picture and vaudeville house.

Municipal and commercial films will be made a specialty by the Municipal and Commercial Film Manufacturing Co., just organized and incorporated in this city with an authorized capitalization of $20,000. Those interested in the company are: V. E. Boylard, C. W. Randall, A. F. Sutton and G. P. Balch.

The Rising Sun Amusement company has been organized and incorporated by W. H. Clark, Emma J. Clark and H. R. Clark at Rising Sun, to con-

COMING Monday, July 22nd

GREAT WAR DRAMA — IN TWO REELS

The Siege of Petersburg

See the Collapse of the Burning Bridge crowded with fighting soldiers! See the explosion of the giant mine, "The Crater," beneath the Confederate Batteries!! The Romance and reckless bravery of the Great War exploited with astounding realism.

Controlled exclusively by the General Film Company

SPECIAL MUSIC Special piano music with suggestions for effects, 25 cents per copy, postage prepaid.

SPECIAL PAPER Special six-sheet posters, depicting the Fight on the Burning Bridge.

KALEM COMPANY

INCORPORATED

NEW YORK, 235-239 W. 23rd St,
86 Wardour St., LONDON, W.
BERLIN, 35 Friedrich Str.
PARIS, 13 Rue du Faubourg Montmartre

W. R. Cassell is building an airdome of 500 seating capacity, at Arsenal Ave. and 19th St., while W. E. Mayelin is building an airdome of similar duct a motion picture theater. The company has an authorized capitalization of $10,000. capacity at Harding and Ohio Streets.

H. F. Rice has opened the Twilight airdome at 2705 East Washington Street.

An airdome has been opened at Garfield Ave. and East New York Street, by H. A. Lavender.

C. L. CUMMINS.

ST. LOUIS.

OSCAR DANE is now managing the Suburban Garden Theater Company, and in addition to 3 reels of pictures a day, is showing 5 live vaudeville acts. A summer stock company playing one act specials will also be put on.

Mrs. Dorothy Williams, owner of the Grand Theater, at 25th and State Streets, East St. Louis, and Mr. Lorine Russell Neal of Oklahoma City, Oklahoma, were married recently, a double knot being necessary to start the pair on their way to "connubial felicity." Mr. Neal, who has been managing the theater for Mrs. Williams, his bride, had planned to have the ceremony performed on the stage, and engaged Justice E. P. Williams to perform the ceremony. Happening to be in St. Louis one day, they purchased a license there, but later found out that the license could not be used outside the state, and were married in St. Louis. Nothing deterred, the couple repeated the performance before a large and enthusiastic audience at the Grand Theater. After a wedding supper on the stage, the couple departed for their honeymoon trip.

Frank Talbot, manager of the Gem Theater, and the Hippodrome, has closed negotiations whereby he gets control of the Blanke-Wenneker Candy Co.'s property on Market Street, between 6th and 7th Streets. This gives Mr. Talbot control of three-fourths of a city block in the main theatrical portion of the town, upon which he will erect the largest hippodrome in the county. Mr. Talbot left last week for West Baden, Ind., where he will spend a few weeks' vacation.

The Mikado, a Crawford house, 5900 Easton Avenue, closed for the season June 1st. It had been planned to run all summer. The Crawford houses, sixteen all told, will open for business the second week in August.

F. J. FEGAN.

TERRE HAUTE.

THE Orpheum, 720 N. Main Street, showing Independent films, reports capacity houses. They run 2 reels a day and have 2 singers. A pipe organ also furnishes music. The house uses a radium gold fibre screen, manufactured by the American Curtain Co. The seating capacity is 536. A. F. Prentlinger and T. J. English are now running the house.

The Savoy Theater, 345 Main Street, shows Licensed releases. It has a seating capacity of 300. Al. Joah, Sam Young and Ed. Hampton control the Theater Co.

Harry Prentiss is managing The Fountain, at 315 Main Street. The house seats over 300.

The Crescent, 681 Main Street, is under the management of Jensen Hentsinger and Moore. The house seats 367, and shows 3 reels daily of Licensed subjects.

James Smith is now managing the Palace, at the Twelve Points in Northeast Terre Haute. Independent subjects are shown. The house seats 388.

The Elk, at 725 Main Street, is a 5c house, seats 268, and shows Independent releases. Deady & Schadley are the proprietors.

F. J. FEGAN.

LOUISVILLE.

IN the annual struggle between the parks and the moving picture theaters, the latter are gaining a distinct victory in Louisville. So low has been the attendance at the various parks, that the managements are now inserting coupons in various newspapers, which, presented at the outing places, are good for free rides on the scenic railway and other amusements.

Robert Jacobstein is now in charge of the Novelty Theater, operated by the Falls Cities Amusement Company. C. E. Hampson, formerly manager of that house, is devoting all his attention to the Victoria Theater, his recent acquisition across the river. The management of the Novelty has completed the installation of a dozen powerful electric fans, which will create comfort for its patrons during the hot weather. M. Switow, president of the Falls Cities Amusement Company, has purchased the chairs of the Cherokee Theater, which recently went out of business. He will use the new seats in his houses in New Albany and Jeffersonville, Ind.

The Kentucky Motion Picture Exhibitors' League has harkened to the call of the Salvation Army, which is striving to raise funds for a new building in Louisville, with a check for $1,000. The structure will go by the name of a "citadel," and will cost about $60,000.

The Broadway Amusement Company has purchased from the Falls Cities Amusement Company, the Highland Theater, located at Baxter and Highland Avenues. The Broadway now has things about its own way in the Eastern section of Louisville, operating the Baxter, an airdome, in fair weather, and moving across the street to the Highland when rain threatens. Fred Dolle, of the Broadway, is now in Chicago on his honeymoon.

The Broadway Amusement Company has also purchased the Kentucky rights for "Redemption," a three-reel Eclair feature. The film will be put on at the Broadway chain, going out in the state later. It has just completed a week's run at the Orpheum, the Jefferson Street house of the Princess Amusement Company, attracting large crowds.

The Portland Theater, the Broadway's new airdome, at Twenty-first Street and Portland Avenue, has been opened and is drawing well. An admission price of 5 cents is charged.

The Princess Amusement Company has purchased the Bijou Dream Theater, on Market Street, near Third, and will run feature stuff in that house. Greenstein Brothers were the former owners. They will retire from the theatrical business, devoting all their time to their merchandise interests. The Princess has secured rights on all the Bison feature output for its circuit. Hopkins Theater, the largest theater of the Princess circuit, has closed for the summer, after one of the most successful seasons of its career. Following the closing of Hopkins, the Princess has opened offices at 302 Tyler Building, for the summer. A. F. Mayer, the genial treasurer of the company, will shortly leave on a long vacation in Chicago and other cities.

With the affairs of the Majestic Theater in good shape, Louis J. Dittmar has left for New York on a mingled pleasure and busines trip.

The Gem Theater Company has been formed at Maysville, Ky., with a capital stock of $8,000. A new moving picture house has been opened by the company. The incorporators are: Sherman and Mrs. Elia Arn and J. C. and Mrs. Lillian Simmonds.

The Majestic Amusement Company has been incorporated at Hopkinsville, K., with a capital stock of $5,000. The business of the new concern will be to purchase, lease or otherwise acquire lands and buildings for the use of theatrical ventures, as well as to operate theaters. The company probably will open a moving picture house in the near future.

Among other improvements in the Scenic Theater, of Ashland, Ky., is a new radium gold fibre curtain, which permits of the latest "daylight pictures." The house has been redecorated and repainted at a cost of several hundred dollars.

Manager Masters, of the Columbia Theater, Bowling Green, Ky., recently celebrated the first anniversary of that popular house.

Miss Marguerite Lawson, a talented musician of Hopkinsville, Ky., has been added to the orchestra of the Princess Theater, of that place.

The Lexington, Ky., City Council is waging a campaign against the exhibitors of that city, claiming that the precautions taken for the safety of the public are not as strong as they could be. An ordinance has been presented in the Council, providing for further regulations in regard to exits, etc.

Manager Graves, of the Princess Theater, of Lexington, is endeavoring to secure a long lease on the building now occupied, and if successful, will make numerous improvements in his theater. The present lease expires in December.

Work on the $120,000 theater to be erected in Lexington has begun. The new house will be on Main Street, directly opposite the Phoenix Hotel. The house will be completed by January 1st. It will have a seating capacity of 1,507. Steel, stone and brick will be the material used. James B. Haggin, the well known millionaire, is the moving figure in the company, which is erecting the new theater. Whether or not moving pictures will be shown has not been decided.

Logansport, Ind., exhibitors have stimulated interest in the "swat-the-fly" crusade there by a simple expedient. Every person who presents twenty dead flies to the box office of either of the four theaters in Logansport, will be given one ticket to the house.

Robert Strauss, better known as "Bobby," and one of Chattanooga's best known comedians, is thinking seriously of joining the ranks of the motion picture actors.

The pastors of Nashville, Tenn. (having practically put the Nashville Ball Club of the Southern League out of commission), and those of Chattanooga, Tenn., have turned their attention to putting an end to Sunday performances. The law and order committee of the Chattanooga Pastor's Association, composed of the Rev. C. H. Myers, the Rev. Ira M. Boswell, and the Rev. Allen Fort, have the matter in hand, and are endeavoring to arouse agitation among the trade unions, with the idea of compelling exhibitors to abandon Sunday shows, just as their brethren in Nashville forced Sunday baseball to be stopped.

The West Walnut Theater is to open in Louisville shortly, extensive alterations having been completed in a building at Fourteenth and Walnut Streets. The new theater will be for colored people. Colored vaudeville acts will be run, the admission price being ten cents. C. A. Shaw is the owner of the house, William Clark being the manager.

The Jeffersonville, Ind., Ferry Company, which operates steamers between Louisville and Fern Grove, 15 miles up the Ohio River, is contemplating the erection of a moving picture theater in the pleasure park. Fern Grove is the destination of dozens of excursions during the summer, and it is believed the project would be a winner.

The $50,000 theater being erected at Twenty-third and Market Streets by the Broadway Amusement Company, will not be completed until August 1.

At the annual meeting of the Kentucky State Dental Association it was voted to appropriate $280 for the purchase of moving picture films which will demonstrate how to take proper care of the teeth and mouth. The films will be the property of the State society, but will be loaned to various exhibitors in Kentucky free of charge.

A ruling of general interest to Kentucky exhibitors is that given recently by Attorney-General Garnett to Auditor Bosworth. Mr. Garnett held that moving picture houses must pay license as theaters. Hitherto, moving picture men have not paid a state license tax. In cities of the first class, the fee will be $40 a year; second class, $20; third class, $15, and in fourth, fifth and sixth classes, $10. County clerks will collect the license.

Joseph Henry of Madison, Ind., has leased the Beardstown, Ky., Opera House, and will shortly open a moving picture show. Films will be shown at night only.

Scenes about Middlesboro, Ky., were taken by a moving picture man recently during the aviation meet. About 400 feet of film were made and will be shown at the Manring Theater, Middlesboro, in the near future.

The new moving picture theater, of Clinton, Ky., has been named the "Star."

Rowland Clark and W. S. Hibbs recently purchased the Princess Theater, of Madisonville, Ky., from A. D. Noe, Jr. Mr. Clark will have the active management of the new acquisition. He now operates the Imp and Lincoln Theaters, while Mr. Hibbs assists in the management. Mr. M. S. Stockley, former manager of the Princess, has left for Jackson, Tenn., where he has secured a similar position.

After a short close down, the Woodruff Motion Picture Company, of Murray, Ky., has opened its new house. A new machine has been purchased and numerous improvements made in the house.

The Young Mens Christian Association of Bowling Green, Ky., has opened a moving picture show at its quarters.

The Third Regiment Band, operating the Band Theater, has added a dynamo to its equipment and now generates its own current for the operation of its moving picture machine.

Sil Dinelli of Winchester, Ky., has opened a theater in that town, utilizing the opera house. A Powers machine is in use, and the new house has received liberal patronage.

H. H. Phillips, manager of the New Lyric Theater, Winchester, Ky., has added a radium gold fibre screen to the equipment of the new playhouse. Hal De Forest, of Norfolk, Va., is now trap drummer at the Lyric.

The Orpheum and Hippodrome Theaters, Lexington, Ky., conducted by J. H. Stamper, have been ordered closed by the Board of Public Works, on the grounds that the exits at the latter are insufficient and the aisles too narrow in the other. The Orpheum is regarded as the finest theater in Lexington, and the order created much surprise. Mr. Stamper is president of the Kentucky Motion Picture Association. L. H. Ramsey, proprietor of the Annex Theater, was arrested recently at the instance of the Board of Public Works, for failure to have tables and chairs removed from the lobby. Soft drinks are served, and the place is one of the most popular in Lexington. It is alleged that an audience would have had difficulty in getting out of the house in case of fire.

The Louisville Advertisers' Club, under whose auspices the recent big Floral Parade was held, did the thing right in having moving picture operators stationed at vantage points, while the pageant passed. Besides taking views of the flower affair, the cameramen made films of Louisville's interesting buildings and principal streets. The views will be shown in Louisville in the near future.

It is possible that the Princess Amusement Company has given its last performance at Hopkins' Theater, which recently closed for the summer. The company recently secured a lease on the Avenue Theater, on Fourth Street, between Green and Walnut, and may decide to abandon the Market Street Theater. Only strong appeals to the popular taste could have made the latter a success, as it is well out of the beaten path. On the other hand, the Avenue is ideally located, and with the good bills and prices formerly in vogue at Hopkins, the theater would probably be a brilliant success. The Avenue is now being devoted to moving pictures, which will continue until fall. It has been a "legitimate" house heretofore.

H. B. Struby, president of the Pastime Amusement Company, which operates several moving picture houses in Louisville, has left on a ten-day trip to Indianapolis and other cities. Mr. Struby will inspect modern theaters in the various cities, with a view to adopting improvements which are worth while.

Ernest Peach, who for some time has managed the Peoples' Theater, of Henderson, Ky., has opened a new playhouse in Providence, Ky. He is using the Opera House, on which he has secured a long lease.

Nicholasville, Ky., will have but one animated picture theater hereafter, the management of the Rink and Cozy Theaters having gotten together. W. G. Wolf, of the latter, and Matt Nave, of the Rink, will operate one house, Mr. Hacker, formerly interested in the Cozy, retiring.

The management of the Pastime Theater, of Winchester, Ky., in accordance with its recently announced policy, has put on two vaudeville acts, with two changes weekly. A daily change of pictures will be given the Pastime's patrons.

The Lyric Theater, of Winchester, will continue

VITAGRAPH

SPECIAL FEATURE

IN THREE REELS

"THE MONEY KINGS"

Or, A Mission of Diplomacy

How Universal Peace was declared and the unprincipled schemes of greed and avarice to prevent it were defeated by a quick-witted young girl and a daring aviator in his hydroaeroplane

WALL STREET OUTWITTED AND BEATEN AT ITS OWN GAME

THE DOVE OF PEACE TRIUMPHS
THE VULTURES DESPOILED

A Modern Drama of Powerful Plot

IF YOU ARE ALIVE, KEEP ALIVE
SHOW YOUR PATRONS YOU ARE ALIVE. BOOK THIS AND PROVE IT

Released Through the

GENERAL FILM COMPANY

MONDAY, JULY 15th

straight pictures, and may cut the admission price to five cents.

O. W. Coe, of the Independent Film Service Exchange, was a recent visitor to the Louisville branch of that company. Mr. Coe is making a tour of the branch offices, following which he will return to his headquarters in Chicago.

Louis J. Dittmar, of the Majestic Theater Company, of Louisville, has returned from a trip to New York and other Eastern points.

G. D. CRAIN, Jr.

TOLEDO.

THE Valentine, Toledo's handsomest theater, which plays Klaw & Erlanger productions in the winter, will play vaudeville and motion pictures throughout the summer months. Nelson G. Trowbridge is manager.

So vast were the crowds to witness the five-reel production of "Dante's Inferno" at the Empress Theater, that the management was obliged to turn thousands away, and was only able to secure this feature for an extra day, which shows that this reel has not lost any of its popularity.

Mr. W. H. Foster, formerly of the Keith circuit, has associated himself with the Mark Brock enterprise and has assumed management of the Coliseum Theater. The Coliseum is one of the largest motion picture theaters in America, having a seating capacity of 4,000.

The Crown Theater is trying out 101 Ranch Bisons as features, and has thus far had splendid results.

Several of Toledo's popular picture theaters may be closed by the city unless they pay their 1912 license fee, which became due April 1. Because of the failure of a number of theaters to pay their fees, orders have been issued that they must be paid at once or the doors will be locked.

The Toledo Equal Suffrage League is pleading its cause by aid of a motion picture camera and a huge canvas spread on one of the prominent downtown buildings.

B. F. Keith's Theater, which has been showing vaudeville and motion pictures, has engaged a stock company for the summer months.

The Colonial Theater is featuring the "St. George Dragon" and "Bonnot, the Automobile Bandit." Both are drawing well.

Mr. J. Bernard Gardner of the Empress Theater, announces as his next feature, the 500-mile automobile race held at Indianapolis Decoration Day.

CLARENCE SCHLACHTER.

OHIO.

MR. GEORGE SCHENKER, proprietor of the Star and Pastime Theaters, Lorain, has closed the Star, and is making improvements in the Pastime. He also contemplates opening a new theater, which will be known as the Wonderland.

Mr. Lon S. Muchmore is erecting a handsome new airdome at Peebles Corner, Cincinnati.

CLARENCE SCLACHTER.

MICHIGAN.

THE National Theater, Detroit, has inaugurated the novel idea of giving a double bill of 3,000 feet of the best motion pictures, and eight numbers of vaudeville every Monday morning.

When the manager of the Bijou Theater, at Ann Arbor, refused a free show to a group of college freshmen, they proceeded to demolish his place and pushed in a large glass front of his theater. The police were called, but the freshies made their escape before the coppers arrived upon the scene.

Work of remodeling the exterior and redecorating the interior of the former Gayety Theater, Detroit, is now in progress. The building will be given a Colonial front and will open as the Colonial June 23. The entertainment it will offer includes motion pictures and vaudeville.

Mr. R. J. Crosbie, of Sturges, has purchased a motion picture theater at Marshall.

The Family Theater, Detroit, certainly gives its patrons their money's worth, showing motion picture plays and twelve vaudeville numbers, all for the sum of ten cents.

CLARENCE SCHLACHTER.

SAN FRANCISCO.

IN San Francisco I find that both the exhibitors and the public are boosting for the higher class of pictures. While there are a few small houses which are inclined to that type of photoplay in which the Indian and the cowboy are in prominence, the tendency of the majority of the motion picture theaters is to show feature films whenever possible. The price of admission is on the advance instead of on the decline, which makes it possible for the exhibitor to secure a better class of service than before.

After a successful two-weeks' run at the Savoy Theater of the Bernhardt and Rejane pictures, Manager Tally closed at that house Saturday, June 8th, and opened the following Sunday night at Sacramento. The Carnegie Alaska-Siberia pictures followed for two weeks at the Savoy.

The most exclusive of all the San Francisco "legitimate" theaters, the Cort, has succumbed to the motion picture, the fourteen-reel Kinemacolor production of the Durbar being booked for a three-week's run which started Monday, June 17th. A full orchestra is used at all performances. Following the Durbar films, the Cort will present the Paul J. Rainey animal pictures for a limited engagement.

At the "Maio Biograph," Manager Maio has something of a novelty in the form of what he terms a "trick piano player." Her name is Francis Howard, and it is claimed she has more "effects" at her fingers' end than any other in the business. This is not exactly a challenge, but is a statement—and Mr. Maio certainly has reason to be proud of the musical end of his show.

A new house of Class A construction and with a seating capacity of 350 on its one floor is being completed by a local firm, and will be placed under the management of Mr. A. Goldberg. The name "Peerless" has been decided upon, and service will be supplied by the General Film Co., with a tri-weekly change of program. The projection equipment will consist of two Motiographs. The house will open about July 1st.

In the suburban town of San Mateo, Mr. Charlie Hart, who is owner, manager and musical director of the "Hart Theater," has under construction a concrete theater which he expects will be completed about August 1st. It will accommodate 550 modern opera chairs, and twenty-one reels of licensed subjects will be shown each week. The policy of the Hart will remain unchanged.

Joaquin Miller, who is known throughout the United States as the "Sage of the Sierras," has fallen victim to the lure of the motion picture. It is reported that the venerable poet of the Sierras, now past his 70th year, has consented to pose before the camera and that within a few weeks his favorite haunts at "The Heights," will be made the background for a photoplay, in which the chief characters will be acted by the renowned poet and his favorite daughter, Juanita. Mr. Miller not only acts the leading role, but is also the author of the script for the play.

Oakland is just across the bay from San Francisco, and among the houses there which are catering to the better class of patrons may be mentioned the Broadway, Central and Camera Theaters, all of which are under the management of Mr. Guy Smith. The first two mentioned are showing both vaudeville and pictures, while the Camera shows pictures only, with a daily change, all having Independent service. The music is furnished at the Broadway and Central by the regular orchestra, and at the Camera by what is advertised as "the largest Photoplayer on the Coast."

The Scenic, under the management of Mr. Larry, is showing to much better business since the change from Licensed service to Independent, which took place on May 27th. They now show four reels with a daily change.

Anticipating the coming warm weather the new owner, Mr. Leo McCarthy, of the Bijou Dream, has installed in that theater an up-to-the-minute ventilating system, including a three-foot suction fan. At the same time the old lighting equipment was torn out and the "indirect illuminating" system took its place. Mr. McCarthy also replaced the old projection machine with a Powers No. 6, which is giving results that he is justly proud of. The Dream is showing Independent pictures.

The ordinances which govern the use of moving picture machines in the city and county of San Francisco, permit the use of motor drive on such machines within certain limitations, and the machines of a great many houses are so equipped.

It is interesting to note that California's first woman School Commissioner, Mrs. Luella B. Johnson, is advocating the use of moving pictures in the public schools. She not only is urging that measure before the Board of School Commissioners, but is also making it the subject of a series of talks before the members of her Club. She announces that when she is placed in charge of the Sacramento schools on July 1st, she intends to inaugurate a gradual transformation in the teaching method. She is ably supplementing her argument with catalogues of educational films which can be rented for school uses.

Mr. G. M. Anderson of the Essanay Company, paid a visit recently to the Globe Theater, this city. Mr. Anderson walked upon the stage after the Essanay film entitled, "Western Hearts," had been shown. He spoke interestingly of his experiences as a motion picture actor. Mr. Anderson received several encores.

The third legitimate theater of this city to succumb to the motion picture as an attraction, is the Columbia, which house regularly booked the Klaw & Erlanger attractions, but which will present a short engagement of "The Kemp Illustrated Travel Tales." Mr. and Mrs. Ed. H. Kemp toured the Eastern States on the Keith & Procter circuit, as well as several European points during the season of 1910 and '11, and attained great success with their stereopticon and motion picture views of the Canal Zone, which pictures were taken at the personal request of Hon. Geo. A. Loud, and were first shown before the U. S. Senate and the House of Representatives. The films and stereopticon slides which illustrate this year's "Talk" were secured at the most advantageous times and places, Col. Goethals placing his railroad motor car and a special engine and flat car at Mr. Kemp's disposal and convenience. In all about 8,000 feet of film were exposed, of which almost half was discarded in order to bring the length of the entertainment down to two hours' time, leaving a little more than 4,000 feet of intensely interesting subject matter to be used. The Talk, as presented at the Columbia by Mr. and Mrs. Kemp, runs about two and a half hours, and is very interesting.

The ownership and management of the "New Bell," was recently taken over by Mr. H. R. Isbell, who has installed a piano and will join in the ranks of the enterprising managers who furnish appropriate music to accompany the pictures. Otherwise the policy of the house will remain the same as before the change, and twenty-eight reels per week of Independent subjects will continue to be supplied by the California Film Exchange.

The Mission Theater, which has been in the hands of the decorators for the past several days, opened its doors to the public under the management of "Matt" Burton. The Golden Gate Film Exchange installed a Powers No. 6 projection machine, while the film service will be furnished by the Miles Bros. exchange and will consist of four reels of Independent films with a daily change. As an added feature Mr. Burton on Saturday, Sunday and Wednesday nights, will present three vaudeville sketches at an advance price of 10c, the admission being 5c on other nights.

The York is now under the management of its new owner, W. P. Muir. It is Mr. Muir's intention to immediately renovate his house both inside and out, and to install 230 opera chairs in the place of the present seats. He has a Powers No. 6 projection machine complete with motor drive and stereo device, and the General Film Co. supplies his house with a service of 21 reels per week.

Michelsen Bros., the owners and managers of the Clement Theater, have just finished remodeling their house, adding twenty feet to the back of the stage. In the 7 by 16-foot operating room is installed two Pathe projection machines, an enclosed rewind, a large disc phonograph and the necessary switches for the control of the house and piano lights. Their service of twenty-eight reels per week is supplied by the General Film Co.

Commencing with the morning show on June 24th, the managers of the Broadway Theater changed their service from Licensed to Independent, and ran the feature picture, "The Dead Man's Child" on the 24th and 25th in addition to the regular three-reel show. In advertising this change of service it was necessary to have the reading matter printed in English, Spanish, Italian and Chinese, as the regular patrons of the house are drawn from those several nationalities.

The management of the National Theater was taken over by Messrs. Zaun & Mallan on June 23rd. These gentlemen will inaugurate a season of musical comedies at popular prices. The performances will be continuous as a reel of Independent film will be shown before each act.

The cameramen of the Kinemacolor Company are now at work in that wonderful region, the Grand Canyon. Views have already been taken at Palm Beach and at Atlantic City, and the beautiful country in and around the Kings River Canyon, in this State, will be filmed by Kinemacolor process in the near future. It is understood that the Kinemacolor Company of America is preparing to erect houses in the principal cities on this Coast and that the attractions at those theaters will be an exclusively Kinemacolor scenic and dramatic program.

ANDY.

OREGON.

RALPH R. EARLE, cameraman for Pathe's Weekly, visited the rookeries in the lower Kalamath Lake in Oregon, in order to take the rodeo. Later he was taken to Bird Island by Mr. John V. Houston, the Kalamath Falls theater magnate, and J. C. Duden of Portland, where he took over 400 feet of pictures, showing pelicans, cormorants and herons. These pictures will be shown in Kalamath Falls with the pictures of the rodeo at an entertainment to be given at an early date by the Elk's lodge at that city. Mr. Duden succeeded in getting a snapshot of Mr. Earle and his camera when he was submerged in the swamp to his waist. The pictures taken by Mr. Earle will prove one of the most far-reaching advertisements ever given the Kalamath country.

Offenbacher & Clem are proprietors of a new moving picture theater in Kalamath Falls, which will be thrown open to the public early in July. The place will be known as the "Majestic." Mr. Clem recently came from the East, where he was for a number of years connected with motion picture houses.

The "Durbar" pictures exhibited at the Heilig Theater recently, swept the audience of this theater more than a dozen times into riotous applause.

EDWARD N. WEINBAUM.

NEW ENGLAND.

GREATER Boston soon will have another theater built especially for the exploitation of vaudeville and pictures. It will be on the Southwest corner of Dorchester Avenue and Park Street, near Fields Corner. This lot of land has been purchased by W. F. Adams and Herbert A. Gilman. It is proposed, by the new owners, to erect on the rear of the tract a fireproof and thoroughly up-to-date theater, with a seating capacity of about 1,600.

Manager W. M. Harris of Highland Lake Park, has had plans prepared for the erection of a mov-

"The Greatest Self Advertised Feature in the World"

A Trip to
THE GARDEN OF ALLAH

By permission of the Liebler Co., the producers of the play.

Tens of thousands of dollars have been spent in advertising the book and play "The Garden of Allah."

RESULT: The book has been read by over 10,000,000 people in America, and the play witnessed by nearly half a million at the Century Theatre, New York City, the past season and will be produced in Chicago, Cincinnati, Cleveland, Pittsburg, Philadelphia and Boston, this season, and will create a sensation wherever shown.

EVERY STATE RIGHT BUYER will get the benefit of all this advertising and publicity, yet note the low prices quoted below which include the exclusive rights to the territory mentioned.

Note — To secure this three reel feature it was necessary to travel over 10,000 miles to the Desert of Sahara in Africa, the home of the Garden of Allah.

TERRITORY OPEN

Alabama, Arkansas, Tennessee, Louisiana, Mississippi, Georgia, Florida, any of these States for .....1 set films at 10c. ft.
California .....2 sets films at 15c. ft.
Illinois .....2 sets films at 18c. ft.
Iowa .....1 set films at 15c. ft.
Kansas .....1 set films at 15c. ft.
Kentucky .....1 set films at 12c. ft.
Maryland, including Delaware and District of Columbia, for .....1 set films at 16c. ft.
Minnesota .....1 set films at 18c. ft.
Missouri .....1 set films at 20c. ft.
N. and S. Dakota.....1 set films at 12c. ft.
Nevada, including Arizona and New Mexico, 1 set films at 15c. ft.
Oklahoma .....1 set films at 15c. ft.
Oregon .....1 set films at 20c. ft.
Texas .....1 set films at 15c. ft.
Tennessee, including N. and S. Carolina, for 1 set films at 18c. ft.
Washington .....1 set films at 20c. ft.
Wisconsin .....1 set films at 18c. ft.
West Virginia .....1 set films at 15c. ft.
Virginia .....1 set films at 15c. ft.

ALL OTHER TERRITORY HAS BEEN SOLD OR OPTIONS GIVEN ON SAME

WIRE OR WRITE US AND WE WILL GLADLY FORWARD YOU FULL PARTICULARS REGARDING THE PICTURES, LECTURE, LOBBY DISPLAY, HERALDS, SOUVENIR POSTAL CARDS, AND IF YOU WISH SAME CAN FORWARD YOU SAMPLES OF ONE, THREE AND EIGHT SHEET LITHOGRAPHS.

The Garden of Allah Film Co., Exchange Bldg., Suite 804 New York City

For reference as to Quality consult the following: The Vitagraph Co. of America, The Independent Moving Pictures Co. of America, The Powers Picture Plays Co., Nestor Co., Thanhouser Co., Rex, Champion, Melies, Gaumont, St. Louis Motion Picture Co., Kinemacolor Co. of America, N. Y. Motion Picture Co., Bison, Crystal Film Co.

"A Great Joint"

and then some more joints is in this tank, making it watertight. No loss of liquid—no damage to property where "Corcoran" tanks are installed. See for yourself.

Send for Price List No. 5

A. J. CORCORAN, Inc.
11 JOHN STREET NEW YORK CITY

ing picture theater, with a seating capacity of 1,000.

George Bunny of New Britain, Conn., expected that his brother, John Bunny, of Vitagraph fame, would spend some time with him this summer, and had promised his townsmen an introduction to the premier comedian. Plans were changed, and John Bunny sailed away to Europe.

It is reported that Dr. Straus of New Haven, Conn., will build a photoplay theater on State Street.

Mr. Frank J. Lawler states that he intends to build a first-class moving picture theater in Greenfield, Mass., which will seat 1,000.

Keith's Theater, Lowell, Mass., has had a most prosperous season of vaudeville and pictures, and has now closed until the middle of August, when it will reopen under the old policy.

The Continental Film Company, Boston, handling the output of the Film Supply Company of America, has lined up quite a number of theaters in the New England States.

The W. E. Greene Film Exchange of Boston, captured the theater at White City, Worcester, Mass., and will supply it with Independent service this year.

Glen Echo Park, Stoughton, Mass., opened for the summer season on June 17 and reported good business. Motion pictures form an important part of the programs at this summer park.

The Old Colony and the Boston & Northern Railway Company, have combined and will run the summer parks on their lines themselves. D. J. Horgan, an employee of the concern, is in charge of the motion picture end of the parks.

The Gorman Amusement Company has acquired Highland Park, Brockton, Floating Bridge, Lynn, The Pines, Haverhill, and Glen Forest Park, Lawrence. All of these summer parks are to exhibit Licensed pictures and should do a good business.

It is rumored that James W. Greeley, manager of the New Portland Theater, Portland, Maine, will open a photoplay house in that city. Whitney Block is the site.

The Phoenix Theater, Danielson, Conn., which has been closed for some time, has reopened as a moving picture theater.

Danbury, Conn., will soon have a new moving picture theater, according to Messrs. Chrystas and Stamatis, who have had plans made. Work is to be started very soon.

Mr. Charles Cummings has an airdome at Derby, Conn.

Mr. M. R. Sheedy opened Freebody Park on June 17. Vaudeville and pictures are the attractions over the summer.

Mr. L. M. Boas has again resumed his former position as active manager of the Academy Theater, Fall River, Mass. During the winter Manager Boas left Fall River in order to manage the South End Theater of Boston. Mr. Boas returned to Fall River after the South End closed for the season. Mr. C. L. Benson is now managing the Premier Theater of Fall River. These are Marcus Loew houses.

Mr. William Durfee, owner of the Savoy Theater, Fall River, Mass., expects to make some rather extensive improvements in that house before the fall season opens.

Mr. W. C. Gould, who owns and manages the Pastime Theater, Brunswick, Me., reports greatly increased business since he made improvements in his house.

Mr. B. E. Franklin opened the Casino Theater, White City, Worcester, Mass., on June 10, for the usual summer season.

Mr. William Fox has decided to close his Grand Opera House, New Haven, Conn., and will reopen about the middle of August.

Manager F. E. Blanshan of the Plaza Theater, Northampton, Mass., reports that he cut out vaudeville from his programs on June 3, and ran pictures and songs.

J. W. Gorman will open Riverton Park, Portland, Me., on June 24, for the regular summer season.

Bullock's Theater, Providence, R. I., after a most prosperous season, devoted to picture and vaudeville, has closed. The house will open again in August, and extensive improvements and alterations are now being made.

Dr. G. E. Lothrop of Boston, expects to build a Theater in Providence, R. I., during this Summer, at a cost of over $300,000. Mr. Lothrop has three houses in Boston, one of which, the Bowdoin Square, plays vaudeville and pictures.

Manager Harris of Highland Park, Waterbury, Conn., is looking over plans for the erection of a theater to play pictures, and having a seating capacity of 900.

Mr. S. Z. Poli has secured the new Lincoln Theater, Worcester, Mass., which is now in the process of construction. This house will seat very nearly 2,800, and should be ready to open on Labor Day. Mr. Poli has also secured ground in Springfield, Mass., and will very soon start work on a new theater, so as to be ready for the early fall trade. Another city to have a Poli house will be Hartford, Conn., where a 3,000 seat house is promised. October 1 has been the date set for the new Poli Theater, Bridgeport, Conn., which will open as one of the finest houses in the state. Mr. Poli has just opened his new Bijou Dream in New Haven, and every report points to good business. Vaudeville and pictures are promised for all the new theaters.

Austin & Stone's Theater, Boston, has closed for the season, after a not over prosperous year, according to reports.

The Apollo Theater, Boston, playing vaudeville and pictures, has closed for the summer.

The New Orpheum Theater, Brockton, Mass., has been reorganized. Mr. Fidler, who formerly owned and managed this house, retains part interest, while Felix Alland of the Pastime Theater, Boston, William Murphy, manager of the Pastime, and Frank Duray, have bought an interest in the Orpheum. It is understood that Mr. Fidler retains half interest, and the other three men have the remainder between them. Licensed pictures and vaudeville are given, with Frank Duray as manager.

Dexter, Me., now has a real up-to-date theater, built especially for the exhibition of moving pictures. One of the leading physicians of the town, Dr. Haynes, and Mr. Whyman, are behind the new house, which has a seating capacity of 600 people. The new house, which has been named the Park Theater, opened on July 4.

The townspeople of Brunswick, Me., decided that moving pictures were the thing for them, and will build a nice theater, where exhibitions can be given. A house is now well under way, which will be a distinct credit to the town, when completed.

A moving picture show has been started in Farland's Block, East Millinocket, Me., which is the first moving picture show in town. Mr. Farland tells us that Licensed pictures and illustrated songs have taken the town by storm.

The Riverpoint Theater, Riverpoint, R. I., closed for the summer season after a most prosperous year's business. The house will reopen in the fall, with the regular program of Licensed pictures.

The Rockpoint Theater of Rockpoint, R. I., has opened for the summer season, and reports a good run of business. This summer theater does very well, and opens when the Riverpoint Theater closes. Both houses are owned by Messrs. Taunton Brothers. Manager McManus is well and favorably known to the trade as a clever and energetic picture man.

Manager Howe, who runs Pythian Hall, Booth Bay Harbor, Me., as a moving picture house during the winter, reports that he has had a good season's business. Mr. Bove, of Boston, operates the house during the summer and is now on the job. Manager Howe reports that he wants a house in this town that he can have the year around, and will have a theater of his own by early fall, which will be first class in every way. Booth Bay is a small town given over to the sardine industry, and never before has had two theaters open at the same time. On this account, many think that there is not sufficient business for both houses, and that one will surely go to the wall.

Mr. Joe J. Flynn, one of the best known of all New England amusement purveyors, opened his Casino Theater, Hampton Beach, N. H., on July 4. Moving pictures are to form a good portion of the programs.

Sheedy's Theater, of Brockton, Mass., does not believe in vaudeville over the summer, and is now operated as a straight picture house.

The Globe Theater, of Brockton, which uses the service of the W. E. Greene Film Exchange, of Boston, has closed over the summer, after prosperous business. This house will reopen late in August.

The Orpheum Theater, Brockton, which was recently taken over by Mr. Felix Alland, of the Pastime Theater, Boston, and by Manager Murphy, of the same house, reports that business has picked up in good shape, since the change in ownership.

Mr. Ralph Pinkham, formerly a valuable member of the force of the Boston offices of the General Film Company, is now associated with the Mutual Corporation, handling the product of the Film Supply Company of America. Mr. Pinkham, or just plain "Ralph," as he is known to many in the trade, will prove a valuable man to the Mutual concern, as he is acquainted with everyone connected with the moving picture business of New England.

Eddie Farrell, traveling representative of the Boston offices of the General Film Company, is a "fixer," which is intended to convey the idea that it is Mr. Farrell's business to find out whether the clients of the General Film have any complaints to offer, and, if so, to placate the disgruntled, and to fix things up. Mr. Farrell, who has just returned from a trip through Maine, tells us that the moving picture business is booming in that neck of the country, and that he has lined up many new customers.

Mr. T. F. Kiniry, proprietor and manager of the Dreamland Theater, Bellows Falls, Vermont, is now thoroughly overhauling and renovating his house.

The National Theater, Boston, has closed for the season. The house will reopen in August, and will offer the same policy as last year—Licensed pictures and vaudeville. The National is a B. F. Keith Theater, and seats over 4,000 people.

St. Johns, N. B., will soon have a new theater, as B. F. Keith has started work on a house in that city. By early fall, the house should be ready, and the policy will very probably be vaudeville and pictures. The house is to be built in the regular Keith way—which means a high-class, modern and fireproof theater.

Hoyt's Opera House of South Norwalk, Conn., has had a season of good business, and is closed for the hot weather. The house will reopen with the usual policy of vaudeville and photoplays.

W. H. Wolffe, manager of the Scenic Temple, Paragon Park, Nantasket, Mass., reports very good business with his picture programs.

A new moving picture theater is due to open next fall at Federal and Temple Streets, Portland, Me. The house expects to open with a program of pictures and songs, without any vaudeville.

The Scenic Theater, Westbrook, near Portland, Me., has opened the summer season, with a program of straight pictures, no vaudeville being used.

The Gem Theater, Peak's Island, Me., another summer theater, has opened for the summer.

The Riverton Park Theater near Portland, Me., opened for the season June 24.

The Congress Theater, Portland, Me., uses Licensed service, and seems to be doing very well indeed.

The Casco Theater, Portland, is both very cozy and very busy, and runs a good grade of Licensed service and songs.

Ensign Patch, of the U. S. S. Delaware, believes that exhibitions of moving pictures are just the thing to please his men while on board, and visited a number of Boston moving picture houses this week. Ensign Patch looked over projection in the houses, and spoke with the managers regarding the projection machines. After carefully looking things over, a Powers No. 6 was decided to be what was wanted, and the Delaware is having one installed, when regular exhibitions will be given on board.

HENRY.

SOUTH BETHLEHEM, PA.

GEORGE CLARK, formerly proprietor of a pool room, has opened an airdome on Broadway.

The Palace Theater has closed its doors for the summer months, and will reopen Labor Day.

The Pastime Airdome was reopened recently, and is attracting large crowds.

Bill Koch, who several months ago left the service of the Bijou, resumed his duties recently.

The Breeze, one of Burak Bros. theaters, opened recently, and is using Licensed service.

Elmer Gangewear, one of the foremost theatrical men in the city, has opened a first-class open air theater. Jos. Capella is the manager.

The old Market House has been converted into a theater, and was opened on Decoration Day. An Edison Model B machine has been installed, and everything is up-to-date. John Heine, late of the National Theater, is manager.

There is a rumor that a theater will be erected at Third and Northampton Streets.

The Gem Theater is dark for the summer months.

In addition to the National, a theater with beautiful blue sky for a top, has been opened recently, and has a seating capacity of 1,500. Vaudeville and pictures form the program.

SAMUEL CRISTOL.

AMONG THE EXHIBITORS.

La Crosse, Wis.—The formal opening of the La Crosse Theater as a motion picture playhouse by Messrs. Sherwood and McWilliams has been made.

Los Angeles, Cal.—J. E. Kunst has prepared plans for a moving picture theater in the building at No. 369 South Main Street, for the Portola Theater Company. The auditorium will be 49 x 100 feet, with a seating capacity of 700.

Houston, Minn.—Plans are being prepared for the erection of a new opera house to be constructed here.

Milwaukee, Wis.—Frank Rogowski, Lincoln and Twenty-third Ave., will erect a new moving picture theater, which will cost $8,000.

Rochester, N. Y.—A new moving picture theater will be erected at South Ave. and Gregory St.

Cincinnati, Ohio.—A new moving picture theater will be erected at the southwest corner of Broadway and East 12th St.

Newark, N. J.—A new moving picture theater will be erected on the southeast corner of Orange and North 6th Street.

Duluth, Minn.—Plans are being prepared for the erection of a new opera house to be erected here.

Rutland, Ill.—Vinecore Bros. are preparing to start a moving picture show in the Blandin Building, north of the postoffice.

Manhattan, Kan.—Work has commenced on the erection of a new Airdome which is being erected here.

Denver, Colo.—C. A. Shaw is erecting a one-story theater on 17th Street, between California and Welton Streets, at a cost of $15,000.

Detroit, Mich.—Work will commence on the erection of a new theater at Pitt St., between Quellette and Goyeau Streets.

Juneau, Wis.—Contractor Robert Ash completed the work in the interior of the old Yankey Building on Main Street, which will be used as a moving picture show.

Pueblo, Colo.—Plans are being prepared for the erection of a new Airdome to be erected at 6th Street, between Main and Santa Fe.

Creston, Ia.—Plans are being prepared for the erection of a new Airdome for the Benson & Hulburt Amusement Co.

Madison, Ind.—Mr. Joseph Henry has leased the Bardstown Opera House, and will convert it into a moving picture theater. Mr. Joseph Henry is of Madison, Ind.

Marshaltown, Iowa.—Mr. M. C. Rascroff sold the Lyric Theater, of this city, to Wilbur Inglone, who took possession of it on the 15th of April.

Los Angeles, Cal.—The Globe Amusement Company will erect a new theater, known as the Globe Theater, and will cost $55,000.

UNIVERSAL FEATURES

Features Which The Public Will Remember

TOM BUTLER

(2454 FEET)

Fifty changing, exciting scenes of sustained suspense. A better detective drama cannot be produced.

WARNING

We hereby warn all infringers, dupers and illegitimate film dealers in general that all subjects handled by UNIVERSAL FEATURES are copyrighted in the U. S. before said subjects are exhibited in Europe. Thus do we live up to the letter of the law. We will unrelentingly follow up and prosecute all infringers.

The Mystery of the Bridge of Notre Dame

(2418 FEET)

A Tremendous Tragedy of Police Episodes and Enigmatic Adventures. A Feat among Features.

THE FOLLOWING STATES ARE OPEN FOR

"BONNOT, The Demon Bandit"

The Fastest Selling of Any Recent Feature Release

CALIFORNIA
IDAHO NEVADA
NORTH DAKOTA
SOUTH DAKOTA
LOUISIANA
MISSISSIPPI ALABAMA
NEBRASKA
MICHIGAN

BETTER WIRE US — WE ASK NO BONUSES — WRITE OR WIRE FOR PRICES

Six Color Posters in Three, Two and One Sheets at Cost Prices

UNIVERSAL FEATURES

J. D. Tippetts, Mgr., Suite 3
225-27 W. 42nd St., N. Y

SPECIAL NOTICE OF INTEREST!

Beginning July 1st

The Continental Kunstfilm of Berlin

WILL RELEASE ALL THEIR TWO, THREE AND FOUR REEL FEATURES THROUGH THE

NEW YORK FILM COMPANY

Sole Agents for U. S., Canada and all America

Every ten days a new feature will be put on market with exclusive rights for exclusive territory. The films will be manufactured in this country by American labor taken from original imported negatives, all of which will be fully protected, registered and copyrighted in Washington.

We announce the following subjects to be released in logical order :—

1st Release Lights and Shadows of Chinatown, 3000 feet---
Released July 15, 1912.
2nd " At Night Through Icebergs, 3000 feet.
3rd " The Jealous Impersonator, 2000 feet.
4th " THE MIRACLE, 3500 feet.

Read Synopsis of "Lights and Shadows of Chinatown" in this issue

Synopsis, also Samples of Lithographs, will be Mailed Upon Request

NEW YORK FILM COMPANY 12 UNION SQUARE NEW YORK, N. Y.

Song Slide Releases.

Levi Company, Inc. (Motion Song Slides).

"You're My Baby"—Pub. by Jerome H. Remick & Co.
"Oh, You Dear, Sweet, Wonderful Boy"—Pub. by Kendis & Paley, New York.
"Good-Bye, Rose"—Pub. by Shapiro Co.
"Take Me Back to the Garden of Love"—Pub. by Ted Snyder Co.

Levi Company, Inc. (Current Events).

The Allen Outlaws.
Mississippi Floods.

A. L. Simpson, Inc.

"I Want a Patriotic Girl"—Pub. by J. H. Aufderheide & Co., Indianapolis, Ind.
"No Matter Who or What You Are It's Great to be in Love"—Pub. by Chas. K. Harris, New York.
"Down in Texas by the Silvery Rio Grande"—Pub. by Jos. Albert Shultz, Houston, Texas.
"'Tis Sad to have no Mother"—Pub. by Jos. Albert Shultz, Houston, Texas.
"Is it Love or Admiration?"—Pub. by J. Fred Helf Co., New York.
"I Will Love You When the Silver Threads are Shining Among the Gold"—Pub. by McKinley Music Co., Chicago, Ill.
"Sing Me a Song of Twilight"—Pub. by William Cutty Music Co., New York.
"If You were Only Here"—Pub. by Geo. W. Meyers Music Co., New York.
"Mandy Come Out in the Pale Moonlight"—Pub. by Chas. I. Davis, Cleveland, O.
"Honey You can Turn the World Around for Me"—Pub. by Musicians' Music Pub. Co., New York.

Scott & Van Altena.

"That's How I Need You"—Pub. by Leo Feist.
"She's Gone Again"—Pub. by Will Rossiter.
"Queen of My Air Castle Dreams"—Pub. by Brown Music Company.
"Mary Was My Mother's Name"—Pub. by Joe. Morris Music Co.
"Silver Water"—Pub. by Jos. W. Stern & Co.
"Au Revoir, Sweet Marie"—Pub. by Jos. W. Stern Co.
"That Subway Glide"—Pub. by Jos. W. Stern Pub. Co.
"Lincoln's College Flag"—Pub. by J. Fred Helf Pub. Co.
"When Old Folks were Young Folks"—Pub. by Joe Morris Music Co.
"I'm Lonesome for Someone"—Pub. by Longbrake & Edwards.

A. J. Clapham Feature Lectures.

"Titanic Disaster."
"Allen Clan."
"Mississippi Flood."
"Purgatory & Paradise."
"Seeing America—Section 4."
"Most Popular Candidates."

Songs.

"Pretty Face"—James S. White Music Co., Boston.

DeWitt C. Wheeler, Inc.

"Little by Little"—Pub. by M. Witmark & Sons.
"The Trolley Car Swing"—Pub. by J. H. Remick & Co.
"Laugh and Let the Clouds Roll By"—Pub. by Jerome & Schwartz Pub. Co.
"I Want a Little Loving Sometimes"—Pub. by J. H. Remick & Co.
"Kentucky Days"—Pub. by Wenrich Howard.
"Oh You May!"—Pub. by J. H. Remick & Co.

WE CAN MAKE AND DEVELOP MOVING PICTURES OF ANYTHING.
Our Plant Is Fully Equipped to Make Perfect Pictures.
Our Camera Men Are Experts.
Our Prices Are Reasonable.
Write Us—We Want to Bid on Your Work.
The Parisian Mfg. & Film Renovating Co., 4940 Wentworth Ave. CHICAGO
Fred L. Tilly, President & General Manager.

SOMETHING NEW
THE UNBREAKABLE AND WASHABLE E-Z BLANK MICA SLIDE MAKE YOUR OWN ANNOUNCEMENTS
Made of Specially Prepared Mica That Can be Written on as Easily as Paper
PRICE 25 CENTS EACH
BATTERSHALL & OLESON, 39 W. ADAMS ST CHICAGO, ILL.

SLIDES
OF ALL KINDS
Send for Catalogue "W" of our new line of beautiful
ANNOUNCEMENT SLIDES
Each slide illustrated from life and most exquisitely colored. The Chicago Song Slide Exchange, 6th floor, Powers Bldg., Chicago, Ill., have the exclusive agency for our announcement slides in the states of Wisconsin, Ohio, Illinois, Indiana, Michigan and Iowa.
Advertising Slides at Reasonable Rates
Our Song Slide Catalogue of 500 different songs free to anyone for the asking.
SCOTT & VAN ALTENA
59 PEARL STREET NEW YORK CITY

EXHIBITORS' HEADQUARTERS
CALEHUFF SUPPLY COMPANY
(Incorporated)
50 North Eighth Street, Philadelphia, Pa.
Jobbers in Edison, Powers and Motiograph Machines and Parts
Machines repaired by expert mechanics. Genuine parts only used.
SPECIALTIES
Mirror Screens, Chairs, Tickets, Pianos, Bio & Electric Carbons, Special Gundlach Lenses, Condensers, Edison Transformers, Ft. Wayne Compensarcs, Asbestos State Booths, Asbestos Wire, Switches, Plugs, Spotlights, Gas Making Outfits, Limes, Film Cement, Branch General Disinfectant Co., Scenery, Stage Effects, Theatres Bought, Sold, Rented
CHAS. A CALEHUFF, Pres. and Gen. Mgr.

GOLDEN SONG REVUE with FOOLISH QUESTIONS in Motion and SPIEGEL MOTION SONG SLIDES are made exclusively by us. The only real slide attractions.
Write us for full information about them.
LEVI CO., Inc., 1560 Broadway, New York City

COMING FEATURES

IT'S HERE! IT'S HERE!

THE BIGGEST FEATURE EVER PRESENTED ON AN INDEPENDENT PROGRAM!

FLORENCE LAWRENCE

IN VICTOR RELEASE

"IN SWIFT WATERS"

A Clever Comedy with a Lovable Star. It's a Laugh Getter and a Money Getter.

DEMAND IT! BOOK IT! GET IT!

"WINNING THE LATONIA DERBY"

Thursday, July 18th A TWO REEL IMP

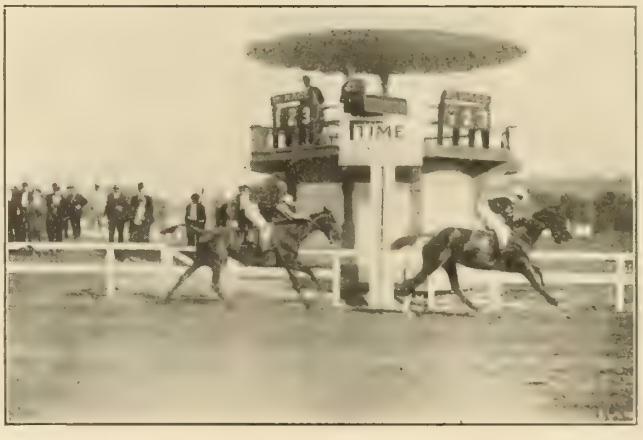
Copyrighted, 1912.
Universal Film Mfg. Co.

It is simply a smasher. Love and hate, plot and counter-plot, scheming and counter-scheming all lead up to the grand climax, which shows the actual winning of the Latonia Derby in the presence of 30,000 people. This Imp play was staged on the largest and finest stock farm in America, located in the heart of the Blue Grass Region, and owned by Mr. J. E. Madden. The race itself, of course, was taken at the famous Latonia track. It's the greatest horserace picture ever produced, and IT'S UP TO YOU TO BOOM IT WITH ALL YOUR MIGHT!

2000 FEET—AND EVERY FOOT GREAT!

Played by King Baggot and the strongest supporting company he has ever had. Think what that means—then get very busy!



THE TRIUMPH OF LOVE

A MILANO FEATURE

A Mythological Masterpiece in Two Reels. Like a Page of the Classic Past.

Universal Film Mfg. Co.

1 Union Square :: :: :: :: :: New York City

LICENSED Film Stories

LUBIN.

HONOR THY FATHER (July 15).—Caleb Harris has not been able to keep pace with the times and loses his business. His wife tries to help him, and writes to their son, John, of the old man's trouble. John and his wife, Ethel, are both willing and anxious to help, and offer the old folks a home, but Caleb's pride will not permit him to accept. John conceives a plan and arranges with a commission house to employ his father, assuming the salary himself. The old man, believing that they want his experience, accepts, and all goes well for six months, when Caleb's health begins to fail. John and Ethel again visit the old couple and insist on consulting a physician, who tells them that Caleb must stop work at once and have rest and quiet. John, at a loss what to do, happens to find the deed of fifty acres of Texas land which Caleb had bought many years before and which John knows to be worthless. He shows the deed to Ethel, who conceives the idea of making the old couple believe that it is valuable, and through the aid of John's lawyer, Caleb receives a letter making an offer of $1,000 a year as rental for the property. Believing themselves self-supporting, the old couple agree to go and live with John and Ethel. The last scene shows them seated by the fireside, where they see a vision of fertile farm land, which they believe is yielding them an income, and which is the result of a wise investment made years before.

THE SENORITA'S REMORSE (July 17).—Of all the flowers in the garden, none can compare with the beautiful rose on the arbor, but try as she will, little Perdita finds she cannot reach it. Unnoticed by Perdita, Trovio appears, and, seeing her predicament, procures the desired blossom and accepts her thanks. It was Perdita's good fortune that Trovio chanced to glance in her direction after they parted, for she had not gone far before meeting the pernicious Alfonso, who tried to persuade her to accompany him to the tavern. Seeing Alfonso's unwelcomed presence, Trovio rushes to her assistance, commands Alfonso to go and offers his protection. For his double kindness, Perdita gives Trovio the rose. Seeing Perdita and Trovio, her mother takes her to task for making "chance" acquaintance. For Trovio's interference, Alfonso vows vengeance, and meeting Manuel, bribes him to carry out a scheme which, if successful, means no escape for Trovio. In the grounds surrounding the alcalde's court, Manuel rushes up to Trovio, and, without provocation, slaps him in the face. Trovio whips out his dagger and pursues Manuel, as the latter turns and runs away squealing "Robber!" Of course Alfonso happened to be a witness to the attack, and Trovio with the dagger in his hands, is quickly tried, convicted, and sentenced to five years of imprisonment. Even though she has been forbidden, Perdita cannot resist stealing away when she sees Trovio in the crowd, and, rushing forward, she arrives just in time to see him heavily ironed and taken to prison. Hearing that Trovio has been sentenced to prison, she faints on the steps of the court. Alfonso and Manuel offer to take her to her home, but instead, they take her to a tavern, where in her dazed condition, wine is forced to her lips until she swoons. Gloating over her helplessness, Alfonso dispatches Manuel to notify her mother. Seeing her apparently dissipated, the mother disowns Perdita. Without home or friends, Perdita's only course is the life of a coquette. After five years, Trovio is freed and it is while she is passing "La Cantina Verdugo" that he chances to see Perdita in company of Alfonso. When Alfonso leaves his table, Trovio starts towards Perdita, but the latter flees from the place, and, rushing through the garden, she draws a dagger and plunges it into her heart. Trovio comes upon her just as Perdita is breathing her last, and taking the faded rose which he has treasured, lays it on her breast just as the light of her life goes out.

TOGETHER (July 18).—Dr. Halliday, an eye specialist of fame, his wife Rose and little daughter, May, are well-to-do and should be happy, but the spark of love in the family is wanting. The father and mother are rather indifferent to the child and when she asks for caresses, she gets perfunctory kisses instead of the warm embrace of affection. The doctor and his wife are also cold to each other and lack endearment. Finally, with no apparent reason, they separate. Halliday leaves the home and takes apartments, the wife staying, keeping the child. A few months pass and each are contented. Sickness, however, enters the house, little May taking the measles. A doctor is called in and attends the child, giving the necessary instructions to the mother and nurse, one important point being that no light may be permitted to enter the room, or it will affect the eyes. One day a lady friend calls on Mrs. Halliday and induces her to go to a matinee. The mother gives the nurse due instructions for the care of the sick child. Being left alone and restless, little May gets out of bed, goes to the window and opens it wide. The light hurts her eyes and she closes it and gets back into the bed. The malady having passed, May is again playing upon the street when she suddenly becomes blind. Shrieking she gropes back to her mother. Rose can only think of one man to whom she can appeal for help, it is her husband. She phones for Halliday, who quickly responds. He places the child under treatment and binds the eyes. The day comes to remove the bandage. Halliday is there. The light is let into May's eyes and she is effectually cured.

THE UNINVITED GUESTS (July 19).—Two convicts, who make their escape from jail, take advantage of a masquerade ball which is in progress. They steal a couple of masques, and enter the ball room as masqueraders. For the first time in some months they are enjoying themselves to the strains of sweet music on a ballroom floor. They induce two gentlemen, who are masquerading as policemen, to exchange clothes with them. They make their "getaway" at an early hour in the morning in their police uniforms. They breakfast on bread and milk, which they get from the early merchants. In the meantime the guards are on the track of the convicts, and mistake the two gentlemen wearing the convict clothes home. Here a lively chase follows. While the prison guards are chasing the supposed convicts, another crowd is chasing the real convicts, whom they think are police, and wondering why policemen got frightened at burglars and ran away. The whole affair comes to a lively finish when the two crowds meet. The guards are rewarded for their chase by catching the right men.

BUSTER'S DREAM (July 19).—This story is of three suburban families: Mr. and Mrs. and Buster White, Mr. and Mrs. and Brooks Black, and Mr. and Mrs. and Henrietta Brown. The male parents return from the city and meet their families on the lawn. White has a cowboy's suit for Buster. Black has an Indian suit for Brooks. They dress the boys in the suits. Meanwhile, Henrietta has put on one of her mother's dresses and goes out of the house and shows it. Buster is proudly showing his cowboy suit, when Brooks bounds into view, with an Indian suit on. An altercation ensues between the boys; Brooks fells Buster and drags the weeping Henrietta away as Buster is being carried into the house. Buster is put to bed and dreams that Brooks takes Henrietta to the Indian camp, he and his trusty band of cowboys follow, and as Henrietta is about to be burned at the stake Buster rushes in, kills the Indians, saves Henrietta, only to awaken and find his mother and father and Henrietta bending over him. The children are left alone, and once more the villain fails and virtue is triumphant.

A WESTERN COURTSHIP (July 20).—The Reynolds family, consisting of mother, her son Bill and daughter Louise, live on a tidy ranch outside of Tucson. Mrs. Reynolds is ill and Mary Wills, a trained nurse, has been engaged to care for the sick woman. Bill is attracted by the pretty nurse and quickly falls in love with her. Bill, however, does not wish to allow his sister the same privilege, for he has forbidden her to meet Tom Jones, a neighboring ranchman, whose affection is warmly returned by Louise. Bill has no particular reason for his grouch toward Tom. Louise, considering that her brother has no right to interfere in what she regards as strictly a matter of her own, pays no attention to him, but continues to meet her lover without Bill's knowledge. Coming unexpectedly upon the couple one day, Bill, who has a devil of a temper, draws his gun and shoots Tom. The latter falls, apparently dead. Finding it impossible to revive the injured man, Bill sends Louise to the ranch house for Mary, thinking her medical skill may be of some avail. Bill waits beside Tom for her return. Louise rides until her horse goes lame. The case seems desperate till she sees standing outside a wayside saloon, a bunch of horses, one of which she takes and hastens on with it. The horse she has taken belongs to Tony, Tom's Mexican friend, who, upon finding the horse missing, starts in pursuit with his friends. Louise eludes her pursuers by a clever ruse, gets Mary and both start at once to return to the wounded man. In the meantime, Tony and his party have come across the scene of the shooting, and believing Tom dead, they determine to lynch Bill. Sheriff Watkins, however, who is riding by, interrupts the lynching, but when informed of Bill's deed, takes the entire party back to the scene of the shooting. Much to the surprise of everybody, the supposedly dead man is sitting up and getting along well under the care of Mary and Louise. The sheriff offers to arrest Bill if Tom says so, but Tom refuses to prosecute and Bill can do no less than withdraw his objection to Tom marrying his sister.

CINES.

DISOWNED (July 16).—Daisy, the charming daughter of a rich nobleman, falls deeply in love with her language teacher and agrees to marry him, although well knowing that her parents strongly object to the match and will disinherit her.

For a time the young couple manage to live in comfort, but soon misfortune knocks at the door. The faithful little wife solicits pupils for her husband from among her former wealthy friends, but with little success; they now turn a deaf ear to the disinherited girl.

Their condition grows from bad to worse and with starvation apparently staring them in the face, Daisy, in desperation, plans to take her own life by means of the charcoal fire, in order to lessen her husband's burden, and writes him a note to that effect. Fortunately, the husband returns not long afterward, and reading the note, rushes to his wife's room, where he finds her stretched apparently lifeless upon the floor. He acts well in the crisis; opening the doors and windows, and by arduous work, he manages to restore life to her body.

And it soon develops that the proud old parents hear of the attempt, and realizing the predicament of the unhappy pair, decide to forgive and forget and to take them back under their protection.

THE PART THE SERVANT PLAYED (July 20).—Gaspard, the old servant of the family, is greatly attached to his young master, George, and looks after him with scrupulous care. When George becomes engaged to a charming young lady and incurs his father's wrath, Gaspard suffers deeper pain than his master. Overhearing a conversation in which the father angrily threatens to disinherit his son, the old servitor later generously offers to lend his savings of a lifetime to the unhappy youth.

With this assistance, George decides to take the step, and sends an invitation to his father to be present at the wedding. The parent is very indignant and is about to send a curt refusal, when Gaspard enters the room and insists upon his presence at the ceremony.

The arguments of the old servant are successful and the two arrive just in time for the father to extend his blessing. They then gather in a happy company, and old Gaspard is the merriest of them all.

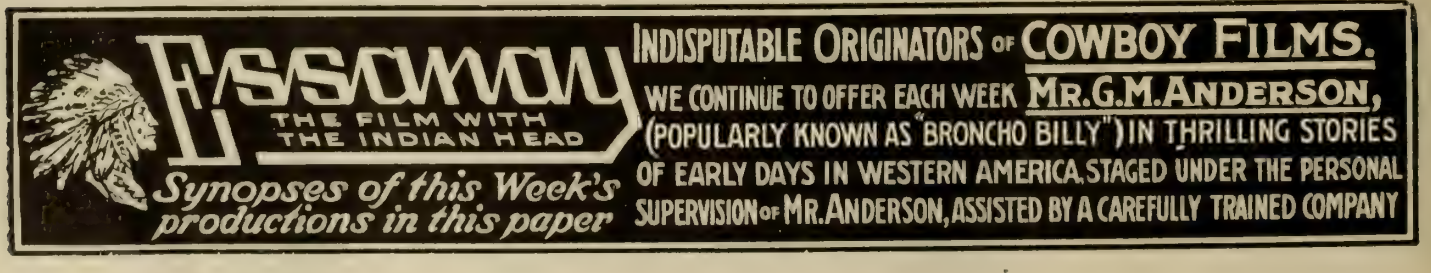
ECLIPSE.

THE GRANDMOTHER (July 17).—The grandmother, a dear old lady with a big, loving heart, cannot bear to see any of her children suffer. One day, she receives a letter from her granddaughter, pleading for permission to return home, although she knows that her parents will never forgive her runaway marriage. In vain the old lady argues with the parents, and then in her grief, visits the poor widow and her little son. Together they dress the child in ragged clothes and send him to sing in front of the parents' mansion.

At the request of the grandmother, little John, in disguise, is admitted and is permitted to spend the night. Unfortunately, the next morning, an overzealous butler heartlessly turns the little fellow out. When this is discovered, grandmother frantically reveals his identity, and soon consternation pervades the household.

The terrified parents immediately institute a careful search of the neighborhood and in their anxiety, even send for their daughter to return home.

In the meantime, little John, unconscious of the unusual proceedings, returns to the mansion and is soon discovered calmly eating his porridge. Everybody is so overjoyed that the past is forgotten and the happiest of all is "grandma" with her little darling safe in her arms.



Essanay
THE FILM WITH THE INDIAN HEAD
Synopses of this Week's productions in this paper
INDISPUTABLE ORIGINATORS OF COWBOY FILMS.
WE CONTINUE TO OFFER EACH WEEK MR. G. M. ANDERSON,
(POPULARLY KNOWN AS "BRONCHO BILLY") IN THRILLING STORIES
OF EARLY DAYS IN WESTERN AMERICA, STAGED UNDER THE PERSONAL
SUPERVISION OF MR. ANDERSON, ASSISTED BY A CAREFULLY TRAINED COMPANY

WATCH! WAIT! LOOK!

For Sensational Announcements in next week's issue on this and the opposite page.

We will have something to say that will be of the most vital interest to every exhibitor in the United States.

Ohio Exhibitors, write our Cleveland, Ohio, Branch, 212 Columbia Building.

We want every picture theatre owner and manager to send us his name and address. Do so at once, and you will learn something that will interest you.

WARNER'S FEATURES

Suite 806-807-808 Exchange Building

145 WEST 45th STREET NEW YORK

KALEM.

THE LAIR OF THE WOLF (July 15).—Edith Larabee lives with her parents on the farm, and is beloved by and betrothed to Hank Hawkins, an honest young man in her father's employ. Their happiness is unbroken until the arrival of Wallace Raven, a New Yorker, who comes to the Larabee home to board for the summer. Raven is attracted by Edith, who attempts to repulse his advances, but at the same time she is not displeased with the city man.

Upon his return to New York, Raven writes to Edith, asking her to come to the city and marry him. The unsophisticated girl runs away from home and leaves a note for her parents. Raven meets her at the Pennsylvania Station and conducts her to his apartments. There she learns his true character, and climbing from the window she descends the fire-escape and reaches the apartment of an old bachelor who protects her. Edith finds her way to a police station and asks the authorities to help her to return home.

In the meantime, Hank discovers the note which Edith received from Raven, and, determined to protect his misguided sweetheart, he comes to New York and locates Raven. The latter denies all knowledge of the girl, but Hank discovers a wrap which she left in her flight, and unable to control his anger, he attacks the blackguard. Raven's butler hurries to the street and brings back an officer, who leads the two men to jail. There Hank meets Edith and tells his story to the sergeant.

The final scene shows the simple but happy farm where Edith is content to spend her days with Hank as a loving husband.

THE SUFFRAGETTE SHERIFF (July 17).—Rattlesnake Bill and his industrious wife enjoyed the simple life until the arrival of Bill's old maid sister. The latter was an ardent suffragette, and so convincingly did she expound her doctrines that the good wife became dissatisfied with her lot, and left the kitchen to enlighten those of her sex who dwelt in darkness.

Bill, unaccustomed to work of any kind, found the household duties decidedly irksome. When his wife was elected to the office of sheriff he saw it was up to him to do something desperate and gathering together several of his cronies, he unfolded the deep-laid plot. It was agreed that he should pretend to kill a man. Then it would devolve upon the sheriff to bring the supposed murdered to justice—a proceeding which Bill inherently felt would be impossible with his better-half. Old Judge Soft was duly advised of the plan and the little drama began to enact itself. The principals, however, were not aware that the resourceful sheriff had overheard the plot.

The trial was a weird affair. Bill could scarcely control his laughter and the judge more than once forgot his dignity as he beheld the spectacle which the lady officials presented by their earnestness. The magistrate calmly issued the command, "sheriffess, carry out the execution!" and Bill, to his horror, could discover no change of heart in his wife's determined expression. To the scaffold the conspirator was led summarily. The sheriff attended to the adjusting of noose and trap with unusual dexterity.

Bill's cry of "This has gone far enough!" was ignored. The trap was sprung and the schemer fell—not into oblivion, but into a tank of water which had been installed by the sheriff and her deputies.

EDISON.

NERVES AND THE MAN (July 16).—Tom, a happily married young clerk, is a victim of the worry habit. For almost no reason at all he fears losing his job and in imagination sees himself and his wife and little son dispossessed and put out upon the street. Dwelling upon this throught becomes a sort of mania to him and eventually makes him almost a nervous wreck. He finally leaves the office one night prepared to give up the fight.

Upon arriving at home he finds that the doctor is there and that his little son has suddenly been seized with an attack of croup, and only most careful watching and care through the night will save the child's life. In his down and out condition, Tom pleads with the doctor to do something for him also, but the physician, appreciating the circumstances, tells Tom that his wife needs him and that, as the man of the house, it is up to him to shoulder the burden and carry the responsibility of the nursing through the night. Looking at his wife, Tom realizes that this is true and in spite of her protests, after the doctor has gone, makes her lie down and prepares himself for a night of vigil. It is a pretty strong ordeal for him and as the long hours drag slowly by, he is full of anxiety and it requires a constant effort to keep awake. But in those midnight hours he finds that the real self within him is much stronger than he had supposed, and when he measures up the state of his child alongside the possible loss of his job, he realizes that his imaginary trouble was a very slight affair indeed. Consequently, when the morning dawns and the child is on the road to recovery, Tom's wife wakes to find that the night has restored to her not only her child, but her husband. He has found himself again and conquered his worry.

REVENGE IS SWEET (July 17).—Jimmie has a good job in an office where there is a bevy of pretty girls, but being at that age where his appreciation of the fair sex has not developed, he considers them inferior to him. So it is his pleasure to make all the fun he can for himself at their expense.

This time he reckons without his host. There is plenty for Jimmie to do, errands to be run and dust to be kept off the furniture in the office. Lunch time comes around; the girls all chip in and get Jimmie to buy their lunch, but not a minute does he do it without "getting his" in the shape of a generous tip. Soon in he comes with an armful, ginger ale and bananas for himself, ice cream, pickles, crackers and what not for the girls. It is a royal feast and they enjoy it.

There is one pretty girl in the office who powders her face too often to suit Jimmie and he consequently chides her about it. She daubs his face with the puff. This is too much for his boyish pride and he decides to get even. He does so, and so do they. It wont spoil your fun to say that Jimmie goes out to buy cigars for his boss and in passing a paint store sees a sign advertising the sale of lampblack. Now you'll say, "I know, the powder box." That, however, isn't all. When you see it you'll have one good, hearty laugh at what the girls did to Jimmie.

THE MAPLE SUGAR INDUSTRY AT THOMPSON, PA. (July 17).—The film was made at Thompson, Pa., and covers the industry from the tapping of the trees, from which the sap oozes as thin and colorless as spring water, to the final stage of crystallization after which it is made ready to crate and ship to market. The process of evaporation, depicting the old and new method, is of decided interest when one learns that for every gallon of maple syrup, forty gallons of sap have been collected, boiled down, and put through the process of evaporation and other subsequent operation necessary to the product.

THE NECKLACE OF CRUSHED ROSE LEAVES (July 19).—We are first introduced to the principal of the drama at an Italian dance. Prominent among the merry makers is one by the name of Tony, a wild, free-hearted lad, who is in love with all the girls and they with him. The deep passion of life, however, has never entered into his thoughts as most of these girls take his jollity lightly and a kiss as a kiss and nothing more, and thus he goes on his merry way until he meets one by the name of Zella, and when he tries to kiss her, it is an insult and he receives a box on the ears that makes him think.

Here is something different: the inevitable happens and he falls deeply, fondly, devotedly in love with her. Her slightest wish is his greatest desire to grant, so when he chances to hear her tell of a rare necklace of crushed rose leaves she has been shown at the priest's house, his only desire is to secure her one, but none is to be had except that which lies hidden in the little, ancient chest at the priest's home. So, regardless of all consequences, he steals the steel-bound chest and takes it to a locksmith to open. Now it so happens that this same locksmith is in love with a dark-eyed lassie who loves Tony. It is here that all the trouble begins. Word is passed from mouth to mouth and at last Zella hears that Tony is the thief. Torn by anguish and love she decides to secure the chest and return it to the priest to save the man she loves, but the sequence of affairs turns out differently for, in securing the chest at night, she is shot and seriously wounded. She crawls, however, to the home of the good priest, and returns the chest, and is cared for by him, being almost on the point of death. At last Tony realizes all that has happened and humbly goes to the priest for forgiveness and consolation. Through evil he learns good and the picture closes at the foot of the altar with a prayer to God for His forgiveness.

THE LITTLE ARTIST OF THE MARKET (July 20).—An American architect traveling in Europe with his wife and little son, comes upon an Italian artist painting on the Riviera. Little Joe, the artist's son, is lying beside him, drawing on a piece of paper. While admiring the artist's work, the architect's eye falls upon the drawing of the boy; he is struck by the lad's unusual talent which is along the lines of architectural drawing.

A year later, the artist having died, little Joe is brought to New York at the request of his only living relative, an uncle, who is a fruit dealer. The uncle and his wife mistreat the little orphan in various ways, forcing him to sleep in the cellar and only half feeding him.

The boy's inherent artistic tendencies cause him to make drawings on all the available fruit boxes at the stand, using the charcoal from the uncle's peanut roaster as a crayon and drawing the designs from his recollection of the old buildings in Italy.

Joe's only friend is Rowdy, a stray dog which he has befriended, and with which, unknown to the uncle, he has shared his miserable quarters and meager food supply.

The American architect has returned from Europe, and is distracted over the death of his little son. Therefore he is unable to get an inspiration for the plans of an exposition building upon which he is bidding. The idea of which he is in search finally comes through seeing one of little Joe's drawings on an orange box which is delivered by a peddler. He searches for the person who made the drawing and is rewarded by finding little Joe in the cellar, ill and with Rowdy as his only companion. He arranges with the sordid uncle to adopt the boy, and, incidentally, the dog.

While Joe is convalescing, the grateful architect asks the boy his greatest wish. After thinking, little Joe draws a picture of a dog house for his canine friend.

PATHE.

PATHE'S WEEKLY No. 28—1912—(July 8).—Sydney, Australia—The Governor-General of Australia, Lord Denman, and his wife, Lady Denman, open the Royal Agricultural show.

Philadelphia, Pa.—The Commencement Exercises at the University of Pennsylvania include a parade of the Alumni on the Campus.

Coatesville, Pa.—Dr. W. F. M. Goss, Dean of the College of Engineering, University of Illinois, conducts low water boiler tests in both the ordinary radial stay type of fire-box and the Jacobs-Shupert Sectional, in which the former explodes.

New London, Conn.—Harvard wins the great Harvard-Yale 8-oar 'Varsity race on the Thames.

London, England—King George V. reviews a detachment of the army parading in honor of his birthday.

Melbourne, Australia—A recent storm at sea washes great quantities of foam onto the beach, giving the curious appearance of snow.

Lexington, Va.—Gov. Mann witnesses the unveiling of the statue of General "Stonewall" Jackson by the late General's little grandchild, Anna Jackson Preston, in the arms of Mammy Betty.

ON THE BRINK OF THE CHASM (July 10).—Three settlers, one a woman, are attacked by Indians. It so happens that one of the men is the accepted sweetheart of the girl, and the other is the rejected suitor. The latter, in order to save his friends, manages to help them escape, while he, himself, is trapped within a burning cabin. He, too, however, escapes because the Indians, believing he will burn to death, leave the cabin to pursue the others. The lovers finally are caught, tied to a stake and are about to be burned to death, when on the crest of a nearby hill suddenly looms up the figure of the man supposed to have perished amid the charred embers of the cabin. He holds aloft in his hand an Indian pappoose, and having made sure that the Indians see it, he rides desperately away, hotly pursued by the Indians, who leave their victims for the while. Finally, catching up with the fleeing pale face, they find him standing on a little projecting rock eighty feet above the roaring mountain stream; one hand is outstretched over the dizzy abyss and from this hand dangles the helpless Indian child. Warning the Indians that if they approach he will dash the child to the rocks below, he parleys with them, and finally holding the child as a hostage, sends them back to release his friends. The timely arrival of other traders saves the trio at the last moment, when everything began to look very dark.

HIS WIFE'S OLD SWEETHEART (July 11).—This fascinating story of old Mexico deals with a woman who discarded a wealthy lover for a poor man. Eventually they sink to greater and greater

ESSANAY
THE FILM WITH THE INDIAN HEAD
Synopses of this Week's productions in this paper
INDISPUTABLE ORIGINATORS OF COWBOY FILMS.
WE CONTINUE TO OFFER EACH WEEK MR. G. M. ANDERSON, (POPULARLY KNOWN AS "BRONCHO BILLY") IN THRILLING STORIES OF EARLY DAYS IN WESTERN AMERICA, STAGED UNDER THE PERSONAL SUPERVISION OF MR. ANDERSON, ASSISTED BY A CAREFULLY TRAINED COMPANY

Hand-colored Exhibitors, DON'T miss this colored idyl. Another flower story of brilliant originality

LOVE'S FLORAL TRIBUTE

ONE REEL

THURSDAY, JULY 25

FILM SUPPLY CO. OF AMERICA

133 W. 44TH ST., N. Y. C., DISTRIBUTORS

Scene from "The Story of Chopin."

Tuesday, July 23

THE SILENT CASTLE (hand-colored)

Thursday, Aug. 1

A Romance of the Palm Garden

GAUMONT CO.
Flushing, N. Y.

Tuesday, July 16

LOVE'S SUREST PROOF

Thursday, July 18

The Lion's Revenge

(Hand-colored)

Scene from "The Lion's Revenge." July 18.

Scene from "That Troublesome Bird."

THE PRISON on the CLIFF

TWO REELS—Black and White—TUESDAY, JULY 30

Quite a few exhibitors have been fortunate enough to see this feature at the several recent film conventions, particularly at Chicago, Atlanta, Lexington, Cleveland and Wheeling, where D. W. McKinney exhibited it. In each case "The Prison on the Cliff" has met with unstinted approval. There's a reason, you can bet. Sensationality and picturesque beauty have never been so harmoniously or ideally combined. Watch the Trade Papers' next few issues for the story and criticism.

MAKE 'EM YOURSELF SLIDES

Make them yourself. Written with pen and ink or typewriter. Three minutes to make a slide. Used for advertising slides, to announce future or feature programmes, for chorus slides when chorus slide is missing. We send four colors of gelatin. The slides look well and any one can make them. They are handy also for announcing vaudeville acts. In fact they may be readily used for anything you may wish to say to your audience.

For the sum of three dollars ($3) cash with order, we will send by express, charges not prepaid, or $3.50 by registered mail, prepaid, the following:

24 cover glass, 1 package binder strips, 1 dozen mats, 1 instruction sheet, 1 form sheet and 50 strips assorted colors gelatin—enough for from 300 to 400 slides. Order now. Address

UTILITY TRANSPARENCY CO.

1733 West 9th St., Brooklyn, N. Y.

IF

you want to crowd your Theater during the warm weather, you must use

FEATURES

We have hundreds of big productions for RENT, with elaborate advertising matter.

SPECIAL FILM CO.

5 West 14th St. New York

MOVING PICTURE MACHINES & LANTERNS

BRIGHTER THAN CALCIUM.

OZO-CARBI LIGHT

PATENTED

NO SATURATOR—OPENS NEW FIELDS FOR MOVING PICTURES.

SPECIAL SLIDES TO ORDER ALSO CARRY SLIDES ON ALL SUBJECTS.

Moore Hubbell & Co.

34 N. Franklin St. Chicago. Ill Send for Catalogue.

poverty until she has to work for the support of herself and her children. One day she meets her old lover, who notices her plight and offers to relieve her poverty with a monetary gift—which she refuses. The husband seeing this and misconstruing the motive, leaves his wife and children and threatens the wealthy Mexican with death. Everything, however, is ultimately straightened out to the satisfaction of everybody.

THE UNWILLING BRIDE (July 13).—When the daughter of an Indian chief is given in marriage to the chief of a neighboring tribe, he sends a messenger to bring her. The Indian princess and the messenger fall in love and get married themselves, which, of course, results in their both being fugitives from their tribesmen. How they manage to ultimately escape, forms a series of intensely interesting pictures.

THE ADOPTED CHILD (July 8).—This two-reel subject deals with the life history of a little girl named Marion, who is adopted by some kind-hearted ragpickers when her mother dies in squalid poverty. Marion's father is in America trying to make a fortune. The years roll around and Marion grows to beautiful womanhood, when Dr. Verdier falls in love with her. One day Dr. Verdier is called in to treat a lady named Mrs. Dartes; she is the second wife of Marion's father, though, of course, Dr. Verdier does not know that Mr. Dartes is Marion's father. The doctor and Dartes finally get into an altercation and have a duel by the light of a lantern held by a ragpicker named Smiley. In the feeble rays of his lantern, Smiley recognizes the resemblance between Mr. Dartes and the photograph Marion has of her lost father. This eventually brings about the reunion of father and daughter, but the stepmother, who in the meantime has fallen in love with Verdier, much to the latter's discomfort, causes untold trouble and misery to the poor girl, who now has so much happiness due her. The story ends happily, however, in a whirlwind of excitement.

C. G. P. C.

THE GEISHA'S LOVE STORY (July 9).—A Geisha girl is betrothed to a young Japanese gentleman, but she is loved by a stranger who to all appearances is a gentleman, but who proves himself otherwise. This latter man hires a Japanese bandit to carry the girl off, so that he may get her away from her parents and her betrothed. The bandit succeeds in carrying the girl away to his cave in the mountains, where the stranger lover comes to win her hand. In the meantime the bandit himself has fallen in love with the young lady and gives ear to her pleadings to be returned to her parents. He fights the lover and, winning, returns the lamented pet to her sorrowing parents.

MAX TAKES TONICS (July 12).—Max is sick and his doctor prescribes a medicine, and the dose is a Bordeaux wineglass full. Upon his return to his home the only glass Max can find is one that holds about a quart, but it's marked "Souvenir of Bordeaux;" consequently he drinks his tonic at one gulp and becomes marvelously inebriated. Wending his rather unsteady way in the street, he has an altercation with Don Brigands, the Albanian ambassador, and they exchange cards, hoping to meet in a duel the next day. He has the same experience with General Snobsky, of the Army, and Mr. Catchem, Commissioner of Police. Being unable to navigate further, Max hangs himself on a lamppost, where he is discovered by a policeman who, finding the Police Commissioner's card, carries him to the latter's address, whence he is promptly thrown out. He falls into the arms of a second policeman, who carries him to the home of the Albanian ambassador, where he meets the same fate. Finally he is carried unceremoniously to General Snobsky's quarters and thrown out of the window. The three officers of the law who have recently helped him to his various homes, catch him as he falls and, each desiring to take him in a different direction, they finally get into a terrific altercation, in which Max gets decidedly the worst of it.

VITAGRAPH.

CONSCIENCE (July 15).—Married but not mated, Harold Winter takes as his wife Eleanor Gale, a young city girl. Eighteen months later he deserts her and their young child. Eleanor goes back to New York. Too proud to go to her sister's home, she tries, unassisted, to support herself and child. Harold, in the meantime, has come to New York, meeting wealthy people, moving in high society and making plenty of money. He and some gay friends go to the Musee and Harold wagers that he will spend the entire night alone in the Chamber of Horrors. His bet is taken and he enters upon its fulfillment.

Just previous to entering the chamber, Eleanor has been forced by necessity to steal a bottle of milk for her child. Detected by an officer, she flees in terror, darts into the Musee, seeking refuge in the Chamber of Horrors, where she falls in a faint from fright. Harold, with nerves on edge, takes a seat just at the entrance of the chamber. The oppressive loneliness and quiet, with the weird surroundings, almost bring on a state of collapse. At early dawn Eleanor awakens and tries to grope her way through the gloom. Harold gets a glimpse of her, and haunted by thoughts of his cruelty, he is horrified at what he supposes to be an apparition of his wife. He makes desperate efforts to escape. His limbs give way and with a loud scream, he falls dead.

The janitor, just opening up the building, is attracted by the noise and calls an officer. At the same time the four young men arrive to learn of Harold's experiences. They find his body and accuse Eleanor of murder. She tells them her story and she is not arrested. They all turn from the dead man. Eleanor learns that the policeman is his brother-in-law. He takes her and her child to his home, where they are lovingly received by her sister, from whom she was so long separated.

THE MONEY KINGS (July 15) (Part 1).—The greed of money asserts itself in the mind of James Montepier, when he sees an opportunity of securing a large contract for the steel interests if war is declared in Europe. A conference is to be held at The Hague in the interests of peace and Roy Brain, in love with Helen, Montepier's daughter, is appointed by the United States Government as a representative at the arbitration. He goes to Hague to advocate the maintainance of peace, which is agreed upon, with the understanding that he return to America and secure the president's signature to the agreement. He attends a consultation of the president and his cabinet and is informed that they will present the document endorsing peace on the eve of Roy's departure, one month later.

Part 2.—The money kings, in behalf of the Steel Trust, determine to frustrate the government's plan. They engage the services of a very fascinating woman, Marion Mallard, as their secret agent to accomplish their end, and bribe Roy's valet to assist her. Montepier gives a reception, to which he invites all the foreign government diplomats. Roy attends. Marion is there, the cynosure of all eyes. At this affair, Roy is given the papers endorsing universal peace to be carried back by him the following day when he sails for Hague. Marion is introduced to Roy and with her irresistible blandishments, she completely captivates him and induces him to take her home, where she has a very enticing little spread for two. While they are partaking of it, she manages to spill wine upon his coat sleeve and gets him to take off his dress coat, in the pocket of which is the coveted message. She removes the document from the pocket, replacing it with one carefully prepared to resemble the original.

Part 3.—Marion delivers the President's message to Montepier, for which she receives a good-sized check. Montepier places the document in his safe. Helen overhears her father and Marion talking about their clever work. Roy has already sailed for Hague. Helen hurriedly plays the same game. She secures an envelope of the same kind as the one enclosing the message. She asks her father if she can get a necklace which she has deposited in his safe. He consents, and while he is engaged at the telephone, she extracts the stolen message and puts one which she has prepared to resemble it in its place. She then hastens to the wireless station and sends a message to Roy on board ship, stating he has the wrong document and to watch for her cousin, Ralph, in his hydroaeroplane, as he will fly to him with the original message. Her cousin takes the message, starts his flying machine and flying across the water, delivers it on board the steamer to Roy, who jubilantly proceeds on his way.

James Montepier and his steel colleagues meet to receive his report of the success of his scheme to defeat the government and carry out their own project. All smiles, he tells them how cleverly he and Marion Mallard succeeded. Taking Helen's duplicate from his pocket, he hands it to the chairman of the board, who opens it and finds nothing but a blank sheet of paper. Instantly there is an uproar of astonishment, which changes into chagrin and dejection when they realize they have been fooled.

A LIVELY AFFAIR (July 16).—Too busy to call on Dorothy and propose to her in the usual way, Fred writes a business-like note, asking her to be his wife. She is piqued at his method of going about such an important matter, and in return, writes him a curt and prompt rejection. Before he receives her reply, Fred realizes he has been unlover-like, and sends a letter of explanation, saying he will call to see her without delay. This explanation causes Dorothy to regret her hasty note and decision. She must intercept it.

She rushes to his boarding house, enters, and makes her way to his room, but not without being seen by the landlady, who immediately scents scandal. Dorothy is searching about for her letter, and hearing approaching footsteps, darts into the wardrobe. Fred enters with a friend. He opens his desk where his mail is usually placed, and finds Dorothy's note. He is greatly provoked at this turn in his love affairs, and he goes out with his friend to forget it. Dorothy comes from her hiding place.

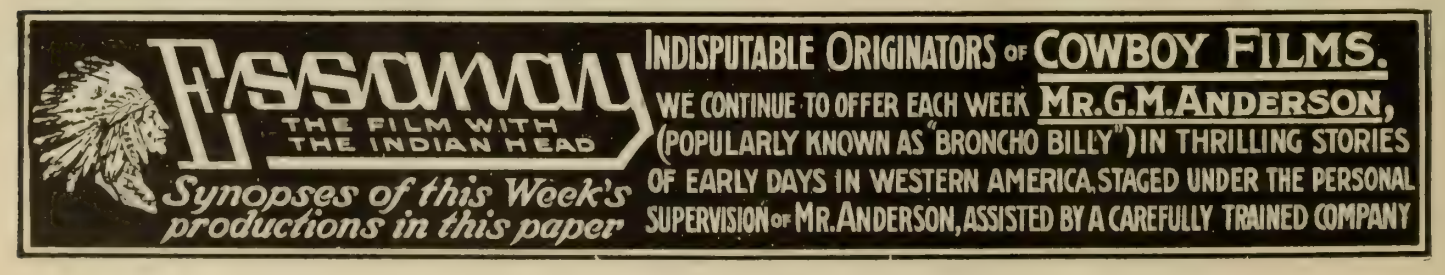
Fred is met by the landlady and asked about having a strange woman in his room. He pays no attention to her remarks and goes on his way. The women folks decide to investigate further. Dorothy hears them coming and dives back into the closet. As she does so, she drops her handkerchief, which the investigators find upon the floor and exclaim: "a woman"! Fred happens in at this moment. When they show him the handkerchief, he tells them it belongs to him and their suspicions are entirely unfounded. They withdraw from the room. Fred steps to the closet door, opens it, and Dorothy comes forth. She tells him why she came to his room. This sets everything straight. Dorothy accepts Fred and together they leave the room by way of the fire-escape and no one is the wiser of Dorothy's experience.

A PERSISTENT LOVER (July 16).—Bunny, with his elephant, Romeo, follows the circus procession on its way to its next stand. Miss Olivia Slincum's horse, attached to a buggy, becomes frightened and runs away. Romeo, the elephant, stops it in its mad career. Olivia touches a tender chord in Bunny's heart, and he brings forth a responsive one in hers. The next day Olivia attends the circus, bringing the elephant cookies and sweets. Romeo becomes fond of Olivia and the next day visits her at her home. Again Olivia attends the circus, and Romeo, seeing her, grasps her hat, supposing it to be a dainty. Bunny comes to her assistance and she regards him as one of the grandest and bravest of men.

Romeo does not forget Olivia's kindness and breaks from his fastenings at night and goes to visit her home. Just previous to his arrival, a burglar breaks into the house and is about to gag her when the elephant puts in an appearance and lifts him bodily from the room. Bunny, the trainer, misses his elephant, and goes in pursuit. He sees Romeo walking off with the thief and rushes into Olivia's home to learn if anything serious has occurred. Olivia is so grateful for the services rendered by Bunny and his pet, she willingly accepts Bunny as her future keeper and guide through life.

THE REDEMPTION OF RED RUBE (July 17).—Hurriedly making preparations to go in pursuit of "Red Rube," the outlaw, who has broken jail, sheriff Sanders is accosted by "Spotted Snake," an Indian from the reservation, who enters his shack and abusively demands whiskey. The sheriff promptly kicks him out. The Indian swears vengeance. The sheriff takes leave of his wife and little child and starts after "Red Rube." After his departure, "Spotted Snake" returns to the sheriff's shack and orders Sanders' wife to furnish him with liquor. At the point of a rifle, she orders him off. As he leaps upon his horse, he snatches up the sheriff's little girl and rides rapidly away into the desert with her, where he leaves her to die.

At Silver City, Sheriff Sanders catches up with "Red Rube." In the "Silver King's" saloon, "Rube" shoots the sheriff in the arm and flees, followed by a posse of enraged citizens, determined upon lynching him. "Rube" makes his way across the desert and comes upon the sheriff's little girl wandering aimlessly about. He knows that shooting the sheriff means lynching for him if he returns to "Silver City." The confidence of the child in him and her evident dependence placed upon his power to save her, touches his heart, and he decides to square up his career by returning the



ESSANAY
THE FILM WITH THE INDIAN HEAD
Synopses of this Week's productions in this paper
INDISPUTABLE ORIGINATORS OF COWBOY FILMS.
WE CONTINUE TO OFFER EACH WEEK MR. G. M. ANDERSON,
(POPULARLY KNOWN AS "BRONCHO BILLY") IN THRILLING STORIES
OF EARLY DAYS IN WESTERN AMERICA, STAGED UNDER THE PERSONAL
SUPERVISION OF MR. ANDERSON, ASSISTED BY A CAREFULLY TRAINED COMPANY

Tuesday, July 9

"THE LOST MESSENGER"

A strong drama with a special appeal and a great climax.

A Split Reel of Real Comedy

Sunday, July 14

"FATHER'S BUST" AND "THE WIDOWER'S WIDOW"

Funny situations—sure fire laughs.

MAJESTIC

A Great Drama!

Released Tuesday, July 16

"IN HER BROTHER'S DEFENSE"

A big double exposure subject full of strong heart interest and intensity.

MAJESTIC MOTION PICTURE CO.,

540 West 21st St., New York.

Sold only through the Film Supply Company of America.

ATTENTION

Exhibitors of Massachusetts, Rhode Island, Connecticut, Maine, New Hampshire and Vermont

The Famous

Bison 101 Features

Are Now at Your Disposal Through the

W. E. Greene Film Exchange, Inc.

Don't lose any time, but write, wire or call at once for open dates.

W. E. GREENE FILM EXCHANGE, Inc.

228 Tremont Street Boston, Mass.

TELEPHONE, OXFORD 3790-2187

THE CRYSTAL FILM CO.

Makers of

Special Motion Pictures for Advertising, Educational and Other Purposes

PERFORATING PRINTING AND DEVELOPING

EXHIBITORS, WRITE FOR PROPOSITION

We will develop your negatives and make your prints.

THE CRYSTAL FILM CO.

WENDOVER AND PARK AVES., NEW YORK, N. Y.

For Open Air or Indoor Projection

We propose that you get our large, free samples at our expense.

F. H. Richardson, a real authority, a man who knows, in last week's issue of THE MOVING PICTURE WORLD in answer to Mr. Roy A. Goggin, of Iowa, plainly states any metallic screen with a smooth surface will produce an out-of-focus effect.

He is right. Be guided by this advice. We proved this long ago; therefore, we fear no test. Get our samples. Let us prove this, won't you? Of course you will. It costs you nothing.

PICTURES 1000 PER CENT CLEARER

and brighter, without haze, glare and eye strain. Perfect perspective, depth and tone. You can keep your theatre brightly illuminated, giving you perfect moral conditions. You can subject Mirroroide to any test: soak same in water 24 hours. Try this with any other. Compare samples with any other curtain or screen, cloth or glass. We want you to do this.

MIRROROIDE

is a mercury-foil-glass amalgamation of pure silver white. It is guaranteed a lifetime. Never deteriorates, peels or cracks.

MIRROROIDE

stood the test of years. Is manufactured under seven pending patents. Be ready in two weeks—our Rollable Glass Screens and Curtains.

The J. H. Genter Co., Newburgh, N. Y.

child to its parents and taking his medicine like a man. The sheriff is carried to his home, where his distracted wife tells him of the kidnapping of their child. The report is spread and the neighbors gather at Sanders' house to organize a searching party.

While they are considering what course to pursue, "Red Rube" rides up and places the child in its mother's arms and surrenders himself to the sheriff. Immediately the neighbors form a Vigilante Committee and propose to lynch "Red Rube," and, in spite of the sheriff's protests, they slip a rope over his head. The rescued child lifts her arms to the unfortunate man and he clasps her tenderly to his breast, while she hugs and kisses him; then she lifts the rope from his neck and casts it aside, pleading mercy for her rescuer. "Red Rube" hangs his head at the child's simple faith and trust in him. The neighbors silently steal away with tears in their eyes. The sheriff clasps the hand of "Red Rube" in gratitude.

HONOR THY FATHER (July 19).—You would think that the death of his wife through his dissipation and neglect would have brought Jack Moreland to his senses. Instead he is more dissipated, and deserts his child, Clara, who is taken by her uncle, Harold Moreland, and brought up in ignorance of her father's existence. Harold, being a man of means, gives her every advantage, and she becomes a very talented and accomplished young lady. She is engaged to Percival Summers.

After an obscurity of seventeen years, Jack Moreland makes himself known to his daughter. She is horrified to learn that he is her father and naturally shuns him. Percival Summers, shocked at the prospect of having such a father-in-law, breaks his engagement with her. Edward, Percival's brother, has always been in love with Clara, and when his brother gives her up, he declares his love for her, and being a manly and good-hearted fellow, persuades Clara to trace her father's whereabouts and help him, if possible to make a man of himself.

Her father, waking up to a realization of his own wickedness, hungers for the love of his daughter, and is only too willing, when she visits him, to reform. With the assistance of Edward, they place her father in a good position and it is not long before he regains himself and becomes a creditable parent and a desirable citizen.

ROCK OF AGES (July 20).—Talented as a sculptress, Madeline Bates, a young widow, carves a cross, which she afterwards erects on the seashore in memory of her husband, who was lost at sea. Madeline lives with her father in a small fishing village on the coast of Maine. One day, while resting on the monument, a celebrated artist visits her home and, recognizing her ability, induces her to go to the city and study art under his tuition. She accepts his offer and becomes famous. Among her acquaintances is a married man, who pays marked attentions to her, regardless of her indifference to his advances. Another woman, jealous of Madeline, writes her father that his daughter is compromising herself with other men.

Madeline's father hastens from his home and calls on her. At the same time, her insistent wooer happens to be in the studio. The old man excitedly comes to the conclusion that the report he received was true. He will not listen to her explanations and returns to his home, forever disowning her. Later she goes back to her native village and devotes her life and means to helping the sick and poor. While nursing a sick child, she contracts a fever and one night, in a delirium, she wanders in her nightrobe, her hair streaming in the wind, and visits the cross she erected in memory of her husband. Sinking to her knees at the feet of it she clings to it, in remembrance of the one she loved most. In this position she reproduces a living picture of "The Rock of Ages." The rising waters of the ocean dash around her. She dies upon the cross, crowned with Eternal Life.

ESSANAY.

THE SMUGGLER'S DAUGHTER (July 15).—Old Silas Gregg lives with his pretty daughter, Vedah, in the Western hills. Unknown to the girl, Gregg is the leader of a band of smugglers, who have their rendezvous in his barn. Vedah is loved by Brant Graham, a sturdy young hillman, and to insure his future, Graham gets the sheriff to appoint him a deputy, receives his badge, pins it inside his sleeve and is ordered to be on the watch for smugglers, who are continually getting goods across the Mexican border. Graham promises and leaves. Later he goes to Gregg's shack, puts the ring on Vedah's finger and asks to see her father, to gain his consent. Finding he has gone down to the barn they start in search for him. In passing the barn Graham suddenly discovers Gregg and his gang sorting over their goods inside. Taking the girl out of range, Graham tells her her father is a smuggler and it is his duty to capture him. Vedah begs him to spare the old man, but Graham is determined, enters the barn with drawn gun and is putting handcuffs on the smugglers, when Vedah, to save her father, seizes Graham from behind and the men make him prisoner. Vedah now pleads for Graham's life, but the enraged band draw lots to see who will kill the deputy, and Vedah is ordered to the shack by her stern father. Realizing her lover's peril, Vedah escapes from the room, mounts and rides furiously to the sheriff's office, gasps out her story and leads the posse back. They arrive in the nick of time to save Graham from death, then start to search for old Gregg. Meanwhile, Vedah has rushed to the shack, warned her father of his danger, and sends him dashing off across the border to safety. A moment later Graham takes her in his arms and they stand watching the old man's distant figure disappear over the hills.

CUPID'S QUARTETTE (July 18).—Gilly Gayboy, a widower, has a pretty daughter, Mildred, who is loved by Philip Bangs, an attractive young fellow. Gayboy, however, has plans of his own concerning Mildred's marriage, and forbids Bangs' attentions, much to both the lovers' discomfiture. A reception is given by the rich Mrs. Porter, a widow, and Gayboy receives an invitation for himself and Mildred. At the Porter residence that evening old Gayboy finds that Bangs is one of the guests and makes himself thoroughly disagreeable in breaking up the lovers' tete-a-tete, until he meets the widow and immediately falls deeply in love with her. Bangs and Mildred immediately see how the wind blows, and manage to also break up several sentimental talks of old Gayboy and the widow during the course of the evening. Still stern father forbids their marriage and it is not until several days later that he is brought to terms in a most ludicrous manner. Happening to stroll down to the station platform one morning taking pictures, Mildred and Bangs discover father asleep on one of the benches, while seated beside him is a large negress, who condescends to pose with her arm about Gayboy's neck while Bangs takes a photo. Consequently Gayboy is amazed a few evenings later, while he is calling on the widow, to see the photo in Bangs' hands. He begs and pleads for mercy, but Bangs threatens to hand it over to the widow unless he agrees to his marriage with Mildred. For a moment the old fellow storms, threatens and finally wilts completely as he reluctantly gives the young people the desired permission to wed, and takes the unsuspicious widow to his heart.

HEARTS OF MEN (July 19).—Dave Melborn, a young country boy, comes to the city to make his fortune, but finds the doors of employment closed to him because of his inexperience. His money gives out and he is reduced to sleeping in a slum lodging house. Here he receives a letter from his old mother, saying she is ill and for him to come to her. Heart-broken and desperate, he falls easy prey for a crook who persuades him to do a "second-story job" with him that night. As they are leaving the house with their loot they are discovered by a passing officer, who attempts to capture them. The crook knocks the officer senseless with a "billy," but before they can effect their escape, several others surround them and they are lodged in jail. At the trial the wounded officer gives his evidence, then the boy's lawyer makes his plea in his defence. On the witness stand, Dave tells the jury how he was lured to the city, by advertisements of opportunities to make fortunes. A series of beautiful visions follow, showing him leaving his country home, his attempts to secure work, falling in with bad company and his being led to steal to secure money to return to his dying mother. Her letter is read aloud, then the jury is sent out. Later the verdict is rendered and Dave is found guilty, but with a request to the court for clemency. The kind old judge now appeals to the jury for funds to send the boy home, a subscription is taken up, more than ample to send him back in good clothes and high hopes and he is discharged. Pressing the hands of the splendid jury, the judge and his lawyer, Dave leaves the court room with the tears of gratitude streaming from his eyes, and the next train bears him back to his waiting mother.

A WIFE OF THE HILLS (July 20).—Bart McGrew, a notorious outlaw, lives in the hills with his young wife. Unknown to McGrew, one of his band, Dan Trent, is in love with his wife and the two are plotting to go away and leave McGrew at the first opportunity. One morning Trent is riding along the trail when he sees a notice from the sheriff offering McGrew and his band freedom for surrender if they will give themselves up. Quickly Trent rides to the shack during McGrew's absence, tells her he will give himself up and thus secure McGrew's arrest. This will give them an opportunity to go away while the outlaw is serving his prison term. Trent carries out his plan, gives himself up to the sheriff and leads the posse back to the shack in time to take McGrew prisoner. Realizing he has been tricked, and suspecting his wife and Trent for treachery, McGrew swears vengeance and is dragged off to jail. Next morning McGrew escapes, and, though pursued by a posse, strikes straight for the shack to wreak his vengeance. Covered with grime, and with one arm hanging limp with a bullet through it, McGrew arrives outside the shack, gazes through the window and sees his wife in Trent's arms. With a snarl of rage he raises his gun and is about to fire, when a bullet from the sheriff's gun, intended for his heart, sings through the open window and Trent falls across the kitchen table dead, shot through the brain. Realizing vengeance has come to him, and that he is saved from being a murderer, McGrew allows himself to be taken by the posse and smiles grimly through the open window where his wife is sobbing out her remorse across the dead body as they lead him off down the hill-trail.

SELIG.

THE PENNANT PUZZLE (July 15).—Casey is an ardent baseball fan. One day, while on a shopping trip with his domineering wife, he sees a notice offering a thousand dollars reward to anyone who can solve the "Great Pennant Puzzle" in less than thirty-seven moves. He purchases a puzzle and without any loss of time begins working on the solution.

The fun begins when we see Casey, oblivious to all else, working away at his puzzle on the crowded street, unconsciously bumping into shoppers and knocking their bundles right and left. Then we see him in his own home, so absorbed in the puzzle that he neglects his meals, forgets to sleep, and pays no attention to a burglar who enters the house in the small hours of the morning and "lifts" valuables from right under his nose.

Mrs. Casey now takes a hand in the game and "assists" her puzzle-mad husband out of the house through the window. Casey takes solace on a bench in the park, where, during a brief nap, he sees the puzzle work itself out in a dream. He wakes up and frantically tries to remember the solution, his actions finally arousing the suspicions of a park policeman, who takes him to the police station.

Casey is assigned to a cell, where he works away on a make-shift puzzle, while the desk sergeant and the reserves become so absorbed in the confiscated puzzle that they pay no attention to their duties.

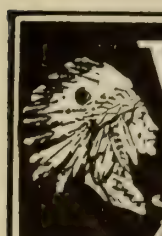
Next morning Casey is taken before the judge and is given a speedy trial. The judge discharges him, then, having become interested in the puzzle, begins to mix justice and baseball in an amusing way.

Meanwhile, Casey gets another puzzle and goes to a ball game. The players, managers and umpire finally get interested in the solution of the puzzle, with the result that the game is postponed, greatly to the disgust of the audience, which is composed largely of delegates of the National Press Association Convention, then being held in the city. Presently, while the players of both ball teams and the umpire are frantically offering suggestions to Casey, he hits upon the solution of the puzzle. He jumps to his feet with a whoop of triumph, and, followed by the mob, rushes off to the court room to show the judge.

When the court is reached, they find the judge, the officials and the spectators frantically working away on puzzles. The correct solution of the puzzle is again worked on the screen and all heave a sigh of relief.

THE GIRL AND THE COWBOY (July 16).—The scene is in a typical cow section of Colorado. Bud Tracy, a daredevil cowboy and crack gun man of that region, is employed on Al Kernon's Ranch, but there is bad feeling between them, over Phyllis, the belle of Three Pines. During a big dance on the Lazy S ranch, Bud, who had been "hitting 'er up" pretty lively of late, goes to sleep in the hay loft of the barn, with a lighted cigarette between his fingers.

The ensuing conflagration is discovered by Kernon as he comes into the barn with a lantern to look



ESSANAY
THE FILM WITH THE INDIAN HEAD
Synopses of this Week's productions in this paper
INDISPUTABLE ORIGINATORS OF COWBOY FILMS.
WE CONTINUE TO OFFER EACH WEEK MR. G. M. ANDERSON, (POPULARLY KNOWN AS "BRONCHO BILLY") IN THRILLING STORIES OF EARLY DAYS IN WESTERN AMERICA, STAGED UNDER THE PERSONAL SUPERVISION OF MR. ANDERSON, ASSISTED BY A CAREFULLY TRAINED COMPANY

CONNECTICUT & NEW JERSEY

Bookings in Licensed Theatres only for the Milano (5 reel)

DANTE'S INFERNO

The most wonderful moving picture yet produced without exception. Draws capacity business everywhere. Will bring people to your theatre that were never there before.

WRITE FOR DATES AND TERMS

World's Moving Picture Classics.

Box 485, Madison Square P. O. New York

NOTE: Connecticut and New Jersey only

Any Experienced Operator Will Tell You To Use

3 in One

Because he has tried all the Moving Picture machine oils and knows that 3 in One is the best and most economical. It lubricates perfectly star wheel, fly wheel, shutter and every other part of the entire mechanism.

3 in One cleans and polishes like new, theater seats, piano, music racks, electric fans and scores of other things "in front" and also back of the curtain. Absolutely prevents rust on all metal surfaces. Try it indoors and then outdoors, too—on your metal signs, black iron lamps and ornaments, hinges, etc.

Get Your Free Bottle Today

Send right this minute for a generous free sample and the free 3 in One Dictionary. Then, give this good oil the hardest test. After you're satisfied, after the test has convinced you, remember you can buy a half-pint for a half-dollar (M. P. machine size) and save money. 10c, 25c, 50c, everywhere.

3 IN ONE OIL CO.

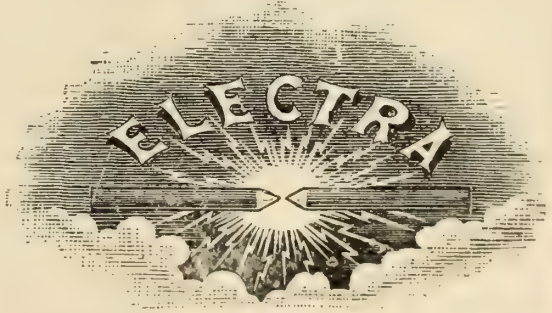
42 N A Broadway New York City

MAGAZINES & BOOKS FOR LIBRARY SLIPS ONE IN EVERY PACKAGE

BIO
CARBONS
IN ALL THE WORLD NONE OTHER SO GOOD
MORE USED EVERY DAY
RECOGNIZED BIO
BIO CARBONS
CHARLES L. KIEWERT CO.
NEW YORK 165 GREENWICH STREET
MILWAUKEE 114 HURON STREET
SAN FRANCISCO 19 SUTTER STREET
AND ALL LIVE FILM EXCHANGES AND SUPPLY DEALERS

ELECTRA TRADE MARK ELECTRA TRADE MARK

STANDARD OF CARBON QUALITY



PINK •TRADE MARK• LABEL

A Guarantee of Perfect Projection

IMPORTED SOLELY BY

HUGO REISINGER

11 BROADWAY NEW YORK CITY

ELECTRA TRADE MARK ELECTRA TRADE MARK

over the stock before retiring, and Bud is awakened about the same time by the smoke. They both fight fire until exhausted, but after it is over Kernon discharges Bud on the spot. Bud promises to "get" Kernon next time he comes to town, and then rides away across the desert.

Bud's eyes have been troubling him for a long time, and the smoke and fire puts the finishing touch to them. During the lonely ride across the plain he goes stone blind. He falls from his horse and lies half conscious by the roadside. A buckboard from the mines passes, the men in it recognize Bud, think he is sleeping off a jag, and after relieving him of his watch and gun, drive on. While the buckboard stands there and a pup, which the men were taking to town in a sack, slips out unnoticed. After the rig has driven on the pup licks Bud's face and awakens him. He sticks the pup into his shirt, calls his horse and finds his way to town by the feel of the sun on his bare flesh. There he falls in the way of Phyllis, who saves him from death at the hands of Kernon's men and accidentally finds him a surgeon in the person of the great New York eye specialist, who has been visiting his brother's mine and whose wife owns the puppy.

THE POLO SUBSTITUTE (July 18).—This story revolves around a great International Polo Match at Pasadena, Cal., in which the social elite of two hemispheres are concerned. One of the thrilling passages of the photoplay is a vivid scene showing the actual game between England and California.

The Hon. Probyn-Hampstead, an English gentleman of wealth and high social position, but rather objectionably English in mannerisms, visits Pasadena in the midwinter season. He is accepted into the higher social circles, of which Margaret Bush is the most prominent and wealthy of the young members, and falls in love with the Bush heiress.

But Margaret is already half-promised to a local gallant, John Smart by name, who, resenting the Englishman's attentions to Margaret, circulates gossip to the effect that Probyn-Hampstead is nothing more than an adventurer seeking to marry wealth. Society becomes doubtful of the Englishman's social status, and even at the Country Club, where his advise on polo matters has been considered valuable, he is looked at sidewise.

Finally the day of the great game arrives. In the preliminary warm-up, a member of the Pasadena team is injured. The Pasadenans have no one to turn to to fill the breach. Probyn-Hampstead good naturedly offers to play with the local team. Although prejudiced against him, they accept his offer. His great playing wins them the game. Incidentally one of the great lords of England happens into town just here and greets his old friend Probyn-Hampstead so warmly that all suspicion of the latter's sincerity is removed, and the busybody, Smart, is discredited. Probyn-Hampstead gets the heiress.

MELIES.

A STRING OF BEADS (July 25).—Carl, desirous of showing his love to Mary, presents her with a beautiful string of beads. John, also in love with her, plays Carl a game of cards with the understanding that the winner shall marry Mary. Carl, having lost, leaves the country, but after twenty years returns to his old home. Mary's wayward son, Tom, demands money from his father. Being refused, he enters his father's home at night and steals the cash box, which contains the precious string of beads. Making his escape he passes the house of Carl, who invites him in to play a game of cards. Tom, losing all, pulls out the string of beads as a last resource. Carl, recognizing the beads, questions him, and thus learns that he is the son of his old sweetheart. Tom's father, searching for the thief, tracks him to Carl's house. Carl, hearing their approach, hides Tom in the cupboard. Mary fearing that Tom was the culprit, has followed, and upon entering the cabin, sees Carl with the string of beads. To save Tom, Carl confesses that he stole the beads, but Tom, hearing his mother's voice, comes out of his hiding place and confesses the robbery just in time to save Carl from summary punishment.

BIOGRAPH.

THE SPEED DEMON (July 15).—"The Demon" owns a "near" racing car and wishes to enter the Santa Monica races. He catches a boob, whom he induces to put every dollar he has on his, "The Demon's," chance of winning. He manages to get into the race and by the time he has finished the run night has fallen and the spectators have gone home. To say the boob sucker was mad, doesn't express it fully.

HIS OWN FAULT (July 15).—Brown holds the purse strings and it is like drawing teeth for Mrs. Brown to get anything out of him. He is always crying "cut down expenses." On the way to the office he meets Jenks, who is buying presents for his wife, it being her birthday. Brown, on the impulse of the moment, insists upon sending to Mrs. Jenks a beautiful silver bag, with his compliments. Did he dig up trouble for himself? Maybe.

HEAVEN AVENGES (July 18).—The old widower stricken ill, his daughter Ynez takes his place in the orange grove. The rich owner of the grove while making his rounds, sees Ynez and is attracted by her beauty. A man of whims, he is in a measure infatuated with her. Being in poor health, owing to heart trouble, he is cautioned by his physician against undue excitement, hence none of his own household try to thwart him when he proceeds to fascinate the girl. Of course, his nature being capricious, he soon tires of the pretty senorita and the pledge he bestowed proves worthless. Fearing the scorn of her father, she leaves his house. Her former sweetheart tells her father of his suspicion and the old man goes to the orange grower, but he pleads in vain. It is then that both the boy and her father vow vengeance. Fate intervenes, however, for the man dies, a victim of heart failure. Later the poor girl is drawn back home where she finds a father's heart yearning for her return.

Among the Exhibitors.

Olathe, Kansas.—Weldon & Wilson have opened what is known as the Grand Theater Annex, joining the Grand on the south. It is an open air theater forty feet in width. The side walls and back will be of galvanized iron. The booth is fireproof. This new play house will seat 500 people.

Birmingham, Ala.—Wyatt Heflin of this city, acquired the Victoria Theater here recently, and is now the general manager of that place.

Brooklyn, N. Y.—Plans are being prepared for the erection of a new moving picture theater to be erected on Rockaway Avenue, near Blake Avenue, by Samuel Meyer, at a cost of $8,000.

Philadelphia, Pa.—F. B. Davis is taking estimates on plans for a moving picture theater to be built at 36th and Haverford Avenue.

St. Louis, Mo.—Plans are being prepared for the erection of a new German Theater to be erected here in Delmar Boulevard, and will cost $70,000.

Gillespie, Ill.—Work has begun on the erection of a new opera house one block east of Main Street. W. A. Hamilton is having the building put up.

Hedrick, Iowa.—Mr. J. E. Benton of this city, has opened his new moving picture theater to good business.

Newark, N. J.—At 400 Springfield Avenue, the Metropolitan Realty Company is about to begin the construction of a one-story brick moving picture theater at a cost of $18,500. Frederick Kern prepared the plans for the building, which is to measure 40 x 125 feet. The structure will be practically fireproof with re-enforced concrete roof and metal windows, doors and trim.

Bucell, Okla.—Messrs. J. W. Simpson, J. W. Hocker, George and Walter Brown, have leased the old Ferguson Hotel and will convert it into a moving picture theater.

Burand, Minn.—A contract has been awarded for the erection of a new opera house to be built here.

Pittsfield, Mass.—A new theater is being erected in Union Street in this city.

Wall Lake, Ia.—Plans have been prepared for the erection of a new opera house to be erected here by Architect James R. Cox of Eastherville.

Toledo, Ia.—A new opera house is being constructed here.

Creston, Ia.—Ed. Healey bought the Comet Theater.

New York.—Thomas W. Lamb, architect, is preparing plans for the erection of a new theater to be erected on the south side of 46th Street, for William Waldorf Astor, at a cost of $130,000.

Fort Wayne, Ind.—A new theater is to be erected here at a cost of $50.000.

Trenton, N. Y.—The Broad Street Theater Co., capital $100,000, inc. M. Hirshfield, New York City; H. Wahn, J. A. Heman, Trenton.

Norwich, N. Y.—Another new theater was just opened here.

New York, N. Y.—The Loman Contracting Co. has been awarded the contract for the erection of a theater on the northwest corner of Westchester and Bergen Avenues.

Sheridan, Wyo.—G. A. Secord has rented the building formerly occupied by the Sheridan Light Company and will fit it up for a moving picture show.

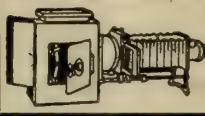
Baltimore, Md.—Another moving picture show will be built in the Northwest Baltimore Building.

Jacksonville, Ill.—W. A. Jacoby and V. R. Thompson will open the old Lyric stand with a new and first-class moving picture show. The building has been equipped with new opera seats and will accommodate about two hundred patrons, which is far below the number which the house will accommodate. A new 9 x 12 white plaster screen has been installed.

Kalamazoo, Mich.—The new Elite Theater, on South Burdick Street, will be opened July 15.

Reading, Pa.—James Graul, at 1641, is erecting a new picture theater here, and it will cost $3,500.

Texarkana, Ark.—Dr. J. W. Dickey is erecting a new airdome here.

MOVING PICTURE MACHINES
Stereopticons, Slides, Accessories


CHAS. M. STEBBINS
1028 Main St.
KANSAS CITY, MO
Large Line of Edison Goods
Established 1899

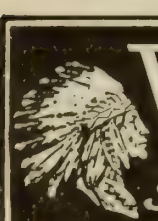
THE TOURNAMENT FILM CO.
TOLEDO, OHIO.
Owners of the following feature films:
1911 Cheyenne Cowboy and Indian Frontier Celebration.
Fall Round-Up on the Y-6 Ranch.
State Rights for These Films for Sale.
Bookings Can Be Made by Writing Us.

We buy and sell Second Hand Films and Moving Picture Machines
WESTERN FILM BROKERS
538 S. Dearborn Street Chicago, Ill

MOTION PICTURE MACHINES
ALL MAKES.
Full line of supplies. Send for Catalogues and Lists. We repair Machines.
MOTION PICTURE MACHINES WANTED.
HARBACH & CO.,
809 Filbert St. - Philadelphia.

Headquarters for
ASBESTOS
CURTAINS and PICTURE BOOTHS
SEND FOR BOOKLET
C. W. Trainer Mfg. Co.
39 Pearl St., Boston, Mass.

FINE ART SLIDES.
We make Advertising, Announcement, Lecture, Scientific, and Slides of every description. Transparencies beautifully colored. High class work only. Send for our new catalogue.
A. J. CLAPHAM, 132 W. 37th St., New York.



ESSANAY
THE FILM WITH THE INDIAN HEAD
Synopses of this Week's productions in this paper
INDISPUTABLE ORIGINATORS OF COWBOY FILMS.
WE CONTINUE TO OFFER EACH WEEK MR. G. M. ANDERSON, (POPULARLY KNOWN AS "BRONCHO BILLY") IN THRILLING STORIES OF EARLY DAYS IN WESTERN AMERICA, STAGED UNDER THE PERSONAL SUPERVISION OF MR. ANDERSON, ASSISTED BY A CAREFULLY TRAINED COMPANY

FEATURE FILMS FOR SALE

2 3 4 Reels Feature Productions 2 3 4 Reels

WRITE FOR LISTS QUICK

SUPERIOR FEATURE FILM CO.

32 Union Sq., New York City

Manufacturers and Film Producers seeking foreign business can secure services of salesman calling on M. P. trade. Pioneer in projection and film business. Unattached; all matters treated in confidence. Address c/o Moving Picture World, New York.

PIONEER

Increase Your Income

SEND FOR OUR

32 -- PAGE -- 32

EXCLUSIVE MOVING PICTURE THEATRE Catalogue

—OF—

100 CLASSIFIED SOUVENIRS 100

AND COMPLETE PLANS NOW USED BY THOUSANDS OF THEATRES

PLAYING TO STANDING ROOM ONLY

— WRITE TODAY —

United States Factories Co.

500 Great Lakes Bldg., CHICAGO

"A Man After My Own Heart!"

Alton Crosby, Dreamland Theatre, Willmar, Minnesota, says: "It is our aim always to give the people more than their money's worth, believing that in the long run this is the best business policy!" There speaks a man after my own heart! That's the very policy that has made the Laemmle Film Service the staunchest exchange in the business today! I'd rather give my customers more than their money's worth every day of the week than spend my time thinking up schemes to gouge them out of their last cent.

Mr. Crosby says further, in a letter addressed to my Minneapolis office: "I desire to express my personal appreciation of the very excellent service you have been giving me. I am pleased to note a very marked improvement in the quality and arrangement of the program." He is one of the many who are "universally delighted" with Laemmle Films, Laemmle Service and—if you please—Laemmle Luck! What in heaven's name keeps you from hooking up right away?

CARL LAEMMLE

PRESIDENT

THE LAEMMLE FILM SERVICE

204 WEST LAKE ST., CHICAGO, ILL.
SYKES BLOCK, MINNEAPOLIS, MINN.
1312 FARNAM ST., OMAHA, NEB.
421 WALNUT ST., DES MOINES, IOWA

THE BIGGEST AND BEST FILM RENTER IN THE WORLD.

Independent Film Stories

RELIANCE.

AT CRIPPLE CREEK (July 17).—Belle Gordon, an orphan, finds an advertisement in the papers for a governess to apply to the Rev. Strong, at Cripple Creek, Col. She writes and has her fare advanced. Upon arriving there she finds the place consists of a crowd of disreputable miners and dance-hall girls. She learns that the advertisement was merely a trap to lure her out into the dance-hall of Martin Mason. She tries to get away but cannot. Dynamite Ann, one of the worst women of the place, remembering the time that she first came to Cripple Creek through the same sort of an advertisement, wishes to help the girl. Joe Mayfield, the United States Deputy Marshal enters, and, seeing Belle's plight, rescues her. He takes her away with him, and also Maggie, Mason's young daughter. He asks Dynamite Ann to go to his cabin to look after the girls. She accepts, grateful for the trust reposed in her. Reginald, a young dude from the East, dances attention on Maggie, while Joe Mayfield loses his heart to Belle. Joe is interested in a mine called the "Last Dollar," which is reputed to be worthless. Mason and his partner, Alvarez, discover gold in the mine and try to bargain with Joe for its possession. Joe refuses to relinquish it, and for revenge the Mexican takes up Joe's adopted child who is walking on the rocks and throws her down. As he goes up again Wahketa swings out on a grape vine and catches the child in midair. The next day Mason and Alvarez go down into the mine. Joe and Belle, coming down later, are surprised by them and tied hand and foot. Wahketa, who is also tied, manages to burn the cords off his hands and releases Belle and Joe. The three make their escape. A short time later, on the wedding day of Joe and Belle and Maggie and Reginald, Mason and Alvarez come and look in at the festivities. The wedding takes place and just as the guests are leaving the room, the Mexican shoots through the window at Joe, but Ann jumps forward and receives the bullet in her own heart. She dies in Joe's arms.

LOVE ME LOVE MY DOG (July 20).—While Jack is staying at a fashionable summer hotel, he often wanders off into the woods with his dog. One day he meets Rose, a pretty girl, who lives alone in a tiny cabin in the woods. He becomes quite friendly with her during the following few weeks. Finally he asks her to marry him and she consents. But his parents, who have discovered his friendship with the girl, refuse their consent to the match and insist that their son return home with them at once. The dog, who had often carried letters between the lovers, is now given a farewell note to Rose. The dog brings the letter to the girl, who is heartbroken when she reads that Jack is going away. The dog, seeing the girl's grief, refuses to leave her. Jack, waiting for the dog, becomes worried about him and against his parents' commands, he goes off in search of him. He finds Rose crying with her arms about the dog's neck. The sight makes him decide what to do; he will not return to the city, he will remain with the girl he loves. He goes to his father and tells him of his decision and is disowned. A year passes. Jack and Rose are now the parents of a baby. The dog, while rambling about, sees Jack's parents returning to the same hotel. He returns to the little cabin and takes one of the baby's shoes, and, carrying it to the hotel, he puts it at the feet of the grandparents. The little shoe tells its own story. Both the old people follow the dog and find a happy family grouped outside of the cabin. Realizing their son's happiness, they become reconciled to him and to his wife.

LUX.

THE EMPTY HOLSTER (July 5).—Dick receives a new revolver from his sweetheart as a birthday gift. Whilst stopping at a roadside spring to refresh himself, he loses it, but rides on quite unconscious of his loss. A tramp comes along, finds the revolver and attacks the mail carrier with it. Shortly afterward, Dick, returning to search for his revolver, finds the prostrate mail carrier, and is discovered by the sheriff. He is accused of murder and condemned to death, his empty holster branding him as the criminal. However, he is saved by the efforts of his charming sweetheart, who arrests the culprit with her own fair hands.

SPIFFKIN'S NEW JOB (July 12).—Spiffkins, a young man of fair promise, gets a job as a lamplighter. He is not very successful at lighting lamps, but succeeds in setting his native town afire in a highly efficient manner.

PONTO'S LITTLE JOKE (July 12).—This is a clever little trick film in which Ponto, a sagacious dog and two officious policemen entertain us in a lively manner. Ponto proves to be a very elusive character, and the policemen spend a very unpleasant quarter-of-an-hour seeking to arrest him.

CHAMPION.

THE CALL OF THE WEST (July 15).—This story deals with a Westerner, who comes into a fortune left by his uncle in the East. One clause of the will provides, however, that the legatee must live in the ancestral house in the East, otherwise the fortune is lost. Bill Smith accepts the conditions and goes East. He is soon settled in his new house, surrounded by every luxury money can buy. But these things do not appeal to Bill. He longs for the free life of the prairie. Naturally he is much sought after, owing to his wealth and new position. He gains the clubs, attends balls and receptions, where the idle rich are wont to congregate. Still he is far from happy.

One day at his club, Bill protects Edith Mason, a little flower girl from the insults of a half-drunken loafer. In the scrimmage the girl receives a blow. Bill takes her to her home in his auto. They soon become fast friends. Edith's mother is a consumptive. She receives a letter from her brother in the West telling her of his coming to New York to take her West with him, where it is hoped the climate would benefit her. Bill calls on Edith and is shown the letter. Much to his surprise he finds that the uncle is Pete Curley, his former friend and fellow cowpuncher.

Bill shows Pete the sights. As the time for the departure of his friends draws nearer, Bill's longing for the West grows stronger. He realizes that his new acquaintances tolerate him because of his wealth. This he proves by a clever ruse. After bidding good-bye to Pete and Edith, in whom he becomes very much interested, he returns to his home of luxury. He is very unhappy. The call of the West is too strong for him to resist. He writes a note to his lawyers, relinquishing all claims to the estate and rushes madly to the station, just in time to gain the little party, as they board the train for the West.

POWERS

GETTING EVEN (July 17).—Percy Jones takes his sweetheart Dollie Vaughn and her mother to the country during the heated period, and there the party meets Hank Hawkins and Ezra Jackson, farm laborers. Percy lords it over the husbandmen, and the city people make the pair the butt of many a joke.

Percy and Dollie go boating and espy the farmers working on the shore. They concoct a little scheme and it works admirably. They pretend that the boat is sinking and shout for assistance. Hank and Ezra hear their cries and rush to the water's edge. Hank divests himself of his shoes and hat and swims to the boat only to be laughed at by the city lovers. He swims to the dock and vows vengeance after relating his humiliation to Ezra.

A few days later Percy and Dollie go rowing again, and the boat springs a leak and is sinking fast. The occupants are frantic and their shouts are heard by Mrs. Vaughn. She rushes to the lake, sees their predicament and runs for assistance. Ezra and Hank are working and decline to contribute again to the enjoyment of the city people. The mother is frantic and appeals to Hank on her knees. He again plunges in and saves Percy and Dollie. Dollie sees the contrast between Percy and Hank and falls genuinely in love with Hank. The latter leads her up to a declaration of love and then shows her the picture of an actress, telling her it is a picture of his sweetheart. She is piqued and orders Percy to take her home. The closing scene is at the railroad station with the people from the city aboard the train, bound for home, and the young country youths evincing gratification at having gotten even with their visitors.

SOLAX.

SLIPPERY JIM (July 17).—Faith Merrill, a young girl who has been strictly reared, meets and loves a stranger, a handsome, dare-devil fellow whom all like, as soon as he drops in their midst. The couple marry. Ideal happiness follows until Faith, accidentally learns that the man she worships is a member of a robber gang, wanted by the police. Deeply as she loves her husband, his duty as she sees it, is to give himself up and take his punishment.

The girl finally staggers from the room, after a dramatic scene with her husband. Jim thinks that she has gone to prepare for their voyage. Not so. Reaching the upper floor, the girl enters her bedroom. Inside the door she falls on her knees, and prays to God to save her husband's soul. She takes down the receiver, telephones the police department, and gives up her idol to the law. This she does with a broken heart, but with an inward conviction that only by this hard method can his salvation be accomplished.

Jim, waiting below in blissful ignorance, is presently surprised by the police, shows fight, is wounded, and is arrested after a very effective fight. A year later, Faith, in an agony of expectation and love, waits. Jim has that day been released. Will he forgive? During his year's imprisonment, he has persistently refused to see his wife. Love conquers. Jim rushes in, catches her to his heart, kisses her repeatedly. His better nature has conquered. He tells her he has forgiven and that his life shall henceforth be worthy.

Presently Faith, on some pretext, leaves the room. Jim moves about gazing at the loved familiar objects about the room. Finally he seats himself before the open grate fire and becomes lost in thought.

Faith softly enters with a sleeping infant clasped in her arms. Unheard by Jim she approaches him and lays her hand upon his head. Jim, smiling, catches her hand, and presses it to his lips. Then he looks at her and springs to his feet, his hands clenched. Spellbound he gazes, until the truth floods his soul. Completely overcome, he falls to his knees and clasps the tiny hand of his child. The other arm he clasps about his wife's waist and buries his face in her soft gown. "Slippery Jim's" redemption is complete.

THE FOUR FLUSH ACTOR (July 19).—This story deals with the adventures of a "ham actor," who tries to "make good" in moving pictures. This Ham comes into the studio and assures everyone, including the directors, that he is the "real thing." He starts to do things. He not only gets into trouble with the cameraman and everyone else, but makes a general nuisance of himself.

The film shows, besides its ludicrous story, many of the methods in film production. This is one of the scenes, which is characteristic of the story: A Seaside Scene—The Ham, in summer costume. The leading lady also in summer costume. Three girls in bathing suits, listening to orders—then step out of the picture. The Ham is supposed to flirt with the leading lady—makes her acquaintance—then he hears a cry of help—he bravely goes after one of the supposedly drowning bathing girls, but he trips and turns a somersault—and soon is in need of assistance himself. They drag him out, roll him on a barrel and there's an end of his moving picture career.

IMP.

HEARTS IN CONFLICT (July 15).—Andrew and David, brother fishermen and life-long friends, start for the fishing banks, but before their destination is reached their boat is wrecked and David is drowned. Andrew returns home a sad man, determined to do all in his power for David's daughter, Angelina, whom he adopts, and in time comes to love as dearly as his own child, Elinor. The years pass, and the two girls, who seem sisters in reality, are approaching womanhood. Elinor and Ralph, who is known as the village flirt, are sweethearts, but her father does not trust the young fellow and forbids his daughter to receive his attentions. She, in order to blind him, plans to have Ralph make love to Angelina. He agrees to this, and later discovers that the foster sister has in reality won his heart.

Elinor, surmising this, sends Ralph a note asking him to meet her. This, through chance, falls into the hands of Angelina, and she, to test his fidelity, has it delivered to Ralph. She decides, however, to be an unseen witness at the meeting.

Ralph explains to Elinor that his heart is now entirely her sister's and he intends making her his wife. Elinor, realizing her plot has indeed been successful, throws her arms about him and pleads with him not to forsake her. All this is seen by Angelina, though she cannot hear the conversation. She is stunned by the revelation and reproaches Ralph for his perfidy, and refusing to listen to his explanation, rushes away to the shore. Arriving there, she extends her arms appealingly toward the water, begging her father to take her to his home, when to her overwrought mind, she seems to see her father's image rising from the water, urging her to come to him. And she blindly walks through the waves towards him.

Ralph, fearing Angelina will be drowned, throws Elinor from him and dashes after his sweetheart. He reaches the shore and rushes into the water, seizes his sweetheart, and bears her safely to land. Here his presence restores her to a normal condition, and, after all is explained, she forgives her lover and promises to be his wife.

WINNING THE LATONIA DERBY (July 18).—Luther Clews, a Kentucky gentleman of the old school, finds himself in financial difficulties. His son, Howard, owns Queen Bee, whom the father and son expect to retrieve the family fortune, as she is entered in the famous Latonia Derby. Young Howard has lost heavily on a previous race, and without his father's knowledge has given his note for $5,000 to Doc Martin, an unscrupulous pool-room owner doing business in Lexington, Ky.

Martin, knowing the great value of Queen Bee and thinking that if she were scratched, his own, Eagle, would win the Derby, induces young Howard to give him a mortgage on Queen Bee to secure the note. The day Howard is to ship his horse to Latonia, Martin forecloses. At this juncture, Howard's fiancee buys an interest in Queen Bee.

Martin secures the assistance of a friend who endeavors to poison the animal in order to prevent her entry in the race. The plot is foiled by Howard, who is secretly watching his pet. The race is run, Queen Bee is victorious, and fortune again smiles on the Clews family.

BUILDING A CHURCH IN A DAY (July 20).—Eight hundred persons worshipped one night recently in Elbethel Methodist Church, in Spartanburg, S. C., which was completely built in a day. The first nail was driven at 6 o'clock in the morning by Mayor A. H. Kirby, who said the edifice was handsomer than the first Methodist Church which required a year to build.

One hundred and fifty carpenters, painters, paperhangers, plumbers, electrical workers, and other artisans, working by a carefully arranged system, had the structure completed by sunset. By 7

Exclusive Features!

THE ROYAL FEATURE FILM COMPANY

owners of Ohio State Rights on BISON 101 productions. Will release a carefully selected feature each week, including Bisons, and make exclusive contracts for first run in your city.

OUR RELEASES

BLAZING THE TRAIL.....Bison, 2 Reels
POST TELEGRAPHER .....Bison, 2 Reels
THE CRISIS .....Bison, 2 Reels
LIEUTENANT'S LAST FIGHT .....Bison, 2 Reels
DEAD MAN'S CHILD .....Gt. Northern, 3 Reels
THE OUTCAST .....Bison, 2 Reels
MYSTERIES OF SOULS .....Gt. Northern, 3 Reels

Watch for future releases and get busy quick before your competitor beats you to it. You will need each one of them at least two days. One, three, six, eight sheets, heralds, booklets, banners, etc.

COMING.

$25,000.00 worth of features now contracted for, including St. George and the Dragon—Call of a Woman—Last of the Frontignacs—Wreck of the Aurora—Haunted Castle.

Nothing but { State rights features / the best to be had } Released by us

302 Schultz Building, High and Hickory Sts., Columbus, O.

HOW TO BUY A FEATURE FILM

Staterights men who want valuable information regarding the purchase of feature films, will kindly communicate with this office immediately.

We are going to give you free what it cost us thousands of dollars to learn.

There are no "strings" attached to this offer. Just let us know the class of your business—its needs—and we will do the rest.

General Film Publicity & Sales Co.
145 West 45th Street,
New York City.

—Crown Features Draw Crowds!—

Saint George and the Dragon

COPYRIGHTED, 1912.

Owners of This Feature Are Reaping Profits!

The First HIGH Class Feature Offered at a LOW Price

Our 12-Page Illustrated Art Book in Two Colors Secures Business. Our Remarkably Attractive Posters, Heralds and Dodgers Fill the House. Very Choice Territory Still Open.

WIRE FOR PARTICULARS AT OUR EXPENSE

Crown Feature Film Company
145 West 45th Street
NEW YORK

Theatre Managers:

Feature Films are, and will continue to be, the DRAWING FORCE. Watch how the attractive and well-advertised pictures get the throng even at advanced admission prices.

We can book your houses with the best money-getters and can assure you of AMPLE ADVANCE ADVERTISING stuff, so essential to success. We have contracted with all the leading feature owners for all open time.

We can book you like a vaudeville circuit—WE CHARGE NO COMMISSION.

Get in line, tell us what you can use and we will show you what can be done, rental or percentage.

FEATURE FILM OWNERS not yet registered with us, let us hear from you.

Feature Film Booking Offices

145 West 45th Street
New York City

COLLINS & COLLINS, Mgrs.

o'clock the mission heads were installed, the aisles carpeted, the altar placed and decorated with flowers, and a piano was in place in the choir loft. During the day the work excited the interest of many people and it is estimated that fully 18,000 persons visited the spot and watched the progress of the erection of the building.

THE FOREIGN INVASION (July 20).—Michael Dolan has been long enough in this country to imbibe American national sentiment and he resented having to purchase whiskey at a saloon kept by a smiling Dago. His resentment was intensified by some newspaper statistics that he read dealing with alien immigration.

Dreaming a dream, he witnessed the curious spectacle of people of various nationalities taking active part in public affairs. For example: He sees the Asiatic in control. In other words, the Yellow Peril has led to officering the country by Japanese men. Other nationalities, in the garbs of their countries, also appear in this picture, much to the horror of Michael, who has to endure the greatest agony at the grotesque sights he sees in his dream.

Of course, he awakens from his dream and, getting down to the stern realities of life, is sent to the wash tub by his wife, who admonishes him against excessive drinking and idle newspaper reading.

NESTOR.

THE FLOWER OF THE FOREST (July 8).—Jim Fielding, a venturesome, but selfish young man, is at the head of a hunting expedition. To show his friends how little he cares for danger, he leaves them behind and is soon lost in the woods. For two days he staggers hither and thither, vainly trying to find a passage out of the dense and seemingly endless forest. At last, his supplies gone, his strength deserts him, and he falls unconscious to the ground.

Wanda, an Indian maiden known as "The Flower of the Forest," goes out to gather fagots and comes upon the prostrate form of Jim, who revives under her tender ministrations. Later he's carried to the Indian camp.

In a couple of weeks, Jim is completely restored to health, and is eager to return home. The Indians, however, have other plans and detain him. Fretting under this enforced imprisonment, he silently watches his opportunity to escape. The psychological moment comes when the Indians, en masse, go hunting, leaving Jim and Wanda alone. The man makes violent love to the girl, who believes him implicitly. She guides him to safety and is then brutally told to go back whence she came.

Basil Russett, an old settler, takes the young man to his shack. Bella, his daughter, looks upon Jim with favor. Her mother disapproves, stating that the stranger has an evil eye. Meanwhile, Wanda, assisted by old Russett, reaches the settler's humble dwelling, where Jim is unmasked and unceremoniously put out of the house.

A GENTLEMAN OF FORTUNE (July 10).—Phil Willing, though possessed of a good heart, becomes the leader of a band of outlaws. The evil life he leads is not to his liking, and he yearns to become a respectable citizen. When Margie Billings, the sheriff's little daughter, crosses his path, Phil resolves right there and then to cut loose from his companions. At church, the following Sunday, he is recognized by a visiting deputy and promptly taken to jail. Little Margie pleads for him, but to no avail. The outlaws, free from Phil's restraining hand, go on a rampage. They successfully rob the sheriff's home, the mistress being an invalid and alone with Margie. The little girl manages to reach the deputy, who is keeping watch outside of Phil's cell, and apprises him of the robbery. The deputy and other men immediately give chase to the desperadoes. Margie finds her mother in a faint and rushes out in search of aid. Phil comes to her mind, and, with the forgotten jail key, she lets him out. The freed man rides like wind to the nearest doctor and, on his return to the sheriff's home, is re-captured by the posse who have also caught the fleeing robbers.

Thanks to little Margie, the sheriff deals kindly with Phil, who is escorted to the State line and told to ride ahead and ride fast.

YOUNG WILD WEST CORNERED BY APACHES (July 12).—Starlight, a beautiful Indian girl, is betrothed to Young Bull, the chief's son, whose love she does not reciprocate. Young Wild West comes in the nick of time and saves Starlight from the clutches of her savage adorer. The girl gladly joins the Americans' camp.

Young Bull, vowing revenge, lies in wait for Young Wild West. They meet and a terrific hand to hand combat ensues. The Indian brave is vanquished; his recital makes the old chief rage with anger, which causes him to command the Indians to bring back the girl at any cost.

Notwithstanding the Americans' watchfulness, the redmen succeed in carrying out their chief's mandate, but Young Wild West is not to be denied. With a few of his followers he gets on the trail and retakes Starlight. This causes the Indians to go on the warpath and a big battle follows. Young Wild West and his sweetheart, Arietta, hold many braves at bay until their ammunition is gone, and then, just as they are being captured, his friend come forth with Young Bull in tow. An exchange of prisoners is soon made and peace restored. Starlight returns to the American camp.

REX.

THE GREATER LOVE (July 11).—He loved his invalid wife, but he was just a little impatient at her illness. He took her out West, and life for a while was pleasant and carefree, only a little monotonous. Once he strayed away and met—her. She was a sweet girl, young and pretty and—flirtatious. They chatted for a minute, a minute that was as old as the world, and he left her.

He went home that night, and even the news that his wife was feeling much better and was even able to walk around didn't fill him with a great deal of joy. The other woman was on his mind and in his heart—and a battle raged in both.

He saw her again, and the appeal of each to each was strengthened and increased. Then one day his wife saw them together. She loved her husband, loved him! She saw, and understood. She saw, and felt, and knew that she was the obstacle to his happiness. And she loved him too much to desire to continue to be that.

So that night, after making her peace with herself and her God, she took the medicine that meant life to her and threw it away. And as she had lived for him alone, she died for him.

Perhaps the other two never knew the sacrifice and the price of their happiness. Perhaps they were wrong and she right, or she the most wrong of the three, but to-day there is a happy home where love is throned, and the grave of a heroine is the reason.

THE MOTHER HEART (July 14).—Her child died, and her heart hungered for the lost-loved mite. One day she saw a woman, with lines of toil and care on her face, carrying a baby. She became a friend of the baby—and its mother. The father of the child was brutal, a drunkard, and almost inhuman. The bereaved woman eventually earned the child, and took it to her heart.

GREAT NORTHERN.

CIRCUMSTANTIAL EVIDENCE (July 13).—A girl employed in a restaurant is annoyed by the attentions of a customer. A waiter, to whom she is engaged, comes to her aid. By way of retaliating, the customer slips his pocketbook, containing some notes, into the waiter's coat, and returns a little later, simulating furious indignation, and declaring that he has been robbed. The proprietor has his staff searched, the pocketbook is found, and the waiter, despite his protestations of innocence, is led away, and, in due course, tried and sentenced to imprisonment. The girl he loves is dismissed from her employment, being regarded as an accomplice, and she is reduced to begging. She attracts the attention of the young lawyer who defended her lover, and who has been trying for a long while to prove the prisoner's innocence, of which he is firmly convinced. The barrister listens sympathetically to the girl's story, and takes her to a hotel to give her some refreshment. While there they overhear a man in an adjoining room tell his friends of his exploit, and how he got an innocent man penal servitude. The incidents of the story strike the two listeners as familiar; they go into the next room, and the girl recognizes the customer. He is arrested, and in a pathetic scene at the prison, the victim is told that he is free.

MOVING PICTURES (July 13).—A moving picture story is to be enacted in a country lane. In it two vagabonds are to stretch a rope across the road, and so cause a motor to pull up and then rob the occupants. Constable Smith sees the preparations, and not fully understanding the truth of the matter, waits until the occupants of the motor have been forced to descend by the hooligans. Then, with a bravery worthy of a better cause, he dashes forward and seizes the men. Expostulations are of no use until he is led down to the camera, when he understands how he has been "guyed." Some time after, he sees the announcement of a picture theater to the effect that the picture in which he appears will be shown. With his wife he goes and there sees himself on the magic screen. Unable to control himself, he starts laughing, and so contagious is it that soon everybody else is joining in with him.

REPUBLIC.

THE OCTOROON'S SACRIFICE (July 22).—There are many and varied tales told of hardships and cruelties in the South before the war. In spite of the nobility of the genuine Southern families, there were many alien slave holders whose treatment of the slaves was anything but laudable.

The beautiful Octoroon was the property of an unscrupulous French adventurer, whose son was a typical "chip of the old block." After being accosted time and again with insulting propositions from both father and son, she finally runs away and, by a clever ruse, evades the bloodhounds and negroes that have been put on her track.

About this time Eveline, a little Southern beauty, in a teasing mood jumps into a rowboat to evade the caresses of her sweetheart, Frank Lee. As the boat nears the center of the stream she laughingly waves to her sweetheart on shore and in so doing loses her oars. In an effort to regain the oars, the boat is capsized, and the girl is thrown into the stream. The Octoroon who is hiding in some bushes nearby, sacrifices her chances of freedom by leaping into the water and rescuing the young girl.

Eveline becomes very fond of her and finally persuades her father to buy the Octoroon from her French owner. The young Frenchman when he meets Eveline falls madly in love with her in spite of the fact that the young lady shows her preference for Frank Lee, a handsome young Southerner.

The Frenchman, through his father, manages to almost ruin Eveline's father, and when all honorable methods of love-making have failed to win Eveline, he does not hesitate to threaten her father with ruin unless she accepts him. The Octoroon hears of this and thinking to save Eveline by sacrificing herself, she makes an appointment with her former master and, during a struggle, the man is thrown over the cliff and is dashed to pieces on the rocks below.

Young Lee is accused of the murder on circumstantial evidence and is locked up in the County Jail. In the meantime, the Octoroon, weak and ill from exposure, comes to the hut of a poor "white trash" family—here she learns that young Lee is being held for the murder of the Frenchman, and in spite of her weakened condition and the fear that she might again fall into the hands of her former owner, she braves all dangers and, appearing before the authorities, confesses how the young Frenchman came to his death.

Her sacrifice brings happiness to two loving hearts and peace to her before she dies, as the result of her painful experience.

NEW YORK FILM COMPANY.

LIGHTS AND SHADOWS OF CHINATOWN (July 15).—Maud Nelson is a widow, and her millions have drawn a score of lovers. But to no one will she give her love, for in each one she sees a fortune-hunter, and love alone, would tempt her to get married the second time. William Wright comes into her life, and Maud is satisfied at the first meeting that this man is to be her second husband. But Wright has no fortune, and his pride forbids him to marry the rich lady, as long as he cannot offer her an equivalent fortune.

Maud's brother, Charles, sees that Wright is a dangerous opponent, for while his sister is alone, she is always ready to give him money. As an habitual smoker of opium, Charles' energy for work is gone and he spends his time in the opium dens of the Chinese. Finally, Maud is dissatisfied with the steady appeal for money, and she tells him to find work, as her patience is at an end.

He takes this very quietly, but swears to be revenged. He has not long to wait for the opportunity. Maud, who does not wish to idle her life away, joins a mission for converting the Chinese. One of her scholars, Chin Chen, falls violently in love with her. One afternoon he proposes to her, but Maud turns him away. Mr. Wright meets her after the lesson, accompanying her home, then returning to his own abode.

Chin Chen, who has followed, now knows who the favored one is. Going to the opium dens, he finds Charles, who is trying to kill his disappointment by getting drunk, The Chinaman sends Charlie to Wright, offering to sell him a gold mine which has been salted. Wright falls into the trap and buys the mine. Wright, who now imagines himself a wealthy man, writes to Maud, explaining to her the change in his circumstances, and asks for her hand. The men who furnished Wright with the capital discover the theft. Wright is arrested. Maud discovers the sad news through a notice in the newspaper. While still alone she has a visit from Chan-Lus, the secretary to Chin Chen, who urgently begs for an interview. He informs her that his master alone has the power of uniting her with Mr. Wright, as he alone knows the true details of the transaction. Maud condescends and follows him.

He leads her through dens and drinking places, and at last through subterranean passages, through opium dens, until they arrive at the artistically furnished rooms of his master. Maud, with the hope of finding her beloved, finds herself with Chin-Chen, who claims her as his prisoner. She draws her revolver to defend herself. But she is not able to pull the trigger. From an invisible hole in the wall opium is blown into her face, and Maud sinks to the floor, overcome.

In the meantime, Charles is notified that his sister has been coaxed into the nets of the Chinese. His conscience chides him, and he hurries to the police, telling them how he swindled Wright. Mr. Wright is given his freedom, and with a number of policemen, Wright and Charles start for the place where Maud is held prisoner. In the scrimmage Charles is shot and mortally wounded. Wright finds Maud in an out of the way hiding place. He is just about to embrace her when they are called to the dying Charles. He is forgiven by those to whom he has done wrong before he passes into eternity.

GEM.

UNDER TWO FLAGS (July 9) (First Reel).—Bertie Cecil is a member of England's nobility and of the National Guardsmen. He finds particular diversion in innocent flirtations with married women. Lady Guinevere likes him in a silly sort of way, and determinedly resolves to keep the romance from her husband's observation.

Bertie's brother Berkeley, loses heavily at gambling and asks Bertie for financial assistance. Bertie patiently but sadly explains that he cannot meet his own debts. At nine o'clock that night Lady

MUSICAL BELLS

HAVE PROVEN TO BE THE MOST APPROVED DELIGHT OF THE MOV. ING PICTURE THEATRE

$40.00 UP

MANUFACTURED EXCLUSIVELY BY

J. C. Deagan

NEW ADDRESS

BERTEAU AND E. RAV. ENSWOOD PARK AVES.

CHICAGO

In answering advertisements kindly mention the Moving Picture World.

We hand you money 244 COUNT 'EM Features.

All the Best, and more to follow.
Ask for our Classified Lists.
Book them — then ADVERTISE.
Banners, Photos, ones, twos, threes and heralds.
Do it—all the wise ones are!

Feature Film Co. Toledo O.

Orchestra Music FOR MOVING PICTURES

Violin, Cornet and Drum parts have been added to the popular "Orpheum Collection" of piano music (dramatic and descriptive) for Moving Pictures. Practical for piano alone or any number of above instruments. Issued in two parts: No. 1 and No. 2.

Piano, 58 cents each; both No.'s $1.15
Violin, 40 cents each; both " 75c
Cornet, 35 cents each; both " 65c
Drums, 30 cents each; both " 55c

Send for free sample pages.

CLARENCE E. SINN

1501 Sedgwick St., Chicago, Ill.

Ornamental Theatres

PLASTER RELIEF DECORATIONS

Theatres Designed Everywhere

Write for Illustrated Theatre Catalog. Send us Sizes of Theatre for Special Designs

THE DECORATORS SUPPLY CO.
2549 Archer Avenue, :: CHICAGO, ILL.

The Simpson Solar Screen

Is the best Daylight Screen in existence. Fully covered by U. S. Patent No. 890,101. Don't buy imitations.

ALFRED L. SIMPSON, Inc.
No. 113 W. 132nd St., New York City

Electric Fans

GENERAL ELECTRIC MAKE, 16-inch straight, new, $13.50 each; guaranteed second-hand, $11.50 each; 12-inch new, straight, $11.00 each; new oscillating, $18.75 each. All these for alternating current, 110 volts, 60 cycles. New 12-inch direct current oscillating, 110 or 220 volts, $12.50 each. Several hundred other Dynamos and Motors.
Geo. Bender, 82-84 Center Street, New York

ROLL TICKETS

Daily Capacity Ten Million

SEE THESE PRICES FOR SPECIAL TICKETS

50,000 . . . $ 5.90
100,000 . . . 8.75
200,000 . . . 16.00
500,000 . . . 29.00

CARTER TICKET CO.
DANVERS, . . MASS.

CASH IN ADVANCE—NO C.O.D.

Guenevere visits Bertie in his home. Berkeley goes to a Jew money-lender, offers a note for sufficient money to cover the deficit, and signs his brother's name, endorsed by a friend, Lord Rockingham.

A little later the last slim vestige of Bertie's fortune is wiped away. Rockingham's eight-year-old sister comes to him and offers him some gold. Bertie tells her he cannot accept the money, and that when she has grown to womanhood she will know the reason. He asks for the little enamel box in which she has carried the gold pieces as a memento, and receives it just as he is summoned by a messenger to Rockingham's quarters. He finds Lord Rockingham and the Jew money-lender, with the forged note. Rockingham pleads with him to deny the charge, and explain where he was the night the note was executed. If Bertie speaks, he must soil a woman's name; if he spares her, his silence must be accepted as admission of his guilt. He keeps his silence and his faith with Lady Guenevere.

It is only a few minutes later, when the Jew attempts to place the handcuffs on him, that he realizes he is under arrest. However, he escapes and goes to Africa and engages under the French flag.

Second Reel.—Cigarette, soldier of France and daughter of the army, loves Bertie. He looked upon her wild dances and riotous revelries with a little disgust and a great pity.

Ten years he had lived under the French flag and the African sun. But the memory of before still lived and lingered with him. To Africa came a party of tourists from England. They visited the barracks. Among the women in the party was a sweet, young, beautiful slip of a near-woman. She was to Bertie a link of the past, a vision of the happy yesterday that had died. He was to her—only a soldier of France. But somehow they became acquainted, and somehow she became interested in him.

And Cigarette saw it all. When he fell wounded in battle, Cigarette dragged him from the red field to a shack in the outskirts. And through the long, black night she nursed him. Then, faintly, feebly, she heard his voice and a name. Eagerly she listened, her heart beating a prayer—the only prayer her being was ever known to make. But the whispered name was the name of the other. She choked the sob and flew from the tent, that he might never know.

One day the English woman saw the little enamel box, now rusty, battered and tarnished. She saw it, and started and stared, and asked him where and how he obtained it. He related the incident—and she told him it was she!

She explained that Lord Rockingham was with her in Africa, and begged him to stay until her brother returned to the house. With a sudden, startled fear he begged her not to disclose his presence, and flew from hers.

Once, on a street in Algiers, he looked into his brother's face. He greeted Bertie with a vague, trembling fear. But Bertie told him to leave Africa with his title and his honor, return to England and live his life according to them.

An irresistible something drew him back to the woman. The colonel of Bertie's regiment saw him come from the house, and in jealous rage demanded to know why he had gone there. Bertie was silent. The colonel sarcastically insinuated that the aristocrat was cold to her equals, and carried on her midnight intrigues with the blackguards of his camp. A moment after the deed, Bertie realized that he had struck him.

He was court-martialed, found guilty, and sentenced to be shot on the morrow. Cigarette heard, and, frantic with grief and dismay, she ran up the street—and stopped to peer into a face. The face was the face of Bertie. She stopped him and excitedly told him all, and learned he was Bertie's brother. To her the boy confessed all, and not waiting, she had him write his statement, snatched the paper and dashed off for the marshal's tent.

Her story was told and proved. The stay of execution of sentence was given her, and she resumed her break-neck ride. She rode into the scene of the execution just as the command was given to fire. Her shouted "Stop, in the name of France!" came a moment too late. The command had already been given, and the guns were speaking their dirge. But even fleeter than the leaden death, she hurled herself from her horse, in front of Bertie. After the first moment of dull, despairing astonishment, he realized that she had sacrificed her life for him, realized in the last chapter all the devotion and integrity of her love. Slowly he dropped his head until his lips met hers. But the long-longed-for sweet had come too late, and the victory of her love was too late to be anything but defeat. Once she smiled, a sweet, fleeting smile of triumph, and in the kiss that she had hoped and lived for, she died.

In England Bertie and Guinevere sat together. Sadly they smiled at each other. They were thinking of a distant grave, the human cost of their happiness.

MAJESTIC.

THE LOST MESSENGER (July 9).—Tom Saunders, messenger for the First National Bank, is a hard-working, steady fellow, who lives happily with his young wife and little baby. Thus, the surprise of his many friends and business associates is great when he suddenly disappears, leaving his wife and babe alone and penniless. His wife struggles along as best she can, but is finally forced to give up her home and live in absolute poverty. To add to her troubles, the baby is taken seriously ill. The doctor, who is working to save the child's life, is also interested in a case at the hospital of a watchman who has been badly injured by thugs while on duty at the docks. The watchman recovers his health, but his strange actions interest the doctor, who is surprised to find a picture of the mother of the child he is also attending, in the case of the man's watch. The watchman proves to be Saunders who disappeared so strangely years before. Overwork had brought on an attack of aphasia, and he had been working as a watchman, entirely ignorant of his own identity. His recovery is followed by a complete return to health of his child and the little family is happily united once more.

Among the Exhibitors

Dayton, Ohio.—The Electric Theater Advertising Company, Dayton, advertising; to be shown on curtain in picture houses; $10,000; 1,000 shares of $10. Guy A. Edwards, Glenn H. Stibbs, Jesse Ware Recher, Edna May Recher and George P. Weed.

The Pelican Club, of Dayton, Ohio. Frank Winner and others.

Enid, Okla.—Delmar Theater Company, of Enid. Capital stock, $2,000. Incorporators: Claude J. Pelton, Albert Loewen and Ben S. Fagan, all of Enid.

Chicago, Ill.—De Luxe Theater Company. Capitalized at $5,000. Incorporators: Charles K. Lambert, Walter N. White, Robert McCormick.

Hattiesburg, Ala.—Lomo Circuit, Hattiesburg, Forest county. Capitalized at $50,000. Charles Lohmann, V. J. Molliere and others. The company will operate moving picture shows.

Clarksburg, W. Va.—Clarksburg Theater Company, Clarksburg, W. Va.; theatrical enterprises. Capital stock, $40,000. Incorporators: Edward L. Moore and R. Robinson, Wheeling, W. Va.; E. C. S. Holmboe, R. C. Lafferty and George A. Murray, Clarksburg, W. Va.

Macomb, Ill.—Joe Blume, manager of the Gem Theater here, has leased a lot on South Randolph Street, and opened, on May 2, an airdome for the coming season. He has secured a large tent, which has a seating capacity of 800.

Rochester, N. Y.—A new picture theater will be erected here on Lyell Avenue, near Angle Street, by the Casion Amusement Company.

Chicago, Ill.—The Lincoln Belmont Theater Company. Capital, $150,000. John P. Price, Martin C. Anderson, Theodore Johnson.

Grand Rapids, Wis.—The Bijou Theater, the new moving picture theater, has just opened to the public.

Perry, Ia.—The Perry new airdome has just opened to the public.

New York.—A new theater is being erected on 48th Street by Edward B. Corey, and leased it to John Cort.

Boston, Mass.—Temple Theater Co., capital $250,000. Incorporators, William D. Bradstreet, C. Edwin Jennings, Edward C. Hall, and others.

Escanaba, Mich.—The Grand Theater of this city, was recently sold by James C. Tolan to C. S. Sullivan and John J. Hines, and after alterations and improvements are made will be opened to the public by the new owners.

Sheridan, Wyo.—Plans are being prepared for the erection of a summer theater here.

St. Joseph, Mich.—Mr. W. S. Bastar purchased the airdome here.

Leon, Ia.—E. D. Bean is now owner of the Idle Hour Theater.

Hampton, Ia.—The Hampton Amusement Company of Hampton, authorized capital stock, $6,500. The incorporators include F. A. Bailey, N. W. Werloss and C. Haney.

Milwaukee, Wis.—The American Theater Co., Incorporated, capital $4,000. Incorporators, J. C. Lyman, E. H. Hirmke, Fred Luling.

CLASSIFIED ADVERTISEMENTS

Classified Advertisements, three cents per word, cash with order; 50 cents minimum; postage stamps accepted

SITUATIONS WANTED.

OPERATOR—Desires position anywhere. Experienced on all machines. Good references. Satisfaction guaranteed. State salary. Address P. O. BOX 425, Sullivan, Illinois.

MOVING PICTURE OPERATOR OR MANAGER—A trustworthy man. European experience. HASLWANTER, R. F. D. No. 2, Somerville, New Jersey.

LADY PIANIST—Experienced vaudeville and moving pictures, desires permanent position. Address G. A. HOWELL, 204 Lake Ave., Ithaca, New York.

SITUATION WANTED—As assistant operator, experienced and licensed. H. DAVID, 1838 Monroe Street, Chicago, Ill. Phone Seeley 6287.

AT LIBERTY—Baritone Singer and Manager. Ten years' experience. Sober, reliable and best of reference. Address JOSEPH L. ROMAINE, 6 Lake Ave., Saratoga Springs, N. Y.

HELP WANTED.

WANTED—Experienced cameramen in all parts of America to cover current events. Wire immediately ARGUS WEEKLY, Los Angeles, California.

WANTED—Pianist who can play pictures. Sight reader, capable of playing regular attractions. Only ladies and gentlemen need apply, for you must make good. Steady position for competent person. W. W. WILLMAN, Aberdeen, Miss.

Fine opportunity for live man to manage theater with moving pictures in connection. Must be competent in show and picture business. L. J. BROWN, Alexandria, Minnesota.

HELP WANTED—Young man, not over thirty-five, to travel and call on theaters and film exchanges. Must be thoroughly posted on picture shows and prefer one who has been theater manager or operator. Must be able to invest $2000 in legitimate business. Address MARATHON, care of Moving Picture World, New York City.

WANTED—Pianist, operator and singer. All must be first-class. Steady positions in fine new Theater. Address CROWN THEATER, Jackson, Michigan.

EQUIPMENT FOR SALE.

ELECTRIC FANS—12" 110 A. C., $9.50, or D. C. Perfect running order, $7.25. New Fans, 12" D. C. $9.50; A. C., $11.50. Guaranteed. COSMOS ELECTRIC CO., 136 S. Liberty St., New York City.

FOR SALE—Three No. 5 Power's Machines, completely overhauled, excellent condition. Bargains. BOX 417, Montpelier, Vt.

One Iron Frame Asbestos booth. One American Projectograph machine, seventy-eight opera chairs. Address J. T. DAVIS, Grampian, Pa.

FOR SALE—250 Hardesty Anti-Panic Revolving Pedestal Opera Chairs. Cost $2.00 each. Will sell all or part at $.75 apiece. Guaranteed in good condition. Will ship subject to examination. Also, cheap, some mighty swell scenery for opening 14 x 20. W. C. QUIMBY, Zanesville, Ohio.

EQUIPMENT WANTED.

WANTED—Three hundred opera chairs in good condition. State price. A. A. MARKKANEN, Superior, Wyoming.

THEATER FOR SALE.

FOR SALE—Picture show on best corner in this city. Open seven days. Now clearing from $60.00 to $75.00 a week and makes from $100.00 to $125.00 clear every week in the fall. Everything new and up-to-date. A great opportunity for someone who is looking for an established business. $3,000.00 cash, no less. Address 29 Smith Place, Columbus, Ohio.

FOR LEASE—Equipment and theater, airdome combination, capacity 850. Address BOX 322, Albuquerque, New Mexico.

Finely equipped theater, seating 430, in city of 12,000. Rent $1000.00 per year, for four and a half years. All new since January. Other business. Address NEW YORK STATE, care of Moving Picture World, New York City.

THEATERS WANTED.

WANTED—Best moving picture theater that $750 cash will handle. Take charge August 1st. R. E. VAUGHAN, Schleswig, Iowa.

MISCELLANEOUS.

EXHIBITORS—Here's a live wire for souvenirs. Popular sheet music $3.00 per 100. Samples 10c. GEM MUSIC CO., New Berlin, New York.

OPERATORS—We want a live representative in each city to introduce our products. RED DEVIL CEMENT. Works without scraping. E-Z OIL an aid to economical management. Silverit, $3.00 can coats 9 x 12 screen, 100% brighter picture. Indirect lighting units, with 18" reflector, $7.50. Send for our Catalog and Handbook. THE MOTION PICTURE ACCESSORIES CO., 23 Stevenson Bldg., Pittsburgh, Pa.

WURLITZER
World's Largest Mfrs. Established 1856

Wurlitzer PianOrchestra in Bijou Theatre, San Francisco, Cal.

Write for 32-page booklet, showing
Wurlitzer Automatic Musical Instruments
in the leading picture theatres of the country.

The Wurlitzer Instruments furnish better music than musicians and reduce expenses. 50 different styles; time payments; big catalog free. If you can't call, write to our nearest branch.

The Rudolph Wurlitzer Company

CINCINNATI 117-121 E. 4th | NEW YORK 25-27 W. 32d | CHICAGO 329-331 S. Wabash | PHILADELPHIA 1835 Chestnut
ST. LOUIS 912 Pine St. | CLEVELAND 800 Huron Road | BUFFALO 701 Main | LOUISVILLE 426 W. Greene | COLUMBUS, O. 57 E. Main

NOW IT'S LAS VEGAS

While there call upon Duncan and Browne, whose theatres are equipped with

Radium Gold Fibre Screens

We feel proud to be represented by them. The moving picture business contains no finer men. Here's a secret—lest you have a wrong idea: They paid us full price for our screens—ask them. They all do. Truthfulness and honesty in advertising is one of our cardinal principles. We will not give a screen away to curry favors. One always sells a bunch of others.

YOU HAVE TRIED THE REST—NOW BUY THE BEST—

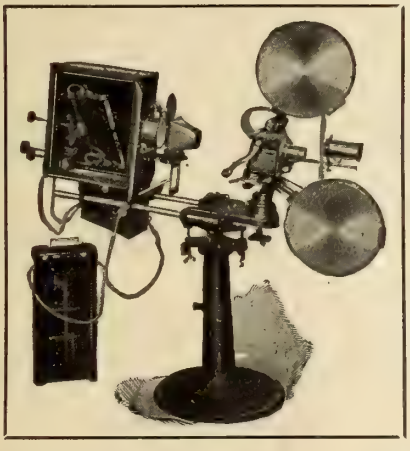
Radium Gold Fibre Screens

AMERICAN THEATRE CURTAIN AND SUPPLY COMPANY

Main and Chestnut Streets, St. Louis, Missouri.
N. H. SPITZER, 32 Union Square, New York City.

Are You One of the Four Hundred?

MORE THAN FIFTY PER CENT OF CHICAGO'S SIX HUNDRED THEATRES ARE EQUIPPED WITH THE MOTIOGRAPH



This endorsement of the "Home" exhibitor of a machine made in their "Home Town" is the strongest endorsement we can offer.

We do not spend one-fifth the money in advertising that others do—our best advertisement comes from thousands of satisfied users.

Chicago exhibitors in particular, and all others as well—we want to be personally acquainted with you—we want you to come and see us, to see where and how your MOTIOGRAPH is made, to see the care and exactitude used on each part—we want to show you why we may justly claim THE MOTIOGRAPH THE BEST MADE MACHINE IN AMERICA.

Send ten cents for the 1912 Hand Book and Instructions.
Every operator will find it worth many times the cost.

The Enterprise Optical Manufacturing Company

564-572 W. Randolph Street, - - - - CHICAGO, ILL.

FOR SALE BY LIVE DEALERS EVERYWHERE.

THE ADOP

ANOTHER PATHE MASTERPIECE RE

THE RAGE OF EUROPE

AND IT WILL CREATE A

RELEASED
JULY
8th
TWO REELS

A thrilling, throbbing, of a poor little orphan raised to budding woman to her father, long since

Two of the Leading Actors of France,

NOTHING LIKE IT EVER MADE BY US OR ANY

Produced by PATHÉ FRERES

BOOK THIS A NATION'S PERIL

TED CHILD

LEASED BY THE GENERAL FILM CO.

AND AUSTRALIA

FURORE IN THE UNITED STATES

pulsating drama of the life adopted by ragpickers, hood, and finally restored supposed to be dead.

RELEASED JULY 8th TWO REELS

Pascal and Cappelani, Play the Leads

OTHER MANUFACTURER OF MOTION PICTURES.

Released by the General Film Co.

THE ORLEANS COACH GOES BIG!

INDEPENDENT Release Dates

AMERICAN.

July 1—The Girl Back Home (Dr.).....
July 3—An Hour of Terror (Dr.).....1000
July 4—Under False Pretenses (Dr.).....1000
July 6—The Fall of Black Hawk (2 reels, Hist.)1000
July 10—The Fall of Blackhawk (2 reels, Hist.)2000
July 11—The Vanishing Race (Dr.).....1000
July 15—The Fatal Mirror (Dr.).....1000
July 8—Where There's a Heart (Dr.).....1000
July 10—The Fall of Blackhawk (2 reels) (Hist.).....2000
July 11—The Vanishing Race (Dr.).....1000
July 15—The Fatal Mirror (Dr.).....1000
July 17—In the Nick of Time (Dr.).....1000

AMBROSIO.

June 21—The Maniac (Dr.).....
June 28—The Actor's Test (Dr.).....
June 28—Benares, the Sacred City (Sc.).....
July 5—The Legend of the Chrysanthemum (Dr.)
July 5—The Airman (Com.).....

BISON.

June 22—On the Warpath (Dr.).....
June 25—His Message (Dr.).....
June 29—The Colonel's Peril (Dr.).....
July 2—The Sheriff of Stony Butte (Dr.).....
July 6—The Restoration (Dr.).....
July 9—Reconciled (Dr.).....
July 13—Just in Time (Dr.).....

CHAMPION.

June 12—A Western Child's Heroism (Dr.).... 950
July 1—Pat's Breeches (Com.).....
July 1—Little Old New York (Hist.).....
July 8—The Gypsy Bride (Dr.).....
July 15—The Call of the West (Dr.).....

COMET.

June 17—The Plucky Ranch Girl (W. Dr.).....1000
June 22—The Tale of a Rubber Boot (Com.)... 925
June 24—A Realistic Rehearsal (Com.)..... 750
June 24—Street Carnival in Jacksonville (Sc.).. 200
June 29—A Wild Rose of the Hills (W. Dr.)..1000
July 1—Jenks and His Motor Boat (Com.).... 500
July 1—New York Catholic Protectory (Edu.) 500
July 6—A Heroine of Pioneer Days (Dr.) 975
July 8—The Poughkeepsie Intercollegiate Regatta (Sporting).....1000
July 13—Lights and Shadows of Old Kentucky (Dr.).....1000
July 15—Reggie Breaks the College Rules (Com.).....1000

ECLAIR.

June 30—Willy Wants a Free Lunch (Com.)..
June 30—Picturesque Portugal (Sc.).....
June 30—Woman's Work (Edu.).....
July 2—The Holy City (Biblical).....
July 4—Hearts and Memories (Dr.).....
July 7—For Love (Dr.).....
July 7—Arabian Theatres (Edu.).....
July 9—A Double Misunderstanding (Com.-Dr.)
July 11—The Cedarville Scandal (Com.).....
July 14—Artful Contran (Com.).....
July 14—Across the Caucasus (Scenic).....
July 16—The Dreamers (Dr.).....
July 18—That Loving Man (Com.).....
July 21—Rizzio (Dr.).....

GEM.

June 11—The Princess Lorraine (2 reels, Dr.)..
June 18—Hill Folks (Dr.).....
June 25—The Reason (Dr.).....
July 2—The Medal of Honor (Drama).....
July 9—Under Two Flags (2 reels, Dr.).....

GAUMONT.

June 20—By the Zuyder Zee (Com.).....
June 25—The Auto Smash-up (Dr.).....
June 27—When Money Isn't Money (Com.-Dr.)
July 4—Written in Blood (2 reels, Dr.).....
July 9—The Lion's Revenge (Dr.).....
July 11—Love's Floral Tribute (Dr.).....
July 16—Love's Surest Proof (Dr.).....
July 18—A Mid-Channel Romance (Dr.).....

GREAT NORTHERN

June 22—Painter and Peasant (Dr.).....
June 29—How to Make a Reputation (Dr.).....
June 29—A Bath With Consequences (Com.)...
July 6—The Two Sisters (Dr.).....
July 6—Copper Industry In Spain (Edu.).....
July 13—Circumstantial Evidence (Dr.).....
July 13—Moving Pictures (Com.).....
July 20—Almost a Tragedy (Com.-Dr.).....
July 20—Uncle Reuben Goes to Town (Com.)..

IMP.

June 29—Portugese Joe (Com.-Dr.)..... 400
July 1—Love, War and a Bonnet (Dr.).....1000
July 4—Betty, the Coxswain (Dr.).....1000
July 6—Home Again (Com.)..... 600
July 6—Printing and Engraving U. S. Government Stamps (Edu.)..... 400
July 8—The Parson and the Medicine Man (Dr.).....1000
July 11—Caught in the Flash (Com.-Dr.).....1000
July 13—The Wrong Weight (Com.)..... 600
July 13—In and Around Chicago, Ill. (Topical.) 400
July 13—Governor Wilson At His Summer Home (Topical).....
July 15—Hearts In Conflict (Dr.).....1000
July 18—Winning the Latonia Derby (Dr.)....1000
July 20—Building a Church in a Day (Voc'tl.) 400
July 20—The Foreign Invasion (Com.)..... 600

LUX.

May 31—Arabella Works Too Hard (Com.)....
June 7—After Many Years (Dr.)..... 950
June 14—What An Ass (Comedy)..... 514
June 14—Music Mad (Comedy)..... 453
June 21—The Gambler (Dr.)..... 948
June 28—Thou Art the Man (Dr.)..... 721
June 28—By the Cliffs of Etretat (Sc.)..... 259
July 5—The Empty Holster (Dr.)..... 860
July 12—Spiffkin's New Job (Com.)..... 567
July 12—Ponto's Little Joke (Com.)..... 393

ITALA.

(By N. Y. M. P. Co.)

Feb. 3—Anarchical Attempt (Com.).....
Feb. 10—Toto, Door-Keeper (Com.).....
Feb. 10—Hunting Ducks (Sporting).....
Feb. 17—The Italian Army in Tripoli.....
Feb. 17—Making a Cinematograph Scene.....
June 29—The Great Bank Failure (2 reels, Dr.)
July 6—A Woman's Duplicity (Dr.).....

MAJESTIC.

June 30—Getting Rich Quick (Com.).....
July 2—The Flat Upstairs (Com.).....
July 2—The Burglar Alarm Mat (Com.).....
July 7—The Cook Came Back (Com.).....
July 9—The Widower's Widow (Com.-Dr.).....
July 9—Father's Bust (Com.).....
July 9—The Lost Messenger (Dr.).....
July 14—Father's Bust (Com.).....
July 14—The Widower's Widow (Com.).....
July 16—In Her Brother's Defense (Dr.).....

MILANO.

July 13—The Wolf's Prey (2 reels) (Dr.)....

NESTOR.

June 12—The Squatter's Child (Dr.).....
June 14—The Girl and the Sheriff (Dr.).....
June 17—The Bandit of Tropico (Drama).....
June 19—The Land of Might (Drama).....
June 21—Beneath Western Skies (Drama)....
June 24—The Dawn of Netta (Dr.).....
June 26—Reaping the Whirlwind (Dr.).....
June 28—Young Wild West Leading a Raid (Dr.)
July 1—When Hearts Are Trumps (Dr.).....
July 3—Hard Luck Bill (Com.).....
July 5—Young Wild West on the Border (Dr.)
July 8—The Flower of the Forest (Dr.).....
July 10—A Gentleman of Fortune (Dr.).....
July 12—Young Wild West Cornered By Apaches (Dr.).....

NEW YORK FILM CO.

July 15—Lights and Shadows of Chinatown (Dr.).....

POWERS.

June 22—Two Gay Boys (Comedy).....
June 26—Their One Day's Work (Dr.).....
June 26—The Helping Hand (Com.).....
July 3—The Coming Generation (Com.).....
July 5—Mates and Mis-mates (Dr.).....
July 10—Tangled (Com.).....
July 10—A Leap Year Delusion (Com.).....
July 12—Her Life's Story (Dr.).....
July 17—Getting Even (Com.).....

RELIANCE.

June 8—Kaintuck (Dr.) .....
June 12—A Day at the Zoological Gardens (Edu.) .....
June 15—Virginius (2 reels, Dr.).....
June 19—One Man's Love (Drama).....
June 22—The Forbidden Way (Drama).....
June 22—The Pelican (Edu.).....
June 26—Votes for Women (2 reels) (Dr.)....
June 29—Before the White Man Came (Dr.)....
July 3—A Man's Duty (Dr.).....
July 6—Rip Van Winkle (Dr.).....
July 10—Grandpa (Dr.).....
July 13—The Toy 'Phone (Dr.).....
July 17—At Cripple Creek (Dr.).....
July 20—Love Me, Love My Dog (Com.-Dr.)...

REPUBLIC.

June 4—Reparation (Dr.).....
June 8—A Western Triangle (Dr.).....
June 8—Beautiful Palo Duro (Scenic).....
June 11—Was He a Suffragette? (Com.).....
June 15—A Shadow of the Past (Dr.).....
June 18—The Serpent (Drama).....
June 22—Her Father, the Sheriff (Drama).....
June 25—The Queen of May (Dr.).....
June 29—In the Balance (Dr.).....
July 2—Evil Be to Him Who Evil Thinks (Dr.)
July 8—The Gold In the Auto (Dr.).....
July 15—The All-seeing Eye (Dr.) .....
July 22—The Octoroon's Sacrifice (Dr.).....

REX.

June 16—The Diamond Path (Drama).....
June 20—The Power of Thought (Dr.).....
June 23—The Voice of the Millions (Dr.).....
June 27—The Weight of a Feather (Dr.).....
June 27—The Weight of a Feather (Dr.).....
June 30—Looking Backward (Dr.).....
July 4—A Prophet Without Honor (Dr.).....
July 7—The Unknown Bride (Dr.).....
July 11—The Greater Love (Dr.).....
July 14—The Mother Heart (Dr.).....

SOLAX.

June 21—Indian Summer (Comedy).....
June 26—Love's Railroad (Com.).....
June 26—Planting Time (Com.).....
June 28—The Call of the Rose (Dr.).....
July 3—Father and the Boys (Com.).....
July 5—Between Two Fires (Dr.).....
July 10—Winsome But Wise (Com.).....
July 12—Hotel Honeymoon (Com.).....
July 17—Slippery Jim (Dr.).....
July 19—The Four Flush Actor (Com.).....

THANHOUSER.

June 28—The Professor's Son (Dr.).....
June 30—Doggie's Debut (Dr.).....
July 2—Out of the Dark (Dr.).....
July 5—Ma and Dad (Com.-Dr.).....
July 7—The Portrait of the Lady Anne (Dr.)..
July 9—Pa's Medicine (Com.-Dr.).....
July 9—The Hazers Hazed (Com.).....
July 12—Nursie and the Knight (Com.-Dr.)....
July 14—The Finger of Scorn (Dr.).....
July 16—Vengeance Is Mine (Dr.).....
July 19—The Ranchman and the Hungry Bird (Com.-Dr.).....

VICTOR.

June 14—Not Like Other Girls (Com.).....
July 12—In Swift Waters (Dr.).....

GREAT NORTHERN SPECIAL FEATURE FILM COMPANY.

Feb. 27—The Nihilist's Conspiracy.....2000
March 18—The Call of a Woman.....2000
April 8—Cell Thirteen 2000
April 22—The Dead Man's Child.....2000
April 15—The Dead Man's Child, 8 reels (Dr.)

FEATURE AND EDUCATIONAL FILM CO.

Nov. 20—Love and Aviation (Dr.).....
Nov. 20—Zigomar (Dr.).....
Dec. 18—The Love Chase (Com.).....

SHAMROCK.

May 7—A Gypsy's Love (Dr.).....
May 11—Algernon's Busy Day (Com.).....
May 14—On the Verge (Dr.).....
May 18—Algernon's Busy Day (Com.).....
May 21—The Thorny Path (Dr.).....
May 25—A Cold Reception (Com.).....
May 25—The Kissing Germ (Com.).....
May 28—White Fawn (Dr.).....
May 31—A Petticoat Ranch Boss (Com.).....

SPECIAL ROLL TICKETS The Big Ticket. Any Printing Any Colors

5,000	- -	$1.25	20,000	- -	$4.60	50,000	- -	$7.50
10,000	-	$2.50	25,000	- -	$5.50	100,000	- -	$10.00

Get the Samples Stock Tickets, 6 Cents

NATIONAL TICKET COMPANY - - - Shamokin, Pa.

INTERNATIONAL FEATURES!!!

SENSATIONAL 2 and 3 REEL MASTER PRODUCTIONS
WRITE FOR LIST
ORDER YOUR COPIES IN ADVANCE
Elegant and Elaborate Posters For All Feature Films

Continuous importations of exclusive and selected features.
Exclusive Territory granted to purchasers of INTERNATIONAL FEATURES, FREE!
Sample prints of our features can be seen in our show rooms, 5 WEST 14th STREET.

INTERNATIONAL FILM TRADERS, Inc., 5 West 14th St. New York City

Importers of Exclusive Features, U. S. and Canadian Rights.

20 Years in Sing Sing With State Rights of Ala., Ga., Fla.

For Sale

Tracy the Bandit.....1,200 feet, at 5c. per foot
Siege of Calais.....1,800 feet, at 5c. per foot
Agripina .....1,200 feet, at 5c. per foot
Drink .....1,800 feet, at 5c. per foot
Dante's Divine Comedy.....1,700 feet, at 5c. per foot
Delhi Durbar ..... 900 feet, at 5c. per foot
Old Wyoming Days.....2,400 feet, at 5c. per foot
Lithos—one sheets, 5c.; three sheets, 10c.

All Films Guaranteed

FEATURE FILM CO.,
725 Maison Blanche, NEW ORLEANS, LA.

Yes. You can make your house pay during the hot summer by using the STAR FEATURES. They get the money. Don't worry, but get in touch with us. Plenty pictorial display.

G. W. BRADENBURGH
FEATURE FILM PIONEER

Exclusives	Length	Make	Vacant	Rental Price
The Flower of the Mormon City	3000	Deutsche Bioscope	July 1st	$15.00
Nursing a Viper	2400	" "	" 8th	15.00
Lieut. Rose & Hidden Treasure	1500	Clarendon	" 1st	10.00
Driven to Death (Asta Nielsen)	2000	Danish	" 8th	10.00
Gipsy Blood " "	3000	Deutsche Bioscope	" 15th	15.00
The Traitress " "	3000	" "	" 15th	15.00
The Might of Gold " "	3400	" "	" 15th	15.00
An Old Man's Darling " "	2700	" "	" 8th	10.00
Retribution " "	2700	" "	" 22nd	15.00
The Red Rose of the Apache	2800	Pasquali	" 8th	15.00
Temptations of Gay Paris	2800	Pathe	" 8th	15.00
The Four Dare Devils	2700	Deutsche Bioscope	" 1st	15.00
The Price of Beauty	2000	Great Northern	" 1st	10.00
A Fisherman's Temptation or Saved from Sea	3000	" "	" 15th	15.00
Absalom	1500	Pathe Colored	" 1st	10.00

Write for list of 100 other "Star" subjects.

NOTE—All films sent C. O. D. rental. Sold on receipt of 10% cash with order. Write for summer prices on regular daily service.

233 W. EIGHTH ST., PHILADELPHIA, PA.

The Wonders of "SILVERIT" Was a Surprise to the Exhibitors at the Convention just held in Pittsburg

Claiming it to be a wonderful discovery and of great improvement to the Motion Picture Business.
"Silverit" is a silver paste, and is rubbed on your curtain, making a smooth, even finish; can be polished like a mirror.
Can be applied over any surface except varnish; One pound can covers a curtain 9′ x 12′.

One Pound Can, $3.00 Two Pound Can, $5.00

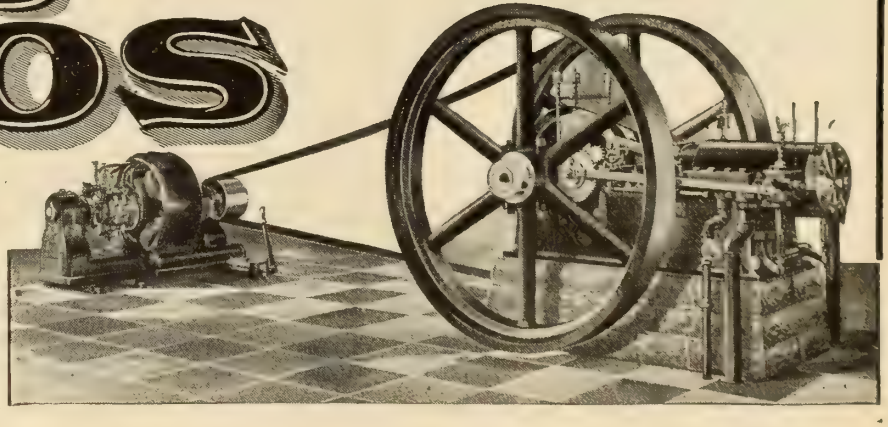
A. G. THOMAS, 1705 Fairacres Ave., Pittsburg, Pa.

THE FOOS

Special Electric, Gas, Gasoline, and Kerosene Engines

furnish light equal to the best central station service at less than half the cost. Ask us how we can reduce your charges for current from 25 to 75 per cent. Bulletin S. E. 98.

FOOS GAS ENGINE CO., 809 Linden Ave., Springfield, Ohio



LICENSED Release Dates

RELEASE DAYS.

Monday—Biograph, Kalem, Lubin, Pathe, Selig, Vitagraph.

Tuesday—Edison, Essanay, C. G. P. C., Cines, Selig, Vitagraph.

Wednesday—Edison, Eclipse, Kalem, Lubin, Pathe, Vitagraph.

Thursday—Biograph, Essanay, Lubin, Melies, Pathe, Selig.

Friday—Edison, Essanay, Kalem, Selig, C. G. P. C., Vitagraph.

Saturday—Edison, Essanay, Cines, Lubin, Pathe, Vitagraph.

BIOGRAPH.

June 20—The Spirit Awakened (Drama).....
June 24—A Dash Through the Clouds (Com.)..
June 24—The New Baby (Com.).....
June 27—The School Teacher and the Waif (Com.-Dr.) .....
July 1—Man's Lust for Gold (Dr.).....
July 4—One Round O'Brien (Com.).....
July 4—Trying to Fool Uncle (Com.).....
July 8—An Indian Summer (Dr.).....
July 11—Man's Genesis (Com.).....
July 15—The Speed Demon (Com.).....
July 15—His Own Fault (Com.).....
July 18—Heaven Avenges (Dr.).....

CINES.

(G. Kleine.)

June 25—The Girl and the Mayor (Com.)..... 971
June 29—The Wandering Minstrel (Dr.).....1004
July 2—Jenkins Sneezes (Com.)..... 325
July 2—A Violin and a Pipe (Com.)..... 640
July 6—In Wrong (Com.)..... 975
July 9—The Gay Deceivers (Com.)..... 585
July 9—Leah Learns to Dance (Com.)..... 365
July 13—For Her Father's Sake (Dr.)..... 950
July 16—Disowned (Dr.).....1050
July 20—The Part the Servant Played (Com.-Dr.).....1000

EDISON.

June 22—The Girl at the Key (Drama).....1000
June 25—The Little Bride of Heaven (Dr.)...1000
June 26—Pennsylvania State Police, Troop "B" (Topical) 500
June 26—The Wooden Indian (Com.)..... 500
June 28—Master and Pupil (Dr.).....1000
June 29—The Father (Dr.).....1000
July 2—The Close of the American Revolution (Hist.).....1000
July 3—Partners for Life (Com.-Dr.).....1000
July 5—The Workman's Lesson (Dr.).....1000
July 6—How the Boys Fought the Indians (Com.)..... 700
July 6—An Intelligent Camera (Com.)..... 300
July 9—After Many Days (Dr.).....1000
July 10—The Artist's Joke (Com.).....1000
July 12—For Valour (Dr.).....1000
July 13—Picturesque Darjeeling, India (Sc.)... 300
July 13—Madame de Mode (Com.)..... 700
July 16—Nerves and the Man (Dr.).....1000
July 17—Revenge is Sweet (Com.)..... 600
July 17—The Maple Sugar Industry at Thompson, Pa. (Ind.)..... 400
July 19—The Necklace of Crushed Rose Leaves (Dr.).....1000
July 20—The Little Artist from the Market (Dr.).....1000

ESSANAY.

June 15—Western Hearts (Dr.).....1000
June 18—Broncho Billy's Gratitude (Drama)..1000
June 20—The Return of William Marr (Dr.)..1000
June 21—Derby Day at Churchill Downs (Spt.)1000
June 22—The Foreman's Cousin (Drama).....1000
June 25—Billy and the Butler (Com.-Dr.).....1000
June 27—A Guardian's Luck (Com.).....1000
June 28—Springing A Surprise (Com.).....1000
June 29—Broncho Billy and the Indian Maid (Dr.) 1000
July 2—On the Cactus Trail (W. Dr.).....1000
July 4—White Roses (Dr.).....1000
July 5—The Butterfly Net (Com.).....1000
July 6—Broncho Billy's Narrow Escape (Dr.)..1000
July 9—Signal Lights (Dr.).....1000
July 11—Pa Trubell's Troubles (Com.).....1000
July 12—Down Jayville Way (Com.).....1000
July 13—A Story of Montana (Dr.).....1000
July 16—The Smuggler's Daughter (Dr.).....1000
July 18—Cupid's Quartette (Com.).....1000
July 19—Hearts of Men (Dr.).....1000
July 20—A Wife of the Hills (Dr.).....1000

KALEM.

June 14—The Girl Strikers (Dr.).....1000
June 17—The Bag of Gold (Drama).....1000
June 19—An Arabian Tragedy (Drama).....1000
June 21—The Rube Detective (Comedy).....
June 21—The Chauffeur's Dream (Comedy)....
June 24—The Colonel's Escape (Dr.).....1000
June 26—Captured by Bedouins (Dr.).....1000
June 28—The Penalty of Intemperance (Dr.)..1000
July 1—Tragedy of the Desert (2 reels Dr.) (Special).....2000
July 1—The Girl Bandits' Hoodoo (Com.).....1000
July 3—The Filibusterers (Dr.) 1000
July 5—Winning a Widow (Dr.).....1000
July 8—The Organ Grinder (Dr.).....
July 8—Nile Hippopotamus (Edu.).....
July 10—The Bugler of Battery B (Dr.)..... 875
July 10—Hungry Hank's Hallucination (Com.) 125
July 12—Saved by Telephone (Dr.).....
July 12—A Pet of the Cairo Zoo (Edu.).....
July 15—The Lair of the Wolf (Dr.).....1000
July 17—The Suffragette Sheriff (Com.).....1000
July 19—A Prisoner of the Harem (Dr.).....
July 19—Egyptian Sports (Sporting).....

LUBIN.

June 24—Over the Divide (Dr.).....1000
June 26—The New Physician (Dr.).....1000
June 27—From Fireman to Engineer (Dr.).....1000
June 28—Bridget's Explanation (Com.).....
June 28—The Tramp Elephant (Com.).....
June 29—What the Driver Saw (Com.).....1000
July 1—The Spoiled Child (Dr.).....1000
July 3—The Prize Essay (Dr.).....1000
July 4—A Child's Prayer (Dr.).....1000
July 5—Just Pretending (Com.).....
July 5—A Pair of Boots (Com.).....
July 6—The Back Window (Com.-Dr.).....1000
July 8—The Halfbreed's Treachery (Dr.).....1000
July 10—The Stolen Ring (Dr.).....1000
July 11—The Sheriff's Daughter (Dr.).....1000
July 12—Over the Hills to the Poor House (Com.).....
July 12—The Hypnotist (Com.).....
July 13—The Stranded Actors (Com.).....1000
July 15—Honor Thy Father (Dr.).....1000
July 17—The Senorita's Remorse (Dr.).....1000
July 18—Together (Dr.).....1000
July 19—Buster's Dream (Com.).....
July 19—The Uninvited Guest (Com.).....
July 20—A Western Courtship (Dr.).....1000

MELIES.

May 23—All Is Fair (Com.).....
May 30—The Rustler's Daughter (Dr.).....1000
June 6—Making Good (Dr.).....1000
June 13—Ghosts At Circle X Camp (Com.)....1000
June 20—Two Loves (Dr.).....1000
June 27—A Woman's Way (Dr.).....1000
July 4—The Cowboy Kid (Dr.).....1000
July 11—The Man Inside (Dr.).....1000
July 18—The Lesson (Dr.).....
July 18—A Cowboy's Proposal (Com.).....
July 25—A String of Beads (Dr.).....1000

ECLIPSE.

(G. Kleine.)

July 3—Scenes in Somerset, England (Sc.).... 200
July 3—The Wax Model (Dr.)..... 800
July 10—A Mysterious Case (Dr.).....1000
July 17—The Grandmother (Dr.).....1060

PATHE.

June 10—Pathe's Weekly, No. 24, (Topical)..1000
June 12—Any Old Clothes (Com.).....
June 13—A Redskin's Appeal (Dr.).....
June 15—Niagara Falls (Scenic).....
June 17—Pathe's Weekly No. 25—1912 (Top.)
June 19—The Gambler's Reformation (Dr.)..
June 20—The Fickle Soldier (Drama).....
June 22—An Indian Idyl (Drama).....
June 24—Pathe's Weekly, No. 26, 1912 (Top.)..1000
June 24—A Nation's Peril (Special—2 reels, Dr.)
June 26—True Love (Dr.).....
June 27—Deer Slayers Retribution (Dr.).....
June 29—The Squawman's Sweetheart (Dr.)...
July 1—Pathe's Weekly, No. 27—1912 (Top.) 1000
July 3—Where Jealousy Leads (Com.-Dr.).....
July 4—The Greed of Gold (Dr.).....
July 6—The Wooing of White Fawn (Dr.).....
July 8—Pathe's Weekly, No. 28, 1912 (Top.)
July 8—The Adopted Child (Special Release) (Dr.).....
July 10—On the Brink of the Chasm (Dr.)....
July 11—His Wife's Old Sweetheart (Dr.).....
July 13—The Unwilling Bride (Dr.).....
July 15—Pathe's Weekly, No. 24, 1912 (Top.)
July 17—A Question of Size (Com.).....
July 18—The Brave Little Indian (Dr.).....
July 20—The Halfbreed Foster Sister (Dr.)...

C. G. P. C.

June 7—The Enchanted Fifer (Juvenile).....
June 7—The Irbith (Siberian) Fair (Travel)...
June 11—Trap of Death (Dr.).....
June 11—Cavalry Test Marches in Belgium (Military) .....
June 14—Pepita's Escapades (Com.).....
June 14—Catching Crocodiles on the River Nile (Industrial) .....
June 18—Mimi's Love Story (Drama).....
June 21—The Mystified Pierrot (Com.).....
June 21—London (Scenic).....
June 25—The Death of Saul (Biblical).....
June 28—The Heat Wave (Comedy).....
June 28—The Frog (Scientific).....
July 2—Wild Birds at Home (Edu.).....
July 2—The House of Mystery (Com.).....
July 3—Winter Landscapes in Finland (Scenic)
July 5—The Would-be Hunter's Nightmare (Com.).....
July 5—Hairdressing of Other Days (Edu.)....
July 9—The Geisha's Love Story (Dr.).....
July 12—Max Takes Tonics (Com.).....
July 16—The Mosquito (Scientific).....
July 16—Whiffles Mourns His Twin (Com.)....
July 19—The End of Robespierre (Hist.-Dr.)..

SELIG.

June 10—The Price of Art (Drama).....1000
June 11—The Old Stage Coach (Drama).....1000
June 13—The Vision Beautiful (Drama).....1000
June 14—Goody Goody Jones (Comedy)..... 500
June 14—Katzenjammer Kids—No. 7—Unwilling Scholars (Comedy)..... 500
June 17—The Professor's Wooing (Drama)...1000
June 18—The Captain of the "Nancy Lee" (Com.-Dr.) 1000
June 20—In Exile (Drama).....1000
June 21—Sheep Shearing In New Mexico (Edu.) 500
June 21—The Katzenjammer Kids No. 8—The Arrival of Cousin Otto (Com.).... 500
June 24—The Adopted Son (Drama).....1000
June 25—Pansy (Com.-Dr.) 1000
June 27—His Father's Bugle (Drama).....
June 27—Elephant Butte Dam at Albuquerque (Educational) .....
June 28—Murray, the Masher (Comedy).....1000
July 1—The Lake of Dreams (Dr.).....1000
July 2—The Cat and the Canary (Com.-Dr.)...1000
July 4—The Last Dance (Dr.).....1000
July 5—Baby Betty (Dr.).....1000
July 8—Under Suspicion (Dr.).....1000
July 9—The Vow of Ysobel (Dr.).....
July 11—His Masterpiece (Dr.).....1000
July 12—A Mail Order Hypnotist (Com.).....
July 12—The Los Angeles Police Department (Top.).....
July 15—The Pennant Puzzle (Com.).....1000
July 16—The Girl and the Cowboy (Dr.).....1000
July 18—The Polo Substitute (Sporting).....1000
July 19—A Day Off (Com.).....1000

VITAGRAPH.

June 19—Chased By Bloodhounds (Com.)..... 800
June 19—Automobile Race at Santa Monica (Topical) 400
June 21—Her Brother (Drama).....1000
June 22—The Gamblers (Drama).....1000
June 24—The Extension Table (Dr.).....1000
June 25—The Carpathia (Topical).....
June 25—Never Again (Comedy).....
June 26—When Roses Wither (Dr.).....1000
June 28—Psuedo Sultan (Comedy).....1000
June 29—At the End of the Trail (Dr.).....1000
July 1—After Many Years (Dr.).....1000
July 2—The Church Across the Way (Dr.)....1000
July 3—Lincoln's Gettysburg Address (Hist.)..1000
July 5—On the Pupil of His Eye (Dr.).....1000
July 6—The Troublesome Step-daughters (Com-Dr.).....1000
July 8—Her Old Sweetheart (Com.-Dr.)..... 500
July 8—Fate's Awful Jest (Dr.)..... 500
July 9—The Curse of the Lake (Dr.).....1000
July 10—A Bunch of Violets (Dr.).....1000
July 12—The Foster Child (Dr.).....1000
July 13—Aunty's Romance (Dr.).....1000
July 15—The Money Kings (3 reels) (Dr.)....3000
July 15—Conscience (Dr.).....1000
July 16—A Persistent Lover (Com.)..... 400
July 16—A Lively Affair (Com.)..... 650
July 17—The Redemption of Red Rube (Dr.)..1000
July 19—Honor Thy Father (Dr.).....1000
July 20—Rock of Ages (Dr.).....1000

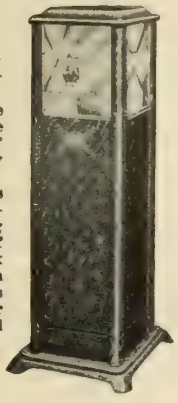
Boost Your Business with One, Three and Six Sheet Posters for Licensed Film

AMERICAN SONG SLIDE & POSTER CO., 5th Floor, 1st National Bank Bldg., Chicago

BEST SONG SLIDE SERVICE IN AMERICA

Speigel Motion Slides for Illinois, Iowa, Wisconsin, Missouri and Nebraska. One Sheet Posters of the Popular Licensed Players

Security Ticket Box



Built expressly for those who do not require the more expensive "chopper."

Tickets are deposited by patrons upon entering.

Of same construction as Photo-Play Ticket Chopper, minus the defacing mechanism. In place of same Security Ticket Box has trap, which when tripped by attendant drops all tickets into chamber below, this being secured by lock.

Price $35.00

Business Boosters for Exhibitors

Feature Posters, Banners, Heralds, for All Feature Films

Licensed and Independent, Something New Every Week

EIGHT SHEETS 75c THREE SHEETS 35c ONE SHEET POSTERS 15c

(Add 1c per sheet for postage if ordered sent by mail)

A Dash Through the Clouds, The Schoolteacher and Waif, The Colonel's Escape, Captured by Bedouins, The New Physician, What the Driver Saw, Temporary Truce, Windy Day, Martin Chuzzlewit, Gun Smugglers, Neighbors, Indian's Gratitude, Prisoner of War, The Orleans Coach, Tomboy Bessie, Missionaries in Darkest Africa, Romance of the Border, Life With a Circus, Drummer Girl of Vicksburg, Home Folks, Turkish-Italian War, A Modern Portia, The Lady of the Lake, Beast at Bay, Fighting Dervishes of Desert, Senorita's Butterfly, Outcast Among Outcasts, The Honeymooners, Rube's Easter at Atlantic City, Under Flag of Truce, Sunset Gun, Girl with Lantern, Convict Brother, Railroad Engineer, When Kings Were Law, Honor and the Sword, Greater Love, Lena and the Geese, Choir of Densmore, French Spy, Nation's Peril, Arabian Tragedy, Spirit Awakened, Wooden Bowl, Fighting Dan McCool, Coming of Columbus, Treasure Island, Last Rites of Maine, and many others.

And all feature subjects for past and future releases.

REMIT WITH ORDER. NO PERSONAL CHECKS OR C. O. D.

PHOTOPLAY ADVERTISING & SPECIALTY CO., Main Office: 121-123 Fourth Avenue, PITTSBURGH, PA.

BRANCH OFFICES: 1022 Superior Ave., Cleveland, O. 26 W. Naghten St., Columbus O.
Equity Bldg., Detroit, Mich.

NOW READY

The Instruction Booklet On

SCENARIO WRITING

Entitled

"Technique of the Photoplay"

By EPES W. SARGENT

Concise, Comprehensive, Thorough Instruction in All Details

$1.00 Per Copy, Postage Paid, $1.00

Order Direct From

MOVING PICTURE WORLD
25 East 23rd St. New York City

WHY PAY EXORBITANT PRICES FOR YOUR SCREEN?

When you can get exactly the same results with

MERCURINE

at six dollars per gallon (one gallon suffices to cover screen 12 x 16 feet)

STERN'S POSTER SUPPLY CO.

43 East 21st St., N. Y. City, Phone, Gramercy 6736

Attraction for Theatres and Summer Hotels

Illustrated Stereopticon Lectures by

Louise M. Marion

between the Films in Picture Theatres. Operator, Lantern Slides and Posters, etc., furnished if desired.

A beautiful poem with 20 pictures on the

Titanic Disaster

also PATRIOTIC poems and others.

LOUISE M. MARION
459 West 23rd Street - NEW YORK

No poems or slides rented.
TERMS REASONABLE

NOTICE
FOR THEATRES AND SUMMER HOTELS

THE Eye Comfort System
OF
Indirect Illumination

So necessary to the success of every Motion Picture Theatre that we engineer 60 Theaters a month.

This is a free service to Motion Picture Theatre Managers.

National X-Ray Reflector Co.,
227 W. Jackson Blvd., Chicago.
Distance, Screen to Rear of Auditorium.....
Ceiling Height .....
Width of House.....
Name .....

New Attractive Posters in One, Three and Six Sheet Sizes

MAY BE HAD FOR ALL FEATURE RELEASES OF

Edison - Biograph - Lubin - Pathe - Kalem

and One Sheets for every release. We are also now issuing Three and Six Sheets for Vitagraph Specials. Three Sheets for Every Release of Biograph and Lubin.

EXCHANGES Write for Samples of Our Moving Picture Players. Free upon request

A. B. C. COMPANY CLEVELAND OHIO

HERE AT LAST

A place to buy parts for M. P. machines for less
One of our SPECIALS
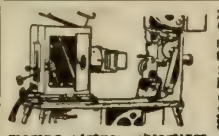
Intermittent SPROCKETS $1.50 FOR POWERS OR EDISON Machines
Write for Price List
PITTSBURG M. P. SUPPLY CO., Pittsburg, Pa.



20,000 roll tickets, $1.20; 50 % cored carbons, $1.15; stereopticon objectives, 50c to $3.00; stereopticons, $15; rheostats, $3 to $5; arc lamps, $1.75, $2 and $2.25; condensers, 60c; calcium jets, $2.80; acetylene jets, $2.50; gas generators, $3.50; moving picture objectives, $2.75; jackets, $2. List of moving picture repair parts at fair prices. Sprocket wheels, 85c; films, 1c a foot. Catalogue. All makes of moving picture machines repaired at reasonable prices. L. HETZ, 302 East 23rd St., New York City

Direction J. D. Williams Management Wm. H. Bell

INTERNATIONAL PICTURES

Controlled by

The Greater J. D. Williams Amusement Company, Ltd

Capital, £200,000.

The World's largest dealers in Motion Picture Films, machines and accessories. We are on the market for everything Biographic. No Moving Picture Film and equipment proposition too large for consideration. Our Specialty—Exclusive Australasian Rights on the best long feature subjects produced, and the latest successful supply novelties.

PRINCIPAL EXCHANGES.

610 George Street, Syndey, New South Wales. Melbourne, Brisbane, Perth and Wellington, New Zealand.

Send samples and communications to our purchasing offices as follows—J. A. Hayden, Dewar House, 11 Haymarket, London, England. Louis M. Noto, 2035 Potomac Avenue, Chicago, Ill.

IMPORTANT:—When writing us direct remember that letters with insufficient postage are delayed

FRENCH-AMERICAN FILM CO.

Room 401, Times Building, NEW YORK

PATHE'S WEEKLY

The Motion Picture Exhibitor's Mascot

ISSUED EVERY MONDAY

Book It Every Week

Mr. EXHIBITOR

If you want to make a change in your moving picture machine we will help you do so. Your old machine for a

Simplex, Powers or Edison

Get in communication with us and let us know the condition of your machine. We handle all supplies. Our only business place is

THE STERN MANUFACTURING COMPANY

109 N. 10th St., Philadelphia.

USE BRADY'S LICENSED POSTER

124 EAST 14th STREET, N.Y.

ZIGOMAR has escaped again!

AND WILL DASH THROUGH

Three Thrilling Reels of New Pictures

TO BE RELEASED SOON BY

THE F. & E. FILM CO., Cleveland, Ohio

Visco Picture Machine Oil

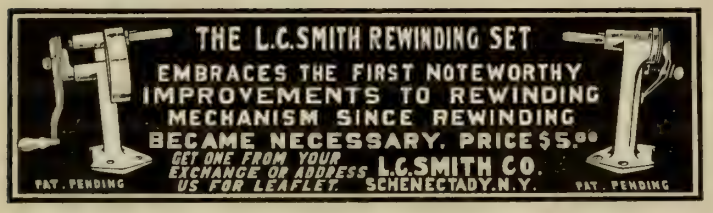
THE BEST OIL IN THE WORLD FOR THE PURPOSE

Your machines or electric fans will run all day and evening without heating.

DOES NOT SPLASH THE FILM

Goes farther than any other oil on the market. An 8-ounce bottle at your exchanges for 25 cents, or send $1.50 for full gallon. Hundreds of operators will use no other oil.

THE VISCO MOTOR OIL CO., Cleveland, Ohio



THE L.C.SMITH REWINDING SET
EMBRACES THE FIRST NOTEWORTHY IMPROVEMENTS TO REWINDING MECHANISM SINCE REWINDING BECAME NECESSARY. PRICE $5.00
GET ONE FROM YOUR EXCHANGE OR ADDRESS L.C.SMITH CO. US FOR LEAFLET. SCHENECTADY.N.Y.
PAT. PENDING
PAT. PENDING

ADAMS, Feature Lecturer

Specializing the Odyssey, Oliver Twist, Dante's Inferno, Paradise, and am prepared for any feature.

Address GEO. M. ADAMS, c/o Moving Picture World, 125 East 23rd Street, New York City.

U. S. FEATURE FILM SERVICE

Now Booking 500-Mile Auto Races, Held in Indianapolis, May 30th, 1912—Ohio, Michigan and West Virginia. "David's War with Absalom," "Cyrano de Bergerac," "Glass Coffin," and others.

1538 Columbus Road, Cleveland O.

W. W. KULP, Mgr.

Repairs

The most modern shop and best picture machine repair men in the country guarantee you promptest service and complete satisfaction. Second-hand machines bought and sold.

Full Line of Supplies

Selling agents for all makes of machines.

Chicago Moving Picture Supply Co. 107 N. Dearborn Street CHICAGO, ILL.

COMPENSARC

That's the device that saves Moving Picture men two-thirds on their electric light bills, and yet gives better light. Did you see our ad last week? Well, don't look it up. Just write for our

Booklet 15018

Fort Wayne Electric Works

1402 Broadway

FORT WAYNE INDIANA 733

THE BEST FILM SERVICE

We offer you the Cream of the Independent Product and guarantee well balanced programs daily. Our prices are the lowest, consistent with the best service, and our line of Features the most complete of any Exchange in the business. We handle the MUTUAL FILM CORPORATION program exclusively, buy the output of manufacturers represented by this Company, and guarantee our service to be the best money-getter. Write to us for terms.

H. & H. FILM SERVICE CO., R. 363, Monadnock Bldg., Chicago, Ill.

ROLL TICKETS

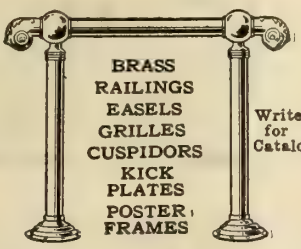
ANY PRINTING ACCURATE NUMBERING
BEST "BIG TICKET" ON THE MARKET

5,000 for $1.25
10,000 for 2.50
25,000 for 5.50
50,000 for $7.50
100,000 for 10.00
STOCK TICKETS, 6 CENTS

KEYSTONE TICKET CO., SHAMOKIN, PA.

100,000 lots Express Paid to any point in Pennsylvania

McKENNA



McKenna Bros. Brass Co.

PITTSBURGH

"RIP VAN WINKLE"

(2 reels) released Sat., July 6th. Taken in the heart of the Catskill Mountains. Great Cast...Special three and one sheet posters.

"GRANDPA" Released Wed., July 10th.

RELIANCE

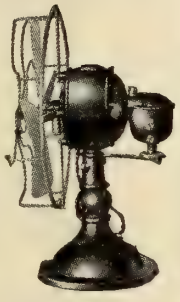
"THE TOY PHONE" and "NATURAL HISTORY"
Split reel. Released Sat., July 13th.
COMING RELEASES: "At Cripple Creek" (2 reels), Wed., July 17th. "Love Me, Love My Dog," Sat., July 20th. "The True Love," Wed., July 24th. "The Soldier's Baby" Sat. July 27th.

Sold only through the Film Supply Co. of America

CARLTON MOTION PICTURE LABORATORIES
540 W. 21st St., N. Y.

ORDER THEM TODAY

FANS



We have all kinds Regular, Oscillating, Exhaust. Best Makes. State size and kind wanted, also current. We can supply everything for the M. P. Theatre.

LET US KNOW YOUR WANTS

AMUSEMENT SUPPLY COMPANY
107-A N. Dearborn St., Chicago

MOVING PICTURE FILMS FOR SALE.

Over one million feet in stock. Dramas, Comedies, Scenic, Historical. Largest Dealers in new and second-hand films in the United States. Reels from $2.50 up.

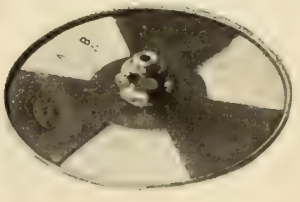
Catalogue free for the asking

ACME FILM CO., 132 West 37th St., New York.

How Can I Get Better Pictures

USE A

SUREHOLD SHUTTER SETTER



Just the thing to set your shutter instantly and accurately, giving you a sharp, clear picture. Anyone can use it. Made to fit any outside shutter. All those who have bought one say they would not part with it for any price. Send for circular, or, better still, send $5.00 and we will send you one prepaid by return mail. Money back if not satisfied. Price, $5.00.

Surehold Shutter Setter Co.,
P. O. Box 428. BELLINGHAM, WASH.

IT'S TIME

to send for our catalog. There's money in it, as we are giving 6 Announcement Slides for $1.00. Sure, Advertising Slides, too.

NIAGARA SLIDE COMPANY, Lockport, N. Y.

Make Your Lobby Display Attractive

There is nothing more fascinating to the public than a bright brass frame to display your photos or posters.

We make Lobby and Theatre Fixtures and Brass Rails of every description.

Write for Catalog.

THE NEWMAN MFG. CO.
717-719 Sycamore St., Cincinnati, O.

"Make your own films"

of local interest—it will make your theater prominent by showing a local feature film from time to time. Buy the "Junior Professional Outfit," with which you can make films better than some of the manufacturers are turning out. The complete outfit can be bought outright, with full instructions how to take, develop and print, my own patents, scores of highly satisfied customers.

N. Y. greatest Jobbing laboratory and mechanical workshop, special Films, Titles, cameras rented, special lenses, projecting machines and single arc dissolvers. All motion picture supplies, film stock, condensers, wire lugs, expert picture machine repairing. Write me at once on what you are interested—for catalogues.

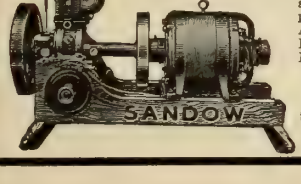
EBERHARD SCHNEIDER,
319 Second Avenue, near 14th St., New York.

Moving Picture Electric Light Plants

Produce Flickerless Current Cheaper than the Trust.

A portable or a stationary direct-connected plant which saves you money on your current bills. The very outfit for a tent or road show, for fetes, theatre projection and illumination. Plants with capacities of 75 to 650 16-candle power lamps at prices from $137 upward for complete outfit. Engine uses kerosene and supplies current at a cost of 2 cents per kilowatt. Address Electrical Dept. for catalog No. 201. 117

Neatest Outfit Built



DETROIT MOTOR CAR SUPPLY CO., Detroit, Mich.

THE ENTERPRISE (Portable) CALCIUM GAS OUTFIT

Price with carrying case, $35.00

Is the only Substitute for Electricity for projecting Motion Picture or Stereopticon Views and is the

ONLY SATISFACTORY PORTABLE OUTFIT

because it operates by WATER PRESSURE, IS CONSTANT, REGULAR AND RELIABLE and has no complicated spring valves to corrode, choke up and otherwise get out of order. Is patented.

"OXONE" in SQUARE CAKES is most satisfactory for the production of oxygen gas.

For Sale by Dealers Everywhere.

Enterprise Optical Mfg. Co. MANUFACTURERS 564-572 W. Randolph Street, CHICAGO, ILL.

HENNEGAN'S HERALDS
FOR ALL GOOD PICTURES
BEST
MONEY GETTER FOR EXHIBITORS
1000 BLANK $2.00 ADDITIONAL 1000 $1.50
DATING 50c PER 1000 SAMPLES FREE
HENNEGAN & CO. CINCINNATI, O.

American Moving Picture Machine Co.
MANUFACTURERS OF THE STANDARD
Automatic Moving Picture Machine
101-102 Beekman Street New York

WANTED
SCENARIOS
KINEMACOLOR COMPANY
OF AMERICA
MECCA BLDG. 48th & Broadway

AgfA
CELLULOID POSITIVE
CELLULOID NEGATIVE
AND
NON-FLAM POSITIVE
(Made Under License of the Patentee)
RAW FILM SUPPLY CO.
15 EAST 26th STREET - - NEW YORK
Tel. Mad. Sq. 7876 Cable Rawfilm New York

Bound Volume
No. 12. April to June 1912
Moving Picture World
$1.50 Each
Postage 60c Extra, or Express
Charges Collect. Order Now.
MOVING PICTURE WORLD
Box 226, Mad. Sq. P. O. N. Y. City

MOTION PICTURE SUPPLIES
PHOTOGRAPHIC SUPPLIES WHOLESALE and RETAIL THEATRE SEATING
EDISON
MOTIOGRAPH
POWERS
SIMPLEX
STANDARD MACHINES ARCO
BIO
ELECTRA
EXCELLO
SIEMEN
CARBONS
Ticket Hangers Carrying Cases Machine Parts Asbestos Booths
Reels Rewinders Disinfectants Exit Signs
Everything for the Motion Picture Theatre except the Film
H. A. MACKIE, Inc., 21 East Fourteenth St., Phone Stuyvesant 2478 New York City

A. B. C. POSTERS

AND ALL OTHER LICENSED. ONE-SHEET, 15c; 3-SHEET, 35c; 6-SHEET, 70c. ADD 1c. PER SHEET FOR POSTAGE.

MACHINES OF ALL MAKES, NEW AND SECOND HAND

SUPPLIES AT ROCK BOTTOM PRICE

SEND FOR SPECIAL PRICE LIST

Indian Summer, Man's Geneses, Bugler of Battery B, Half Breed's Treachery, Stolen Ring, Hypnotist, Stranded Actors, Dash Through the Clouds, School Teacher and Waif, Colonel's Escape, Indian Maid, Derby Day at Churchill Downs, Captured by Bedouins, New Physician, What the Doctor, Martin Chuzzlewit, One Round O'Brien, Man's Lust for Gold, Prize Essay, Spoilt Child, Chi's Picnic, Lena and the Geese, Choir of Densmore, Arabian Tragedy, Spirit Awakening, Passerby, Lue Reunion, Smugglers, Neighbors, Indian's Gratitude, Prisoner of War, Orion's Couch, Romance of the Bandit, Missionaries in Darkest Africa, Drummer Girl of Vicksburg, Modern Portia, Fighting Dervishes, Beast in Man's Butterfly, Home Folks, Outcasts Among Outcasts, The Honeymooners, Under Flag of Truce, Fighting Dan McCool, and many others.

STERN'S POSTER & SUPPLY CO., 43 East 21st Street, New York PHONE, GRAMERCY 6736

Be Safe with the Authorities

OUR APPROVED ASBESTOS BOOTHS

(Portable and Fireproof) are constructed to comply with the law in every particular. Distance makes no difference. We will gladly quote you a figure on one for your house.

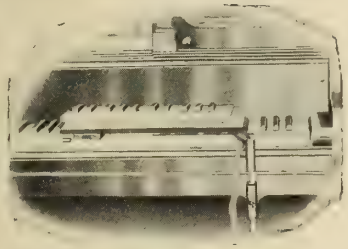
STERN'S POSTER & SUPPLY CO.
43 E. 21st Street
NEW YORK CITY
PHONE
Gramercy 6736

Use the Real

Projector Carbon "Biograph"

Brand

L. E. Frorup & Co.
232 Greenwich St., New York City



Patent Allowed

BARTON PIANO ATTACHMENT
FOR MUSICAL ELECTRIC BELLS

Install musical bells with a Barton Piano Attachment. Arrange a curtain so your audience can't see how the pianist is playing bells located in all parts of the theatre and piano at the same time. It will cause more talk, discussion, and arguments outside your theatre as to how it is done than the Presidential Campaign. It will pack your theatre. Send for a set on trial and try it. Get it first. Write to-day.

Complete 25-note outfits, $65.00 up.

DAN BARTON, 266 East Irving St., Oshkosh, Wisconsin

"The House of a Thousand Features"

Connect with a live wire; telephone, wire or write for dates and prices. Big advertising for all our features.

REDEMPTION	3	Reels
GLASS COFFIN	3	"
RED FALCON	3	"
FOUR DARE-DEVILS	3	"
AFTER DARKNESS, LIGHT	3	"
RIGHTS OF YOUTH	3	"
WHITE DOMINO	3	"
CYRANO DE BERGERAC	2	"
SIEGE OF CALAIS	2	"
VILLAGE SCANDAL	2	"
SOLD	2	"
GOLDEN BELT	2	"
HEROINE OF DERNA	2	"

IMPERIAL FEATURE FILM COMPANY
121 FOURTH AVENUE, PITTSBURGH, PA.

A Real Feature Film

CONVICT LIFE

IN THE

OHIO PENITENTIARY

THREE REELS

Every Foot Made Behind the Walls

We can furnish the greatest line of advertising ever prepared for a moving picture attraction.

Some Good Territory Left—SO GET BUSY AND WRITE FOR PARTICULARS AND PRICE ON YOUR STATE

AMERICA'S FEATURE FILM CO., 406-7-8 Schiller Building CHICAGO

OH! MR. EXHIBITOR!!

Think of the motherless, the fatherless, and the childless homes as the result of theater panics. Protect the lives of your patrons by installing our "ANTI PANIC" THEATER CHAIR. 26 Dead at Cannonsburg, 176 at Boyertown, 575 at Iroquis Theater, Chicago. Make these horrors impossible. Our chair is a friend to the Public.

It advertises your theater and makes your business grow.

It is a space-saver, life-saver, money-saver. Gives 25% more seating.

It will make your theater all aisles. It is the only sanitary chair. It is the world's greatest theater chair, perfected to the highest degree. Write to-day for Circular A.

THE HARDESTY MFG. CO., Canal Dover, Ohio, U.S.A.

OPERA CHAIRS

FOR EVERY PURPOSE

1,000 STYLES

ESTABLISHED 1865

WRITE FOR CAT. NO. 31

115-117 So. Wabash Ave., Chicago, Ill.

The A. H. Andrews Co.

Branches in all Leading Cities

New York Office, 1165 Broadway. Seattle Office, 508-10-12 First Ave., So.

San Francisco Office, 673 Mission St.

Operators!

I guarantee quick and satisfactory repair work on all machines. Only genuine parts supplied. Get my prices on ONE DROP OIL and BULL DOG CEMENT, the best articles of their kind on the market.

H. A. MACKIE, Inc.

21 East 14th Street New York

'Phone, 2478 Stuyvesant

Get Our Prices Before You Buy

The Wisconsin Seating Company

New London, Wisconsin, U. S. A.

OPERA CHAIRS

GEO. W. BENNETT

34-36 E. 3rd Street

CINCINNATI, OHIO

In answering advertisements kindly mention The Moving Picture World.

When Your Picture Machine Needs Repairing

Why don't you send it to us?

We have the best equipped machine shop in the country and can repair any make of machine. Write us and get acquainted.

We buy second hand machines.

GEO. M. HOKE SUPPLY CO., 176 N. State St., Bet. Lake & Randolph Chicago, Ill.

SCENARIO WRITERS!

If your scenarios do not sell find out why. Perhaps your manuscript can be rewritten and made saleable, and your mistakes may be corrected in future manuscripts. The author of "Technique of the Photoplay," etc., will give your manuscript personal criticism for a fee of only $2.

Exhibitors!

Submit your difficulties to the author of "The Photoplay Theater," and other articles on management, for advice and suggestion, the result of twenty years' experience in amusement enterprises. Simple questions $1 each.

Epes Winthrop Sargent

Box 70, Madison Square Station

New York City

WE CAN HURRY

YOUR ORDER OUT.

STAFFORD Chairs excell all others.

HEAVY FIVE PLY seats and backs.

The last-forever kind; that you are using long after you have forgotten the price.

STEEL CHAIRS TOO

We carry several kinds of good chairs in stock, all guaranteed.

ASK FOR CATALOG 305

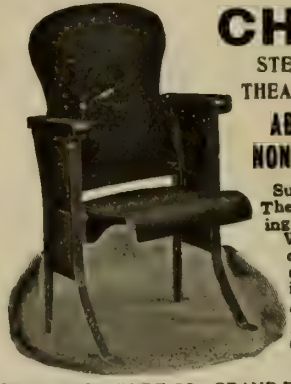
E. H. STAFFORD MFG. CO.

CHICAGO, ILL.

CHEAP

STEEL FRAME THEATRE CHAIRS

ABSOLUTELY NON-BREAKABLE



Suitable for small Theatres and Moving Picture Shows. We carry these chairs in stock and can ship immediately.

Second Hand Chairs

Also seating for Out-of-door use.

Address Dept. W

STEEL FURNITURE CO., GRAND RAPIDS, MICH.

New York: 150 5th Ave. Pittsburg: 318 Bissel Block

Philadelphia: 610 Flanders Bldg. Chicago: 358, Dearborn St

It pays to discriminate when you buy

THEATRE SEATING

WRITE TODAY for Cat. V2 (Mov. Picture Chairs) and Cat. V3 (Upholstered Chairs)

Send Floor Sketch for Free Seating Plan

Widest range of styles and prices. Large stocks.

American Seating Company

218 S. Wabash Ave., CHICAGO 15 E. 32nd St., NEW YORK

PERSONAL

If exhibitor who complained because light was poor will install a "Mirror Screen," he will get great results; and, besides, pictures will appear natural.

BUSINESS OPPORTUNITY

(Overheard in Calehuffs' Supply Office, Phila.)
"All exhibitors complain. How's your business?"
"Very fine. Never was better."
"What's the dope? Where have you got anything on your competitors?"
"Well, I must give credit to the 'Mirror Screen.' Ever since I put it in, I have been Cleaning Up."

QUESTIONS AND ANSWERS

(On my trip, last week, visiting a "Mirror Screen" user.)
"Say, Rembusch, what are you doing in town?"
"I want to see how your 'Mirror Screen' is working."
"Oh, I was afraid you were going to sell across the street."
"Well, why not?"
"Please let us have this territory for a few months longer exclusively, because when we figured up last week, our receipts since we installed the 'Mirror Screen,' six months ago, have doubled."
"How do the people like it?"
"Say, they are wild about it. A real sensation."

These are Absolute Facts and can be proven by

THE "MIRROR SCREEN" COMPANY
F. J. Rembusch, Pres. SHELBYVILLE, IND., U. S. A.

SPECIAL OFFER

In order to obtain as wide a distribution, in as short a time as possible, so that our screen may be in evidence in every section of the United States of $25.00 to the first exhibitor purchasing a

We Will Give A Special Discount During the Months of July and Aug.

Perfection Concave Screen

IN EACH OF 100 DIFFERENT TOWNS AND CITIES

This will enable exhibitors to take advantage of this offer during the summer months, the time that is usually devoted to remodeling, decorating and repairing their theatres, and we ask you

If It Is Not Good Business Policy

to throw away the old rag, take advantage of our offer and show your patrons

The Best Picture That Money Can Buy?

Inventors Specialty Mfg. Co.
620 Ashland Block :: CHICAGO, ILL.

I AM

The Leading Motion Picture

Supply Man

of the World

I Equip Theatres Completely

The "Hallberg Electric Economizers" for all circuits, made only by Hallberg, "The Economizer Man," save you the most money on your electric bills and produce the best light possible on your screen.

Murfreesboro, Tenn., June 30, 1912.

Mr. J. H. Hallberg:

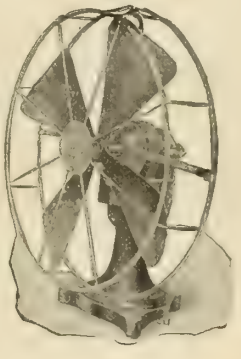
The Hallberg Economizer has been received and is working fine. I have reduced my light bill over 50% and it gives us a 100% better light. Thanking you and wishing you much success, I am,

Yours truly,
H. N. HUNT, Citizens' Theatre.

Any information to help you in your difficulties along the above lines cheerfully furnished.

I am jobber of ALL MAKES of Moving Picture Machines

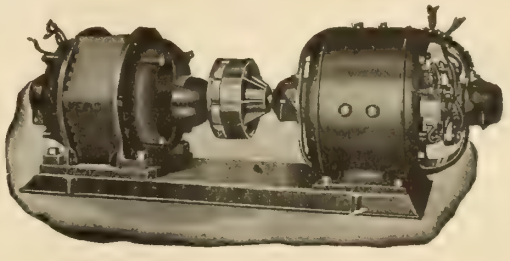
Through my Exchange Department I am prepared to make liberal allowance for your old machine in part payment on purchase price of new M. P. machine of any make.



FANS

Ventilating and Exhaust
$7.50 and up

Separate catalogues of different makes of machines, supplies and economizers furnished free upon request, BUT Hallberg's Big Complete Catalogue costs you 25c.



I carry the Largest Complete Stock of
Electra Pink Label Carbons

J. H. HALLBERG
36 E. 23rd St. New York City

America's Popular Photoplayers

Handsome Photographs 11x14 of the Leading Stars of the Film Firmament

MAURICE COSTELLO	MARY PICKFORD	ARTHUR JOHNSON
FLORENCE TURNER	G. M. ANDERSON	ALICE JOYCE
JOHN BUNNY	GENE GAUNTIER	MARSHALL P. WILDER
LILLIAN WALKER	CRANE WILBUR	MARY FULLER

Complete Set of 12 for

$2.00

Charges Prepaid

Send Money Order or Bank Draft with Order. NO Personal Checks or C.O.D.

THE LATEST NOVELTY IN MOTION PICTUREDOM. EVERY ONE AN ESTABLISHED FAVORITE. THE LARGEST PHOTOGRAPHS OF THESE STARS EVER SOLD.

ORDER NOW SUPPLY LIMITED

WRITE TO YOUR NEAREST DISTRIBUTOR

FOR SALE EXCLUSIVELY AT THE FOLLOWING OFFICES:

EXHIBITORS' ADV. & SP'C'Y CO., 30 UNION SQUARE, NEW YORK.

PHOTOPLAY ADV. & SP'C'Y CO., PITTSBURGH, PA., AND ALL BRANCH OFFICES.

EXHIBITORS' ADVERTIS'G CO., 68 WEST WASHINGTON ST., CHICAGO, ILL.

G.MÉLIÈS

A BUSINESS ENGAGEMENT

THE LESSON

Business, always business, causes Ralph, though dearly loving his wife, to so neglect her and the home that she is made utterly unhappy. Appealing to her brother, they devise a scheme, and Ralph, thinking his wife dead, is filled with bitter regrets. He is then told the truth, and so effective was the lesson that for the rest of his life he made his wife the happiest woman on earth.

ALSO ON THE SAME REEL—

A COWBOY'S PROPOSAL

(VERY COMIC)

Showing how Buffalo Jim succeeded in proposing.

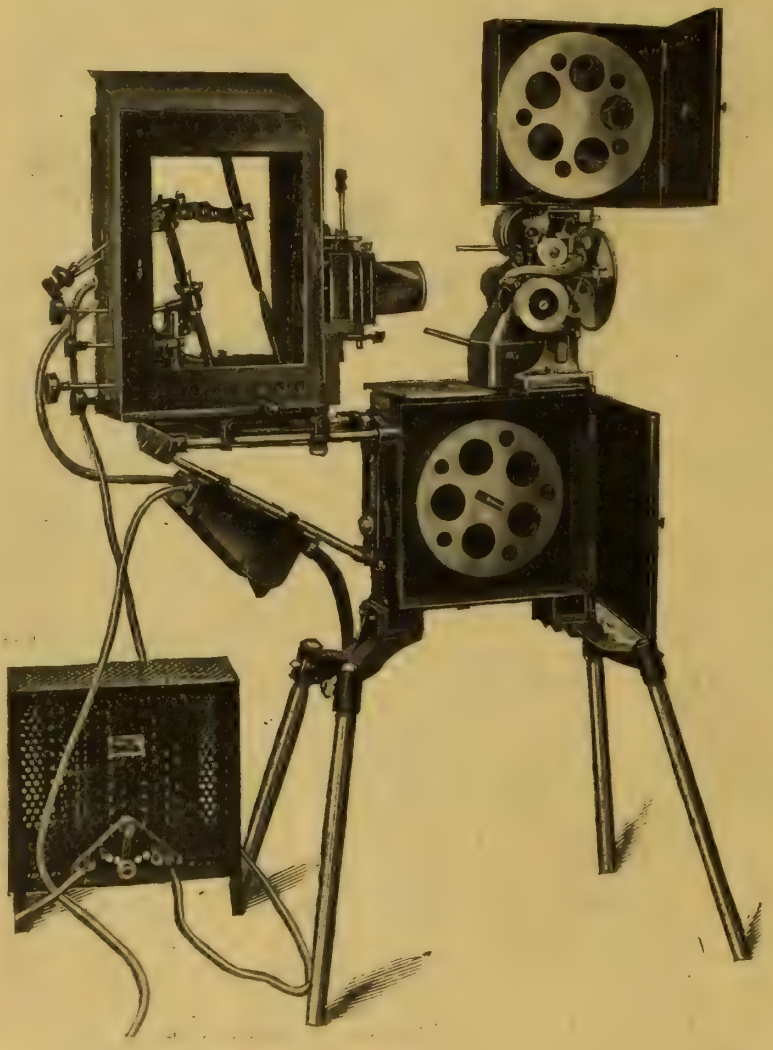
APPROX. 1000 FT.

G. MELIES, 204 EAST 38th St., NEW YORK CITY

7-18-12

PRAISE UNSOLICITED

Shakespeare said "Love sought is good, but given unsought is better." So with a testimonial; and when it is offered unsought by one who knows, it serves as a valuable guide to the prospective purchaser.



Mr. Maxwell H. Hite, of Harrisburg, Pa., is a practical electrician, expert cinematograph operator and cameraman. He has answered over three hundred letters requesting his opinion as to the best machine. Under date of June 15th, he sent us an open letter which we quote herewith:

"For the benefit of interested parties, I wish to state that I have personally operated and repaired eight different makes of machine, and I state without fear of successful contradiction that the POWER'S CAMERAGRAPH has proved to be the BEST of them all. I operated a POWER'S No. 5 for three years without one cent for repairs and this in a theatre that opened at 1 p. m. and closed at 11 p. m. daily. At present I am operating a POWER'S CAMERAGRAPH No. 6 in an Airdome and I advertise Moving Pictures Brightly Projected and FLICKERLESS and ALL PATRONS say that I am giving all that I advertise.

"Trusting that you will publish this letter for the benefit of those contemplating buying machines, I am

"Sincerely yours,

"(Signed) MAXWELL H. HITE,
"Practical Electrician and Operator,
"Harrisburg, Pa."

Our latest equipment No. 6A is now ready for delivery. On this machine we use the regular No. 6 mechanism, which has proved its excellence in over 5950 installations all over the world.

LET US SEND YOU CATALOGUE G WITH FULL DETAILS.

NICHOLAS POWER COMPANY

90 GOLD STREET, NEW YORK

FOR FOURTEEN YEARS THE LEADING MAKERS OF MOVING PICTURE MACHINES

CAREY PRESS, N. Y.

Vol. 13. No. 3 July 20. 1912 Price. 10c.

MOVING PICTURE WORLD

THE FILM INDEX

EXHIBITORS' GUIDE

Scene from "Hearts of Men" (Essanay).

125 East 23rd Street New York—Chicago 169 W. Washington St.

THE THANHOUSER THREE-A-WEEK

FRIDAY, JULY 26, "Merchant of Venice" in two reels

FRIDAY, JULY 26, "Merchant of Venice" in two reels

2 Kinds of One-Sheets, a Three-Sheet and an Eight-Sheet AT YOUR EXCHANGE

"The Merchant of Venice"

IN TWO REELS — FRIDAY, JULY 26

Shakespeare's Masterpiece as a Gorgeous Thanhouser Masterpiece

Illustrated Heralds from HENNEGAN & CO. CINCINNATI, OHIO

RELEASED SUNDAY, JULY 21

"Only a Miller's Daughter"

But She and Her Rube Beaux Proved More Than a Match for the Smart City Chaps.

RELEASED TUESDAY, JULY 23

"The Portrait of Lady Anne"

It Came to Life and Started to Look the Surroundings Over With Amazing and Amusing Results.

Thanhouser Co., New Rochelle, N. Y.

Send me FREE July Featureframe. I am / am not getting "The Thanhouser News."

Name.....

Address.....

Exchange.....

Coming! Charles Reade's Great Story "PUT YOURSELF IN HIS PLACE," "LUCILLE," By Owen Meredith In 2 Reels

THANHOUSER COMPANY

NEW ROCHELLE, NEW YORK

Film Supply Company, Agents for U. S. and Canada

FILM SUPPLY CO. OF AMERICA

FOUR-A-WEEK ESSANAY

THIS WEEK

Three Gripping Dramas! A Great Comedy!

PHOTOGRAPHY BETTER THAN EVER!

Released Tuesday, July 16th

"The Smuggler's Daughter"

A drama of the Far West portrayed as only Mr. G. M. Anderson and his company of artists can. A story of a girl's love for a young deputy and her saving him from deadly peril at the sacrifice of her father's liberty. Magnificent in perfect photography!

Released Thursday, July 18th

"Cupid's Quartette"

The sparkling comedy production of the week. The tale of two lovers who are forbidden to elope by stern father. They find him on the station platform asleep, with a brunette—a dark brunette from Africa, by his side. "Click" goes the camera, and father is quickly persuaded to give his blessing. Can't you see the comic possibilities?

Released Friday, July 19th

"Hearts of Men"

A most unusual and startling dramatic plot, dealing with a poor country boy on the downward path in a great city. Tricked into thieving, he is exonerated and sent back to his waiting mother to begin life anew. Contains one of the greatest court-room scenes ever portrayed in moving pictures. Beautiful and extraordinary!

Released Saturday, July 20th

"A Wife of the Hills"

Mr. G. M. Anderson in the week's second gripping Western drama. The treacherous wife allows her outlaw husband to be captured to gain her lover's freedom. Escaping, the outlaw returns to wreak vengeance on his betrayers, but his hand is stayed when a bullet from the pursuing posse stretches the lover dead on the cabin floor.

COMING SOON! COMING SOON!

A MASTERPIECE OF FILM PRODUCTION!

"The Fall of Montezuma"

(Three Reels)

3 Sheet Posters

of "A Wife of the Hills," in full 4 colors, beautifully lithographed, 35c each. Order from your exchange or direct from Morgan Lithograph Co., Cleveland, Ohio.

Going fast! Those great one-sheet posters of G. M. Anderson, lithographed in 4 sepia-tones! Order now for your classy lobby display! For your souvenir night! Postal photos of Mr. Anderson and Francis X. Bushman, in two poses! Just what your patrons want!

GET YOUR NAME ON OUR MAILING LIST!

ESSANAY FILM MANUFACTURING CO.

521 First National Bank Bldg., Chicago, Ill.

BRANCH OFFICES IN

LONDON PARIS BERLIN BARCELONA

The UNIVERSAL Program

IMP

"Hearts In Conflict"

Monday, July 15th.

A California Imp, staged amid the splendors of the Pacific Coast. A gentle artifice to fool her father, shifts the affection of the loved one to a foster-sister. The love of the sister started in jest ends in earnest; the eventual self-sacrifice forms a superb climax.

"Winning The Latonia Derby"

Two Reels—Thursday, July 18th.

This is one of those King Baggot Imps. It is gorgeously spectacular, replete with thrilling situations and an ingenious plot is interwoven in the entire picture. It's bigger, better and more brilliant than any other Imp ever produced and, that's saying a good deal.

"Building a Church in a Day"

Saturday, July 20th (Split).

Just imagine it! A church built from cellar to garret in a single day, and mind you, that's not all. Services were held in the church at its completion at the end of the day. It's marvelous both because of the feat accomplished and because the camera got every bit of the work done.

"The Foreign Invasion"

Saturday, July 20th (Split).

A poor, domesticated son of the Emerald Isle, who had imbibed freely, yet wisely, dreams of the invasion of all nations to the various city departments, much to his disgust and the amusement of the spectators. It's screamingly funny, especially the forcible awakening at the hands of his belligerent spouse.

MILANO

"The Triumph of Love"

Two Reels—Saturday, July 20th.

One of those Mythological Legends which have made the Milano pictures famous the world over. In two parts. It is a pictorial masterpiece of the conflict between Cupid, the God of Love, and Diana, the Goddess of Chastity. Scenically beautiful, wonderfully enacted.

NESTOR

"The Trifler"

Monday, July 15th.

The artful wiles of a coquettish miss rend the heart of a man who loves her dearly, and though his fondest hopes have been shattered he proves his sterling manhood when her life is in danger.

"Fur and Feathers"

Wednesday, July 17th.

One of those real Western comedies in which the antics of the cowboy practical joker creates a situation which is most ludicrous. There's a laugh in every scene and then some.

"Young Wild West Trapping a Tricky Rustler"

Friday, July 19th.

In which the hero of these stirring Western stories rescues his sweetheart from a perilous situation. A cattle rustling campaign and a lively race to catch the thieves forms a thrilling, exhilarating masterful picture.

REX

"The Hidden Light"

Thursday, July 18th.

Call it psychic power. Treat it as hypnotism, but whatever you may call it, the fact remains that Phil Smalley would never have been the literary success that he ultimately rose to be, if it hadn't been for guidance and assistance of his sweetheart. It's a picture founded on life in a newspaper office. Brilliant from start to finish.

"When Love Rules"

Sunday, July 21st.

The peace and sanctity of the life of a clergyman's wife appeals more forcibly to a simple artist's model than the life of mockery and murk which surrounded her. It's a triangle story, but of a very different type than the ordinary kind. It is a pretty subject treated and produced most handsomely.

Universal Film Mfg. Co., 1 UNION SQUARE NEW YORK CITY

for the Week of JULY 15th

VICTOR

"The Players"

Friday, July 19th.

A peep into stageland, with its romances, joys and sorrows. One of those pretty comedy-dramas which affords FLORENCE LAWRENCE, the artistic genius of the motion picture world, the opportunity of portraying the magnitude of emotions she is master of. You'll be mighty glad you're getting a Universal Program when you see it.

BISON

"The Sheriff's Mysterious Aide"

Tuesday, July 16th.

Although held in awe as an outlaw Dare Devil has a sense of honor and when he hears of the heartless action of a bandit he brings about his capture. Though a forfeit is on his own head he disguises and enlists as the Sheriff's aide and after jailing his man, leaves evidence of his identity and speeds away.

"Dare Devil Dick Wins a Wife"

Saturday, July 20th.

A Western Drama with a punch in every scene. Staged amid scenic splendor and based upon a theme replete with thrills and sensations.

CHAMPION

"Foraging on the Enemy"

Monday, July 15th.

Elaborately describing one of the many pathetic scenes enacted during the Civil War. It shows the contrast between a big hearted corporal in duty bound to obey orders, but who in the name of mercy and charity accepts the responsibility of disobeying his orders, to protect a poor widow and her children; and a narrow minded, unsympathetic, jealous private.

GEM

"Two Men"

Tuesday, July 16th.

A military picture in which two commissioned officers doff their uniforms and assume the rank of private citizens to engage in a duel for the hand of the daughter of a superior officer. The love of the maiden is stronger for one than the other and through a clever ruse the loved one remains unhurt. The climax is gripping in its pathos.

ECLAIR

"The Dreamers"

Tuesday, July 16th.

A day-dream picture, but just a little different from the usual kind. Privation and self-sacrifice play an important part in the ultimate success of a young story-writer.

"That Loving Man"

Thursday, July 18th.

An heir to a fortune, a past master in the art of osculation, through his continued gay life is disowned by his father. Reverses set in and he decides upon self-destruction, but by a freak of fortune he becomes inebriated and through the kind ministrations of his friends he is saved.

"Rizzio"

Sunday, July 21st.

A wonderfully conceived version of the career of the favorite of Mary Stuart, Queen of the Scots. It is a pictorial description of merit, of the life of a man hated by the Scotch noblemen, yet loved by the Queen.

POWERS

"The Ransom"

Wednesday, July 17th (Split).

A quaint little comedy in which two little tots emulate the example of their elders in the refusal of the little girl to be kissed and the determination of the little boy to secure a kiss by fair means or foul. It is pleasingly enacted and prettily staged.

"A Good Day's Work"

Wednesday, July 17th (Split).

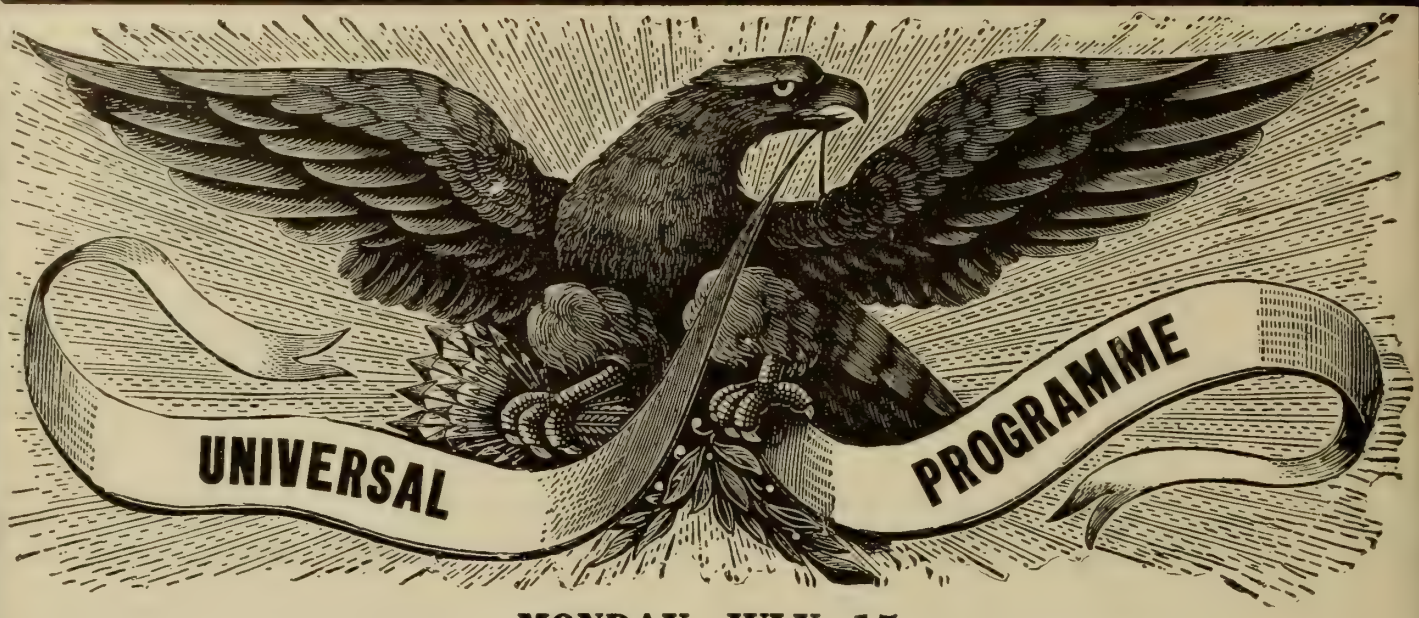
The sweet, loving disposition of a winsome little miss wins for her the love of several nondescript gentlemen of the road who at her solicitation till her grandpa's ground and through a valuable find the grandfather's favorite horse is saved from the sheriff's sale.

"Her Life's Story"

Friday, July 19th.

The noble self-sacrifice of an invalid, who at the risk of remaining a cripple for the remainder of her life, gives her life's savings to her sister's husband, her former sweetheart, to save him from the disgrace which his embezzlement is about to bring upon him.

Universal Film Mfg. Co., 1 UNION SQUARE NEW YORK CITY



MONDAY, JULY, 15

Imp "HEARTS IN CONFLICT"	Nestor "THE TRIFLER"	Champion "FORAGING ON THE ENEMY"

TUESDAY, JULY 16

Gem "TWO MEN"	Bison "THE SHERIFF'S MYSTERIOUS AIDE"	Eclair "THE DREAMERS"

WEDNESDAY, JULY 17

Powers "A GOOD DAY'S WORK" "THE RANSOM"	Nestor "FUR AND FEATHERS"	The Animated Weekly

THURSDAY, JULY 18

Rex "THE HIDDEN LIGHT"	Imp (Two-Reel) "WINNING THE LATONIA DERBY"	Eclair "THAT LOVING MAN"

FRIDAY, JULY 19

Victor "THE PLAYERS"	Powers "HER LIFE'S STORY"	Nestor "YOUNG WILD WEST" "TRAPPING A TRICKY RUSTLER"

SATURDAY, JULY 20

Bison "DARE-DEVIL DICK WINS A WIFE"	Imp "BUILDING A CHURCH IN A DAY" "THE FOREIGN INVASION"	Milano (Two-Reel) "THE TRIUMPH OF LOVE"

SUNDAY, JULY 21

Rex "WHEN LOVE RULES"	Eclair "RIZZIO"

THE EXHIBITOR'S PROGRAM

COMING FEATURES

It's Vivacious! It's Brilliant! It's Pleasing!

"NOT LIKE OTHER GIRLS"

A TWO-REEL VICTOR RELEASE (July 26th) WITH

FLORENCE LAWRENCE

IN THE STELLAR ROLE

One of those exceptionally amusing pictures in which Florence Lawrence is cast as a vivacious college girl, high spirited, coquettish and mischievous.

Beautifully Staged Handsomely Dressed Artistically Enacted

ANOTHER MILANO MASTERPIECE!

An Amazingly Wonderful Production

"THE BLIND MAN'S SACRIFICE"

Two Reels (Released July 27th) Two Reels

CAVELIER G. DE LIGUORO, of DANTE INFERNO fame, plays the leading part. His portrayal of the blind surgeon is superb. The marvelous intuition of this unfortunate being is most forcibly presented. The love theme that is carried throughout the picture, intermingled, as it is, with the most thrilling situations, makes it a Milano equal in rank with the numerous successes from this supreme creator of masterpieces.

Coming! Another King Baggot Imp Coming!

AGAIN THE IMP STRIKES THE 100% MARK

THIS TIME IT'S

"IN OLD TENNESSEE!"

ONE OF THOSE WONDERFUL TWO-REEL IMPS

A Big Story A Big Company A Big Hit

UNIVERSAL FILM MANUFACTURING CO.

1 UNION SQUARE NEW YORK CITY

A SAFE CONNECTION!!

When you tie up to the known and wanted program of the

FILM SUPPLY CO. OF AMERICA

You take no chances with untried brands.—The public knows our films. We have an exclusive agent in most territories—others being appointed—who will serve you honestly. YOUR NEAREST EXCHANGE will be gladly named if you write us promptly. :: Do it now.

MONDAY—AMERICAN, COMET, ALL STAR
TUESDAY—THANHOUSER, MAJESTIC, GAUMONT
WEDNESDAY—RELIANCE, SOLAX, AMERICAN, GAUMONT WEEKLY
THURSDAY—AMERICAN, ALL STAR, CAUMONT
FRIDAY—THANHOUSER, SOLAX, LUX
SATURDAY—GREAT NOTHERN, RELIANCE, COMET
SUNDAY—THANHOUSER, MAJESTIC

"The Exhibitor Be Pleased"

OUR SLOGAN

Address all communications

133-135 W. 44th St., New York

Solax

Solax

A Horse More Human Than Some Humans

"DON" A Remarkable Performing Animal! Valued at $10,000

This horse is featured in a rapid-fire and spectacular military masterpiece written especially for him by a well-known magazine writer.

DON is

"The EQUINE SPY"

IN THE TWO REEL PRODUCTION OF THAT NAME. Released through the FILM SUPPLY COMPANY OF AMERICA.

FRIDAY, AUGUST TWENTY-THIRD

DON has an earning capacity of $500 a week or $20,000 a "vaudeville" year—more than some bank presidents earn. It's almost as much as an insurance president gets! DON steals papers and ammunition, carries messages, lights bonfires and does everything but talk.

LOTS OF ADVERTISING MATTER

OTHER FEATURES

Wednesday, July 24th - BROKEN OATHS is a military drama replete with sensational incidents—daring riding and intense situations. Story revolves about an officer who acts "unbecoming an officer and a gentleman."

Friday, July 26th - - THE REQUITAL—A deep business drama of love and hate—pride and punishment.

Solax Company
CONGRESS AVENUE
FLUSHING, - N. Y.

Solax

Solax

REMEMBER 3 SMASHING WESTERN AMERICANS EVERY WEEK

Those Strong, Dramatic, Gripping, Western "Americans" with the Business Kick — The Kind That Mean Better Pleased Patrons and More of Them, Are Obtained Only by Demanding That You Get Them, Three-Each-Week. Insist Upon It — Then Watch Your Weekly Balance Rise!

"INDIAN JEALOUSY" and "SAN DIEGO"

(Released Monday, July 22.)

Rich in passion, superb pantomime and glorious backgrounds. A tale of an Indian's love for a white girl and its tragic end. A film that will delight with its grip on imagination.

ON THE SAME REEL—Some rarely excellent views of San Diego, the beautiful, its bay, magnificent avenues and business section.

"HOW HE MADE GOOD"

(Released Wednesday, July 24, 1912.)

1,000 feet of stirring, red-blooded Western drama —the kind you want—must have—full of fight, excitement and adventure.

"The CANYON DWELLERS"

(Released Thursday, July 25.)

A dashing Western, with a beautiful story, magnificently acted and backed by superb photography. You will want it.

"THE FALL OF BLACKHAWK"

That gigantic, TWO-REEL MASTERPIECE, which portrays such great American characters as ABRAHAM LINCOLN, JEFFERSON DAVIS, ZACHARY TAYLOR and GEN. WINFIELD SCOTT will be ready for shipment at once.

STATE RIGHTS ARE VANISHING RAPIDLY

just as you would imagine where so splendid a money-making subject was offered discriminating buyers. Some excellent states still open. If you overlook this you will regret it.

COMING

THE BATTLE-GROUND

(Released Wednesday, August 7, 1912.)

A two-reel subject that will echo around the world. A problem-play that for genuine pathos, tragedy and heart interest never has been surpassed. Watch announcements.

FILM SUPPLY CO. OF AMERICA

American Film Mfg. Co. FIFTH FLOOR, ASHLAND BLOCK : : CHICAGO

LUX FILMS

The Crown of Perfection

Released Friday, July 19, 1912

Stones That Rebound

DRAMA --- LENGTH 970 FEET

A Dramatic Production of Excellent Quality

R. PRIEUR, 10 EAST 15th STREET NEW YORK CITY

Telephone 3427 Stuyvesant

FILM SUPPLY CO. OF AMERICA

SOLD ONLY THROUGH FILM SUPPLY COMPANY OF AMERICA

GREAT NORTHERN

GREAT NORTHERN FILMS CO. COPENHAGEN

RELEASE FOR SATURDAY, JULY 13th

CIRCUMSTANTIAL EVIDENCE

A dramatic production with a strong plot—Length 694 feet.

On the same reel:

MOVING PICTURES

Comedy—length 305 feet.

RELEASE FOR SATURDAY, JULY 20th

ALMOST A TRAGEDY

A comedy-drama—Length 666 feet. On the same reel:

UNCLE REUBEN GOES TO TOWN

Comedy—Length 332 feet.

FILM SUPPLY CO. OF AMERICA

SOLD ONLY THROUGH FILM SUPPLY CO., OF AMERICA

GREAT NORTHERN FILM CO., 7 E. 14th St., N. Y.

(NORDISK FILM CO. OF COPENHAGEN.)

UNIVERSAL FEATURES

TOM BUTLER

2454 Feet

Fifty Scenes of Tense Dramatic Situations in which Mystery and Revenge rise to almost Inconceivable Heights of Tragic Power.

WARNING

We hereby warn all infringers, dupers and illegitimate film dealers in general that all subjects handled by UNIVERSAL FEATURES are copyrighted in the United States before said subjects are exhibited in Europe. Thus do we live up to the letter of the law. We will unrelentingly follow up and prosecute all infringers.

THE MYSTERY OF THE BRIDGE OF NOTRE DAME

2418 Feet

A Baffling Problem of Modern Life in the Heart of Paris. Every Foot a Feature. Tremendously Dramatic.

COMING

The Outcast Child — A Sensation in Sympathy Drama

Rip Van Winkle — Every One Knows the Story

WE wish to receive the attention of individuals or companies who either contemplate opening or are now operating feature exchanges. We import more first-class European features than any other firm in this country and are in a position to release one of the very highest class every ten (10) days or two (2) weeks.

Universal Features demand no bonuses; all we ask is quick businesslike dealings with men who will put our product before the public.

Wire or Write for Prices on Above Films

Notice to Auto Bandit Buyers

Several weeks ago a Chicago firm advertised the Auto Bandit subject for sale. Upon investigation we find they are trying to sell the Nihilist's Conspiracy, a Great Northern Feature released some time past. It is not the AUTO BANDIT subject.

Late Special Announcement

A feature coming as fast as the fastest ocean liner can fetch it.

An International Fight

The film is a knockout.

Marcel Moreau of France vs. Billy Papke of the U. S. A.

Held at Paris, France, June 29th, 1912.

and Papke wins for the U. S. A.

Sixteen rounds that bring Americans to their feet in riotous applause. That's the goods that brings dollars to your ticket window.

Every American will want to see it

Get on the wire and reserve your territory. Work fast and beat your competitor to it. It's a mint. It's the subject with the pull and the punch.

Six-Color Posters in Three, Two and One Sheets at Cost Prices. Illustrated Heralds, Slides, Silly, Etc.

Universal Features

J. D. TIPPETTS, Mgr.,
Suite 1 to 5, 225 W. 42nd St.,
New York City.

OLIVER TWIST

Has been a hero for more than a century. The little fellow was immortalized by the renowned Dickens. And the brutal FAGIN was even more conspicuous, domineering as he did the lives of weaker criminals. He is immortalized not only by Dickens but by our greatest actor, NAT C. GOODWIN, with the aid of motion pictures.

Only a Few States Are Left which we are ready to close at a reasonable figure.

State-rights men write or wire at our expense.

General Film Publicity & Sales Co.
145 West 45th Street,
New York City.

The Curtain Question in a Nut-Shell

A Black Curtain
reflects 5% of your light and darkens pictures projected upon it.

A White Curtain
reflects 30% of your light; appears brightest right up against it and fades away 10% for every 10 ft. distance you get away from it. Try it and see.

An Alluminized Curtain (Any and all kinds are the same) reflects 40% of your light. Every light ray is a direct reflection. You can't use a strong current or you will ruin the eyes of everybody. (Every metal, even gold, exposed to the atmosphere, will darken and oxidize.) Every day you use an alluminized curtain, those called Gold, Silver, Sun and imitation Mirror (our name) blacken. Every picture has a cold, metallic look.

Every one of these curtains lasts about as long as an apple blossom.

A "MIRROR SCREEN"
reflects 100% of your light. The more current used, the better. The snow-white front diffuses the light, softens it and prevents eye-strain. Don't forget that. The "Mirror Screen" lasts forever. Don't forget that. The "Mirror Screen" makes the pictures look natural just as standing in front of a mirror makes you look natural.

Write Us Today for Prices. Don't Forget That.

THE "MIRROR SCREEN" COMPANY
F. J. Rembusch, Pres. SHELBYVILLE, IND., U. S. A.

KLEINE

Cines and Urban-Eclipse
RELEASES FOR NEXT WEEK

CINES, TUESDAY, JULY 27, 1912

Too Many Sweethearts

A sparkling comedy-drama telling how the girls "put one over" on poor George.

ECLIPSE, WEDNESDAY, JULY 24, 1912

Billy's Nightmare
A Screaming Farce.

The French Army In Action
Military.

CINES, SATURDAY, JULY 22, 1912

A Daughter's Diplomacy

She manages the affairs of the family with rare tact and ability.

Advance Synopses Free. Write to

GEORGE KLEINE
166 North State St. Chicago

Licensed by Motion Picture Patents Co.

LUBIN FILMS

Released Wednesday, July 17th, 1912.
Length about 1,000 feet.

The Senorita's Remorse

Perdita for certain attention is attracted to Trovio, but the unscrupulous Alfonso comes between them. By a cowardly trick he succeeds in getting Trovio sentenced to imprisonment for five years and then leads the girl to dissipation. Trovio, having served his sentence, returns, only to see the girl he loves plunge a dagger into her broken heart.

Released Friday, July 19th, 1912.
Length about 600 feet.

BUSTER'S DREAM

A pretty little kid story in which Buster White and others play at Wild West. Buster, the cowboy, gets the worst of it and is sent weeping to bed. There he dreams that he rescues the fair Henrietta from the Indians and virtue is triumphant.

Released Friday, July 19th, 1912.
Length about 400 feet.

The Uninvited Guests

Two escaped convicts get into a Society Masquerade and, seeing two gentlemen in police uniforms, purpose to exchange for fun. The gentlemen agree, but the effect causes much complication.

Released Thursday, July 18th, 1912.
Length about 1,000 feet.

TOGETHER

There is an atmosphere of indifference in the family of Dr. Halliday and it terminates in a separation, the wife retaining the child and the husband removing to apartments. Little May takes the measles, she is tended by another doctor, but shortly after recovery she suddenly becomes blind. In the emergency the mother sends for her husband and with his skill he restores the child's eyesight. The joy of all reunites the family and love prevails.

Released Saturday, July 20th, 1912.
Length about 1,000 feet.

A WESTERN COURTSHIP

The widow, Mrs. Reynolds, her son Bill and daughter Louise live on a tidy ranch near Tuscon. Bill falls in love with Mary Wills, a trained nurse who is caring for the mother. This he thinks to be all right, but he objects to his sister having a sweetheart and one day coming upon a clandestine lovers' meeting, he shoots Tom Jones. For this he narrowly escapes a lynching but under the care of the two girls, Tom recovers and refusing to prosecute, gets Bill Reynolds' consent to the engagement.

Released Monday, July 22nd, 1912.
Length about 1,000 feet.

The Ranger's Reward

Ranger Romanie is instructed to trap Surrento, a desperate outlaw. One day he hears screams for help and finds his man assaulting Bonita, a pretty Mexican girl. A struggle ensues and Romaine captures his man and the fair Bonita.

EXTREMELY BEAUTIFUL ONE and THREE SHEET POSTERS of our PHOTO-PLAYS, printed in FIVE COLORS, can be obtained from the A. B. C. COMPANY, CLEVELAND, OHIO. These handsome bills will offer a GREAT ADVANTAGE to your Theatre.

LUBIN MANUFACTURING COMPANY,

Chicago: 154 West Lake St. B. Nichols, 86 Wardour St., London, W., England.

MODEL NEW STUDIOS
20th and Indiana Avenues
Philadelphia, Pa.
Berlin, 35 Friedrich Str.

VITAGRAPH

Monday, July 15th

"CONSCIENCE" or "The CHAMBER of HORRORS"

AN UNEXPECTED SURPRISE. In the Chamber of Horrors of a Musee, a man is passing the night on a wager. His deserted wife seeks refuge in the place. Her sudden appearance before him in the darkness frightens him to death.

Tuesday, July 16th

"A PERSISTENT LOVER" / "A LIVELY AFFAIR"

Two Comedies On One Reel

AN ELEPHANT IS A BIG HELP to Bunny in making love.
IT JIGGLES UP YOUR RISIBLES. Two lovers are kept on the jump until they jump out the window.

Wednesday, July 17th

"THE REDEMPTION OF RED RUBE"

TOUCHES THE RIGHT SPOT. "Rube" saves a little girl at the risk of his neck. She is so grateful and trusting, so loving and sweet, he goes all to pieces. With the help of a Western sheriff, her father, he begins life anew.

"THE BLACK SHEEP"

Friday, July 19th

THE RIGHT THING IN THE RIGHT PLACE. The old man isn't much to honor. His daughter does right. She honors him by helping him to honor himself.

"ROCK OF AGES"

Saturday, July 20th

BEAUTIFUL THOUGHT. Jealousy sets the tongue of scandal wagging against a good woman. She gives no heed to its calumnies but goes on doing good. She finds refuge in her work. She dies a martyr to her work of love and charity.

NEXT WEEK NEXT WEEK

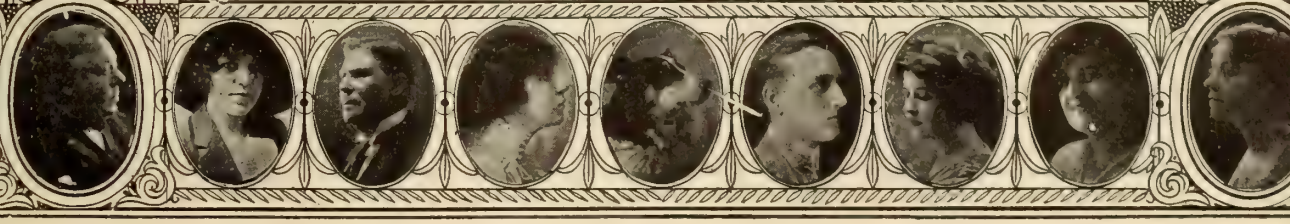
"WANTED—A SISTER."—Everybody wants her. MONDAY, JULY 22nd.
"THE ADVENTURE OF THE THUMB PRINT."—Makes an impression. TUESDAY, JULY 23rd.
"MARTHA'S REBELLION."—Full of snap. WEDNESDAY, JULY 24th.
"THE BARRIER THAT WAS BURNED."—Brilliant feature. FRIDAY, JULY 26th.
"THE LIGHT OF ST. BERNARD."—Bright illumination. SATURDAY, JULY 27th.

SPECIAL VITAGRAPH FEATURE FILM

"THE MONEY KINGS"

Or, "A MISSION OF DIPLOMACY"

Released through the GENERAL FILM COMPANY
Monday, July 15th, 1912

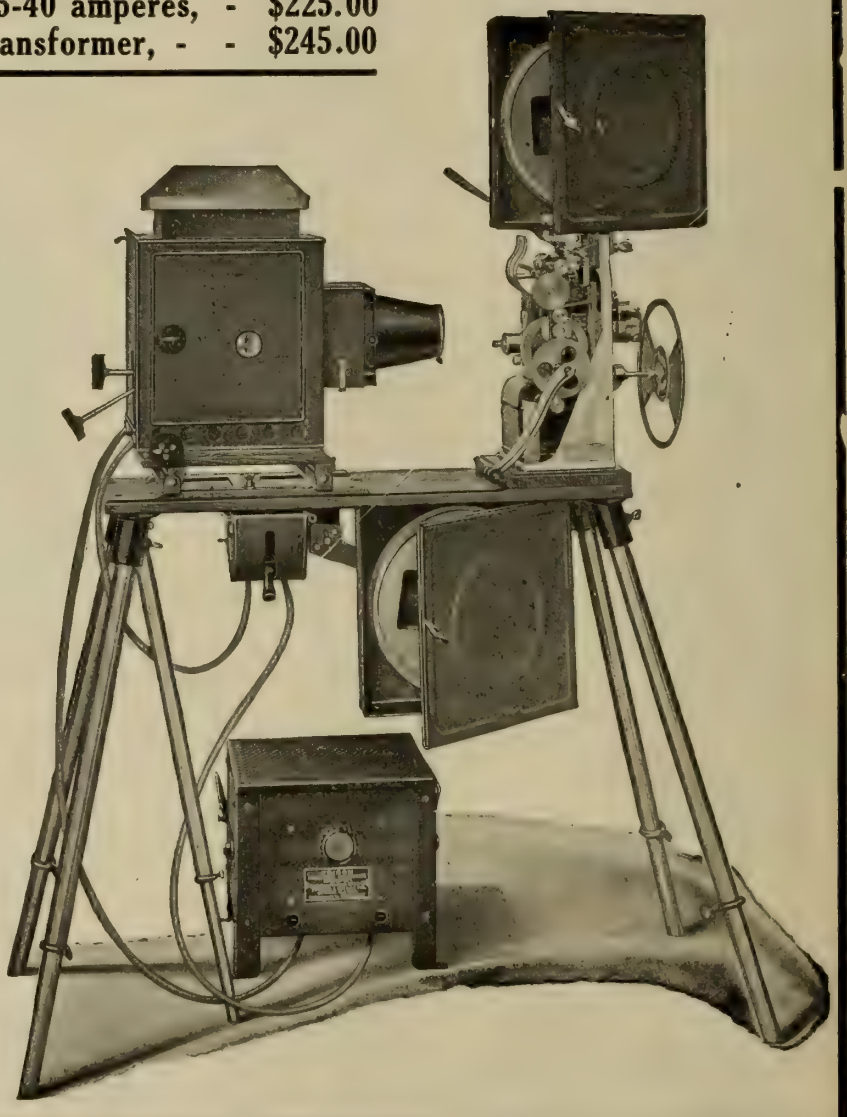


THE EDISON KINETOSCOPE

Underwriters' Type "B"

Is the only machine equipped with hardened steel bearings and shafts throughout and is the only one in which all the shafts run in hardened bearings. That is why it stands up under the steady daily grind that kills machines of inferior construction. There are other special features: Adjustable Outside Revolving Shutter, Chain Take-Up, Extra Large House with square condenser holder, Double Magazine Rollers, Heavy Brass Terminals on connecting cords, set of Heavy Extension Legs, four of which are 1 1-4 inches in diameter. A very substantial stand.

Price, with Rheostat, 110 volt, 25-40 amperes, - $225.00
Price, with 110 volt, 60 Cycle Transformer, - - $245.00



Current Edison Films

TELL YOUR EXCHANGE YOU WANT THEM

July 19—"The Necklace of Crushed Rose Leaves. 1,000 feet. Dramatic.
" 20—"The Little Artist of the Market," from The New York Sunday Times. 1,000 feet. Dramatic.
" 23—"The Sketch With the Thumb Print," by Harry Furniss. 1,000 feet. Dramatic.
" 24—"The Grouch." 985 feet. Comedy-Drama.
" 26—"The Escape from Bondage," by Bannister Merwin. Being the first story of "What Happened to Mary," produced in collaboration with "The Ladies' World." (This story appears in the August number.) 1,000 feet. Dramatic.
" 27—"The Relief of Lucknow." (The Indian Mutiny, 1857.) 1,000 feet. Historical-Drama.
" 30—"More Precious Than Gold." 1,000 feet. Dramatic.
" 31—"When She Was About Sixteen," by James Whitcomb Riley. 1,000 feet. Comedy.
Aug. 2—"The Lord and the Peasant," by Emmett Campbell Hall. 1,000 feet. Dramatic.
" 3—"Ninth International Red Cross Conference, Washington, D. C., May 7th to 17th, 1912." 700 feet. Descriptive.
"Mary Had a Little Lamb," illustrating the famous poem. 300 feet. Comedy.
" 6—"In His Father's Steps," by Bannister Merwin. 1,000 feet. Dramatic.
" 7—Marjorie's Diamond Ring." 1,000 feet. Comedy.
" 9—"The Librarian," by Bannister Merwin. 980 feet. Dramatic.
" 10—"The City of Washington, the Capital of the United States." 960 feet. Scenic.
" 13—"A Dangerous Lesson," by B. C. Franders. 1,000 feet. Dramatic.
" 14—"Holding The Fort," by Bannister Merwin. 1,000 feet. Comedy.
" 16—"The Harbinger of Peace," by Robert Brower. 1,000 feet. Dramatic.

Thomas A Edison
INCORPORATED

239 Lakeside Ave., Orange, N. J.

The Leading Motion Picture Producer of the World

SELIG SELIG SELIG SELIG

FOLLOW THE FLAG

July 22nd

"On The Trail of the Germs"

A semi-Educational Story Produced under the Auspices of The Chicago Tuberculosis Institute. Showing in interesting story form the cause and cure of the "great white plague."

Approx. 1000 Feet

July 23rd

"The Double Cross"

An exciting story of a race across the continent in quest of a mine map. Beautiful Colorado backgrounds make this story most enjoyable.

About 1000 Feet

COMING COMING

COMING FEATURES

"THE COUNT of MONTE CRISTO"

Selig's Wonderful Visualization of the World's Most Powerful Romantic Melodrama. In Three Reels.

"KINGS of the FOREST"

Selig's Greatest Wild Animal Picture —Impossible to Surpass. In Two Reels.

TRADE MARK

July 25th

"The Miller of Burgundy"

A Picturesque Drama of Modern Day Peasantry. By far one of the best single-reel features of the year. Costly settings, beautiful costumes, excellent action, and appealing story.

About 1000 Feet

Don't Miss This Feature.

July 26th

"A Wartime Romance"

A dramatic incident from our civil war history. Replete with the atmosphere of war. Delightful in its simple human interest story, and cleverly acted. On the same reel with

In Maoriland

An Educational Travel subject showing scenes in the "Yellowstone of New Zealand." Combined length, approx. 1000 ft.

FOLLOW THE FLAG

Selig Polyscope Co. TRADE S MARK Chicago U.S.A.

EUROPEAN OFFICES

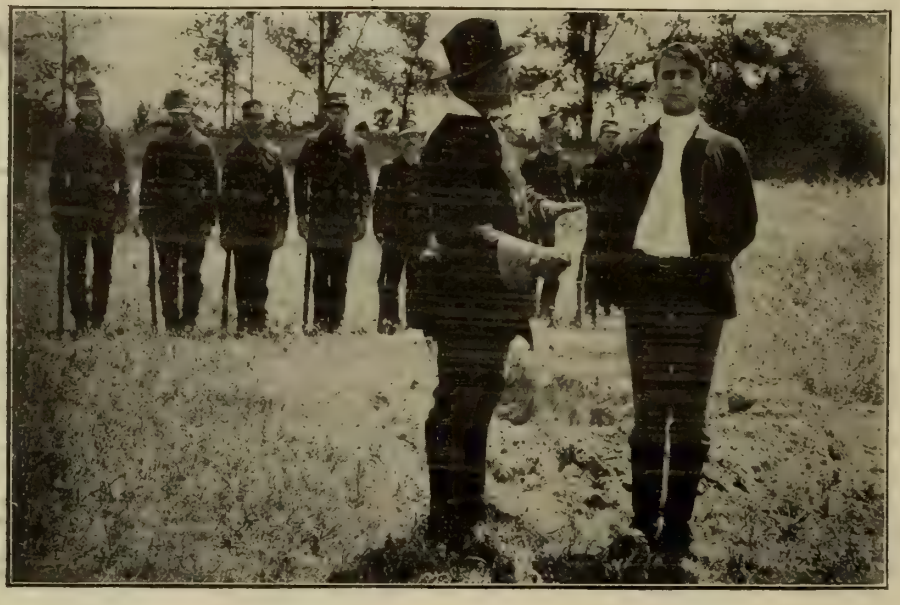
LONDON — BERLIN — ST PETERSBURG.

KALEM

The Family Tyrant

A Story That Will Reach the Heart

Released Monday, July 29th



The Soldier Brothers of Susanna

A Powerful Civil War Drama

Released Wednesday, July 31st

This is one of the best of the Kalem military productions. Entirely new in plot and thrilling in action, it will prove a headliner on any program.

Special piano music for this feature. Complete score 25 cents, postage prepaid.

Special one, three and six-sheet, four-color lithographs, reproduced from actual photographs of sensational episodes in this remarkable drama.

The Barefoot Boy

Adapted from Whittier's Poem

Released Friday, August 2nd

The Siege of Petersburg

In Two Reels

Released by the General Film Co., July 22nd

KALEM COMPANY

INCORPORATED

NEW YORK, 235-239 W. 23rd St.
86 Wardour St., LONDON, W.
BERLIN, 35 Friedrich Str.
PARIS, 13 Rue du Faubourg Montmartre

MOVING PICTURE WORLD

J. P. Chalmers, Founder.

Published by
CHALMERS PUBLISHING COMPANY,

Telephone call, 1343-1344 Gramercy
125 E. 23rd Street (Beach Building), NEW YORK

J. P. CHALMERS, SR., PRES.; E. J. CHALMERS, SEC. AND TREAS.; JOHN WYLIE, VICE-PRES. AND GEN. MANAGER.

The office of the company is the address of the officers.

Entered at the General Post Office in New York City as Second Class Matter.

SUBSCRIPTION RATES: $3.00 per year. Post free in the United States, Mexico, Hawaii, Porto Rico and the Philippine Islands. Canada, $3.50. Foreign Countries, $4.00, Post Paid.

WESTERN OFFICE: 169 W. Washington St. (Post Bldg.), Chicago, Ill. Phone, Main 3145. Automatic Phone 32732.

DISPLAY ADVERTISING RATES ON APPLICATION.

CLASSIFIED ADVERTISEMENTS (No Display), Three Cents per Word; Minimum Charge, 50c.

Address all correspondence "Moving Picture World, P. O. Box 226, Madison Square, New York," and not to individuals.

Vol. 13 JULY 20, 1912 No. 3

INDEX TO CONTENTS.

ADVERTISING FOR EXHIBITORS....238

CALENDAR OF INDEPENDENT RELEASES...263
CALENDAR OF LICENSED RELEASES....262
CHICAGO LETTER....229
COMMENTS FROM PICTURE OBSERVERS....242
COMMENTS ON THE FILMS (Licensed)....243
COMMENTS ON THE FILMS (Independent)....244
CORRESPONDENCE....259

DOINGS IN LOS ANGELES....235

"EQUINE SPY, THE" (Solax)....231

FACTS AND COMMENTS....220

INDEPENDENT FILM STORIES....276
INDEPENDENT RELEASE DATES....288
IN SWIFT WATERS (Victor)....225
IN THE MISSISSIPPI VALLEY....259
INQUIRIES....241

JOHN BUNNY IN MERRIE ENGLAND....252

LICENSED FILM STORIES....268
LICENSED RELEASE DATES....290
LOUISVILLE....259

MANUFACTURERS' ADVANCE NOTES....255
MERCHANT OF VENICE (Thanhouser)....226
MOTION PICTURE EXHIBITORS' LEAGUE....223
MOVING PICTURE EDUCATOR....228
MUSIC FOR THE PICTURE....251

NEW ENGLAND....259
NEW POWERS STAR....254
OBSERVATIONS BY MAN ABOUT TOWN....250
OPINION OF A WISE YOUNG JUDGE....221
PHILADELPHIA....260
PHOTOPLAYWRIGHT, THE....240
PICTURE AND THE CHURCH, THE....221
PICTURE PLAYERS AT A TURKISH WEDDING....253
PROJECTION DEPARTMENT....246

RIGHT MAN IN THE RIGHT PLACE, THE....237

SAN FRANCISCO....259
ST. LOUIS....260
SMUGGLER'S DAUGHTER, THE (Essanay)....233
SOME WARM WEATHER REFLECTIONS....236
SONG SLIDE RELEASES....264
STORIES OF THE FILMS (Licensed)....268
STORIES OF THE FILMS (Independent)....276

WHAT IS THE DRAMA COMING TO....222

INDEX TO ADVERTISERS.

CARBON IMPORTERS.
FRORUP, L. E....292
KIEWERT, CHAS. L....297
REISINGER, HUGO....297

ELECTRICAL AND MECHANICAL EQUIPMENT.
BENDER, GEO....295
CHICAGO M. P. SUPPLY CO....283
CHICAGO PROJECTING CO....295
DETROIT ENGINE WORKS....296
ENTERPRISE OPTICAL CO....296
FOOS GAS ENGINE CO....279
FORT WAYNE ELECTRICAL CO....293
HALLBERG, J. H....297
LAVEZZI....284
PICTURE THEATER EQUIPMENT CO....269-292
SCHNEIDER, E....296

FILM IMPORTERS AND DEALERS.
INTERNATIONAL FILM TRADERS....285
WESTERN FILM BROKERS....282

FIREPROOF APPARATUS.
JOHNS-MANVILLE, H. W. CO....293
TRAINER, C. W....293

FILM EXCHANGES.
ACME FILM CO....282
BRADENBURG, GEO....296
CALEHUFF, CHAS....294
CLAPHAM, A. J....282
GREENE, W. E....281
H. & H. FILM CO....298
HETZ, L....293
LAEMMLE FILM SERVICE....279
MEXICAN BORDER FILM CO....284
UNIVERSAL FILM EXCHANGE....293

FILM MANUFACTURERS.
CRYSTAL FILM CO....284

INDEPENDENT FILM MANUFACTURERS.
(Film Supply Co.)
AMERICAN....210
ECLAIR FILM CO....289
FILM SUPPLY CO. OF AMERICA....208
GAUMONT....269
GREAT NORTHERN....211
LUX....211
MAJESTIC....281
RELIANCE....296
SOLAX....209
THANHOUSER....202

INDEPENDENT FILM MANUFACTURERS.
(Universal.)
UNIVERSAL FILM CO....204-5-6-7

LICENSED FILM MANUFACTURERS.
EDISON....216
ESSANAY....203
KALEM....218
KLEINE....213
LUBIN....214
MELIES....299
PATHE FRERES....286-287
SELIG....217
VITAGRAPH....215
PATHE WEEKLY....293

MISCELLANEOUS.
A. B. C. CO....271
AMERICAN SONG SLIDE & POSTER CO....290
BARTON, DAN....292
BRADY, A....295
BOUND VOLUME....285
CLASSIFIED ADVERTISEMENTS....274
CORCORAN, A. J....293
DRAMATIC MIRROR....296
EXHIBITORS' ADVERTISING CO....295
EXHIBITORS' ADV. & SPECIALTY CO....263
GREGORY, CARL L....261
HARBACH & CO....295
HENNEGAN & CO....294
HOKE, GEO. M....298
HUNTLEY, BEN....296
I. L., CARE M. P. WORLD....284
KEYSTONE TICKET CO....283
McKENNA BROS. BRASS CO....284
MIDLAND TRANSPARENCY CO....282
MOZART....292
NATIONAL TICKET CO....288
NATIONAL X-RAY REFLECTOR CO....285
NEWMAN MFG. CO....279
OUTCALT & LEA....294
PARISIAN MFG. & FILM RENOVATING CO....264
PHOTOPLAY ADV. & SPECIALTY CO....291
PITTSBURGH M. P. SUPPLY CO....295
RAW FILM SUPPLY CO....291
SARGENT, E. W....295
TECHNIQUE OF THE PHOTOPLAY....294
THOMAS, A. G....283
VERMEULEN, J....289
VISCO MOTOR OIL CO....279
VONNEGUT HARDWARE CO....283
WILLIAMS, J. D....295
WHYTE, WHITMAN CO....283

LENS MANUFACTURERS.
BAUSCH & LOMB....283

LECTURERS.
ADAMS, G. M....283
MARION, L. M....294
MOVING PICTURE WORLD....260

MOVING PICTURE MACHINE MANUFACTURERS.
AMERICAN....291
EDISON....216
MOTIOGRAPH....292
POWER'S CAMERAGRAPH....300
SIMPLEX....262

MUSICAL INSTRUMENTS.
DEAGAN, J. C....298
SINN, C. E....298
SHULMAN PIPE ORGAN CO....294
WURLITZER, RUDOLPH....291

OPERA CHAIR MANUFACTURERS.
AMERICAN SEATING CO....296
ANDREWS, A. H....298
BENNETT, GEO....298
HARDESTY CHAIR CO....298
STEEL FURNITURE CO....298
WISCONSIN LUMBER CO....298

PROJECTION SCREENS.
AMERICAN THEATER CURTAIN CO....285
MIRROROIDE CO....291
MOTION PICTURE SCREEN CO....213

SONG AND ADVERTISING SLIDE MFRS.
BATTERSHALL & OLESON....264
ERKER BROS....296
LEVI CO., INC....264
NORTHERN SLIDE CO....279
SCOTT & VAN ALTENA CO....264
SIMPSON, A. L....284
UTILITY TRANSPARENCY CO....283

FEATURE FILMS (Released by).
AMERICA'S FEATURE FILM CO....289
ATLAS MFG. CO....277
BUFFALO BILL CO....261
COLUMBIA FEATURE FILM CO....289
CROWN FEATURE FILM CO....281
FEATURE & EDUCATIONAL FILM CO....295
FEATURE FILM CO. (New Orleans)....294
FEATURE FILM CO. (Toledo)....298
FEATURE PHOTOPLAY CO....273
FRENCH-AMERICAN FILM CO....298
GENERAL FILM PUB. & SALES CO....213
GREAT NORTHERN SPECIAL FEATURE CO....271
IMPERIAL FEATURE FILM CO....295
INTERNATIONAL FILM TRADERS....285
MASKO FILM CO....293
NEW YORK FILM CO....283
NORTHERN FEATURE FILM CO....282
OLYMPIC GAMES....258
QUAKER CITY FEATURE FILM CO....262
ROYAL FEATURE FILM CO....285
SPECIAL EVENT FILM CO....284
STAR FEATURE FILM CO....281
SUPERIOR FEATURE FILM CO....282
TOURNAMENT FILM CO....282
UNIVERSAL FEATURES....212
WARNER FEATURE FILM CO....266-267
WORLD'S MOVING PICTURE CLASSICS....281

THEATRICAL ARCHITECTS.
CRANE, C. H....284
DECORATORS' SUPPLY CO....295

Facts and Comments

TWO things have greatly helped the progress of the Sunday exhibition: the good judgment of exhibitors, who exercise the utmost care in the selection of their Sunday programs, and the growing change of public sentiment in its view of the nature and character of the day. Without these influences the recent legal decisions in favor of a decent cinematographic entertainment on Sundays would have been impossible. Public opinion arrayed itself in favor of a Sunday exhibition and against a fanatical and pharasaical observance of the day simply because the improvement in the pictures and the good sense of the exhibitors were obvious to all. If THE MOVING PICTURE WORLD, which has done not a little to bring about this most desirable state of affairs, will hereafter continue its championship of a proper Sunday program it is because of its firm belief and conviction that clean, wholesome, educational pictures are absolutely in harmony with the Christian idea of Sunday. The early Christians knew nothing of a Puritan Sabbath. Innocent and healthy sports and pleasures were not only allowed but distinctly encouraged on the Sunday after the hours of divine service. The right sort of picture will in no way detract from the dignity of the day.

*

In connection with the Sunday show question we have received a communication from a friend and reader of THE MOVING PICTURE WORLD, an exhibitor in a city in Illinois. It is full of striking points and tells a most interesting story. It appears that the exhibitor at his own expense and wholly without any outside aid had carried the question of the legality of the Sunday show to an appellate court, where he won a decisive victory. The judge writing the opinion declared that a city ordinance prohibiting Sunday shows of moving pictures amounted to class legislation and was therefore unconstitutional. Our correspondent writes: "It is very unjust to the exhibitor to have to stand all the expense of attorney fees, etc., besides the indignity of arrest. The results of a successful agitation benefit the exchanges and the manufacturers not less than the exhibitor; it is like pulling the chestnuts out of the fire. They readily advocate the crusade for a modern Sunday, yet do not offer to stand a share of the expense. I would suggest that a fund be raised mutually between the exchanges and exhibitors to conduct test cases. It would then be only a short time before the majority of small towns would be able to conduct Sunday shows, thereby increasing demand for high-class productions and materially uplifting the trade."

*

Nothing could be more sensible and fairer than these suggestions of our valued correspondent. In other countries, as recently reported in THE MOVING PICTURE WORLD, the manufacturers are the chief contributors to a common fund in defense of the motion picture against its enemies. The subject ought to be taken up by the organized exhibitors, who have every right to expect and no doubt will receive the co-operation of exchanges and manufacturers in any fight they may undertake for the common good. There could be no worthier object than a legalization of Sunday exhibitions because no other fact will more widely advertise the wonderful progress of the motion picture in the educational field.

* * *

WE cannot help paying a passing tribute to the vigorous methods of our esteemed Italian contemporary "Cinematografia Italiana ed Estera," which in a recent edition enclosed in most appropriate borders of black issues in English and Italian this fearsome ultimatum to its delinquent debtors: "In our next issue we will expose in four languages some firms who have ordered and not paid advertisements." We cannot doubt the ultimate success of this fetching announcement. No penalty we can imagine is severe enough for the wretch who will defy an exposure in four languages, except perhaps the addition of another language or two.

*

We read in a foreign motion picture journal of the extraordinary popularity of the cinematograph in the few settlements in Iceland. Life, says our contemporary, has been made more bearable in these solitudes since the coming of the motion picture. As the prevailing price of admission is something like thirty-five cents the story sounds very probable indeed. Daily or weekly changes are out of the question; indeed the service depends more or less on the irregular steamers that navigate along the inhospitable coast. The longest program ever shown in the country consisted of four reels.

* * *

NEVER before in the history of motion pictures has the supply of good comics been scanter than now. It is true that the one time well-nigh universal demand for comics in preference to all other kinds of pictures does no longer exist, but it is still an important staple, and complaints are frequently heard that the supply is wholly insufficient to meet the present demand. Various suggestions have been brought forward by exhibitors and exchange men. It has been pointed out that many of the manufacturers who formerly could be counted on for one or two comic pictures every week have given up the plan of regular "comedy" releases and bring out comic pictures whenever the spirit moves them. Some weeks there is an oversupply and then again a total absence of comedies. As almost all manufacturers are weeks or months ahead with their work it has been suggested that they go back to the old plan of making their releases on certain days comic pictures. This, however, is much easier said than done. The public to-day fairly loathe the old "china-smashing" and "chase" variety of "comic" pictures and demand something which is original. It need not necessarily be refined comedy, but it must be original and entertaining. Now, comics of this sort are rare. Men capable of writing scenarios for such comics are few and far between; directors capable of producing them are equally rare. In the meantime the exhibitor is forced to take the scenic, the industrial and often the religious as a substitute for the old-time supply of comics. The present dearth of comics is, however, but a natural reaction from the low, cheap "comedy" which characterized the early motion picture. People are so thoroughly sick and tired of this ancient variety that they will prefer any other picture. In the natural swing of the pendulum the good comedy will surely come into its own again, and we doubt not that it will bear the characteristics of the general improvement in pictures. On the whole we think it is better to wait for the desirable article than to give the exhibitors the forced, hot-house "humor," which excites no mirth outside of the narrow confines of the studio.

The Picture and the Church.

The young people's society connected with the South Park Salem Lutheran Church, of Rockford, Ill., recently debated the question: "Resolved, That the nickel theaters have done more injury to the church than the saloons." We submit this is at least a trifle ambiguous. Was it intended that the affirmant should sustain the proposition that the theaters have done more injury to the church than to the saloons, or that the theaters have done more injury to the church than have the saloons?

If the first of these were intended, we think all fair-minded men and women will emphatically say No. No one will seriously dispute the proposition that the picture theaters have reduced the receipts of the bar-rooms. As to the injury that pictures may have done the church, The World is of the opinion that the damage is seeming, not tangible. If to provide good entertainment for the whole family, and at a price which places that entertainment within the reach from one to six or seven times a week of all but the very poor; if to attract men, mature and young, from the back rooms of saloons and lure them into the presence of wholesome entertainment, where it is a rare night that at least one sound, appealing lesson in morality is not portrayed on the screen; if to attract young matrons to a hall where the mirror is nightly held up to nature, depicting the pitfalls, the gilded allurements, of which the unsophisticated are too often the victims, and the almost unfailing resulting domestic crash; if to take the girl in her teens inside into the company of others and off the street—if, we repeat, by doing these things moving pictures have injured the church we would ask: How? The church aims to improve its community. If there is a community that is not better for the presence of a picture theater the fault is not that of moving pictures; it is on the head of the exhibitor; and that is a matter for local surgery, not for general treatment.

* * *

As to the alternative of this hypothesis, that the nickel theaters have done more injury to the church than have the saloons, we do not think any words need be wasted. To be sure, a judge did make the statement a week or two ago, in imposing sentence on some exhibitors for Sunday violation, that moving pictures were worse than the saloons. It is possible, however, that his excoriation was intended more in a Pickwickian sense than as a serious denunciation. He might have desired his remarks to be interpreted to mean that the pictures were not so good as the saloons. In which event, there may be a few who will be inclined to agree with him.

Opinion of a Wise Young Judge.

A Sunday Opening Case Neatly Smothered by a Technicality, With a Few Remarks on the Blue Laws of New Jersey.

FEW young men on the sunny side of forty enjoy the high standing among men of affairs, in their community, than does Robert Carey, judge of the Common Pleas Court, of Hudson County, N. J. When one observes him mingling in council with acknowledged public leaders in New Jersey there is a feeling, on account of his youthful appearance, that he must have gotten in there by mistake. But everyone who knows him knows that there is no mistake; his intellect is acknowledged by the oldest graybeard among them, and they predict a brilliant future and national prominence for him.

The opinion in question was handed down in the case of Greenwood Robinson, of West Hoboken, N. J., who was under arrest for violation of the Vice and Immorality Act by reason of having given a Sunday exhibition. Judge Carey did not have to give any such opinion, but being of a new generation he correctly felt that somebody ought to voice a protest against laws passed by men who were in their graves before the Civil War was fought, and which are entirely out of date. To show his contempt of the old blue-law, Judge Carey dismissed the case on the technicality that the complaint did not charge a violation of the statute.

The following remarks in passing by the judge, in part, are worth reading:

"It is not for this court to determine the propriety of such exhibitions. The personal view of the court is a matter of absolutely no concern in the premises. The question as to what privileges should be enjoyed or exercised by the people on Sunday cannot be fixed or provided by judicial determination. The court can only read the law as it has been written by the Legislature, and can construe it and apply it in a given case.

"It must be readily appreciated by anyone with powers of observation and reasoning, that an attempt to enforce vigorously all the provisions of this section in a county like Hudson County, would revolutionize the customs and practices of a large proportion of the population, but at the same time the Court must recognize the fact that where a proper complaint is made and proper proofs are offered, the procedure laid down in the statute must be followed.

"To adopt any other course would be to permit the Court to nullify legislation. If the legislation applicable to any particular case is harsh or unreasonable, or out of time, the remedy is a modification of the statute by the Legislature.

"Under the statute, clearly a moving picture show is a diversion and is prohibited. It must be conceded that a very large portion of the community is in favor of permitting the operation of such exhibitions under proper conditions and restrictions, in order that the people may get the recreation and amusement which they desire on Sundays, and the argument in favor of a liberal interpretation of the Statute is a very appealing one.

"Thousands of people in a community like Hudson County get practically no time for recreation except on Sundays and on holidays. Such people should unquestionably be legally accorded full opportunity to get some of the pleasure in life that a healthy kind of recreation affords. We all know that the 600,000 people who constitute the population of the county cannot by law be compelled to devote the entire day of Sunday to religious observance or purely domestic pursuits. At any rate, we know that they do not pursue any such course.

"The study of this situation has convinced many minds that numerous features of the Vice and Immorality Act could be modified, enabling the people to enjoy such pursuits without subjecting themselves to prosecution for a violation of the law, and at the same time without in any way interfering with the religious feelings or sentiments of any persons. Conditions in our congested centers have changed very materially since the day of the enactment of most of these provisions of the Vice and Immorality Act, and the viewpoint of the people generally has changed very materially in its consideration of the questions involved.

"The automobile, golf, public parks and new forms of recreation, among them the moving picture show, have substantially affected the establishment of this new viewpoint. But notwithstanding all this, as suggested above, it is the function of the Court to interpret and apply the law, and when a complaint is made in proper form and the evidence produced to support and sustain the complaint, the obligation upon the Court is manifest.

"The Court expresses these views in the premises in order that there may be no misunderstanding as to the Court's conclusion as to the law affecting the case. The Court will therefore hold without hesitation, that the exhibition in question is a violation of the Vice and Immorality Act, strictly speaking. In this connection the Court can readily appreciate that a violation of the act may have a far more serious aspect in one section of the community than in another; but, of course, this has nothing to do with the legal principle involved as to whether or not the offense constitutes a violation of the statute. It might seriously affect any judgment that might be subsequently rendered in the event of a prosecution and conviction for maintaining a disorderly house.

"In the particular case now before the Court the more serious question presented is as to the second point of contention, namely, that the complaint does not charge a violation of the statute. I have studied this complaint rather carefully and have reached the conclusion that this contention is sustained. I will therefore set aside the conviction rendered in this case by reason of this fact."

What is the Drama Coming To?

By Louis Reeves Harrison

HAS it not occurred to you that there is in silent progress what the French call an "approaching" between stage presentations and those on the screen, between the "legit" and the "canned" drama?

One thing is certain, to begin with: most of us love the theater. It is also reasonably sure that millions of us lay aside our vain search for a good novel or dispense with the self-lauding conversation of friends and go to the picture shows for relief. I may also state with a certain degree of characteristic timidity that a very large percentage of those millions is not entirely satisfied with what is wobbled on the picture screen.

On the other hand, ever since old-fashioned melodrama took cold and died of lingering consumption, the legitimate drama has not advanced with the times. It has been very largely in the hands of New York confidence men who have presented an occasional meritorious play in the city and sent inferior replicas on the circuit, or imposed on the kindly public in small towns with shoddy goods concealed beneath glowing advance notices and lurid lithographs, while unscrupulous or ignorant managers have booked poor companies under the erroneous impression that those best able to patronize the art are neither intelligent nor progressive.

Just at present, right now, there is a nervous tremor throughout the theatrical world that is bringing down a lot of top-lofty personages to where the rest of us are struggling for existence. Complaints of bad business during the recent season indicate that it has been one of the most unprofitable ever known to managers and theater owners. And, amid the wails of impotent despair, one may easily distinguish bitter complaint against the inroads made by moving pictures. Are they not blamed for a condition they met rather than created?

The "movies" may have drawn away a certain portion of "legit" audiences, and, for that matter, so have automobiles, but there are millons of people in this country who are quite capable of enjoying the play and who rarely if ever attend the picture shows. They are either dissatisfied with the little they have seen, do not care to investigate or do not feel that this form of entertainment would meet with their approval. And there are still more millions who ride on trolley cars instead of in gasoline wagons. All of these are just as able to enjoy a fine drama as were our forebears in the good old times, if not more so.

Mr. Belasco is reported to have said that he will have nothing further to do with untried playwrights. That is all very well in a way. He has earned the right to enjoy a protracted period of self-contemplation, but if the spirit he shows is to pervade the entire producing coterie our dramatists of the future will have to learn how to swim without going near the water. If such a condition obtains there will be only one gate open to this field and that along the line of moving picture production. There the aspiring writer of plays may try out the visual effect of his story and acquire some knowledge of dramatic methods and construction, but the legitimate stage will be the loser in original material for a while.

If the legitimate stage must imitate the snail or the crab in its movement, this is the opportunity of moving picture producers to send the new art forward by leaps and bounds and reach a widespreading influence. The time does not seem to be very far away when big feature plays of five or more reels will be sent forth like the fleets of merchant vessels in days of old to trade at every port, large or small, as long as there are profits to be made. Such productions, however, must not be built of worm-eaten material but of that new and strong even if the designs be on accepted lines. They must be constructed to sail in the varying winds and currents of modern popular opinion.

How is this to be done? Let us go to the Immortals for answer, or merely for suggestion, without attempting to make the drama of this period conform to the rules that governed the ancient stage. Our blood may run riot with the warmth of new thought, but we must be tolerant and learn from all that has been preserved for us in history. No one can carefully study Shakespeare without realizing that he penetrated the most secret recesses of the human heart and that he felt for us and with us in what we still fail to do. No writer of to-day can hope to succeed in a large way who does not possess and exhibit a comprehensive sympathy with all humankind.

Show faith in your fellow-man. If you do not give him ideal representation as an example to follow picture him with the same falterings and faults that you have within yourself, who has nobility in the secret places of his soul to be called forth by fortuitous circumstances or kindly influence. Place such human beings before us as we may admire or quickly understand—characterization is the greatest of initial values. In depicting ideals, in soaring to lofty intellectual heights for a sweeping view of periods and purposes keep in touch with earth by a trailing line of common ordinary sympathy. In depicting a sympathetic character remember that an attractive scene includes clouds of beautiful and varied design as well as the fixed and tangible earth. Shakespeare first gripped his people, then took them with him on his poetic flights of radiant imagination.

You must put plenty of human nature into your comedies—Moliere wrote of the passing show—and take warning from the public's acceptance or rejection of your work. While it is rarely possible for the photoplaywright to adjust his scenarios to the companies who may give them interpretation he can do a great deal in suggesting pictorial effects if he has any originality and much more by describing the various types exactly as he finds them in real life. Hold up your torch so that the director as well as the audience may see your characters and you will soon learn to write comedies that can be played by any company.

I have offered encouraging suggestions and have consistently advocated the nourishing of young dramatists because I believe the time has come for the new art to assert itself in a larger way—the world is still young, though we may feel weighed down by past ages—and those who first come to the front with photodramas of striking originality and power will not only be largely rewarded but may even bring the old theatrical coterie to their senses. Then we may see the rapprochement spoken of, the wiping out of any Mason and Dixon's line between the dear old mother art and her active progeny.

I find that most men who give the matter any thought either openly or insensibly foresee the welding of music, the human voice, acting on the screen or actual scene or both, and a supporting scenic effect of great beauty in motion. Fine moving pictures accompanied by appropriate music constitute a partial response to a universal demand.

Motion Picture Exhibitors' League

OF AMERICA

CHANGE OF MEETING PLACE OF NEW JERSEY EXHIBITORS.

Every Exhibitor of New Jersey is Invited to Attend this Meeting, Which Will be an Important One.

The committee of arrangements begs to notify the exhibitors of New Jersey that the meeting announced for Wednesday, July 17, will be held on that day at noon at Naegelis Hotel, corner of Hudson and Third Streets, instead of at the Palace Hotel as previously announced in these columns. Naegelis Hotel is handy for exhibitors from all parts of the State being located within three minutes' walk of the D., L. & W. R. R. terminal, which is easily accessible via the Hudson Tube from the Erie and P. R. R. terminals. This meeting will be an important one, at which arrangements will be decided upon for the New Jersey delegation to the National Convention at Chicago during August. The popular idea at present is for the New Jersey exhibitors to join as a body with the New York exhibitors and make the trip together.

New Jersey exhibitors who have not yet joined their State organization should bear in mind that any exhibitor is welcome to attend the Chicago Convention whether as a delegate or not, but those who want to attend that convention, for the sake of appearances and business pride, as well as from a sense of duty, should first join their State association. To those exhibitors who have felt that they were slighted by not having more notice when the State was organized a few words will explain that the association was formed on short notice owing to the presence in New York City of Mr. M. A. Neff, the National President. Everything possible under the circumstances was done to get all the men together in three days' time and the result was more than gratifying, to say the least, thanks to the energetic efforts of Mr. G. A. Robinson, who was later rewarded for his good work by being chosen president.

MISSOURI STATE CONVENTION.

On July 30-31 the Missouri State Branch of the Motion Picture Exhibitors' League of America will hold their first convention at the Sexton Hotel, Kansas City, Mo.

The object of the meeting is to elect delegates to the National Convention, also to transact a large amount of important business now pending. The Kansas City Local No. 1 is preparing to give all visiting exhibitors a fine time while in the city.

Our State Organizer, A. P. Drennan, is having excellent success throughout the State securing new members. We expect by the time of the convention that the majority of the exhibitors in the State of Missouri will be members of the league.

We hope that every exhibitor in the State, whether members or not, will make a special effort to attend the convention and we have invited the exhibitors from the State of Kansas and Oklahoma to attend and help boost things along.

At the last meeting of the State Executive meeting a local charter was granted to Springfield, to be known as the Springfield Local No. 2.

G. H. WILEY, President.
M. P. E. L. of A., Missouri State Branch

COMING CONVENTIONS.

The Toledo Convention is attracting the attention of exhibitors all over the country. One of the most important subjects to be discussed at the convention will be the Sunday opening. Hon. Jas. M. Cox, gubernatorial candidate of Ohio, will be there to address the convention on the 16th. Headquarters will be established at the Wayne Hotel and big preparations are being made to entertain the delegates. A motion picture of the convention will be taken; a boat ride on the lake and a splendid entertainment has been planned especially for the ladies. The convention will be called to order at 10 o'clock a. m. on July 16th and will close the night of the 17th.

The Wisconsin State Convention will be held in Milwaukee. Headquarters will be at the Plankton Hotel. The meeting will be called to order at 10 a. m. Friday, July 19th, and will close Saturday night with a big banquet. Every exhibitor in the state of Wisconsin is invited to attend this convention, where they will be royally entertained. State officers will be elected and delegates chosen to attend the Chicago convention.

On Monday, July 22nd, and Tuesday, July 23rd, the Motion Picture Exhibitors of the State of Indiana will hold their convention at Indianapolis, Ind. Every effort is being made to secure the attendance of every member of the League in the state, and also to secure all the new members possible. Every exhibitor, whether he be a member of the State of Indiana or not, is not only invited but is urged to attend. Matters pertaining and affecting the business of every exhibitor of the State of Indiana will come before the convention. The new developments in the motion picture business demands that every exhibitor of Indiana attend this convention. Delegates will be elected to attend the Chicago Convention, and a general good time is expected in addition to the large amount of business that will come before the convention.

Group of Exhibitors at Pennsylvania State Convention, Pittsburgh, Pa.

CALL TO NEW YORK CITY EXHIBITORS.

A meeting of motion picture exhibitors of Greater New York will be held at the Union Square Hotel, on Thursday, the 18th of July, at 11 a. m. A number of prominent speakers representing the civic and official bodies of this city have promised to attend.

The Motion Picture Exhibitors' Association of Greater New York is a body of men composed of 296 experienced exhibitors, out of the total of 694. This is not a very flattering statement, but it's true.

Now is the time for all motion picture exhibitors to get together and join the organization. We are not here for social reasons only, but to combine and oppose those who harrass us constantly with laws and ordinances, detrimental to our business.

Do you know, Mr. Exhibitor, that there is a bill introduced in the Legislature in Albany to close picture theaters on Sunday, and do you know there is another bill before the Board of Aldermen for the same purpose? There is nothing to prevent this bill in passing or becoming a law except the opposition of those obtaining a livelihood from motion picture theaters through their organization. There are some law makers who are doing everything in conjunction with a number of clergymen to railroad these bills through, and endeavor to have you closed on Sunday, and YOU realize what that means.

This is your battle, to fight the defamers of our business. Will you do your part like a man and help us or will you foolishly close your eyes to the fact and wake up when too late? We have won many battles you know nothing about, and had it not been for this organization, adverse legislation would have been passed, but we need your help to win this fight, and show those who look down upon us that we are an important factor and a powerful force in this community, and that we are united in our work, and that we are able to use the screen in the 694 motion picture theaters in this city in such a way that we can get such perfection from the law as we are justly entitled to.

In conclusion I would state that you need not be a member to attend our meeting. I simply want you to know the progressive steps we are making, and we can assure ourselves of your co-operation. Hoping to see you at this meeting, I remain, respectfully yours,

SAM H. TRIGGER, President.

KENTUCKY LEAGUE MEETING.

There was an enthusiastic meeting of the Moving Picture Exhibitors' League of Kentucky at Lexington on July 2nd. There was a good attendance of members and President Neff, of the National League, was present. Several new members were received and delegates to the Chicago convention were elected.

Arrangements to organize the state were made by which an organizer will be put on the road with instructions to call upon every theater manager in the state. It is expected that the membership will be materially increased by this plan.

After the meeting the members present were entertained at dinner by Mr. L. H. Ramsey and a very enjoyable time was had.

The next meeting of the Kentucky League will be held at the Seelbach Hotel, Louisville, on October 15th, 1912.

SELIG PLANNING BIG ENTERTAINMENT FOR EXHIBITORS.

When the National Convention of Exhibitors meets in Chicago in August they will be entertained by the Selig Polyscope Company in true Selig style. Plans are now being formulated to devote the major part of one whole day to a trip through the mammoth Selig plant and studios at Irving Park Boulevard, Byron, Western and Claremont Streets, Chicago.

The Selig people plan to take the exhibitors out to the plant in special chartered cars. Upon arriving at the plant they will straightway be initiated into the mysteries of motion picture production. They will in all probability take part in some special film written for the occasion.

THAT INSURANCE PLAN.

President Neff and Secretary Christenson spent a few days in St. Louis last week going over the insurance plan which is being formulated for the benefit of the picture theater managers. It is expected that this plan will save about half the present insurance cost to exhibitors. Only members of the League will receive the benefit of this insurance plan.

MR. LEE BETHEL.

Above is shown likeness of Mr. Lee Bethel who is touring the state in the interests of the Moving Picture Exhibitors' Association of California and is a duly authorized organizer for the association. At the present time he is visiting the exhibitors in the southern part of the state and has met with remarkable success thus far. The California association, which is known as "State Organization No. 11," will soon number among its members practically every exhibitor within the state boundary and it will then be in a position to give its members protection in many ways that could be mentioned. The corresponding secretary, Mr. W. A. Cory, will be pleased to hear from all exhibitors relative to this matter at his address, 445 Devisadero Street, San Francisco, Cal.

The California association will be ably represented at the Chicago Convention by Mr. Ben. Michles. It is expected that before this is read by the members of the Chicago Convention they will be in possession of news regarding the coming California State Convention which is to be held September 10th, 11th and 12th in the Kohler & Chase Assembly Hall in this city, for Mr. Michles is enthusiastic regarding this state meeting and his enthusiasm is contagious. Mr. Michles expects to visit other cities after the Chicago Convention adjourns, and while he is away his theatrical interests in this city are being looked after by Mrs. Michles.

STARLIGHT SEES STARS.

Starlight, one of the Indians employed by the American Film Mfg. Company, had a busy day last Tuesday. Starlight began the day by falling in front of an automobile, from which he received a few stray scratches. On the way home from the picture field Starlight saw smoke issuing from a second story window. He leaped onto a fire-escape, crawled into a window and issued into the street again, bearing the body of a badly frightened young woman. Beyond some cuts and bruises, Starlight was not hurt. W. D. Emerson, producer, greatly lamented the fact that the camera man was some ten minutes ahead of the fire and thus lost a "real touch" in the way of spectacular picture making.

"In Swift Waters"

The New Victor Company's First Release, Introducing Miss Florence Lawrence as the Star.

THE ideal moving picture is one that tells its own story without the use of sub-titles. In "In Swift Waters," producer Harry Solter, of the Victor Company, has come very near to producing an entirely perfect moving picture. There is only one sub-title in the thousand feet of its length, and even that could be dispensed with, for it does not seem to be really necessary.

"In Swift Waters" tells its own story right from the beginning without a wasted foot of picture. The story is the principal thing in this fine summer sketch, but nothing else is slighted for the story. It is an exquisite summer picture, all the scenes having been taken out of doors in a part of the country seductive in its rural charm. The scenes of country quietude will refresh the tired business man of the city and bring from his lips a sigh of regret, as the picture may recall to his mind similar scenes from his boyhood days.

Nature is the great scenic artist. With all due respect to human masters of that craft, they are as pottering children in comparison with the magic brush of the Omnipotent. There are no studio scenes in "In Swift Waters." Outdoor life in all the glory of summer is the keynote of the picture. The photography is soft and full of quality. The scenes selected by Mr. Solter show fine discretion and an artistic sense. Add to all the other contributory elements these beauties of nature and the sweet and fresh personality of Florence Lawrence and you have a moving picture well worthy of the name.

The story itself reverts back to nature in its fundamental principles, beginning with two men and a girl. Mary, a summer girl, is courted by two young Lotharios, and at the outset of the picture the chances appear to be even for both of them, provided there is no "dark horse" candidate in the stall. There is a slight suggestion that Mary is a wee bit partial to Percy, because he is a much better dresser than Frank, his rival. These two young fellows besiege the girl at every opportunity and each endeavors to persuade her to give him an answer. They are both very vigilant and constantly meet in Mary's presence.

At the opening of the story we observe Frank and Percy each trying to win Miss Mary away from the other. On this particular occasion, however, she eludes them both by jumping into a canoe and paddling swiftly away with laughter upon her lips. In canoeing across the lake, Mary, by a misstroke, is upset and in another moment is struggling for life in the deep waters of the lake. Mary is a good swimmer, but soon she is caught in the current that leads to the rapids, and, despite her brave struggles, she is carried toward the seething whirlpool of the rushing waters. Meantime, at different points on the shore of the lake, Frank and Percy observe with horror what has taken place. Percy cannot swim and therefore is of no use to Mary in her hour of need. Frank, on the other hand, without hesitation throws off his coat, plunges into the lake and swims swiftly toward the girl with powerful overhand strokes. It is good to look at him as he plows his way through the water, advancing his full length at every stroke. The picture from this point begins to be one of most absorbing interest. It is one of those that causes the onlooker to hold his breath, waiting to see what is coming next.

Down the rapids we see the helpless form of Mary carried upon the crest of the turbulent swift waters. Following soon after comes the sturdy Frank, having complete control of himself, despite the buffeting current. He is gaining upon her at every stroke. He is nearly spent. The exhaustion of his heroic work is beginning to tell, and it seems that Mary will surely be lost. But by a superhuman effort the brave Frank makes a last final lunge and overtakes the girl. Weak from his efforts, he barely is able to lift her helpless form. In a last determined effort against ebbing strength, he lifts her to a rock, and, seeing her safely deposited there, falls exhausted by her side.

Meanwhile, on the shore, Percy has watched spellbound the accident and the heroism of Frank. He picks his way round the shore in all haste and runs down by the rapids. There he comes upon the exhausted girl and her rescuer still lying unconscious. In a moment of frenzy, he seizes the form of Mary and carries it to a part of the adjacent glade. His action has been without definite purpose until he sees clutched in her hand the necktie of Frank, which she had seized in her drowning grasp. The sight puts an impulse in the coward's mind. This is his chance, unscrupulous though it be, to play the hero and win the hand of Mary. Acting upon the impulse, he hastens back to the water and immerses himself until his clothes are thoroughly soaked. Hastening back to Mary he places his own necktie in her clutch and sets about reviving her.

In the eyes of Mary when she awakes, Percy is indeed a hero. Her heart goes out to him with unstinted gratitude. If there had been any doubts before as to which of the two young men she preferred, they are now settled beyond all question. Percy gets Mary home as hastily as he can and there, to the surprised and grateful parents, he relates a spurious tale of heroism, casting himself as the hero.

While these latter events are transpiring, Frank comes to his senses and great is his grief when he sees that Mary is gone. He believes that she has fallen back into the water. In his mud-bedraggled garments, he stumbles wearily to Mary's home and arrives there as Percy is being congratulated for his heroism. At first Frank's breath is fairly taken away by the audacity of his cowardly rival, and not until Percy has started to walk away, does Frank come to his senses and realize what a cowardly trick this is. He overtakes Percy and in a rage strikes the young impostor. But rage avails nothing, as Frank soon learns. Henceforth he determines to bide his time and get even with the usurper of his love.

Scene from "In Swift Waters," by the Victor Co.

An opportunity to vindicate himself soon arrives for Frank. Mary and Percy are fond lovers now, and stroll often by the shore of the treacherous lake, at which times they recall the perilous accident and the thrilling rescue. Frank follows them one day, knowing that they are going out canoeing. The lovers land on an island to pick flowers. While they are doing this, Frank hides his own canoe and sets the other one adrift. When Mary and Percy return to the shore, their canoe is some distance out in the water.

Supposing that Percy is a good swimmer, Mary insists that he shall swim out and get the boat, but Percy objects strenuously. At length he is fairly shamed into making an attempt to swim out to the boat and just at this point is where Mary discovers that Percy cannot swim a stroke. A few steps and Percy is out over his head. In another moment he is bawling for help and advertising the fact that he cannot swim. Frank at this opportune moment arrives upon the scene with a feigned look of surprise upon his face. At Mary's request he plunges into the water and tows the hapless impostor back to dry land. Then getting his own boat, Frank puts Mary into it and rows away with her, while she waves mocking adieus to the dripping coward on the shore.

H. F. H.

"The Merchant of Venice"

Reviewed by Louis Reeves Harrison.

I WAS deeply interested in watching this play to see what point of view the director would assume in its production. To many Shylock is only a Jew, whose ideal life is that of gain by unfair means within the law, whereas it is a mistake to assume that Shakespeare had any such idea of the character when he wrote the great drama. The Shylock of Shakespeare's conception was neither comic nor vulgar, but a representative of a great race, and in him was concentrated the wrath of that race turning upon its oppressors.

To understand Shylock let us study Antonio in the light of Mr. Thanhouser's production. Here is a very attractive gentleman who has invested his wealth, like many other Venetians, in ships that sometimes go down at sea. In other words, he took great chances for large profits. He is a man of fine appearance, accustomed to luxury and quite as self-sufficient as is the same type to-day. A first glimpse of Antonio shows him in the act of insulting the Jew in a way that any sensitive man would resent.

Now Shylock made his money by taking great chances for large profits, and when Antonio comes to him in straits for a loan after treating him worse than he would a dog, the Jew openly tells him that money is his suit, that the Christian is very unchristianlike when not asking a favor. Antonio, the borrower, taunts back and tells the Jew to lend the money as he would to an enemy from whom he might exact a penalty, and Shylock takes him at his word. He exacts the pound of flesh in a bond and thus risks a fortune to get even with his insulter.

If the story is to be considered possible in any historic age where there were laws to govern and courts to enforce them, it is plain that Shylock took a desperate chance. He evinced willingness to risk the wealth he had accumulated at many a painful sacrifice in order to destroy the man who spat upon him and exposed him to ridicule. There was small reason to think that he could escape with his own life even if the forfeit was paid.

Shylock as a character seems to be the expression of bitter revenge and as such he is hateful to people of enlightenment, but it was man to man in those dark days. He was the injured one; he was older and weaker than Antonio; he was not skilled in arms; he could not fight in the ordinary way on even terms, so he resorted to weapons within his reach. His malevolence in the end became stimulated to the highest pitch by the loss of his daughter and the fortunes she stole from his safe. It seems to me that the great dramatist introduced these aggravating circumstances to excuse the Jew's mental condition. It was such as might have caused the reason of a Christian to topple or fall into the insane hate of a paranoiac.

I take it that Shakespeare's own viewpoint was so high and sweeping that he understood humanity hundreds of years ago, as we are just beginning to comprehend it. He knew that mean traits were not entirely racial. He realized that the cultivated Jew could be generous and considerate while a primitive Christian might be out for all there was to be made, irrespective of how it was made within the law. He seemed to realize that, aside from those who dared to break the laws, human nature was much the same the world over.

Back of man's efforts is a common love of power.

That power under most all civilized conditions is concentrated in the possession of wealth, which enables one to share results with many who labor, and the road to wealth is all too often that of indifferent moral. Shylock and Antonio are but two types, one less lavish in display than the other, of men that we have with us to-day. Shakespeare drew them as they were and allowed people of all subsequent ages to sit in judgment, each according to his limitations.

It has seemed to many of us that the great dramatist did more than depict the meanness of wealth as concentrated in Shylock. Though it may have been all important to lay the onus on the Jew in order to satisfy the people of his time, there are contrasts enforced throughout the play with doubtful Christian graces.

The shylocks in our political game, particularly those in New York City, who drain the blood of our people and retire to Europe to fatten on their graft, are not Jews. The young American heiress who goes abroad and gilds the pretensions of a titled adventurer is rarely a Jewess. On the other hand some American citizens of high cultivation and noble philanthropy are Jews, and it behooves us as friends of the oppressed, bent upon common enlightenment, to break down all racial lines as we are trying to do those of narrow religious interpretation. The best Jews are better Americans. Therefore, let us eliminate prejudice and examine this play from a tolerant standpoint.

Scene from Thanhouser Two-Part Production, "The Merchant of Venice."

Scenes from Thanhouser's Two-Part Production, "The Merchant of Venice."

While "The Merchant of Venice" seems to be strongly directed against usury of any kind, including that of buying small franchises for a few thousands through political corruption, watering the stocks by millions and charging a labor-crushing interest on the difference, the play was actually drawn from a "Story of the Cruel Jew," who entered into a bond with his enemy, of which the forfeit was to be a pound of the enemy's own flesh. This story was one of those intended to picture the ups and downs of human experience. If a man is a Get-Rich-Quick-Wallingford, even in the moving picture business, and seeks to rise by unfair methods a secret force will be set in motion, which will bring him down to a realization of where he stands among the rest of us. Herein lies the leading dramatic element in the play.

It may not appear that Antonio responds to modern ideas of heroism. He violates our sense of justice by heaping indignities upon an old man so enfeebled as to be completely at the mercy of his gross insults, but he is essential as he stands. He brings out Shylock's triumph and subsequent retribution. This retribution is caused by Shylock's appeal to the law as much as by Portia's ingenious argument. He adheres to the letter of the law and it is this which defeats him. He refuses delayed payment when it is offered, even three times the amount, and having done this in open court is denied one ducat of the loan when Portia says he may have his pound of flesh conditioned upon the shedding of no Christian blood. The moral of the principal tale is that we may seek justice by fair means, but any use of the instruments of justice for personal vengeance is liable to kick back like an overloaded gun.

The minor story, that of the "Three Caskets," is also an old fable skilfully converted by the great playwright to his uses. Portia has three suitors, one a barbarian prince, who considers himself half-divine; one a French noble, who leans heavily on his ancestry, and Bassanio, who truly loves her. For these she provides three caskets, one of gold, one of silver, and one of lead, and she tests her suitors by letting them choose among themselves. The caskets bear three inscriptions:

"Who chooseth me shall gain what many men desire."
"Who chooseth me shall get as much as he deserves."
"Who chooseth me must give and hazard all he hath."

The prince chooses the one of gold, Aragon the one of silver, respectively from greed and the desire to be unique, while Bassanio, being anxious to show what he will risk for love, selects the casket of lead, which makes him worthy of Portia. Visible moral: "Appearances are deceitful." Second moral (of doubtful value): "Women think a great deal of appearances."

The production is given with the following cast:

Shylock.....Wm. J. Bowman
Jessica, his daughter.....Mignon Anderson
Portia.....Flo La Badie
Bassanio.....Harry Burnham
Antonio.....Wm. Russell

The types are all well chosen, the men being especially good, but Portia lacks repose of manner and is entirely too gay at a moment when her lover's life is at stake. She displays little of that fullness of power which enabled Portia to extend protection to those less able to care for themselves in a trying emergency. She should have enforced a contrast with Jessica. The latter's act in stealing her father's ducats and jewels is possibly introduced to indicate why he should be deeply affected and feel that the whole world was against him, but her weakness affords opportunity for Portia to show her strength instead of her pretty teeth and dimples on the eve of a horrible tragedy.

The interior settings are as near perfect as they could be made—even Shylock's iron chest of ancient design is a real one—and the exteriors are a delightful surprise. It would be impossible to reproduce Venice in any part of this country, but the palace is superb and so appropriate that I noticed a pretty Italian garden peering over the walls in one scene. The deep scenes at the masque are a delightful relief. The characters are well posed in several of the interiors where studio limitations make it difficult to handle any number of people in action.

The general conception of the play is correct, and it affords me pleasure to say so. It opens as a comedy and ends as one with Shylock's dark mental working injected in the middle. The great poet-playwright clearly appreciated that the absurdities of the pound of flesh and the three caskets would not hold in pure tragedy and peopled his story with characters that make no strain on credulity. Whether to credit Mr. Thanhouser or his director or both I am in doubt, but I must compliment the ruling spirit for the delightful and scholarly interpretation.

ANIMATED PUBLICITY AND DISTRIBUTING CO.

A company has been formed for the purpose of making and distributing industrial pictures and incorporated under the laws of New York State, with a capital of $5,000. It is pointed out by the promoters, who are experienced picture men, that while there have been a large number of industrial pictures made, there has been no way of securing a distribution of them to places where they could be shown to the public. The new company proposes to supply the missing link in this service. It is said that there are a large number of industrial pictures laying on the shelves of manufacturing firms who have spent good money for the making, but who have found no way of utilizing them. If the Animated Publicity & Distributing Company can accomplish this service it should be welcomed. This company will also handle the product of the Circle Ranch Film Company, Santa Monica, Cal.

NEW FEATURES COMING.

The Feature Photoplay Company, under the guidance of Mr. H. L. Lande, proprietor, is making rapid strides to success. Mr. Lande, one of the pioneers of the film business, became connected with the Feature Photoplay Company in January of the present year, and up until recently was satisfied with the modest profits gained in renting feature films. Being always on the alert for something new and large, and recognizing the insistent and growing demand of the exhibitor for feature programs, Mr. Lande has now made arrangements with several of the large European manufacturers of feature subjects to release their subjects in the American market.

On another page of this issue will be found the advertisement of the Feature Photoplay Company, giving an idea of their policy.

The Moving Picture Educator

SUNDAY EXHIBITIONS.

AN exhibitor writes to the editor of this page complaining that a movement is abroad "by certain clergyman" with a view to closing picture houses on Sunday, and asking the intervention of the "Educator" in what he considers a campaign of education. The question of the open Sunday is an exceedingly large and broad one, and one in which there are certain to be very extreme opinions, in fact the difficulty lies in the extreme nature of these opinions.

If instead of being as opposite as the poles each party came into more temperate zones, a solution of the problem would be easier. The extreme anti-Sunday picture people are too narrow, and the extreme open Sunday picture people are too broad; indeed each one is responsible for the other's existence and it is a question not easily solved as to which is the least blamable. It is a fact that there are picture places, which if conducted on quieter and more refined lines, would certainly deprive the opposition of much of their "thunder." There are other picture places which because of the care with which they are conducted have taken large numbers of people from worse places of amusement on the Sabbath day.

It must readily be admitted by all that the pictures are "here to stay" and it is their use and not their abuse which should occupy all minds. Any minister or set of ministers who start out to fight the pictures are fighting a great popular favorite, and will only bring themselves into contempt and turn more people against their better work, than would be the case if they rather handled the matter wisely.

On the other hand, the defiant exhibitor will hurt his own cause if he fights back, or runs a class of pictures on Sunday that offends the good taste of church people.

Ministers Should Use the Pictures.

In all parts of the world there are ministers who use the pictures; if more ministers would follow their example a demand would be created for the class of pictures the "Educator" is continually asking for, and for which the manufacturers complain there is not a sufficient market. The increased production would furnish the exhibitor with Special Sunday Pictures.

Why should not the Sunday exhibitions be of the best character possible? There are already scores of good picture subjects which enterprising exhibitors should reserve for and specialize on Sundays; in this way they do a threefold good in producing that which is above criticism; that which is suitable to the occasion, and educational in value; and that which stimulates a great demand which will compel the manufacturers' response; indeed the Sunday question may be the means of solving the problem of More and Better Pictures.

A Sunday show of sensational, comic or ultra melodramatic pictures is offensive to the day and all good people; besides only pandering to a depraved taste; this is really what arouses opposition of others besides ministers of religion. Run the best pictures on the best day of the week, specialize! specialize! specialize! and prove, if in the first place it does not cause an increased demand for "more and better pictures;" and in the second place make friends of the very class of people who are now the natural enemies of that which is questionable in the Sunday exhibition.

The Sunday Picture a Power for Good.

Only recently it was shown how great a victory for moving pictures was won in Montclair, N. J. It should be understood that the credit for this victory belongs to the ministers and a proper use of the Sunday pictures; this shows what a power for good the pictures may become when properly used and applied.

The solution of the Sunday question therefore rests largely with the exhibitors themselves; they can "make or mar" their own reputation; let the rank and file of them follow the suggestions of this article and it is safe to predict that it will prove revolutionary in the affairs of the whole realm of moving pictures.

Sunday Pictures and Sunday Exhibitions.

In England at the present time, as in some parts of America, the Sunday exhibition is very largely demanding the attention of the authorities. It seems to the writer that it should be more largely a question of pictures rather than exhibitions; to paraphrase an old motto it would seem:

"Take care of the pictures and the exhibitions will take care of themselves."

Nothing acceptable to the Sunday has ever been refused, as for instance, the Sunday newspaper (when purified of its yellow streak); the park band concerts, the opening of libraries and museums, and Sunday games and excursions when within proper limitations. It is with these limitations that the pictures must be found; fulfilling these conditions their establishment is certain, failing this it is doubtful.

Where the Matter Stands.

The people—the educated people—will ever be the sovereign authority; they must be satisfied and the exhibitor must satisfy them. In turn the exhibitor must make his demands upon the producer of the pictures. If the people through their rightful representatives demand Sunday pictures they must be acceptable to the day, and must be produced. Under the pressure of this demand the present large yet very inadequate supply of suitable pictures must be increased, and Sunday exhibitions must be made a credit to the maker, exhibitor and people.

NOTES ON CURRENT EVENTS.

This is the season of the year when everything educational comes most prominently before the country. From the greatest university to the smallest hamlet school-house graduating exercises are the center of interest to at least three generations of people. Very timely, therefore, "Pathe's Weekly," No. 26, presents the graduating exercises of the United States Naval Academy at Annapolis, Md. Exceedingly attractive in appearance as they march with such perect alignment, they honor themselves and are the pride of their country. President Taft presents their diplomas, and the "highest honors' man" is given an especial picture.

* * *

The unveiling of the splendid Columbus statue in front of the new and grand, Union Station in Washington, D. C., by President Taft is a picture of more than historic interest; art and history have combined to link the old and the new world in one thought and purpose, so that future generations may never forget either the man, his mission, and the wonderful results which arose therefrom.

* * *

Not only is the athletic world interested in sports, but all Americans, and especially "youthful America," are interested in the world contest for honors in the Olympic Games in Stockholm. A picture showing the American champions in their final tryout is a strong one, unusual jumping records seem the most important. After seeing this picture everyone will be anxiously awaiting pictures of the Olympic Games in their thoroughness.

* * *

An unusual picture of life savers at work will be of new interest to many. Men from the United States Life Saving Station at Tillamook Bay are seen giving an exhibition of their prowess, perhaps the most thrilling incident being that in which they overturn the lifeboat and cause it to right itself without losing any of the occupants.

* * *

Interior views of the Oregon State Penitentiary shows marvelous progress in the treatment of convicts as compared with the horrors of but a few decades ago. A game of baseball shows that in treating them as men deserving of healthy bodies and minds, they are more likely to come forth better citizens. Reformation, not vengeance, is the modern method of prison work.

* * *

From far off Australia we are shown a picture of the "Fram," of South Pole fame, this being the vessel in which Amundsen made his successful voyage, and which, after necessary refitting, is destined to a South American port.

* * *

The "Death of Saul," C. G. P. C., is a forthcoming release which will be reviewed in due course on this page. The last of the "Saul" series, its tragic nature gives occasion for many profitable lessons, especially when the cause which brought about Saul's sad end is considered, and to which we trust due weight has been given.

CHICAGO LETTER.

By Jas. S. McQuade.

THE week opening July 1 has been marked by an onslaught on theaters of the fourth class, in this city, which offer "exhibitions consisting solely of moving pictures." At an afternoon meeting of the building committee on Monday, July 1, 80 of these theaters were blacklisted by Building Commissioner Ericsson as being menaces to life.

At the request of Commissioner Ericsson, licenses for the theaters referred to were refused, for the term beginning July 1, by City Collector Cohen. The Commissioner reported to the Council, on the evening of the same day, that 75 of the 80 had refused to obey his orders for important changes to conform with the law. Eight of these houses, he stated, are on second floors and one on a third floor above street level.

Commissioner Ericsson asked the city council to pass an ordinance prohibiting theaters above the ground floor. The latter houses are at present within the law, but the Commissioner presented an ordinance condemning them as nuisances.

Among the charges brought against the owners were: Failure to provide sufficient exits, failure to mark exits properly, crowding of seats, blockading of exits, reduction of aisle space, insufficient stairway and fire escape widths, blockading of aisles and faults in material used in construction and repairs.

In his fight against the theaters, Mr. Ericsson had the approval and aid of the city law department. It was upon its advice that he requested the holding up of the licenses, and the ordinance against the second and third floor houses was prepared by the corporation counsel's office after an opinion had been written on the city's power in the matter.

"While it is true," wrote the commissioner in his letter to the council concerning his proposed ordinance, "that these playhouses technically comply with the essential provisions of the class IV ordinance, with the exception of the limit of height above sidewalk grade and capacity allowed by Section 306 of the Building Ordinance, which the corporation counsel in a written opinion stated was not retroactive, still, on account of the fact that these theater halls were not originally designed as public theaters in the true intent and purpose of the law, and even if they have brick inclosing walls, the interior construction of these buildings is entirely of combustible material, having wooden floors and wooden interior stairways, partitions and roofs.

"The fact that these auditoriums are located at various heights from fifteen to thirty feet makes them, in my opinion, extremely hazardous, and severe criticism and complaints have emanated from various sources from time to time regarding this type of theater located at such heights."

Theater owners present at the building committee's session, Monday afternoon, complained that City Collector Cohen had refused to accept their fees for the new license period, which began at the close of June 30, and they asked the committee to take action on the matter. The committee refused and the question was brought before the city council by Alderman Klaus, on Monday evening. The alderman presented an order directing the city collector to issue the licenses, and the order was declared passed. Alderman Thompson endeavored to have the action rescinded, but was overcome.

The building committee, at the afternoon session, took further steps to regulate picture theaters. Alderman Thompson presented a "morals" ordinance requiring that all parts of such houses shall be lighted to a fixed degree. The approved test is that a person with normal eyesight must be able to read standard "test" type at fixed distances, within the theater, while pictures are being presented.

During the week, a tour of inspection of picture theaters, on the second and third floors of buildings, was made by the aldermen on the building committee, accompanied by Commissioner Ericsson, the deputy commissioner, the chief inspector in charge, and John C. McDonnell, fire department inspector.

"With possibly the exception of the west side place, every theater we have visited should be put out of business," Alderman Thompson, chairman of the committee, asserted after the inspection. "The others are unsafe for any considerable number of persons. Every one of the eight places are in buildings which are not even near fireproof. They are a menace and should not be allowed to operate a day. I am more certain than ever, after making this trip, that no theater should have its main floor above the ground level. Every balcony in these theaters is a fire trap of itself. The trip has opened my eyes to dangers I did not know existed."

At the city council meeting Monday evening, July 8, big downtown theaters in the Loop were also brought under the ban of the building committee. The elimination of upstairs or "loft" picture theaters was also considered. It was arranged that the building committee will hold a meeting Tuesday to have a hearing of the proposed ordinance to prevent the operation of upstairs theaters. At the same meeting the members will consider the elimination of second floors in all theaters which are housed in buildings that are not fireproof. The building commissioner will also submit a report on the conditions in the big downtown theaters, with respect to the safety of patrons.

On Monday, July 8, Mayor Harrison vetoed the order, passed one week before, providing that upstairs moving picture theaters should be granted a renewal of their licenses. After the fearful Iroquois disaster on Dec. 31, 1903, it will be remembered that Mr. Harrison, who was then mayor, was included on the list of those indicted for the dreadful occurrence.

The following paragraph is taken from an editorial in the News, which treats of the whole matter: "Mayor Harrison and the building commissioner are to be commended for the stand they have taken in this matter. Too much care and forethought can hardly be put forth by officials in the regulation of public assembly halls to eliminate needless perils. The day should be past when fate, with the deliberate consent of public officials, is tempted merely that some amusement purveyor may add a few more dollars to his possessions."

Motography a Boon to Medical Specialists.

Moving pictures promise to prove a valuable aid to the medical profession, especially to those members who specialize in mental and nervous diseases, according to Chicago physicians recently returned from Atlantic City, where they attended the convention of the American Medico-Psychological Association.

Moving pictures were used to great advantage at the meetings in exhibiting various types of insanity. All types, from the raving maniac to the bedridden, were shown.

"Such films will be valuable to physicians who are so situated as to be unable to study the types of insanity," said one of the doctors. "Having once seen them, a physician would be the better able to make an accurate diagnosis, at least so far as outward indications and movements are concerned. The production of such films means that very helpful clinics may be held in the remote corners of the land, where little opportunity for wide observation is afforded."

Essanay Subjects Set in Beautiful Wisconsin Dells.

One of Essanay's Eastern stock companies, which includes Miss Martha Russell, Miss Ruth Stonehouse, Miss Helen Dunbar and Messrs Francis X. Bushman, Harry Mainhall, Harry Cashman, William Walter, Bryant Washburn and Fred Wolf, is now working in the beautiful Wisconsin dells, under the direction of Theodore Wharton. This region abounds in scenery famous for its rugged grandeur. Marvelous rock formations are shown, and a number of fine subjects are in course of preparation in this environment.

Three productions have already been finished. "A Romance of the Dells" was the first film completed. It was produced from a scenario written especially to fit in with a number of the finest points of the Upper Dells, including magnificent scenes of the famous Stand Rock, Cold Water Canon, and the Hornet's Nest. These points are particularly attractive because of the rock formations referred to.

One of the sensational scenes in "A Romance of the Dells" was made on the top of Stand Rock. This stately formation rears its head nearly 100 feet in the air. The rock has been split from the constant wearing of the ages, and rises in two columns, separated at the top by a chasm 10 feet wide. Francis X. Bushman, one of Essanay's popular leading men, was called upon to make a thrilling leap across this chasm in the production of the film referred to. The narrow surface of the flat top allowed but little space in which to gain impetus, and Bushman was almost forced to make it with a standing jump. He accomplished the feat successfully, however, and his hardihood will be realized when it is borne in mind that the slightest misstep would have meant death on the rocks below. This sensational leap is vividly shown in the film, and is only one of the numerous thrills presented during the taking of the three completed productions. The company will remain at the Dells indefinitely, and it is promised that several unusually fine subjects will follow those already completed.

Chicago Film Brevities.

More than 70,000 feet of film were rejected by the Chicago Censor Board during the year just closed. The films inspected totaled 3,255, representing 2,004,000 feet.

* * *

Carl Kettler, Jr., of West Palm Beach, Fla., spent the last two weeks in Chicago with relatives. Every moment of the time was busily employed examining the manufacture of films in the Chicago plants of Selig, Essanay and the American, and in visiting leading picture theaters. Mr. Kettler, who owns the Bijou in West Palm Beach, will open a new theater, the Amusu, about July 20th. He is a strong booster for films of the Licensed brand, which he uses exclusively.

* * *

James Edgar Brown, chairman of the entertainment committee of Chicago's Sane Fourth Association, states that more than 50,000 people witnessed the presentation of motion pictures given in 22 parks, playgrounds and suburbs on Independence Day.

* * *

N. Menasse, of Edmonton, Alberta, was in the city last week. He will open his splendid new house, the Empress, in the fall. This will be a costly structure, Mr. Menasse says. Mr. Menasse investigated the various screens and machines while here and will make purchases before his return home.

* * *

H. Warner, of Warner's Features, visited the World office Friday, July 5. Since leaving New York he has opened offices in Rochester, Philadelphia, Pittsburgh, Cleveland, Indianapolis and St. Louis, and will open an office here before leaving the city. From this point he will travel westward, and will establish offices in Minneapolis, Kansas City, Omaha, Denver, San Francisco, Portland and, most probably, in Seattle. The New York and Chicago offices will be the central points for operation.

* * *

A. N. Lewis, proprietor of the McKinley Theater, 35th St. and Archer Ave., called at the World office last week. He reported fine business up to the coming of the hot wave, which reached this point July 5. The McKinley seats 300 people and three reels form the daily program. Mr. and Mrs. Dedlow furnish vocal and instrumental music for the pictures.

* * *

One of the staff of the building inspector's office, this city, recently visited a picture theater and after careful inspection gave it as his opinion that there was only one fault to find. That fault lay with the exit lights, which, he said, should be filled with sperm oil. What next?

* * *

W. Ledoux, general manager of the Starland Limited, of Winnipeg, accompanied by Mrs. Ledoux, was a caller at the World office last week. Mr. and Mrs. Ledoux left Winnipeg on Saturday, June 29th, and since then have visited St. Paul, Minneapolis, Sioux City, Omaha, Kansas City and St. Louis, to gain pointers on the conduct of motion picture theaters. The Starland, Ltd., owns the Starland in St. Paul and the Starland, Omaha. The St. Paul house was finished May 4 and was opened on the same date. General Manager Ledoux told me that he was making an experiment in the St. Paul house, which so far has proved successful. This experiment means the giving of afternoon presentations at 5 and 10 cents admission, the admissions for the evening presentations being 10 cents for children, 15 cents for adults, and 25 cents for boxes. The Omaha house will be finished about November 1. It has been built to accommodate 2,000 people, at a cost of $100,000. Straight moving pictures and music will furnish the programs. The Starland Theater circuit has two houses in Winnipeg, two in Brandon, two in Saskatoon, one in Prince Albert, one in Edmonton and one in Calgary.

* * *

F. A. Lacey, of Seattle, paid a call to the World office recently. His present occupation is that of purchasing "lemon" theaters, making them popular and remunerative and then selling them. Mr. Lacey came directly to Chicago from North Yakima, Wash. He was formerly manager of three houses in Seattle for the People's Amusement Company, of Portland, a position held by him for four years. He stated that he is now traveling through the country in the hope of learning something more up to date about picture theaters than he has seen in the West. He is of the opinion, however, that he has been unable to do so, except in Milwaukee, where the Saxe Circuit has highly impressed him. Mr. Lacey is known in the West as the "Bright Spot," from the fact that he uses this brand for all his houses. He is a live showman and believes in liberal newspaper and novelty advertising. He informed me that the Klemmer Theater in Seattle was completed on April 10 and that he was present on the opening night, when the house, which seats 1,200 people, was crowded to capacity. He pronounces the Klemmer a beautiful structure with an attractive front, and extremely handsome interior decorations. The Klemmer has been a wonderful success from the start, Mr. Lacey states, and it is hard to find a vacant seat at any presentation. Eugene Levy opened his new house, the Melbourne, about the same time as Mr. Klemmer opened his. The Melbourne seats 800 people and its front is pronounced one of the most beautiful and attractive on the Pacific Coast. Ten cents admission is charged at each of these houses. Mr. Lacey will return to the Pacific Coast in about a month.

* * *

The many admirers of S. L. Rothapfel will be glad to learn that he has taken over the direction of the Saxe Circuit. In a recent letter he states that the Saxe people have taken over the lease of the Lyric, Minneapolis, and are beautifying it by building a new front, a new lobby, new decorations, and special stage settings. When finished, Mr. Rothapfel believes it will be one of the most beautiful picture theaters in the world. Mr. Rothapfel will remain at the Lyric for some time after it is reopened. It must be said, in justice to Mr. Rothapfel, that he received very shabby treatment at the hands of the Shuberts, both at the Lyric here, and at the Boyd, Omaha. They expected him to turn large legitimate houses in one week into successful picture theaters. He very properly resigned and has engaged in a field where he will be amply backed to give the presentations of pictures for which his name has become famous.

DEATH OF ARTHUR J. MORGAN.

Arthur J. Morgan, secretary of the National X-Ray Reflector Company, Chicago, died July 5, of pneumonia, at his residence, in Evanston. Mr. Morgan was but thirty-nine years old, in the prime of his life at the time of his death.

Born in Los Angeles, Cal., in 1873, Mr. Morgan came to Chicago in 1900. He was a member of the Illuminating Engineering Society, Chicago Brass Manufacturers' Association, Chicago Association of Commerce, etc., etc. As a member of the Illuminating Engineering Society, and through his business connections, he had much to do with the recent advance developments in illuminating methods. The kindliness of Mr. Morgan's disposition, his strength of character, and sterling honesty, made him a host of friends.

In addition to his wife and two small children, his mother and two sisters, Mr. Morgan leaves a large number of friends to mourn his untimely departure. The World joins in extending sympathy to the family of deceased and his business associates.

TUDOR BACK IN PICTURES.

LeRoy Tudor, who owned and operated the first moving picture theater in Marion, Ind., The Star, on East Fourth Street, and conducted it successfully several years, selling out at a large profit, has returned to his first love and is again in charge of The Star, having closed a deal for it Saturday, June 15. He will give the theater his personal supervision.

Mr. Tudor for years was the moving spirit in the moving picture world of Marion, having owned the Star, the Royal and the Starette, making a success out of all of them by his progressiveness and up-to-date business methods. His picture houses were always well managed and pictures and instrumental and vocal music made up bills that gave the people a run for their money. Mr. Tudor has scored other successes in the moving picture business since selling out his houses here, and he can be depended on at The Star to give the public the best to be had.

NEW MOVING PICTURE THEATER SUPPLY CO.

The Picture Theater Equipment Company, a New York corporation, has taken over the business of the H. A. Mackie, Inc., jobbers and dealers in all kinds of moving picture machines and moving picture theater supplies. The business will be continued at the present address, 21 East 14th Street, which is one of the most central locations in the city and in close proximity to nearly all the film exchanges.

Mr. H. T. Edwards remains as general manager for the Picture Theater Equipment Company and picture theater managers in New York City and vicinity can depend on a square deal and careful and prompt attention to all orders, large and small.

"The Equine Spy" (Solax)

Reviewed by Louis Reeves Harrison.

OF all actors in the silent drama none has been more natural and graceful than the horse. He is one of the most satisfactory exponents of motion, he gives thrilling force to the action of cowboys and redskins, and, while their hands rather than his intelligence determine his performance, he is better born in his sphere as a rule than those who ride him are in theirs. His speed and endurance are largely matters of inheritance from selected parents, whereas the average man cometh up as a weed and blameth his deficiencies upon those whose preceded him when he cannot ascribe our general humiliation to Charles Darwin.

I suppose we inherit a love of the horse from our European ancestors, especially the English, as he is not indigenous like tomatoes, tobacco, potatoes and poker. He was brought over here by the Spaniards, De Soto being the first to set him going as one of the contributing elements of civilization. He was as unknown to Indians before then as soap is today. But, by reason of long domestication, the horse had inherited the power to acquire an education, his savagery and ferocity could be overcome and we have always taken him to our hearts. We have loved him as long as we could use him—that is the white man's way—and he is still planted in our affections, gasoline wagons to the contrary notwithstanding.

One of the finest of his kind is "Don," in the Solax play, "The Equine Spy"—he looks like an Arabian—and he does his part with a modest dignity that should cause matinee idols to sit up and take protracted notice. His supporters are among the finest to be seen in moving pictures, nearly all the principals of the Solax happy family taking part in the horse play:

CAST

Don.....By Himself
Confederate officer.....By Darwin Karr
His sister.....By Fanny Simpson
His mother.....By Mrs. Foy
Servant—a "cullud pussen".....By Billy Quirk
Union general.....By Lee Beggs
Union cavalry officer.....By Harry Harvey

It is wartime. Fanny is seen conversing with her mother on a porch when Billy, as the "cullud pussen," comes to give the joyful news that Darwin Karr is coming home for a brief rest. Fanny, looking sweet sixteen, gets a field-glass and manages to discern her brother about fifteen feet away—I infer this from his immediate appearance on horse. His mount is not Don, and, on this account, I would have Don present at the opening eating out of Fanny's hand with the avidity of a stage-door Johnnie, but no matter. Darwin arrives and embraces his family. Billy the "cullud pussen," indicates that there are Union troops in the neighborhood and is given Darwin's pistol to signal in case of danger.

Billy goes into a field to stand guard, notes the approach of Federal troops, makes a tremulous effort to scare them away and finally manages to fire his pistol. The mounted squad in charge of dashing Harry Harvey is searching for a noted Confederate spy and is led to investigate Darwin's house by Billy's signal. They find his horse and capture it as Darwin escapes with his sister to the barn where her horse, the splendid "Don" is stabled. She fires from concealment while her brother saddles this superior mount, holding the Northern cavalry at bay until he is ready, then opens the door. Darwin dashes out so unexpectedly that he clears the bunch of bluecoats before they recover their senses.

Now comes a spirited chase. It leads to a fence which Don leaps without an effort. When the pursuing squad appears their horses balk and they are forced to make a detour. Darwin manages to reach his company, but is sent out on scouting duty astride of Don and instructed to fire a beacon if the enemy is seen in force. The Union squad becomes lost in wild country, the men dismount, and they spread an army map upon a stump to study the situation. While they are so occupied the scout draws near, dismounts and crawls nearer to learn their plans. Those examining the map detect his presence and begin chase so abruptly that they leave the map.

Darwin falls wounded, rolls over a hill, crawls into a hole and manages to escape observation until the troopers pass out of the danger zone. Meanwhile Don noses around, discovers the map, picks it up in his teeth and carries it to his wounded master. (It is not to be presumed that Don knew the importance of the military plans he was stealing. He was simply obeying predatory instincts still dominant in some of the human race—he may have thought it was a scenario.) Darwin crawls painfully upon Don's back and is carried to a point only a short distance below the beacon constructed to signal the presence of the Federals in large numbers. Just below the little mound on which the beacon stands he falls off in a condition so weak that he can proceed no further. What shall he do? The beacon is ready; it is important that it should be fired; there is only Don to aid the scout in this emergency. Don has been trained to bring and carry, but will he carry a light from the wounded Confederate to the beacon and set it aflame? He does. He proceeds with some reluctance; advances to the pile of fagots with caution, and he even betrays timidity after lighting the fire, but this astonishing act is accomplished and Confederate headquarters is warned of impending danger. Matters go hard with the scout as a result. The smoke leads to his capture; the incriminating map is found in his pocket, and he is carried away to the Federal headquarters for examination and trial.

Scene from the Solax Production, "The Equine Spy."

While it has never seemed just that men who act as the eyes of an army should be treated with greater severity than other prisoners, the brutal custom of making short shrift of spies has furnished the novelist and dramatist with an abundance of material for situations of rescue under suspense. Darwin is adjudged a spy at a drumhead court-martial and is led away to the guardhouse under sentence of death, to be shot down in the morning. The guardhouse is a rickety affair; Darwin sticks his head out of a small window for a breath of air, and signals for his horse.

Faithful Don appears and studies movements made by Darwin to indicate how thirsty he is. The splendid horse now enters upon a state of suspended morality—he is ready to steal anything. He sneaks up to a spring where canteens are being filled, selects a full one and makes a clean getaway without being discovered. He delivers the canteen to the prisoner and is given a message, "written in blood," to carry away, but this time he attracts attention and draws the fire of the guard.

Scene from "The Equine Spy" (Solax).

We are transported to the front of Darwin's house where his sister, Fanny, just as sweet and coy as ever, is waiting and hoping. Almost as if in response to her desires comes Don with his message. Fanny is transformed in an instant from a timid woman to one of reckless bravery. The life of a loved one is at stake, and that is when a woman can fight. Don's face wears a sheepish air—the habit of appropriation is growing on him—but he plucks up spirit when Fanny mounts and rides away to gather a party of rescue among the "Boys in Grey."

She comes near being caught in a trap on the ride—the cavalry skirmishers of the Federals intercept her, but she uses her revolver effectively, and Don does the rest, easily distancing those in pursuit. She finally reaches the Confederate lines and is given a small detachment for the dangerous service she has planned. Her brother has indicated the place of execution, and she has boldly schemed to risk an engagement by way of diversion at the last moment, while Darwin is given opportunity to free himself.

There is an obstacle in her way, a sleepy sentinel, but she detects his presence by the use of field-glasses and proceeds to encourage Don in his career of crime.

The horse goes of his own account to despoil another victim and actually strips the dozing sentinel of his firearms. Don is now lost to all sense of shame, so far as bluecoats are concerned, and his strategic mistress has difficulty in keeping him from embezzling a battery or two. She must wait.

Morning breaks; Darwin is marched from the guardhouse to meet his doom and a squad of Federal soldiers escort him to the place of execution. Meanwhile Fanny and the "Boys in Grey" are not idle. They creep up behind the shelter of a hill and await events. Guns are loaded; the Union soldiers prepare to do their duty; Darwin folds his arms as if he did not care; the order to take aim is given, and then the fun begins. Bing! Bang! The ridge shows a line of smoke and bluecoats fall like autumn leaves. Some continue the fight under disadvantages, but no one pays attention to the prisoner. He is, however, a busy man. He struggles desperately with the cords that bind him, escapes before the skirmish assumes serious proportions and is united in the final scene to his plucky sister.

Is Don forgotten?

There he is, poking his nose over their shoulders after all immediate danger has passed, a faithful friend in trial, though not particularly scrupulous in the way he disregards the distinction between meum and tuem.

The play was designed for the splendid horse, and it appears to have been brought into correct lines of construction if it was not so written. The director's work is satisfactory in all the many details that go to make up a complete photodrama, and the roles are admirably assumed. I know what the Solax Company can do, although I have seen but few examples of their work. They work in harmony without losing individual values; work enthusiastically, in spite of studio disadvantages, and impress their superior quality and fine organization upon whatever they attempt to interpret.

LOOK OUT FOR THESE COLOMBIANS.

Walter N. Isaacs, dealer in moving picture slides and supplies, advises the Moving Picture World that he had some dealings with Guillermo Murillo and Francesca Pardo, of Bogota, Republic of Colombia, something more than a year ago and has been unable to obtain a settlement. Mr. Isaacs rented these people 87 reels of film for six months, but has received neither the rental price nor the pictures. He understands that the same parties have opened a picture theater in Barranquillo and believes that the trade should be warned by his experience.

PINS FAITH TO WORLD REVIEWS.

Edwin L. Barker, of the International Harvester Company's Service Bureau, is a regular picture fan. He tries to see all the good ones shown at the picture theaters and, now and then, through the courtesy of his friend, Col. F. C. McCarrahan, of the Kleine Optical Company, he manages to see them in advance in the Kleine exhibition room. It was after such a visit that he felt impelled to write the following appreciation of the Moving Picture World reviews:

I thought I knew a great deal about the moving picture business, and I think so still. Here at the International we have done a few things with pictures—"The Romance of the Reaper," "The Dawn of Plenty," and several films in the theaters. But always there is something more to be learned, and my last lesson makes me think better of the Moving Picture World and the whole world of moving pictures.

The other day I was enjoying a little visit with my friend Colonel McCarrahan, of the George Kleine Optical Company. He is from Old Kentuck, you know, hence the "Colonel." While we were talking in came the (I was about to say dramatic) film critic of the Moving Picture World. He was there to see a new picture, the results of which were to appear in the columns of the World in the form of a review, or comment.

The critic carried in his hand a typewritten synopsis of the new picture. This synopsis he had carefully studied. The film was placed upon the screen, and the critic asked for quiet that he might give the picture his undivided attention. He studied the picture as a dramatic critic studies a stage production—yes, even more so. Then he had the film run through a second time.

I asked if he were not going to a great deal of trouble. But he replied "not too much trouble." The reputation of the World was at stake. So was his own reputation as a critic. Right then and there I pinned my faith to the World reviews more securely than ever before.

I am glad to be so closely associated with a business which appreciates honest criticism. It is this sort of criticism, coupled with high ideals and fair dealings, that is pushing the moving picture business upward as it moves forward.

S. S. HUTCHINSON SAILS FOR EUROPE.

President S. S. Hutchinson, of the American Film Mfg. Company, Chicago, sailed with his wife and son on the S. S. Olympic for Europe July 6. Mr. Hutchinson will visit his London offices and tour the continent before returning home.

AMERICAN ADDS ANOTHER PRODUCER.

William Lee is the name of a new producer recently added to the forces of The American Film Mfg. Company. Mr. Lee formerly produced for the American, shortly after the company was organized. He will specialize in straight Western drama.

Of seven aviators shown in what is now known as the "death reel," taken at Kinloch Field, St. Louis, in 1910, six have met sudden deaths, all save one in aeroplane smashes. Al Welch, the Wright flyer was the latest victim. Walter Brookins is the sole survivor. Among those shown in the picture are Hoxsey and Johnstone. The film is owned by Albert Bond Lambert, former president of the Aero Club of St. Louis.

"The Smuggler's Daughter" Essanay

Reviewed by Jas. S. McQuade.

ONE of those typical Western dramas in which G. M. Anderson has won popular favor in the Old and the New World is scheduled for release on July 16. It is entitled "The Smuggler's Daughter," and presents several thrilling scenes and is marked by lively action throughout. The fine exterior views, in which the familiar, dare-devil horseback riding of these Anderson dramas is seen to advantage, have been taken in the vicinity of Niles, Calif., and their appropriateness shows painstaking care in the selection.

It must be conceded that Mr. Anderson's Western dramas stand out in a way that makes them peculiarly his own. His plots, while simple, have still dramatic value and are of a higher standard than most of the Western productions of this type, which, as a rule, are elemental in character and reveal the outcome of the story almost in the opening scene. His productions are marked by fine camera work, and it is seldom that a scene is found out of focus.

In Miss Vedah Bertram he has a leading woman who fits in well in Western characters. Miss Bertram rides with the daring and dash of a cowboy, and in the film under review she shows her mettle in this respect. In the role of Brant Graham, the deputy sheriff and lover of Vedah, Mr. Anderson is virile and convincing. Arthur Mackley also merits mention for his impersonation of the smuggler, Vedah's father.

Silas Gregg, a Western mountaineer, makes a living by smuggling goods from Mexico. His pretty daughter, Vedah, loves young Brant Graham, who is about to be sworn in as a deputy sheriff. The opening scene shows him telling Vedah of his appointment, while Silas Gregg, in an adjoining room, listens to the story. Brant then leaves for the sheriff's office to get his badge. Silas comes into the room where Vedah stands happy over her lover's good fortune, and she tells him all about it. Silas then joins his confederates in the barn.

Brant, on being sworn in by the sheriff, receives his first commission from that officer. It is one involving both skill and courage, for it means the tracing and capture of the smuggler's band, whose operations had been detected by the sheriff. Brant grimly promises to do his best and returns to Vedah. He avows his love and is accepted; but, on attempting to place the betrothal ring on her finger, she refuses permission until her father gives his consent. They then go out to the barn in search of Silas. The door is found locked and, hearing voices, the deputy looks through the keyhole. To his surprise and horror, he finds that Silas and his companions are engaged in handling smuggled goods, and that duty will compel him to arrest and expose the father of his sweetheart.

Vedah notes the change in his countenance and asks the reason. He tells her that her father is the head of a band of smugglers whose arrest he has been commissioned to make. She pleads with him to spare her father; but his oath compels him to refuse, and he breaks away from her and enters the smuggler's den with drawn revolver. The inmates hold up their hands at his command, and he is about to secure them when Vedah rushes in and pinions his arms from behind. Love for her father had spurred her to action.

Brant is immediately seized by Silas and his men and is disarmed and bound. Vedah is led to the kitchen of her home, where her father makes known that the deputy must be slain. She pleads, but in vain. He then forbids her to leave the house and returns to engage in the trial and death of Brant.

Scenes from the Essanay Production, "The Smuggler's Daughter."

Knowing the desperate character of the men, Vedah feels that her lover is doomed unless she can reach the sheriff and bring help in time. Recklessly she rides away. The sheriff's office is reached and her mission is made known. A posse, headed by the sheriff and accompanied by Vedah, ride furiously towards her home. Round the base of frowning heights and through patches of forest, the mad gallop is continued until a halt is made in front of the Gregg barn. A rush is made into the smuggler's den, and none too soon, for one of the outlaws is aiming straight at Brant's heart. A wholesale arrest is made, and Brant is released and complimented for his courage by his chief.

On arrival at the door of the barn, Vedah saw at a glance that her father was not present. He had determined at the last moment not to participate in Brant's murder, and returned to the house. There Vedah found him, and revealed that she had brought the sheriff's posse and saved her lover. In his rage he almost strikes her, but, unheeding, she begs him to mount his horse and fly beyond the border. She persists in her entreaties and he is convinced that it is the only hope. He is about to leave, when she begs for a last kiss. He refuses. She begs again, and hurriedly he presses his lips to hers. Then he mounts and speeds away.

When Brant joins Vedah, she points him to a horse and rider that appear as a speck on a steep slope in the distance. Silas Gregg has passed the border line. "I'm glad that your dad is safe across the border," said the deputy earnestly as he took her to his heart.

BUFFALO BILL AND PAWNEE BILL FILM COMPANY TO SUE COL. CODY AND MAJ. LILLIE.

A damage suit is about to be brought against Col. Wm. F. Cody and Major. Gordon W. Lillie, jointly, by the Buffalo Bill & Pawnee Bill Film Company, of New York, for alleged proceedings which they deem injurious to their business. On June 14 of this year a permanent injunction was denied to Col. Cody and Major Lillie by Justice Gerard, of the Supreme Court of New York. The object of the injunction was to restrain the film company bearing their names from selling or exhibiting a motion picture entitled, "The Life of Buffalo Bill." The complainants declare that Buffalo Bill and his partner caused newspaper articles to appear in the trade papers to the effect that the pictures were not authorized by them. It is also claimed that Cody and Lillie stopped the sale of said pictures in States in which the exhibiting rights had not been disposed of and that they further intimidated exhibitors from displaying the pictures in States in which the rights have been sold. The Buffalo Bill & Pawnee Bill Film Co. also claim that they have full authority from the defendants to manufacture and dispose of said picture and that they will protect their clients from interference by the defendants.

BERWICK, PA., HAS NEW THEATER.

Handsome in its appointments, practically fireproof in its construction, and complete in detail, "The Palace," a new theater on East Front Street, Berwick, Pa., was thrown open to the public June 20 by Sult Bros., the proprietors. Representing an investment of upwards of $18,000, the theater stands as one of the most finely equipped and handsomely decorated buildings of its kind in the state. For the proprietors it is its own tribute of up-to-dateness and progressiveness, while to the town it is a credit.

The house is 37 feet wide by 130 feet long and seats 520 persons. The equipment and decoration is very complete and elaborate.

GAUMONT FEATURES.

Announcement comes from the Gaumont headquarters that the first Tuesday and the third Thursday of each month will witness a Gaumont two-reel feature, commencing in September. This fact will prove of interest to all the consumers of the Film Supply program, who are thus given assurance of regularity in the matter of Gaumont features. During August, only one two-reel subject is promised; that one, however, being of more than usual sensationality and spirit. In fact, "Their Lives for Gold," which is slated for release Thursday, August 15th, is by all means the most vigorous and active production that the eminent French concern has placed upon the American market. The story deals with the adventures of two miners, who, in their greed for gold, drive each other into desperation and ultimate destruction. One desperado pursues the other, first by foot, then by auto-cycle, thirdly by automobile, later by horse, then by locomotive and finally by fire. The sensational portions of such Gaumont releases as the "Prairie on Fire," "Written in Blood," "Attacked by a Lion" and the "Lion's Revenge" are actually made to assume an air of insignificance when compared to the hair-raising qualities of "Their Lives for Gold." Probably the most thrilling point is reached when one of the cowboy fiends actually leaps from the top of a railway bridge on to the fast flying train beneath. You want to know a good deal more about this picture, for which reason we respectfully encourage your attention to our forthcoming advertisements and announcements.

Scene from "The Silent Castle," a Gaumont Handcolored Subject for Release July 23.

Doings in Los Angeles.

Universal-Bison War Hits the Coast—Many Gunmen on the Job at Bison Studios.

TROUBLE which has been brewing between rival factions of the recently organized Universal Film Company reached a crisis this week when armed guards with loaded rifles were placed on duty at the offices of the Bison Company in Edendale and also at Bison Studio at Santa Monica, instructed to shoot at the first appearance of an attempt to take possession of the Bison properties.

The situation is the outgrowth of the action of the Bison Company which made an attempt a few days ago to withdraw from the Universal Company. The first news of the break came last week when the two local Independent exchanges received telegrams from the New York Motion Picture Co., of New York, manufacturers of the Bison films and importers of the Ambrosia and Italia, notifying them that these three brands would no longer be handled through the Universal but would be marketed direct.

An hour or two later came other telegrams from the Universal Company warning the exchanges against buying any of the three brands except from the Universal and announcing that the Universal Company owns the brands and has obtained a temporary injunction restraining the New York Motion Picture Company from handling them.

Meanwhile, all below the surface, a big row had been brewing at Edendale, where the Bison offices are located, and at Hollywood, where the Nestor Company has its studios and offices. Just what the developments were cannot be learned at this time, it all may come out before the war is over. For one thing there was deep resentment on the part of Director Ince because some of his Bison reels were censored in New York—evidently not for the better in his opinion. Fred J. Balshofer, who was formerly at the head of the Bison Company, but since the organization of the Universal Company has been in charge of the Bison, Nestor and Imp forces here was inclined to sympathize with Ince. There was a feeling on their part that the Bison films were one of the chief attractions of the Universal program, but jealousy somewhere was causing efforts to discredit the Bison output. There were many other factors, most of them hardly enough to count by themselves, but which in the aggregate led to the break.

The row broke out in real earnest when Balshofer was notified by telegraph from New York that he had been temporarily deposed as Western general manager and W. G. Gilmore, who has been in charge of the Nestor studios, had been put in his place. Along with the notification came the following personal telegram to Balshofer from David Horsley, formerly owner of the Nestor Company, but now one of the principal officers of the Universal:

"Baumann has attempted to withdraw New York Motion Picture Company from the Universal Film Manufacturing Co.," the telegram ran. "This cannot be done as all transfers have been legally made and as a friend would advise you to stand pat in this dispute until a settlement is reached with him. You are too heavily interested in this matter to take any chances. Not knowing your attitude the board of directors have appointed W. G. Gilmore to take over full charge of the property in your possession pending assurance of your loyalty in this company. Cooperate with Gilmore and keep on making pictures and do not allow anyone to sway your judgment. Protect your own interests by following my advice, acknowledge receipt of this telegram at once, accept my assurance that you will be fully protected if you act in full faith to your own and our interests; do not forget that you personally signed papers consenting to transfer."

About the time Balshofer received the foregoing telegram Gilmore arrived at the Bison offices armed with documents authorizing him on behalf of the directors of the Universal Company to take possession.

His first act was to discharge Fred Mace, the new director of the second Imp Company recently organized since the Universal combine was formed. Then, according to Balshofer, he began firing men right and left. Balshofer refused to recognize Gilmore's authority, ordered him out of the place and cancelled the orders he had given. Mace was authorized by Balshofer to organize at once an army of defense.

Messages were sent to Santa Monica summoning about two score of the rough-and-ready cowpunchers who have been working in the Western pictures. Most of them are men who love a fight above anything else and are supposed to be thoroughly loyal to Balshofer and Ince. The revolvers and rifles in which they have been accustomed to fire blank cartridges were loaded with steel-jacketed bullets. They were divided into two parties, one for the Edendale offices and the other for the Santa Monica studios, and each party was divided into three watches, eight hours each.

These preparations were the answer to a statement made by Gilmore before he left the offices to the effect that he would assemble a sufficient force to take possession of the Bison plant under the authority delegated to him. It must not be forgotten that the Nestor company has also been making Western pictures and that it has a force of rough riders fully as large and at least as determined as the Bison's.

To add to the excitement the police, anticipating trouble, have assembled reserves ready for duty on a moment's notice.

"We signed an agreement to become a party to the new syndicate, but the deal never went so far as a bill of sale, and we believe it within our rights to withdraw if we want to," is the way Balshofer sizes up the situation. "At any rate we shall make the attempt, and we'll hold our property against invasion until the courts rule against us. As the matter now stands a number of our performers are still unpaid for the past week. They resent the action of the association and are with us to a man."

Unless there should be a clash between the two contending forces the next development in the situation is likely to be postponed until the arrival of W. M. Swanson, secretary of the Universal Company, who is now speeding toward Los Angeles as fast as trains can travel.

Naturally the latest dissension among the Independents is doing the Independent exhibitors no good. The recent split in the Sales Company, which resulted in the Universal and Film Supply factions, left a good many exhibitors guessing about the effect it would all have on them. Now just as things were beginning to quiet down comes another upheaval which threatens to keep the situation stirred up all summer.

* * *

Notwithstanding the uncertainty that exists about whether Congress will pass the bill now pending which will prohibit the shipping of prize-fight films between states, motion picture men have been busy this week making preparations to photograph the two big fights that will be held in this vicinity July 4.

F. J. Balshofer has been making pictures of the training stunts of Ad Wolgast and Joe Rivers, who are to contest for the lightweight championship of the world in this city on July 4. The picture rights are reserved by Tom McCarey, the promoter, and Balshofer is merely doing the photography on contract. The actual battle will be photographed from start to finish.

Hugh C. McClung, director of the Sunset Motion Picture Co., has gone to Las Vegas, N. Mex., to operate the camera for Miles Brothers, who have the concession for the pictures of the Johnson-Flynn heavyweight championship fight Independence Day.

* * *

Gaston Melies and the members of the Melies Company, which has been working in the northern part of this state, have come down to Santa Catalina Island for an indefinte stay and have been making pictures there for ten days.

Mr. Melies was so much impressed with the island, embodying as it does everything required in the way of mountain and sea for outdoor work, that he is seriously contemplating locating a studio there

In one of his recent plays Mr. Melies required the services of a couple of expert swimmers and divers. He employed Stephen Arce and Thomas Whittley, two Avalon boys to fall backward off the high steamer wharf, and it created a mild sensation among the summer resorters at Avalon when they learned that the boys had been paid $10 per tumble with full pay of rehearsals and retakes.

* * *

Dan S. Markowitz, of Los Angeles, who has been East gathering in exchanges for the new Producers' Distributing Company, came home this week, but was in town only about an hour before he started north to visit San Francisco, Portland and Seattle to line up exchanges there. It is reported that he has signed twenty-eight exchanges, but this is not directly on his authority. He will be back here again in about a week and it is announced that he will then give his attention to reviving the Fox Motion Picture Co., which is to begin making regular releases through the new distributing company.

BOOK ON LIGHT AND ILLUMINATION.

Frederick J. Drake & Company have just placed on the market a textbook titled "Modern Illumination Theory and Practice," by Horstmann & Tousley. This work contains a mass of information concerning the subject indicated by its title. Its title page declares the work to be "A handbook of practical information for the users of electric light, architects, contractors and electricians." To such it will no doubt prove of large value. The book will also be found a desirable addition to the reference library of the theater manager, though but fifteen pages out of a total of 273 are devoted directly to theater work.

Some Warm Weather Reflections

By G. F. Blaisdell.

THE staid Boston Transcript has been sadly deceived. Referring to the organization of the New York branch of the Motion Picture Exhibitors League of America, it states that the object is "to promote the welfare of the exhibitors and to fight adverse legislation." It is in doubt as to the significance of the term "adverse," and wonders whether it is to apply to the showmen's interest or not. "It would be well that the motion picture men have in mind, partly at least, the public welfare, and especially the young children, upon whose pennies so many of these shows now depend so largely," says the Transcript.

Our Boston friend may rest his soul in peace. The New York exhibitor knows, and thoroughly knows, that the public welfare is his welfare; also he has in mind the children, who are now by statute debarred from attending, unaccompanied by an older person, picture shows in the afternoon. "Adverse legislation," as used by the exhibitors, does not mean legislation inimical to the public interest. It means legislation distinctly in private interest—questionable private interest. The public of New York need have no fear of the organized exhibitors. Interests are mutual.

* * *

So May Buckley has left the pictures and returned to the speaking stage! The screen can ill spare her. The thousands who have been charmed by Miss Buckley's clever, intelligent work in the few months she has been in the studio will much regret her departure. This is the second star Lubin patrons have lost recently. We refer, of course, to Florence Lawrence, the wholesome, the lively—vivacious, if you like that term better—and always interesting.

It is, of course, a difficult matter to estimate the pecuniary value of a motion picture star to the employing company. It is far different with the speaking actor, whose employer can form a comprehensive estimate of his drawing power, in dollars and cents. With the determination of the value of the silent actor it is more a matter of judgment, unaided by the receipts of a single box office. Practically all picture companies now admit, indirectly if not directly, the business asset that lies in the popularity of the individual member of the company, and enhance that popularity by all the agencies of publicity to which they have access. The one conspicuous exception, the one manufacturer who has denied to his actors the publicity, the credit, the fame, justly their due, would undoubtedly have gone further and fared better had he pursued a course more in keeping with that of his competitors.

The day has not yet come when a theatrical company can with profit be conducted on the lines of a daily newspaper—and the great journals are more and more featuring their stars by printing their names over their articles. Who will deny that this does not lend interest to the stories and as a corollary prestige to the newspaper printing them?

The public has a natural and proper interest in knowing who writes a play and in the names of the principals appearing in it on the screen. The manufacturer who recognizes this as a fact is not penny wise; neither is he pound foolish.

* * *

The Elephant Butte Dam, the ten-million-dollar irrigation project in the Rio Grande country, is being filmed in the various stages of its construction. The Selig Company on June 27 released 250 feet of most interesting pictures of this great work, said to be the largest and most costly irrigation undertaking in the world's history. This short film is of especial value and interest by reason of the unique method adopted to secure the film—the placing of a camera in one of the great aerial trams used as a conveyor of excavated material. The result was that a spectator practically viewed the work thus far done on this mammoth storage reservoir as though he were placed in a low-lying captive balloon and towed over the many acres already under the shovel. When this mass of masonry, in bulk exceeding three United States Capitols, shall have been finally assembled, the film maker will be able to condense into a thousand-foot reel a photographic record of marvelous interest and incalculable educational value for this generation, but of even greater for the next.

* * *

Speaking before the St. Louis Medical Society recently, Dr. W. C. G. Kirchner and Dr. Given Campbell said that in a few years a motion picture apparatus will form a part of the equipment of every up-to-date medical college. The doctors' statements were fortified by several films showing the action of bacilli in the blood. "Moving pictures can be used to replace vivisection for experimental purposes and demonstration to students," said Dr. Kirchner. "Students will be better able to investigate the methods of great surgeons if they have a practical demonstration of their methods on canvas before them than if they merely are given a description."

* * *

At a recent meeting in Lincoln, Neb., of the social service committee of the Men and Religion Forward Movement a committee of three was named to report on the advisability of establishing moving picture shows, to be run under the direction of the churches. As this Forward Movement is of nation-wide scope, this action is of large interest to the picture industry.

* * *

Colonel Samuel Hughes, Canadian minister of militia and defense, has taken steps to supply the various militia and cadet training camps this month with motion pictures. As the men have been deprived of their time-honored "canteen," it is the aim of the minister to so fill with wholesome entertainment those evening hours when militiamen are most inclined to skylark that the absence of the former supply of "joy water" will be more than compensated. Forty thousand men will be entertained.

* * *

Why is it that nine out of every ten motion picture actors will, when opening an envelope, throw on the floor the initial strip or pieces and then, when the message is extracted, follow by also consigning the envelope to the floor?

It may be the drawing-room of a mansion; there may be at hand a table; but to the floor the cluttering pieces go. It is safe to say the same actors would not dream of doing anything like this in their own homes. If they did it is likewise safe to say the officiating female authority would very quickly put down her foot—and start something if her protest were unheeded. It should be the aim of the moving picture director to teach the niceties of life in all matters of daily intercourse, both great and small; it also should be his aim to avoid the slovenly and careless. The majority of those who behold the pictured interiors of mansions and who closely follow the behavior and manners of those who are portrayed as living in them rarely if ever see the prototypes of these representations on the screen.

* * *

The local borough council of Pleasantville, N. J., has been advised by its solicitor that it has no authority to pass an ordinance prohibiting the Sunday operation of picture theaters, in view of the State law, which imposes a fine of but $1 for such exhibition. One councilman, who thinks he is representing a majority of the townspeople, says he will give his people the satisfaction of seeing the proprietor of the local show arrested and fined on every Monday following a Sunday exhibition. It is well that councilmen in Pleasantville are not elected for life.

THE LUBIN CRACK STOCK COMPANY GOES TO MAINE.

The No. 1 Lubin Stock Company, under the management of General Director Barry O'Neil, left Philadelphia yesterday for Portland, Maine, where they will spend the summer. The personnel of the troupe is as follows:

Barry O'Neil, general director; Harry Myers, Chas. Arthur, Peter Lang, Richard Morris, Martin J. Faust, M. Shannon Fife, Cap. Towers, Paul Figel, P. J. McCaffrey, Miss Ethel Clayton, Mrs. George W. Walters, Mrs. E. Middleton, Mrs. Florrie Lang, Miss Marie Wierman, Miss Anna Berry, Miss Bessie Stuart, Miss Mabel Harris, Miss Beatrice Oldfield, Miss Mildred Gregory, Mrs. Lynch and child, 3 carpenters, 2 property men and 3 chauffeurs compose the mechanical force, making thirty in all.

Three touring automobiles are carried and ten complete sets of interior scenery and props. The railroad equipment for the journey consists of two standard Pullman coaches, one day coach and three baggage cars. On arriving at Portland, the company will take possession of a large tract of land, a yacht and a yawl which have been chartered for the season.

A EUROPEAN PURCHASER IS HERE.

J. Vermeulen, Paris, France, is in this country to secure negatives of high class American films. He expects to purchase quite a number, but states that it will all depend on the quality. We also understand that he will not buy at all unless he can secure absolute right for all countries outside of North America. Mr. Vermeulen has been four times around the world and has taken moving pictures himself in the heart of Africa and in other localities where the moving picture camera had never been before. He may be addressed for the next few weeks at the Hotel Wellington, 55th Street and Seventh Avenue, New York City. His advertisement appears on another page of this issue.

The Right Man in the Right Place

BEING A PERSONAL IMPRESSION OF THE PRESIDENT OF THE MOTION PICTURE EXHIBITORS' LEAGUE OF AMERICA. OPINIONS OF THE MAN FORMED DURING HIS RECENT SUCCESSFUL VISIT TO NEW YORK.

AN is everything. Men are nothing." So said a famous general of history, in speaking of what really counts in war. The comparison holds good to a greater or less degree in all walks of life. For a number of years the exhibitors of this free and glorious (if you say it quick) country, have been writhing under a stigma. Naked to promiscous enemies, these men have galled beneath the yoke of fanatical oppression. Like a huge elephant that knows not its own strength, the great body of American exhibitors has suffered itself to be led along by a pigmy, and so far has been able to do nothing more than squeal in vain at every prod of the vicious hook. If an elephant knew his strength, no man could lead him around by the nose. No horse could be made to perform the prodigious labor that he does if he had but an inkling of his physical superiority over the man that goads him. The principal reason that dumb cattle submit to the yoke of man is because they have no head.

Such a creature has been the great enterprise, which may be called the retail division of the moving picture business. The exhibitors as a whole have been as some great and powerful yet impotent creature without a thinking apparatus. The retail motion picture business has been without a head for some years, waiting for the proper man to step forth. Great salt tears have trickled down the face of the helpless exhibitor as he felt the goad of the political pigmy who drove him on. Yet he obeyed. Because he did not have a head and did not know his strength. He could have crushed the oppressor at a stroke, exactly as the elephant could easily destroy its keeper.

Exhibitors everywhere for some years have agreed with each other that such a state of things was deplorable and that something ought to be done. Somebody should start something, somehow, somewhere, and put an end to the oppression of petty reformers and salaried busybodies. They knew in a vague way that they were big and strong as a mass, and they had a faint realization that they had no head. All hands agreed that some exhibitor should rise from the ranks and lead them out of the wilderness. They even cast about a number of times to find him without avail. The cap was tried on a number of men, but it did not fit. But at last, when everything pointed to indefinite serfdom for the exhibitor, the MAN appeared.

A leader arose from the ranks. Nobody sent for him, but everybody was looking for him. He himself was looking for the leader until one day, like the "Ernest" of Nathaniel Hawthorne's "Great Stone Face," he realized that he was the man that all were looking for. Many had expected the Moses to come from a far distance, like a conquering hero. But from the common ranks, one M. A. Neff arose, and he proved to be like the man that Hawthorne wrote of.

Before Mr. Neff came to New York, we had heard of him through his work in connection with the Exhibitors' League of America and were duly impressed with the results which he had brought about. Those were results that no other man had ever accomplished or attempted to accomplish. We had gained the impression that he was rather an amiable sort of person, but we did not envy him his job. We, like others, recognized him as the national leader, because there were no other claimants for the honor. Being accustomed to surveying the debris of many losing battles with grafters and reformers, his voice away out there in Ohio sounded to us like a faint weak cry from the wilderness. Everybody gave him the credit of having good intentions, but it did not seem that this modern David would ever be able to lay low the colossal Goliath of graft.

These thoughts we had because we did not know M. A. Neff. We had never come in contact with that extraordinary personal magnetism of his that gathers adherents closely to him wherever he goes. He has the one great quality that every leader must have—personality. Men are attracted by him. They are convinced by him, and they follow him in faith. In this amiable, golden-haired, blue-eyed, six-footed gentleman, exhibitors have found the leader that must and always will spring from the ranks of the oppressed.

He radiates energy. When he comes around things begin to hum. One bright Monday morning, a couple of weeks ago, Mr. Neff announced over the telephone that he was in New York, and would be at the World office in five minutes. Things were quiet before he came, but after he arrived, everybody was on the jump for a week. He had everyone hustling before they realized that they were working their heads off for the Exhibitors League of America. All hands seemed to enjoy going to the greatest pains to please him. Why? Nobody knows. He did not give any orders or intimate in any way that he wanted this or that. It was simply that his hustling personality was contagious and made folks want to work.

M. A. NEFF

(Caricature from life by Hugh Hoffman)

While Mr. Neff was in this office, a New Jersey exhibitor happened to straggle in with trouble written on his face. Over in West Hoboken, after enjoying years of Sunday business, the exhibitors there had suddenly been deprived of that profitable day, and this exhibitor, whose name is G. N. Robinson, came to the World office to see if he could not get the New Jersey exhibitors together by inserting a notice in this publication. Something better than that was done for Mr. Robinson. He was at once turned over to President Neff, of the national organization, and things began to hum. Before the sun had set that day, typewritten letters were in the mails and on their way to exhibitors in every part of New Jersey, appointing a special day later in the week when Mr. Neff would take time from his work of organizing the New York exhibitors, to rush across to Jersey and put the breath of life into an institution that New Jersey had long been praying for—a state association.

Three days later, Mr. Neff, by the force of his argument and oratory, accomplished, in two hours' time, what New Jersey exhibitors themselves had been unable to do for several years. He perfected a state organization on a truly business basis and affiliated it with the national organization. On Monday of that week they had been doing nothing but despair among the exhibitors of New Jersey. He left them the following Thursday with fresh hope and courage and with a determination to get down to business and wipe out, once and for all, the obnoxious interference of petty politicians.

Such is M. A. Neff as we saw him. He put in four days in New York City and vicinity and accomplished more things in those four days than any other man single-handed could have accomplished in a year. That is putting it rather strong, but there are few exhibitors who have met him who will doubt that statement. He is the born leader that has risen from the ranks to lead the exhibitor out of the wilderness. Through his efforts we predict that the Chicago convention will be a tremendously successful affair, and it can be further prophesied that after the Chicago convention, Mr. M. A. Neff will be the dominant figure in the motion picture business of America. H. F. Hoffman.

Advertising for Exhibitors

Conducted by EPES WINTHROP SARGENT.

The Universal Weekly.

QUITE the most pretentious advertising matter that has come to this department is The Universal Weekly, the house organ of the new Universal Film Company: indeed we think it almost too pretentious to prove profitable. The last issue to hand (the third), is thirty-six pages with a cover in two colors and the cut forms in two-tone ink. The idea of the large issue seems to be the provision of a full page advertisement for each Universal release, which shall have no advertisement on the back and serve the purpose of a poster-bulletin, an idea first advanced by the Vitagraph in the defunct Film Index and abandoned by them because they found that their self-printed bi-weekly bulletin would not cut the poster sales. We are afraid that this adventure in advertising will prove more costly, in proportion to the return yielded, than the promoters realize.

There is a large quantity of interesting general matter, that seeks to give the sheet the semblance of a general publication, but the necessary limitation of the matter to Universal interests will defeat this end and it would be better to come frankly forth as an advertising sheet and give the very best advertising service possible to the exhibitor. A capital start has been made in this direction already, but we would suggest an extension of the service.

Our Own Idea.

Of course everyone can raise your baby better than you can yourself. We've had a very personal realization of this fact in the past ten days, but this seems to be a good chance to get square for our own long-suffering listening to advice, and this is what we would do:

We would, by all means, continue the personal note, in a given number of pages, with editorial chat, an intimate talk of the coming releases not yet dated, advices of the good things in preparation and a running story on the releases covered by the current issue. We would have as much personal gossip of the players; not press stuff, but real talk, and a condensed catalogue of all advertising matter to be had of the company or supplied for Universal releases by the advertising specialty companies such as the Jacobs concern. This would list sizes and prices, the number of colors in the printing and all other information. We would use a page each for the various releases, giving a large cut and a condensed story and eliminating the date (which would appear in the calendar) and possibly giving a vignette margin portrait cut of some leading player as is done by the Vitagraph and Selig companies. These pages would be scored by perforating rule that they might be removed without destroying the permanent records. We would also offer a supplement printed one side only on cheap news paper in a plain eight or ten point body, leaded. In this supplement we would give one long story of each release and from three to five shorter advance stories of from six to ten lines each, some press squibs relating to the release in a general way and advance squibs for coming star releases with now and then a half of three-quarter column story on some general topic close to the product of the company. This matter would all be written in newspaper; not in press agent style and would be of a sort that any average editor would be glad to make use of without correction. All extravagant claims and flamboyant adjectives should be eliminated and all matter should be in straight newspaper style.

The Universal can be of wonderful benefit to the business of its constituent companies if only it gives the exhibitor what he really needs.

Press Work for Exhibitors.

Few of the exhibitors are what the English call "showmen," a title that on this side of the water is reserved for circus and small enterprises. Many have had no theatrical training and the majority of those who have served their apprenticeship have handled the managerial rather than the press end and cannot now afford the services of a really good press man. For that matter there are few press men, even when they have had newspaper training, who can stick to newspaper style when they do press work. We have handled the copy of most of the leading press men in the theatrical business and know what we are talking about, and yet it is a simple matter to write straight stuff; the sort of copy that will go to the printer with comparatively few blue pencil marks.

Not ten per cent. of the exhibitors can write this sort of press copy and yet, did they have it they could easily "plant" it with the papers through the simple process of offering it to the editors, possibly with a little argument as to the interest felt in the pictures by a majority of the readers. There are times when a clever line about King Baggot will do the Imp Company greater good than the announcement that they are preparing "the most stupendously spectacular and glitteringly glorious three-reel tragedy of terrifically thrilling incident" not that the Imp Company sends out that sort of stuff, but just as a forinstance. Give the exhibitor the right sort of stuff, tell him what to do with it and at once thousands of unpaid press agents are created for the product, whether that product be the Universal, the Film Supply or the Edison licensees.

Of the thirty odd companies releasing just one does regulation newspaper press work and does it properly.

What the Marple's Doing.

The Marple is giving five-cent spoons for a five-cent admission for one thing. The Marple is in Wichita, Kansas, and Manager William Barrie writes:

> We have tried everything—in and out of season—to get the people in, with varying success. The best thing we have tried is the time-worn spoon matinee. We hold a spoon matinee every Tuesday when all ladies in attendance are given spoons as souvenirs. It has made a very appreciable difference in the weekly receipts. The spoons cost us five cents (which is our admission price) and lots of managers don't see how we can make money giving the show practically free, but the receipts tell the story and we regard the spoons as so much advertising. We regard it as better than a similar sum spent with the newspapers since, if it rains, and the audience is small, we have the spoons for another time and do not lose their effect. The advertising stays good until it is used.

That's one way to look at it, but we do not like the argument that advertising in the newspapers does good only on the day the advertisement appears. Newspaper advertising is cumulative and the man who would like to come today and doesn't may figure that if the Marple had such a good show last week, when the advertising appeared, the chances are that they always have a good show and will drop in when he gets a chance. If advertising is large enough to be seen, the effect sticks, even though spoons form a more direct advertisement.

If the spoon matinee is a permanent feature we think that the Marple could beat the price and get a special spoon into the bargain. The Proctor theatres used a coffee spoon for a matinee attraction that cost about three and a half cents, if we remember correctly, and carried the circuit design in the bowl in the fashion of souvenir spoons. They were made in a large factory when business fell off and something was needed to keep the machines going to capacity. When nothing else offered they took up the spoons. Almost any large concern will be glad to take an order for fifty or hundred gross lots and give a good article.

More About Columbus.

The Marple also sends it suit of newspaper stuff on the Coming of Columbus. It makes a rather direct appeal to Americanism but does it effectively and without the noise that some might make. There is also a good proportion of press clips, showing that they know how to get after the reading notices based on the Selig Company's press sheet, which, by the way, was produced by Stanley H. Twist, their publicity manager. It is as good a showing as we have seen from a city of the size of Wichita. It's an almost invariable rule that the smaller the town the larger the showing, and Wichita is not a pygmy.

The Marple is playing up the engagement of a local band as orchestra and is flooding the section with placards of various sorts, one card reading:

MEET YOUR WIFE AND KIDDIES AT THE MARPLE
AND HEAR HARRY FRANK'S ORCHESTRA
5c

The cards are diamond shape in various colors and the chances are that any card of that size and shape will suggest the Marple for some time to come.

Some Coming Edisons.

No doubt you have seen the article in this paper for June 29th, giving the details of the Edison Company's deal with the McClure Periodicals to release Bannister Merwin's What Happened to Mary simultaneously with the publication of the same stories in The Ladies' World. The full details will be found on page 1212 of the issue of two weeks ago.

Here is a story that appears on the screen the very day the original appears in the McClure publication. If you are on the licensed side you are getting the advertisement that the paper carries and as the series will be of unusual interest because of contest features it bids fair to be the best advertised series of films ever produced. It would pay you to arrange for a dated run on this and boom it heavily. Get your local newsdealers or those in your vicinity to carry cards that What Happened to Mary will be pictured at your house on a certain date, and get the papers interested as well. You are given the national booming free. Look after your local end. The first story "The Escape from Bondage" will be released July 26th.

The Relief of Lucknow, done in Bermuda with appropriate tropical environment and with the assistance of the Queen's Own (Second Battalion, Queen's Regiment), will come the 27th and the 31st offers a visualized poem by James Whitcomb Riley—When She Was About Sixteen—done largely in landscape backings. Do a little extra work for these and get much extra money.

That Kalem Music.

We have received from the Kalem Company their score for Tragedy in the Desert. It is process printed, but it is printed with all the clearness of copper plate work and should not be confounded with the indistinct mimeograph work that has sometimes been put out. There are twenty-five pages in the score and it's about the biggest bargain in music we have seen in a long time. When you can get a twenty-five page score of special music at a cent a page, you're cheating yourself if you do not get these special issues in advance and make your pianist familiarize herself or himself with the music before the reel reaches you. The Kalem Company is making a specialty of music for the notable reels and you can make Kalem musical nights an inexpensive special feature that should show a tremendous profit. And this isn't an advertisement for the company. It's good advice to you.

Watch for a Selig.

Last month the Selig Company entertained the visiting members of the National Press Association and let them be the mob for a coming release. Watch for the announcement and as soon as you get the date tell your editor. He'll be interested in seeing what the other fellows look like and what they did. If he was among those present he'll be still more interested. It is up to you to see that his interest passes on to your other pictures. Go get him.

And in London.

And from E. H. Montagu, their London representative, comes a bulletin that he's proud of. It's a modest pride and a justifiable one, for it is better than his usual good average.

Perhaps you can use this for The Love of an Island Maid:

> A picture that will hold from beginning to end. Photographed on one of the most picturesque of the little islands in the Pacific. A picture that would be bought for its scenic and photographic value alone. Yet it contains—more thrills than many a sensational melodrama.
>
> HOBART BOSWORTH at his BEST.
> BESSIE EYTON at her BEST.
>
> BOOK THIS for it will please on the hottest of July days. It makes one cool to see the beautiful tropical beach and rippling water.

"Monty" even dips into the Arabian classics for a double page advertisement cleverly twisted and contributes a motto that every exhibitor should take to heart when he remarks: "We don't boom every film, but only those that we know are sure winners," which is a good policy in any line.

We also acknowledge a set of unusually fine postcards of the Selig favorites.

Wesley Wakes Up.

Wesley, who sometimes "says no" when he isn't fast asleep, as he has been for the past month, contributes a folder on the line of the Arcade's How Washington Crossed the Delaware. His first page reads:

HOW WE LOSE
OUR PATRONS.

and inside the answer, in a mourning border, explains:

THEY DIE.

Mr. Wesley also contributes a press clipping relative to the adoption of a motion picture machine by the Brotherhood of the Gardner Congregational Church. The gradual adoption of the machines by churches is one of the best advertisements the theatres can have. Why not get after your churches. If you have two machines send one over to the church some night with a special program and an operator. It will cost a little money, but not as much as you will get back.

A Musical Program.

The Roosevelt Theatre, Oxnard, California, seems to find a special musical night on Friday useful in building business on that off night. A five-piece orchestra plays the pictures and a special program as well. They use a cheap circular but word them well. One special line announces that which is a good variant to the usual Vitagraph announcements.

JOHN BUNNY WILL SUPPLY THE COMEDY.

All over the musical features seem to have replaced the vaudeville acts as an added attraction with a resultant saving in expense and an added taking at the box office.

Pans and Pictures.

We are indebted to the Charles L. Kiewert Company, makers of the Bio carbons, for a copy of the Cream City Ware Champion, an advertising publication edited by R. P. Spencer for a firm of manufacturers of enamel ware. In a way it is similar to this department in that it educates the handlers of its wares in advertising and one article in the issue sent treats a new phase of picture advertising.

On the general principle that anything that advertises the pictures advertises your house, why not pass the article along to a local merchant? It will help you. Mr. Spencer says:

> "There's money in moving pictures for the dealers, particularly for those in the smaller towns. We don't mean that you should become an exhibitor—we mean that you should take advantage of the motion picture's popularity as a trade winner.
>
> "There is hardly a woman who is not a photoplay fan, and free tickets to a photoplay theater have a big and wide appeal. The scheme can be worked in two ways:
>
> "Make a practice of giving a free ticket with purchases of a certain amount on some one day of each week, or, do this only occasionally and advertise widely the fact that you are going to give these free tickets on a certain date.
>
> "A good way to handle either of these schemes is to have coupons printed. On one side give a little sales talk. One the other side state that this coupon entitles the holder to one free admission to the Blank Theater, if the coupon is brought to the store on such and such a date and a purchase of 25 cents, or more, is made. You will be surprised at the results surprised to learn how eager people are to get free tickets to a show.
>
> "The fact that the admission price is only 5 and 10 cents will not act against the success of the scheme. There is nothing appeals so much as a free ticket to a show—even if it's only a moving picture show!
>
> "You can probably make some arrangement with your favorite picture theater to furnish tickets in certain quantities at less than the usual price of admission. Possibly you can get tickets in return for trade, which makes their cost still less.
>
> "Space on curtains and the use of lantern slides are good advertising mediums—if used right. Merely giving your name and stating that you sell hardware—or whatever it is—will have absolutely no business-getting effect whatever.
>
> "Use a leader. Take some article and quote a low price on it. Arouse the bargain instinct, and you make curtain and lantern slide advertising effective. Change your advertisement frequently. You can afford the extra cost because of increased effectiveness.
>
> "Another scheme is to give cards or circulars at the entrance of a photoplay theater which carry an offer of free pictures of the favorite players. Most of the film manufacturers now sell photogravures of their players. As the price of these is 25 to 50 cents each, this offer can be made to induce sales of from $2 up. You can even put a border of figures about the card you distribute and punch out amount of purchases. Then when the required amount is reached you can order the picture desired. Not all film companies sell pictures of their players, and particularly true is this of the Biograph Company, which will not even reveal the names of their players, so be sure to stipulate that photogravures desired must be of players of those film companies which sell pictures. Ask the manager of your favorite picture theater to get you a list of these film companies from his exchange. If he shows licensed pictures he can only get you information regarding the licensed film companies. See the manager of a house showing independent pictures regarding list of independent companies selling pictures of their players.
>
> "No doubt if you and the proprietor or manager of some picture theater will get together you can hatch up some good scheme which, because of the restrictions in the scope of this article, could not be given in The Champion."

You Know It's the Isis.

Last winter the Isis Theater, Denver, or rather its designer, took exception to our suggestion that the holiday cover of their compact little folder did not clearly convey the name. To show what they can do they send a new cover design consisting of the name of the theatre run nine times. The centre is a large I-S-I-S with the letters running down the page and each letter containing the full word in green (the cover color) on red. This is framed in two smaller names across the page and two running up and down. It's good because you simply can't help knowing it's the Isis. Inside is the weekly calendar and this arrangement on the back page:

Going Some.

A Philadelphia theater lines its lobby with sets of photographs of the players of the various companies, and proudly announces "Our Big Stock Company." This smacks too strongly of museum advertising. There is a better return where the players and their companies are named. Everyone knows that the photoplay theaters do not maintain stock companies, and this broad claiming of the entire Licensed establishment is apt to create an impression the reverse of favorable. There is the suggestion that a house that will make such a statement will be equally careless in other matters of conduct, and many will look at the pictures and pass on who might otherwise enter. The store that is always "Selling out at cost" makes money, but it seldom makes as much money as the established places where the suggestion of square dealing is conveyed through the air of permanency.

SELIG COMPANY WILL RELEASE TUBERCULOSIS FILM ON JULY 22.

What promises to be one of the most interesting and at the same time most effective moving pictures yet released will be Selig's single reel subject of July 22. It is entitled "On the Trail of the Germs," and deals in an interesting simple way with the great problem of tuberculosis or, as it is commonly called, "The Great White Plague." This film was produced with the aid of, and under the auspices of The Chicago Tuberculosis Institute, which has won a great deal of credit for its effective work toward the eradication of the dreaded disease. In "The Trail of the Germs" great care has been taken to handle this all important subject in a technically correct, and absorbingly interesting dramatic manner, and it presents many exceedingly interesting side lights on the prevention and cure of tuberculosis.

Just received from the press—"TECHNIQUE OF THE PHOTOPLAY." Fifty pages of valuable instruction and suggestions on scenario writing for both experts and beginners. On sale at One Dollar per Copy by MOVING PICTURE WORLD. Send order at once, as supply is limited. Box 226, Madison Sq. Station, New York City.

The PHOTOPLAYWRIGHT

CONDUCTED BY EPES WINTHROP SARGENT

What Is a Story?

JUST what is your idea of a story. Of course any narrative of incident, in a sense, a story, but we mean a good story. If we leave our office and go to the post office for our mail, coming back to our desk to answer the correspondence, that's a story, the story of how we went to the post office. It's a story, but it is not an interesting one.

Suppose, though, that we started for the mail. On the corner we run into Louis Reeves Harrison, who is telling a photoplay editor what he thinks of him for not taking his last script. We've had a few scripts turned down by the same editor, so we listen with approval while Harrison scalds the man who does not know a good photoplay when it is thrust at him.

The argument grows more bitter and suddenly Harrison sticks a stiletto eleven and a half inches into the photoplay editor's most essential vital organ, thrusts the knife into our hand and goes into the corner saloon to get a drink and establish an alibi.

There we stand, a knife in our hand and an eleven and a half inch hole in the heart of a man who sent back three of our pet scripts the day before. Naturally the police take us into custody and as we pull away from the scene of carnage our wife comes along, thinks it is all too true and throws herself in front of a handy trolley car just as the patrol wagon turns the corner and we can see no more.

But Harrison cannot resist gloating over his revenge (remember we left him in a saloon), so he brags about it, the police catch him and let us go, it turns out that the trolley car was stopped in time and just as we come down the steps of the station house we meet our wife coming up the steps with a basket of pie and a box of cigars. There is a splendid scene on the steps and the picture is out.

Isn't that a lot more interesting than just going for the mail and coming back to the office? Both are stories, but one is a STORY.

Which kind do you write? Stories or STORIES?

And look here. If you were writing this story would you put in that first trip to the post office—when nothing happened—or would you start where the real story starts, when we run into our hated enemy being called down? A lot of people we know would start the story by showing us getting out of bed, shaving, dressing, eating breakfast, catching the trolley to the office, getting there, cussing because the janitor forgot to empty the waste paper basket, leaving the office, going up the street and then—at last—the meeting with Harrison and our common enemy.

That's no way to start a story. Start when the real story starts.

There are others who, after that pathetic scene on the steps would have us go after the mail. and would run on with the trial and eventual acquittal of Harrison on the grounds of Emotional Insanity and Justifiable Homicide.

That's no way to end a story. Stop when the story you are telling ends.

It would be as reasonable and as logical to string it out for another reel and show Harrison being crowned with laurel at the dinner of the photoplaywrights.

The point is that this is a story about how we went for the mail, not about Harrison.

After you are certain you have a big story, decide just what that particular story is. Start it where it starts and stop the second you come to the finish. That's what Harrison and the rest of the stars do and that's why they don't have to stick knives in editors or even feel like doing so.

The Prize Contest Scheme.

Mark it down on the tablets of your memory and write it large upon the desk that when someone wants to give you something for nothing that there is a bee lodged somewhere in the proposition and you are liable to be stung. And the largest and busiest bee of the hive buzzes around the Prize Contest scheme.

We have no quarrel with the Powers Prize Contest. We do not refer to the prizes offered by any established manufacturer having a connection with the Patents Company, the Sales Company or the Film Supply. These are contests conducted by responsible persons whose aim is to pay a little more for high-grade stuff and get the best stories coming to their studio first. That is what they are willing to pay the prize for. It is legitimate.

But there are other contests that are run by correspondence schools and script selling bureaus—generally they are both—that are little short of frauds, and it is the meanest, cheapest sort of swindle because the novice, often an ambitious boy or girl with little money, is led on and on through the lying statements and glowing, but elusive promises to spend money in the hope of obtaining a prize that eventually will probably be paid to some dummy of the company.

Way back last November $200 were offered in prizes by a concern out West that sells books, correspondence courses, scripts and sometimes typewriter paper. Three weeks ago an inquiry by one of the contestants developed the fact that they had thirty contest scripts still in their possession, three or four of which were eventually to split the $200. After eight months they are still not ready to make a decision and meantime thirty authors have been deprived the use of their scripts; accepting the statement that only thirty are still retained. The top prize is $100 and the chances are that it will go to some favored contestant since the company is the judge and jury as well as paymaster.

Now comes another prize scheme for which some shortsighted exhibitors are acting as agents. A slide or a lobby poster calls attention to the contest and urges the reader to get a circular. This contest has closed, or is announced to have closed, but others will swing into line.

All will use the same glowing lines about literary experience not being necessary, some of them will cite the fact that a hundred dollars will be paid to authors and all will suggest that photoplay writing is about the easiest and slickest way of being able to buy out Andrew Carnegie by next fall.

The usual crop of the credulous will flock in and the bleeding will commence. They will be told that their scripts are good, quite likely to win one of the prizes; in fact, ONLY it doesn't happen to be in proper form. It is suggested that "How to become Criminally Rich by writing Photoplays" at $1.50 will enable the author to gain an idea of proper form, and the gudgeon parts with the currency. Then he is told that typewritten scripts are necessary. It will cost him from one to two dollars to have this done—but it looks pretty much as though the first prize would be his. Two dollars is not much with a hundred in sight and the victim falls again. Perhaps he is told to study the course costing from $5 to $20 and then comes what the professional gambler calls the "blow off." Dear friend victim didn't get the prize, but the company hopes he will not be discouraged and for a fee he can register as a member of the sales bureau and they'll sell the story for him. He registers and then comes the dusk of the gods—only you say it in German. Meantime the schools looks for fresh victims, possibly under another name.

Accept these facts: (1) You pay for all you get—or expect to get. (2) The prizes come out of your pocket—if they are paid. (3) The entry may be made without cost, but it will cost you more than it is worth to stay in.

There is one born every minute. Why be one of them?

That Lubin Western.

Several authors have made inquiry about the Lubin Los Angeles studio. Karl R. Coolidge, the photoplay editor for that section, writes that Harry A. Kelly had the unreturned scripts the last he saw of them and that the studio was closed with a suddenness that was saddening.

Our understanding of the matter is that the Lubin Company had first right on the product of this studio, but no financial responsibility. The only thing to do is to go around whistling "Has anybody here seen Kelly?" and if they have located him. Several of the Los Angeles studios make negatives to sell to companies having trade outlets, but we think it is a good scheme to send scripts only to the recognized photoplay editors of the companies. The recent closure of the Fox Company seems to have tied up many scripts. The only thing to do in such a case is to send the formal notification to the last address and copy the carbon for submission to other companies.

Warren Resting Up.

Giles R. Warren, of the Victor Company, has gone to Asbury Park for a few weeks' rest, after the hustle of getting things in shape for the new company. He leaves his assistant in charge.

Look at This.

We have had numerous requests for information as to Pacific Motion Picture Company. It would seem that this advertisement from a Los Angeles paper does not accord with the idea of a high grade states rights productions.

> Moving picture actors in big demand. We teach well-dressed ladies and gentlemen. Small fee charged for instruction. Pacific Motion Picture Company, 1614 West Temple street.

No company that runs a coaching school in connection with its enterprise can turn out the high standard of acting demanded of these special releases.

Now He's a Thirty-Third.

One of the regular contributors to this department has raised himself to the purple of the fraternity and hereby is created a Thirty-third (and last) Degree photoplaywright. He has found the lost word and now is entitled to come in with the rest of the Class A writers as soon as he wants to qualify.

For some time he has been telling his troubles to our attentive ear and we gave what help we could and waited, because we know that no man is made a photoplaywright from without but from within. He wrote good average scripts, he prepared his copy in accordance with the rules and he was careful to put on sufficient postage, not forgetting to put the return envelope stamps on a number ten and that in a number eleven cover. All these things, and more, he did but Success skipped three miles northwest by east of his permanent address and he wondered. We let him wonder because we knew that in the course of time the answer would come, as it has come to every practised writer since the first stone age scribe picked up the chisel and the maul, and so when he writes as he does below we welcome him into the fold. Listen to his words of wisdom:

> I've just found out what the matter with my scripts is. All my unsuccessful scripts fail because they are no good. That sounds foolish, but it is as true as can be. I have spent three days analyzing the stuff I am sending the rounds. One in five is fresh. The rest are the usual beginner line of photoplays. A person has to write a while before he gets that. His ideas may seem good to him, but the chances are if he writes and tries as I have been doing, that he will come to this conclusion sooner or later. You once wrote that the secret of success in writing is to keep WRITING. It is the truest thing you ever passed along. If you do keep writing you are bound to see what a fool you were to send out the half baked products of your brain. I am not writing this as pretending I am the Columbus of this particular idea, but to merely let you know I am arriving. This year is not three years ago and this month is not last month. If it was maybe some editor would be foolish enough to pay twenty-five dollars for a twenty-five-cent script. It is only by keeping abreast of the times that we are going to sell the stuff we write. I'll say this much for myself. When I started to write I picked out four companies that I liked. By that I mean four companies whose style and production seemed to best suit me. Then when I wrote a photoplay I did not send it to any of those companies unless I thought it was above the average and perhaps better than the average run. Then I shipped it in. Every time I had a good one these four companies got a crack at it, if one of them did not take it then it was passed on to the others. The rest of my stuff I tried out "on the dog," as it were. But that I do not mean that the others were no good, but that I was not so well satisfied with them. In that way I now feel that I am going to get a better hearing from these four companies for my future scripts. It may not strike you as very fair to other companies but at least it served my purpose. Now I believe I am getting a hold of the work much better and in a great measure it has been due to criticism and the rejections I received. For surely a man is a sublime egotist who can send out a dozen scripts to a dozen houses a dozen times without an acceptance and get nary a good word for them and still believe they are alright.

Now listen to this from another correspondent:

I have written several photoplays, but strange as it may seem there has been no great clamor at the studios for my stuff. Bad work as I have done, it is far better than some pictures I have viewed on the screen; in fact the poorest scenario I ever wrote has been accepted. Can you explain the reason?

That's a pretty good sample of the sort of letter we get about three times a week. "My scripts may be bad, but they are better than the product of the manufacturers."

Why? Because you think so? Who are you to decide? You have not seen your stuff on the screen. How do you know your story will look better than the stuff you see?

No man ever does good work until he realizes how rotten (there is no other word) some of his stuff is. Then he wins a sense of perspective and instead of imagining that the stuff is good because he wrote it, he realizes that some is bad—and tries to better it.

Rudyard Kipling has written some mighty poor stuff. William Shakespeare was not always at his best. Why think that you cannot write stuff that is poor? Until you do gain a sense of values you'll never begin to get ahead. You'll be too contented to strive. No man can ever properly gauge his stuff, but he can get a pretty fair idea of it.

There are certain themes that every beginner must use just as certainly as the sun rises. It is the Entered Apprentice degree of literary work of every sort. Your advancement depends upon your egotism. We welcome a new Thirty-third and look for more.

Deluged.

Hugh King Harris, who recently wrote that he had no complaints to make against editors, is paying the price of his optimism. He writes:

Really, when I wrote stating I had met with courteous treatment on the part of photoplay editors, and also that I had been successful in disposing of scripts, I had no idea the deluge would occur.

I have received letters from Lynn, Mass.; Providence, R. I.; Kalamazoo, Mich.; Norfolk, Va.; Wabash, Ind., and other places enclosing scripts for criticism, and asking for advice, and with statements of ups and down that would cause the Sphinx to sit up and take notice.

Now I have more real respect for the head of this department's duties. Believe me, all ye faithful, if Epes gets his in proportion to the way I did mine his job has lost all semblance of a cinch.

And likewise here's more pity for the editors. God bless 'em. say I. If some of the dope sent me passes for a photoplay, I don't wonder at any of the alleged reasons for rejections I have pasted on my library door. One was hand-written, dirty and scarcely legible. The writer wrote she had sent it to five editors already, and asked what was the trouble. I let her down as gently as the circumstances would allow.

It is very evident there is a great need for Technique of the Photoplay among the embryo writers, but also a greater need of good common sense. If a person can't spell, can't write decently, and won't use a typewriter, for Heaven's sake keep the way clear for those who can. The same old cry against the fake experts, the so-called "schools," etc., rises to high heaven, and some of the experiences were really of a serious nature.

However, I have been glad to extend all the courtesies I could, in my humble way, and I trust this department will continue to serve as a guiding light, to make it easier both for the man who writes and the man (or women) who reads.

Getting Her in Bad.

The other day we were invited to get interested in a script in which the heroine, in a moment of need, did a neat little job of forging without even a dress rehearsal. Even making due allowance for her inexperience we could not get vitally interested in the unfortunate lady because she was so foolish. We do not think that anyone else would have felt a great affection for her in a similar circumstance even though she did do the fancy penmanship to save herself from the clutches of a bad, bad man.

Now and then you can get interested in a heroine who, to a good end, does wrong, but as a rule the woman who commits a crime, particularly when her offense is crude, gets scant sympathy and deserves less.

Don't get your heroine "in bad" with the spectator. Keep her out of the mire. Make her sinned against but not sinning. If your story has to show her making an ass of herself write another story that doesn't—or else get around it someway. At first it may not appear that you can, but it is seldom that a plot cannot be so turned around as to present the heroine in the proper light.

You'll see lots of screened pictures that violate this rule, but that does not condone your offense. You do not have to make an error just because some directors set a bad example. Keep the heroine the simple hearted girl that is most approved and let others take chances with the othr sort.

What Do You Think?

What do you think of a correspondence school that is run by men who spell course cource. We read that correct spelling and grammatical construction are not essential to photoplay, and this is entirely correct, but we have an idea of our own as to the capacities of a man who persists in conducting a correspondence "cource." Once or twice the spelling may be an accident, but to habitually use it; the error being repeated nearly fifty times in one set of papers, argues that a Scranton course in spelling might help the photographic pedagogue.

Dressing It Up.

Ever see a cartoonist write "Cohen" on his sketch block and fill in lines until he gets a carricature of a Hebrew. He writes "Mike" and makes it into a "tad" and "Coon" and gets a negro. We know a big picture maker who was one of those fellows once, but that is not to the point. The point is that there is nothing amusing in the written name of Mr. Cohen, but when the strokes are added there is a sketch more or less amusing.

You can do something of the same sort with your scripts if you go at it right, and you can turn "just writing" into a real photoplay. It's going to be worth your while to fix things up so that the scenes appear at their best. We are going to show a few examples and leave the rest to you. Mabel is about to leave home because father will not give her a latch key. She is crossing the familiar sitting room. Here is the "Cohen" of it:

Sitting room—Mabel with bag crosses room—exits through door to yard.

Try one of these, instead:

Sitting room—Mabel enters softly, carrying bundle—crosses room—comes to chair by table at which Mother sat in earlier scene—stops—breaks—kneels and prays for a moment—kisses the headrest as though her mother's head were there—goes to door—one last look around—exits, crying softly.

Sitting room—Mabel enters on tiptoe—crosses room—pauses a moment at table—takes photo of mother from table.

On screen—photo of mother in frame, back to scene—she kisses the picture passionately—removes it from frame—thrusts in dress and continues exit to yard.

Sitting room—Mabel enters—steals across room—stumbles over chair—hears a noise—crouches behind big arm chair—Father enters with candle (lights on) examines door and window—Mabel (who is visible to audience) registers fear—Father satisfied—exits (lights down) Mabel continues exit.

The first two give a touch of sentiment, the last a touch of suspense, the latter being useful where the proceding action shows that it is impossible for Mabel to live at home and that she is in more or less danger of bodily harm. In this case you are eager to have her go and suspense deepens this feeling. If her going has less justification the sentiment shows that she, too, does not want to go and, in a sense, acts as an apology for her action.

Half the value of the photoplay lies in these little finishing touches. They make the main plot no better, but they fully and properly convey that plot to the audience.

Dress it up a bit and get in Class A.

INQUIRIES

NOTE—No questions can be replied to by mail. Look for your answers here. A list of studio addresses, kept up-to-date, will be sent if a stamped and addressed return envelope accompanies the request.

B. C. W.—A weekly reader of this department should know by now that the player mentioned has not changed companies, and has no apparent intention of doing so. The finder on a motion picture camera differs with the make. Some use the cross-hair finder, a rectangular lens with cross lines to find the centre. Others have finders built in, or the regular lens and ground glass box finder. Still others have no finder at all, the field of the lens being marked by the eye when the camera is set up. We do not recall having seen a camera with three lenses in the positions indicated in the sketch you send. The Vitagraph cameras are double affairs, two strips of film being exposed simultaneously, but that third lens was probably some sort of finder.

CURLS.—If you'll send a headache powder we'll read that first question again and seek to assimilate it. What do you mean by "that dark or yellow print?" The highest salaried photoplayer is more or less a matter of guesswork. but he or she probably is not with the company mentioned. The largest American studio is now that of the Selig Company.

H. M. S.—It is very possible that your scripts fail because you write the stories that are new to you rather than to the editor. This is the chief fault of the beginner. Mr. Costello is not a partner in the Vitagraph. He appears in not more than five releases a month and not often that many times. There seems to be no definite assignment of opposites in the Chicago section of the Essanay Company. The players are assigned as the parts require, and sometimes Miss Cassinelli is a lead and sometimes merely assists.

A. H. H.—We think that Arthur Johnson appeared with Miss Marion Leonard in Reliance's "The Conflict," but have no exact data.

B. D.—Miss Mary Pickford was Lena in Biograph's "Lena and the Geese."

C. B. S.—Miss Florence LaBadie, of the Thanhouser Company, was with Chauncey Olcott two seasons and in the original cast of "The Blue Bird." She is of French extraction and does not employ a stage name. The information is volunteered that she is unmarried and lives in Harlem with her parents, being of domestic tastes. Some of her best pictures are: "Enoch Arden," "Mme. Rex" and "The Thief and the Girl," while with the Biograph, and "As It Was In the Beginning," "Cinderella," "The Arab's Bride," "Blossom Time" and "Called Back" with the Thanhouser. The Thanhouser Company offers her picture for sale as part of a set of eight, for one dollar. Guess that's all we can think of just now.

R. H. A.—The theme of the college-bred or civilized Indian has been worn threadbare through overuse, but if you can strike a novel and interesting angle it might still go. In regard to your second question, we fail to see that "mental action" would stand much chance in photoplay where the story must be told in physical action. You are not restricted to "Rolin proposes, is rejected, exits." If you have a novel mode of proposal, take a reasonable amount of space in telling about it. It is up to you to so word your synopsis as to show the script reader at a glance that the story is not commonplace. If you can't show this in your synopsis, you can't show it in the action. The synopsis is merely to give the reader an idea of the style of the story. If the synopsis is interesting he will read the plot of action. Make the synopsis interesting by leaving out the commonplace and dwelling on the novelty, even if that takes the whole of the allotted 250 words. If you will do this the value of your script will be discovered in the average editorial office, though some companies maintain men who can write photoplays, but who are not competent to judge the work of others. Not all authors of fiction would make good editors, and not all magazine editors can write fiction. The same holds good in photoplay, though many manufacturers judge their editor by the stories he writes. We do not think the time is ripe for the twenty-five-page script. This argues some six to eight thousand words of plot, and if you know the game thoroughly the idea can be conveyed in full in very much less than half that space. The question of single or double spacing is a matter of personal preference for which no rule can be given. Personally, we prefer the single spacing.

J. J. H.—Your question does not seem to be in our line.

H. H.—We do not keep a line on the authors of photoplays. Write the supposed author direct. We presume that Mr. Halliday had to learn to run the engine to the extent of knowing about the throttle and the air brake in Lubin's "A Railroad Engineer." If you will look up some of the Kalem Civil War stories you will find out "what happened to Guy Coombs." We presume that Miss Joyce's return to New York is the reward of that excellent work you speak of. She is a New Yorker, and naturally would like to come home. Daphne Wayne does not belong to the Biograph's blonde. It is the name given her in England. We have not heard of Miss Field's return to Essanay.

G. L. D.—Marshall Nielan is the younger man in "The Weaker Brother." He is a comparative newcomer to the American. We do not believe that he is related to Warren Kerrigan. The Thanhouser Kidlet is known to fame only as such.

G. O. T.—Address the various companies or send a return envelope to the editor of this department for an address.

D. D.—Send a stamped and addressed envelope for addresses. The Thanhouser Kid (Marie Eline) was the son in Thanhouser's "The Professor's Son." William Russell was Boer in the same company's "Jess."

W. S. D.—We never said the idea alone was essential to photoplay. It is first necessary to have a good idea, but having it, it is almost as necessary to exhibit that idea to the fullest advantage by means of proper development. It is another publication that contends that the idea alone is needed. Your idea may be good, yet so badly displayed that it would take a day to get the thing untangled.

L. G. L.—Practically all photoplays are written more or less in full even when done by the director who is to make the production, as in the case you mention. The Universal Film Company covers other than the Imp, such as the Nestor, Powers, Victor, Rex, etc. We respectfully pass that "what number lens is used in motion picture cameras." There is no universal system of numbering that would make your question intelligent. Some operators have two and three lenses for the same camera.

RAMORA.—Owen Moore is in the Victor Company with Miss Florence Lawrence. The player mentioned was not in "Children Who Labor."

M. J.—The lead in Lubin's "Romance of the Border" was Miss Edna Payne of the Tucson section.

W. C. G.—Vitagraph maintains a studio in Los Angeles and one in Brooklyn. That is all. The field companies do the rest. Miss Gardner is working at Whitestone, L. I. The Edison studio is in Bedford Park, New York City. Mr. Walthall did not go to Pathe after all. The picture you speak of was made in the studio.

J. E. V.—Francis X. Bushman was the tramp in Essanay's "Out of the Night," and Dwight Mead was his clubfellow in the days of his affluence.

Comments From Picture Observers.

RESPECTFULLY SUBMITTED TO THE DIRECTORS.

Editor Moving Picture World:

You probably won't have space to print this letter, and may not care to do so if you have, but I just want to say that your reviewer has hit the nail on the head in commenting on the lack of uniformity in the naming of characters in Essanay's "Legacy of Happiness," and to assure him that the general public notices the slips of a careless director just as much as he does. I spoke of the "John-James" faux pas to my family after seeing the film on Thursday last, but took it for granted that "Arthur's" last name was meant to be Allen.

Did you notice in Kalem's "Hypnotic Nell" that the leaders refer to "Nell" (capably acted by Ruth Roland) as "Bess"? If you saw "An Arizona Escapade" at a picture theater and not at a private exhibition, did you notice how the utterly needless and ridiculous demolition of a dozen or more doors by the robbers in pursuit of the wife of the general storekeeper, who seems to have been a banker and a physician and surgeon as well, through as many different rooms in a little wooden shack that could not possibly contain more than two or three rooms and the store, caught the house and caused a gale of derisive laughter. And it was supposed to be a serious melo. at that. Did you also notice the crass stupidity of two of the robbers who turned the mirror of one of the dressers so that it reflected the camera man and several others behind him?

Kalem doesn't often make mistakes or errors of judgment, but in one film (now old enough to be a commercial), called, I believe, "The Conquest of California," there were a bushel of errata of various sorts. The two most heinous were the setting out to capture the ship "Alden Besse" in boats marked with her own name, and the placing of the camera in such a position that the setting sun reflected plainly the churning hand and arm of the camera man and the distinctly modern headgear of the director and others on the "Desert(?)" sands. I once saw even Alice Joyce, who is usually one of the most careful and painstaking as well as one of the most charming of picture players, start to faint in one direction and then deliberately turn and finish the swoon toward the opposite point of the compass, much to the amusement of the audience. I am convinced that she wouldn't have done this if she had not been told to by some ivory-domed director.

In another Essanay, the name of which I have forgotten, the action took place in the warden's room of a prison and the scene painter had carefully painted "Warden's Office" backward on the well-imitated glass inside the door, but one of the players flung the door wide open and left it so the bare canvas and slats at the back were blatantly displayed for nearly a hundred feet of the film—and, of course, good-night illusion!

These things happen so often and seem to receive so little attention that I am delighted to see that you are not afraid to tell the truth about them. No one who has an interest in the advancement of the film industry wants to have the public conclude, as I once heard an elderly lady remark, that "Anything goes in a moving picture, my dear," and the eradication of senseless and utterly needless mistakes is one good way to prevent it. Yours very truly,

Brooklyn. R. A. S.

FAVORS MORE AND STRONGER DRAMA.

Editor Moving Picture World:

From time to time I have noticed in your very able and interesting magazine that suggestions and criticisms from any and all who are sufficiently interested in the photoplay and its future, are not amiss. And as I am one of these, in all that pertains to the photoplay, and all the good which we may expect from it in the future, I would like to add a few words to the many helpful and encouraging things already told in the World. My growing interest in the motion play comes chiefly from constant attendance at the theaters where the best films are shown, and my suggestions herein are made from the viewpoint of a spectator.

I note that one of the pet ambitions of the film maker, and one soon to be realized, I think, is the elimination of vaudeville. Permit me to state just a few things which, to my mind, must come as a substitute before vaudeville in the photoplay program can be eliminated. That the pictures are coming forward from every point of view in leaps and bounds and that vaudeville, cheap and otherwise, is bounding the other way, counts for much in your favor. But if you are to entertain us with a program composed entirely of pictures, then you will have to make the drama a prime favorite, and it must show stronger dramatic treatment, plenteous in action and more regard for detail.

I notice the tendency of the manufacturers to lessen the number of sub-titles, especially in some of the pictures where both subject and scenery are unfamiliar to the greater part of the audience. In some cases the increased action is sufficient to justify the omission of sub-titles, but a great many of the plays do not show additional action to cover this need.

The sound effects in some of the high class dramas are absurd and unnecessary, and greatly lessen the dignity and artistic value of the play and the moral note contained in it. You are striving for an entertainment which will send your audience away almost as satisfied, if not as fully satisfied, as if they had attended a performance of the refined, legitimate drama; then cut out the abominable sound. It is not in keeping with the progress of the motion play. Intense heart interest and a disgusting sound will not mix—unless you are appealing to that element which originally made up the motionplay audience, who are always ready to giggle and whistle at anything rough and coarse which is shown on the screen. If you are reaching for better prices for your photoplay, you will have to reach respectable people with thoroughly respectable attractions, complete in detail and properly conducted. With this, too, will come the need of better and more appropriate music.

The opposition at the present time between the picture and the church folks would soon terminate if some clever chap would give his time and genius to writing Sunday subjects, of the distinctly Sunday-school sort, and stick to it long enough to make those straight-laced preachers not only approve of the pictures, but ask for them. I would like to say again that it is my enthusiasm in the photoplay as an entertainer and the assistance it has rendered me in a better understanding of the spoken play, which has prompted the writing of the above.

M. McMANUS.

New York City.

Comments on the Films

Licensed.

"THE CLOSE OF THE AMERICAN REVOLUTION" (Edison), July 1.—A very good film, perhaps the best in the Edison Company's fine series of historical pictures. The British general, Tarlton, is proposing to ride quickly with his cavalry to Charlotteville, Va., where the Virginia Assembly is in session, and capture it together with Thomas Jefferson. We see him and his finely mounted troopers start out along the roads. But a patriot, on a superb mount, knows his purpose and makes a dash across country. This gives beautiful (the photograph work is all fine) views of Virginia hills, meadows, farms and woodland. Included is a view of "Monticello." The final scene is the surrender of Cornwallis, the "close of the Revolution."

Marc McDermott received spontaneous applause as Jefferson. He deserved it on artistic grounds, but it was started by a good Democrat. A little later, Chas. Ogle, as George Washington, received an ovation. Benjamin Wilson, as the patriot who brought the news, is an excellent rider. Richard Niel plays the British general, Tarlton. It is a big picture, full of figures.

The audience received the picture with great favor. The owner of the theater expressed high approval of it. The reviewer thoroughly enjoyed it from beginning to end. It is well made, well acted, and well photographed. It ought to have special music, but it will go without any at all.

"ON THE CACTUS TRAIL" (Essanay), July 2.—A Western story that has no special strength. It is much weaker than the average picture by Anderson's company. The situation is not new and the plot gives little chance for sincere acting. The photography is good in only a few scenes.

"JENKINS SNEEZES" (Cines), July 2.—Jenkins, who will be remembered from other Cines farces, is in this picture a lover. He can't help sneezing and it is awkward. Where the picture is funny, it is somewhat vulgar.

"A VIOLIN AND A PIPE" (Cines), July 2.—A comedy romance in adjoining rooms. It has only two players and the set is never changed. It has some action, but cannot be called a speedy picture. It is well photographed.

"THE CHURCH ACROSS THE WAY" (Vitagraph), July 2.—The real center of interest in this picture is not the church across the way, nor even the melancholy man who lived opposite to it, but is a little girl and her dog—Helen Costello and Jean, the Vitagraph collie. They alone make the picture worth while and they are fine. Mrs. Maurice, Mr. Earl Williams, and Miss Flora Finch have parts in it; but their roles are not, in themselves, very attractive. They serve, however, to bring out the pleasant perfume of a not very realistic picture. The camera work is fine. The people will like little Helen's work in this picture.

"THE BUTTERFLY NET" (Essanay), July 5.—Francis X. Bushman takes the leading role in an interesting comedy. He is assisted by, among others of the male condition, John Steppling and Howard Messemer. An English lord rents a place for the summer in order to pursue his studies. He requests that for obvious reasons his identity be not revealed. As one very young woman sees the letter, it is of course a question of an exceedingly short time before all the other very young women of her acquaintance are in the secret. A friend (Stepping) visiting Lord Roxbury is mistaken for the lessee. Four of the five girls concentrate their attentions on the visitor. The remaining one rejects the attentions of the genuine article, even going so far as unintentionally to push him down an embankment and hurt him. Roxbury recovers, however, and takes home with him the American girl. It is all very cleverly done.

"A CHILD'S PRAYER" (Lubin), July 4.—The Western Company puts on a good drama. The work of the two children is excellent. There is marked pathos in the tent scene, where the prospector, praying with his motherless child, is overheard and seen by the owner of the property who has come with his men to eject the victim of a fraudulent lease. The landowner, who has just left a somewhat similar scene in his own home, validates the lease.

"ON THE PUPIL OF HIS EYE" (Vitagraph), July 5.—Van Dyke Brooke takes the leading part in a drama that holds all the way. He shares the honors with Maurice Costello, who takes the part of a detective. It is too bad Vitagraph in serious work of this sort did not get away from the worn out, hackneyed Sherlock Holmes cap, pipe and mannerisms. There is a real plot in this picture, and it is well executed. The flashlight scene is particularly effective.

"THE WOULD-BE HUNTER'S NIGHTMARE" (C. G. P. C.), July 5.—A very well acted and, on that account, amusing comic picture.—The would-be hunter had secured an excellent collection of hunting trophies. These made his vivid account of his mighty deeds seem true; but when alone at night with his specimens, he is afraid of them. He has a nightmare, and a tame leopard is used to make it a very real one. It made a hot-day audience laugh; they seemed to like it. The photographic work is good.

"HAIRDRESSING OF OTHER DAYS" (C. G. P. C.), July 5.—A very good, very instructive picture. The C. G. P. C. pictures of this kind are well known; they deserve high commendation.

"WINNING A WIDOW" (Kalem), July 5.—An excellent romantic comedy, written by Gene Gauntier and produced by Sid. Olcott, partly on the good ship Adriatic going across, partly at Luxor in Egypt, and partly in the desert. Miss Gauntier plays a charming young widow. Mr. Jack Clark plays an unattached young man who has fallen in love with her. It is a picture of the fascinating game of love-making. It is sincerely romantic; this hides the fact that at times its plot becomes a bit artificial. We hardly need to say that it is well acted. The camera work is excellent and gives us some new glimpses of Egyptian life. It is a very good picture.

"HOW THE BOYS FOUGHT THE INDIANS" (Edison), July 6.—A comedy from the experience of two boys, of Indian-fighting age and who had been reading about "Young Wild West." They were Eastern boys, but their father had inherited a ranch in Wyoming. The Indian reservation was near and, with their air guns, they started to "wipe the whole mess out." It is played with realistic restraint; looks like a real happening, and, while not a laugh-maker, is very amusing. Yale Boss and Master Clark are the boys. Mr. Wadsworth, Mrs. Williams and Mr. Beaumont are their father, mother and big brother. Mr. Hedlund appears as a cowboy, and Mr. Robert Brower as an Indian chief. It is well photographed.

"BRONCHO BILLY'S NARROW ESCAPE" (Essanay), July 6.—That so many of these Broncho Billy romances are fresh, or at least give the impression of being so, is due perhaps more to the development of the situation, the human freshness in little things, rather than to intricately made, unusual plots. In outline, this typical Broncho Billy love story is not new; but the picture, as a whole, seems new. There are many insignificant things in it that we have never seen before, and they keep pleasing all through the film. We wonder whether the conventional ending is necessary. To the reviewer, who has seen it and sees it every day, it seems very flat. Almost every romance has, in our opinion, just sixteen feet of flat ending.

"IN WRONG" (Cines), July 6.—A good, fresh love story in comedy spirit. The central idea has been used once or twice before; but it is still fresh, and the development is quite fresh and very amusing. The lover got "in wrong" with the girl's dad before he met her. Without the lover's knowing anything about it, his uncle, who is a friend of the girl's father, arranges a match between the young people. The fun comes from the criss-cross meetings of characters, each of which knows just enough about the situation to make him or her misunderstand what is coming. The spectator, of course, knows a great deal more about it than any single one of the characters does before the final act. It is very well acted and photographed. There are scenes interesting in themselves, and it makes a good, comedy release, one that will please everybody.

"THE HOUSE OF MYSTERY" (C. G. P. C.), July 2.—A very clever farce whose fun comes from the unexpected and comic arrangements of the stage sets. There are cupboards that suirt water; wooden feet hidden in the flooring, that come up and kick one; doors that revolve from the middle, etc. It is very amusing. The photography is good.

"WILD BIRDS AT HOME" (C. G. P. C.), July 2.—Another hand-colored film that many spectators will remember as a rare treat. It is like other C. G. P. C. nature and science releases; we can't praise them too highly.

"THE CAT AND THE CANARY" (Selig), July 2.—A pleasing love story comedy, well photographed and naturally produced and acted. The principals are a spinster and a widower. Their houses touch and the action is set mostly in the front door yards. It is a story of an ordinary quarrel and make-up of two ordinary human beings and placed in a plain and homely setting. The producer has an especially good picture of the cut, a dandy.

"THE LAKE OF DREAMS" (Selig), July 1.—A good picture that, while not convincing as real life, is very effective as romance. The lake is a giver of dreams to two young lovers. They grow up and are separated. The man disgraces himself and the girl weaves her romantic dreams of him alone. He comes back, soiled in body and soul; but she is waiting for him. It is a well photographed, naturally acted and pleasing picture.

"PARTNERS FOR LIFE" (Edison), July 3.—The author of this scenario deserved mention. We don't know what was submitted; but the producer's result is one of the best pictures by any maker in some time. It is a story of married life and of young people. The man thought he was to be the boss; the girl, with the advice of a girl chum, decided that she and her husband would be partners. The man is glad to give in when she gets through with him. It is an American life portrayal. Miss Mary Fuller is the wife; Mr. Augustus Phillips is the husband, a dry goods clerk, and Miss Jean McPherson is the wife's chum. All three do good work whenever they get the chance and do fine work here. The photography and everything connected with the picture is first class.

"THE FILIBUSTERS" (Kalem), July 3.—A good picture, at least in so far as it is a romance it is good. As a story of adventure it is fair; but if only a bit more care had been used, it would have been a crack-a-jack. It is a story of how a young newspaper reporter got a good account of a filibustering expedition to Cuba. He was in love with the daughter of the tug's captain. A Spanish spy gives her people warning of this tug's coming and there's a fight at the beach; but the reporter, with the girl's help, saves the tug and the captain gives his consent to the match. The heroine, yes and the whole cast were very fortunately chosen. The picture seems to have been taken in Florida and is instructive as well as entertaining. It is well photographed.

"THE PRIZE ESSAY" (Lubin), July 3.—A picture of life in a girl's boarding school. There is no love story in it; but although it does not convince as actual life, it deals with pleasant things and leaves a good impression. The leading role is taken by Miss Ormi Hawley and the acting and photography are excellent.

"WHERE JEALOUSY LEADS" (Pathe), July 3.—A wholesome picture of real life in a small country town. The village blacksmith, the village grocer and the grocer's wife (played by Octavia Handworth) are the principals. The grocer is the jealous man; but before any harm is done he finds that his suspicions were groundless. These characters are acted very well and are distinct individuals. Many good things in the way of glimpses of village life are woven into the picture, which is well photographed and substantial. There is a short travelog on the same reel, entitled, "Winter Landscapes in Finland."

"LINCOLN'S GETTYSBURG ADDRESS" (Vitagraph), July 3.—A very patriotic picture that is worthy of special preparation in the way of extra music. We have already reviewed it at length. From the reception it got from a Broadway audience, we believe it can be relied upon as a feature. There are in it scenes showing Lincoln's cabinet; scenes of the battle of Gettysburg, some of which are very fine indeed. It also contains some very effective symbolical pictures. These are very worthy. The photographic work is uneven, but is pretty fair at its worst, while, at its best, it is perfect.

"BABY BETTY" (Selig), July 5.—Some may say that such a situation as "Baby Betty" describes never happened. Maybe it didn't. Nevertheless there is nothing inherently improbable in it. A whole lot of things happened in the Civil War that were not on the cards. "Baby Betty" is a pretty spectacle. There are infantry, cavalry and a little artillery; both North and South are well represented. Surely there is nothing in this war drama to rekindle dead embers—which perhaps may justly be said of too many of the Civil War pictures. "Baby Betty" is good, wholesome stuff.

"AN INDIAN SUMMER" (Biograph), July 8.—As the title implies, the story is of the courtship of two persons no longer young—one, the man, even less so; not too old to act, though. Little Mary helps out in the play. Likewise is there a maid who contributes. There is a fine beach scene, where the estranged old lovers are marooned by the incoming tide. The estrangement had arisen over the failure of the old chap to show the widow a letter that had come to him. As the inclosure referred to a hair restorer and as he was particularly shy of any crowning glory, he naturally felt disinclined to reveal it. The widow took adequate measures to make him jealous, as she assumed the letter was from a woman. In the closing scene, following the reconciliation, the widow herself applies the hair restorer to her now affianced husband, to the marked disgust of the maid and the glee of little Mary. But previously she had had a look at that letter.

"THE MAN INSIDE" (Melies), July 11.—A romantic tragedy in which the usual ranch owner's daughter prefers Alonzo, one of the helpers on the ranch, to the foreman whom her father wants her to marry. Alonzo is trapped in a burning hut by this foreman and his gang who accuse him of rustling. The foreman is the real thief. These last scenes are done very well indeed. The photography is beautiful all through the reel; but the views of this burning hut are masterly. The plot of the story is not far above the average; but the scene making surely is. They are natural, truthful and pleasing. It's a good picture.

THE PRISON ON THE CLIFF (Gaumont), July 30.—This strong production is classified as a drama of 1796. The story covers two reels, in black and white. It is of the sentencing for life to the prison castle of Roucras, on the cliffs of the Bay of Gascony, of the Marquis de Fiers. The prisoner discovers the governor of the castle to be an old friend. Privileges are given the newcomer, and he meets the mother and the wife of the governor. He is charmed by the wife and pays much attention to her, which fact is observed by the husband. When notification comes of the innocence of the Marquis and instructions for his immediate release, the governor decides to conceal from him his instructions. Instead he furnishes the Marquis with a rope and a hack saw. The bar of the cell is cut through and the prisoner descends the rope, to discover it is many feet short. He falls, and at daylight recovers consciousness, only to find the tide rapidly rising. He jumps from rock to rock, and disappears.

The governor, on the morning after the escape, gives the pardon to his wife and permits her to carry the news. She returns, horrified, and tells of the scant rope and the empty cell. Just as the husband is upbraiding her he is handed a note. It is signed by the Marquis, and informs the governor that it was not necessary to try to send the prisoner to his death, as there was no justification for his jealousy. Reconciliation follows.

The scenes of the surf in the opening of the story are unusual. The descent over the rope of the prisoner is followed by the camera and makes a striking picture. The strongest scene of all, however, is the battle with rising tide, the great rollers at one time taking from his feet the apparently doomed man and engulfing him to his neck.

"THE LAST DANCE" (Selig), July 4.—Up to the last scene title this beautiful drama seemed to be beyond reasonable adverse criticism. It was delightfully conceived and executed, and in every detail deserving of high praise. A dancing girl, one whose dance is not of a sort in the slightest degree objectionable—in fact, her dancing is of the classic school and charms by its simplicity and grace—is taken ill one night in the theater. Her physician sends her to the country to his sister. There she meets a minister, and in him finds the man she loves. The affection is reciprocated.

The minister reads in a city newspaper the statement that the popular dancing girl, whose photograph is also printed, is on the road to recovery. It is his first intimation that Mignon is of the stage. In a rage he seeks her out and denounces her. She pleads with him, pleads with him in a way that would melt anything but the heart of a man in whose veins coursed the blood of a fish, and tell him her dance is not wicked. She begs him to let her demonstrate to him how foolish he is. In the uncut grass, in the bright sunlight, a grove in the background, she dances as she had previously danced before the footlights. At times she turned to the minister seated on a decaying log in the foreground, her arms extended toward him. It was "the last dance." As she halted, with a cry of pain, the minister rushed to her side. She collapsed and fell. The minister leaned over her. Her heart had failed. As a party of picnickers who had been drawn to the spot utter a cry of horror the minister gives voice to an expression as utterly incongruous as it was ridiculously misquoted: "Let him who is among you without sin cast the first stone." Throughout the whole play there had not been an act or a look that would remotely justify such talk.

Winnifred Greenwood took the role of the dancer; her work is dainty and in the best sense artistic. She puts under her spell all who are so fortunate as to see this picture. Kathlyn Williams, who wrote the scenario, may feel proud of her work and of her sister player.

"THE WAX MODEL" (Eclipse), July 3.—A short and interesting drama. The work of the music teacher is notable, especially in the last scene, where he forcibly enters the museum and seeks the wax model of the opera singer with whom he is in love—unknown, apparently, to her. He had yielded to an irresistible temptation; he could caress the waxen representation, and there was none to say him nay. In his infatuation he attempted to carry away the bust. A watchman awoke and shot him. Two figures went to the floor together. It was the end of each.

"SCENES IN SOMERSET" (Eclipse), July 3.—On the same reel as the foregoing. There are charming English scenes, splendidly photographed.

"HER OLD SWEETHEART" (Vitagraph), July 8.—Flora gets a letter from Bunny, informing her that he has been up in the Klondike for twenty years (and by the way he must have got right in on the ground floor), had made his pile, and was going to call on his old sweetheart. Flora immediately started in at a beauty shop to "fuss up." A burglar, Bill Shea, came in Flora's window while she was out. Bill was promptly nabbed by the maid, Kate Price, and was pretty much subdued when Flora returns and insists it is her returned lover. Bill tries to get away, but fails. Bunny appears on the scene and has hard work convincing Flora he is "it." A lot of fun ensues before he succeeds.

"FATE'S AWFUL JEST" (Vitagraph), July 8.—Good melodrama. A wise old elephant has a leading part in this story. With it is Kenneth Casey, who takes to the animal without apparent fear. Tefft Johnson and Miss Rose Tapley and Leo Delaney take the principal roles. There is a very realistic circus tent scene.

"PATHE'S WEEKLY" No. 28.—One of the finest pictures in this number from a photographic viewpoint is from Melbourne, Australia, showing the surf in a storm. The editor of the Weekly has gone beyond the news and dipped into politics. He introduces Bryan as seeming "unable longer to lay claim to the title of peerless leader." This will needlessly offend many thousands, especially through the West. There are some fine pictures of the unveiling of a statue of "Stonewall" Jackson by his granddaughter, of a boiler explosion in a test between two types, a varsity boat race and a military spectacle in England in honor of the King's birthday.

"THE BACK WINDOW" (Lubin), July 6.—May Buckley and Harry Meyer are featured in a comedy that holds up all the way. There are some laughs—and some moments when the thoughtful spectator will feel not just exactly like even smiling; in fact, there's a strong note of pathos. Miss Buckley is at her best. The writer of a scenario is indeed fortunate when she is assigned to interpret a role.

"UNDER SUSPICION" (Selig), July 8.—Danny, a homeless lad, is brought into the juvenile court for stealing. A lawyer becomes interested in him and adopts him. Danny is given a home that is of the best. Through circumstances ingeniously combined he is suspected of having taken money belonging to his benefactress. As a matter of fact, he had been rewarded for restoring a lost purse and had gone to a store to buy presents for his foster parents. The story is coherently and interestingly told.

"THE CURSE OF THE LAKE" (Vitagraph), July 9.—The most interesting feature of this Vitagraph Western is the picture of real desert. Of the play or the plot not much is to be said. It is of the "realm of bunk," of apparitions which appear even to the second generation. The acting is good; so is the photography. The scenery is excellent.

SIGNAL LIGHTS (Essanay), July 9.—Francis X. Bushman is featured in a railroad story. Likewise also is featured a camera-enamored little girl, who in a crucial moment of the drama climbs on a table and sets the signal for the approaching train. There is a touch of realism to the signal lights, as they are hand-colored red and green. It is an effective bit.

"LEAH LEARNS TO DANCE" (Cines), July 9.—In fact, Leah learned too well—so well that one after another she danced the men off their feet, the last one becoming tangled with her in a shawl, in which the pair rolled around, finally enmeshing in its unwinding length all the guests at the party. Leah was rescued and carried away on the husky maternal shoulder, a la bag of meal.

"THE GAY DECEIVERS" (Cines), July 9.—On the same reel as the foregoing, and also a comedy. It is a tale of two milliners' apprentices and their sweethearts. By arrangement between the girls the four met at the home of one. The men brought many things to eat and drink. Later on the two girls were given two hats to deliver. As they surrendered the pieces of headgear to the mother and her daughter-in-law to whom thy were consigned they discovered in the husbands of the two their supposed sweethearts. Things happened. The older of the two men is a near Bunny.

Independent.

"PRINTING AND ENGRAVING U. S. GOVERNMENT STAMPS" (Imp), July 6.—There is a great deal done by Uncle Sam to the little squares of paper that carry our letters—the postage stamps. In this picture we have views of the different operations of printing, blueing, perforating of the stamps; but good views of life in the big building are also included It is an unusually good release, one that we take pleasure in recommending. The photography is of good quality.

"HOME AGAIN" (Imp), July 6.—A good farce-comedy, in which Mr. Cumpson plays "Slick Sam," a prisoner who escapes. He is getting a holiday and a free ride back to the jail; but he doesn't know where he is going until he arrives home again. He merely takes the wrong conveyance. It is very amusingly acted and will make laughter.

"UNDER TWO FLAGS" (Thanhouser), July 7.—This interpretation of Ouida's story was described in the WORLD of July 6 and 13. The play is in two reels. There are some strong scenes in each. The pictures of the departure of the tally-ho coach and the horse race are features in themselves, especially the latter. There is a train wreck that is well done. The second reel, if anything, is better than the first. There is a sandstorm in the desert in which Cigarette, the vivandiere, figures, which is effective. The work of the whole company is of the best and the same may be said of the directing.

"PA'S MEDICINE" (Thanhouser), July 9.—A comedy, in which a druggist's mistake ended fatally for a rabbit instead of for the one for whom the medicine was purchased. The comedy came in at the point where the druggist discovered his error and started for the home of the supposed victim.

"THE HAZERS HAZED" (Thanhouser), July 9.—On the same reel as the foregoing. Two students arrived in a college town and were hazed in lively fashion. In order to get square the two hazed ones turned in a fire alarm and when the firemen came informed them that the blaze was in the room where the hazers were known to be. There was a wetting down which squared accounts.

"THE EMPTY HOLSTER" (Lux), July 5.—A western drama of rather extreme type. There are a shooting, a near hanging, plenty of riding and excitement generally.

"FATHER'S BUST" (Majestic), July 9.—A comedy in which a Jewish family have constructed by a sculptor a bust of an ancestor. There are some laughs in the reel.

"THE WIDOWER'S WIDOW" (Majestic), July 9.—On the same reel as the foregoing. A comedy in which a father and daughter and mother and son get together in two pairs in spite of opposition on the part of the daughter to her father's courtship.

"THE COOK CAME BACK" (Majestic), July 7.—A comedy in which indirect reference is made to the late waiters' strike and also in which the inclination of some domestic employes to feed their own family at the employer's expense is touched upon. This latter feature resulted in the discharge of a cook, but the story explains why he was sent for to resume operations.

"A GENTLEMAN OF FORTUNE" (Nestor), July 10.—A picture of rough life in the West, produced by Milton Fahrney. The "Gentleman of Fortune" (Jack Conway) is a road agent. He has made friends with the sheriff's little girl (a pleasing little player of about ten) who sees her father arrest him. The development of this situation is full of the unexpected, but does not fail to convince. The sheriff lets the prisoner go; we doubt whether he had the right to. The acting is good and the whole picture shows a skilled maker. The camera work is of high quality.

"THE FLOWER OF THE FOREST" (Nestor), July 8.—A picture produced by Mr. Al Christie; it tells a story of the wooded lands of the West. The background is not a shadowy forest, but a scrubby, leafy land. There is a pretty river in it, but no grand scenery. The plot is clear. Its center of interest is a white tender-foot (George Field), who gets lost and is captured by Indians. He has a white sweetheart (Miss Betty Keller); but to escape from the red men, he deceives an Indian girl, the "Flower of the Forest." There is novelty both in the situation and in its treatment; but has no real character drawing. The traits of the figures are clearly marked out; but the figures themselves lack the atmosphere of complete individuality. It is a clearly photographed picture.

"RECONCILED" (Bison), July 9.—A melodramatic and somewhat sentimental love story. The girl is the daughter of a very poor man who is sick. He here marries her against his rich father's will. Later, he is a father and while at work in the woods is wounded by accident by some hunters. The rich father is now reconciled. The players and the acting are pleasing, but they do not convince us that they are telling in the picture an actual story nor that they are individual characters. The picture's best quality is its pretty scenes. It is well photographed.

"JUST IN TIME" (Bison), July 13.—A well-written picture; there is an even growth of interest from the start and very few weak spots. It is a love story of an abused step-daughter, whose father loves her. She and her lover elope; the lover, a miner, strikes it rich and they are able to buy the mortgaged farm that would have been sold over the heads of the old people. The acting and camera work are excellent; but the stock seems a little poor, giving the picture a ragged appearance. It has an old situation, but still holds and is not without freshness of interest.

"YOUNG WILD WEST CORNERED BY APACHES" (Nestor), July 12.—The quality of this "Young Wild West" series is already known to the trade. It illustrates a cheap kind of adventure story written for the small boy and is designed to fill the demand of a definite market. This picture is clearly photographed, has some beautiful backgrounds and, to tell the truth, is not so very different from other Indian pictures of the poorer kind that we have seen. It does not appeal to intelligent patrons; on this account alone it is likely to offend such.

"INTERESTING SAN DIEGO" (Nestor), July 12.—A well photographed and interesting series of views of the metropolis of Southern California. It is short, but good.

"THE PARSON AND THE MEDICINE MAN" (Imp), July 8.—An Indian picture, photographed in a wild and very beautiful country. Its center of interest is an Indian maid, the ward of a white minister. The minister gets sick and the girl brings one of her people, the medicine man, who tries to carry the girl away. The feature of the film is the scrap that follows this attempt. It is not convincing, but is well photographed. Miss Margarita Fisher plays the girl; Messrs. Ed Lyons, Harry Pollock and W. Bertram play the men.

"THE CEDARVILLE SCANDAL" (Eclair), July 11.—A picture of what a narrow-minded, officious boarding house keeper can accomplish in the way of making trouble. A poor mother and a baby were left on her hands in the worst room in her house. She stole the baby and left it in the arms of a stranger for a moment then ran away from him. It caused trouble for half a dozen people, but brings about a pleasant close. It is slight, but wholesome and commendable, if not convincing. The characters interest us and the photography is good.

"A DOUBLE MISUNDERSTANDING" (Eclair), July 9.—A love story of people of culture with pretty scenes and sets. The leading lady (Miss Tennent) is very pretty. Her aunt objects to her marrying a youth whose father happens to be a widower. The lovers scheme to have the aunt, a spinster, meet the widower. A letter intended for the girl gets to the aunt. Her reply falls into the hands of the father. Thus the double misunderstanding brings about a double marriage. It is slight and not very convincing; but the players are all so pleasing and the photography so good that it ought to please.

"TANGLED" (Powers), July 10.—A pretty love story in which two pleasing little children (a boy and girl, ten and eleven) have prominent parts. It is better when considered as a series of very pretty scenes, full of life and joyous suggestions of out-of-doors and love-making near a fine country home with park-like grounds, than it is when considered as a story. The camera work and the scenes are fine. The players also are pleasing. It isn't convincing.

"A LEAP YEAR DELUSION" (Powers), July 10.—A short dream picture on the same reel. It states a situation; does not tell a story; but is very well photographed and has some very good scenes. The idea is slight, but it is freshly amusing.

"CAUGHT IN A FLASH" (Imp), July 11.—A little comedy with an illustration of "like father, like son" hidden in it. Mr. Daly plays the father who objects to his son (King Baggott) marrying an actress (Miss Fernley). The young people plan a trap for father, who is "caught in a flash"; a good photograph is got of him kissing the new maid. The evidence is good enough to break father's objections to his son's choice of a wife. The idea is of course old; but it has been very well done in this film. With these players, one would hardly expect anything but a good release. The photographic work is excellent, and we can commend the film.

"THE LOST MESSENGER" (Majestic), July 9.—Herbert Prior and Mabel Trunnelle have the leading roles in a drama of lost memory and ensuing domestic struggles. There is an infant in the play, and it is interested as well as interesting. The husband by reason of his loss of identity is forced to take a position of watchman. Struck on the head in an assault, he is taken to a hospital and his memory returns. It comes back just in time. His wife calls at the hospital in great haste to secure the services of a doctor for her child, severely ill. The couple are reunited; the baby recovers.

"SPIFFKIN'S NEW JOB" (Lux), July 12.—The hero is given a job in the lamplighters' brigade. He lights more than lamps, however. Not contented with the orthodox torch, he improvises one with waste and some inflammable liquid, and bumps against about everything on the highway, from high hats and milliner's boxes to awnings and to mattresses hanging from windows. He keeps the fire brigade more than busy.

"PONTO'S LITTLE JOKE" (Lux), July 12.—Ponto is a dog, and owing to an edict that "all dogs running loose without collars will be arrested," and Ponto having none, he is pursued by two gendarmes. They fail to catch him, because he either turns into a donkey or a pig just as they lay hands on him or he sails away in an aeroplane. Ponto follows Spiffkins on the same reel.

A KANGAROO FOR PICTURES.

W. N. Selig Presented with World Famous Boxing Kangaroo by J. D. Williams, of Australia.

Last week the Los Angeles branch of the Selig Polyscope Company received two kangaroos which had been sent all the way from Australia in care of a keeper. Some time ago Mr. J. D. Williams, the well-known photoplay magnate of Australia, and general manager of The International Pictures, Inc., wrote a letter to Mr. W. N. Selig advising him that he was sending as a present two kangaroos. One of these is an excellent male specimen and has become famous for its unique accomplishment of using the boxing gloves in contests with men. This animal and one other are the only known kangaroos who have been able to learn this trick.

"Boxer," as Mr. Selig's new pet is known, seems to relish a glove fight with the keenest joy, and work at the Los Angeles studio has been practically dicontinued during the past week while one member and another have put on the gloves with "Boxer." Thomas Santschi, leading man of the Western company, is nursing a black eye as a result of his first encounter with this strenuous animal from the Australian Bush country.

Mr. Selig intends to use "Boxer" in an early production and, out of compliment to Mr. Williams, the story will be of such a nature as to appeal to Australian audiences.

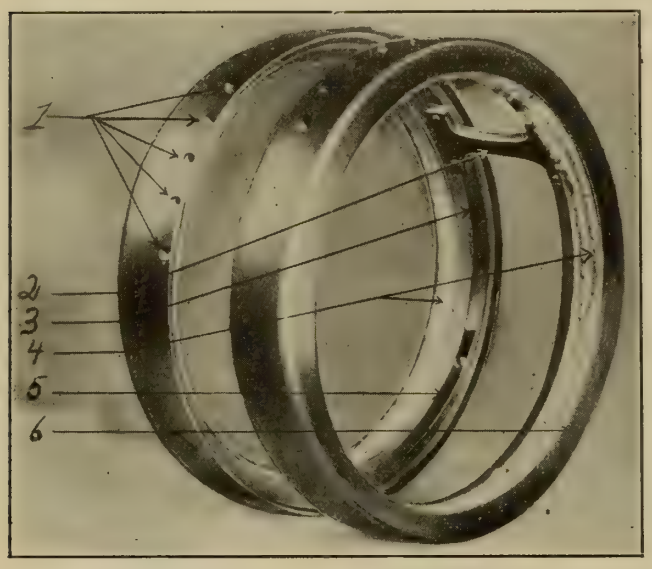
ANOTHER YOUNG PICTURE MAKER.

On June 26 there was born to Mr. and Mrs. Herbert Blache, a son. At last accounts the mother and boy were in the best of health. Papa Blache has been going about with an extra smile upon his always pleasant countenance.

Projection Department

Edited by F. H. RICHARDSON.

WRIGHT CONDENSER CELLS. Messrs. Huntoon, Rolfes & Wright, Los Angeles, Calif., have sent me one of their condenser cells for examination. Inasmuch as condenser breakage is one of the worst troubles the operator has to contend with, I am much interested in this device. The cell illustrated is designed for use with the Edison lamphouse. Presumably they are made for all the different makes of lamphouses. In the illustration 6-6 are two outer brass rings which fit over two inner rings, one of which is shown at 3. 4-4 are four rings of asbestos, between which the lenses are clamped so that they do not touch any metal at all. Inner rings 3 are held apart by spreader 2, there being another similar spreader opposite the one shown. Spring 5, of which there are four, supplies pressure to a small pin which fits into one of the series of the holes 1. These holes are set eccentrically to accommodate the different thickness of lenses, the lower one being nearest the edge. It is the pins, held by spring 5, which hold outer ring 6 and inner rings 3 together, thus clamping the condensers. If the lens were a very thin one then the pins would fit in upper hole 1.



This device seems to me to be excellent; moreover I have had some very high recommendations from users thereof. I, however, would offer the manufacturers some suggestions for improvement. In the first place, I find that a thick-edge 7½ inch condenser will barely allow the rings to be clamped together by using the lower hole 1, while a thick-edge 6½ condenser cannot be clamped in the rings at all. I would, therefore, suggest that the two outer rings be made a little wider and that the slant of the holes be a little greater, so that the lower hole (by lower hole I mean the one as shown in the illustration) will be fully ⅛ of an inch further out. This would, I believe, accommodate any condensing lens used in this country. I would also suggest that spreaders 2 are too weak. There ought to be four of them, or, if not, then the ones used should be at least ½ inch wide, instead of ¼ inch as at present. They bend too easily. I would further suggest that these spreaders should be made in two parts, held together by screws in a slotted hole, or better yet by staggered holes so that the distance between the lenses could be altered to suit the lens. In the sample I have, one 6½ and one 7½ lens, both thick edged, are fully ½ of an inch apart at their apex, and this is altogether too far. With these few improvements I would regard the Wright condenser cell as a very excellent device indeed. It is, in my judgment, good as it is; but it would be much better by doing these various things I have named, and I believe the cell will go a long way towards reducing condenser breakage.

CALIFORNIA ANSWERED.—Jamaica, L. I., writes: "I have the same trouble with the picture being out of focus for about half of the first show; that is, it seems so, but, California, it is not the fact. It is due to the following: When I start my first show early in the evening, the stores have not lighted up. When they put on their lights, my voltage drops and the light is dim, producing an effect which might be mistaken for out-of-focus, though it is not. As soon as the stores are closed, the light comes up and all is well. Don't monkey with alternating current if it does not come in to you just right, because you cannot make it any better. Let it alone, and just when you are thinking of something else, your picture will brighten up and so will you. I never pencil a carbon and one that does pencil is no good. I use an inductor. It is on the same principle as the compensarc and is the best resistance you can use for A. C. When changing reels, I shove the handle over to the 30 ampere notch, drop a slide in my stereo and during the half minute change my crater burns to a fine angle and my light is perfect. But, California, if your carbons pencil, then your light is gone and your picture is dim, no matter how much current you are pulling. I have not discolored a condenser or broken one in two years. You should have a hole in your lamphouse, as has been described in the department, to show your carbons on the wall."

The dimming of the light, Jamaica, I think would hardly account for California's trouble. If your voltage drops when the stores light up it is evidence that your feeders (street mains) are too small and you should get after your light company. As to your not having discolored or broken a condenser in two years, that might or might not be charged to your credit, so far as the breakage is concerned. I have had condensers last for months and then again I have had them break every night without any apparent cause, when using 40 amperes, D.C. The discoloration is a matter entirely out of the control of the operator. It is due to a fault in the manufacturing of the glass. As to carbons needling, there might be considerable said on that point. It is not necessarily an evidence of poor quality, though it is pretty good evidence that the binder is poor. Either that or the carbon is being used beyond its capacity. You gave the name of your inductor, but I could not make it out. I cannot agree with you that you should let matters alone when the light is not satisfactory. If my light is not satisfactory it does not take me very long to get busy, let me tell you, and I will be real busy until that light is all right again, too. If my voltage dropped, as you say yours does, I would make life miserable for the superintendent of that light plant until he installed larger wires.

NEW TERMINAL.—The Mervin Novelty Company, Toledo, Ohio, is marketing the lamp terminal illustrated. It consists of a small, brass casting 1, approximately ⅛ inch thick and of the length and width shown in the illustration. Slot 2 is designed to straddle a thumbscrew in the regular lamp terminal, being clamped tight by the same. The wire-end is then clamped under copper washer 3 by screw 4, the wire being confined by lips 5-5. The illustration is exactly full size and the wire-end is removed exactly that much further from the heat of the arc.

LIGHT.—Burlington, Iowa, writes: "Will you please settle an argument by setting forth the various things which influence the brilliancy of the picture—that is to say, which influence the light."

I presume you want me to catalog the various influences which may take from, or add to the screen brilliancy. The following list, which was made up by Mr. Russel of the General Electric Co., covers the matter fully: Setting of the carbons, size of upper carbon, size of lower carbon, kind of screen, two wing or three wing shutter, size of picture, length of throw, amperes in the arc, clearness of the atmosphere, density of the film and the character of house lighting during projection; that is to say, whether indirect lighting, shaded lights, or approximately full light. Of the foregoing, I do not regard the length of throw as having much of any bearing, except where the atmosphere is dirty or smoky, or where the throw is excessive, say more than 150 feet. Of the various things named, it is hard to say which has the most direct bearing, but I presume the size of the picture and the amperes in the arc are the two most important items.

ADDRESS WANTED.—Mr. J. T. May, Box 145, Bartlesville, Okla., wants information concerning one Wayne Ozro Adams, who is going about the country with Panama Canal films, giving shows in the various theatres. Mr. May says that he has films which are completely worn out, though they are a drawing card, and then he makes a very grave accusation against Mr. Adams. Anyone having information as to the whereabouts of Mr. Adams, will kindly communicate same to brother May.

BACK-ROW ROMANCE.—Miss Rose E. Larkins, of Gardner, Mass., is no more—that is to say she is now Mrs. Frank R. Culbert. Friend Culbert was operator at the Gem Theatre, Gardner, Mass. Miss Larkins-that-was sat in the rear row. Culbert looked down. Larkins looked up. Cupid got busy. Result, matrimony. Naughty Cupid. Friend Culbert is now operator at the Gem Theatre, Torrington, Conn. Whether Larkins-that-was still occupies the rear seat and whether Cupid still flies around in the light ray, deponent sayeth not, though it is presumed that friend Culbert wears the smile that won't come off.

ISOLATED PLANT.—Biloxi, Miss., writes: "I note in the June 15th issue, you ask for information regarding Detroit lighting outfits. I formerly managed a theatre in Ohio, using a Detroit 6 h.p. engine, belted to a 2½ K.W., 60 volt compound wound generator, purchased from the Detroit Engine Works complete. I was said to have as bright a picture as any in the country around. Both myself and every one else was satisfied—that is enough said. Used a common muslin curtain coated with alabastine, and projected a picture a little more than 11 feet wide. Three gallons of gasoline would run three hours. Of course, you have to take care of those outfits or you will have trouble. I found it was necessary to go over mine every day. As long as the engine is kept in perfect condition, it runs like a clock, but if you neglect it there will be a different story to tell. I seldom ever looked at the engine from starting time, 7 P. M., until quitting time, 10 P. M., except possibly to see that it was getting a proper supply of lubrication. On the whole, I found the Detroit outfit entirely satisfactory, and would recommend the same to any one who knows how to take care of an engine, or who can learn; and now just one question, viz: How much noise ought a Ft. Wayne compensarc to make? I have a 110 volt, 60 cycle compensarc hooked at 110 volt, 60 cycle current. It makes a lot of noise, which I believe is not as it should be. It is setting about 10 inches from the sheet iron wall of the operating room on asbestos. Would the iron wall of the room have anything to do with it?"

Most certainly it would. In fact that is probably the seat of your trouble. It must be remembered that a transformer is nothing more or less than a huge electro magnet, and that it attracts and repels iron alternately. It must also be remembered that one cannot insulate against magnetism. If the floor of your room is covered with iron, raise the compensarc up at least 12 inches away from the floor not less than 12 inches away from the wall. If 12 inches is not sufficient to overcome the magnetic effect, then you will have to set it still further away, but 12 inches ought to fill the bill. The asbestos under your compensarc would not prevent it from affecting the iron. As to the Detroit report, we thank you for same. I think myself there is a huge lot in one being able to properly care for those outfits. Any engine or generator should and must be carefully taken care of, or there will be trouble.

DYNAMO.—Nebraska (name of city suppressed), writes: "Could I secure sufficient light from 9-10 K.W. dynamo to light a picture arc sufficiently for projection? The voltage is 32; amperes 29."

Presumably you mean a 9½ k.w. dynamo, but you say the voltage is 32 and the amperage 29, now a 9½ k.w. 32 volt dynamo would produce more than 290 amperes of current at that voltage. You could not, however, use a 32 volt dynamo for projection, since the voltage would not be high enough to overcome the resistance of an arc.

A FEW KICKS.—Mr. Wm. E. May, Bartlesville, Okla., writes: "I have some more kicks to register. What is the trouble with the licensed manufacturers lately. We run a ten-day service and for the last three weeks nearly every film either jumps or shows the sprocket holes. It is not in the projector, for when the picture is out of frame, you can see the two photographs jump together, or apart, and also sometimes the sprockets show on one side and sometimes on the other. Pathe Weekly No. 24 is the worst we have seen for some time. It starts out with the bottom foggy, then for about 500 feet it is fine, then it shows the sprocket holes badly for nearly 300 feet. Attached hereto find a sample. Is our exchange buying defective copies and is it that they are all as bad as this? Another kick: why do not certain licensed manufacturers use water in place of cement in making their patches? Kick, No. 3: Why cannot the MOVING PICTURE WORLD charge five cents per copy more and devote two or three pages to the department? I would also suggest a department for the education of camera men. Some of them seem to need it pretty badly from the samples I have seen lately. I have a suggestion to offer to the users of motor driven machines. Take a piece of flat iron about four inches long and fasten it with screws to the top side of the base board. Next take a piece of brass or spring steel and fasten same to the lamphouse, bending so as to drag on the iron of the base board. This gives a good sliding contact, and makes it impossible to have a light on the film when the machine is not running. A very satisfactory speed regulator for D.C. motors or commutator type of A.C. is as follows: Place six sockets in multiple. Place this bank of lights in series with the motor, putting in globes as follows: ⅛ c.p., 110 volt, one 16 c.p., 110 volt, four 32 c.p., 110 volt. By loosening and tightening various globes as many as fourteen different speeds can be had from this combination."

As regards the jumping of the film, I have not received any complaints of that kind recently, at least not more than usual, but the sample you sent shows the picture to be very badly out of center—that is to say, printed over to one side fully 1-16 of an inch. In fact the sprocket holes show in the picture by almost that much. The effect of adjacent pictures jumping in relation to each other shows the fault to have been either in the camera or the printing machine. I have sent the sample film to the New York manager of the Pathe Co. I hardly think your exchange would be buying defective copies because it does not seem probable that any reputable manufacturer would go into that kind of a deal. In other words, the exchange could not get defective copies, as such. I have had a world of kicks on the patches made by two of the licensed manufacturers. I have taken the matter up with the Chicago manufacturer. They replied courteously enough, but following the usual tactics of the usual film manufacturer, intimated that there could not be possibly anything wrong with their product. As to the other manufacturer, the New York outfit, it does not do any good to tell them anything and I would not waste postage, or waste my breath over a telephone calling their attention to anything. They are the one outfit who have taken the position that they are above anything and everything in the business. That particular kind of an outfit I do not care to bother with at all. Give them plenty of rope and they will do the rest. As to the matter of lengthening the department; I hardly think it is necessary, or even desirable, for several reasons. We have now a great deal more space than is allotted to any other department, though when one considers that there are something like 20,000 operators in the country, and as many managers who are also interested in the department, this is as it should be. I sometimes think, however, that we ought to have four pages every week and use the larger type, but on the other hand when we did use the larger type, I had to be continually fighting for space.

I do not quite understand that sliding contact, unless you mean that the motor would be stopped when the lamphouse is thrown over to the stereo side. I do not believe I would like that lamp resistance arrangement. It would be effective all right, but it would produce considerable heat, and altogether too much light. Why not get a good field rheostat instead?

LENSES SWEAT.—Baltimore, Md., writes: "As regards the trouble of California, issue of June 22nd, I feel sure that the cause of his picture being indistinct, or having the appearance of being out of focus during first show only is caused by either the condensers or objectives sweating. The majority of operating rooms (notice that—'rooms'—not 'booth,' 'coop,' 'cabs,' 'box,' 'lamphouse,' but 'room') are naturally cold and damp, which causes the lenses to become cold and the light rays coming into contact with them causes them to sweat, which gives the picture a foggy appearance until the heat dries them again. Have had this trouble often myself. In the good old days, while traveling with a tent show my machine did not have a stereopticon attached. Used a separate stereopticon. After running a reel of pictures I would take my calcium jet out of the machine, and put it into the stereopticon to run the songs. This would always cause the condensers to sweat. The picture would not only become foggy, but the first three or four song slides would look like they had two or three moons rising from the horizon, caused by the drops of water running down the condensers. I feel sure this brother's trouble could be remedied by lighting his arc and letting same show through the lenses for three or four minutes previous to starting his show, thus allowing the lenses to sweat and dry again. If the brother tries this, would like to hear from him so we will know if this was really the trouble. If not, we'll look further."

I agree with you Baltimore as to the probability of this being the seat of California's trouble. The foot-note marked not for publication was very interesting, and I am as per your suggestion, praying for you. That "room" looked good to me, come again. My best regards to the boys of Local Union 181. May their shadow never grow less.

FROM HONOLULU.—Mr. J. Alex Costa, Honolulu, Hawaiian Islands, writes: "I have been operating at the Empire Theatre here for three years. There are three houses in Honolulu now, two being run by the Honolulu Amusement Co. Operators salaries are very poor. Three matinees and six nights a week for $15. Use an Edison type B. Model, which runs very smoothly. The only trouble is losing the lower loop. The enclosed photograph is of my operating room; also I enclose one of the Honolulu Glee Club, which is composed of real Hawaiian musicians. They wish an engagement of any sort in San Francisco."

We are glad to hear from you, Brother Costa, but sorry to know that Honolulu managers do not give the operators better financial reward for their labors. Possibly the losing of the lower loop is due to the fact that you are carrying too tight a take-up tension, or because your lower magazine is not in line with the sprocket. You should have no more tension on the take-up than barely sufficient to take up all the film. The Glee Club spoken of consists of nine members. San Francisco managers can reach them by addressing Mr. J. Alex Costa, 1525 Lishman St., Honolulu, Hawaiian Islands. As to the postscript of your letter: you can secure the hand-book by forwarding the sum of $1.50.

UNION MEETING.—Local, No. 164, Moving Picture Operators, Milwaukee, Wis., meets every second and fourth Friday at Shubert Hall, 9:30 A. M. First and third Fridays are for shop talk meetings, and they are always well attended. Mr. T. C. Lower, secretary, 175 Howell Ave.

NEW ORGANIZATION SCHEME.—Mr. W. H. Gonshaw, member Toronto Local, 173, I. A. T. S. E., writes from Winnipeg, Manitoba, regarding a letter from Manitoba, in June 15th issue, referring to Winnipeg "crank-turners." We opened our union brothers' eyes very wide indeed when we called a union operators' meeting recently at one of the theatres, and were able to pick out 18 operators whom we knew positively to be competent men. We intended applying for an I. A. T. S. E. charter immediately, but finally concluded to form an organization to be called the Moving Picture Operators' Association, the object of which should be to educate ourselves in every branch of the business during the next six months. What we do not know, we intend to, so far as possible, learn inside of six months. We are then going to have an examination, and by that time, expect to have at least 20 men who will be able to pass, after which we will apply for a charter which Local 63, I. A. T. S. E. has promised to help us procure. When a manager asks us if our men are competent we can then honestly answer yes. Don't you think this is the best plan? Our officers are as follows: President, Mr. E. Silcox; secretary-treasurer, Mr. B. B. Hill; executive committee, Mr. Armond, Ed. Hill and Wm. Gonshaw."

Your plan, friend Gonshaw, is unique and, provided it is carried out to its intended conclusion, certainly has much to commend it. I congratulate the Winnipeg operators on the good sense they have shown, and trust that by the end of six months they will have made much progress in the knowledge of projection. I am sure the I. A. T. S. E. will much more readily welcome a body of men who have taken pains to deserve membership by raising the standard of professional knowledge of its proposed members, than one which has not taken so sensible a course. It will be a pleasure to me to render you any possible assistance in such a matter, and I trust you will call upon me if there is anything I can do.

BAD PERFORATION.—Mongollon, N. H., writes: "I have a simple trouble but am unable to locate it, therefore come to you for advice. I have a Motiograph 1912 Model and when running certain films through machine, everything is lovely and the picture nearly perfectly steady. As soon as I put other films in, trouble begins. As soon as the crank starts the picture begins to quiver. I cannot get a steady picture with these films, though the sprocket holes are in good condition. Have carefully adjusted all idlers; sprockets are in line and even tension exerts the right amount of pressure. I thought possibly one spring might be harder than the other. Examined intermittent sprocket. Thought perhaps it was loose or worn, but it seems to be O. K.; still the pictures are not steady with the films named, though they are with the others. This matter has got my goat, though I thought I had been up against about everything in the operating game."

In the first part of the letter, not quoted, the brother speaks of operators writing in about simple matters. His own query illustrates the fact that nothing is simple unless one understands it. Allow me to say that this matter is very, very simple, indeed, once the answer is known. The fault lies, not in the machine, but in the films. The manufacturers spoken of have not reached the stage of perfection in perforation, reached by the manufacturers of the other films. Unevenness in perforation is the answer. But, what I do not understand is how you can be running both in one house. That is supposed to be against the laws, rules and regulations made and provided by a part of the powers that be.

SLIDE COATING.—Ridgway, Colo., writes: "Am sending you a coated slide which I find very handy for announcements, 'ad' slides, etc. I use a darning needle, fastened to a stick about the size of an ordinary lead pencil, to write with. Do you think there would be a market for this coating? Why not have a small department in the WORLD devoted to sign writing, or lettering? I know it would be welcomed by at least one subscriber. Am in a town of 400, showing twice a week and making it pay, too."

The coating is black and is as good as any I have ever seen. The writing can be done with any sharp pointed instrument and a coating works perfectly. As to the market end of it, there probably would be, but unless handled by some supply house it probably would not pay, as the cost of necessary publicity would eat up all the profits on so small an article. The last time I saw Ridgway it had about three houses and a population of about probably ten. It is to your credit that you make a house pay in a village of that size. The WORLD did, at one time, have a sign writing department. Better write to Brother Epes W. Sargent in whose department sign painting would belong.

SALT BRINE.—Nezperee, Ida., writes: "Noticing the various comments on salt brine, I concluded to try it out and report results on 110 volt current. I soak them for three days in strong brine, then dry thoroughly on top of a stove or in its oven. After the treatment the cores of the carbons are as white as snow. The net result is that I use fewer carbons and not so much current to get the same amount of light. Do you think this too much work to save a little expense?"

It is not the amount of money saving which is the important factor, my brother, but the fact that with brine soaked carbons on A.C. a much better curtain illumination is had; that is to say, the illumination is much softer and more nearly like D.C., hence, the projection is improved. Anything which improves projection pays.

A SUGGESTION.—Okla. (name of town suppressed), writes: "The Projection Department is almost invaluable now, but I think this idea will make it of even greater worth and save you considerable time. There are often times when we want information and know it has been printed in the department, but when? One spends an hour or two looking through the files of the WORLD for it, and then possibly fails to find it and writes to you, thus wasting both his own time and yours. Now, here is my idea: why not print the Projection Department on one side of the page only? The operator then can have a scrap-book, cut out the department pages and divide the articles under their different divisions, or subjects, and paste them in his book. The next time he wants information on any particular thing he can find it without lost time; also he can find what everybody has had to say on that particular subject up to date. We would thus save time and space, which are both valuable, and more of your time could be spent in considering new matters and working out new problems, instead of answering the same questions over and over. You would also then have the space to set forth the result of your labors. This would, of course, add a couple of pages to the paper, but I believe it would also add to the value of the department."

The suggestion of course contains much merit, but for a good many reasons, which you of course do not understand and could not appreciate the importance of were they set forth, it is hardly practical. I would suggest instead of this that you go through your files and make an index. This would enable you to immediately find everything that has been said on any subject which has been discussed in the department, provided of course the index be a complete one. We thank you for your words of appreciation; also for the suggestion, even thought it be not available. In making up a paper there are a great many things which must be considered, all of which have a very large bearing on the manner in which things are done.

NEW SHUTTER.—Yoakum, Tex., writes: "I have been a constant reader of the WORLD for some time and never failed to learn something therefrom. Am using a Powers 6 and 40 amperes through a Fort Wayne compensarc, with a 15-foot picture on a 65-foot throw. The picture is brilliant, but it was not always so, for my gears were worn, which allowed the shutter to slip out of time. After giving the subject considerable thought I made a new shutter on the same plan as the three-wing shutter, but with different measurements. It has entirely done away with my flicker and has increased the curtain brilliancy at least 25%. I will gladly send measurements of the shutter to any brother having the same trouble. I for one have had a great deal of trouble with my exchange lately. They seem to be rather short on reels, sometimes sending back films already shown a week or two before. There is a great deal of complaint about the service handed out by our Texas exchanges, both Licensed and Independent, this year. In closing I send my best wishes to the department and its editor."

By "flicker" I presume you mean a travel ghost, which is flashes of white, up or down, from white objects in the picture, or from letters in a title. I shall be glad to have a paper pattern of the shutter if you will send it, though frankly I have not much faith, since the proportions of three-wing shutters have been very carefully calculated after long experimenting by the machine manufacturers. It is easy enough to eliminate the travel ghost by making the main wing a little wider, and the other two correspondingly narrower, but this immediately introduces our old friend the "flicker," which is both painful and injurious to the eyes of the audience. However, send in a paper pattern and I will examine it and report. As to the service of the exchanges I could not of course comment, as I know nothing about it. Shall be glad, however, to hear from others regarding this matter. Film service has to do with projection, hence, just complaints concerning it have a right and proper place in the Propection Department; but remember that I cannot publish complaints containing the individual names of exchanges, except when absolute proof of the correctness of the complaint accompany the letter.

CARBONS.—Mission, Tex., writes: "Is it best to use two soft cored carbons, or a soft for top and a solid for the bottom? We furnish our own light with a three k.w., 125 volt generator. Our throw is 55 feet, with a 12-foot picture, but picture is not satisfactory. It has yellow shadows on the sides and I cannot eliminate ghost. This theatre is the farthest south of any house in the United States."

Presuming that, of course, your generator is D.C., I would use a cored carbon above and a solid below, but only the regular projection carbons. Don't try to use carbons such as are used for street lamps. They are too hard, and will make your light yellow. As to the ghost: try one 6½ and one 7½ lens with the 7½ in front. That ought to fit your projection lens and eliminate the ghost, though this may be helped considerably by moving the lamphouse forward or back. If I were you, I would try a half-inch cored carbon above, with a half inch solid below. I think probably your results would be better than with the ⅝ above. You will find carbon setting very thoroughly treated in the hand-book, a copy of which you now have.

SUB-RENTERS.—Harrisburg, Pa., writes: "Knowing that the MOVING PICTURE WORLD is ever ready to do all in its power to improve the conditions of the Cinematograph business in general, and realizing that it has done a great work in the matter of getting the manufacturers to adopt a uniform sprocket hole perforation, I take the liberty of calling your attention to ten splices taken from one reel of film rented from a junk exchange which lays great stress on the claim that all films sent out are thoroughly inspected before being sent to the theatres. The enclosed splices were taken from a reel which could not successfully be run through a Powers No. 6 machine which is in first class condition. The man who is owner of this Sub-Renting Exchange tells the owner of the theatre that it is the fault of the machine and not the fault of the films, as the films are all thoroughly inspected. I was called upon to examine the machine which I did, placing thereon my test reel and the same was run through the machine without as much as a frame up, yet this genial exchange man claims that the machine is at fault. I have therefore decided to submit for your judgment the ten splices which are a good sample of what the other 42 were, in the reel in question. I would like your candid views on this matter as this sub-renter has some twelve or fifteen customers and he has condemned every machine that will not pull his junk through without losing the loops. Recently he caused a good operator to lose his position by claiming the operator did not understand his business. Don't you think it a good proposition for the buying exchanges to stop this sub-renting to junk exchanges? Recently I read an article in the WORLD wherein it stated that the Universal Co. were contemplating putting a stop to sub-renting. For the operators' sake encourage the Universal and other makers to do this very thing. It will prove of great benefit to the business in general."

The patches you sent in range from bad to worse, and then still worse. In some, the sprocket holes are scarcely matched at all. Nearly all of them are stiff and badly drawn out of shape. Certainly no film with such patches in would run through a projection machine without causing trouble, and at least three or four of them would probably cause the film to climb sprocket teeth. Exchanges which send films out in this condition are working an outrage not only upon the exhibitor, but also upon the business in general. I must, however, comment on the fact that an exhibitor who will take service from a "junk exchange" is simply inviting trouble.

No reputable exchange, either licensed or independent, would send out a film in that condition, though it is a fact that in many supposed-to-be reputable exchanges the inspection is a little better than a farce. Still ten patches of that kind in one reel is pretty strong. The quickest way to put this kind of service out of business is for exhibitors to stop expecting to get something for nothing. Be willing to pay a reasonable price for good service and let the junk men severely alone. It is to be hoped that the new Exhibitors' Association of America will be able to put a quietus on the junk men, and compel a decent inspection of films. If space allowed, I could go further into this matter and point out how and where the exhibitor himself is very largely to blame for such conditions.

FROM ALASKA.—Fairbanks, Alaska, writes: "I received the hand-book and am glad to say I found therein many things of value, though I never did have very much trouble. I have been getting the best results in this town. Run four reels and one illustrated song to a show, which lasts 70 minutes. I only use one machine, but have no long waits between pictures. I would like to know the average life of an Edison machine. I have run one for a year and cannot see very much wear. Can I use the flanged sprockets on the older style Edison? They prevent the film from jumping; I have found that out by using the two machines. We run 12 reels a week—that is three nights a week, which is all this place will stand for."

It would be impossible, Fairbanks, to give you any estimate on the average life of an Edison machine, since it would depend altogether on the kind of usage it received; also it would depend on what one understood on the "average life." I saw one machine not long ago which the man proudly informed me had been in constant use for six years, and was still in good condition. Inquiry, however, developed the fact that he ran two hours and a half every evening and that practically every part of the machine had been renewed during that time, with the exception of the frame itself, and that all the bearings in the frame had been bushed. After all this repairing he had after all only an old and out-of date machine which produced results far inferior to the modern up-to-date mechanism. I know of no reason why the flanged sprockets can not be used on the other style Edison. If there is a reason will some brother kindly inform me of it?

A QUESTION.—Oklahoma writes: "Why is it that when I succeed in stopping the side motion of my picture it jumps up and down, and when I stop that, then it has side motion? Machine is an Exhibition Model Edison with new star and bushings; also I have a ghost in the picture. Tried moving the lamphouse backward and forward without result. Current is 133 cycle; one 7½ and one 8½ condenser; throw about 70 feet."

I cannot tell you why your picture should have an up and down movement when you eliminate side motion, or vice versa. I think the up and down movement is there all the time and when it also has side motion the eye does not catch it, as you say the up and down movement is only a little. Provided your intermittent sprocket is kept perfectly clean the up and down movement would indicate one of three things, viz: (a) Star not true. (b) Intermittent sprocket shaft sprung. (c) Intermittent sprocket not true. The side motion might be caused either by the flanges of the guide rollers on top of the gate being too far apart or end motion in the intermittent sprocket. The remedy for the former is to get a new roller. The remedy for the latter is to set the bushings which carry the shaft in a little, until there is no end motion in the shaft. As to the ghost: You have not told me the width of your picture, therefore cannot give you advice as to the focal length of condensers. I would suggest, however, that the ghost is very possibly due to fault in carbon setting (see page 88 of the hand-book). It is also possibly due to excessive spherical aberration in your condensing lenses.

LOS ANGELES.—I would like to have a report from the Los Angeles Operators' Union as to the licensing conditions in that city. I am in receipt of several letters in which facts are set forth which are, if true, a disgrace to that city. I do not wish to go very far into this matter in print until I know positively that the alleged facts are indeed facts. Any communication from the Los Angeles Union must be official, but will be treated as strictly confidential. If Los Angeles' schools are turning out operators who secure a license after two weeks of study, and if the Los Angeles authorities are holding an examination which is merely a farce, then it is time the fact was made public for the good of all concerned. These charges are made; also charges involving some of the larger houses of Los Angeles, which, it is claimed, employ operators after two weeks' study, in their operating rooms and do even worse things than this. This is by no means all the writers set forth, but I do not care to say more until I have the facts from a responsible body like the Operators Union of Los Angeles.

AN INTERESTING LETTER.—Union City, Tenn., writes: "I have, during the past three years, received much benefit through the department and your hand-books. When, what and where will be the next one and what price, for I want a copy as soon as it is ready? Need it in my business. Projection is very good here. Two houses are devoted to the photoplay; the licensed house running 60 to 90 days' service. His equipment is first class; a Standard machine, mercury arc rectifier and Solar screen. The independent house, where I am employed, runs 18 reels a week for a regular program and usually they have one or two special features in addition. I use 60 amperes, A.C., through a compensarc, and do not have a bit of trouble with it. I receive a good many films which, try as hard as I may, I cannot get in sharp focus. If I get one scene all right, the next one will be off. I notice a comment about 'Jimmy-the-Usher' becoming an operator. I am afraid 'Jimmy-the-Usher' has broken into more places than the operating room, judging from the film I receive. Patches wrong side to and backwards; misframes, etc. All films are supposed to be inspected at the exchange before sending them out I believe, but they reach me in all kinds of shapes and conditions—even pinned together sometimes. If I did not do my own inspecting, I would put on a fine show—I don't think. The exchange man seems to proceed on the idea of 'get the money'—and let the operator do the best he can. I am prepared to say that no man can learn operating in a few weeks or months. I served more than two years under a first class man before he would even let me run a reel through the machine. That was between eight and nine years ago, and I do not know it all yet. I get lots of help through the department and learn something every day. I still have a 'coop' I am sorry to say, but have been promised a modern operating room in the near future. Will send photo of same when I get it. My picture is 16 feet, with a 79-feet throw, on a mirroroid screen. Have a dandy picture. No eye strain or glare. I notice you advise a two-wing shutter for A.C. I am using a three-wing shutter and find it just the thing. There is no flicker. I wish there was a local of the I. A. T. S. E. somewhere close so that I could affiliate. I do not allow anyone in the coop (I will have to say 'coop' this time), not even the manager, when I am running. I go in and lock the door. Here is a trick that I use to advantage: Several years ago I had a gear wheel broken by having a large hard-shelled bug fly in and get caught in the gearing. To prevent such accidents, I screened the port holes with common fly-screen. It stops the annoyance of having to pick bugs out of your neck. This does not interfere with the projection of a clear picture. I put in a great deal of my time under canvas and have met with some funny experiences on the road, but space is too valuable to allow of my setting them forth, hence I close with the wish that yourself and the department may live long and flourish."

Am glad to know you consider me your friend; also to learn that projection in your city is on a high plane. May it so continue. The out-of-focus effect you complain of is the fault of the manufacturers, and it is to be hoped that such crude work will be eliminated in the near future. Yes, Jimmy the usher has broken in a great many places; in fact into about every branch of the business I think, but he will be eliminated in the course of time. When you get that new operating room, be sure and have a vent flue at least 18 inches in diameter, a 24-inch would be better, straight through to the roof if you can get it, or at least to the open air somewhere. I have not advised the use of a two-wing shutter, except on 60-cycle current. With this current, if one speeds up to as much as 75 per minute, which is necessary for a few (a very few) subjects, the two-wings on the three-swing shutter go in synchronism with one side of the alternations, producing flashes of light. If a crank speed of 65 is not exceeded, then the three-wing shutter is all right with 60 cycle current. I would suppose that unless the screen be very fine copper wire, it would cut off quite a little percentage of the illumination. I would also suppose that it would create an out-of-focus effect, however, in this I may be wrong.

FILM TANK.—Brawley, Calif., writes: "I have been a constant reader of the WORLD for two long years and like the rest, I would not be without it. You would have heard from me long before this, but for the information I receive weekly through the Projection Department. I am enclosing a sketch of the film cabinet I have designed and made to keep my films moist. It is simple and no doubt has been tried before, but I have seen no description of it. The idea is to have enough water to reach half way up the lamp, then have a switch near the operator so that he can turn it on or off when necessary. It is surprising in what nice condition it keeps the film. That salt brine scheme is a good one. I got satisfactory results by soaking carbons four days and drying them in an electric stove for four hours."

The film cabinet is unique. As near as I can make it out, the lamp is placed in a vessel in a compartment under the films, then the vessel is partly filled with water so as to about half cover the incandescent globe. This, of course, would keep the water warm and keep the air inside the cabinet quite moist.

DEATH OF W. H. JOHNSON.

William H. Johnson, manager of the Colonial Theater, Kalamazoo, Mich., and the friend of every child in that city, died Tuesday, June 25, of heart trouble. He was 60 years of age and the pioneer moving picture man of this city. He was a kindly, sympathetic and courteous gentleman and very popular with everyone fortunate enough to know him. He was especially fond of children, and many is the little one who has been given a chance to see the pictures as his guest. The funeral was conducted by the Elks.

W. O. KENAN REMODELS HIS CRESCENT.

W. O. Kenan, of Adrian, Mich., has just remodeled and beautified the Crescent Theater. He says if there is a finer theater in his part of the State he wants to see it. Mr. Kenan uses Independent films, of which two are eight-day and one fifteen-day reels. Included in his equipment are a piano, a big organ, trap drums and a Victrola. Mr. Kenan takes special pride in his music and in his projection. He reports patronage excellent and increasing. Mr. Kenan's staff is composed of Dolly Kenan, secretary and treasurer; Carl and Opal, "the Kenan Twins," violinists and vocalists; Frank Payne, operator, and Carl Lagerquist, pianist.

MILANO PRODUCTIONS THROUGH UNIVERSAL.

One of the greatest acquisitions to the Universal program is the releases of the Milano Studio. When it is considered that the Milano people were responsible for the greatest spectacular productions ever shown in this country, Dante's Inferno and Homer's Odyessy, the Universal have certainly secured for the exhibitors a series of pictures of a caliber that state right buyers would be willing to pay fabulous prices to control. The first picture to be shown under the new arrangement with the Universal is "The Wolf's Prey," a two-reel subject with the usual elaborate fittings and masterly acting of the previous Milano successes.

OBSERVATIONS.

BY OUR MAN ABOUT TOWN.

HERETOFORE motion pictures have never figured in connection with politics, except to serve as a drawing attraction, or time killer, between announcements of returns. This is the first year in which I have heard decided opinions in favor of having motion picture cameras in operation at political conventions. The subject has been so widely discussed that many exhibitors are asking if it is true that pictures were taken at Chicago and Baltimore. Anybody can furnish the answer. I heard one man ask, "How could pictures worthy of reproduction as moving pictures be taken of such events? It would simply be a reproduction of personages with no real action."

* * *

But, honestly, as a non-partisan, after reflection, don't you think the motion picture camera could have made good both in the Windy City and in Baltimore? To my mind some of the scenes would put the Paul Rainey reproductions on the blink. How many of the delegates, and how many of their friends, would not pay to see a re-enactment of what has been inflicted upon the two great cities? Honest to goodness? I am inclined to believe that when the next national conventions are held the motion picture cameras will be working full time with the newspaper reporters.

* * *

Let me interject a prophecy. If the cameras are on the job the delegates will be inclined to stick more closely to business. "Seeing is believing," many say. There are thousands of oratorical phenomenons who will go to the extreme to fill the columns of the press, but would rather vote for the other fellow than see themselves as others see them. The caricaturists do great work on such occasions, but how mild their efforts seem when one thinks of what the camera can really do?

* * *

What at first appears, or sounds, like a joke may some day be a severe reality. Of course, it is understood, that the cameras must be fully protected, especially against any physical demonstration by some conscience stricken delegate. On such occasions some delegates will forget themselves, and after everything is said and done a desire for that forgetfulness is so strong that the sight of a camera makes them desperate. Of course nothing of a serious character could be counted upon in the direction stated; but the fund of comedy would be inexhaustible. For instance: Let us look upon the delegate trying to get at the delegate who has denounced him as a robber. Nothing is more funny than to see him, with clenched fists swaying in the air, and froth dropping from his lips as it does from the rim of a glass held by a thirsty traveler who prefers the real stuff, and then see him watch that his colleagues have the same firm hold on him as those of the other fellow have secured upon their champion. And, then, let us look upon the combatants arraigning each other before the bar. It is an old story, but would make good in the "movies."

* * *

The summer signs are once more displayed at many picture houses that are unable to furnish the public with ice caned seats and an arctic atmosphere. Here and there we read, "Closed for the summer," "The heat beat us; will see you again," "Gone, but not for long," "Remember us, and we will entertain you," and all of that kind of good old stuff that seems to please both sides. Yes, the summer is here, and I believe I have been with all the boys in handing out the same kind of blarney to help keep alive interest in the good old "movies," as many call them these days. You know it requires less words and consumes less time to say "movies" than it does to speak of "photoplays." I understand it was the fertile mind of a "rah rah" boy who conceived the term "movies." Perhaps it was the same kind of a mind that contrived a new scheme that has been floated to make victims of many dear old souls that yearn to be owners of theaters upon a limited outlay and dream of the thousands that are spent by the public to see moving—no, motion pic—I mean photoplays.

* * *

Yes, I guess many of you have heard of the new scheme. Take the daily papers and read the many for sale "ads." I picked out a number of them in yesterday's papers. I will not quote the advertisements, for the reason that I have not been able to personally investigate all of them and do not wish to do an injustice to anybody who is acting in good faith. But I will say that many of the offerings are "plants," launched with all the ingenuity that attended the efforts of the sagacious in the days of our grandfathers and in the days of their grandsons.

* * *

There are sufficient publications devoted to the interests of the motion picture business with sufficient available space to attract the attention of all interested in the business, and there is no reason under the sun why anyone prompted by good faith should not take advantage of that means of publicity. It gives more color to the sincerity of an advertisement when the advertiser places it where it is most likely to be looked for, and attract the desired attention.

When professional people seek jobs they do not go over the "Help Wanted" columns. Imagine a manager seeking a character spending half an hour perusing the "Situations Wanted!" Which appears no more ridiculous than to imagine a manager of a picture house searching the agricultural column for the latest film productions.

* * *

I think there is an excellent field for the publications devoted to the welfare and future of the motion pictures if they will undertake to investigate some of the advertisements offering picture houses for sale and asking for people with money to become partners in operations. Many "wise" ones are in the field and should be exposed. In answer to this some one may say he is not his brother's keeper and that if his brother is fool enough to get bitten it is his own fault. When applied to the general welfare of the legitimate motion picture field this argument carries with it as much logic as a sieve will carry water. Everybody and everything that hurts the business should receive on the head the hardest possible blow in the shortest space of time.

* * *

This is the season of the year when many people who know nothing of the business make the prediction that the bottom has dropped out of the motion picture business. Most of these people seldom leave their particular localities. They do not travel into other parts of the country and see places opened at the seaside and other resorts at a ratio of 500, or more, per cent. When the time arrives for those who know to talk we will hear some things said. Many city managers have closed their places for the summer, but few—very few, have thrown up their leases. It is not a violation of confidence to say that some of the people who are aggressive in their predictions as to the future of the pictures sleep with one eye are choice sites. I overheard two well known managers, with tears in their eyes, trying to persuade a man not to risk his money in a place he had selected, and the next morning they were busy trying to get the landlord to give them the lease.

MOTION PICTURES TO TEST AUTO DRIVERS.

Professor Hugo Munsterberg, the famous member of the psychology department of Harvard College, Cambridge, Mass., is greatly interested in the Cinematograph, both as a means of entertainment—and as an aid to the science of which he is a shining light. The professor finds that moving pictures can determine whether a man is qualified to operate an automobile; Professor Munsterberg puts the following plan into operation. A man is at the wheel of an automobile in a darkened room, and the "auto" is so fixed that, although all the machinery may be used and is movable, the car will not move. Just in front of the machine, there is a screen upon which pictures are projected. A spotlight is thrown upon the embryo chauffeur, and a picture is suddenly flashed upon the screen, showing a child or a dog running into the street, just in front of the stationary automobile. Now comes the test. The chauffeur must handle his car as if it were really in motion, and about to reach the child or dog. Upon the speed and accuracy of the chauffeur's movements depend his ability to run a machine on the thoroughfares. These tests show that some men do just the right thing, and with speed and dispatch, while others take short, but most valuable seconds to decide what must be done. Still others fail absolutely, and go through the operations that would make the "auto" smash into the victim on the screen. This is a new use for motography.

NEW CLEVELAND HOUSE OPENS.

The beautiful Gordon Square Theater, Cleveland's latest photo playhouse, was formally opened to the public June 20th. It is located at the corner of Detroit and West 65th Streets, and has a seating capacity of 1,500. A new ventilating system has been installed and the theater is absolutely fireproof. Vaudeville and the latest photoplays will be given daily, and the opening performances found large and appreciative audiences.

Music for the Picture

BY CLARENCE E. SINN.

THE Plaza, one of Chicago's numerous vaudeville theaters which is showing pictures for the summer season, has raised its scale of prices from five to ten cents—"Kidlets Five," the announcement reads. I stopped in this theater Sunday afternoon to see the Thanhouser two-reel picture of "Under Two Flags"—a good picture. The audience gave it a "reception"—that is, they applauded the title before the picture began.

The pianist who is familiar with the score of "Daughter of the Regiment" (though the opera has nothing to do with this picture) will find a number of little military movements which can be made useful here. A military atmosphere should predominate the music throughout the second reel and a part of the first.

First Reel.

1. Semi-military (the allegro of "Raymond" overture for example) till horse and rider are seen. Change to—
2. Allegretto ("In a Shady Nook," Feist) till subtitle, "Off for the Races." Then increase the tempo till race-track scene.
3. Galop. Begin this soft and moderate tempo, increase and swell for race. Bell when horses come under the wire. Play till: "Bertie Makes an Enemy, Etc." then gradually work up to—
4. Agitato (through two scenes).
5. Neutral (waltz or allegretto) till race scene.
6. Galop (long). Work this piano and forte according to action till "Bertie Refuses Financial Assistance, Etc."
7. Waltz lento (long) till "A Week Later."
8. Semi-mysterious, one scene, then gradually modulate to soft agitato till "The Train Is Wrecked."
9. Hurry till title "In Africa."
10. "Marseillaise" till "Some Months Later."
11. Waltz lento till close.

Second Reel.

1. Moderate march tempo. Well marked and keep time with her steps. Continue till change of scene.
2. Military march for riders ("Light Cavalry" for example) through two scenes; change to—
3. (Arabs riding) Short Oriental ("Imam" or "Mystic Shrine"), one scene, then—
4. "Marseillaise" (battle scene) till "After the Battle"; continue, but subdued, till "Cigarette Befriends an Arab Sheik."
5. Agitato till "The Colonel Entertains, Etc."
6. Semi-military (similar to opening of first reel) till "Recognized by His Brother, Etc."
7. Neutral (Intermezzo or light waltz) till "Bertie Is Arrested, Etc." (when officer comes down to them).
8. Agitato till "He Is Sentenced to Die."
9. Semi-mysterious (2nd movement in "Raymond" overture or "Lady Moon" song in "Bohemian Girl." First part of Suppe's "Pique Dame" overture is good). Continue till "That Night, Etc."
10. Sentimental ("Miami," by Neil Moret) till "A Sandstorm Sweeps, Etc."
11. Agitato soft (wind effect) till "At Dawn."
12. Arab music, similar to No. 3, this reel, till guards take Bertie from his cell.
13. Plaintive (minor key) till they offer to bind his eyes.
14. Dead march till shot.
15. Plaintive till flag is brought to her.
16. "Marseillaise," softly, and plaintive till end of reel.

"Heroes of the Blue and Gray" (Champion).

1. "Comrades" (old song) till seated at table.
2. Lively music till change.
3. Allegretto neutral ("In the Shadows") till title "This One Under Grant."
4. "Yankee Doodle" till "This One Under Lee."
5. "Bonnie Blue Flag" and "Dixie" till battle.
6. Hurry, long (sound effects of gun and cannon shots, bugle, breaking and falling timbers, etc). Continue music till dead soldier is carried front of tent.
7. Plaintive till "Memorial Day."
8. Battle Hymn of the Republic," "Tramp, Tramp, Tramp" —play the entire number softly till they are gathered around grave.
9. Taps, at title, "On Gettysburg Field."
10. "The Vacant Chair" till "On Antietam."
11. "Carry Me Back to Old Virginia" till change of scene.
12. At title, "Let Bygones Be Bygones," play "The Knot of Blue and Gray" (old song) or sentimental music till end.

"Deerslayer's Retribution" (Pathe).

1. Indian music (there is a good number in Victor Herbert's "It Happened in Nordland"). Continue till arrow is shot.
2. Agitato till Indian is thrown.
3. "Western" intermezzo ("Starlight Sioux" or "Blue Feather" for example). Play till Indian village; then—
4. Indian music ("Sun Dance," Witmark) till fort scene.
5. March till they find dead soldier.
6. Plaintive till Indian village.
7. Indian music till change.
8. 6-8 movement from "Light Cavalry" overture till change (alternate these two numbers for changing scenes till three Indians crouch down in lower left corner).
9. Agitato—"Segue" till—
10. "Light Cavalry" (same as No. 8) till Indian tribe seen.
11. Indian music (alternate these two numbers as before to fit changing scenes till Indians at fort).
12. Intermezzo (similar to No. 3) till close.

"The Filibusters" (Kalem).

1. Any neutral—light waltz or intermezzo—till title, "Anita, the Spanish Girl."
2. Lively (march) till boat sails away.
3. Agitato, soft and crescendo till after raft scene.
4. Heavy mysterious till change of scene, then—
5. Agitato till "Anita's Suspicions Are Confirmed."
6. Mysterious (tremolo—long) till "Arms and Ammunition for the Insurrectos."
7. Agitato till "The Chase."
8. Hurry (long) till "Safely Returned."
9. Allegretto till close.

"In the Pupil of His Eye" (Vitagraph).

1. Neutral (some light music of the "Novelette" order) till "The Senator's Ward, Etc."
2. Waltz till "News of Senator W.'s Murder." Change to—
3. "Valse Lento" ("Charme d'Amour" will answer) till "The Investigation."
3. Semi-mysterious—long (2nd movement of "Raymond" overture for example) till "The Flashlight."
4. Mysterious (heavy) till "Success."
5. Similar to No. 3 till "The Third Degree."
6. Mysterious till "He Left Me Money."
7. Agitato till prison scene; finish with moderate-full chords.

"Lincoln's Gettysburg Address" (Vitagraph).

This remarkable picture will no doubt be interpreted in a number of ways according to the several viewpoints of the pianist. It seems to me that inasmuch as the character of Lincoln and his address are the central part of the picture it were better to ignore the change of scene immediately after the opening and play a patriotic air right through. When Cæsar's army is shown we are not really looking at it. Of course, this could hold through the entire picture, but the other numbers suggested are mostly patriotic or descriptive, and should not detract from the general atmosphere of the subject. However, I will leave that particular point to the pianist.

1. "America" ("My Country, 'Tis of Thee") till Liberty Bell is shown. Have big bell effect here.
2. Fife and drum tune for "The Spirit of '76" scene; then—
3. "America" again till "We Are Met on a Great Battlefield."

4. "Dixie" and segue to a hurry till "We Have Come to Dedicate, Etc."
5. "Yankee Doodle," change to hurry, p and f, till "It Is Altogether Fitting and Proper."
6. "Battle Cry of Freedom" till change of scene.
7. Hurry till rebel camp, then "Bonnie Blue Flag" till Federal camp.
8. "Yankee Doodle" (watch for bugle call), then—
9. Very long hurry (can add to effect in these battle scenes by introducing "Dixie" and "Bonnie Blue Flag" for Confederate forces; "Yankee Doodle" and "Marching Through Georgia" when Federal forces are seen. Use these to work up climaxes). Continue till "It Is for Us, the Living."
10. Something like the Apotheoses at the end of "Faust," or "Pilgrims' Chorus" from Thanhouser—long scene (at cue, "It Is Rather for Us To Be")—manacles are severed by flaming sword. Hold a chain up, strike it sharply with hammer, then drop chain to floor. "That We Highly Resolve."
11. "America," softly, till flag appears, then—
12. "Star Spangled Banner" till close.

I wish to acknowledge my indebtedness to Mr. King's Orpheum Theater orchestra for sound effects and a large part of the musical suggestions.

JOHN BUNNY IN MERRIE ENGLAND.

Mr. Bunny has fulfilled all predictions concerning his advent in England. He is a furore. Whenever he appears upon the street in London he has to "keep moving." If he stops for any length of time he is in danger of arrest for blockading the sidewalk. He is so well-known by sight, through his appearances in the Vitagraph pictures, that everywhere he goes he is recognized and hailed with glee by the general run of mankind. The same is true of him in New York. He cannot stop and talk to a friend on Broadway for more than a minute with any degree of privacy. Everybody wants to get a look at the man who has handed them so many good laughs.

The English press has taken him up and makes much of him. It can be safely said that since he left the legitimate for moving pictures the fame and popularity of John Bunny has increased a thousand fold. Millions know him now where only thousands knew him before. We are reproducing herewith a cartoon of Mr. Bunny as Mr. Pickwick, taken from the Bioscope, an English motion picture trade journal. We also publish a portrait of Mr. Lawrence Trimble, who accompanied Mr. Bunny to England. Mr. Trimble is directing the production of an elaborate series of pictures based upon the "Pickwick Papers" of Charles Dickens, with Bunny in the title role. The casting of this rotund comedian for Pickwick is regarded as an inspiration. For the character he is ideally fitted; by nature, by inclination, by experience and by education. "Pickwick Papers," sponsored by the Vitagraph Company, acted by Mr. Bunny and directed by Mr. Trimble, should easily be the greatest comedy feature ever produced. At this writing the pictures are nearly completed.

Lawrence Trimble.

DEVELOPING WARNER'S FEATURES SYSTEM.

Few feature film concerns have made the strides in point of development and extension of service recorded by the Warner's features. On a recent western trip Mr. A. Warner, the proprietor, succeeded in establishing many branches in large commercial centers for the more expeditious distribution of his pictures. He has since concluded a deal by which the branches at Cleveland, Pittsburgh and Philadelphia will be operated exclusively by H. M. Warner. These branches will be advertised extensively in connection with the campaign of the Warner's features, but will have no further business connection with Mr. A. Warner.

Mr. Ben Abrams, well known to the moving picture trade, is in charge of the Philadelphia office, located in the Heed Building, Filbert Street. Mr. Stern is in charge of the office at Indianapolis.

Messrs. H. M. and S. L. Warner are in Omaha for the purpose of establishing a branch of Warner's features in that city, where they report prospects very bright.

REYNOLDS-HOFFMAN.

Mr. Luther J. Reynolds, of the staff of the Moving Picture World, and Miss Margaret Hoffman were married at the home of the bride on Wednesday evening, July 10. Immediately after the wedding ceremony, Mr. and Mrs. Reynolds left for Syracuse, Buffalo, Niagara Falls and the Great Lakes, which will constitute their honeymoon trip.

Picture Players at a Turkish Wedding.

Miss Gene Gauntier Writes an Interesting Account of a Visit to a Turkish Harem.

MISS GENE GAUNTIER, leading lady with Kalem Company, now located in London, writes thus of an interesting experience which she and Miss Alice Hollister had while in Egypt:

"The feature of our week in Cairo was a Turkish wedding. It was a double ceremony, two millionaire brothers being the grooms and one of the brides was a relative of the Khedive. We highly appreciated the favor extended us as we were the only English speaking people there. When I say we, you understand I mean Alice Hollister and myself, as the boys were barred. We were accompanied by the French maid of the Hollister children, who coached us in the necessary procedure, and all of it was very strange.

"As we approached the mansion the whole lawn was brilliantly illuminated by myriads of many colored lights. A band played Egyptian music and autos and carriages whirled from the door. We were helped out by two great, long, lean, lank, monkey-faced eunuchs. Ugh! How clammy their hands were! And there were dozens of them attending the visiting princesses and scores of ladies representing the nobility.

"The stone and marble palace, built in the form of a crescent, is but two stories in height. One-half is reserved for the men, while the place we entered was the harem. Right here I want to say that respected and wealthy Egyptians do not, as a rule, have more than one wife. The building of the home had required more than a year's labor and was thrown open for the first time to receive the bride.

"Inside a great hall confronted us, with gigantic marble staircases leading to the upper floor. Everywhere swarmed Egyptians, Turkish and Circassian women unveiled and, for the most part, many were exquisite beauties, richly gowned in the latest Parisian fashions. They spoke beautiful French and sparkled with jewels. But oh, the contrasts! Mingling with these beauties, laughing and conversing, were the blackest of negresses, the ugliest of concubines and the fattest and grossest of Turks. Many a nice old Southern mammy I saw, with her head done up in a gaudy handkerchief—the pet of some Egyptian. The latter were content to squat themselves on the floor in a circle, when they were not in the supper room, tearing the meat with their hands and gulping down champagne as if it were water. Contrasts, however, are what make the world interesting and I was happy in my surprise at the beauty and charm of the majority.

"The wedding presents displayed on the upper floor consisted largely of diamonds—tiaras, rings, necklaces. Not one present that I saw was worth less than a hundred pounds and many represented a fortune. One necklace for the princess had fifty diamonds, no one of which was under two carats. But the jewels in the cases were more than rivaled by the ones worn by the other princesses who were present. I learned afterwards that their wealth is gauged by the display of jewels, so this accounts for their brilliant adornment. One princess had on her forehead a pure white stone, delicately cut and as large as a walnut.

"We were shown over the entire harem, and I must say I was disappointed in finding it furnished in the most luxurious European fashion. There were no low divans, no Oriental costumes—except the motherhubbards of the concubines—nothing to suggest the harem of the past, other than the shuttered windows which enable the inmates to look out without being observed. There is a wall separating the harem from the men's portion. Around the shuttered windows crowds of lovely women hovered all evening, devouring the men with their eyes and giggling like so many school girls.

"There were smoking rooms and smoking stands everywhere and a score of women passed constantly through the throngs with baskets of cigarettes and matches.

Pen Sketches of Kalem Picture Makers at Santa Monica, Cal.

"One of the maids, a black negress who had courteous manners and spoke exquisite French, took charge of us and conducted us to the supper room. All this time we were waiting for the first bride to make up her mind to come downstairs. I have never seen such a buffet. It contained everything imaginable. Great long tables were laden with every delicacy, irrespective of season. There were dozens of bottles of champagne, beer, liquors and wines, and a lamb, cooked whole, held a garland of flowers in its mouth. The sight was dazzling.

"Then the monotonous Egyptian instruments announced the approach of the bride and we hastened to a room off the main hall where a raised dais holding two great golden chairs had been placed for her. A dozen or more dancing women, beating on skin instruments, preceded her. She came unveiled down the stairs and was a perfect type of Turkish beauty. Her hair was banged in the latest Parisian mode and her gown and veil were of priceless rosepoint. A crown of diamonds fastened her veil and ropes of gems adorned her neck. There was but one peculiar thing about her—one thing that was not Parisian. From the headdress descended on either side to the floor streamers of silver tinsel, like the ornaments of a Christmas tree. As the second bride wore the same thing, I decided it was an adjunct to a Turkish wedding toilette.

"The bridegroom kept her waiting nearly ten minutes. Then the music (?) sounded again, her veil was hastily adjusted and she arose to meet him. He was young—only 19—and visibly ill at ease. He felt awkwardly for her hand and kissed it. Then he clumsily lifted her veil and throwing it back, seated himself beside her and there they remained. Not once did he look at the bride he had never seen, but she was more curious than he. Without turning her head, her bright black eyes would shoot quick, sidelong glances at the groom. Thus they remained for perhaps five minutes while no one spoke and everyone stared. Then he arose, offered her his arm and they passed upstairs to their apartments, to leave presently for a cruise up the Nile in a Dayahbeah. This concluded the first ceremony.

"It was an hour or more before the second bride—more lovely than the first—came down. She was only fifteen, but looked much older. Her eyes were innocent of the kohl and her lips of the rouge which adorned the first bride and, in fact, every other Turkish lady I have seen. Her gown and veil were of magnificent gold lace and the second ceremony contained some novelties. When the bridegroom entered he stopped at a richly embroidered prayer rug at the foot of the steps, removed his pumps from exquisitely small feet, mumbled his prayers, knelt and touched his forehead to the floor a number of times, then advanced to his bride, unveiled her and kissed her impulsively. Need I say that we liked the second ceremony much the better?

"After that came more supper. The tables had been cleared and a second repast, even more splendid than the first, greeted our eyes. Here it was that we met an emancipated Turkish girl. She came in with several others, laughing vivaciously and full of mischief. How pretty she was and how beautifully gowned! She spoke English with such a fetching little accent that I thought her French, but in response to my inquiry she replied, 'Oh, no! I'm Turkish with American ideas. And I shall nevaire get married—no Mees! Ze men zey are very nice for me to amuse myself wees, but marry? Dear me, no.' Then she added hastily, 'Oh, but yes, I haf been loved often—many men haf adored me.' I neither doubt her nor blame the men, for she was fascinating."

NEWMAN WILL BE AT CHICAGO.

The Newman Manufacturing Company, of Cincinnati, Ohio, advises the Moving Picture World that it will have a big display of brass rail work, brass frame and easel equipment at the exhibitors' conventions in Toledo and Chicago. The Newman goods are meeting with general approval wherever installed. During the past week equipments have been contracted for Berryman, Lexington, Ky.; Hanley, Dayton, Ohio; Cosy, Covington, Ky.; Wagner, Newport, Ky.; Masonic Temple Auditorium, Little Rock, Ark.

DANTE'S "INFERNO" PULLS GOOD.

Mr. J. Edward Clark, 57 Leah Street, Utica, N. Y., has bought of the Superior Feature Film Company, 32 Union Square, New York City, the up-State rights for the five-reel Milano production of Dante's "Inferno." Mr. Clark has two sets of film in operation and reports business as being all that could be expected.

New Powers Star.

Florence Barker Joins the Producing Company of the Powers Picture Players as Leading Woman.

Miss Florence Barker, late leading lady of the Biograph Company, has joined the ranks of the Powers picture players and will appear in the leading feminine roles in the dramas and comedies to be released by that branch of the Universal Film Manufacturing Company.

Miss Barker is one of the best known of the leading women in the moving picture business, having appeared in films made on both sides of the Atlantic ocean. She was leading woman for the Pathe Freres Company in London and Paris for some time, appearing in the important roles in all the notable films produced by that concern. Returning to America she became a member of the Biograph stock company, taking the important feminine parts in nearly all of the successes of that company up to two weeks ago when she cast her fortunes with the Powers picture players. Among the many pictures in which she has appeared are "Jane Shore," "Little Emily," "Puppets of Fate" and "In Cromwell Days," in Europe. With the Biograph Company she has taken the leading roles in such notable pictures as "Priscilla's Picture," "Way of the World," "Oaths and the Man," "Orange Blossoms," "The Call," "Diamond Star," and a hundred others of equally well known reputation.

Miss Florence Barker.

Miss Barker has had a wide and valuable experience in stock companies, appearing in many of the principal cities in excellent companies in which she was featured. This experience has been valuable to her in her picture work, as she plays a wide range of characters in a manner true to life. With the Powers Company she will be directed by Mr. Frank Powell, under whom she worked in England, and they understand each other so perfectly that the result will be a revelation in pictures. She will also be associated with Edwin August, with whom she starred in the Biograph Company.

Manufacturers Advance Notes

"LOVE AND POLITICS" (Eclair).

A timely picture based upon political intrigue not unfamiliar to all who keep in touch with the trend of public events. Woven into the more strenuous story of a junto of scheming politicians who are trying to ensnare the governor is a love story in which the governor's daughter and a young politician are the principals. The young man has been turned down by the governor for presuming to advise him in respect to certain political deals of doubtful character, after which he gets into the game himself and learns the plans of the politicians, which he exposes in time to save the governor's reputation. Incidentally he wins the girl.

Scene from "Love and Politics" (Eclair).

ECLAIR'S "ROBIN HOOD" COMING.

Eclair will shortly release a three-part picture based upon the story of "Robin Hood," the famous outlaw of Sherwood forest, of whom much is told in song and fable. As an example of motion picture photography this subject is a revelation. An extended review of this picture, liberally illustrated, will appear in an early issue of the World.

HALLBERG A. C. TO D. C. ECONOMIZER FOR CANADA.

As an evidence of the widespread demand for Hallberg A. C. to D. C. Economizers, Mr. J. H. Hallberg, "The Economizer Man," reports the sale of one of his 40-ampere sets to the Lyceum Theater, Winnipeg, Manitoba. The sale of Hallberg Standard A. C. Economizers continues surprisingly large, and shipments of these best known current savers and light producers are being made to all parts of the country.

STRONG KLEINE RELEASES THIS WEEK.

The Cines schedule for Tuesday, July 16th, is a splendid example of the high class dramatic ability of the Cines players. The title, "Disowned," rather indicates the nature of the play, and in the part of the daughter of the rich nobleman, who falls in love with her tutor contrary to the wishes of her parents, Miss Josephine Scotti, displays a fine sense of interpretation. Mr. Guido Serena portrays with splendid feeling and realism the character of the penniless but proud professor, who wins the love of his employer's daughter and who valiantly tries to properly take care of her after they are married. The scenes depicting their vicissitudes, hopelessness and final act of desperation are especially well carried out. The conclusion is quite different from what the audience is led to expect, but comes as a pleasant surprise.

Scene from "The Grandmother" (Kleine-Eclipse).

"The Grandmother," is the title of the Eclipse schedule for Wednesday, July 17th, and is a really fine dramatic offering with a gripping heart interest which is sure to appeal to all ages. The real interest centers about the good old lady's great-grandson, a very clever little tot, about four years of age, who succeeds in his innocently earnest and touching little way, with his great-grandmother's co-operation in reuniting his young and widowed mother and her parents from whom she has become estranged through her wilful marriage against their wishes.

Scheduled for Saturday, July 20th, is the Cines comedy-drama, "The Part the Servant Played," in which Mr. Alfred Bracci, as the wayward son, and Mr. Lorenzo Lupi, as the severe father who opposes strenuously his son's engagement to a young lady to whom he does not approve, portrays their characters in a realistic and convincing manner. The character of the old family servant, who plays such an important part in the comedy action, is excellently taken by one of the prominent players of the Cines Company. He assumes the privilege of long service with the family and plays the role of peacemaker between father and son so effectively that, where otherwise a domestic tragedy might easily occur, peace and unison are once more restored.

"IN THE NICK OF TIME," A SENSATIONAL WESTERN.

"In the Nick of Time," scheduled for release by the American Film Mfg. Co., on Wednesday, July 17, is the second Wednesday picture produced by W. D. Emerson, the American's new producer. It is distinctly Western in atmosphere and contains those features so much in demand by exchanges; the wild rides, the Indian attack and the treacherous Mexican, all woven into a splendid story that will grip the attention from the main title to Scene from "In the Nick of Time" (American).

the end. The story centers about a young man in love with his brother's wife's sister. In making a heavy deposit of gold at the Wells-Fargo office, he is observed by a Mexican who later, in company with a party of drunken Indians, robs the express. There is an exciting moment when the young man cuts the harness, throws his sweetheart over the pony and rides through a hail of shot toward town. The picture has much to commend it and will be welcomed by exchanges desiring the distinctly Western picture.

"THE DERELICT'S RETURN" (Lubin).

This photo story will be much appreciated by mothers of wayward boys, who, at a certain age, get tired of the restraint of the apron-strings. There was much that was good in the composition of Harry Byers, but he became fascinated with the pool-table and could not resist the atmosphere of the saloons and the company of the thoughtless and dissipated set. Home was irk some and, although he had a liking for Beth, the Ministers' sister, she was too much of a home body to fully satisfy his wilful and reckless disposition. Now and then she would induce him to go to church, but he went more for the vanity of being seen with a pretty girl (and the Minister's sister at that), than giving any attention to the services, or the influence of religion. Then he could not endure the chafing and guying of his companions, who lost no opportunity to twit him about the church, and his "gal." At last he ran away and in the big city became a vagabond. Brought to the verge of starvation he one day wandered back to the village; there hunger prompted him to steal a loaf of bread. Being pursued he took refuge in the belfry of the church and spent the night. The next morning the tolling of the bell for the dead drove him down to the chancel, there to find the funeral service being held over the body of his mother. The anguish of the derelict was intense, but it worked his reformation and Beth succeeded in making him a worthy man. No sermon can be more impressive than this excellent picture which is much to the credit of the Lubin Company.

Scene from "The Derelict's Return" (Lubin).

CHARLES ABRAMS BACK FROM THE WEST.

Mr. Charles Abrams, manager of the Great Northern Special Feature Film Company, has just returned to New York from an extended trip through the Middle West, where he has been arranging for the distribution of Great Northern features. He found business generally good, with a strong leaning toward the feature film and, consequently, was able to do some very satisfactory business for his company.

Regarding the present unsettled condition of independent business Mr. Adams observed that there was a great deal of dissatisfaction among both exchanges and exhibitors.

The general complaint was that neither Film Supply or Universal provided a sufficient program to supply the exhibitors' needs when taken alone, and that the present conditions made it impossible for exhibitors to get access to both. Complaints arising from these conditions were widespread.

Concerning the Great Northern Special Feature Company, Mr. Abrams said that it was about to release another sensational feature entitled, "Through Trials to Victory," a three-part subject of unusual interest, fine acting and beautiful photography. This subject was made by the Great Northern and is up to the high standard of that company's former releases.

OLD OLYMPIC GAME PICTURES REVIVED.

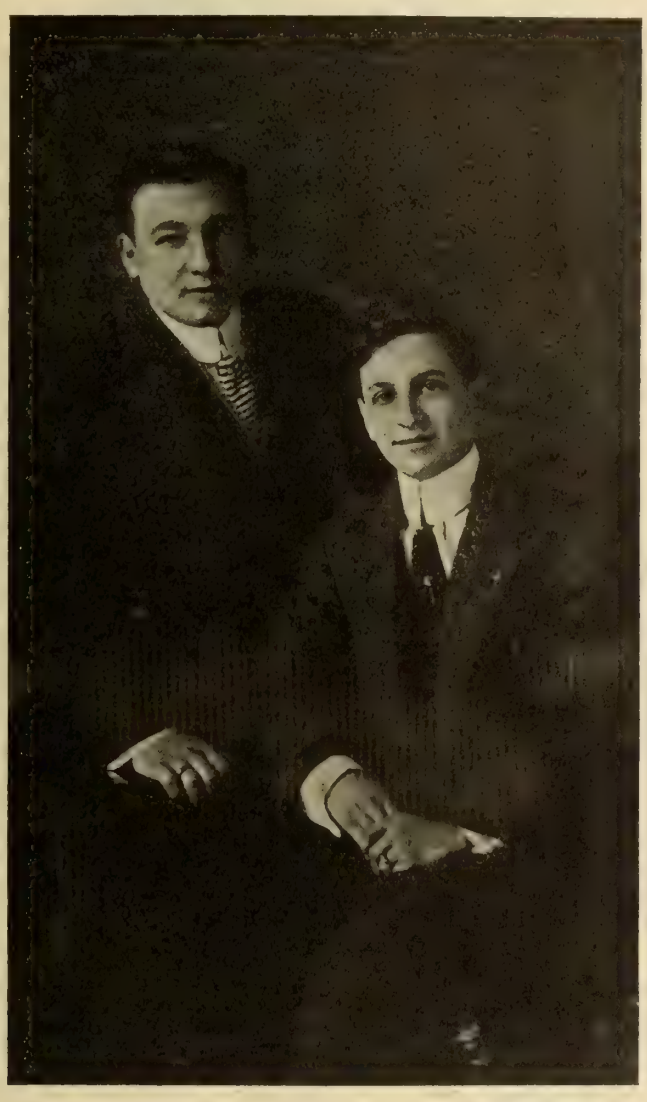
The Olympic Film Co., instead of misrepresenting, has come out truthfully with the statement that the film it is selling is not the present games but previous ones when the American teams won the majority of points. Luck is certainly with this concern, as it is fortunate to have in its reel the 800-meter event in which Mel Sheppard broke the record at the time the picture was taken as he did in the present games. Then, again, the winner of the javelin throw this year, Eric Lenning, is the same man who won the event in Greece. The high jump as well as the 100-meter race are shown and the winners bear on their chest the insignia of the U. S. athletes.

Thus far the American athletes have won all the events with the exception of the javelin throw.

The reel being sold by the Olympic Co. shows distinctly the American winners of the following events: 100-meter dash, 400-meter run, 800-meter run, running high jump, running broad jump, standing high and broad jumps, diving, discus throwing, pole vault, and also a splendid view of the stadium with the cheering thousands as well as the royal visitors.

GOLDEN GATE EXCHANGE WITH FILM SUPPLY COMPANY.

The Golden Gate Film Exchange, of San Francisco, Cal., will handle the program of the Film Supply Company. Contracts binding the parties interested were signed but recently by Mr. Lester L. Kahn and his associates, of the Golden Gate Exchange, by the terms of which the exchange agrees to lease thirty-six reels per week. This supply of good pictures should enable the exhibitors on the coast to provide their patrons with plenty of good entertainment.



L. L. Kahn. S. L. Lesser.

The San Francisco office at 166 Golden Gate Avenue, will be under the management of Mr. Sol Lesser and the Los Angeles branch will be managed by Mr. Lester Kahn. Both young men are well known to the picture exhibitors of the coast and have a host of friends in the trade. They are enthusiastic over their alliance with the Film Supply Company and are certain of success.

"GERONIMO'S LAST RAID," A COMING AMERICAN TWO-REEL SUBJECT.

Probably no warrior of the last hundred years, with the possible exception of Sitting Bull, was so much trouble to settlers and government authorities as Geronimo, the Indian chief, who died at a Southern prison a few years ago. His continual raids, escapes from prison and border warfare kept the entire Southwestern United States in a constant turmoil until his death.

In commemoration of this last of the great war chiefs, the American Film Mfg. Company will shortly release a picture entitled "Geronimo's Last Raid," a two-reel subject, distinctly Indian in nature and exhibiting to the public some peculiar sidelights on the disposition of the famous redman. The subject is now in course of preparation.

FLICKERS.

I was pleasantly surprised one day last week while on my way about town by bumping into A. G. Whyte, all smiles and the picture of health after his two months' trip abroad. During his stay on the continent, Mr. Whyte visited London, Berlin, Vienna and Paris, with intermediate stops at less important cities. That his stay did not entirely embrace business is evidenced by the fact that one night while "partaking" in the Café Ooh-La-La, or something like that (in French) Whyte ran into Mr. R. Prieur, of the Lux Film Co., and Mr. Carrick, of the Philadelphia Projection Co. You can imagine the amount of business attended to that evening by the trio, can't you?

* * *

Mr. Julius Stern, assistant treasurer of the Universal Film Manufacturing Co., has just returned from a business and pleasure trip extending as far west as Wisconsin. To use Mr. Stern's words, wherever he went, the trade inquired about the Universal Programme and, upon receipt of the information, were Universally delighted.

* * *

If, while passing in the neighborhood of the Exchange building on 45th St., you should hear any loud squawks, don't be alarmed. Bernstein, the little manager with the "Rep," just completed the task of photographing 60,000 ducks at Bar Harbor, Maine, in their various stages of life from the egg to the table. At the latter stage, he dropped the camera and went to it as would any other hungry man. As a result of his week's stay in this fowl yard, Bernie has learned to speak "Duck" quite fluently.

* * *

Harry Raver has learned to stop his car now at the crossings when the cop holds up his hand. They say there is a reason for everything.

* * *

Mr. William T. Horne, proprietor and manager of the Horne Theater, Los Angeles, Cal., visited the offices of the Moving Picture World during trip through New York. The Horne Theater is a 350-seat house using General Film service, and is doing a large business according to reports.

* * *

Bill Miliken, having been in retirement for a long while has tired of the simple life and will crawl out of his hole shortly to spring something new on the trade.

* * *

Mr. Robert Dreher, treasurer of the International Film Traders, 5 West 14th St., informed me that in the last week he has signed negotiations with three more of Europe's large film manufacturers, and will handle exclusively their feature subjects in America. With this new addition to their present European connections, the International Co. can release an entire feature programme. MAC.

NEWMAN FIXTURE COMPANY OPENS NEW YORK SHOW ROOM.

The Newman Manufacturing Company, with factory and main offices at 717-19-21 Sycamore Street, Cincinnati, Ohio, which manufactures a large and complete line of brass easels, brass frames, brass rails and brass theater fixtures of every description, have leased a large show room at Nos. 101-103 Fourth Ave., between Eleventh and Twelfth Streets, New York City. It will be in charge of Messrs. S. Newman and E. C. Newman. Brass fixtures and announcement signs and brass goods of every description are on display, and goods will be carried in stock in New York for immediate shipment.

Mr. Sam Newman, who is associated with his four sons in the business, established this concern in the year 1882, and originated brass theater fixtures, which can be seen in nearly every city or town throughout the country. A cordial invitation is extended to exhibitors and managers all over the country, either at their New York show rooms at 101 Fourth Ave., or at their main offices and factory in Cincinnati.

THE POTENCY OF POWERS 6A.

The following letter, quoted in part, speaks for itself:

"We received the two No. 6A machines from you last Saturday, and after a thorough test we must congratulate you on being the manufacturer of the best moving picture machine in the world. The machine is simply a wonder and looks as if it is built for hard work. The lamp house is a great improvement and especially the arc, which is very handy to operate.

"We have had several exhibitors visit our operating room and they all expressed great satisfaction and admiration, and we do not hesitate to say that within a few weeks you will have several orders from Washington through our influence. Very truly yours, Miller Bros., Washington, D. C."

POWERS OLYMPIC SCOOP.

On July 24th the Powers Motion Picture Company will release a split reel, a series of animated portraits of the American winners at the recent Olympic games in Stockholm, Sweden. The release will be entitled "American Olympic Winners" and will show the athletes in track costume going through preliminary exercises. There will probably be a great demand for this Powers picture, as it is the first one to appear that pertains directly to the greatest athletic event of the universe.

HAVE RIGHT TO BUFFALO BILL PICTURES.

Attorney for Buffalo Bill and Pawnee Bill Film Co. Declares Col. Cody and Major Lillie Have Forfeited Right to Appeal

July 10, 1912.

Buffalo Bill & Pawnee Bill Film Co.,
145 West 45th Street,
New York City, N. Y.

Gentlemen:

In reply to your inquiry concerning the letter purported to be signed by Major Gordon W. Lillie, as manager for Buffalo Bill's Wild West and Pawnee Bill's Great Far East Company, published in the Moving Picture World, issued July 13th, 1912, I beg to advise you as follows:

1.—It is true that Col. Cody and Major Lillie caused a notice to be served that they appealed from the order of Justice Gerard, denying their motion for an injunction, but the time to prosecute the appeal has expired by lapse of time.

2.—The attorney for Col. Cody and Major Lillie has written us to the effect that they wish to serve an amended complaint. This is practically an admission by their attorney that their action now pending would fail.

3.—From an examination of the contracts and the facts in the case, I advise you that you have the sole and exclusive right to produce, manufacture, sell, license and exhibit the picture, "Life of Buffalo Bill," and you may make contracts with your customers accordingly.

4.—I consider that the statements contained in the published letter of Major Lillie are libellous as against your company, and pursuant to your instructions will proceed to prepare the necessary papers for the purpose of instituting suit on your behalf by reason thereof.

Very truly yours,
WALDO G. MORSE.

H. R. ASHBROOK.

The approach of the Ohio State Exhibitors Convention at Toledo, July 17, urges Mr. H. R. Ashbrook, whose likeness is given above, to tell exhibitors who attend the convention that a welcome will be accorded them at the offices of the Superior Film Supply Company.

Mr. Ashbrook was formerly the proprietor of the Superior Film Supply Company and the Feature Film Company, of Toledo, but recently sold his interests to the Mutual Film Corporation. He was retained as manager and has been adding many valuable accounts. One of which Mr. Ashbrook is particularly proud is Empress Theater.

OLYMPIC GAMES

AMERICANS ARE WINNING ALL THE EVENTS

Our reel shows you Mel Sheppard in his heart-breaking struggle in the 800 metre race.

Our reel also shows Eric Lemming winning the Javelin Throw. American Athletes thus far have won the High Jump, 100 Metre Race, 800 Metre Race and other events.

This is the Best Live Wire of the Year as we HAVE THE AMERICANS WINNING ALL THESE EVENTS

Price of 900 foot reel including 30 five-color posters

$95.00

OLYMPIC GAMES FILM CO. ROOM 809 145 W. 45th St., N. Y.

Correspondence

SAN FRANCISCO.

THE motion picture made its debut in the local advertising field when two leading San Francisco reality dealers equipped their salesmen with a home moving picture projection machine, which are now being used among the workmen in the oil fields of this State. The Co-operative Land & Trust Company and Stine & Kendrick have been using three machines each for several weeks, and the success attained by their use has encouraged the firms to the extent of placing orders for several more machines and a number of additional prints of the pictures of their lands, which the salesmen are using. The Ghirardelli Co., whose local cocoa factory is the largest in the United States, and A. Schilling & Co., have each had several thousand feet of film taken of the several departments of their plants which will shortly be used for advertising purposes.

Mr. Edward Mozart visited the "Exposition City" recently in the interests of his new Los Angeles enterprise, the Mozart Theater, which was formerly known as "Walker's Auditorium." The purpose of Mr. Mozart's visit to this city was to inspect the partially constructed $7,500 photoplayer which is being specially built for his house, and which has several added devices, including a human voice effect. The opening night has been set for August 3d.

Mr. Bert Levey has just returned from Los Angeles and announces that he will open the "Belasco Theater," in that city, with Independent pictures and vaudeville on October 1st. Mr. Levey's San Francisco booking office will supply the vaudeville attractions, while the film service will be looked after by the Los Angeles branch of the Miles Bros. Exchange. Mr. Levey states that his Omaha, Neb., house, the "Boyd," will open to Independent pictures and vaudeville on August 15th.

The "Premium," which has been operated under several names, by several managers, was opened on June 30, as the "Progress," b Mr. L. R. Greenfield. The interior illumination and decorative scheme have been entirely changed, the lobby has been remodeled, a new screen installed, and chairs re-arranged. It is Mr. Greenfield's intention to have his house deserve its name, for he is not satisfied with half-way measures as evidenced by the excellence of his other photoplay theater, the "Quality." That theater is noted among the many five-cent houses around the Bay for perfect projection. The credit for this should be given Mr. M. S. Fairbanks, who will go to the "Progress" as chief operator, but who will retain supervision of the projection at both theaters. Both of Mr. Greenfield's theaters use motor-driven motiograph machines. A service of five reels changed three times a week will be furnished by the General Film Company, the programs for Sunday, Monday and Tuesday to consist of "special" releases. Music for the pictures will be supplied by a five-piece orchestra. Manager Greenfield has secured the promise of G. M. Anderson to appear at the "Progress" shortly.

Mr. M. E. Cory, manager of the Pacific Home Moving Picture Machine Co., recently returned from Los Altos, where he installed a Home machine in the High School, which will be retained as a permanent feature at that institution. The superintendents and other officials of several Santa Cruze County public schools were spectators at the demonstration, and pronounced themselves in favor of immediately taking steps toward making the motion picture equipment a part of the regular furnishings of all the schools of their county.

The local office of Miles Bros. Exchange had three cameramen at East Los Vegas, photographing the Johnson-Flynn contest and topical views of the New Mexico city.

The eleventh theater of the Turner & Dahnken photoplay circuit will be open in about three weeks, and is located in the northwestern portion of the college town of Berkeley. It will appropriately be named the "Varsity." Four reels of Licensed pictures will be shown at an admission of 10 cents. Turner & Dahnken have also just closed a deal whereby plans will be drawn and a Class A concrete theater constructed for them in Alameda, which will seat 1,203 people, and which will be finished before the first of next year. The name will be the "New Alameda Theater," and the service will be five reels of Licensed subjects changed twice each week. These two houses will be under the direct management of Mr. C. L. Langly, making six of the Turner & Dahnken houses under his supervision.

"ANDY."

LOUISVILLE.

THE Falls Cities Amusement Company has taken possession of the Bijou Dream Theater, on Market Street, near Third. The deal was arranged several weeks ago, but took effect only recently.

M. Switow, of the Falls Cities Amusement Company, has announced that he will raze the Grand Theater shortly and erect a big new one.

Allen Kinney and President Simon, of the Princess Amusement Company, have left Louisville for a three weeks trip to the East.

Louisville exhibitors have received notice of a meeting of the Kentucky Motion Picture Exhibitors' League, to be held in Lexington in the near future. At that time, a permanent organization will be formed, it is hoped. A former meeting resulted in a temporary organization. President M. A. Neff, of the national body, will attend. J. H. Stamper, of Lexington, is now head of the Kentucky branch.

The Berryman Realty Company, of Lexington, Ky., will erect a motion picture house there at a cost of $50,000. Excavation has begun. The new theater will be located in the block bounded by Main, Limestone, and Short Streets.

Providence, Ky., has broken into the moving picture business with a tent theater, W. L. Purdy being the man behind the venture. The tent will accommodate several hundred persons. The necessary equipment has been ordered and the new theater will be thrown open some time in July.

"The Vision Beautiful," which was presented at the Gem Theater, Paducah, Ky., recently, attracted much attention there, being written by Miss Eloise Bradshaw, a Paducah girl. The story is adapted from Longfellow's "Legend Beautiful," and portrays the struggle of a young monk.

Exhibitors have lost their fight at Chattanooga, Tenn., for Sunday performances. The labor men of that city were with the theatrical people for a time, but recently backed down. The result was that Chattanooga will have no moving pictures on Sunday, for a time at least. The clergy of that city has fought Sunday theaters bitterly. Just why the representatives of the labor organizations withdrew their petition for Sunday theaters is not known.

The Louisville & Northern Railway & Light Company, of New Albany, Ind., has engaged the services of the Municipal & Commercial Film Company in making 500 feet of film, showing interesting views along its seven miles of track. The film concern was in Louisville making pictures under the auspices of the Louisville Convention and Publicity League and the Louisville Advertisers' Club. This is believed to be the first instance of a traction company advertising by means of moving pictures showing the beauties of its route.

Fred Dolle, of the Broadway Amusement Company, has returned to Louisville after a honeymoon in the East. Mr. Dolle has announced that the Ideal Theater, now going up at Twenty-third and Market Streets, will be ready for the public by August 1. The house will be one of the handsomest in Louisville, costing in the neighborhood of $50,000. The Ideal uses the Baxter airdome in pleasant weather, and moves across the street to the Highland Theater when it rains. It has the same facilities downtown, using the Portland airdome and the Globe Theater in the same fashion.

G. D. CRAIN, JR.

NEW ENGLAND.

MISS LOTTA CRABTREE, who in 1910 opened the Savoy Theater, Boston, Mass., as a moving picture house, recently appeared before Judge Hardy in the Superior Court, and asked that the corporation be dissolved. Miss Crabtree told the court that there were no liabilities nor assets. Judge Hardy granted her plea.

A thorough overhauling and renovation is being given to the City Theater, Brockton, Mass. A marquise, to cost $2,500, is now being added to the lobby. The American Seating Company is reseating the entire theater, and about one hundred additional seats have been put in. The house now seats about 1700 people.

Mr. William Gray, who has so successfully managed the Mystic Theater, Lewiston, Maine, has just secured a lease of the Union Musical Theater, Auburn, Maine. Manager Gray intends to give three performances daily, consisting of pictures and songs, no vaudeville being used. Mr. Gray has a 5-month lease on the Union Musical Theater, and, if the prospects are good, will take a long lease, at the end of that time.

The new Park Theater of Dexter, Maine, is nearly completed, and will be one of the finest theaters of its kind in the state.

Mr. Thomas H. Cullen has succeeded Manager Cook of the Dream Theater, Cliftondale, Vermont. Mr. Cullen has been in the moving picture business since its infancy.

Mr. D. J. Murphy has taken over Alven's Hall, Bayside, Mass., which he is operating as a moving picture house. Mr. Murphy opened on June 24, and reports that Licensed service and illustrated songs are doing very well for him.

The Boston Sunday American, the Hearst paper, has made a deal with the Theater Comique and Revere Theater, of Revere Beach, Mass., whereby the American prints coupons, which allow the holder to see the shows at these houses, at half the regular rate. The Theater Comique Coupon, and five cents, is good for one admission; while the Revere Theater coupon, and five cents, is good for two admissions. These coupons are only good for a certain day, usually a Muday.

D. J. Feovre of Manchester, N. H., and an old-time theatrical man, is now in charge of "The Box from Larkin's" and "A Trip to Niagara Falls." Mr. H. C. Pierson lectures on these two industrial reels.

The Wilcox Theater of Savin Rock, is a new theater that jumped into favor ever since its opening on May 25. Mr. Francis Wilcox is the sole owner, and the house is managed by F. S. Terrell, assisted by Mr. E. D. Hoyt.

The Superior Court at Springfield, Mass., granted a decree for the Nelson Theater Company, against George D. Nelson and another, and asserted that there had been no forfeiture of the lease of the Nelson Theater, leased by the Shubert Theater Company from G. D. Nelson and Emma G. Victor. The defendant is ordered to pay damages of $3,555; William Fox Amusement Company, $213, and George G. Dunn, $1,023, for rent paid in advance, who were not at that time in possession of the theater. This is the final decree in the case, which has been in court since 1909, growing out of the eviction of the plaintiff from the Nelson Theater, the various events of which have been chronicled in these columns. It is understood that George G. Dunn recently gave a lease to the William Fox people, who intend to open the Nelson on November 1, 1912, as a vaudeville and picture house.

The Globe Theater of Bridgeport, Conn., has closed, and will re-open in the Fall, after some alterations have been made.

The Bijou Theater, another Bridgeport theater, is now nearly completed, and will be open by Labor Day. The house is on the East Side, and is owned by Mr. Daw.

Mayor Lathrop of Springfield, is dead against the exhibition of moving pictures depicting the career of Jesse James, and refused a license to run the reels in that city.

Daniel J. Sprague is doing very well as manager of Lake Nipmuc Park Theater, Milford, Mass. Vaudeville and pictures are used.

The Park Theater, Boston, is still doing well with the pictures of the Rainey African Hunt. Many teachers and school children have been attending the matinee performances. Instructors have been urging the pupils to attend, stating that the reels are the greatest lesson in natural history that has ever been presented. Many from Harvard College are going to see the reels.

Mr. T. F. Kinny is thoroughly remodeling his Dreamland Theater at Bellows Falls. The addition of a balcony will increase the seating capacity to 750.

A new three-story building is now in the process of erection at Bellows Falls, Vt., and a theater, to be devoted to pictures and vaudeville, will occupy a portion of it.

Mr. Maurice F. Tobias of New York, is at present in charge of the Mutual Corporation of Boston, which company is handling the entire output of the Film Supply Company of America. The new house will be called the Standard, and will be managed by Mr. F. H. Kimball, who has had experience in the moving picture business.

The Mutual Corporation of Boston, handling the entire output of the Film Supply Company of America, is at present in charge of Mr. Maurice F. Tobias of New York. Mr. Tobias jumped to the Hub temporarily, as Mr. Eaton, who had charge of the Mutual is no longer connected with the Boston office. Mr. Tobias will remain in the Hub until a new manager arrives from New York. A number of New England exhibitors are looking into the Mutual's proposition.

Mr. T. F. Kiniry of Bellows Falls, Vt., was a visitor to Boston on the 28th of June, looking for a Marquise for his lobby.

HENRY.

IN THE MISSISSIPPI VALLEY.

AMATEUR night in Kansas City, Mo., picture shows is only for children over sixteen, according to the State Factory Inspector, who has ruled that all theaters must specify the age limit in their advertisements.

Picture slide advertising has been deemed "legitimate" by the Business Men's Association of Elkhart, Ind.

The Firemen's Amusement Association of Greenfield, Ind., has been incorporated with capital stock of $6,000 to operate places of amusement. The incorporators are E. Q. Jackson, C. S. Duncan and T. Nye.

The Lyceum Theater, Dayton, Ohio, is now using Licensed service.

L. J. Bulger, of Gibson City, Ill., has purchased the Idle Hour Theater at Greenfield, Ill., from H. C. Kinnikin.

In his annual report to the Board of Education at Quincy, Ill., Superintendent of Schools Bauman cites the good work that is being done in schools throughout the country by the use of the moving picture, and suggests its adoption in the schools of Quincy.

The Cupid Amusement Company of Chicago, Ill., has been incorporated with capital stock of $1,500 to do a general amusement business. The incorporators are Benjamin J. Samuels, C. Aaron and A. D. Anscher.

Harry Bloston, of Chicago, has leased the Wildey Theater at Edwardsville, Ind., from the Edwardsville Investment Company and will run pictures and vaudeville when road shows do not conflict.

The Sunday lid at Waterloo, Iowa, has been lifted after eight years of Sabbaths without shows.

The repeal of the ordinance in the city council was followed by a motion for a curfew ordinance, but after a warm discussion the movement was lost.

Rev. Dr. Charles L. Kloss, pastor of the First Congregational Church, Webester Groves, Mo., has rented the Lockwood Airdome for Sunday night services. Moving pictures will be used in connection with the services. Doctor Kloss believes many persons who do not care to swelter in a hot church will attend the meetings in the open.

The Bogk ordinance in the Milwaukee, Wis., council, which would restrict the handling of moving picture films to isolated fireproof buildings, has been allowed to slumber, in the guise of indefinite postponement. It was found that it would apply to all dealers in photographic films as well as to film exchange.

Charles A. Schaeffer, proprietor of the Lyric, at Sycamore, Ill., is building an airdrome with a seating capacity of 1,000.

An affidavit was filed in the circuit court at Portland, Ind., against George W. Freemeyer, proprietor of the Crystal Theater, because he opened his theater on Sunday evening. This re-opens the anti-Sunday war there as similar proceedings had begun twice before, but were dropped when a a jury in the city court disagreed upon a verdict.

An orchestra from the grade schools of Farmington, Ill., recently paid visits to the moving picture shows at Fairview and London Mills, where they furnished music for the performances. This indicates the photoplay has a part in the social life of the small town.

The Bryn Mawr Theater Company of Chicago has been incorporated with capital stock of $10,000 to do a general theatrical and amusement business. The incorporators are A. Bettcher, E. H. J. Liston and M. M. Halkett.

The Majestic at Bushnell, Ill., is to run moving pictures.

The Elks' Theater at Taylorville, Ill., has decided to devote one night each week to feature pictures.

Sunday picture shows won in Elgin, Ill., when the matter was submitted to a referendum vote. The citizens approved the seven-day show by a vote of 2,816 to 1,317.

The Amuse-U, the new Henle photoplay house at Clinton, Iowa, is to have one of the largest mirror screens made, two pianos and a Victor autophone, an indirect lighting system and comfortable seats for 1,005 persons.

The Knights of Pythias Opera House at Pittsfield, Ill., which is operated by the versatile Burr Swan, has been sold to Brant & Wells, of Pleasant Hill, Ill. The management of the house was not decided at the time of the transfer.

A new picture show in Cedar Rapids, Iowa, by Minneapolis capital, is rumored.

Leon Ames, who has been playing the pictures at the Vaudeville Grand, at Galena, Ill., left that place to accept a similar position in Burlington, Iowa.

The Princess has opened at Lewistown, Ill.

Mrs. Eiler Jones, of the Star Photoplay, at Lincoln, Ill., has quickened the Licensed service and is giving the patrons later releases.

The Palace Theater, Cedar Rapids, Iowa, although a new house, is showing business acumen by an initial list of feature releases.

Property owners on South Cherry Street, Galesburg, Ill., have been approached by the promoters of a new moving picture show, it is reported.

The Crystal Amusement Company of Peoria, Ill., has been incorporated with capital stock of $5,000, to do a general amusement and theatrical business. The incorporators are William Schaeffer, Lillian Naegele and Walter H. Kirk.

H. T. Loper, of Springfield, Ill., has purchased an open-air theater at 103 Third Street and Broadway, New York City, according to reports received here. Mr. Loper is proprietor of the Lyric, one of the most successful moving picture shows in the middle West. It is said he intends to acquire a chain of moving picture shows between Springfield and New York.

F. H. MADISON.

PHILADELPHIA.

IT has been decided to hold the next national convention of the Motion Picture Exhibitors' League of America in Philadelphia, the local men working very hard at the Pittsburgh meeting to land the convention for this city. Although there were several other cities after it, the Philadelphians, headed by Walter Stuempfig, succeeded in bringing the convention here in 1913. The local exhibitors were represented at the convention by Dr. Walter Stuempfig and George H. Roth, who were both elected to high offices as president and second vice-president.

Director Porter's attention has been called to the fact that a number of moving picture houses have been open on Sunday recently, and has started an investigation. J. Louis Breitinger, counsel for the Exhibitors' League of Pennsylvania, has urged him to close up all such places, because they are violating the law and taking business away from other theaters which observe the law and remain closed on Sunday.

W. E. Reynolds, the progressive exhibitor of Ambler, Pa., was in the city recently looking up feature films. He expects to run at least five features a week.

Since the purchase of the Quaker City Feature Film Company, George Bennethum has been very busy getting back and forth between this city and Reading, and other cities where he has theaters. It is expected that in the course of a few weeks this exchange will be removed to larger quarters.

The Verdi Theater, now under the management of M. J. Sugar, is undergoing a large amount of repairs, such as installing more fans, etc., etc. The policy of the house will be changed.

There is a rumor about that the Arcade Theater, located at No. 5226 Market Street, which was sold out by the sheriff, will be reopened. Who the promoters are has not been learned.

Mastbaum Brothers & Fleisher have sold the property No. 333 Market Street, which has a depth of 100 feet and a frontage of 25 feet, which widens out to 65 feet at one point to about 300 at another, giving about 15,000 feet of floor space altogether. The purchaser, whose name is withheld, will, it is announced, spend a considerable sum in altering the property for amusement purposes.

The Calehuff Supply report the following sales: Motiograph, complete, Million Dollar Pier, Atlantic City, N. J.; Nixons Appola, Atlantic City, N. J.; Dougherty's Theater, Ocean City, N. J.; No. 5 Powers complete, W. C. Hunt, Wildwood, N. J.; Harry Fern, Wildwood, N. J.; No. 6 A Powers, Lyric Amusement Company, Lock Haven, Pa.; F. P. Post, St. Clair, Pa.

Gus Elm is now located at Wildwood, N. J., taking care of the mechanical end for Bill Hunt's

Geo. B. Graff and family, of the Star Feature Film Company, has taken a cottage at Ocean City for the season. Mr. Graff commutes back and forth each day to his place of business.

Exhibitors in the city of Wilmington, Del., have received notice from the Police Department that the crowding of aisles of their theaters must be stopped, or warrants of arrest will be issued in all places where such conditions are found.

A large number of alterations to the Fairyland Theater are being made at the present time, which, upon completion, will add greatly to the beauty of the place. The alterations will cost about $1,200. Jacob Weinreich is the proprietor.

One of the most recent amusement companys to be incorporated in this State is the Educational Church Amusement Company of Philadelphia, with a capital of $100,000.

Only two out of six of the Councilmen of Pleasantville, N. J., being in favor of forcing Frank Hubin to close his picture theater on Sundays, the organization of pastors and the congregations of the churches have taken upon themselves the work of prosecuting the proprietor, and appointed committees from each church to collect the necessary evidence.

The Washington office of the Star Feature Film Company has been opened in Washington, D. C.

The Lubin Manufacturing Company has organized a baseball team for the season, under the management of Billy Hallman, late of the Philadelphia National League team. Billy has some of the best boys in the semi-professional ranks under his eye and expects a great season. The Lubin club has engaged closed grounds for the season, and will play all its games at home with the best clubs that can be booked.

George Hain, the moving picture man of Lebanon, while in Williamsport recently on a business trip, had the misfortune to slip and fall on a "Roller coaster" platform, badly fracturing his right arm above the wrist, and severely spraining his right ankle.

Gaffney & Company is estimating on plans for two moving picture theaters to be built in Mt. Airy and West Philadelphia. The first is to be located at Germantown Avenue and Durham Street, for J. J. Keenan, and the other at Thirty-sixth Street and Haverford Avenue, for W. T. Bogar.

William Kamp, of the Calehuff Supply Company, is about to start on his vacation, which will take him to all the seashore resorts.

Several changes have been made in the Quaker Feature Film Exchange recently. One of the most eventful of these changes is the consolidation of the Eastern Feature Film Exchange, of Mauch Chunk, Pa., with the Quaker concern, and also the resigning of Michael Lessey from the Quaker City Exchange.

Ocean City, N. J., has now one of the finest amusement piers along the Atlantic Coast. It has among its amusement places a moving picture theater in the rear, which has a seating capacity of 3,000. The Calehuff Supply Company of Philadelphia, placed the picture machines and other fixtures in that line in the theater.

"Warner's Features" is the name of the new feature film exchange which has been opened recently at 814 Heed Building, Philadelphia. Ben Abrams, who up to a short time ago was connected with the Great Northern Company, is the manager.

C. H. CONGDON.

ST. LOUIS.

THE Shenandoah, a new picture house at Shenendoah and Grand Avenues, opened recently to banner crowds. This new house, put up by the Grand Avenue Amusement Co., which also controls eight other houses in St. Louis, is the perfection in motion picture theaters, costing $75,000 to build, and seating 2,000 people. First-run Independent subjects are shown in conjunction with five acts of vaudeville. Mr. James Tillman is managing the new house. The Grand Avenue Amusement Co. controls the Juniata, Shenandoah, Grand Arsenal, Arco, Maffitt, St. Charles, Broadway and The Station, and is under the management of Mr. Wm. Flynn.

F. J. FEGAN.

Among the Exhibitors.

Springfield, Ohio.—A new moving picture theater will be erected here and will cost $50,000.

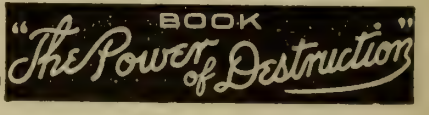
Blackwell, Okla.—The Lyric Theater here, owned by Charles Fox, has recently been sold to Messrs. Gobin and Usher, proprietors of a number of photoplay houses. The Lyric reports good business.

Des Moines, Ia.—A Labor Temple will be erected here at a cost of $100,000.

Carson City, Mich.—A new opera house will be erected in this city, seating capacity, 400.

New York.—Rouse & Goldstone have filed plans for the erection of a new theater here, on the South side of Manhattan Street, at a cost of $15,000.

Red Oak, Ia.—A new theater building will be erected here.



LECTURES ON SPECIAL FILMS

EACH $1.00 PER COPY — Prepared by W. STEPHEN BUSH — POSTAGE PAID

Lectures for French-American Film Company

"CAMILLE" BY SARAH BERNHARDT and "MADAME SANS GENE" BY MADAME REJANE

One Dollar for Both (Typewritten)

Also in printed form the following:

HOW TO PUT ON THE PASSION PLAY (Second Edition)

For Pathe Freres World-Renowned Production

HOW TO PUT ON THE CRUSADERS, OR JERUSALEM DELIVERED

For World's Best Film Co., Feature Film (Copyright 1911)

KEY AND COMPLETE LECTURE FOR DANTE'S INFERNO

For Milano Film Co. (Italy), Five-Reel Production

ORDER NOW — Only a limited edition of each — $1.00 PER COPY

COPYRIGHTED AND FOR SALE ONLY BY

MOVING PICTURE WORLD, Box 226, Madison Square P. O., New York City

DON'T LIKE THE NESTOR "UPLIFT."

Editor Moving Picture World:

Knowing that your paper has ever taken a firm stand for the uplift of the moving picture business in all its branches, I would like to call your attention to the latest "uplift" idea of the Nestor Company.

To-day I received a postal card from the above named company stating that on June 28 they would start releasing a series of films adapted from the Frank V. Tousey's publication entitled, "Wild West Weekly." It is bad enough for the films to be compared at times with the yellow "dime novels," but to be actually adapted from them is about my idea of the limit. But the worst is not yet. The circular goes on to state that the starting title of this series will carry an announcement that the film is taken from the "Wild West Weekly" stories, and that the stories will be found on sale in the box-office. I am also informed by the same postal card that I may obtain copies of these stories for 3 cents, from my exchange.

If I am ever unlucky enough to receive one of these "uplifting" subjects from my exchange I shall most certainly cut off the leader that states the "books" are on sale at the box-office. I shall also inform the exchange that they will be minus a customer if they insist on sending me such "rot." I am rather partial to some of the Nestor productions, and some of their pictures have been exceedingly good. In fact, this company of late has been striking a very fair average, but if this is what they are going to produce, Nestor will have to take a back seat as far as I am concerned. The average exhibitor has trouble enough on his hands if he wants to run a program that will be free from adverse criticism. Films of this kind are merely putting weapons in the hands of our adversaries, so that they may put us out of business.

Norwich, Conn., June 28.

L. A. YOUNG,
Vice-Pres. Auditorium Amusement Co.

"THE SILENT CASTLE" (Gaumont).

Probably the prettiest hand-colored film the Gaumont Company will turn out is the one released on July 23, Tuesday, entitled "The Silent Castle," a story that delves into the fairyland of mediævalism and portrays the soft sentiments and fancied glories of the age when knighthood was in flower. The charm of fairy tale is woven into the picture by the spell of a sorcerer who reeks his wrath on the beautiful Brunehilde during her wedding feast by striking all the guests and attendants dumb and motionless.

The dream restores happiness to the household of a young society man whose relations with his wife were growing more and more distant. The film is probably the deepest hand-colored of any of the recent Gaumont releases, with the possible exception of "Love's Floral Tribute," which is being placed upon the market on the 25th of July, Thursday.

FREE MOTION PICTURES.

The City Council of Jacksonville, Fla., has appropriated funds for the purchase of a complete motion picture outfit and will give free pictures in connection with the band concerts in one of the principal parks. Arrangements have been made to secure the films through the local picture houses.

Motion Picture Studio
FOR LEASE

Borough of Bronx, New York City.

The best located studio site within a radius of 50 miles of New York; all ready for producing company to go to work; office buildings, factory, dark rooms, properties and scenery. Extra large daylight stage; every conceivable kind of location for pictures on property or within 15 minutes' travel radius therefrom. Two motion picture cameras for sale. For particulars or inspection address,

Carl L. Gregory, New Rochelle, N. Y.

REASONS WHY

YOU SHOULD PURCHASE

THE LIFE OF BUFFALO BILL

IF YOU WANT

A REAL FEATURE

1—State right buyers fully protected by our $1,000 bond.

2—State right buyers now owning territory reporting record breaking business.

3—A production of merit acted by real Cowboys, Indians and Soldiers headed by Buffalo Bill.

4—Excellent photography.

5—A name that has enjoyed over forty years of popularity in the amusement world.

6—A full line of advertising material to help you get the business.

7—It appeals to all classes of people.

8—Not a topical feature but will be good for years to come.

9—We have hundreds of letters from exhibitors asking for bookings which we can turn over with each purchase.

Good Territory Still Open

SEND FOR NAME OF STATE-RIGHT BUYERS EITHER FOR BOOKING OR TO ENQUIRE INTO THE MERITS OF THE PICTURE.

BUFFALO BILL & PAWNEE BILL FILM CO.,

145 WEST 45th STREET, NEW YORK CITY

Calendar of Licensed Releases.

CURRENT RELEASES.

MONDAY, JULY 15th, 1912.

BIOGRAPH—The Speed Demon (Comedy).....
BIOGRAPH—His Own Fault (Comedy).....
KALEM—The Lair of the Wolf (Drama).....1000
LUBIN—Honor Thy Father (Drama).....1000
PATHE—Pathe's Weekly No. 29 (Topical).....
SELIG—The Pennant Puzzle (Comedy).....1000
VITAGRAPH—The Money Kings (3 reels Dr.).....3000
VITAGRAPH—Conscience (Drama).....1000

TUESDAY, JULY 16th, 1912.

EDISON—Nerves and the Man (Drama).....1000
ESSANAY—The Smuggler's Daughter (Drama).....1000
C. G. P. C.—The Mosquito (Edu.).....
C. G. P. C.—Whiffles Mourns His Twin (Comedy).....
CINES—Disowned (Drama).....1050
SELIG—The Girl and the Cowboy (Drama).....1000
VITAGRAPH—A Persistent Lover (Comedy)..... 400
VITAGRAPH—A Lively Affair (Comedy)..... 650

WEDNESDAY, JULY 17th, 1912.

EDISON—Revenge is Sweet (Drama)..... 600
EDISON—The Maple Sugar Industry at Thompson, Pa. (Ind.)..... 400
ECLIPSE—The Grandmother (Drama).....1060
KALEM—The Suffragette Sheriff (Comedy).....1000
LUBIN—The Senorita's Remorse (Drama).....1000
PATHE—A Question of Size (Comedy).....
VITAGRAPH—The Redemption of Red Rube (Drama)...1000

THURSDAY, JULY 18th, 1912.

BIOGRAPH—Heaven Avenges (Drama).....
ESSANAY—Cupid's Quartette (Comedy).....1000
LUBIN—Together (Drama).....1000
MELIES—The Lesson (Drama).....
MELIES—A Cowboy's Proposal (Comedy).....
PATHE—The Brave Little Indian (Drama).....
SELIG—The Polo Substitute (Sporting).....1000

FRIDAY, JULY 19th, 1912.

EDISON—The Necklace of Crushed Rose Leaves (Drama).1000
ESSANAY—Hearts of Men (Drama).....1000
KALEM—A Prisoner of the Harem (Drama).....
KALEM—Egyptian Sports (Sporting).....
LUBIN—Buster's Dream (Comedy).....
LUBIN—The Uninvited Guest (Comedy).....
SELIG—A Day Off (Comedy).....1000
C. G. P. C.—The End of Robespierre (Hist. Dr.).....
VITAGRAPH—The Black Sheep (Drama).....

SATURDAY, JULY 20th, 1912.

EDISON—The Little Artist from the Market (Drama)....1000
ESSANAY—A Wife of the Hills (Drama).....1000
CINES—The Part the Servant Played (Com.-Dr.).....1000
LUBIN—A Western Courtship (Drama).....1000
PATHE—The Half-Breed Foster Sister (Drama).....
VITAGRAPH—Rock of Ages (Drama).....1000

ADVANCE RELEASES.

MONDAY, JULY 22nd, 1912.

BIOGRAPH—The Sands of Dee (Drama).....
KALEM—The Thief (Drama).....1000
LUBIN—The Ranger's Reward (Drama).....1000
PATHE—Pathe's Weekly No. 30, 1912 (Topical).....
SELIG—On the Trail of the Germs (Educational).....1000
VITAGRAPH—Wanted—a Sister (Comedy-Drama)....1000

TUESDAY, JULY 23rd, 1912.

EDISON—The Sketch with the Thumb Print (Drama)..1000
ESSANAY—The Understudy (Comedy-Drama).....1000
C. G. P. C.—Jane Seymour and Henri VIII of England (Drama).....
CINES—A Daughter's Diplomacy (Comedy-Drama)... 896
SELIG—The Double Cross (Drama).....1000
VITAGRAPH—Lambert Chace, Detective (Drama)....1000

WEDNESDAY, JULY 24th, 1912.

EDISON—The Grouch (Comedy-Drama)..... 985
ECLIPSE—The French Army in Action (Military).... 505
ECLIPSE—Billy's Nightmare (Comedy)..... 485
KALEM—Fantasca, the Gypsy (Drama).....1000
LUBIN—A Visit to Lively Town (Comedy).....
LUBIN—The Talker (Comedy).....
PATHE—The Redman's Friendship (Drama).....
VITAGRAPH—Martha's Rebellion (Comedy).....1000

THURSDAY, JULY 25th, 1912.

BIOGRAPH—Willie Becomes an Artist (Comedy).....
BIOGRAPH—The Would-Be Shriner (Comedy).....
ESSANAY—Mr. Tibbs' Cinderella (Comedy).....1000
LUBIN—The Shepherd's Flute (Drama).....1000
MELIES—A String of Beads (Drama).....1000
PATHE—(Title Not Reported).....
SELIG—The Miller of Burgundy (Drama).....1000

FRIDAY, JULY 26th, 1912.

EDISON—The Escape from Bondage (Drama).....1000
ESSANAY—Twins (Comedy).....1000
KALEM—A Political Kidnapping (Drama).....1000
LUBIN—His Vacation (Comedy).....1000
SELIG—A Wartime Romance (Drama).....
SELIG—In Maoriland (Educational).....
C. G. P. C.—A Bold Game (Drama).....
C. G. P. C.—Over Morocco in a Hydroplane (Scenic)..
VITAGRAPH—The Barrier That Was Burned (Dr.)..1000

SATURDAY, JULY 27th, 1912.

EDISON—The Relief of Lucknow (Hist.-Drama).....1000
ESSANAY—A Moonshiner's Heart (Drama).....1000
CINES—Too Many Sweethearts (Comedy)..... 965
LUBIN—The Divine Solution (Drama).....1000
PATHE—For the Sake of the Papoose (Drama).....
VITAGRAPH—The Light of St. Bernard (Drama)....1000

PATRONS OF THE EASTERN FILM EXCHANGE

TAKE NOTICE

THE QUAKER CITY FEATURE FILM EXCHANGE, of 804 Cherry Street, Philadelphia, and THE EASTERN FEATURE FILM EXCHANGE, of Mauch Chunk, Pa., have consolidated, and will hereafter be known as

THE QUACKER CITY FEATURE FILM EXCHANGE

Kindly address all communications to 804 Cherry St., Philadelphia, Pa.

Calendar of Independent Releases.

Releasing Through Universal Company.

CURRENT RELEASES.

SUNDAY, JULY 14th, 1912.

REX—The Mother Heart (Drama) .....
ECLAIR—Artful Contran (Comedy) .....
ECLAIR—Across the Caucasus (Scenic) .....

MONDAY, JULY 15th, 1912.

IMP—Hearts in Conflict (Drama).....
NESTOR—The Trifler (Drama).....
CHAMPION—Foraging On the Enemy (Drama).....

TUESDAY, JULY 16th, 1912.

ECLAIR—The Dreamers (Drama) .....
BISON—The Sheriff's Mysterious Aide (Drama).....
GEM—Two Men (Drama).....

WEDNESDAY, JULY 17th, 1912.

NESTOR—Fur and Feathers (Comedy).....
POWERS—The Ransom (Comedy).....

THURSDAY, JULY 18th, 1912.

ECLAIR—That Loving Man (Comedy) .....
IMP—Winning the Latonia Derby (Drama) 1000
REX—The Hidden Light (Drama).....

FRIDAY, JULY 19th, 1912.

AMBROSIO—(No Release This Date) .....
NESTOR—Young Wild West Trapping a Tricky Rustler (Drama) .....
POWERS—Her Life's Story (Drama).....
VICTORA—The Players (Comedy-Drama).....

SATURDAY, JULY 20th, 1912.

BISON—The Little Rancher (Drama).....
IMP—Building a Church in a Day (Vocational) 400
IMP—The Foreign Invasion (Comedy) 600
MILANO—The Triumph of Love (2 reels—Drama)....

ADVANCE RELEASES.

SUNDAY, JULY 21st, 1912.

REX—When Love Rules (Drama) .....
ECLAIR—Rizzio (Drama) .....

MONDAY, JULY 22nd, 1912.

IMP—A Traitor's Fate (Drama) 1000
NESTOR—The Ranchman's Remedy (Drama) .....
CHAMPION—The Call of the West (Drama) .....

TUESDAY, JULY 23rd, 1912.

ECLAIR—The Governor's Daughter (Drama) .....
BISON—The Little Rancher (Drama) .....
GEM—Bread Cast Upon the Waters (Drama) .....

WEDNESDAY, JULY 24th, 1912.

NESTOR—The Little Moonshiner (Drama) .....
POWERS—Baby Sherlock (Comedy) .....
POWERS—In the Sowing (Drama) .....

THURSDAY, JULY 25th, 1912.

ECLAIR—The Double Cross (Drama) .....
IMP—Heart of a Gipsy (Drama) .....
REX—The Hand of Mystery (Drama) .....

FRIDAY, JULY 26th, 1912.

NESTOR—Young Wild West's Prairie Pursuit (Drama)
POWERS—His Madonna (Drama) .....
VICTOR—Not Like Other Girls (Two Reels, Drama)

SATURDAY, JULY 27th, 1912.

BISON—Dare Devil Dick Wins a Wife (Drama).....
IMP—Love's Diary (Drama) .....
IMP—Case of Dynamite (Comedy) .....
MILANO—Blind Man's Sacrifice (Two Reels, Drama)

Releasing Through Film Supply Company.

CURRENT RELEASES.

SUNDAY, JULY 14th, 1912.

MAJESTIC—Father's Bust (Comedy) .....
MAJESTIC—The Widower's Widow (Comedy) .....
THANHOUSER—The Finger of Scorn (Drama) .....

MONDAY, JULY 15th, 1912.

AMERICAN—The Fatal Mirror (Drama) 1000
COMET—Reggie Breaks the College Rules (Comedy).1000

TUESDAY, JULY 16th, 1912.

GAUMONT—Love's Surest Proof (Drama) .....
MAJESTIC—In Her Brother's Defense (Drama).....
THANHOUSER—Vengeance Is Mine (Drama) .....

WEDNESDAY, JULY 17th, 1912.

AMERICAN—In the Nick of Time (Drama) .....
GAUMONT—Gaumont Weekly (Topical) .....
RELIANCE—At Cripple Creek (Drama) .....
SOLAX—Slippery Jim (Drama) .....

THURSDAY, JULY 18th, 1912.

AMERICAN—The Tell Tale Shells (Drama).....
GAUMONT—The Lion's Revenge (Drama).....

FRIDAY, JULY 19th, 1912.

LUX—Stones That Rebound (Drama) 970
SOLAX—The Four Flush Actor (Comedy) .....
THANHOUSER—The Ranchman and the Hungry Bird (Comedy-Drama) .....

SATURDAY, JULY 20th, 1912.

GREAT NORTHERN—Almost a Tragedy (Com.-Dr.)
GREAT NORTHERN—Uncle Reuben Goes to Town (Comedy) .....
COMET—Her Indian Guardian (Drama).....
RELIANCE—Love Me, Love My Dog (Comedy-Dr.)..

ADVANCE RELEASES.

SUNDAY, JULY 21st, 1912.

MAJESTIC—The Alibi Club (Comedy).....
THANHOUSER—Only a Miller's Daughter (Drama)..

MONDAY, JULY 22nd, 1912.

AMERICAN—Indian Jealousy (Drama) .....
AMERICAN—San Diego (Scenic).....
COMET—Reformed by Strategy (Comedy).....

TUESDAY, JULY 23rd, 1912.

GAUMONT—The Silent Castle (Drama).....
MAJESTIC—The New Clerk (Drama).....
THANHOUSER—The Portrait of Lady Anne (Drama)

WEDNESDAY, JULY 24th, 1912.

AMERICAN—How He Made Good (Drama).....1000
GAUMONT—Gaumont's Weekly (Topical).....
RELIANCE—The True Love (Drama).....
SOLAX—Broken Oaths (Drama).....

THURSDAY, JULY 25th, 1912.

AMERICAN—The Canyon Dweller (Drama).....
GAUMONT—Love's Floral Tribute (Drama).....

FRIDAY, JULY 26th, 1912.

LUX—Mr. X and the Unfortunate Heiress (Drama).. 967
SOLAG—The Requital (Drama).....
THANHOUSER—The Merchant of Venice (Parts 1 and 2—Drama).....

SATURDAY, JULY 27th, 1912.

GREAT NORTHERN—(Title Not Reported).....
COMET—The Tomboy Ranch Girl (Drama).....
RELIANCE—The Soldier Baby (Drama).....

POPULAR PHOTO PLAYERS

Costello, Bunny, Joyce, Gauntier, Turner, Anderson, Johnson, Fuller and other favorites. Posters, 28 x 42, 10 for $1.50 Prepaid. Photos 11 x 14, 12 for $2.00 Prepaid.

Feature Posters for Feature Films

One sheets 15c. Three sheets 35c. Six sheets 70c. Add 1c per sheet for prepaid postage.
Broncho Billy's Narrow Escape, Story of Montana, Speed Demon, Honor Thy Father, Mission of Diplomacy, Senorita's Remorse, Heaven Avenges, Together, Prisoner of the Harem, Uninvited Guests, Western Courtship, Indian Summer, Halfbreed's Treachery, Bugler of Battery B, Stolen Ring, Man's Genesis, Sheriff's Daughter, Hypnotist, Stranded Actors, Man's Lust for Gold, Tragedy of Desert, Close of American Revolution, Prize Essay, One Round O'Brien, Child's Prayer, Back Window, Broncho Billy and Indian Maid, Derby Day at Churchill Downs, Dash Through the Clouds, New Physician, What the Driver Saw, Captured by Bedouins, Colonel's Escape, School Teacher and the Waif, Nation's Peril, Lena and the Geese, Choir of Densmore, French Spy, Arabian Tragedy, Spirit Awakened, The Runaways, Neighbors, Indian's Gratitude, The Orleans Coach, Adopted Child, Coming of Columbus, and many others. Send for complete list.
"If It's Anything to Advertise a Picture Theater, We Have It."
EXHIBITORS' ADVERTISING & SPECIALTY CO., 30 Union Square, New York

THREE-SHEET POSTER FRAMES

With top sheets reading Special Features, Extra Features, Extra Attraction. To-Day's Newest Feature, Special Attraction, Coming Soon, and other sayings. Complete set of 10 for $1.20 Postage Paid.

Song Slide Releases.

Levi Company, Inc. (Motion Song Slides).

"Oh, You Dear, Sweet, Wonderful Boy"—Pub. by Kendis & Paley, New York.
"Good-Bye, Rose"—Pub. by Shapiro Co.
"Take Me Back to the Garden of Love"—Pub. by Ted Snyder Co.

Levi Company, Inc. (Current Events).

The Allen Outlaws.
Mississippi Floods.

A. L. Simpson, Inc.

"Honey You can Turn the World Around for Me"—Pub. by Musicians' Music Pub. Co., New York.
"Give Me a Shove, I'm Falling In Love"—Pub. by J. Fred Helf Pub. Co., New York.
"Seems To Me the World is Singing Marguerite"—Pub. by Edmond Lyons, Peacedale, R. I.
"The Owl in the Old Oak Tree"—Pub. by F. B. Haviland Pub. Co., New York.
"You're the Queen in the Kingdom of My Heart"—Pub. by Musicians Music Pub. Co., New York.
"It's a Girl Like You that Keeps a Fellow Guessing"—Pub. by Walter Jacobs, Boston, Mass.
"Drowsi-land"—Pub. by Chas. I. Davis, Cleveland, Ohio.
"Sweet Margenette (How I Love You)"—Pub. by Cadillac Music Co., New York.

Scott & Van Altena.

"Silver Water"—Pub. by Jos. W. Stern & Co.
"Au Revoir, Sweet Marie"—Pub. by Jos. W. Stern Co.
"That Subway Glide"—Pub. by Jos. W. Stern Pub. Co.
"Lincoln's College Flag"—Pub. by J. Fred Helf Pub. Co.
"When Old Folks were Young Folks"—Pub. by Joe Morris Music Co.
"I'm Lonesome for Someone"—Pub. by Longbrake & Edwards.
"The Boogie Man Rag"—Chas. K. Harris.
"Sweethearts of Bygone Days"—Joe Morris Music Co.
"Oh! You Circus Day"—Will Rossiter.
"The Lass that I Loved in Killarney"—Wm. Cutty Music Co.

A. J. Clapham Feature Lectures.

"Titanic Disaster."
"Allen Clan."
"Mississippi Flood."
"Purgatory & Paradise."
"Seeing America—Section 4."
"Most Popular Candidates."

Songs.

"I Want a Little Loving Sometimes"—Pub. by J. H. Remick & Co.
"Kentucky Days"—Pub. by Wenrich Howard.
"Oh You May!"—Pub. by J. H. Remick & Co.
"To the Strains of the Wedding March"—M. Witmark & Sons.
"On a Beautiful Night, with a Beautiful Girl"—J. H. Remick & Co.
"Meet Me with Kisses"—Abe Nelsky.

SLIDES

OF ALL KINDS

Send for Catalogue "W" of our new line of beautiful

ANNOUNCEMENT SLIDES

Each slide illustrated from life and most exquisitely colored. The Chicago Song Slide Exchange, 6th floor, Powers Bldg., Chicago, Ill., have the exclusive agency for our announcement slides in the states of Wisconsin, Ohio, Illinois, Indiana, Michigan and Iowa.

Advertising Slides at Reasonable Rates

Our Song Slide Catalogue of 500 different songs free to anyone for the asking.

SCOTT & VAN ALTENA

59 PEARL STREET NEW YORK CITY

WE CAN MAKE AND DEVELOP MOVING PICTURES OF ANYTHING.

Our Plant Is Fully Equipped to Make Perfect Pictures.
Our Camera Men Are Experts.
Our Prices Are Reasonable.
Write Us—We Want to Bid on Your Work.

The Parisian Mfg. & Film Renovating Co., 4940 Wentworth Ave. CHICAGO

Fred L. Tilly, President & General Manager.

The E-Z Slide-Making Outfit

A SIMPLIFIED METHOD OF MAKING YOUR OWN ANNOUNCEMENT SLIDES

The E-Z slides are composed of a specially prepared transparent fibreless parchment sheet bound between two heavy mat board frames—a complete slide all ready for use.

CLEAR AS GLASS

You can write or print on these slides as easily as on a sheet of writing paper and the ink will not run or blur.

The outfit consists of blank slides and a series of printed copy sheets of various sizes and styles of type, ornaments, etc., for tracing letters on slides.

	Price
No. 1 Outfit consists of 12 blank slides, copy sheets, etc.	$ .50
No. 2 Outfit consists of 36 blank slides, copy sheets, etc.	1.25
No. 3 Outfit consists of 100 blank slides, copy sheets, etc	3.35

THE E-Z STANDARD ANNOUNCEMENT SLIDES

For sale at film exchanges.

The most desirable on the market. Will outlast glass. Indestructible by heat, being made of mica. Artistically Designed and Beautifully Colored.

Price 25 cents each.

Send for new 1912 catalogue.

BATTERSHALL & OLESON 39 W. ADAMS ST. CHICAGO, ILL.

GOLDEN SONG REVUE with FOOLISH QUESTIONS in Motion and SPIEGEL MOTION SONG SLIDES are made exclusively by us. The only real slide attractions.

Write us for full information about them.

LEVI CO., Inc., 1560 Broadway, New York City

"101" Bison Headliners

Exhibitors, Beware

In trade papers of June 29th and July 6th The Universal Programme contained Bison releases not having been made by the famous "101" Bison Stock Co. The Bison release of July 6th, "Restoration," also Bison release of July 9th, "Reconciled," were not made by the New York Motion Picture Co.

The New York Picture Co. made no releases during the week beginning July 2d and July 8th, but will resume releasing beginning with the week July 15th. Tuesday and Friday are the regular release days for the

Genuine "101" Bison Headliners in 1-, 2- and 3-reel subjects.

COMING! COMING!

Custer's Last Fight

the greatest motion picture ever made by any manufacturer in the world.

Tuesday, July 16th.

"101" Bison Headliner
Snowball and His Pal.

A SINGLE REEL FEATURE

Here is a picture we say others would call a "masterpiece"; so it is; we leave it for your judgment.

Wednesday, July 17th.

Ambrosio
The Airman
The Legend of the Chrysanthemums

Sure a corking good split reel.

Friday, July 19th.

"101" Bison Headliner
His Nemesis

Here is another single reel "101" Bison Headliner that'll make your audience sit up and gasp.

Saturday, July 20th.

"ITALA"
The Magical Hat and An Eventful Day

An Itala split reel full of laughs in both subjects.

New York Motion Picture Co.

A. Kessel, Jr., Pres't — C. O. Baumann, Sec'y and Treas.

PROCLA

Exhibitors of America

It is time to look into this question of Feature Films.

We have looked into it carefully and will give you the benefit of our knowledge.

1st. That we are opening Warner Feature Exchanges in every state.

2nd. That we are producing our own features as well as importing the best the European market affords.

3rd. That by our method of supplying Feature Films direct from maker to exhibitor, it enables us to invest more capital in our productions, assuring you Features that have the punch.

4th. To begin with we will release one feature every week, later increasing this to three weekly.

You'll fight for Warner's Features. Here is your chance. Let nothing prevent your getting them.

WARNER'S FE

145 W. 45th ST. Suite 806-807-808 Exchange Buildi

MATION

Our First Release

A military production in 3 reels, with a cast of 1500 soldiers. An undertaking that has never before been attempted by any film maker in this country.

Ready for Release July 29th

Our intention is to convince the Picture Loving Public that with our facilities we can and will produce mammoth features. The kind you need.

Offices Now Open:

WARNER'S FEATURE FILM CO.

Heed Building, 1215 Filbert Street, Philadelphia, Pa.
Columbia Building, 112 Prospect Street, Cleveland, Ohio
Cor. Illinois and Maryland, Indianapolis, Ind.
Marquette Building, 140 S. Dearborn Street, Chicago, Ill.
Exchange Building, 145 West 45th Street, New York
25th and Montgomery (temporary quarters), St. Louis, Mo.

Exhibitors, write nearest address. By August 1st fifteen additional offices will be opened.

ATURES

NEW YORK

Exhibitors fill this coupon out and mail to New York office.

Name.....

Theatre.....

Street.....

City.....

LICENSED Film Stories

BIOGRAPH.

THE SANDS OF DEE (July 22).—Mary's mother calls to her to bring the cattle home, and as she goes across the sands where the River Dee empties into the sea, she meets her sweetheart, Bobby. Together they drive the cattle home. A happier pair than this lad and lassie was never seen, until one day there came to the sands an artist, and, of course, his wonderful skill shown in incorporating her picture in the scene he was painting, amazed her. On the other hand, the artist became quite interested in the girl and she mistook this for love. When Bobby comes to propose she tells him and her parents she is engaged to the artist, but when the girl fails to bring the artist to meet them the stern old father unjustly accuses her and drives her from home. Later, he has cause to repent his hasty action, for "The creeping tide came up along the sand and never home came she."

THE WOULD-BE SHRINER (July 25).—Hank Hopkins is a "rube" of the most extreme type, and on the morning of the great Shrine Parade in Los Angeles, he is met by a couple of friends, practical jokers, who make him believe that they can effect his participating in the grand pageant. He telephones his wife to be on the grandstand to see him march by. Mrs. Hopkins receives a great disappointment, but it is slight to what Hank receives when he attempts to get into line.

WILLIE BECOMES AN ARTIST (July 25).—To get money out of dad for his little frolics, Willie pretends he is taking art lessons, when he is really painting the town instead of the canvas. The time comes when he must show results, so he borrows a painting and pretends it is his work. Dad, however, insists upon his painting a landscape, and, of course, he must make the bluff. Through a most novel medium the bluff makes good.

MELIES.

THE WILL OF DESTINY (Aug. 1).—Two jealous sisters, Alice and Mary, try to outwit each other in a love affair in which John is the centre of their attraction. Mary, seeing Alice is John's choice, unselfishly gives up to her younger sister and, concealing her grief as best she can, she leaves the room. Shortly afterwards John is called away from the city and while absent his fiancée elopes with a millionaire. John, losing his eyesight through an accident, and Mary learning of his mishap, meets him at the station on his return and poses as her sister, so that he may not hear of the elopement of his sweetheart. John, recovering his eyesight after a skillful operation, discovers the deception, and although broken-hearted over the falseness of his former fiancée, he is glad that he learned the true worth of her elder sister before it was too late. He asks Mary to forgive the past and make him worthy of her love.

EDISON.

THE SKETCH WITH THE THUMB PRINT (July 23).—Mr. Harry Furniss, the famous English cartoonist, and his daughter are visiting New York in search of various American types. While passing a Fifth Avenue jewelry store the daughter calls his attention to a rough-looking man who stands gazing at the diamonds displayed in the window. As the artist finishes the sketch his daughter accidentally drops a sketch of herself; the rough-looking man picks it up and in handing it to the girl, leaves his dirty thumb print upon it. Later the artist leaves the sketch book on a park bench.

The reporter, wandering in the park and discouraged at lack of news, reads a heading in a newspaper of a great diamond robbery and wishes he were lucky enough to locate the criminal. He finds the sketch book, sees the name and address of the owner on the inside and returns it to him. He asks for a sketch in return and selects the one of the daughter upon which is the dirty thumb print. In glancing over a newspaper which he has been reading, the artist recognizes the name of the jeweler who was robbed as the one in front of whose store he sketched the rough character. He tells the reporter of the incident and shows him a sketch of the man and also shows him the man's thumb print. The reporter's news gathering propensity immediately begins to assert itself and he proceeds to the Rogue's Gallery to find out who the original of the sketch is.

Later, in looking over the scene of the crime, he finds a thumb print on a bit of broken glass in the jeweler's smashed window. He learns of the haunts frequented by the man he suspects and by some clever detective work secures another print of his thumb. The three prints prove conclusive evidence and the criminal is arrested. The reporter gives his paper a "scoop" which reinstates him in the favor of the city editor and the closing scene shows him in high favor with the artist's pretty daughter.

THE GROUCH (July 24).—Being of a morose nature, John Taylor only sees the dark side of things and consequently his associates in the shop have nicknamed him "The Grouch." His brother-in-law, Thomas Bright, about the ony one who really takes an interest in him, sets about to let the sunshine into his dark ways of thinking. This is not an easy task, but Tom is determined to change the man's nature if possible, at least for his sister's sake, who leads a miserable life on account of her husband's grouchiness.

To cure him, Thomas invokes the aid of the boys in the shop, who finally agree to make him a member of their club where harmony and good-fellowship reigns supreme. They succeed in a measure in showing him the sunny side of life, but not until he returns home that night and finds his child ill, is a change in his nature brought about. His one redeeming feature is his great love for his only child whose highly sensitive nature has been so shocked by the Grouch's constant fault-finding that she becomes quite ill.

Thomas knowing this, now decides as a last resort to play on his heart strings by inducing the child to write the following note: "Dear papa: Please be good to mama and I will try very hard to get well. I don't want to die for I love you both as big as the moon. Dolly." This note has the desired effect; he breaks down completely and prays to be delivered from his grouchy nature.

THE ESCAPE FROM BONDAGE (July 26).—This is the first of a series of stories concerning a girl called Mary, and it shows her first adventure at the age of a few weeks, when she is brought in a basket and secretly left in the store of one Billy Peart. The note which accompanies her, promises Billy that if he provides for her and finally sees her married to some village boy, a thousand dollars will be sent to him in addition to the five hundred which is left with the child. Of course the note is unsigned and of course Mary's parentage is therefore in doubt.

After this prologue the story takes up this action; Mary is eighteen years of age and Billy has made up his mind that it is about time to fulfill the suggestion of the note and marry her to some village chap. He finds a young country lad, Tuck Wintergreen, who shows a decided preference for the girl and invites him to go ahead and win her, promising his own influence as backing for his suit. But Mary has become a dreamer and is in no mind to marry. She has made a friend of an old fisherman and sails with him in his boat, listening to tales of the great world.

On one eventful day a magnificent yacht anchors in the harbor and Mary hears of the life of people who own such boats. The old fisherman, gives her a twenty-dollar pocket piece of his, telling her to keep it until the time comes when she goes forth to see the great world, and that it will help her on her way. When she returns to the ice cream parlor kept by Billy Peart, she finds the yacht people to be served with ice cream and while admiring their smart yachting suits and good breeding, she thinks of the twenty-dollar gold piece. Billy Peart sees her fondling it and takes it from her, the result is a quarrel which drives the yacht folk away from the store and sends Mary, hot for revenge, to the sitting room upstairs. There she remembers seeing Billy lock something in a drawer and in her frenzy she tugs at the drawer until the front, which has not been firmly glued, comes off and she finds herself in possession of a roll of money and a note. The note which she reads, makes her realize that she does not belong to Billy Peart, and that she has a right to flee from the life of the little country store. She defies Billy and runs to the wharf, where she begs the old fisherman to take her to the mainland. When Billy follows her, her staunch friend holds him on the pier while Mary sails away with the boat to freedom and the future, which will be told in some other stories.

THE RELIEF OF LUCKNOW (July 27).—In a succession of splendidly enacted scenes, we are led, step by step from the beginning of the dissatisfaction of the Indian troops at Lucknow. Finally the outbreak occurs and we are shown the night of May 12th, 1857, and just what occurred on that memorable evening at Lucknow.

At the beginning of the mutiny we are shown the burning of the officers' houses, the news of the outbreak received by Sir Henry Lawrence and also the manner of Sir Henry Lawrence's death, his burial at night, midst shot and shell and, like Sir Thomas Moore,

> No useless coffin enclosed his breast.
> Nor sheet nor shroud rebound him,
> But he lay like a warrior taking his rest
> With his military cloak around him.

Hospital scenes are shown giving one an idea of the work that befell the women during the siege.

General Havelock is also introduced and he is shown starting for the relief of Lucknow from Cawnpore. This all eventually leads up to that never-to-be-forgotten moment at Lucknow when hopes had deserted them and each moment they thought would be the last. Then comes the shrill notes of the bagpipes. And in the closing events we are shown the fight in the streets of Lucknow when General Havelock forced his way through those narrow lanes to the relief of those heroic men and women.

CINES.

A DAUGHTER'S DIPLOMACY (July 23).—The whole trouble starts at the picnic given by the Martins in honor of the birthday of their daughter Marion. Everybody is having a splendid time until Mrs. Martin discovers her husband paying too much attention to a fascinating Countess. All her attempts to smile and conquer the "Green Eyed Monster" are thenceforth unsuccessful. On the return journey by motor, the husband becomes more assiduous than ever in his attentions, and consequently when they arrive home the wife can no longer control her anger and an open quarrel breaks out in the erstwhile happy household.

After the evening meal, Marion over-hears a conversation between her parents in which they finally agree to separate. Retiring to her room, she thinks the matter over, and decides upon a plan of reconciliation. She again returns to the parlor and makes herself as disagreeable as possible. Now Marion is the very idol of her parents' existence. When they see her in such a mood, they become alarmed and try in every way to please her and thus her plan proves successful, for they forget their own difficulty.

She then leaves them in a reconciliatory attitude and brings the countess to see the result of her effort. "Isn't that a pretty picture" she exclaims, pointing through the door-way, and then adds, "now countess, you may go."

TOO MANY SWEETHEARTS (July 27).—George is a very impressionable young fellow; he is rather fickle in his attentions to the opposite sex, and is always in difficulties. As the guest of two sisters at a house party, he starts by falling violently in love with Bertha, although she does not return his devotion, while the other sister, Gertie, is far more vulnerable, and even imagines herself in love with him.

The complication is accentuated by the appearance of another suitor who shows preference for Daisy, and when George proposes, he finds that he has been too long in making up his mind, and is repulsed.

Our hero then turns to the other sister, finding her just as attractive, and after a series of flirtations, manages to find an opportunity to cast his heart at her feet, but once more finds that a more persistent lover has "beat him to it."

There is nothing left for the poor fellow to do now but to wear a pleasant smile and to take the job as best man at both weddings.

ECLIPSE.

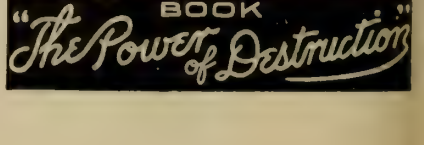
BILLY'S NIGHTMARE (July 24).—After extinguishing the light of the candle with his battered old hat, Billy crawls into bed and is soon "sawing wood" at a great rate. He immediately starts out on a series of adventures. Nearly everyone he meets offers an opportunity for some prank and he does not neglect man, woman, child or beast. He plays tricks on cab horses, storekeepers, nursemaids, quarreling women and even has the nerve to trifle with the dignity of a policeman, who pursues him.

There is no telling where he might have landed, or what he might have done next, but suddenly his great alarm clock goes off, and he awakes to find his hat has caught fire from the candle, and the house is nearly in flames.

THE FRENCH ARMY IN ACTION (July 24).—A thrilling and impressive military subject, showing several regiments of the French army in splendid action. We see a large body of troops "on the defensive" "defending the bridge," "bringing forward the artillery," and in many other exciting maneuvers.

ESSANAY.

THE UNDERSTUDY (July 23).—Pauline Raymond, leading lady of a theatrical company, which is to open on Broadway with a new show, receives her part and goes to a small country place to study. Here she meets the daughter of the landlady and the two become fast friends. The little country girl is deeply interested in Pauline's part, and studies it every chance she gets. Seeing her enthusiasm, Pauline makes her sort of an understudy and Mary helps the actress greatly with her prompting. Two weeks pass and Pauline prepares to leave for the opening night. Quite by accident she forgets her part and leaves it behind at the cottage. Mary finds it and, although knowing it by heart, goes out into the woods to study the familiar lines. Meanwhile, Pauline's auto meets with a serious accident on the road and she is carried back to the cottage badly injured. Bradley, the theater manager, gets the wire, jumps into an auto and arrives at the little town on the afternoon of the opening night of the show. Pauline's injury prevents her returning to the stage for weeks and Bradley is in despair. Failure of the show and ruin stare him in the face and he tramps away into the woods to fight it out with himself. Suddenly he hears a voice speaking aloud the lines of Miss Raymond's part and discovers Mary, who tells him she knows every line of it. Instantly Bradley whisks her into his auto, and, after a wild dash, they arrive in the city in time to fit Mary out with a wardrobe and send



Tuesday, July 30
Two Reels

Sensationality and picturesque beauty have never been so harmoniously or ideally combined.

THE PRISON on the CLIFF

Quite a few exhibitors have been fortunate enough to see this feature at the several recent film conventions, particularly at Chicago, Atlanta, Lexington, Cleveland and Wheeling, where D. W. McKinney exhibited it. In each case "The Prison on the Cliff" has met with unstinted approval. There's a reason, you can bet.

FILM SUPPLY CO. OF AMERICA
133 W. 44TH ST., N. Y. C.,
DISTRIBUTORS

Tuesday, July 23
hand-colored
$18.00 extra

THE SILENT CASTLE

Thursday, July 25
(hand-colored)

LOVE'S FLORAL TRIBUTE

Thursday, August 1

The ROMANCE of the PALM GARDEN

Tuesday, August 6
(hand-colored $20.00 extra)
The well known lion story that our school books related

ANDROCLUS and the LION

The pictures of our Stock Company are now ready; drop a line to the

Gaumont Co.
Flushing, N. Y. for full details

Thursday August 8th

PRISON-CLIFF

A PHANTOM of the NIGHT

Tuesday, August 13

DREAM DRIVEN

Don't forget that we can still furnish you with International News Service Phographic Layouts on our recent feature, Written In Blood, for 30c each.

2 REELS—Black & White—Supremely Sensational—AUG. 15

We could certainly make a big holler about this feature of features, but we won't. We feel that we should have your confidence when

THEIR LIVES for GOLD

We assure a picture herein that far surpasses Attacked By A Lion in Sensationality and Daring. At present being shown in Chicago by Mr. H. Iget. Get in touch with any Chicago exchange that has seen it.

MOTION PICTURE SUPPLIES

PHOTOGRAPHIC SUPPLIES — WHOLESALE and RETAIL — THEATRE SEATING

EDISON
MOTIOGRAPH
POWERS
SIMPLEX
STANDARD

MACHINES

ARCO
BIO
ELECTRA
EXCELLO SIEMEN

CARBONS

Ticket Hangers — Carrying Cases — Machine Parts — Asbestos Booths
Reels — Rewinders — Disinfectants — Exit Signs

Everything for the Motion Picture Theatre except the Film

PICTURE THEATRE EQUIPMENT CO., 21 E. 14th St., N. Y. City
Phone Stuyvesant 2478

her on the stage to play the star role. Mary makes a great hit and receives an ovation at the final curtain that insures her success and that of the play. Bradley instantly makes her leading lady of the road company.

MR. TIBBS' CINDERELLA (July 25).—Mr. Tibbs is a salesman with the Walk E-Z Shoe Company, and is an enthusiastic admirer of pretty feet. Everywhere he goes he is on the lookout for them, and is thoroughly disgusted when many charming women reveal feet of enormous proportions. One morning, a shoe-drummer leaves a plaster mold of a female foot, beautifully small and charming. It is handed over to Tibbs, who goes into ecstasies, fits a pair of shoes to the model, then puts a large sign in the window offering to give the shoes to any lady able to wear them. During his absence a veiled Venus enters, tries on the shoes and they are found to fit her perfectly. She leaves her own shoes and goes out wearing the new ones. Tibbs returns and, with one of her shoes in his hand, starts out in pursuit of his affinity. For a whole month he searches vainly, hiding under sidewalks and watching the passing feet for a glimpse of his Cinderella, but with no success. At last one day, he catches sight of her through the window of a barber-shop, wipes the lather from his half-shaved face and rushes out. The chase leads to the railroad station, where Cinderella boards the train. Tibbs, after a hard dash, boards the train as it is pulling out, secures a berth and goes to bed. Next morning he is searching for his lost collar-button, when those fairy feet emerge from the opposite berth before his very eyes. Down on his knees Tibbs pours out his love, only to have Cinderellas face appear next and discover she is a toothless and frightfully ugly spinster. With a whoop of rage, Tibbs dashes from the coach, and, while Cinderella vainly tries to prevent it, dives from the train. A moment later he crawls up the embankment a human wreck and limps off for the city, a sadder but wiser man.

TWINS (July 26).—Gay Mr. Mullane has a pretty wife and baby girl, but is tired with the hum-drum domesticity of his home, and longs to spread his wings and flutter in the alluring circles of his Bohemian friends. Wife sees this and on receiving a wire from her twin sister saying she is coming to Frisco, she hits on a scheme to teach hubby a much needed lesson. Gaining his permission to go to 'Frisco to meet Lolita, she leaves, only to stop and send back a note supposedly coming from Lolita, saying she will arrive that evening. Mrs. Mullane now returns home decked out as the real Lolita, and captures the hearts of Mullane and his gay friends, who start an outrageous flirtation. Mullane is the worst of all, and, never suspecting it to be his real wife, pours forth his love on bended knee and finally gets her to agree to elope that same night. Meanwhile, the friends swamp Mrs. Mullane with flowers and attentions, much to the disgust of Mullane, who finally drives them from the house. Again they return with more floral treasures and Mullane is green with jealousy at their attentions, when suddenly his baby girl enters the room with her nurse, recognizes her mother, and rushes to her with outstretched arms. Mrs. Mullane manages to keep up the deception by ignoring the child, but suddenly the real Lolita arrives, greets her sister and Mullane and his friends are dumbfounded when they realize they have been making love to his own wife. Mullane begs for mercy on his knees, but Mrs. Mullane and her sister sweep from the room, leaving him to his sad reflections, while his friends give him the laugh and hasten out for much needed refreshments.

A MOONSHINER'S HEART (July 27).—Old Seth Stevens and his pretty daughter Vedah, live in their rough hill-shack. Stevens conducts an illicit "still" in an abandoned shanty, and the "moonshine" whiskey is concealed in loads of hay and sold in the nearby town. One of the moonshiners is Tom Jackson, who loves Vedah. Stevens encourages Tom's attentions, but Vedah declares that she does not love the young moonshiner and his heart is broken in consequence. Meanwhile, word of the "still" trickles out to civilization and the county sheriff dispatches Ross Chalmers, a young deputy, into the hills in the guise of a wandering artist, to run down the moonshiners and destroy the "still." One morning as Chalmers is tramping the hills he meets Vedah and speaks with her. The girl is attracted by his culture and good looks, and, in succeeding meetings their friendship ripens into love. Driving to town one morning with a load of whiskey, Tom discovers Chalmers and Vedah in each others' arms. Later word is brought to the moonshiners that Chalmers is a revenue officer, and Tom instantly takes to the hills with his rifle, locates Chalmers and Vedah and is about to savagely shoot the deputy down when Vedah desperately promises to marry him if he will conduct Chalmers to safety. For a moment Tom hesitates, then lowers his rifle and leads them off down the trail. Coming to the parson's cottage, Tom surprises them all by calling him out and ordering him to marry Vedah and Chalmers. Realizing what the young moonshiner is sacrificing, Vedah thanks him with tears of gratitude in her brown eyes and Chalmers wrings his hand warmly. Then while Tom strides away to the hills, stifling the love that cries out within him, Vedah and Chalmers are united in marriage.

KALEM.

A PRISONER OF THE HAREM (July 19).—Alice Durand, after weeks of discouragement, reads the following advertisement in the New York Herald:

"Governess wanted. Young American woman, well educated and speaking French and German, may obtain lucrative position with prominent Egyptian. Fare and expenses will be advanced. Write, enclosing photograph, to Mahmoud Pasha, Spinx Club, Cairo, Egypt."

Answering the advertisement, Alice seven weeks later, secures the position and leaves her New York boarding-house for Egypt. The Pasha meets her at the station in Cairo and she is taken to the harem, where she is introduced to the Pasha's favorite and his children. Within a few days the Pasha shows his hand and Alice finds she is a prisoner in the harem. Writing a note, indicating her peril, she drops it through the shutters. A young American connected with the Consulate, picks up the message and enters the harem only to be overpowered by the eunuchs. Just as the Pasha is about to have him thrown into the lion's den, help arrives from the United States Consulate and the young Americans are released.

EGYPTIAN SPORTS (July 19).—This is an entertaining picture portraying scenes on the race track at Cairo, Egypt.

THE THIEF (July 22).—Lillie Harding, employed by a cloak house, is invited by the bookkeeper, her sweetheart, to attend a dance. Realizing the poor quality of her clothes she sighs for a pretty new coat. The young girl is unable to resist vanity's temptation and she borrows a handsome lace coat from the showrooms. When her mother learns what she has done she censures Lillie and tells her the coat should not be worn, but the girl makes light of it and promises to return the coat the next morning. At the dance the bookkeeper accidentally sees the tag on the coat. He accuses Lillie of having stolen it and breaks their engagement.

The next morning, fearing detection, Lillie asks her mother to bring the coat to the store. Shortly after Lillie arrives at her work the coat is called for and Lillie tells the forelady it has been misplaced. Lillie is suspected of stealing the coat and officers with a search warrant are sent to her home to recover it.

In the meantime Lillie's mother has started for the store to return the garment, but is delayed first by missing the ferry and again by a train at a street crossing. She eventually reaches the store and gives the coat to Jack, the bookkeeper, who places it back of one of the drawers when no one is looking. A little later on he inquires if they have found the coat, and when told that it has been stolen, he joins in the search and brings out the trouble-making garment. Lillie, realizing the wrong she has done, is heart-broken, but Jack, believing she has been sufficiently punished, decides to forgive her.

FANTASCA, THE GYPSY (July 24).—John Neville visits the gipsy camp to secure entertainers for his lawn party the following day. Fantasca, the young and pretty gipsy queen, while performing for the entertainment, falls in love with Neville. When the lawn party is over the returning gipsies try to lead away Neville's little girl, but one of the servants frustrates their plans.

While making a short cut through the woods the next day, Neville meets Fantasca, who informs him of her love and is repulsed. Later the gipsies move to a new camp, but before leaving, a plot is arranged to kidnap Neville's child and the plan is successful. Although Fantasca's love is unrequited, she realizes the pain the loss of the child will cause Neville and she determines to return the child to its parents. That night she leaves the camp with the child while all the rest are asleep. Her departure is detected and a gipsy fires after her. Although dangerously wounded, she succeeds in reaching Neville's home and expires after delivering the child to the distracted parents.

A POLITICAL KIDNAPPING (July 26).—In a little city of the West the best citizens decide the community needs reforming and place in nomination for mayor, Arthur Taylor, a young business man of sterling character. John Harrison, the editor of the local paper, and his daughter, Mary, promise to help the reform candidate. Joe Simms, the candidate of the opposition party, calls on the editor and asks for his assistance, but is informed that the Press intends to expose him and endorse Taylor's nomination. Simms then springs a surprise on the editor by showing him that he has bought up the mortgages on his paper and home and threatens to ruin him if he is opposed. The shock of this information brings on an attack of heart failure and the editor is found dead in his office. Mary determines more than ever to secure the election of the reform candidate and decides to run the paper. Simms calls on her and tries to dissuade the girl from her purpose, but Mary tells him that the edition of the following afternoon will completely expose him. Through a confederate in the employ of the Press, Simms lures the small staff to the railroad yards, where they are locked in a box car. The printer's devil, however, escapes and secures the release of the men, bringing them to the office in time to complete the work which Mary has been endeavoring to handle alone. The next day Simms awakens to the fact that he is a ruined man and the election of the reform candidate is assured.

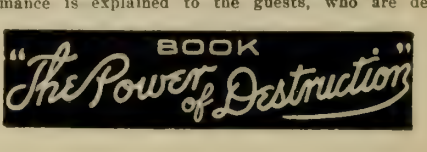
LUBIN.

THE RANGER'S REWARD (July 22).—Ranger Romaine, who is located in an isolated district on the Mexican border, receives instructions from his superior to get Surrento, the outlaw. One day, during his search, he hears a woman scream and makes his way to her. There he finds his man attacking a Mexican girl. There is a struggle in which Romaine is thrown and stunned while the outlaw escapes. The ranger leaves Bonita, the Mexican girl, to continue his search, promising to return. Bonita's brother, returning from a border town, sees Surrento in a tree over the trail. He runs and informs his sister, who, fearing foul play, determines to save her lover by taking a short cut to the scene described by the brother. She arrives in time to again save the ranger's life by shooting a knife out of Surrento's hand as he hangs over the trail on the limb of a tree. A struggle ensues. Surrento is captured by the ranger and the ranger is captured by Bonita, who makes him her life partner.

THE TALKER (July 24).—Sarah Tripamor is a veritable talking machine; every day she murders people by talking them to death. Ambulances are continually being called to take charge of collapsed victims. She stops the mail man and talks until he drops. A blind man throws up his hands and regrets that he is not also deaf. Determining to get in her diabolical work, she tackles a German band until they drive her away with their horns. Next she meets a policeman who has a thief in charge; the poor cop swoons and the thief escapes. Visiting a picture show she makes her way behind the screen and talks to the shadowgraphs. Another policeman is attacked and Sarah talks the buttons off his uniform. Finally her jaw gets dislocated, she is taken to a hospital where one of the surgeons gives the jaw a punch and replaces it. Her husband punches it out again and she is rendered permanently dumb. Sarah is not easy to beat. Finding that she cannot talk any more, she goes to a deaf and dumb asylum and learns the sign language. Now she keeps up her incessant clatter with her fingers.

A VISIT TO LIVELY TOWN (July 24).—While Si Barbour and Seth Jones are at work on the farm Si, who has been chopping wood, suddenly becomes thirsty and goes to the pump to have a drink. On his way back he passes the mail box and thinks that he will look in to see if there is any mail for himself or the family. He finds a large booklet which he looks over and is quite surprised at the things he finds pictured in the book. He at once goes over to where Seth is at work, and tells him of the wonders that are hidden in the book, and shows him the pictures. These pictures, which are views of Lively Town, so enthuse the two that they decide on a visit to the place. They leave the farm in charge of the hired man, and get on their best clothes and start. We next see them arriving at the station where things are in such a bustle, and confusion, that they are quite bewildered. They stroll around the town taking in the sights and amusements, until they are standing looking at a rough and tumble scrap. A policeman appears on the scene at which time the participants run away and the officer seizes the two rubes and gives them a severe shaking. This wakes them up for a minute and they move with the alacrity of the people of Lively Town. But the exertion is so great and different from what they have been accustomed to that they are quite dizzy. They decide that they have had enough for one day and return home.

THE SHEPHERD'S FLUTE (July 25).—Allan Steele is the youngest boy of a family of sturdy mountaineers. On account of his youth he is assigned the position of Shepherd and his joyful pastime is playing on the flute. One day, Ruth Winton, daughter of an aristocratic family, wanders near the pasture grounds and hears the music of Allan's flute. She becomes enthralled and makes daily trips to the hills. Finally she gets acquainted. The boy holds her spellbound with his art. The vacation being over, Ruth and her mother return to the city, and the dream of love is over. Some years pass and the young lady looks upon the incident as a dream that has passed. In the meantime Allan, who cannot forget, goes to the big city to find his sweetheart. He wanders around bewildered and is almost at the point of starvation when he thinks of the flute and plays on the street for money. He is soon discovered by an impressario, who recognizes the boy's art and takes him in charge, resolving to place him before the world. The debut takes place at a fashionable function where nobility are gathered. In the meantime, Ruth has by her mother been betrothed to the Earl of Norocks, and it is to be made public that night. The Earl is there and has led Ruth to the conservatory to talk of the engagement. During the tete-a-tete Ruth's ear catches the sound of one of the weird refrains that had charmed her in her romance. She rushes to the salon and there finds the handsome shepherd boy, the idol of the assembly. Regardless of conventionality she throws herself into his arms. The romance is explained to the guests, who are de-



The European Sensational Masterpiece

"Through Trials to Victory"

In 3 Reels (2450 feet)

Depicting a Beautiful and Romantic Drama of Love and Injustice

A Mammoth Feature Production Of Great Merit With All Star Cast

Be Quick to Secure This Big Attraction For Your Territory. First Come, First Served

"The Last Lesson"

In 2 Reels (Ambrosio) A Powerful Drama Beautifully Staged.

Elaborate One and Three Sheet Posters, 8 x 10 Photos, Booklets and Lobby Frames with these features. WRITE OR WIRE FOR SPECIAL PRICES.

Great Northern Special Feature Film Company

44 East Fourteenth Street, New York

MR. THEATRE MANAGER:

Are you using regularly the splendid lithographs put out by the A. B. C. COMPANY, Cleveland, Ohio? If not, get them at once and notice the improved attendance at your theatres. We now issue regularly one sheets for all three sheets for every release of Lubin and Biograph; and on any feature reels issued by any of the above companies (as well as Vitagraph) we issue Three and Six Sheets. If you cannot obtain these from your exchange, write us today. Send for Catalogue.

Kalem, Lubin, Pathe, Edison and Biograph Reels;

A. B. C. COMPANY, Cleveland, Ohio

lighted. The Earl shows himself to be a good loser and all are happy.

HIS VACATION (July 26).—Bobby Burns, one morning while working in the office, receives a photograph from a friend of his, who is in Atlantic City. The photograph is a picture of his friend and two young ladies in bathing suits. On the back of the photograph a note is written telling Bobby of the swell time they are having at the shore. Bobby loses no time in cooking up a scheme to get away for a few days. He has a friend send him a fake telegram to the effect that his mother met with an accident, spraining her ankle while at Atlantic City. Bobby's employer, a sympathetic old gentleman, gives Bobby some money and hurries him off to his mother's side. While Bobby is enjoying himself with the party in Atlantic City, his employer finds the photograph and, after reading the note, decides to go to Atlantic City to find Bobby and fire him. The next morning finds Bobby's boss in Atlantic City. Bobby and his friends are about to leave to go sailing when the girls' chaperon, afraid of sea-sickness, remains on shore. While the party is out sailing a flirtation has taken place between Bobby's boss and the chaperon. He is so taken up with the chaperon that he forgets all about looking for Bob. The party has returned from their yachting trip and are on their way to the hotel in an automobile, when Bob is discovered by his boss, who runs after the automobile. Bob sees the boss and thinks the gig is up. They hunt up the chaperon and make her act as mother with the sprained ankle. Handkerchiefs are tied around the ankle of the chaperon. When Bob introduces the boss to his supposed mother, they are all surprised to see that the boss and the chaperon are friends and have met before. The boss is so pleased to meet the chaperon again that he forgets all about firing Bob. The picture closes with the boss and the chaperon leaving the party for a stroll.

THE DIVINE SOLUTION (July 27).—Jaunita was a happy, carefree, little Mexican maid, until she met and married Pedro Carillo. Ever since childhood she secretly loved Manuel Garcia, but a revolution in the land of his birth called him away to take up arms for the cause he thought was right. Little Juanita was left behind. Believing Manuel did not love her, she permitted Pedro to come into her life. He persuaded her to marry him, Jaunita, not knowing until too late, that he had an unconquerable desire for liquor. The climax came when he tore the wedding ring from her finger and sold it for a few paltry drinks of whiskey. She hurried to stop him, but was too late. Hesitating before the door of the saloon, she was accosted by her former sweetheart, Manuel. To him she told her story. Rushing into the saloon, he dragged Pedro out; then followed them, feared harm might come to Jaunita. He reached their home just in time to save her from Pedro's cruelty, but received a severe wound in the scuffle. Believing he had killed him, Pedro rushed into the woods and remained in hiding. Learning that he had only wounded Manuel, he returned to his hovel and to his still faithful wife. After satisfying his hunger he demanded liquor. She had none to give. Then she told him, how the good priest, Padre de la Pena, had provided for her and nursed Manuel back to health. This caused Pedro to think of the golden challace in the church as it would give him gold enough to supply him with liquor for months. He decided to steal it, but the hand of God was raised against him and he died just as he took the cup in his sacrilegious grasp. Weeks of lonesomeness passed, Jaunita was sad, but when the sweetheart of her childhood days came to offer her his love and protection, she took his outstretched hand and smiled.

VITAGRAPH.

WANTED—A SISTER (July 22).—In the college play, Tom and his room-mate, "Bunch," take prominent and successful parts, Tom as the hero and "Bunch" as the heroine, in which he is an excellent female impersonator. The day after the performance, "Bunch" makes an engagement to take a real chorus girl to dinner. Unexpectedly his mother comes to college to visit him and he makes Tom take the girl. He reluctantly consents, as he is engaged to Evelyn Marshall. While Tom and the chorus girl are dining in the restaurant, Evelyn comes in with a part of friends. She is astonished, and exceedingly vexed when Tom's companion pats him under the chin. Evelyn makes her presence known to Tom and breaks their engagement. He tells her that the young lady is his sister and he would like to have her call at her room the next day and see her.

Tom hurries to his room, and tells "Bunch" the mess he has got him in, and that he will have to help him out of it by impersonating his sister, using the same costume as he used in the play the night before. "Bunch" agrees and succeeds in carrying out his part of the contract until Tom places him in the folding couch to give him a chance to talk to Evelyn alone. While Evelyn and Tom are sitting on the couch, "Bunch" succeeds in releasing himself from his imprisonment, and rushes from the house, where he is arrested by a policeman for masquerading in woman's attire. He induces the policeman to go to his room and get Tom's identification, which Tom tantalizingly refuses to give, until he sees the joke has gone far enough. The policeman smilingly withdraws. Tom and "Bunch" explain matters to Evelyn and she consents to forgive Tom, and re-accepts her engagement ring.

LAMBERT CHACE—DETECTIVE (July 23).—Entering by way of the window, the thief glances around the room, and seeing Mr. and Mrs. Harrison asleep, he helps himself to the jewels he finds in the drawer of the dresser, and retires the same way he entered. Mr. Harrison, when he discovers the theft, sends for Lambert Chace, the noted detective. He examines the room and finds a thumb print on the dresser cover. He cuts the thumb print from the cloth for future reference. He then examines the ground beneath the porch and tells Mr. Harrison that the intruder wore a pair of new shoes and limped.

Chace, disguising himself as a poor laboring man, goes to a saloon frequented by toughs. A young fellow, with a pair of new shoes on, which cause him to limp, comes in. Chace follows him and finds out where he lodges. He gains admittance to the suspected man's bedroom with the aid of the landlady. He finds that his man has gone through the window, down the fire escape.

He follows him and sees him jump on a fast moving freight train. The detective swings himself onto the train, finds his man on top of one of the cars, where they have a terrific struggle. Chase succeeds in placing the irons on the thief and taking him to the station house. He takes an impression of his thumb and compares it with the print upon the dresser cover. These, with the jewels, which they find in the thief's room, make the evidence complete.

MARTHA'S REBELLION (July 24).—James Morton has always lived with his sister, Martha, their mother dying when he was young. Martha is seven years his senior, and has spoiled him, waiting on him hand and foot, until he has become at the age of fifty, a perfectly unbearable old tyrant, utterly selfish. Dr. Goodwill, a friend of the family's, remonstrates with her for humoring him; she declares he was left in her charge by her mother, and she cannot be unkind to him.

Their uncle dies and leaves Martha a small annuity. The moment her brother hears of it, he wishes to lay out the money as he thinks fit. This is the last straw. Goodwill interferes and Morton orders him from the house. Goodwill finally persuades Martha that it is her duty to teach Morton a lesson, so she leaves him, saying that as he is dissatisfied with the way she runs his house, he had better try it himself.

She has no sooner gone than his servants give him warning and leave, and he tries to run the house alone, getting into all sorts of complications. The house is a sight and he is good and sick of his experience. He realizes what a fool he has been and begs his sister to come back to him, promising amendment in the future.

THE BARRIER THAT WAS BURNED (July 26).—Jennie Slocum, with her father, is a new arrival in Ore City. On account of her beauty and natural graces, she is the most popular girl in those parts. Bill Lawrence, the toughest fellow in camp, wins and marries her. "Dandy Dick," a good fellow, has always admired Jennie, and, after she marries, Bill and grows tired of the lonelines of cabin life Dick writes her a letter, offering to take her back East. She spurns him and his offer.

Later, she has a quarrel with her husband when he finds Dick's letter, and accuses her of being in league with him. He leaves her in a passion, and goes to the saloon to dissipate his anger in drink. Jennie packs her belongings in a small valise and determines to make her way back East alone. While making her way across the mountains, a terrible blizzard comes on, and she falls exhausted into the sleep brought on by extreme cold.

Bill goes back to his home and finds it deserted. He returns to the saloon, where he sees "Dandy Dick," and, learning that she has not gone with him, he starts out alone to search for her. The other men in the saloon hastily prepare to follow him, led by "Dandy Dick." In the face of the fast falling snow and intense cold they are on the point of giving up, when they see a light, which they follow. They find Bill lying prostrate across the silent form of his wife, with Dick's charred letter in his hand. He had lighted it to get a better view of his wife's face, and the searching party saw it. The searchers administer restoratives to Jennie and Bill. As they stand in each other's embrace, the storm abates and Bill grasps Dick's hand, telling his wife that the barrier is burned, and he will, in the future, live as a man should to be deserving of her love.

THE LIGHT OF ST. BERNARD (July 27).—Marie, a self-dependent girl, compromises herself by associating with Petro Maquin. She asks him to keep his promise to marry her. He ignores her and leaves the village to join a band of wreckers. The gossips circulate scandal about her, bringing reproach upon her name. The town's folks shun her and even revile her. Pere Martin rebukes their unchristian-like conduct and takes Marie under his care. Raoul, the old lighthouse keeper, who is growing feeble, and now left alone by the death of his wife, needs assistance. Pere Martin obtains the position for Marie, thinking it will remove her from the sneers of the village. She does her duty well, and the old man trusts her and depends upon her. Raoul is taken ill and Marie sends for Pere Martin. Raoul dies and Marie keeps the death watch for him.

Petro Maquin, with a gang of wreckers, having heard of a well-laden ship that is likely to pass the coast that night, enters and demands that Marie put out the lights. She refuses. Petro chokes her and binds her hands behind her back, leaving her half-dead on the floor. Petro and his gang put out the lights, and go to watch for the wreck. Marie recovers. With great exertion she drags herself to a chair, on which is a lighted candle, and, turning her back to the flame, burns the cords from her hands, breaks into the upper lighthouse and relights the lamps. She is discovered in a faint by Pere Martin. Her heroic deed is known and she is rewarded and praised in public for her heroism and faithfulness.

SELIG.

A DAY OFF (July 19).—Con Ology and Hi Flyer, two henpecked husbands, hit upon a plan whereby they can escape from their domineering spouses for a day in order to enjoy the company of two chorus girl affinities. Consequently they arrange to meet the girls at a secluded bathing beach on the following day. Ology and his better half are the guests of the Flyers at the time the plan is placed in operation. Early the next morning Flyer receives a telegram, supposedly from his friend Carlson, inviting both he and his friend Ology to join Carlson for a day's fishing.

The plan works like a charm and the deceitful hubbies takes their leave loaded down with fishing rods, lunches, etc. They dispose of these without trouble and then make all haste to the appointed trysting place where the girls are waiting. They decide to start the day's festivities with a boat ride, and, being able to secure but one boat, the entire four pile into a rowboat and start out.

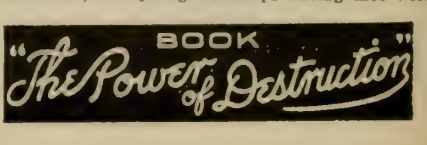
Meanwhile the trusting wives have learned of their husbands' deception and have started in hot pursuit. The men become aware of the fact that they are being followed, and, in their efforts to dodge their better halves without revealing the cause of their embarrassment to the girls, they undergo many extremely ludicrous and exciting adventures. The wives, however, finally manage to get the upper hand and the truant husbands are severely punished for their day's indiscretions.

ON THE TRAIL OF THE GERMS (July 22).—The great and good work being done by the various tuberculosis institutes and societies of the United States has long been a subject of discussion among educational bodies, charitable institutions and people in all walks of life. In "The Trail of the Germs," great care has been taken to arrange this subject in a technically correct, absorbingly interesting dramatic form, and it presents to the public some interesting sidelights upon the prevention and cure of the Great White Plague.

A fruit seller is prevailed upon to visit the Tuberculosis Dispensary. He is examined and found to be tubercular. His home in the congested district of Chicago is visited by one of the tuberculosis nurses, accompanied by a young lady friend who incidently, is a customer of the fruit seller. The home is seen to be dark, stuffy, and poorly ventilated. The man's son is taken to the clinic, and he, too, is found to be tubercular. The young lady acquaintance of the nurse playfully submits to a test by the physician in charge, and it shows that she, too, has a tuberculous infection. Here the "Trail of the Germs" is taken up and they are literally "run to earth." The story is carried along through a series of interesting experiments and tests, and is brought to a close with the unfortunates convalescing under the treatment of fresh air, good food, rest and sunshine.

THE DOUBLE CROSS (July 23).—Bernard Judd, a young prospector, strikes gold among the Colorado foothills. He stakes out his mine and draws a map of it. This he sends to his sweetheart, Sara Severner, who lives in New York City. At the same time he writes her that he will join her inside of a week. His partner, Luer, whose lust for gold has made him treacherous, learns of Judd's plans, and decides to double-cross him. He intercepts Judd's letter and rushes to New York, where he persuades Sara to accompany him back to Colorado, by telling her that Judd is dangerously ill. They pass Judd on the way West. Judd, arriving in New York, and hearing of his partner's dastardly trick, returns at once to Colorado. Luer, knowing that Sara has the mine map on her person, waits until they arrive at Judd's camp before he tells of his intentions in bringing her there. She manages to break away from him and take refuge in the gorge nearby. Judd arrives upon the scene just in time to save his mine and settle matters with Luer.

THE MILLER OF BURGUNDY (July 25).—In the picturesque little Province of Burgundy, in Eastern France, there lived an old miller named Meunier. With him the joy of his heart and administrator to his simple needs, lived his daughter, Louise. Meunier enjoyed the respect of the simple, easy going peasantry thereabouts, and, from the profits of his grist mill, was enabled to live in comparative comfort and contentment. This happy condition was interrupted when one Mr. Bontemps, a rich Parisian financier, decided that he needed Meunier's mill. To his offers the miller, however, turned a deaf ear, and, when Bontemps' son was sent to either purchase Meuniers' mill or start one in opposition, the old miller's future looked dark and foreboding. Of how the opposition mill was started, and young Bontemps having met with



SPECIAL ANNOUNCEMENT

At last we have concluded arrangements with several leading European manufacturers to handle their entire product of 2, 3 and 4 reel features exclusively for the U. S. and CANADA

OUR FIRST RELEASE

"THE PENALTY"

in 2 reels - - - Price, $250.00

A striking drama of love and jealously combined with a well-developed plot and many thrilling situations.

OUR SECOND RELEASE

"THE CIRCUS GIRL"

in 2 reels - - - Price, $250.00

A realistic romance of circus life that will stir its auditors, with many exciting moments.

The above-named subjects are now available at prices that should interest every legitimate film buyer.

We will assure all our customers exclusive territory without any additional cost.

Elaborate advertising matter consisting of 1 sheets, 3 sheets, cuts, pamphlets, etc.

Write for further particulars, posters, and synopsis. Will be mailed gratis.

FEATURE PHOTOPLAY COMPANY

145 West 45th Street, NEW YORK, N. Y.

Exchange Building Telephone Bryant 6332

a serious accident, was nursed and cared for by Louise and her father; of how the elder Bontemps himself, met with accident and how this incident awakened him to a realization of his greed, combine to make one of the sweetest stories of the year.

A WAR TIME ROMANCE (July 26).—Among the many beautiful and exciting romances that saw birth, blossomed and grew, during the dark and foreboding days of our great Civil War period, was that of Arthur Deming, the young Confederate officer, and his Southern sweetheart, Alice Munroe. One exceedingly dramatic incident, that was long afterward remembered by both Arthur and Alice, furnishes the plot of our present story. Jack Munroe, Alice's brother and Arthur's friend, had joined the Northern army and, as the Munroe home chanced to lie on neutral territory, between the opposing forces, it was not surprising that the fortunes of battle should, one day, bring both Jack and Arthur, with their respective troops, face to face on the Munroe grounds.

During the ensuing conflict Jack was wounded and in a critical moment was thrust into a large closet by his frightened sister, Alice. Later Arthur was forced to take refuge in the same closet. This embarrassing situation became worse when Arthur's troops located Jack and took him prisoner. Arthur, in command of the situation, naturally found himself torn between two fires. On the one hand was his love for Alice, on the other—his sworn duty to his flag. Necessity, the mother of invention, did not desert him in this climax, and so, by an ingenuous plan, he managed to allow Jack to escape, at the same time preserving his own dignity and remaining true to his trust.

IN MAORILAND (July 26).—An exceedingly interesting educational travel subject picturing the beauties of New Zealand's "Yellowstone."

PATHE.

PATHE'S WEEKLY, NO. 29, 1912 (July 15).—Sydney, Australia. The Governor-General of Australia, Lord Denman, and his wife, Lady Denman, open the Royal Agricultural Show.

Dansville, Ill. The Central of Georgia crack train, the Dixie Flyer, jumps the track while running at high speed, killing the engineer and injuring a score of persons.

Florence, Italy. The 69th Infantry unveils a monument to the Italian soldiers killed in the Italo-Turkish War.

Poughkeepsie, N. Y. The Classic 8-Oar 'Varsity Race of four miles on the Hudson, is won for the fifth time by Cornell, in 19 minutes, 21 2/5 seconds.

Berlin, Germany. The Kaiser witnesses the Annual Summer Review of his troops.

Southington, Conn. A tablet bearing the features of Rochambeau, the French general, operating under Washington in the Revolutionary War, is unveiled on French Hill.

Baltimore, Md. Governor Woodrow Wilson of New Jersey, is nominated for the presidency on the Democratic ticket.

Cambridge, Md. The 20-foot hydro-plane, Tech, Jr., wins the ten-mile race for motor boats in class A, covering the course in 13 minutes.

New York, N. Y. The Giants trim the Boston Braves to the tune of 9 to 6 in a thirteen-inning game at the Polo Grounds.

Boston, Mass. The Ancient and Honorable Artillery of Boston, leave for England, where they will be entertained by King George V.

QUESTION OF SIZE (July 17).—A clever skit in which a little bit of a woman and a tall man fall in love with each other, and do everything they can to match each other in size—in which they ultimately succeed. It's a pity the secret discovered by these lovers cannot be given to the world at large, for the small men will fall in love with the tall, lanky women and vice versa.

A BRAVE LITTLE INDIAN (July 18).—This charming Indian story has for its hero a little Indian lad, who loves a pale-faced man and wife, and saves them from an attack by the Indians of his tribe. The Indians, though having the reputation of being very treacherous, still can be very, very true, as this story proves, to those of whom they are fond and by whom they have been treated kindly. They remind one of faithful animals in thier gratitude to those who have befriended them.

C. G. P. C.

THE END OF ROBESPIERRE (July 19).—This film is not exceedingly well acted, but has the additional charm of being taken from the actual history of the man whose personality dominated the Committee of Safety in the early days of the French Revolution. It's tragic but enthralling, and full of the atmosphere of those more than troublous times of the French Revolution, when blood was shed like water and men seemed turned to beasts.

THE HALF-BREED FOSTER SISTER (July 20).—This is a very pretty story of a half-breed Mexican girl, adopted by a Castilian family after she has performed a deed of considerable heroism in rescuing the daughter of the Castilian family. Later, the son of the Governor falls in love with her, not knowing her humble origin, and intends to marry her, but he has her identity disclosed to him, and, though willing to continue the arrangement, she loves him too much to allow him to sacrifice his life for her, and enters a convent.

THE MOSQUITO (July 16).—A film which shows the life of the mosquito from the time it emerges from the egg until it grows to a husky size and commences to do damage. It shows the mosquito as a wriggler, a nymph and as a mosquito, and shows how easily mosuitoes may be exterminated by pouring oil on stagnant water. Many will probably feel that they know all they want to know about this annoying little insect, but after seeing this film they will realize that there are lots of things they don't know about it—and things which are very, very good for them to know.

Among the Exhibitors

Kilbourn, Wis.—A new motion picture theater has been opened up here known as the Atlas.

Burlington, Ill.—W. W. Reiss and O. E. Babb of Burlington, opened up a moving picture theater here in the Opera House.

Champaign, Ill.—A new moving picture theater has just been opened up here on Main Street.

Vassar, Mich.—A new theater will be erected here.

Boise, Ida.—Western Film Co. has been incorporated here.

Forest City, Ia.—J. M. Simmons will open a motion picture theater here.

Riceville, Ia.—Brown & Son will open a moving picture show here.

Sanborn, Ia.—Walter Brown will open a picture show here.

Indianapolis, Ind.—The Municipal and Commercial Film Manufacturing Company, Indianapolis; to manufacture films for motion picture shows; capital stock, $20,000; directors, V. E. Bolyard, C. W. Randall, A. F. Sutton and G. P. Balch.

Milwaukee, Wis.—Architect Webb is preparing plans for the erection of a moving picture theater to be erected here on the North Side.

Rochester, N. Y.—Unique Picture Theater, Joseph Avenue. Capital $5,200. E. M. Wolif.

San Pedro, Cal.—A. Lawrence Valk has completed plans for a $20,000 two-story brick moving picture theater building to be built on the corner of 6th and Palos Verdes Sts., for Luke Kelly.

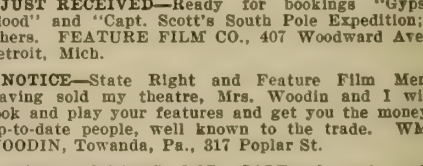
Philadelphia, Pa.—Plans are being prepared for the erection of a new moving picture theater to be erected at 37 North 52nd Street.

St. Louis, Mo.—A permit to erect a $70,000 theater at 3627 to 3633 Delmar Avenue was issued to the German Realty Company.

Fresno, Cal.—Plans are being prepared for the erection of a new Japanese theater to be erected at the corner of Kern and F Streets.

Hedrick, Ia.—Mr. J. E. Benton is erecting a new moving picture theater here.

Boyertown, Pa.—Plans are being prepared for a new moving picture theater to be at the corner of Philadelphia Avenue and Chestnut Street.



CLASSIFIED ADVERTISEMENTS

Classified Advertisements, three cents per word, cash with order; 50 cents minimum; postage stamps accepted

HELP WANTED.

WANTED—Comedian-Pianist or Pianist-Comedian. GEO. BARNARD, Millbrook, N. Y.

WANTED AT ONCE—Pianist for moving pictures. Write quick if good. State experience and salary expected. A. GIESEN, Radford, Va.

WANTED—Experienced cameramen in all parts of America to cover current events. Wire immediately ARGUS WEEKLY, Los Angeles, California.

SITUATIONS WANTED.

MOVING PICTURE OPERATOR—Expert, understands electricity, wants position outside of New York City, within radius of one hundred miles. $12.00. E. MORGAN, Care STORE, 6911 New Utrecht Ave., Brooklyn, N. Y.

STUDIO, DARKROOM—Or as assistant cameraman, wishes position. Previous experience. Age 19. L. FRANCIS, 5 Presston Place, Atlantic City, N. J.

OPERATOR—Desires position anywhere. Experience on all machines. Can deliver the goods. Address OPERATOR, 331 Pleasant St., Ionia, Mich.

MOVING PICTURE OPERATOR OR MANAGER—A trustworthy man. European experience. HASLWANTER, R. F. D. No. 2, Somerville, New Jersey.

EQUIPMENT FOR SALE.

Power's 6, new, never used, complete without compensare, $150.00. H. G. FISHER, Spitly Hotel, Lincoln, Illinois.

FOR SALE—Moving Picture Camera with latest improvement, tripod, three tanks, and three racks. Reason for selling, leaving country. Address Stumar, 123 East 13th Street, New York City.

FOR SALE—Power's No. 6 complete. Used two months, thick legs, everything up-to-date, $150. Sent subject to examination. SLATER THEATRE, Pottsville, Pa.

FOR LEASE—Equipment and theater, airdome combination, capacity 850. Address BOX 322, Albuquerque, New Mexico.

THEATRES WANTED.

WANTED—Several Moving Picture Theatres. Bronx preferred. Private party has $10,000 to invest. Will purchase outright or consider partnerships with good manager or operator. Answers must state location and price. J. W., Care of Moving Picture World, New York City.

WANTED QUICK—Moving Picture Theatre. Will buy or lease. New York, Pennsylvania or New Jersey preferred. Population 2,000 to 50,000. Can revive dead one if location is right. WM. WOODIN, Towanda, Pa.

THEATRES FOR SALE.

FOR SALE—2 new moving picture 10c theatres in this city, 6,000 population, central location; 675 opera chairs, rent $185 per month; across paved street from each other. Other business reason for selling. Take $6,500 to handle. Don't write unless you have the money or most of it. SIMMONS & BRONAUGH, owners, Hugo, Okla.

FOR SALE—Modern moving picture theatre, city in Pennsylvania over 60,000; best location; long lease; large capacity. Part cash, balance weekly. Don't waste time if you haven't $10,000 available. Address PICTURES, care Moving Picture World, New York City.

MISCELLANEOUS.

OPERATORS, MANAGERS—Would you consider an investment of $750 to start a legitimate non-competitive business of your own in your own town in conjunction with present occupation that, with proper attention, will guarantee 50 per cent. profit from the start and handsome income? This is not a canvassing, mail-order or bond-selling scheme. Investment transacted through your local banking institution. For particulars, address H. M. SCOTT, 1402 Broadway, New York City.

JUST RECEIVED—Ready for bookings "Gypsy Blood" and "Capt. Scott's South Pole Expedition;" others. FEATURE FILM CO., 407 Woodward Ave., Detroit, Mich.

NOTICE—State Right and Feature Film Men: Having sold my theatre, Mrs. Woodin and I will book and play your features and get you the money. Up-to-date people, well known to the trade. WM. WOODIN, Towanda, Pa., 317 Poplar St.

FILM BARGAINS FOR SALE—50 reels cold copies, $25.00 per reel; 100 reels, slightly used, $5 and $10. H. I. ELIASOPH, 510 Linwood St., Brooklyn, N. Y.

25 SHEETS different colored gelatin, cut slide size 10c. Blank film leader, 10 foot, 25c. Postage prepaid. CHARLES A. GUNBY, 6412 18th Ave., Brooklyn, N. Y.

PARTNER WANTED—Man under thirty-five to join two young men who are now manufacturing, jobbing and retailing theatrical accessories and supplies. Should have experience as theatre manager and machine operator and be well posted on moving picture topics. Must be able to invest $2,000 and take active interest as salesman. Address MARATHON, care Moving Picture World, New York City.

EXHIBITORS—Here's a live wire for souvenirs. Popular sheet music $3.00 per 100. Samples 10c. GEM MUSIC CO., New Berlin, New York.

Ready for Shipment July 20

STATE RIGHTS NOW SELLING

BLANCHE WALSH

IN TOLSTOY'S

RESURRECTION

THE GREAT ACTRESS IN HER GREATEST ROLE

THREE THOUSAND FEET—EVERY INCH A FEATURE

ADVERTISING MATTER INCLUDES:

10 styles of four-color posters including several kind one-sheets, three-sheets and eight-sheets, heralds, postal cards, booklets, photographs for lobby displays.

Come and see it—we will refund railroad fare if you buy territory.

Exhibitors—if you want to book this feature—write us and we will put you in touch with the owner of your territory—

MASKO FILM CO., 145 West 45th St., New York

Independent Film Stories

AMERICAN.

THE GIRL BACK HOME (July 1).—Ralph Williams, a young miner, is the most popular man in the camp. It was not his fault that Bernice fell desperately in love with him, and when Madge showed her affections too openly, he had not the heart to repulse her. It all ended in a shooting affray, and a letter found on his body indicated that a girl back home had played the leading role in the tragedy that cost his life.

UNDER FALSE PRETENSES (July 4).—Pauline Burgess, engaged from her childhood to Bob Waddell, meets a handsome stranger. He tells her of his wealth and she elopes with him—to squalor and misery. Her letters home are cheerful until Bob finds a tear-drop and goes in search of her. His adventures when he finds her, a hot-tempered Spanish girl, and a wonderful duel scene, are features of one of the best Western stories ever told.

THE FALL OF BLACKHAWK (July 10).—An illustrated and descriptive story of this release was published in our issue under date of July 6 on page thirty-one, under the heading of "The Fall of Blackhawk," as reviewed by our Mr. James S. McQuade. This subject is a beautiful, historically accurate, pictorial review of the Blackhawk War, faithfully depicting those stirring events which led to the wanton slaughter of countless white settlers. The war involved the destinies of four of America's greatest statesmen—Abraham Lincoln, Jefferson Davis, Zachary Taylor and General Winfield Scott. It ended in the downfall of a great Indian chief and conceded indisputable right to all lands East of the Mississippi, as provided for in the treaty of July 15, 1830.

THE VANISHING RACE (July 11).—The last of the Hoppe Tribe, the father, son, mother and daughter, trailed their weary way through the sunny fields. They camped close to a small settlement and Dick Wren, handsome, sneering and indifferent, gazed with eager eye upon the pretty form of the Indian girl. Madge Blaine smiled cynically as she noted the trend of Dick's emotions and waited.

Despite her relatives, the Indian maid eloped with Dick. In a month he again turned toward Madge, who received him with open arms, leaving his Indian love to wander back to her people. Her brother heard of it, and Indian fashion, quietly took his gun and went in search of Dick. He found him through the heart, but before he had moved ten paces his own lifeless body hurtled to the ground. Then the last of the Hoppe tribe, seeing his nearest of kin slain, drew his knife and threw himself into the fight. He also joined his son in the land where the White Spoiler does not go, leaving two lonesome women to pack their clothes and wander further through the sunny fields.

THE FATAL MIRROR (July 15).—Pretty Jessie Brown, living alone with her brother in the depths of the mountains, knew but few comforts and no luxuries. So when brother Bob brought a mirror from town, her joy knew no bounds. Nor was her grief the less when it was accidently broken.

In the afternoon Bob posted a sign: "Cattlemen found crossing this fence will be shot on sight." He found a similar sign directed against himself by the cattlemen. Old Jim Langfall, cattleman, met him there and in the altercation that followed, shot him. His body was found by Jessie. In a passion she drew the revolver from her brother's body, followed Jim, and killed him. And in the underbrush close by watched an outlaw, hard pressed by a posse. Later that posse came to Jessie's forlorn home. They seized her and accused her of murder. Just then two shots rang out in the trees close by. The posse turned and there stood the badly wanted outlaw. He smiled and nodded when accused of Jim's murder and left between two hardy woodsmen intent upon seeing justice done.

POINT LOMA (July 15).—Some especially fine views of Point Loma, one of California's garden spots.

LUX.

STONES THAT REBOUND (July 19).—A worthless vagabond is discharged from the employ of a benevolent scientist who spends all his days seeking to find the secret of many diseases of the eye. Previous to this incident, he has discovered an eye salve which wins much renown. The vagabond leaves his wife and child to shift for themselves, and sets off to enjoy himself. Some time later he returns to the professor's laboratory at the dead of night and poisons the eye salve. He is surprised by the professor; they struggle and their shadows on the blind attract the attention of the professor's courageous daughter, who takes a revolver, enters the laboratory and shoots the intruder. He is not, however, seriously hurt, and the professor places him in bed and tends him himself. The next day chance decrees that the little daughter of the worthless vagabond attends the hospital to have her eyes attended to by the professor. The professor instructs that her eyes shall be treated with eye salve. Fortunately, he discovers that the salve has been poisoned just in time to prevent its being applied to the child's eyes. Through the wonderful powers of the ointment, the child's sight is returned, and her father is taught a lesson which he is not likely to forget, and he has reason to be thankful for his narrow escape of being struck by the very stone that he himself aimed.

THANHOUSER.

THE FINGER OF SCORN (July 14).—The girl could not even remember her mother, who had died when she, her only daughter, was still a child. The girl's only near relative was her step-father, the deacon, who prided himself on "doing his duty" by the girl. He was a highly religious man. When the girl's young fancy was attracted by the attentions of a vulgar drummer, he indignantly made her a prisoner in her room, and without explaining that it was the character of the man he objected to, he simply told the girl she would have to be punished. Feeling that she had been treated like a child, the girl became indignant and ran away. At the railway station, she met, by accident, the fascinating drummer, who, his sales completed, was leaving town on the night train. Learning the girl had no definite destination, he offered to act as her friend and guide. The trusting country girl gratefully accepted his assistance.

A year later, a shabby outcast, whose wasted features bore slight resemblance to those of the country girl who had left the deacon's home, returned there, humbly entreating shelter and forgiveness. Being "a religious man," the deacon promptly turned her into the streets, pointed her out as a thing of loathing to her fellow townsmen and joined the other esteemed citizens in welcoming to the village its new minister.

The new minister was an extremely poor young man, with a delicate wife and a little daughter dependent upon him. Shortly after their arrival in the village, the little girl rushed from the cottage to the rescue of the outcast, whom she found was being driven through the village by a crowd of cruel children, who were hurling after her stones and abusive names. The child took the poor hunted creature into her father's home, and the minister was willing to give her shelter. This, however, the highly scandalized community would not tolerate his doing, and the outcast, rather than bring misery into the one home in which she had found kindness, voluntarily went away. She passed the old mill, and, crossing the bridge near the mill dam, she wearily climbed the hill and took refuge in a deserted cabin. That night, the mill-dam burst, and it was from her vantage point on the hill that the outcast saw the oncoming torrent which meant destruction to the tiny village which lay in the valley below her. She it was who brought the first words of danger to the people who had derided her. It was her weak arms that carried to safety many children, among them her tiny champion, the minister's little girl. She paid for this last act of heroism with her life, but she smiled in death as she never could have smiled again in life.

VENGEANCE IS MINE (July 16).—A bank president, who has been indulging in high finance, suddenly receives word that the examiners are preparing to visit his institution. Realizing that an inspection at this time means ruin to himself, the banker by altering the books makes it appear that the shortage in the funds is due to crooked work on the part of the paying teller. The unfortunate teller is arrested and sent to prison for a period of years.

The teller has a wife and child, and, after he is arrested, poverty and suffering come upon them. The child grows weaker and finally dies. The wife, blaming the bank president, whom she intuitively suspects of crooked work, vows to be revenged, but a priest, who has called to comfort her, appeals to her religious faith, reminding her that vengeance is the Lords. After the baby's death, the wife becomes a trained nurse and, through a strange chance, is assigned to a private case, of a man who is near death in a hotel. To her amazement she recognized in her patient the banker who had changed her life from joy to sorrow. Left alone with the invalid, she watched him closely and rejoiced to note that his case was approaching a crisis and, unless carefully tended, he was certain to die. The medicine that should be administered to him was close at hand, but she refused to give it, gloating over her enemy as he lay helpless before her.

But she was saved from a crime she would have been certain to have regretted all her life. At the critical moment the emblem of her faith was recalled to her mind, and she remembered the word of her good pastor. "Vengeance Is Mine, Saith the Lord." With a prayer for forgiveness she again became the devoted nurse and gave all her energy to saving the life of the man she hated.

The crisis was passed successfully, and the doctor greatly rejoiced. He told his patient that he greatly owed his life to his nurse and the banker feebly called her over so he could thank her. Then for the first time came recognition. He realized that the woman he had wronged had saved his miserable life. And full of remorse he made what amends he could.

The banker's confession resulted in the teller's pardon. The wife took the precious paper to the prison, received her husband with joy and thankfulness, and, hand in hand, they left the gloomy penitentiary to take up a new and happier life.

THE RANCHMAN AND THE HUNGRY BIRD (July 19).—He was just a ragged little urchin. Skulking through Central Park one day, he noticed a big man busily engaged in feeding bread to birds who flocked about him. On the bench beside him the big man had a big piece of bread and the boy decided that he needed it more than the birds did. He was afraid to ask for charity, having received many rebuffs in his young life, so he just slipped up, quietly clutched the bread, and began to eat it ravenously.

The big man turned and saw him. The boy started to run, but was captured before he could get away, and stood trembling, fearing that some horrible punishment was to be inflicted upon him. Much to his surprise, the big man showed sympathy and insisted on hearing his pitiful story, and then took him off to his hotel, where the boy had the first bath and the first real meal that had come his way in a long time.

The big man was a kindly ranch owner from the West, who was simply in New York for a few days on business. Filled with pity for the child he decided to give him a home, and the youngster gladly went with him to the far West.

The ranch owner had many friends, but like all good men he had some enemies. One was a half-breed servant who had been detected selling liquor to Indians and had been promptly kicked off the place. Wrathfully he determined to be revenged, and the disappointed Indian agreed to help him in his plot. They selected a night when all the cowboys had gone to a dance some distance away, and the ranch owner and his little protege were alone on the place. Then they attacked the house confident that they could overcome any opposition before help could arrive.

They failed to count upon the child, however. While the rancher was keeping them off with his gun, the boy made a daring escape from the house, leaped on his pony, and rode off through the night. He reached the dance hall in safety, summoned assistance, and the galloping cowboys got back in time to capture the Indians and the half-breed before any serious damage was done.

And all the glory of the capture went to the small and formerly dirty boy who had been picked up among the other hungry birds in the far eastern city.

ONLY A MILLER'S DAUGHTER (July 21).—The Miller's daughter was a rustic beauty, but she was nobody's fool. She had a sweetheart, a steady-going young farmer, who loved her devotedly, and the girl was thoroughly satisfied that he would make an excellent husband. So when the city chap came along the girl did not break her fiancé's heart by running away with him. The city chap was one of those offensive individuals usually classed as "lady killers." He approved of the girl, and saw no reason why she should not fall a victim to his manly charms. His friend and traveling companion expressed some doubt as to this, and the city chap wagered real money that within one week he could induce the girl to run away with him.

It happened, however, that the girl and her rustic suitor overheard the details of the wager. The countryman was eager to go out and argue harshly with the young man, but the girl restrained him. The "city chap" was delighted to find that in his case, apparently, the course of true love did run smooth. The girl listened to his protestations of love, agreed to elope with him, and was on hand when he arrived with the coach. He chuckled to himself as he handed her inside, for his chum was waiting down the road, to satisfy himself that the "city lothario" had won his wager.

The miller's daughter was not in the coach, however. She had slipped out the other door, but a warm welcome awaited the "city chap." Rustic suitor was there and he pawed and slapped the city lothario until he wished he had never seen the miller's daughter or the mill. Down the road the city chap's chum was met. A strong right arm reached out of the carriage and dragged him inside. Then the coach continued its journey, which ended beside the mill stream. The rustic suitor alighted, dragging the others with him, and as they were all "het up," he cooled them off with a nice bath in the "purling water."

She was only a miller's daughter, but she certainly taught two fresh young men that "still waters run deep," and damp.

THE PORTRAIT OF LADY ANNE (July 23).—A full synopsis of this subject will be found on page 74 of our issue of July 6. In that number it was announced as being released on July 7, but the release date has been changed to July 23, as

THE TRIUMPH OF WESTERN REALISM!!

Now Ready for State Right Men

Most sensational and true-to-life picture ever acted before a camera. Every scene an actuality.

THE LAST STAND OF THE

DALTON BOYS

At Coffeyville, Kansas

2900 FEET—3 REELS 90 TRUE SCENES

Pictures Posed By People That Actually Took Part In The Raid

This picture and all future releases will be under the personal direction of Mr. Jack Kenyon, formerly of the Selig Company, and will be acted by his well-known star Co. of motion picture actors.

The picture opens at the childhood home of the Daltons, where as boys they played together and were brought up by a devoted mother, who believed in the Good Book from "kiver to kiver." The boys grown to manhood, and the appointment of Frank Dalton as Deputy U. S. Marshal.—His bravery and courage in doing his duty as a servant of Uncle Sam in stamping out that evil of the Southwest, "boot-leggers."—Why it is a crime to sell whiskey to an Indian.—Frank Dalton meets his death in performance of his duties.—His brothers join the U. S. Marshals.—Through political chicanery and jealousy, the Daltons are ousted from the service, without their back pay (not with the knowledge of headquarters, but through the crookedness of a U. S. Marshal of that district).—Then the Dalton Gang was organized.—The Daltons terrorized the Southwest, until the final raid at Coffeyville, Kansas.—You will see Emmet Dalton, the last of the Dalton Gang, whose home is at Bartletsville, Okla.—The Old Liveryman at Coffeyville.—The man who did the killing of the Dalton Gang.—The actual cave.—The posse of U. S. Marshals.—Swimming the Arkansas River.—Bob Dalton winning a bucking horse contest.—The actual store where they purchased ammunition.—Sensational fight in Death Valley.—The bank robberies.—Emmet Dalton's escape and his return when learning his brother was wounded.—The shooting of Emmet and his arrest as he lay helpless in Death Valley.—His conviction and pardon.

Watch for This One! Coming Out Soon!

DEADWOOD DICK

"THE HERO OF THE BLACK HILLS"

It will be perfect in photography. It will be big enough to get big money. Write, wire, telephone—but get this feature quick.

Atlas Manufacturing Co., 412 Century Bldg., St. Louis, Mo.

BELL, OLIVE 2131—TELEPHONES—KINLOCH, CENTRAL 4716

the Thanhouser two-reel subject "Under Two Flags" was released on July 7.

THE MERCHANT OF VENICE (Part One) (July 26).—Antonio, a nobleman and a merchant of Venice, is asked by his kinsman, Bassanio, for a large sum of money. Bassanio wishes to travel afar, in order to woo Portia, a woman of great fortune, as well as one of wit and beauty. Bassanio has not the necessary funds to make the trip, and therefore comes to Antonio for aid.

Antonio, although a man of wealth, finds that he has no gold, his fortune being represented in the cargoes aboard his various ships at sea. He knows that in a few weeks, his ships will return and he will have ample funds, but in the meanwhile, he offers to borrow for his kinsman's present need of a notorious money-lender of Venice, Shylock, the Jew.

Shylock has long hated Antonio, because of his proud spirit, and when he consents to lend the money, it is only on condition that Antonio should sign a bond, whereby, should he fail to return the money, inside of three months, the Jew shall receive, in lieu of interest, a pound of his, Antonio's flesh, to be cut off by Shylock. Antonio laughingly agrees to this bond. He knows the Jew desires his death, but feels so sure that in much less than three months' time his ships will have returned, and he can easily pay the borrowed money.

With the money obtained by his kinsman on this strange bond, Bassanio travels to the home of the fair Portia. There, after passing a test imposed upon her suitors by her father, Bassanio is finally accepted, and feels that he owes all his good fortune in winning the lady of his desire to his noble kinsman, Antonio.

PART TWO—Bassanio is happily married to his lady love, Portia, when he receives a message of distress from his noble kinsman, Antonio, the merchant of Venice. Antonio writes that his many ships, containing all his wealth, have been lost at sea, and that he is not able to pay to Shylock, the money-lender, the money he borrowed for Bassanio. Because he is unable to pay, Shylock will be able to extract from Antonio, a pound of his flesh.

When Portia heard of the plight in which her husband's kinsman found himself, she despatched Bassanio with many times the omount of gold Antonio owed him, in order that a noble life might be saved.

Shylock, however, refused to take the money, insisting that he be allowed to cut from near Antonio's heart the pound of flesh that had been pledged him. Thus he could kill his enemy.

Had not Portia, disguised as a Doctor of the Law, succeeded in being present at the court, Antonio's life would surely have been forfeited. Portia, however, made it plain to all that in justice to Shylock, Antonio must allow him his pound of flesh. But she also warned Shylock that if, in taking the flesh, he took one drop of blood, he would be committing a crime, as no blood was nominated in the bond.

Shylock, outwitted, failed to get his terrible revenge, and Bassanio, when he went to thank the learned lawyer who had saved his friend, found, to his great joy, that "she" was none other than Portia, his own clever and beautiful wife.

ECLAIR.

THE DREAMERS (July 16).—Mrs. Fuller has an ambitious daughter named Dorothy, and a literary but impecunious young tennant, named Edward. In exchange for much belated rent, Edward is engaged to prepare Dorothy for entrance to college, and Edward though very busy writing a prize-story, finds time not only to instruct, but fall in love with his pupil.

A relative's sudden appeal for financial aid causes Dorothy to give up her scholarly aspirations. This occasions much sorrow to Ed., but incites him to increase his efforts for winning the prize. Things, however, go worse; Edward's food supplies give out; a relentless collector takes away his typewriting machine: and, worse yet, Edward receives news of his father's death, together with a small sum of money left by the deceased in payment of a debt to an old friend of his heirs. In spite of all difficulties and temptations occasioned by the money in his custody, Edward completes his story. Lacking the price of postage, he pawns his overcoat, and after mailing the manuscript and purchasing some food, Edward returns home shivering in the cold, but none the less hopeful.

Dorothy unearths a coat that has belonged to an uncle, and through the transom throws the coat in Edward's room. The discovery of the coat, its refusal and final acceptance results in the betrothal of the giver and the recipient.

Edward is in his room. One of the committee to pass on the story enters, telling him that he has won the prize and hands him the certificate and package of bills. Edward, elated, bethinks him that he had better take his coat out of pawn. He does so, and then takes the old coat back to Dorothy—and also the good news. As he hands her the coat, an envelope falls from its pocket. He reads the superscription and notes that it is the name of his father's friend, who proves to be an uncle of Dorothy. So instead of having to give the money into strange hands, and as Dorothy does not want it, he comes in for a little sum of money.

THAT LOVING MAN (July 18).—Bob Anderson is the sole remaining heir to his Uncle Henry's great fortune. But Uncle Henry has old-fashioned ideas, that young men should do things of greater fruit than lounging in clubs and leading cotillions. So Uncle Henry puts it up to Bob to go to work or be cut off from any inheritance. Bob is highly incensed over such a proposal that he, a society leader, should become a factory worker, which is the work that his uncle proposes. Bob tells his fiancée of his uncle's degrading suggestion and expects her sympathy, only to find her of the same mind as the uncle. She begs him to accept and go to work. Bob refuses and she breaks their engagement.

Bob plans to get even by making love to other girls, hoping to provoke her jealousy to a point where she will take him back. This plan fails. His finances run out and he plans to die. Bob writes a circular form of letter to each and all of his creditors and erstwhile sweethearts, in which he blames them by inference of being the cause of his contemplated self-destruction. Letters are sent out for delivery. Bob looks for weapons of destruction and discovers an unopened bottle of wine. He decides to have one last "tipple," drinks it and is soon a victim of the "sleep of the grape."

The notes arrive at their addresses and each addressee determines to rush to Bob's apartment to try and prevent his terrible contemplated end. Creditors and sweethearts arrive, find Bob spread out on the floor with many murderous-looking weapons scattered about. They think him dead and their expressions of grief commence. Their wailings awaken Bob. He arises, face all agrin over the joke of it all. But they do not take it as a joke, rather they leave in high dudgeon.

In the end Bob decides life is too sweet to end, he accepts his uncle's original ultimatum and goes to work. Uncle Henry saves him from his creditors and his girl takes him back.

RIZZIO (July 21).—Mary Stuart, Queen of Scotland, while strolling in the country, meets a young minstrel, hardly clad and starving to death. The young man is meanly repulsed by Darnley, the queen's husband, but Mary Stuart protects him. She orders that he be taken to the castle kitchen and sees that he is well treated.

Liking music, the queen becomes interested in the young singer and takes him as her jester. Little by little, Rizzio becomes the queen's favorite. He is very arrogant with the Scotch noblemen. They are jealous of the favor granted him, and which wounded their pride. They swear revenge.

Darnley tries to break the pride of the favorite, but Rizzio, feeling that his mistress is for him, prevents him. The noblemen have decided on a plan to revenge themselves on Rizzio. They take Darnley from a place of pleasure, and, half drunk, they take him to the queen's chamber. Mary Stuart is listening to her favorite music. The queen is very near the singer. Darnley breaks into the room, has Rizzio taken out in spite of the queen's protestations, and he is killed on the spot, almost before the eyes of the queen.

RELIANCE.

THE TRUE LOVE (July 24).—Angry because he fails to keep an appointment with her on time, Dorothy breaks her engagement with John, giving him back his ring. He goes to his club and takes a few drinks with his friends, leaving the club at a very late hour. On the way home he protects a shabby girl from a tough who is treating her brutally. The tough and John fight, and John succeeds in knocking him down. Then he takes the girl, Mary, to his apartment, where he places her in charge of his housekeeper. Next morning the housekeeper recalls the girl to his mind and he is quite at a loss to know what to do with her. He tells her she had better go home, but she begs him not to send her away as the tough would kill her. He sends Mary to his country home with his housekeeper. He returns to town again, but is very lonely and goes up into the country. Mary is already deeply in love with her benefactor, and John is beginning to return her love when Dorothy, regretting the broken engagement, visits him with her mother. His old love for her awakens and when she insists that he go back to town with them, he consents. Mary sees Dorothy kiss him and is heart-broken. John tells Mary that he is going away with Dorothy. At first she is hurt and grieved, and then she becomes angry. She writes a letter to the tough telling him that if he comes after her she will return with him to the city. A few days later the tough appears. He taunts her and she is half sorry that she sent for him. Dorothy and John ride by in their motor car and again Mary becomes furious. She tells the tough that John wears a lot of valuable jewelry and bids him to go after it. He loses no time and attacks John as he is walking up the path. Dorothy, seeing the tough, runs away. Mary watches the two men struggle. She is glad that the tough is getting the better of John until he suddenly pulls a revolver. Then she remembers John's kindness to her and her own love for him, and, rushing toward the men, she interferes. Dorothy returns with help, but John, realizing the real worth of the other girl and her great love for him, takes her into his arms and presents her to Dorothy as his future wife.

THE SOLDIER BABY (July 27).—During the war between the North and South, Dorothy's father leaves his home to defend the cause of the Confederacy. The little girl, while picking flowers along the road, is met by a certain General every day. They become great friends. Each day as he rides by he waits for her. One day he does not see her, as the child is very sick. She calls for her father. The mother despatches a colored boy with a note, telling the father of the childs illness and that she desires to see him. Upon receipt of the note he calls upon the General and asks permission to go home. This is refused him. But that night Jean steals away to the cottage. His absence is discovered and a guard is despatched after him. He is captured and placed under arrest by the General. The next morning when the General rides by Dorothy's home he stops in to see the child and finds her very ill, still calling for her father. The mother weeping bitterly, explains the situation to the General who realizes that it must have been Dorothy's father whom he had placed in the guard house. He immediately sends a boy with an order for the prisoner's release. Upon being freed the father rushes home and the General gives him leave of absence until the child recovers.

REPUBLIC.

A HOUSE TOP ROMANCE (July 29).—Willie Brown's inclination to flirt with every pretty face leads him into no end of trouble when flirting with pretty Rose Lanor. He engages an apartment in the same house and in that way tries to become acquainted. His arduous wooing of the young woman finally leads him to the roof of the building in pursuit of the young lady who has gone to investigate the loss of some wearing apparel. In his anxiety to reach the young lady, Willie is compelled to dodge about the wet linens until his appearance is anything but prepossessing.

In this condition the young woman finally sees him and accuses him of being the thief. Willie, by this time, regrets that he ever attempted to make the acquaintance of the girl, but owing to the accusation against him he decides to continue the acquaintance made under these unlooked conditions until his innocence has been proven.

After many comical mishaps he finally proves to the young woman that he is innocent, and also quite an estimable young man with a habit of liking pretty faces, of which the young lady finally cures him by marriage.

EVOLUTION OF A DUCK EGG (July 29).—This picture was taken at the famous Gray's Cove Farm, Sag Harbor, L. I., known as the largest duck farm in the world. From a distant view the place looks as though the ground was pure white for acres and acres; a closer view shows over a hundred thousand pure white ducks floating on the river edge of the property.

In detail is given the entire existence of the duck, from the gathering of the eggs in the nests to the serving of the roasted duck at the dinner table. It shows the difficulties encountered during the hatching of thousands of eggs, the cleanliness maintained from the time they leave their shells and are placed in the warm brooder until the time they are about twelve weeks old and are prepared for the market. Feeding, killing, plucking, packing and shipping are shown in their order.

An exceptionally interesting view is given of the gradual birth of the duckling from the time the egg is placed in the incubator until the little bird forces its way out of the shell, and staggers about until it becomes dry and is able to join its little brothers and sisters. The final scene shows a family at dinner enjoying the delicious slices of roast fresh duck.

REX.

THE HIDDEN LIGHT (July 18).—Somehow Phil Smalley couldn't put that snap into his writings that differentiates copy that is read from that that is not read. His efforts were sincere, and he worked more diligently than most of the other reporters on his paper, but somehow his stuff didn't get over. The editor was just beginning to get tired of him. But the editor's daughter was just beginning to become interested in him.

She let him see her interest, and the two became good friends. She would go over his copy, suggesting, correcting, revising. The next step in his success was when he sold his first short story. The girl brought him the letter with the check of acceptance, and it is hard to say whether he was more proud than she was happy.

And then—real success. Fame and fortune, the adulation and admiration of the world. And also the inevitable. He forgot the simple little girl who had brought about his prosperity and success, forgot her and her value. He accepted his new friends' flattery and never once thought of her who had really won his success.

The girl hoped on, dreaming that some day he would return. And then suddenly, his stuff lost the punch again. Even his friends could not be made to read it. The magazines returned his manuscripts with a curt note that they were not up to the standard he had set. And suddenly he realized! He realized that his success was hers, and that without the germ of genius, concealed somewhere in her mind, he would be the same utter failure that he had been until her interest in him will furnish direct current for your show and give you better quality of light than you can get from the best Central Station service. With a Foos Engine you can save 50 to 75 per cent. of the money you have to pay for electric current and have all the light you want when you want it.

THE Foos
ELECTRIC Generating Set

Send for Bulletin F-98.

The Foos Gas Engine Co.
809 Linden Ave. Springfield, O.

Visco Picture Machine Oil
THE BEST OIL IN THE WORLD FOR THE PURPOSE

Your machines or electric fans will run all day and evening without heating.

DOES NOT SPLASH THE FILM

Goes farther than any other oil on the market. An 8-ounce bottle at your exchanges for 25 cents, or send $1.50 for full gallon. Hundreds of operators will use no other oil.

THE VISCO MOTOR OIL CO., Cleveland, Ohio

SONG SLIDES
LIDE
NORTH AMERICAN SLIDE CO.
23 N. Ninth Street Phila., Pa.
WRECK OF THE TITANIC
20 Colored Slides . $ 8.00
30 Colored Slides . $12.00
Cash with order
LIDE
SONG SLIDES

Make Your Lobby Display Attractive

There is nothing more fascinating to the public than a bright brass frame to display your photos or posters.

We make Lobby and Theater Fixtures and Brass Rails of every description.

Write for Catalog.

Don't fail to visit our complete New York showroom, 101-103 4th Ave.

THE NEWMAN MFG. CO.
717-721 Sycamore St., Cincinnati, O.
Established 1882

Why Is It?

Why is it that the minute an exhibitor hooks up with me he enters an era of prosperity, no matter how rotten his business was before? Why is it that my customers are more loyal to me than they ever were to any other exchange man? Is it because of Laemmle films, Laemmle service or Laemmle luck? Or all three?

I don't know and I don't care.

The Big Fact remains that my customers and I are successful. Some folks call me "Horse-shoe Laemmle." Others call me "The Human Rabbit's Foot." Both mean good luck. Very well, wouldn't you like some of it? All my exchanges are giving the best service and the best programs in the history of the moving picture business. These two things and Luck form a pretty trio. Why not play the winning combination?

CARL LAEMMLE
PRESIDENT
THE LAEMMLE FILM SERVICE
204 WEST LAKE ST., CHICAGO, ILL.
SYKES BLOCK, MINNEAPOLIS, MINN.
1312 FARNUM ST., OMAHA, NEB.
421 WALNUT ST., DES MOINES, IOWA
THE BIGGEST AND BEST FILM RENTER IN THE WORLD.

had been born. He went back to her. To-day that fellow is considered a literary genius.

WHEN LOVE RULES (July 21).—She was a model; he was an artist, and the other, he was a clergyman. It wasn't a very encouraging triangle, but it was a mighty interesting one. She didn't know much about the simple life, but way down deep was peace and purity. The artist thought she had the best face he had ever transferred to canvass. The clergyman thought she had the face of a saint.

It was when she met the clergyman that she realized life was more than lobster suppers and champaign bubbles. She felt so hopelessly unimportant, so small a human atom to interest so giant a character. And he—he thought there wasn't enough room in her full life for a man as uninteresting as himself.

She looked at the life around her, the sin and sloth and murk and mockery, and dreamed of the life that he represented. He knew it was the church against the world—and he thought that the world would win. So he dared not speak to her.

She waited, and he delayed. Both thought they were unworthy of the other, both thought their love was in vain. Yet once he mustered the courage. He went to see her. He found her with the artist, who was endeavoring to present her with a necklace. He came and offered her a better gold, and surprised and overjoyed, she accepted, and together they went where the air is pure with peace and sanctity.

BISON.

THE SHERIFF'S MYSTERIOUS AIDE (July 16).—With his beautiful wife, Dick lived quietly in the wilds of one of the border states. One day, his wife coming in, showed him a paragraph stating that Mexican bandits had held up the express and made not only a big haul, but had robbed an old pensioner and a poor woman who had received a sum on account of her husband's death.

Dick instantly decided on his course. Procuring an effective disguise, he set out and single-handed he recovered the stolen treasure and returned it to its owners, that is that part of it whose owners he could locate, the remaining portion, a goodly sum, he of course appropriated to his own use and purpose.

Now in the meantime, the sheriff of that locality had offered a large reward for the capture of the bandit chief—incidentally he offered a reward for the capture of Dare Devil. He did this because the sheriff whose sweetheart Dick had purloined, sent on a poster to him asking him to search his vicinity for the noted outlaw. Dick decided to get the reward for the bandit, and in the slickest style succeeded in handling his man. The sheriff congratulated him, not penetrating his disguise, of course, and so tickled was he that gave him a special commission to hunt up Dare Devil himself.

Dick had a sense of humor and, finding himself alone in the office, he removed his goatee and mustache and pasted them on the countenance of his counterfeit, the poster. He pinned then also his badge and commission, and when the sheriff returned he was amazed to look upon the face of his new deputy hanging on the wall. A close inspection revealed the trick and then his deputy's identity was made manifest. The sheriff's consternation and surprise may be better imagined than stated. He simply ejaculated. "Well, I'll be d——."

Meantime Dick thought he'd best make tracks and the last that was seen of him was himself and wife both astride the faithful black Bess, as they sailed for new pastures just over the border.

VICTOR.

THE PLAYERS (July 9).—Flo Lakewood, the celebrated actress, receives a letter from her managers, telling that her part for the coming season is that of a simple country maiden. After reading the part she visits her aunt and uncle who live on a farm, dons her simple country dress, and proceeds to imbibe the pure country air. Owen Spencer is engaged, unknown to her, for the same company—his part is that of a village drunkard, who is afterwards reformed by a simple country maiden. He proceeds on a fishing trip and before a country tavern sees an example of a typical village drunkard and proceeds to study the antics of a drunken man.

This village is near the farm on which Flo is rusticating. Flo, one day, is strolling along the village stream, and being a hot day—she takes off her shoes and stockings and enjoys the cold water upon her feet. Owen is fishing nearby. He suddenly gets a bite, and proceeds to pull with all his might, when he hears a scream, and finds that his bite is Flo's toe. After extracting the hook, he leads her home. Then commences a romance, she pretending the simple maid and he the young man on his vacation. Their acquaintance ripens into love, but before he declares himself, he is caught by Flo one day while he is with the village drunkard studying and imitating him so as to make good in this part for next season.

Flo's romance is shattered and when Owen calls, refuses to see or listen to him. Owen departs for the city, broken-hearted, as rehearsal has been called for the new play. He rehearses his part with the stage manager. Flo goes through her part to the scene where she is supposed to grab the whiskey flask from her lover's hand. His part calls for a struggle in which he is supposed to strike her, but he does not strike, for the rehearsal is dismissed for the day.

NESTOR.

THE TRIFLER (July 15).—Although engaged to Hartley, Muriel does not hesitate to amuse herself with other men. John Hardy, a fisherman, but a man out of the ordinary, easily falls before her charms. She succeeds in making him love her deeply. One day while walking with her fiancee, she sees Hardy approaching and persuades Hartley to hide. She carries her coquetry a little too far with Hardy, who takes her in his arms and tells her of his love. She breaks away from him furiously. Hartley appears. Hardy realizes that he has been a plaything, and sorrowfully departs. Hartley and Muriel go for a sail. Hardy watches them out on the bay. Suddenly he sees that the boat had turned over. At first he is inclined to let them help themselves; but when Hartley starts for shore leaving Muriel to her fate, Hardy forgets the wrong she has done him, and swimming out brings her back with him. After untiring efforts she is revived. Later, while she is recuperating, Hartley comes to her and begs to be forgiven his cowardly act. She indignantly sends him away. Still later she goes to Hardy, humbly thanks him, and asks for his friendship. He refuses it.

FUR AND FEATHERS (July 17).—The ranchman's niece, Estella, arrives from the East and is met by her uncle. Lee, a neighbor, is asked by the ranchman to assist him with her baggage, much to the envy of the other boys, who are anxious to meet her. They hurry to the ranch as fast as their horses will carry them. Arriving before the buckboard, however, they are waiting for her to appear, but Cousin Bill stampedes them. Later they follow Lee and Estella, and force Lee to give them introduction. When her birthday comes, Jack and Will, the most persistent of her admirers, take great pains in selecting suitable presents. Jack gets a lovely white dove, puts it in a big cage, with the following note attached: "My Dear Miss Stanley: I take pleasure in presenting this living symbol of your true nature. Jack." Will gets a box of handsome gloves and attaches a note which reads: "My Dear Miss Stanley: I hope that these will fit, be the proper length, and that I may have the pleasure of seeing your wear them often. Will."

Unfortunately Lee is told of these presents, so watching his chance, he slips into the boys' room, substitutes a large cat for the dove and a box of stockings for the gloves. The boys unsuspectingly deliver their presents to Estella, only to be kicked out by her uncle to the delight of Lee, who has just been accepted by the Eastern girl.

YOUNG WILD WEST TRAPPING A TRICKY RUSTLER (July 19).—Ike Bowers, the foreman of a small cattle ranch, is also a cattle rustler, and he and three companions share in the profits of the stolen cattle. Ike even steals cattle from the ranch where he is employed. Wild West and his party stop at this ranch and hear about the ranchman's losses. He soon comes to the conclusion that the foreman is the guilty party. The ranchman's daughter and Arietta, Young Wild West's sweetheart, go for a ride. Over the range they look down in a canyon and are surprised to see the foreman and two men driving four of her father's herd of cattle along. They follow them and see them enter the hiding place. Unfortunately the girls' horses make a noise; the cattle rustlers hear them, give chase, capture the girls and bring them back to the canyon. There they tie them to a tree. At an opportune moment the ranchman's daughter becomes free and runs for help. On the road she runs into Young Wild West and his pal, who are out looking for the cattle thieves. Sending his pal back to the ranch for help, Wild West takes the girl on his horse as she shows the hiding place of the rustlers. They go back again to the road in time to meet the cowboys coming. Wild West leads them to the rustlers' rendezvous. A long and exciting chase follows. Finally the bad men are rounded up and handed over to the sheriff. Arietta jubilantly returns to the ranch with her hero, Young Wild West.

CHAMPION.

FORAGING ON THE ENEMY (July 15).—Corporal Sorenson of the Federal Army, is ordered out with a squad of soldiers on a foraging expedition, and is instructed by his colonel to sweep the surrounding country clean. The first house visited by his troop is the home of a rich widow. Provisions at first seem scarce, being hidden away by the servants, but the raiders begin a thorough search which soon reveals fowl of all kinds.

Elated over their success they move on and visit another home. This time, instead of signs of plenty, they are met by a hungry woman and her two fatherless children, who plead with Sorenson to leave them the little they have for food. But the colonel's orders are ringing in Sorenson's ears, and he orders his troops to commence the search. A small shack in the yard conceals two home-cured hams, which Sorenson is about to appropriate despite the woman's frantic appeal, when a vision of the corporal's Northern home unfolds before him, showing his wife and child in want of food. With this picture in mind, Sorenson replaces the food where first found.

Private Kline, who has always envied Sorenson's corporal stripes, has witnessed this little domestic drama, and upon their return to camp, informs the colonel of what has transpired, whereupon Sorenson is roundly censured and placed under arrest. Being a man of family himself, the colonel decides to personally investigate the circumstances, and finds at the widow's home that conditions are even worse than pictured by Sorenson. On his return to camp Sorenson is released and commissioned to restore to the widow, not only the provisions taken from her, but a goodly supply from the army stores. This pleasant mission is only too gratifying to Sorenson, who brings happiness to the widow.

MAJESTIC.

IN HER BROTHER'S DEFENSE (July 16).—A struggling young lawyer is married to a beautiful girl. Their happiness is complete except for the fact that she has never told him of her wayward brother, who has disgraced her family, and is serving a term in the state's prison.

She loves her brother in spite of his waywardness and as she sits before the fireplace, dreaming of her childhood, she sees again the sad events leading to her brother's downfall, and her visit to the prison when she told him of her dear mother's death. As she awakens her brother enters the room. He has been discharged from prison and is leading an honest and upright life. She insists upon introducing him to her husband, bue he refuses to allow her to share his disgrace by acknowledging him to be her brother, and departs.

The young lawyer is given a very important case and is overjoyed because it will mean the making of his fame and fortune. The young wife is horror-struck when she learns that the man her husband is to prosecute is her own brother, who, because of his prison record, is accused of a crime that was committed at the very hour he was talking to her in her own home.

At the last minute she rushes to the court-house and sacrifices her own good name and her husband's happiness to save the brother she knows to be innocent. The real criminal is apprehended and complete happiness is born of her noble act.

THE ALIBI CLUB (July 21).—The boys at the yacht club have arranged a three days' fishing trip, but Bill's wife refuses to let him go. The boys persuade him that, by a series of telegrams delivered to his wife at intervals, he can go on the cruise, and his wife will think he is hard at work on a business trip.

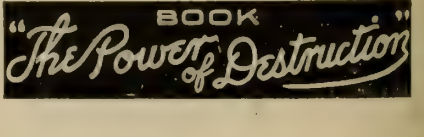
A yacht club waiter is pressed into service as messenger boy, and the first telegram succeeds so well that Bill starts on the cruise. The second telegram tells Bill's wife that he is working hard in Philadelphia, when he is in reality, having the time of his life, sleeping and fishing.

Unfortunately Bill gets into an argument with Fatty Grubb about who shall go to town for supplies. Bill pushes Fatty into the "drink" and all hands work so hard pulling Fatty out of the water that Bill is elected by a unanimous vote to get the supplies.

It happens that Bill's wife is also doing some marketing and their meeting is rather sad for Bill. He comes very near to squaring himself by finding the notice of a railroad wreck between Philadelphia and Baltimore in the evening paper, if the fool waiter had not delivered a telegram from Bill, saying that he is working like a dog in Baltimore just as his little wife is swallowing the railroad wreck story.

THE NEW CLERK (July 23).—Robert Hunt, who has to support an invalid mother, comes with a letter of recommendation, and is engaged by J. M. Gray, who sets him to work in his outer office. Also is employed there, Guy Steele, who is office manager, and May Manton, a pretty stenographer. Robert and May are impressed with each other, to Steele's displeasure. It is shown that Robert spends his evenings in reading to his invalid mother, while Steele drinks and gambles.

Money is being missed in the mail and Gray calls on A. M. Collins, one of his customers, who is in the habit of sending it loose. They lay a trap to catch the thief by identifying a ten-dollar bill and mailing it to Gray. One night Steele gets into difficulties with his taxi bill, when he is entertaining May. Robert happens along and lends him ten dollars. The next day Steele objects to Robert presenting May with a flower and throws it upon the floor. There is an altercation which May stops, but Robert demands that Steele pay him what he owes. Steele gives him the ten-dollar bill which he has just extracted from the envelope, which business has been observed by May, though she is not aware of its purport. Gray opens his mail, finds the bill gone and calls in Collins with a policeman. Robert is accused and searched. The bill is found. He tells where he received it, but this is denied by Steele, who calls Robert the thief. Robert knocks him down. The



MAJESTIC

"IN HER BROTHER'S DEFENSE"
Released Tuesday, July 16
Exceptionally strong drama with unusual double exposure effect.

"THE ALIBI CLUB"
Released Sunday, July 21
One long comedy scream.

"THE NEW CLERK"
Released Tuesday, July 23
An intense drama of unusual merit.

MAJESTIC MOTION PICTURE CO.,
540 West 21st St., New York.
Sold only through the Film Supply Company of America.

FILM SUPPLY CO. OF AMERICA

CONNECTICUT & NEW JERSEY

Bookings in Licensed Theatres only for the Milano (5 reel)

DANTE'S INFERNO

The most wonderful moving picture yet produced without exception. Draws capacity business everywhere. Will bring people to your theatre that were never there before.

WRITE FOR DATES AND TERMS

World's Moving Picture Classics.
Box 485, Madison Square P. O. New York
NOTE: Connecticut and New Jersey only

ATTENTION

Exhibitors of Massachusetts, Rhode Island, Connecticut, Maine, New Hampshire and Vermont

The Famous

Bison 101 Features

Are Now at Your Disposal Through the

W. E. Greene Film Exchange, Inc.

Don't lose any time, but write, wire or call at once for open dates.

W. E. GREENE FILM EXCHANGE, Inc.
228 Tremont Street Boston, Mass.
TELEPHONE, OXFORD 3790-2187

Crown Features Draw Crowds!

Saint George and the Dragon

COPYRIGHTED, 1912.

Owners of This Feature Are Reaping Profits!

The First HIGH Class Feature Offered at a LOW Price

Our 12-Page Illustrated Art Book in Two Colors Secures Business. Our Remarkably Attractive Posters, Heralds and Dodgers Fill the House. Very Choice Territory Still Open.

WIRE FOR PARTICULARS AT OUR EXPENSE

Crown Feature Film Company
145 West 45th Street
NEW YORK

officer interferes. May tells what she has seen and Steele is searched. The bill, from the other letter, is found on him and the two opened letters in his coat pocket. He is arrested and taken away. Robert is promoted to his job. May picks up the flower which Steele had thrown upon the floor, and looking toward Robert at his desk, she presses it to her lips, and the picture closes with a suggestion of a coming romance between the two.

GAUMONT.

TENACIOUS HUBBY (July 11).—Mr. and Mrs. Gadding lead one quarrelsome life. She insists on displaying her beauty and charms to all fellow pedestrians of Paris, while he begs in vain that she remain at home and perform the duties which he expected of her when they were married. She remonstrates further at the thought of cleaning house and cooking, and so breaks jail every day. Hubby sees there is only one thing to do, and that is to keep close tab, so he follows her all around. This proves the proper solution for she finds her husband's company quite irksome and even embarrassing. In the end she is only too willing to return to dutiful wifehood.

THAT TROUBLESOME BIRD (July 11).—The old maid of this particular lodging house has several pet canaries which to her are worth their weight in gold. But the cruel landlord has ordained that no birds be housed in his precincts. The old maid pleads in vain, until Calino, an eccentric fellow boarder, decides to defy the orders and help the helpless female bird admirer protect her feathered treasures. The landlord learns of this and starts for the quarters of Calino. But the wily Calino has outwitted him and has a redoubtable guard watching the wee little canaries. In the outer room a huge Simian baboon lays in wait for the irate intruder, and showers him with crockery at his approach. In the inner room, two great big hissing and roaring lions spring at him the minute he opens the door. These huge jungle beasts pursue him out of his own house, where he finally makes his escape. Needless to state, the landlord rescinded the proclamation that caused the old maid such sorrow and himself such terror.

LOVE'S SUREST PROOF (July 16).—A noted lawyer enters his office one morning and, as usual, reads through his mail. Three letters hold his attention—one from the Amalgamated Union of Domestic Servants, which delivers the ultimatum to the effect that unless he contributes generously to their funds, his servants will be called out on strike at 10:30 A. M. on the following day. The second letter, from his brother-in-law, advises that the latter's daughter, Amelia, arrives in his town to-morrow to commence a private course of studies, and at his request has arranged to take the noonday meal at their (the lawyer's) house. The third letter, from an old friend, imparts the information that Mark Willoughby, a local young jurist, will drop in at their home on the morrow and take the noon-day meal with them. The writer of the letter further advises that the lawyer's daughter by on hand at that time. The meaning of these three letters is thoroughly understood by the lawyer, who hurries home to tell the news to his daughter Susie.

On the following day 10:30 marks the departure of the servants of the house. They have left on strike. At the same time, Cousin Amelia arrives on the scene. Susie takes her into the kitchen and explains that she will have to pardon her for culinary duties, that the servants had gone on strike and this necessitated her busying herself in the kitchen. Amelia accepts the explanation, but learns from Susie's father that a suitor is expected. She hastens to her room to fix herself up, believing that she might profit by the embarrassing situation in which Susie has been placed by the strike of the servants.

In the meantime young Willoughby arrives, and, after finding no one in the house inasmuch as Amelia had not yet finished dressing, invades the kitchen. He is captivated by the charming beauty of the cook and quite forgets her rank and station. Conversation with her only proves to intensify his admiration and before he knows it he has proposed. The cook does not promise to accept him. In the meantime Amelia has arrived. She makes known her presence in the adjoining room and young Willoughby, in the height of embarrassment, proceeds to call on her. The contrast is too marked and he cannot help but feel that he would far prefer the charming little cook to the homely Amelia. At this point Susie's father enters the room and explains the situation much to the delight of Mark Willoughby, who commends himself the more for his choice and carries out his plans.

A MID-CHANNEL ROMANCE (July 9).—Susie Hampton is a vivacious little creature of twenty years, but unfortunately has been brought up in an environment altogether unsuited to her nature. Her father is a slow, phlegmatic Englishman; her mother, equally as deliberate and prosaic. They have selected as her fiancé a young man as lifeless and uninteresting as themselves. They start on a trip to Naples. After meeting with no success in trying to encourage either of the trio for a promenade on the decks of the vessel, she finally determines to set off for herself, and in doing so, a turn comes to her placid life. A young Frenchman, who cannot speak English, is attracted by her. He attempts to flirt, but except for the most mild encouragement, receives no satisfaction. He manages to meet Susie's father and asks him for reference to a fellow-passenger on board, capable of instructing him in English. The father, believing this an opportunity for his future son-in-law, acquaints him with the latter, who happens to be an Episcopalian clergyman. The teacher and his pupil become great friends. In this way the young passenger meets Susie. The lessons in English become irksome, while the walks with Susie take up all the student's time. Upon arriving at Naples the romance is continued. Susie and her lover take a stroll in the park opposite the hotel. They venture to kiss, only to be caught in the act by the clergical fiancé. The Frenchman, in order to make reparation, offers to fight a duel, but the Episcopalian prefers to abide by the English code of settling quarrels and informs his cast off student that the only proper reparation he can make is to marry Susie. The suggestion appeals to the lovers and they are married in due course.

POWERS

THE RANSOM (July 17).—Eddie and Gerty are playing and Eddie feels a tender passion for Gerty. Emboldened by her advances, he teases for a kiss. Gerty is something of a coquette and imitates the actions of some adult she has seen. She declines to yield with much dignity and Eddie is astonished, for he had stolen numerous kisses without a protest on the part of his little playmate. Eddie is also very much in earnest in his desire, and when Gerty gives him her ultimatum in no uncertain tones, he casts about for some means to obtain the caress. Stealing her dolly he fastens it to a fishing line, and holding the precious doll at a distance, just out of her reach, he announces the terms of the ransom, which is a kiss. Gerty resolves not to capitulate, and Eddie is firm. After a series of pretty scenes Gertie surrenders and yields, announcing that she does so only to regain possession of her dolly, but Eddie is satisfied and waxes pompous as he congratulates himself on his resourceful mind.

HER LIFE'S STORY (July 19).—Cynthia Allen, thirty, and not attractive in face or figure, loves Albert Durand. He is a few years younger and has rather unsettled notions, which are made apparent when Lucy, the younger sister of Cynthia, returns from school in all the freshness and beauty of her eighteen years. Lucy is not aware of the plighted troth of the couple and is attracted to Albert, who loves her at first sight. Cynthia sees and is resigned. Albert and Lucy are married and Cynthia, her life saddened, remains in the old home alone. Soon after the marriage, she meets with an accident which renders her a hopeless cripple. She has thoughts of being cured and lives frugally, saving her money for a surgical operation. She reads of a noted specialist who can cure her and is happy. About that time Albert, who has lived beyond his means, becomes involved in dishonesty and comes to Cynthia—his first love—and pours out his troubles. She gives him her savings. He is saved from disgrace and Lucy never knew of the affair. Lucy and her husband subsequently die of a contagious disease and Cynthia is left alone.

SOLAX.

BROKEN OATHS (July 24).—Vinnie, Colonel Beggs' daughter, complains to her father that Lieutenant Sterling is paying her unwelcome attentions. The Colonel assures his daughter that she has no cause for fear. He immediately forgets the

COMPENSARC

That's the device that saves Moving Picture men two-thirds on their electric light bills, and yet gives better light. Did you see our ad last week? Well, don't look it up. Just write for our

Booklet 15018

Fort Wayne Electric Works
1402 Broadway
FORT WAYNE INDIANA 733

FINE ART SLIDES.

We make Advertising, Announcement, Lecture, Scientific, and Slides of every description. Transparencies beautifully colored. High class work only. Send for our new catalogue.

A. J. CLAPHAM, 132 W. 37th St., New York.

MOVING PICTURE FILMS FOR SALE.

Over one million feet in stock. Dramas, Comedies, Scenic, Historical. Largest Dealers in new and second-hand films in the United States. Reels from $2.50 up.

Catalogue free for the asking

ACME FILM CO., 132 West 37th St., New York.

FEATURE FILMS FOR SALE

2 3 4 Reels — Feature Productions — 2 3 4 Reels

WRITE FOR LISTS QUICK

SUPERIOR FEATURE FILM CO.
32 Union Sq., New York City

Real Feature Attraction

Send for our List.
The Lowest Rental Rates on two and three reel Features.
Write or wire.

Northern Feature Film Exchange
Suite 405, Schiller Building, Chicago.

THE TOURNAMENT FILM CO.
TOLEDO, OHIO.

Owners of the following feature films:
1911 Cheyenne Cowboy and Indian Frontier Celebration.
Fall Round-Up on the Y-6 Ranch.
State Rights for These Films for Sale.
Bookings Can Be Made by Writing Us.

We buy and sell Second Hand Films and Moving Picture Machines

WESTERN FILM BROKERS
538 S. Dearborn Street Chicago, Ill

MAKE YOUR OWN SLIDES
WITHOUT AID OF PHOTOGRAPHY

From Newspaper Cuts, Post Cards, Etc. Announcement Slides, Advertising Slides, Slides from Political Office Seekers' Cards, just the thing for elections. Slides can be made in a few minutes, plain or in colors. Where colored picture is used, colors will appear on slide same as in original. Complete outfit and directions, $1.00.

MIDLAND TRANSPARENCY CO.
313 Ramge Bldg. Dept. W Omaha, Neb.

ZIGOMAR has escaped again!

AND WILL DASH THROUGH
Three Thrilling Reels of New Pictures
TO BE RELEASED SOON BY
The F. & E. Film Company
CLEVELAND

BOOK "The Power of Destruction"

PUBLISHED EVERY THURSDAY

"Das Lichtbild-Theater"

The most up-to-date and most comprehensive Journal of the Cinematograph Industry in Germany.

Editor-Proprietor: KARL NEUMANN

BERLIN 0.17 FRUCHTSTR. 2

Annual subscription abroad, $3.00. Write for specimen copy.

WHAT SILVERIT DOES

Increases the light of your picture 100 per cent, bringing out the expression and fine details, adding depth and richness to the scenery, makes the picture clean cut, clear, and distinct, restful to the eyes, has no glare, haze or reflection, but a soft, mellow light. Silverit is a silver paste rubbed on your curtain, and can be polished like a mirror.

1 lb. covers a curtain 9 x 12. 1 lb. can, $3.00—2 lb. can, $5.00.

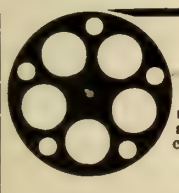
A. G. THOMAS, 1705 Fairacres Ave., Pittsburgh, Pa.

"Silver Your Curtain With Silverit"

LIGHTS and SHADOWS of CHINATOWN or THE YELLOW PERIL

A drama of the Chinese Quarters in San Francisco, 3,000 feet in length. Do not confuse this with other films of the same title. This film has been newly produced and is the first release on this side of the Atlantic of the CONTIENTAL KUNSTFILM of BERLIN. Price will be made according to territory and the number of copies wanted. Four styles of lithographs, booklets and photographs. Write for particulars.

NEW YORK FILM CO., 12 Union Sq., New York, N. Y.



Repairs

The most modern shop and best picture machine repair men in the country guarantee you promptest service and complete satisfaction. Second-hand machines bought and sold.

Full Line of Supplies

Selling agents for all makes of machines.

Chicago Moving Picture Supply Co. 107 N. Dearborn Street CHICAGO, ILL.

If you have any trouble with your pictures, read this advertisement.

Every practical man in the "movies" knows that it is better to pay a good price for good films and a good lens outfit than to have any trouble which annoys an audience. Inferior pictures drive people away. Superior pictures fill the house—mean bigger profits. And to get top-notch pictures you must have a first-class lens outfit.

Bausch and Lomb Projection Lenses

give invariably the best possible results—steady, distinct pictures, without a flicker—the kind that "pay big."

More and more attention is being paid to the lens outfit by progressive operators. The most discriminating of them consider our objectives and condensers the standard of the moving picture world. Why shouldn't you take advantage of their experience? It will pay you well to investigate.

Our free Booklet 62D contains valuable information every owner and operator should have. Write for it TO-DAY.

The Superior Quality of Bausch & Lomb lenses, microscopes, field glasses, projection apparatus, engineering and other scientific instruments is the product of nearly Sixty Years of Experience.

Bausch & Lomb Optical Co.

NEW YORK WASHINGTON CHICAGO SAN FRANCISCO LONDON ROCHESTER, N.Y. FRANKFORT

ROLL TICKETS

ANY PRINTING ACCURATE NUMBERING

BEST "BIG TICKET" ON THE MARKET

5,000 for $1.25 — 50,000 for $7.50

10,000 for 2.50 — 100,000 for 10.00

25,000 for 5.50 — STOCK TICKETS, 6 CENTS

KEYSTONE TICKET CO., SHAMOKIN, PA.

100,000 lots Express Paid to any point in Pennsylvania

ACCURACY

in perforation is absolutely necessary for the moving picture man. In order to insure this have your perforating done by us with our Williamson perforator. Terms on application.

WHYTE-WHITMAN COMPANY

36 East 23rd Street New York City

ADAMS, Feature Lecturer

Specializing the Odyssey, Oliver Twist, Dante's Inferno, Paradise, and am prepared for any feature.

Address GEO. M. ADAMS, c/o Moving Picture World, 125 East 23rd Street, New York City.

Von Duprin Self-Releasing Fire Exit Latches

"Made On Honor."

Absolutely Reliable. Safeguard Against Panic Disasters.

Approved by New York Board of Underwriters. City of New York Bureau of Buildings.

Applied on thousands of Buildings in more than 500 Cities in the U. S. A. and Canada.

Send for Catalogue No. 10 D.

VONNEGUT HARDWARE CO., General Distributors, Indianapolis, Ind., U.S.A.

Can you afford to be without them?

Safe Exit Is a Universal Demand

MAKE 'EM YOURSELF SLIDES

Make them yourself. Written with pen and ink or typewriter. Three minutes to make a slide. Used for advertising slides, to announce future or feature programmes, for chorus slides when chorus slide is missing. We send four colors of gelatin. The slides look well and any one can make them. They are handy also for announcing vaudeville acts. In fact they may be readily used for anything you may wish to say to your audience.

For the sum of three dollars ($3) cash with order, we will send by express, charges not prepaid, or $3.50 by registered mail, prepaid, the following:

24 cover glass, 1 package binder strips, 1 dozen mats, 1 instruction sheet, 1 form sheet and 50 strips assorted colors gelatin—enough for from 300 to 400 slides. Order now. Address

UTILITY TRANSPARENCY CO.

1733 West 9th St., Brooklyn, N. Y.

incident, as important military developments occupy his time. But soon Vinnie has a more serious complaint, and the Colonel is forced to act. While on a short canter through the woods, Vinnie was again insulted by the forced attentions of Sterling. Fortunately, Sergeant Karr was near by and he saved Vinnie from a disagreeable situation. The Colonel orders Sterling's arrest and later this untrustworthy officer is dismissed from service.

Captain Sterling is now out for revenge. Not being satisfied with having broken his oath to Uncle Sam, "not to commit any act that is unbecoming og a gentleman and a soldier," he plans to immerse himself further in crime. In line with his plans for revenge, he engages a number of drunken Mexicans to aid him in kidnapping Vinnie and also to help him teach Sergeant Karr a lesson for interfering with the actions of a "superior officer." The degenerate soldier is temporarily successful in his plans, but Karr is fearless and, with indomitable courage, protects the girl he has begun to love.

THE REQUITAL (July 26).—Jim Dawson's wife is ill. The doctor has prescribed wholesome food, rest and a long residence in Colorado. Jim hasn't the money. He is too proud to ask his friends, and those whom he had approached with a suggestion had only offered him sympathy. For a long time, Jim thought of the money he handled for his firm. He thought of the important work he did and the little he was paid for doing it.

In desperation he forges a check on the firm. In order to clear his conscience he inserts between the pages of his ledger the following note, "I have committed forgery—but not for my own sake—I shall pay back every cent—so help me God." One of the clerks in the office who had long wanted Jim's position, finds the note, and immediately informs the firm. Jim is intercepted at the bank and his plans for Colorado and the health of his wife go to smash.

Jim is arrested and, in spite of his strong pleading, is sentenced by a relentless judge to a ten-year term in prison. After five years in prison, in the course of which Jim's wife dies, Jim tries to escape. He almost succeeds, but he turns back to save a drowning child. A number of dramatic complications arise in which it is learned that the child Jim had saved is the son of the judge who had cruelly sentenced him; the judge had now risen in politics to the position of Governor of the State. The Governor offers Jim a pardon, but he refuses to receive a favor from the man who had ruined his career.

THE REQUITAL (July —).—Back in his cell, Jim sinks on his cot in deep contemplation. As he does so, the door of his cell is once more swung open, and the little boy whom he saved timidly enters. He advances a few paces and stands facing him, but Jim is too occupied with his thoughts to notice the child. He comes closer and lays his hand tenderly on his shoulder. Jim starts. The child looks up to him and solemnly thanks him for saving his life. Then, after a long while, Jim shoots out his arms and draws the child close to him. The delighted child covers his face with kisses. He next clambers off his lap, retreats a pace or two, and draws the governor's pardon from his sash and delivers the document to Jim, who takes it. At this point the governor enters, and extends his hand to Jim. He grips it with strong sincerity.

IMP.

THE TRAITOR'S FATE (July 22).—Mildred has two lovers, Herbert and Will. Herbert is the favored lover, but Will is determined he shall never marry her. The day before the wedding, Will sends her a note asking her to see him for the last time as he is leaving the country forever. Mildred's tender heart urges her to yield to his request and she meets him. After wishing her all happiness in her new life, he persuades her to allow him to drive her home.

Mildred faints, and Will seeing a cabin in the woods, carries her to it and endeavors to revive her. She recovers from the swoon and begs Will to take her home. He refuses. He tries to embrace her. She pushes him away, and falling to the floor, her hand accidentally touches a hatchet. She grasps the weapon and warns the desperate man to keep off. She escapes from the cabin with Will in pursuit. He overtakes her and seizes the deadly weapon when Herbert arrives. Will escapes in the woods, but is finally captured and the unworthy friend meets the fate he so richly deserved.

THE HEART OF A GYPSY (July 25).—Jan, a reckless young gypsy poacher, defies the game laws and is arrested for shooting and trapping on private ground. He is about to be given a long sentence when the little daughter of the squire prevails upon her father to release the trespasser. The gypsy boy's sweetheart is very grateful and vows to be of aid to the little girl some day. Later the child goes on a long sea voyage and is shipwrecked upon a deserted coast. She is saved from the sea by the gypsy girl, who nurses her back to health. The gypsys protest against the presence of a hated outsider within their encampment and would drive the sick child into the wilderness, but the gypsy girl takes her under her protection and the two set out for the long walk through the forests to the father's home. They arrive there after many hardships and the gypsy girl is offered a home, which she is about to accept, but the memory of her gypsy sweetheart is too strong and, after a sad farewell, she once more faces the wilderness and journeys to the tents of her people.

A CASE OF DYNAMITE (July 27).—Jonathan Jay, while waiting on a customer in his little country store, catches Cy, the village bad boy, stealing apples. He punishes with a whipping and Cy plans revenge. The opportunity comes when Jonathan gets a telegram calling him to the city. While he is buying his ticket, Cy paints the word "Dynamite" on his grip, and as the train pulls in, Jonathan hurriedly picks up the case and dashes for the car, without noticing the word on it.

Upon his arrival in the city, he goes to a jewelry store, where the clerk, seeing the word on the grip, offers him practically everything in the store to get him out quickly. Jonathan takes all he can and starts for the bank. The clerk rushes for a policeman and they give chase to the unsuspecting countryman, who goes into the bank to draw out some money. Here, he meets with the same experience, as the cashier also fears an explosion. Jonathan is now well loaded down with money and jewelry, but is soon tracked by the clerk, cashier and policeman. After many amusing experiences he is captured and taken to jail, where everything is satisfactorily explained and he is released and starts happily for his country home.

LOVE'S DIARY (July 27).—Kate Morgan is in love with her employer, Clarence Irwin, a Wall Street broker, but he is unaware of this. Every day upon her return home she makes an entry in her diary saying how much she cares for him. An adventurer, Charles Nally, and his sweetheart, Marion, enter Irvin's office one day, apparently on business, but in reality to have Marion lure him with her beauty. The plot is successful, for he devotes his entire time to her and neglects his business. His shares in copper are almost swept away through his attentions to the fair charmer. Kate, of course, sees all this and is a very miserable little girl.

Finally, having spent a fortune on the scheming woman, the crash comes, and she deserts him. Kate comes to the rescue and saves his reputation by covering his margins. This, of course, Irwin does not know until his broker comes with the good news that his copper shares are on the rise. When he does discover that Kate has rebuilt his fortune and saved his honor, he clasps her to his heart and at the same time she shows him her book of treasured thoughts—love's diary.

FEATURE PHOTOPLAY CO.

THE PENALTY (July 15).—Sir Wilfred, an ardent politician, is about to attend a debate. His young wife is in the room with her husband. Harry Carstairs, a friend, is shortly announced. Sir Wilfred is called to the telephone which stands in front of a mirror. While speaking, he is thunderstruck to see his wife slip a note surreptitiously into Harry's hand. Infuriated with jealousy, Sir Wilfred determines to find out the contents of the note. Still watching the looking glass, he notices Harry placing it carefully in his side pocket. He then persuades the latter to accompany him in his auto. Later we see Sir Wilfred steal the note. He reads it prior to the debate. His worst fears are confirmed; it is an assignation for nine o'clock. Cooly he delivers his speech. There are others to speak before he will again be called upon. Unnoticed he slips out. The hall porter being sound asleep, he returns, joins in the debate, and no one notices his absence. Once more he slips out, looks around carefully, the hall porter still sleeps, and this time Sir Wilfred puts on his hat and overcoat and leaves the building.

At nine o'clock he creeps quietly into his house, goes unseen to his study, and looking through a half-open door he can see plainly into his wife's boudoir. The scene that meets his gaze is enough to frenzy any husband. His wife is in her lover's arms. With slow deliberation, Sir Wilfred takes a revolver from a drawer in the bureau. They must pay the penalty. He fires once. Again a shot rings out, and the tragedy is complete. Now to prevent any suspicion falling on himself, entering the room he arranges the bodies, placing the revolver by Harry's hand.

Without having been missed he returns to the debate, in which he takes a strenuous part, until the telephone, in the early hours of the morning, summons him. His servants have made the discovery.

The coroner's verdict is the usual one of double suicide. No suspicion falls on Sir Wilfred, but his mind is tortured, and when at a later period he is asked to deliver an address on "Whether matrimony is beneficial to the State?" he feels he cannot cope with such a speech. He, however, prepares the subject for a colleague to deliver. While this is taking place his nerves are so worked up that he can bear the strain no longer, and, dashing on the platform, he delivers an impassioned address against matrimony which has been such a curse to him. The effort is too great. With a wild cry of "Matrimony is not beneficial to the government," he is seized with heart failure and sinks to the ground.

THE CRYSTAL FILM CO.
Producers of Feature Photo Plays
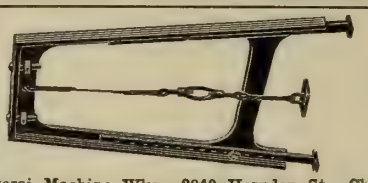
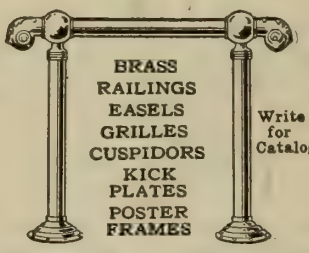
TO ORDER
432 Wendover Ave., N. Y. City



Lavezzi Machine Wks., 2940 Herndon St., Chic.

McKENNA



Write for Catalog.
McKenna Bros. Brass Co.
PITTSBURGH

C. Howard Crane, Architect
Specialist in Theatrical Construction
Plans, Specifications and Superintendence.
Correspondence Solicited.
1920 Ford Building, Detroit, Mich.

The Simpson Solar Screen
Is the best Daylight Screen in existence. Fully covered by U. S. Patent No. 890,101. Don't buy imitations.
ALFRED L. SIMPSON, Inc.
No. 113 W. 132nd St., New York City

FOR SALE
Motion Picture Cameras and 2 Schneider Perforators for sale CHEAP.
School for Motion Picture Photography.
Motion Pictures taken. SUMMER RATES.
Special Event Film Mfg. Co., Inc.
248 West 35th St., N. Y. C.

NOW BOOKING
The only real Spanish-Mexican Championship Bull Fight Pictures on the market to-day.
2,200 Feet and Lectured Throughout. Have a Swell Front and is a Feature that will bring in the money.
Never before exhibited in or around New York City. Summer Resort Exhibitors in and around New York City write at once for bookings and terms. State Rights for Sale.
MEXICAN BORDER FILM CO.,
Care of Moving Picture World,
125 East 23rd St., New York City.

Opportunity for splendid returns for individual seeking investment in the motion picture field. Address, "I. L.," c/o Moving Picture World, New York City.

BOOK "The Power of Destruction"

INTERNATIONAL FILM TRADERS, Inc.

Importers 5 West 14th St. New York City Exporters

Dealers in Foreign and Domestic Films

New and Second Hand FILMS of every make and description

FEATURE FILMS A SPECIALTY

Exclusive Features!

THE ROYAL FEATURE FILM COMPANY

Will release a carefully selected feature each week, including Bisons, and make exclusive contracts for first run in your city.

OUR RELEASES

BLAZING THE TRAIL.....Bison, 2 Reels
POST TELEGRAPHER .....Bison, 2 Reels
THE CRISIS .....Bison, 2 Reels
LIEUTENANT'S LAST FIGHT .....Bison, 2 Reels
DEAD MAN'S CHILD .....Gt. Northern, 3 Reels
THE OUTCAST .....Bison, 2 Reels
ST. GEORGE AND THE DRAGON..Milano, 3 Reels
MYSTERIES OF SOULS .....Gt. Northern, 3 Reels
WRECK OF THE AURORA...World's Best, 3 Reels

Watch for future releases and get busy quick before your competitor beats you to it. You will need each one of them at least two days. One, three, six, eight sheets, heralds, booklets, banners, etc.

COMING.

$25,000 worth of features now contracted for, including: Call of a Woman, Last of the Frontignacs, Haunted Castle, Battle of Two Palms.

Nothing but { State rights features the best to be had } Released by us

302 Schultz Building, High and Hickory Sts., Columbus, O.

NOW IT'S LAS VEGAS

While there call upon Duncan and Browne, whose theatres are equipped with

Radium Gold Fibre Screens

We feel proud to be represented by them. The moving picture business contains no finer men. Here's a secret—lest you have a wrong idea: They paid us full price for our screens—ask them. They all do. Truthfulness and honesty in advertising is one of our cardinal principles. We will not give a screen away to curry favors. One always sells a bunch of others.

YOU HAVE TRIED THE REST—NOW BUY THE BEST—

Radium Gold Fibre Screens

AMERICAN THEATRE CURTAIN AND SUPPLY COMPANY

Main and Chestnut Streets, St. Louis, Missouri.
N. H. SPITZER, 32 Union Square, New York City.

In answering advertisements kindly mention The Moving Picture World.

-:- Bound Volume -:-

No. 12. April to June 1912

Moving Picture World

$1.50 Each

Postage 60c Extra, or Express Charges Collect. Order Now.

MOVING PICTURE WORLD
Box 226, Mad. Sq. P. O. N. Y. City

THE Eye Comfort System
OF
Indirect Illumination

So necessary to the success of every Motion Picture Theatre that we engineer 60 Theaters a month.

This is a free service to Motion Picture Theatre Managers.

National X-Ray Reflector Co.,
227 W. Jackson Blvd., Chicago.
Distance, Screen to Rear of Auditorium.....
Ceiling Height .....
Width of House.....
Name .....

DON JUAN an

TWO REELS

The Famous Historical Drama - -

RELEASED
JULY
29th
TWO REELS

A Dramatic portrayal of brothers for a beautiful

Claude Garry and Paul the leading roles with fault elaborate costuming and scenic effects make this standard for artistic

MADE BY PATHE

Released by the General

WATCH FOR d CHARLES V

TWO REELS

The Theme of a Master Novelist

the contention of two royal girl, with love triumphant.

Capellani, the stars, play less technique, and the harmonious coloring of the latest effort the highest achievement.

RELEASED
JULY
29th
TWO REELS

FRERES

Film Company, July 29th

THESE FEATURES

INDEPENDENT Release Dates

AMERICAN.

July 8—Where There's a Heart (Dr.).....1000
July 10—The Fall of Blackhawk (2 reels) (Hist.).....2000
July 11—The Vanishing Race (Dr.).....1000
July 15—The Fatal Mirror (Dr.).....1000
July 15—Point Loma (Scenic).....
July 17—In the Nick of Time (Dr.).....
July 18—The Telltale Shells (Dr.).....
July 22—Indian Jealousy (Dr.).....
July 22—San Diego (Scenic).....
July 24—How He Made Good (Dr.).....
July 25—The Canyon Dweller (Dr.).....

AMBROSIO.

June 21—The Maniac (Dr.).....
June 28—The Actor's Test (Dr.).....
June 28—Benares, the Sacred City (Sc.).....
July 5—The Legend of the Chrysanthemum (Dr.)
July 5—The Airman (Com.).....

BISON.

June 29—The Colonel's Peril (Dr.).....
July 2—The Sheriff of Stony Butte (Dr.).....
July 6—The Restoration (Dr.).....
July 9—Reconciled (Dr.) .....
July 13—Just in Time (Dr.).....
July 16—The Sheriff's Mysterious Aide (Dr.)..
July 20—The Little Rancher (Dr.).....
July 27—Dare Devil Dick Wins a Wife (Dr.)..

CHAMPION.

June 12—A Western Child's Heroism (Dr.).... 950
July 1—Pat's Breeches (Com.).....
July 1—Little Old New York (Hist.).....
July 8—The Gypsy Bride (Dr.).....
July 15—Foraging on the Enemy (Dr.).....

COMET.

July 1—Jenks and His Motor Boat (Com.).... 500
July 1—New York Catholic Protectory (Edu.) 500
July 6—A Heroine of Pioneer Days (Dr.) 975
July 8—The Poughkeepsie Intercollegiate Regatta (Sporting).....1000
July 13—Lights and Shadows of Old Kentucky (Dr.).....1000
July 15—Reggie Breaks the College Rules (Com.).....1000
July 20—Her Indian Guardian (Dr.).....
July 22—Reformed by Strategy (Com.).....
July 27—The Tomboy Ranch Girl (Dr.).....
July 29—Reconciled in Reno (Com.).....
Aug. 3—The Hold-Up in Buckeye Canyon (Dr.)

ECLAIR.

July 4—Hearts and Memories (Dr.).....
July 7—For Love (Dr.).....
July 7—Arabian Theatres (Edu.).....
July 9—A Double Misunderstanding (Com.-Dr.)
July 11—The Cedarville Scandal (Com.).....
July 14—Artful Contran (Com.).....
July 14—Across the Caucasus (Scenic).....
July 16—The Dreamers (Dr.).....
July 18—That Loving Man (Com.).....
July 21—Rizzio (Dr.) .....
July 23—The Governor's Daughter (Dr.).....
July 25—The Double Cross (Dr.).....
July 28—The Lady Barrister (Com.).....
July 28—Life In a Bulgarian Village (Edu.)...

FEATURE PHOTOPLAY COMPANY.

July 15—The Penalty (Dr.).....

GAUMONT.

June 27—When Money Isn't Money (Com.-Dr.)
July 4—Written in Blood (2 reels) (Dr.).....
July 9—A Mid-Channel Romance (Dr.).....
July 11—That Troublesome Bird (Com.).....
July 11—A Tenacious Hubby (Com.).....
July 16—Love's Surest Proof (Dr.).....
July 18—The Lion's Revenge (Dr.).....
July 23—The Silent Castle (Dr.).....
July 25—Love's Floral Tribute (Dr.).....

GEM.

June 11—The Princess Lorraine (2 reels, Dr.)..
June 18—Hill Folks (Dr.).....
June 25—The Reason (Dr.).....
July 2—The Medal of Honor (Drama).....
July 9—Under Two Flags (2 reels, Dr.).....
July 16—Two Men (Dr.).....

GREAT NORTHERN

June 22—Painter and Peasant (Dr.).....
June 29—How to Make a Reputation (Dr.)....
June 29—A Bath With Consequences (Com.)...
July 6—The Two Sisters (Dr.).....
July 6—Copper Industry In Spain (Edu.).....
July 13—Circumstantial Evidence (Dr.).....
July 13—Moving Pictures (Com.).....
July 20—Almost a Tragedy (Com.-Dr.).....
July 20—Uncle Reuben Goes to Town (Com.)..

IMP.

June 29—Portugese Joe (Com.-Dr.)..... 400
July 1—Love, War and a Bonnet (Dr.).....1000
July 4—Betty, the Coxswain (Dr.).....1000
July 6—Home Again (Com.)..... 600
July 6—Printing and Engraving U. S. Government Stamps (Edu.)..... 400
July 8—The Parson and the Medicine Man (Dr.).....1000
July 11—Caught in the Flash (Com.-Dr.).....1000
July 13—The Wrong Weight (Com.)..... 600
July 13—In and Around Chicago, Ill. (Topical.) 400
July 13—Governor Wilson At His Summer Home (Topical).....
July 15—Hearts In Conflict (Dr.).....1000
July 18—Winning the Latonia Derby (Dr.)....1000
July 20—Building a Church in a Day (Voc'tl.) 400
July 20—The Foreign Invasion (Com.)..... 600

LUX.

June 14—What An Ass (Comedy)..... 514
June 14—Music Mad (Comedy)..... 453
June 21—The Gambler (Dr.)..... 948
June 28—Thou Art the Man (Dr.)..... 721
June 28—By the Cliffs of Etretat (Sc.)..... 259
July 5—The Empty Holster (Dr.)..... 860
July 12—Spiffkin's New Job (Com.)..... 567
July 12—Ponto's Little Joke (Com.)..... 393
July 19—Stones that Rebound (Dr.)..... 970
July 26—Mr. X and the Unfortunate Heiress (Dr.)..... 967

ITALA.

(By N. Y. M. P. Co.)

Feb. 3—Anarchical Attempt (Com.).....
Feb. 10—Toto, Door-Keeper (Com.).....
Feb. 10—Hunting Ducks (Sporting).....
Feb. 17—The Italian Army in Tripoli.....
Feb. 17—Making a Cinematograph Scene.....
June 29—The Great Bank Failure (2 reels, Dr.)
July 6—A Woman's Duplicity (Dr.).....

MAJESTIC.

July 7—The Cook Came Back (Com.).....
July 9—The Widower's Widow (Com.-Dr.).....
July 9—Father's Bust (Com.).....
July 9—The Lost Messenger (Dr.).....
July 14—Father's Bust (Com.).....
July 14—The Widower's Widow (Com.).....
July 16—In Her Brother's Defense (Dr.).....
July 21—The Alibi Club (Com.).....
July 23—The New Clerk (Dr.).....

MILANO.

July 13—The Wolf's Prey (2 reels) (Dr.)....
July 20—The Triumph of Love (2 reels) (Dr.)..

NESTOR.

June 19—The Land of Might (Drama).....
June 21—Beneath Western Skies (Drama)....
June 24—The Dawn of Netta (Dr.).....
June 26—Reaping the Whirlwind (Dr.).....
June 28—Young Wild West Leading a Raid (Dr.)
July 1—When Hearts Are Trumps (Dr.).....
July 3—Hard Luck Bill (Com.).....
July 5—Young Wild West on the Border (Dr.)
July 8—The Flower of the Forest (Dr.).....
July 10—A Gentleman of Fortune (Dr.).....
July 12—Young Wild West Cornered By Apaches (Dr.).....
July 15—The Trifler (Dr.).....
July 17—Fur and Feathers (Com.).....
July 19—Young Wild West Trapping a Tricky Rustler (Dr.).....

NEW YORK FILM CO.

July 15—Lights and Shadows of Chinatown (Dr.).....

POWERS.

June 26—The Helping Hand (Com.).....
July 3—The Coming Generation (Com.).....
July 5—Mates and Mis-mates (Dr.).....
July 10—Tangled (Com.).....
July 10—A Leap Year Delusion (Com.).....
July 12—Her Life's Story (Dr.).....
July 17—The Ransom (Com.).....
July 17—A Good Day's Work (Com.-Dr.).....
July 19—Her Life's Story (Dr.).....

RELIANCE.

June 15—Virginius (2 reels, Dr.).....
June 19—One Man's Love (Drama).....
June 22—The Forbidden Way (Drama).....
June 22—The Pelican (Edu.).....
June 26—Votes for Women (2 reels) (Dr.)....
June 29—Before the White Man Came (Dr.)....
July 3—A Man's Duty (Dr.).....
July 6—Rip Van Winkle (Dr.).....
July 10—Grandpa (Dr.).....
July 13—The Toy 'Phone (Dr.).....
July 17—At Cripple Creek (Dr.).....
July 20—Love Me, Love My Dog (Com.-Dr.)...
July 24—The True Love (Dr.).....
July 27—The Soldier Baby (Dr.).....

REPUBLIC.

June 11—Was He a Suffragette? (Com.).....
June 15—A Shadow of the Past (Dr.).....
June 18—The Serpent (Drama).....
June 22—Her Father, the Sheriff (Drama).....
June 25—The Queen of May (Dr.).....
June 29—In the Balance (Dr.).....
July 2—Evil Be to Him Who Evil Thinks (Dr.)
July 8—The Gold In the Auto (Dr.).....
July 15—The All-seeing Eye (Dr.).....
July 22—The Octoroon's Sacrifice (Dr.).....
July 29—A House Top Romance (Dr.).....
July 29—Evolution of a Duck Egg (Edu.).....

REX.

June 23—The Voice of the Millions (Dr.).....
June 27—The Weight of a Feather (Dr.).....
June 27—The Weight of a Feather (Dr.).....
June 30—Looking Backward (Dr.).....
July 4—A Prophet Without Honor (Dr.).....
July 7—The Unknown Bride (Dr.).....
July 11—The Greater Love (Dr.).....
July 14—The Mother Heart (Dr.).....
July 18—The Hidden Light (Dr.).....
July 21—When Love Rules (Dr.).....

SOLAX.

June 28—The Call of the Rose (Dr.).....
July 3—Father and the Boys (Com.).....
July 5—Between Two Fires (Dr.).....
July 10—Winsome But Wise (Com.).....
July 12—Hotel Honeymoon (Com.).....
July 17—Slippery Jim (Dr.).....
July 19—The Four Flush Actor (Com.).....
July 24—Broken Oaths (Dr.).....
July 26—The Requital (Dr.).....

THANHOUSER.

July 5—Ma and Dad (Com.-Dr.).....
July 7—The Portrait of the Lady Anne (Dr.)..
July 9—Pa's Medicine (Com.-Dr.).....
July 9—The Hazers Hazed (Com.).....
July 12—Nursie and the Knight (Com.-Dr.)....
July 14—The Finger of Scorn (Dr.).....
July 16—Vengeance Is Mine (Dr.).....
July 19—The Ranchman and the Hungry Bird (Com.-Dr.).....
July 21—Only a Miller's Daughter (Dr.).....
July 23—The Portrait of Lady Anne (Dr.).....
July 26—The Merchant of Venice (Parts 1 and 2) (Dr.).....

VICTOR.

July 12—In Swift Waters (Dr.).....
July 19—The Players (Com.-Dr.).....

GREAT NORTHERN SPECIAL FEATURE FILM COMPANY.

Feb. 27—The Nihilist's Conspiracy.....2000
March 18—The Call of a Woman.....3000
April 8—Cell Thirteen 2000
April 22—The Dead Man's Child.....2000
April 15—The Dead Man's Child, 3 reels (Dr.)

SHAMROCK.

May 7—A Gypsy's Love (Dr.).....
May 11—Algernon's Busy Day (Com.).....
May 14—On the Verge (Dr.).....
May 18—Algernon's Busy Day (Com.).....
May 21—The Thorny Path (Dr.).....
May 25—A Cold Reception (Com.).....
May 25—The Kissing Germ (Com.).....
May 28—White Fawn (Dr.).....
May 31—A Petticoat Ranch Boss (Com.).....

SPECIAL ROLL TICKETS THE BIG TICKET. ANY PRINTING ANY COLORS

5,000	-	-	$1.25	20,000	-	-	$4.60	50,000	-	-	$7.50
10,000	-	-	$2.50	25,000	-	-	$5.50	100,000	-	-	$10.00

GET THE SAMPLES STOCK TICKETS, 6 CENTS

NATIONAL TICKET COMPANY - - - - Shamokin, Pa.

HE WHO HESITATES IS LOST

Try the

STAR FEATURES

and they will put you on the right road. Get busy and get price and list. We have the goods. Plenty pictorial display.

Star Feature Film Co.

Room 720, Heed Building (Bell Telephone).

1211-1215 Filbert St., Philadelphia, Pa.

Six States Sold Last Week

FOR

Convict Life in the Ohio Penitentiary

THREE REELS

Every foot taken behind the walls. Remember, we can furnish a line of advertising that is entirely different from the rest.

There Are a Few Choice States Left

Better get busy and get in on the ground floor.

AMERICA'S FEATURE FILM CO.

406-7-8 Schiller Bldg. - - Chicago

ECLAIR FILMS

Photography Which Not Only Pleases but It Eases the Eye

"THE GOVERNOR'S DAUGHTER"

TUESDAY, JULY 23rd

A society drama in which Love gets mixed up in Politics and Cupid saves the day.

"THE DOUBLE CROSS"

THURSDAY, JULY 25th

A "bully" love comedy showing the materialization of what has heretofore been but a figure of speech.

"The Lady Barrister" and "Beautiful Vintage Time"

SUNDAY, JULY 28th

One of those delightful French comedy conceits and a charming bit of Eclair picture travel through the vineyards of France.

REMEMBER! Coming, "ROBIN-HOOD"

A world-known character and story is Robin Hood. Being produced in a three-reel magnitude of magnificence. The name alone will pack your theatre, but wait till you see the production.

ECLAIR FILM CO., 225 W. 42d St., New York City

FILMS WANTED

Will buy for cash a number of high class negatives of American manufacture. Only want subjects of superior excellence. Must secure exclusive control outside of North America. All kinds of good subjects considered.

Address at once

J. VERMEULEN c/o Hotel Wellington

55th St. & 7th Ave. New York City

COLUMBIA FEATURE FILM CO.

FOR SALE — FEATURE FILM — FOR RENT

Delhi Durbar	Sale Price		$ 20.00
Gaumont Weekly No. 1	"	"	15.00
Buffalo Jones	"	"	50.00
Christian Martyrs	"	"	15.00
Capt. Smith of Titanic	"	"	20.00
Heaven's Messenger	"	"	30.00
Siege of Calais	"	"	60.00
U. S. Army and Navy	"	"	75.00
Four Dare-Devils	"	"	100.00
Ten Nights in a Barroom	"	"	150.00
Passion Play	"	"	225.00
David's War with Absalom	"	"	50.00

20% of price with order—balance C. O. D., with privilege examination. All in first-class condition. Lithos & Banners included. SEND FOR REDUCED RENTAL PRICE LIST.

422 N. HIGH STREET COLUMBUS, OHIO

LICENSED Release Dates

RELEASE DAYS.

Monday—Biograph, Kalem, Lubin, Pathe, Selig, Vitagraph.
Tuesday—Edison, Essanay, C. G. P. C., Cines, Selig, Vitagraph.
Wednesday—Edison, Eclipse, Kalem, Lubin, Pathe, Vitagraph.
Thursday—Biograph, Essanay, Lubin, Melies, Pathe, Selig.
Friday—Edison, Essanay, Kalem, Selig, C. G. P. C., Vitagraph.
Saturday—Edison, Essanay, Cines, Lubin, Pathe, Vitagraph.

BIOGRAPH.

June 27—The School Teacher and the Waif (Com.-Dr.)
July 1—Man's Lust for Gold (Dr.)
July 4—One Round O'Brien (Com.)
July 4—Trying to Fool Uncle (Com.)
July 8—An Indian Summer (Dr.)
July 11—Man's Genesis (Com.)
July 15—The Speed Demon (Com.)
July 15—His Own Fault (Com.)
July 18—Heaven Avenges (Dr.)
July 22—The Sands of Dee (Dr.)
July 25—The Would-Be Shriner (Com.)
July 25—Willie Becomes an Artist (Com.)

CINES.

(G. Kleine.)

July 2—Jenkins Sneezes (Com.) 325
July 2—A Violin and a Pipe (Com.) 640
July 6—In Wrong (Com.) 975
July 9—The Gay Deceivers (Com.) 585
July 9—Leah Learns to Dance (Com.) 365
July 13—For Her Father's Sake (Dr.) 950
July 16—Disowned (Dr.) 1050
July 20—The Part the Servant Played (Com.-Dr.) 1000
July 23—A Daughter's Diplomacy (Com.-Dr.) 896
July 27—Too Many Sweethearts (Com.) 965

EDISON.

June 28—Master and Pupil (Dr.) 1000
June 29—The Father (Dr.) 1000
July 2—The Close of the American Revolution (Hist.) 1000
July 3—Partners for Life (Com.-Dr.) 1000
July 5—The Workman's Lesson (Dr.) 1000
July 6—How the Boys Fought the Indians (Com.) 700
July 6—An Intelligent Camera (Com.) 300
July 9—After Many Days (Dr.) 1000
July 10—The Artist's Joke (Com.) 1000
July 12—For Valour (Dr.) 1000
July 13—Picturesque Darjeeling, India (Sc.) 300
July 13—Madame de Mode (Com.) 700
July 16—Nerves and the Man (Dr.) 1000
July 17—Revenge is Sweet (Com.) 600
July 17—The Maple Sugar Industry at Thompson, Pa. (Ind.) 400
July 19—The Necklace of Crushed Rose Leaves (Dr.) 1000
July 20—The Little Artist from the Market (Dr.) 1000
July 23—The Sketch With the Thumb Print (Dr.) 1000
July 24—The Grouch (Com.-Dr.) 985
July 26—The Escape from Bondage (Dr.) 1000
July 27—The Relief of Lucknow (Hist.-Dr.) 1000

ESSANAY.

June 22—The Foreman's Cousin (Drama) 1000
June 25—Billy and the Butler (Com.-Dr.) 1000
June 27—A Guardian's Luck (Com.) 1000
June 28—Springing A Surprise (Com.) 1000
June 29—Broncho Billy and the Indian Maid (Dr.) 1000
July 2—On the Cactus Trail (W. Dr.) 1000
July 4—White Roses (Dr.) 1000
July 5—The Butterfly Net (Com.) 1000
July 6—Broncho Billy's Narrow Escape (Dr.) 1000
July 9—Signal Lights (Dr.) 1000
July 11—Pa Trubell's Troubles (Com.) 1000
July 12—Down Jayville Way (Com.) 1000
July 13—A Story of Montana (Dr.) 1000
July 16—The Smuggler's Daughter (Dr.) 1000
July 18—Cupid's Quartette (Com.) 1000
July 19—Hearts of Men (Dr.) 1000
July 20—A Wife of the Hills (Dr.) 1000
July 23—The Understudy (Com.-Dr.) 1000
July 25—Mr. Tibbs' Cinderella (Com.) 1000
July 26—Twins (Com.) 1000
July 27—A Moonshiner's Heart (Dr.) 1000

KALEM.

June 21—The Rube Detective (Comedy)
June 21—The Chauffeur's Dream (Comedy)
June 24—The Colonel's Escape (Dr.) 1000
June 26—Captured by Bedouins (Dr.) 1000
June 28—The Penalty of Intemperance (Dr.) 1000
July 1—Tragedy of the Desert (2 reels Dr.) (Special) 2000
July 1—The Girl Bandits' Hoodoo (Com.) 1000
July 3—The Filibusterers (Dr.) 1000
July 5—Winning a Widow (Dr.) 1000
July 8—The Organ Grinder (Dr.)
July 8—Nile Hippopotamus (Edu.)
July 10—The Bugler of Battery B (Dr.) 875
July 10—Hungry Hank's Hallucination (Com.) 125
July 12—Saved by Telephone (Dr.)
July 12—A Pet of the Cairo Zoo (Edu.)
July 15—The Lair of the Wolf (Dr.) 1000
July 17—The Suffragette Sheriff (Com.) 1000
July 19—A Prisoner of the Harem (Dr.)
July 19—Egyptian Sports (Sporting)
July 22—The Thief (Dr.) 1000
July 24—Fantasca, the Gipsy (Dr.) 1000
July 26—A Political Kidnapping (Dr.) 1000

LUBIN.

July 1—The Spoiled Child (Dr.) 1000
July 3—The Prize Essay (Dr.) 1000
July 4—A Child's Prayer (Dr.) 1000
July 5—Just Pretending (Com.)
July 5—A Pair of Boots (Com.)
July 6—The Back Window (Com.-Dr.) 1000
July 8—The Halfbreed's Treachery (Dr.) 1000
July 10—The Stolen Ring (Dr.) 1000
July 11—The Sheriff's Daughter (Dr.) 1000
July 12—Over the Hills to the Poor House (Com.)
July 12—The Hypnotist (Com.)
July 13—The Stranded Actors (Com.) 1000
July 15—Honor Thy Father (Dr.) 1000
July 17—The Senorita's Remorse (Dr.) 1000
July 18—Together (Dr.) 1000
July 19—Buster's Dream (Com.)
July 19—The Uninvited Guest (Com.)
July 20—A Western Courtship (Dr.) 1000
July 22—The Ranger's Reward (Dr.) 1000
July 24—A Visit to Lively Town (Com.)
July 24—The Talker (Com.)
July 25—The Shepherd's Flute (Dr.) 1000
July 26—His Vacation (Com.) 1000
July 27—The Divine Solution (Dr.) 1000

MELIES.

June 13—Ghosts At Circle X Camp (Com.) 1000
June 20—Two Loves (Dr.) 1000
June 27—A Woman's Way (Dr.) 1000
July 4—The Cowboy Kid (Dr.) 1000
July 11—The Man Inside (Dr.) 1000
July 18—The Lesson (Dr.)
July 18—A Cowboy's Proposal (Com.)
July 25—A String of Beads (Dr.) 1000
Aug. 1—The Will of Destiny (Dr.) 1000

ECLIPSE.

(G. Kleine.)

July 3—Scenes in Somerset, England (Sc.) 200
July 3—The Wax Model (Dr.) 800
July 10—A Mysterious Case (Dr.) 1000
July 17—The Grandmother (Dr.) 1060
July 24—The French Army in Action (Military) 505
July 24—Billy's Nightmare (Com.) 485

PATHE.

June 10—Pathe's Weekly, No. 24, (Topical) 1000
June 12—Any Old Clothes (Com.)
June 13—A Redskin's Appeal (Dr.)
June 15—Niagara Falls (Scenic)
June 17—Pathe's Weekly No. 25—1912 (Top.)
June 19—The Gambler's Reformation (Dr.)
June 20—The Fickle Soldier (Drama)
June 22—An Indian Idyl (Drama)
June 24—Pathe's Weekly, No. 26, 1912 (Top.) 1000
June 24—A Nation's Peril (Special—2 reels, Dr.)
June 26—True Love (Dr.)
June 27—Deer Slayers Retribution (Dr.)
June 29—The Squawman's Sweetheart (Dr.)
July 1—Pathe's Weekly, No. 27—1912 (Top.) 1000
July 3—Where Jealousy Leads (Com.-Dr.)
July 4—The Greed of Gold (Dr.)
July 6—The Wooing of White Fawn (Dr.)
July 8—Pathe's Weekly, No. 28, 1912 (Top.)
July 8—The Adopted Child (Special Release) (Dr.)
July 10—On the Brink of the Chasm (Dr.)
July 11—His Wife's Old Sweetheart (Dr.)
July 13—The Unwilling Bride (Dr.)
July 15—Pathe's Weekly, No. 24, 1912 (Top.)
July 17—A Question of Size (Com.)
July 18—The Brave Little Indian (Dr.)
July 20—The Halfbreed Foster Sister (Dr.)

C. G. P. C.

June 7—The Enchanted Fifer (Juvenile)
June 7—The Irbith (Siberian) Fair (Travel)
June 11—Trap of Death (Dr.)
June 11—Cavalry Test Marches in Belgium (Military)
June 14—Pepita's Escapades (Com.)
June 14—Catching Crocodiles on the River Nile (Industrial)
June 18—Mimi's Love Story (Drama)
June 21—The Mystified Pierrot (Com.)
June 21—London (Scenic)
June 25—The Death of Saul (Biblical)
June 28—The Heat Wave (Comedy)
June 28—The Frog (Scientific)
July 2—Wild Birds at Home (Edu.)
July 2—The House of Mystery (Com.)
July 3—Winter Landscapes in Finland (Scenic)
July 5—The Would-be Hunter's Nightmare (Com.)
July 5—Hairdressing of Other Days (Edu.)
July 9—The Geisha's Love Story (Dr.)
July 12—Max Takes Tonics (Com.)
July 16—The Mosquito (Scientific)
July 16—Whiffles Mourns His Twin (Com.)
July 19—The End of Robespierre (Hist.-Dr.)

SELIG.

June 17—The Professor's Wooing (Drama) 1000
June 18—The Captain of the "Nancy Lee" (Com.-Dr.) 1000
June 20—In Exile (Drama) 1000
June 21—Sheep Shearing In New Mexico (Edu.) 500
June 21—The Katzenjammer Kids No. 8—The Arrival of Cousin Otto (Com.) 500
June 24—The Adopted Son (Drama) 1000
June 25—Pansy (Com.-Dr.) 1000
June 27—His Father's Bugle (Drama)
June 27—Elephant Butte Dam at Albuquerque (Educational)
June 28—Murray, the Masher (Comedy) 1000
July 1—The Lake of Dreams (Dr.) 1000
July 2—The Cat and the Canary (Com.-Dr.) 1000
July 4—The Last Dance (Dr.) 1000
July 5—Baby Betty (Dr.) 1000
July 8—Under Suspicion (Dr.) 1000
July 9—The Vow of Ysobel (Dr.)
July 11—His Masterpiece (Dr.) 1000
July 12—A Mail Order Hypnotist (Com.)
July 12—The Los Angeles Police Department (Top.)
July 15—The Pennant Puzzle (Com.) 1000
July 16—The Girl and the Cowboy (Dr.) 1000
July 18—The Polo Substitute (Sporting) 1000
July 19—A Day Off (Com.) 1000
July 22—On the Trail of the Germs (Edu.) 1000
July 23—The Double Cross (Dr.) 1000
July 25—The Miller of Burgundy (Dr.) 1000
July 26—A Wartime Romance (Dr.)
July 26—In Maoriland (Edu.)

VITAGRAPH.

June 22—The Gamblers (Drama) 1000
June 24—The Extension Table (Dr.) 1000
June 25—The Carpathia (Topical)
June 25—Never Again (Comedy)
June 26—When Roses Wither (Dr.) 1000
June 28—Psuedo Sultan (Comedy) 1000
June 29—At the End of the Trail (Dr.) 1000
July 1—After Many Years (Dr.) 1000
July 2—The Church Across the Way (Dr.) 1000
July 3—Lincoln's Gettysburg Address (Hist.) 1000
July 5—On the Pupil of His Eye (Dr.) 1000
July 6—The Troublesome Step-daughters (Com-Dr.) 1000
July 8—Her Old Sweetheart (Com.-Dr.) 500
July 8—Fate's Awful Jest (Dr.) 500
July 9—The Curse of the Lake (Dr.) 1000
July 10—A Bunch of Violets (Dr.) 1000
July 12—The Foster Child (Dr.) 1000
July 13—Aunty's Romance (Dr.) 1000
July 15—The Money Kings (3 reels) (Dr.) 3000
July 15—Conscience (Dr.) 1000
July 16—A Persistent Lover (Com) 400
July 16—A Lively Affair (Com.) 650
July 17—The Redemption of Red Rube (Dr.) 1000
July 19—The Black Sheep (Dr.) 1000
July 20—Rock of Ages (Dr.) 1000
July 22—Wanted—A Sister (Com.-Dr.) 1000
July 23—Lambert Chace—Detective (Dr.) 1000
July 24—Martha's Rebellion (Com.) 1000
July 26—The Barrier that was Burned (Dr.) 1000
July 27—The Light of St. Bernard (Dr.) 1000

NOTICE TO EXHIBITORS:- Posters for all the above Releases Furnished by the AMERICAN SONG SLIDE & POSTER CO., 5th floor, 1st National Bank Bldg., CHICAGO.
One Sheet Posters of the Popular Players.

"OUR BUSINESS BOOSTERS"

Feature Posters, Banners, Heralds, for All Feature Films

Licensed and Independent, Something New Every Week

EIGHT SHEETS 75c THREE SHEETS 35c ONE SHEET POSTERS 15c (Add 1c per sheet for postage if ordered sent by mail)

"The Money Kings," 3 and 6 sheets.
The Siege of Petersburg, 3 and 6 sheets.
The Sands O'Dee, 3 sheets.
The Wood-Be Shriner, 3 sheets.
The Ranger's Reward, 3 sheets.
The Talker, 3 sheets.
The Shepard's Flute, 3 sheets.
His Vacation, 3 sheets.
The Divine Demon, 3 sheets.
Heaven Avenges, 3 sheets.
Honor Thy Father, 3 sheets.
Senorita's Remorse, 3 sheets.

We have in stock the following:

Together, 3 sheets.
Uninvited Guest, 3 sheets.
A Western Courtship, 3 sheets.
Count of Mounty Christy, 3 and 8 sheets.
Under Two Flags, 3 sheets.
A Prisoner of the Herom, 3 and 6 sheets.
Custer's Last Fight, 3, 8 and 12 sheets.
Indian Summer, 3 sheets.
After Each Treachery, 3 sheets.
Bugler of Battery B, 3 sheets.
Stolen Rings, 3 sheets.
Man's Chenosis, 3 sheets.

And all feature subjects for past and future releases.

Sheriff's Daughters Stranded, 3 sheets.
Stranded Actor, 3 sheets.
Man's Lust for Gold, 3 sheets.
Tragedy of the Desert, 3 sheets.
Close of the American Revolution, 3 sheets.
Broncho Billy and Indian Maid, 3 sheets.
Derby Day at Churchill Downs, 3 sheets.
Missionaries in Darkest Africa, 3 sheets.
Fighting Dervishes of the Desert, 3 sheets.
Orleans Coach, and many others, 3 sheets.

REMIT WITH ORDER. NO PERSONAL CHECKS OR C. O. D.

PHOTO PLAY ADVERTISING & SPECIALTY CO. Main Offices, 121-123 Fourth Avenue, PITTSBURGH, PA.

BRANCH OFFICES: 1022 Superior Ave., Cleveland, O. 26 W. Naghten St., Columbus O. Equity Bldg., Detroit, Mich.

AgfA

CELLULOID POSITIVE
CELLULOID NEGATIVE
AND
NON-FLAM POSITIVE
(MADE UNDER LICENSE OF THE PATENTEE)

RAW FILM SUPPLY CO.

15 EAST 26th STREET - - NEW YORK
Tel. Mad. Sq. 7876. Cable Rawfilm New York

American Moving Picture Machine Co.

MANUFACTURERS OF THE

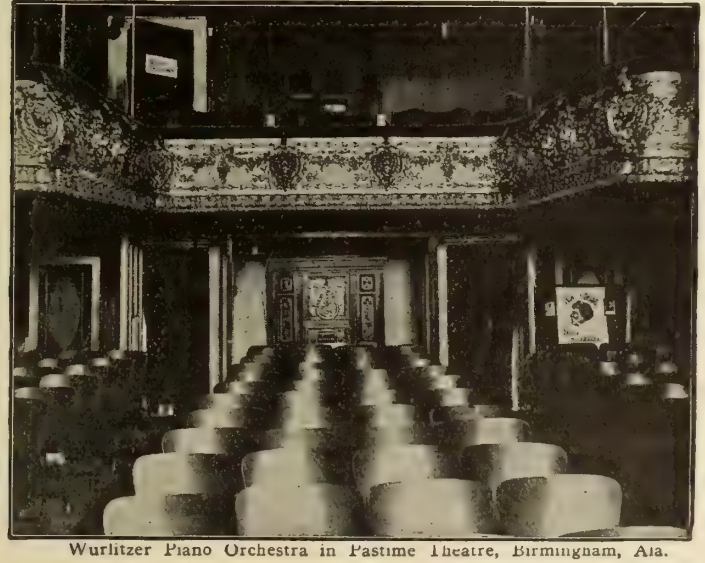
STANDARD

Automatic Moving Picture Machine

101-102 Beekman Street New York

WURLITZER

World's Largest Mfrs. Established 1856



Wurlitzer Piano Orchestra in Pastime Theatre, Birmingham, Ala.

Write for 32-page booklet, showing

Wurlitzer Automatic Musical Instruments

in the leading picture theatres of the country.

The Wurlitzer Instruments furnish better music than musicians and reduce expenses. 50 different styles; time payments; big catalog free. If you can't call, write to our nearest branch.

The Rudolph Wurlitzer Company

CINCINNATI 117-121 E. 4th NEW YORK 25-27 W. 32d CHICAGO 329-331 S. Wabash PHILADELPHIA 1835 Chestnut
ST. LOUIS 912 Pine St. CLEVELAND 800 Huron Road BUFFALO 701 Main LOUISVILLE 426 W. Greene COLUMBUS, O. 57 E. Main

You Have Within Your Reach the Method of Increasing Your Box Office Receipts 200 Per Cent.

MIRROROIDE

Conceded the World Over the World's Best. The Peer of All Projection Screens and Curtains. We Suggest That You Get Our Large Demonstration Samples, A and B Grades—Free. We Will Cheerfully Stand All Expense in Mailing. We Simply Want to Show You. Pin Our Samples on Your Screen or Any Other Make Screen. Test, Compare Any Way You Like.

Mr. Richardson, a Real Authority on Perfect Projection, Gives an Opinion in July 6th Issue of Moving Picture World Worth Reading. Read It.
Discard That Aluminum Sheet with Its Haze, Glare, Out-of-Focus Effect and Eye-Strain, That Will Crack, Peel, Turn Black in Less Than a Year.

GET MIRROROIDE

The Pure Mercury-Foil-Glass-Amalgamation. Price Right and Guaranteed to Last a Lifetime.

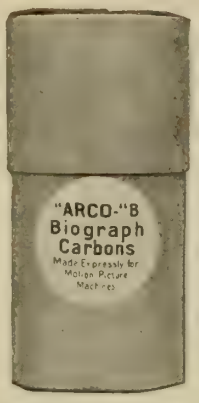
MAKE US SHOW YOU MIRROROIDE

Will Stand Any Test. Soak It in Water Over Night. Do This with Any Other Screen.

The Price Is Within the Reach of All. Write Now.

The J. H. Genter Co., Newburgh, N. Y.

Sole Mfg's of Mirroroide, 7 Pending Patents.



Use the Real

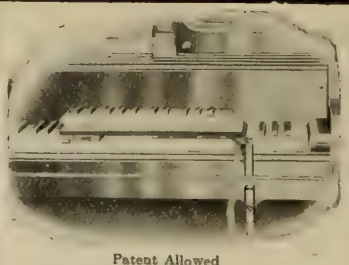
Projector Carbon

"Biograph"

Brand

L. E. Frorup & Co.

232 Greenwich St., New York City



Patent Allowed

BARTON PIANO ATTACHMENT

FOR MUSICAL ELECTRIC BELLS

Have you got opposition? Install a set of these bells in your lobby. They are the greatest business-boosting attraction in the market. Your pianist plays bells and piano at the same time without one cent extra expense.

Complete 25-note outfits, $65.00 up. Sent on trial.

Piano attachments furnished for any make bells. Write to-day before the other fellow does.

DAN BARTON, 266 East Irving St., Oshkosh, Wisconsin

WHY? BECAUSE!

MOTIOGRAPH TESTIMONIALS are HONEST and SINCERE and only those from "Bona-Fide" Exhibitors are used—we do not publish what a dealer says, as it is very natural to expect a boost from one benefitting financially.

Read what one Kentucky user says:

J. H. HOSKINS Pres. J. E. JOHNSON Vice Pres. B. M. HOCKER Cash. Cr.

LEBANON JUNCTION BANK

LEBANON JUNCTION KY

The Enterprise Optical Mfg. Co., 6/21/12.

Chicago, ILL.

Enclosed find check for the account due you of $4.00.

Many thanks for the manner in which you have handled the matter for us.

We never fail to recommend the Motiograph because we are honest in our belief that it is the best and the manner in which you have assisted us in our change convinces us that you propose to be liberal in the up-keep of the machine.

Very respectfully,

GET WISE!

Send for a Free Copy

WHY? BECAUSE!

IT TELLS YOU what the other fellow thinks.

The 1912 Model Motiograph is practically fire-proof—Besides which it is the Best machine made—It looks better—It runs better—and it gives a better picture. Manufactured by

The Enterprise Optical Manufacturing Company

564-572 W. Randolph Street, - - - - CHICAGO, ILL.

FOR SALE BY LIVE DEALERS EVERYWHERE.

WANTED—FEATURE FILMS

On Rental—Percentage—or will buy outright—NO BONUS PAID—2-3-4 & 5-Reel productions. MUST BE ABSOLUTELY CLEAN—NOTHING SUGGESTIVE—NO FILMS WITH INTRIGUES—MURDER—GAMBLING—DRUNKEN SCENES or SLAP-STICK COMEDY WANTED.

WE WANT

EDUCATIONAL—HISTORICAL—BIBLICAL and De LUX PICTURES ONLY—that can be shown to Ministers, Ladies & Children, Schools, etc., and we MUST HAVE EXCLUSIVE. All pictures must be shown first and last at our house as our prices are 10-15 & 25c. Seating capacity, 1,000.

CIRCUIT OF OTHER HOUSES FORMING

This beautiful theatre will be equipped with a $10,000.00 PHOTO-PLAYER (new), ESPECIALLY CONSTRUCTED FOR THIS THEATRE. The management will employ (only) lady help—from Manager to ushers—MAKING IT THE ONLY THEATER IN THE U. S. EMPLOYING EXCLUSIVELY LADIES. NO VAUDEVILLE OR SINGERS NEEDED.

WE WANT AT ONCE

Lady pianists for Photo-Player, and a first-class lady press-agent and lady lecturers—for opening, Saturday, August 3. Address, by mail only, Manager,

MOZART THEATRE GRAND AVENUE LOS ANGELES, CALIF.

Theatre Managers

Why not KODAK Local Scenes and show them on your Screens.

Make Your Own Photos

Cameras and All Photo Supplies

Picture Theatre Equipment Co.

21 EAST 14th STREET
NEW YORK CITY

EXHIBITORS, IT'S OPEN!

A NEW EXCHANGE NEW FILM NEW METHODS
A DOUBLE PROGRAM 42 REELS A WEEK

All of the Universal Output

HOOK UP NOW WITH THE

UNIVERSAL FILM EXCHANGE OF NEW YORK

AND GET THE BEST INDEPENDENT SERVICE EVER OFFERED

NO WAITING NO REPEATS NO OLD FILMS
DON'T WAIT TO WRITE—WIRE DON'T WAIT TO CALL—'PHONE

UNIVERSAL FILM EXCHANGE OF NEW YORK
111 EAST 14th STREET, NEW YORK CITY 'Phone 1000 Stuyvesant

PATHE'S WEEKLY

The Motion Picture Exhibitor's Mascot
ISSUED EVERY MONDAY
Book It Every Week

Use our Developing System
A. J. CORCORAN, Inc.
11 John Street, New York

Headquarters for
ASBESTOS
CURTAINS and PICTURE BOOTHS
SEND FOR BOOKLET C. W. Trainer Mfg. Co.
39 Pearl St., Boston, Mass.

USED FILM
AT A BARGAIN

We have decided for the present to discontinue our used film department and we will sacrifice all our stock, including two and three reel features, to any one who will buy the lot. Railroad fare returned to any one who will come to New York and snatch the bargain. Buyers of one or two reels please don't waste time. Exceptional opportunity for any one contemplating opening a small exchange.

MASKO FILM CO.
145 WEST 45th ST., NEW YORK

J-M THEATRE NECESSITIES
J-M Transite Asbestos Wood Booths for Moving Picture Machines.
J-M Asbestos and Vitribestos Theater Curtains.
J-M Linolite and Frink Lighting Systems.
J-M Success Chemical Fire Extinguishers, etc.
Write for Booklet,
H. W. JOHNS-MANVILLE CO.,
New York and every large city.

20,000 roll tickets, $1.20; 50 5/8 cored carbons, $1.15; stereopticon objectives, 50c to $3.00; stereopticons, $15; rheostats, $3 to $5; arc lamps, $1.75, $2 and $2.25; condensers, 50c; calcium jets, $2.80; acetylene jets, $2.50; gas generators, $3.50; moving picture objectives, $2.75; jackets, $2. List of moving picture repair parts at fair prices. Sprocket wheels, 85c; films 1c a foot. Catalogue. All makes of moving picture machines repaired at reasonable prices. L. HETZ, 302 East 23rd St., New York City

As the Operator Looks at it

As the Operator Looks at It

Just notice how easy this operator takes it. He doesn't have to work over a dangerous juice consuming rheostat at furnace heat anymore since the was installed.

Fort Wayne Compensarc

He can control the machine perfectly now with one hand--gets a clearer, whiter, steadier light and can adjust it to any of the three intensities without even the faintest flicker.

When we sold this machine we guaranteed it would absolutely

Cut 2-3 from the Monthly Lighting Bill

That sounded almost too good to be true, but they put one in on our 30 day free trial plan.

Did the machine "make good?" Well, the first month it reduced the bill from $22.70 to $9.24 and they operated more hours and got better light than ever before.

We can do just as well for you regardless of what voltage you are using and if you will send for our little free booklet, we'll explain how we do it.

Remember you are paying the Lighting Company 66 2-3 per cent more than you need to every day you wait.

Fort Wayne Electric Works
of General Electric Company
1402 Broadway
Fort Wayne, Indiana

LET ME INSTALL A PIPE ORGAN IN YOUR THEATRE

PIPE ORGANS FOR THEATERS AT PRICES BEFORE UNKNOWN

AGENTS WANTED IN ALL PARTS OF U. S. AND CANADA

THE PIPE ORGAN IS THE STRONGEST DRAWING FEATURE OF THE PICTURE THEATER TO-DAY—PUTS THE HUMAN TOUCH TO ALL DRAMAS—MORE THAN 100 OF OUR ORGANS NOW IN USE—OUR ORGANS ARE THE SWEETEST TONED INSTRUMENTS IN THE WORLD TO-DAY—FROM THE WHISPERED NOTE ON THE VIOLIN TO THE ROAR OF THE LION.

WILL INCREASE YOUR BUSINESS 50%

YOUR PIANO PLAYER CAN PLAY OUR ORGANS

SHULMAN PIPE ORGAN CO.

Burlington :: :: Iowa

NOW READY

The Instruction Booklet On

SCENARIO WRITING

Entitled

"Technique of the Photoplay"

By EPES W. SARGENT

Concise, Comprehensive, Thorough Instruction in All Details

$1.00 Per Copy, Postage Paid, $1.00

Order Direct From

MOVING PICTURE WORLD

25 East 23rd St. New York City

20 Years in Sing Sing With State Rights of Ala., Ga., Fla.

For Sale

Tracy the Bandit.....1,200 feet, at 5c. per foot
Siege of Calais.....1,800 feet, at 5c. per foot
Agripina .....1,200 feet, at 5c. per foot
Drink .....1,800 feet, at 5c. per foot
Dante's Divine Comedy.....1,700 feet, at 5c. per foot
Delhi Durbar ..... 900 feet, at 5c. per foot
Old Wyoming Days.....2,400 feet, at 5c. per foot
Lithos—one sheets, 5c.; three sheets, 10c.

All Films Guaranteed

FEATURE FILM CO.,

725 Maison Blanche, NEW ORLEANS, LA.

Managers and Operators Handbook

Price $1.50, Postage Prepaid, M. P. World

Mention State Rights Men

2 REELS. PHOTOGRAPH ENLARGEMENT FOR LOBBY DISPLAY

AUTOMOBILE RACES

on the Fastest 5-Mile Track in America,

TACOMA, JULY 5TH and 6TH

The Following Speed Kings in Spectacular Stunts:

Tetzlaff -- Cooper -- Hughes -- Rossi -- Tower -- Evans

See a Picture Made from a Fiat Car Driven by Teddy Tetzlaff at 100 Miles an Hour.

GRAB THIS QUICK!
IT'S A WINNER!

Outcalt and Lea, BANKERS TRUST BLDG. TACOMA, WASHINGTON

HENNEGAN'S HERALDS

FOR ALL GOOD PICTURES
BEST
MONEY GETTER FOR EXHIBITORS
1000 BLANK $2.25 ADDITIONAL 1000 $1.50
DATING 50¢ PER 1000 SAMPLES FREE
HENNEGAN & CO. CINCINNATI, O.

Second Hand Machines

We at all times have a number of good used machines on hand for sale. Send for list. Now is the time to send your mechanism to our repair shop. All of our work is guaranteed.

Quick Service—Low Prices

Our supply department has enlarged and we can now take care of your orders with even greater dispatch. Send for our "HANDY BUYERS' LIST" to-day. If we don't get acquainted now,

We'll Both Lose

Write Us of Your Wants Today

Chicago Projecting Company
107A No. Dearborn St., Chicago.

36 Licensed Posters

A WEEK FOR $2.00

EXHIBITORS ADVERTISING CO.
Hobbs Bldg. Chicago

Direction J. D. Williams Management Wm. H. Bell

INTERNATIONAL PICTURES

Controlled by

The Greater J. D. Williams Amusement Company, Ltd
Capital, £200,000.

The World's largest dealers in Motion Picture Films, machines and accessories. We are on the market for everything Biographic. No Moving Picture Film and equipment proposition too large for consideration. Our Specialty—Exclusive Australasian Rights on the best long feature subjects produced, and the latest successful supply novelties.

PRINCIPAL EXCHANGES.
610 George Street, Syndey, New South Wales. Melbourne, Brisbane, Perth and Wellington, New Zealand.

Send samples and communications to our purchasing offices as follows—J. A. Hayden, Dewar House, 11 Haymarket, London, England. Louis M. Noto, 2035 Potomac Avenue, Chicago, Ill.

IMPORTANT:—When writing us direct remember that letters with insufficient postage are delayed.

SCENARIO WRITERS!

If your scenarios do not sell find out why. Perhaps your manuscript can be rewritten and made saleable, and your mistakes may be corrected in future manuscripts. The author of "Technique of the Photoplay," etc., will give your manuscript personal criticism for a fee of only $2.

Exhibitors!

Submit your difficulties to the author of "The Photoplay Theater," and other articles on management, for advice and suggestion, the result of twenty years' experience in amusement enterprises. Simple questions $1 each.

Epes Winthrop Sargent
Box 70, Madison Square Station
New York City

Ornamental Theatres

PLASTER RELIEF DECORATIONS

Theatres Designed Everywhere

Write for Illustrated Theatre Catalog. Send us Sizes of Theatre for Special Designs

THE DECORATORS SUPPLY CO.
2549 Archer Avenue, :: CHICAGO, ILL.

In answering advertisements kindly mention The Moving Picture World.

MOTION PICTURE MACHINES AND SUPPLIES

Films, $5.00 per Reel and up. Song Slides 50c per Set and up. Full line of Stereopticons and Slides.

Send for Catalogues and Lists. Machines Repaired. Parts furnished.

Harbach & Co., 809 Filbert St., Philadelphia.

"The House of a Thousand Features"

Big stocks of exclusive two and three-reel features; big advertising; reasonable prices.

IMPERIAL FEATURE FILM CO.
121 Fourth Avenue, Pittsburgh, Pa.

USE BRADY'S LICENSED POSTER

124 EAST 14th STREET, N.Y.

ELECTRIC FANS

General Electric make, 16-inch straight, new, $13.25; guaranteed second-hand, $11 each; 12-inch new straight, $11 each; 12-inch new oscillating, $13.50 each. All these for alternating current, 60 cycles, 110 volts. New 12-inch direct-current oscillating, 110 or 220 volts, $12 each. Large stock of dynamos and motors.

GEORGE BENDER, 82-84 Centre St., New York

HERE AT LAST

A place to buy parts for M. P. machines for less
One of our SPECIALS
Intermittent SPROCKETS $1.50 FOR POWERS OR EDISON Machines
Write for Price List
PITTSBURG M. P. SUPPLY CO., Pittsburg, Pa.

ZIGOMAR has escaped again!

AND WILL DASH THROUGH
Three Thrilling Reels of New Pictures
TO BE RELEASED SOON BY
THE F. & E. FILM CO., Cleveland, Ohio

WE CONTROL

the exclusive projection rights for

"BONNOT THE DEMON"

OR

"THE AUTO BANDITS of PARIS"

in the states of Minnesota and Wisconsin. We invite correspondence from all live, hustling managers in this territory. Three reels of the most sensational events ever recorded on films. Magnificent photography. Every possible publicity medium; advance slides (2 styles), 3 sheets, 1 sheets, press copy with cuts, heralds and "Today" banners. Bookings begin July 22nd. Address "The Huntleys," Ben Huntley, Mgr., Winona, Minn. The Pioneer Projectionists of the Northwest.

A NEW GRAND OPERA

Entitled:

"THE SUMMER SLUMP"

Scene: The Movie World. Enter Managers, who sing the following wail:

"Alas! once more, oh! woe for us!
The Summer is here again
The fickle public and their nicks
Indeed are on the wane.
We strive and try with no effect
Fresh features yet we seek
And still we find our takings
Dropping more and more each week.
What can we do? We cry in vain,
Each one has done his best
The public to attract once more—
Will some kind soul suggest?"

Enter, with attendants, the Hero Bradenburgh, who replies:

"Yes! I can aid you Brethren,
Here is the plan you seek,
Asta Nielsen Exclusiveness
On your bill you want each week.
The Greatest Programme ever shown,
And you can have the rights
Of showing SIX EXCLUSIVE FILMS
At YOUR HALL in Six Nights.

Refrain, in grand finale:

"AN OLD MAN'S DARLING" will thrill on Monday Night,
On Tuesday eve "THE MIGHT OF GOLD" will hold your public tight.
"GIPSY BLOOD" on Wednesday eve, your house is bound to fill,
On Thursday "THE GREAT MOMENT" for sure should top the bill.
"THE COURSE OF TRUE LOVE" Friday night, twenty-fold will pay.
On Saturday with "THE TRAITRESS," you'll have hundreds turned away.

The Greatest Programme ever shown in one week. Write for terms.

G. W. BRADENBURGH,
233 North Eighth Street, Philadelphia, Pa.

THEATRE SEATING—Send for Moving Picture Chair Cat. "V4." Upholstered Chair Cat. "V5."
AMERICAN SEATING COMPANY
Chicago New York Boston Philadelphia

"Make your own films"

of local interest—it will make your theater prominent by showing a local feature film from time to time. Buy the "Junior Professional Outfit," with which you can make films better than some of the manufacturers are turning out. The complete outfit can be bought outright, with full instructions how to take, develop and print, my own patents, scores of highly satisfied customers.

N. Y. greatest Jobbing laboratory and mechanical workshop, special Films, Titles, cameras rented, special lenses, projecting machines and single arc dissolvers. All motion picture supplies, film stock, condensers, wire lugs, expert picture machine repairing. Write me at once on what you are interested—for catalogues

EBERHARD SCHNEIDER,
919 Second Avenue, near 14th St., New York.

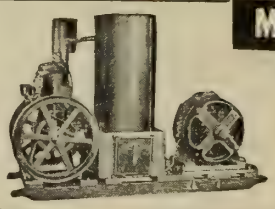
"AT CRIPPLE CREEK"

(2 reels) released Wednesday, July 17th. A story that is known all over the country. Special three and one-sheet posters.

RELIANCE

"LOVE ME, LOVE MY DOG." Released Saturday, July 20th. "THE TRUE LOVE." Released Wednesday, July 24th.
Coming releases: "The Soldier's Baby," Sat., July 27th; "Where There is Soap, There is Hope" (Comedy), Wed., July 31st; "The Wood Nymph," Sat., August. 3rd., "The Two Fathers," Wed., August 7th.
Sold only through the Film Supply Co. of America.

CARLTON MOTION PICTURE LABORATORIES
540 W. 21st St., N. Y.



MOVING PICTURE ELECTRIC LIGHT PLANT

Used and Highly Endorsed by the United States Army.
BIGGEST SENSATION IN THE MOVING PICTURE WORLD
Can be operated by a boy 10 years old. One customer writes: "Plant running like a top and delivering the 'juice' right along every day for our moving picture house. Costs us about one-tenth as much as public service. Also pumps water to all our buildings, 2,000 gallons per day."
Write to-day for Bulletin 101. It is a mighty interesting booklet.

(163) DETROIT ENGINE WORKS, Dept. 102, DETROIT, MICH., U. S. A.

DON'T fail to secure the ERKO SLIDE CATALOGUE. It contains new ideas of value to the exhibitor. Slides made to order at reasonable prices. The one illustrated and 100 others at 35c each, postage 5c additional. Machines, carbons, parts and supplies of all kinds." Erker Bros. Optical Co., 604 Olive Street, St. Louis.

The New York Dramatic Mirror

ESTABLISHED 1879

Special Motion Picture section, containing pictures of leading M. P. actors, actresses. and feature films.

Reviews of the latest releases by our own critics, absolutely honest, original and interesting.

Read "Spectator" and our answers to correspondents. Cover page in two colors. A host of helpful suggestions every week.

The Mirror appeals to all branches of the motion picture field—Licensed and Independent. Send for free samply copy.

Published Weekly. Subscription, $4, one year; $2, six months; $1, three months. Add $1.50 to Europe, $1.00 to Canada for postage.

The New York Dramatic Mirror, 145 West 45th St., New York

THE ENTERPRISE (Portable) CALCIUM GAS OUTFIT

Price, with carrying case, $35.00.

Is the only Substitute for Electricity for projecting Motion Picture or Stereopticon Views and is the

ONLY SATISFACTORY PORTABLE OUTFIT

because it operates by WATER PRESSURE, IS CONSTANT, REGULAR AND RELIABLE and has no complicated spring valve to corrode, choke up and otherwise get out of order. Is patented.

"OXONE" in SQUARE CAKES is most satisfactory for the production of oxygen gas.

For Sale by Dealers Everywhere.

Enterprise Optical Mfg. Co. MANUFACTURERS 564-572 W. Randolph Street, CHICAGO, ILL.

STANDARD OF CARBON QUALITY

ELECTRA

PINK •TRADE MARK• LABEL

A Guarantee of Perfect Projection

IMPORTED SOLELY BY

HUGO REISINGER

11 BROADWAY NEW YORK CITY

BIO CARBONS

CHARLES L. KIEWERT CO.

NEW YORK 165 GREENWICH STREET | MILWAUKEE 114 HURON STREET | SAN FRANCISCO 19 SUTTER STREET

AND ALL LIVE FILM EXCHANGES AND SUPPLY DEALERS

I AM

The Leading Motion Picture

Supply Man

of the World

I Equip Theatres Completely

The "Hallberg Electric Economizers" for all circuits, made only by Hallberg, "The Economizer Man," save you the most money on your electric bills and produce the best light possible on your screen.

Cape Charles, Va., July 6, 1912.

MR. J. H. HALLBERG:

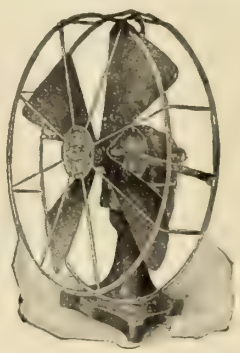
All the goods purchased of you are now here, except the Engine Lighting Outfit, which I understand is on the way. You have given me full count of everything, and regarding the scenery you furnished me, am more than pleased with it.

THOMAS PARSONS.

Any information to help you in your difficulties along the above lines cheerfully furnished.

I am jobber of ALL MAKES of Moving Picture Machines

Through my Exchange Department I am prepared to make liberal allowance for your old machine in part payment on purchase price of new M. P. machine of any make.

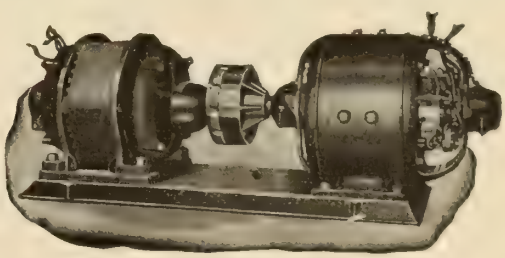


FANS

Ventilating and Exhaust

$7.50 and up

Separate catalogues of different makes of machines, supplies and economizers furnished free upon request, BUT Hallberg's Big Complete Catalogue costs you 25c.



I carry the Largest Complete Stock of

Electra Pink Label Carbons

J. H. HALLBERG

36 E. 23rd St. New York City

MUSICAL BELLS

HAVE PROVEN TO BE THE MOST APPROVED DELIGHT OF THE MOVING PICTURE THEATRE

$40.00 UP

MANUFACTURED EXCLUSIVELY, BY

J. C. Deagan

NEW ADDRESS

BERTEAU AND E. RAVENSWOOD PARK AVES.

CHICAGO

In answering advertisements kindly mention the Moving Picture World.

OPERA CHAIRS

FOR EVERY PURPOSE

1,000 STYLES

ESTABLISHED 1865

WRITE FOR CAT. NO. 31

115-117 So. Wabash Ave., Chicago, Ill.
New York Office, 1165 Broadway.

The A. H. Andrews Co.

Branches in all Leading Cities
Seattle Office, 508-10-12 First Ave., So.
San Francisco Office, 673 Mission St.

Get Our Prices Before You Buy

The Wisconsin Seating Company

New London, Wisconsin, U. S. A.

OPERA CHAIRS

GEO. W. BENNETT

34-36 E. 3rd Street

CINCINNATI, OH

We hand you money 244 COUNT 'EM Features.

All the Best, and more to follow.
Ask for our Classified Lists.
Book them — then ADVERTISE.
Banners, Photos, ones, twos, threes and heralds.
Do it—all the wise ones are!

Feature Film Co. Toledo O.

CHEAP

STEEL FRAME THEATRE CHAIRS

ABSOLUTELY NON-BREAKABLE

Suitable for small Theatres and Moving Picture Shows. We carry these chairs in stock and can ship immediately.

Second Hand Chairs

Also seating for Out-of-door use.

Address Dept. W.

STEEL FURNITURE Co., Grand Rapids, Mich
New York: 150 5th Ave. Pittsburgh: 318 Bissel Blk. Philadelphia: 610 Flanders Bldg. Chicago: 35 S. Dearborn St.

FRENCH-AMERICAN FILM CO.

Room 401, Times Building, NEW YORK

OH! MR. EXHIBITOR!!

Think of the motherless, the fatherless, and the childless homes as the result of theater panics. Protect the lives of your patrons by installing our "ANTI PANIC" THEATER CHAIR. 26 Dead at Cannonsburg, 176 at Boyertown, 575 at Iroquis Theater, Chicago. Make these horrors impossible. Our chair is a friend to the Public.

It advertises your theater and makes your business grow.

It is a space-saver, life-saver, money-saver. Gives 25% more seating.

It will make your theater all aisles. It is the only sanitary chair. It is the world's greatest theater chair, perfected to the highest degree. Write to-day for Circular A.

THE HARDESTY MFG. CO., Canal Dover, Ohio. U.S.A.

Orchestra Music FOR MOVING PICTURES

Violin, Cornet and Drum parts have been added to the popular "Orpheum Collection" of piano music (dramatic and descriptive) for Moving Pictures. Practical for piano alone or any number of above instruments. Issued in two parts: No. 1 and No. 2.

Piano,	58 cents each; both No.'s	$1.15
Violin,	40 cents each; both "	.75c
Cornet,	35 cents each; both "	65c
Drums,	30 cents each; both "	55c

Send for free sample pages.

CLARENCE E. SINN

1501 Sedgwick St., Chicago, Ill.

When Your Picture Machine Needs Repairing

Why don't you send it to us?

We have the best equipped machine shop in the country and can repair any make of machine. Write us and get acquainted.

We buy second hand machines.

GEO. M. HOKE SUPPLY CO., 176 N. State St., Bet. Lake & Randolph Chicago, Ill.

THE BEST FILM SERVICE

We offer you the Cream of the Independent Product and guarantee well balanced programs daily. Our prices are the lowest, consistent with the best service, and our line of Features the most complete of any Exchange in the business. We handle the MUTUAL FILM CORPORATION program exclusively, buy the output of manufacturers represented by this Company, and guarantee our service to be the best money-getter. Write to us for terms.

H. & H. FILM SERVICE CO., R. 363, Monadnock Bldg., Chicago, Ill.

G.MÉLIÈS

"I STOLE THEM"

The String of Beads

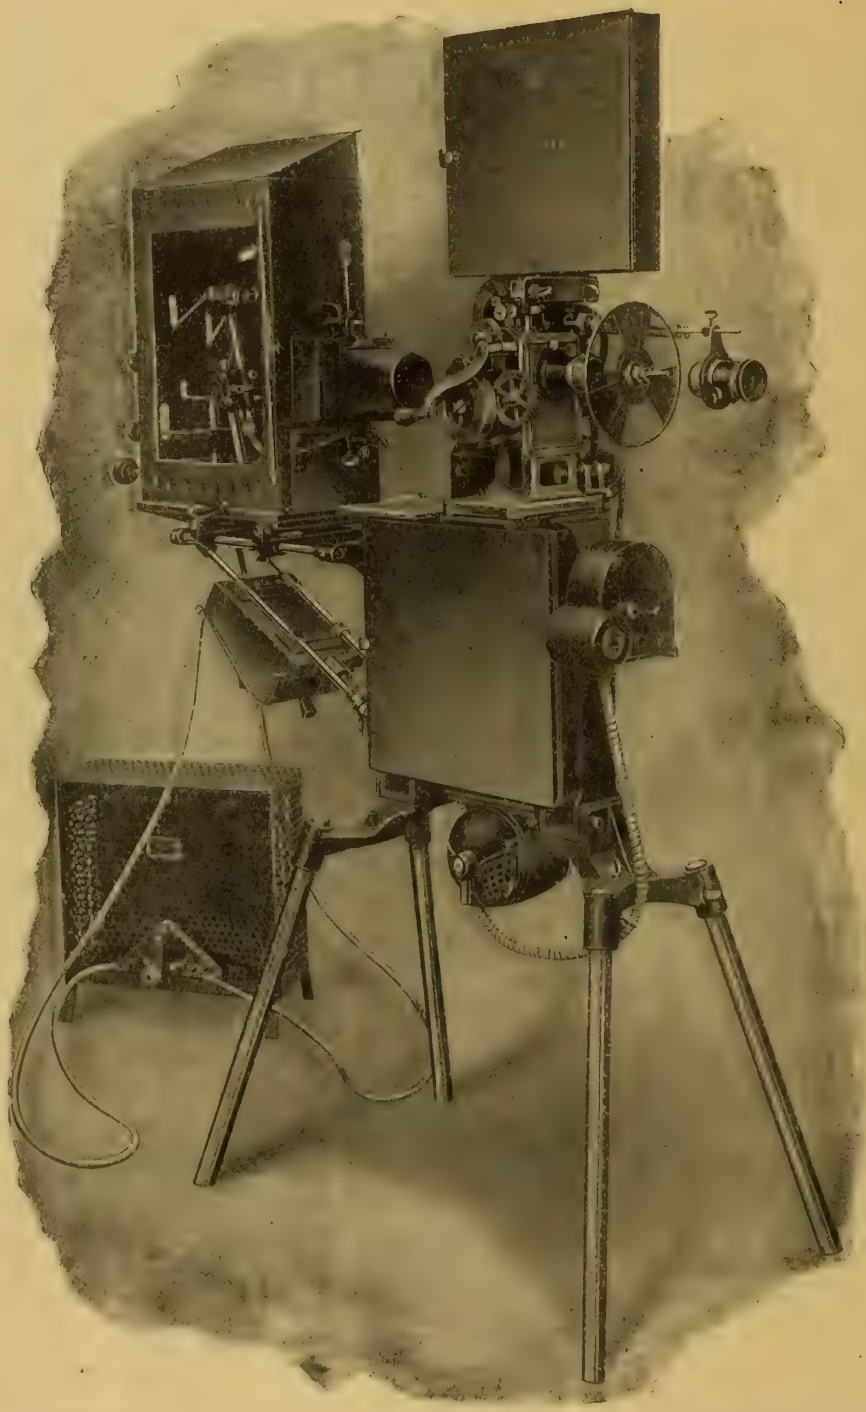
Carl invites a stranger named Tom to play cards, who after losing, stakes a valuable string of beads. Carl recognizes them as a present he had made twenty years before to an old sweetheart and thus learns that Tom is her son and has stolen the family cash box. Carl hearing the pursuers on the trail of the thief hides Tom, and Mary entering, sees the beads. To save her son, Carl pleads guilty, but Tom, hearing his mother's voice, rushes out and confesses, just in time to save Carl from being lynched.

APPROX. 1000 FT.

G. MELIES, 204 EAST 38th St., NEW YORK CITY

7-25-12

POWER'S 6A
WITH MOTOR DRIVE



This, the latest product of POWER'S, is the only moving picture machine for use with motor drive, which has been approved by the National Board of Fire Underwriters; it has also been approved by the Department of Water Supply, Gas and Electricity, of New York City.

Variable speed motor can be furnished for alternating or direct current.

In our new 6A the mechanism and all superior features of our No. 6 are retained; and to them are added:

ARC LAMP

Will carry 100 amp., take carbon ¾″ in diameter, 6″ lower, 12″ upper.

LAMP HOUSE

Larger, more accessible, door each side and better ventilated.

STAND

Made entirely of iron. Lower magazine built in to carry 14″ reel.

AUTOMATIC LOOP SETTER

This patented device, found only in POWER'S, overcomes the annoyance of losing film on lower sprocket. By its means, stopping to reset is eliminated. THE MACHINE RESETS LOWER LOOP AUTOMATICALLY WITHOUT STOPPING.

This not only acts as a safety device (making it unnecessary to open gate and film shields, thereby exposing film) but it also does away with the dark screen and broken picture forever.

These features are found only in Power's 6A, the modern moving picture machine. We are delivering NOW. Write for Catalogue G.

NICHOLAS POWER COMPANY
90 GOLD STREET, NEW YORK CITY

FOR FIFTEEN YEARS THE LEADING MAKERS OF MOVING PICTURE MACHINES

CAREY PRESS, N. Y.

Vol. 13. No. 4 July 27, 1912 Price. 10c.

MOVING PICTURE WORLD

THE FILM INDEX

EXHIBITORS' GUIDE

Scene from "Don Juan and Charles V," a Pathe Feature.

125 East 23rd Street New York—Chicago 169 W. Washington St.

TUESDAY, AUG. 27, "LUCILLE" in two reels

THE THANHOUSER THREE-A-WEEK

TUESDAY, AUG. 27, "LUCILLE" in two reels

2 Kinds of One-Sheets, and a Three-Sheet

AT YOUR EXCHANGE

"LUCILLE"

IN TWO REELS — TUESDAY, AUG. 27

A De Luxe Adaptation of Owen Meredith's Poem

Illustrated Heralds from HENNEGAN & CO. CINCINNATI, OHIO

SETTING THE NEW SUNDAY RELEASES?
THE LATEST:

RELEASED SUNDAY, JULY 28

"COUSINS"

Featuring the "Thanhouser Twins" Again

Another Delightful Comedy Drama In Which These 'Zactly-Alike Kids Perform Admirably. A Hot Weather "Hummer."

RELEASED TUESDAY, JULY 30

Treasure Trove

A New Way of "Salting" a Mine—Filling It With Your Own Gold So It Will Be "Discovered" by the Brother of the Poor Girl You Have Loved and Lost. An Unsuccessful Suitor's Manly Deed.

RELEASED FRIDAY, AUG. 2

A New Cure for Divorce

It's the Film Cure. See a Moving Picture In A Moving Picture. A Fine Novelty for the Heated Spell. It Boosts the Whole Picture Institution.

Thanhouser Co., New Rochelle, N. Y.

Send me FREE July Feature-frame. I am / I am not getting "The Thanhouser News."

Name.....

Address.....

Exchange.....

Coming! "PUT YOURSELF IN HIS PLACE," In 2 Reels

Charles Reade's Great Story

THANHOUSER COMPANY

NEW ROCHELLE, NEW YORK

Film Supply Company, Agents for U. S. and Canada

GETTING 2 2 A WEEK?

FOUR-A-WEEK ESSANAY

A WEEK OF UNUSUALLY ATTRACTIVE FILMS

Gripping Western Drama With G. M. Anderson | Splendid Eastern Drama With Francis X. Bushman | 2 Great Comedies With Essanay's Famous Fun-Makers

Released Tuesday, July 23rd

"The Understudy"

A thoroughly interesting story of stage life as seen from the "inside." A little country girl saves an opening Broadway show from utter ruin by playing the "star" role at a moment's notice. Features one of the greatest "off-stage" scenes ever seen in films. Francis X. Bushman and Beverly Bayne in corking good characterizations!

Released Thursday, July 25th

"Mr. Tibbs' Cinderella"

The laughable quest of a shoe salesman who is always searching for affinities with dainty feet. He finally discovers "Cinderella," pursues her madly aboard the train and dreams of wedding chimes through the night, only to awaken and find she is a toothless and sour-visaged spinster! Poor Tibbs! This is a real comedy gem replete with funniest fun!

Released Friday, July 26th

"Twins"

The week's second joy-release! Hubby is cold and indifferent toward wifie. Wifie impersonates her twin-sister who is coming from the coast, captures hubby's heart and those of his gay friends and leads him on until he begins to hint elopements, etc. Then she reveals her identity and things begin to hum—especially for hubby! Great comedy, this!

Released Saturday, July 27th

"A Moonshiner's Heart"

The "moonshine" region with all its savagery and tradition, is an inexhaustible source of gripping plots. In this story of the hills Mr. G. M. Anderson is again presented in a character role such as only this great pantomimist can portray. Production, interpretation and photography worthy of the highest praise!

COMING SOON! COMING SOON!

ANOTHER ESSANAY FILM TRIUMPH!

"The Fall of Montezuma"

A Tale of Cortez' Conquest of Mexico.

(Three Reels)

3 Sheet Posters

of "A Moonshiner's Heart," in Full 4 Colors, Beautifully Lithographed, 35c Each. Order from Your Exchange or Direct from Morgan Lithograph Co., Cleveland, O.

Have You Gotten Those Great One-Sheet Posters of G. M. Anderson? If Not, Why Not? Lithographed in 4 Sepia-Tones! Get Your Order in Now for Your "Essanay" Souvenir Nights! Splendid Postal Photos of Mr. Anderson and Francis X. Bushman, in Two Poses! The World's Most Popular Photoplay Stars!

GET YOUR NAME ON OUR MAILING LIST!

ESSANAY FILM MANUFACTURING CO.

521 First National Bank Bldg., Chicago, Ill.

BRANCH OFFICES IN LONDON PARIS BERLIN BARCELONA

EXHIBITORS
BEWARE!!

Certain discredited Exchanges are offering "DUPES" of our program in an effort to deceive you.

ARE YOU SHOWING GENUINE FILMS?

A "Dupe" is a copy made from a negative copied from an original. The "Duper" is the form of THIEF who reproduces for a few dollars a miserable imitation of a film which originally cost thousands.

Our Films can be had only from these

EXCLUSIVE AGENTS

UNTIL FURTHER NOTICE

Anti-Trust Film Co......128 West Lake Street, Chicago, Ill.
Film Supply Co. of Oregon.....385 Adler St., Portland, Ore.
Buckeye Lake Shore Film Co.....422 North High St., Columbus, O.
Golden Gate Film Exchange.....Los Angeles, Cal.
Golden Gate Film Exchange..166 Golden Gate Avenue, San Francisco, Cal.
Canadian Film Exchange.....Calgary, Alberta, Canada
Mutual Film Exchange.....Traction Terminal Bldg., Indianapolis, Ind.
Mutual Film Corporation.....32 Boylston Street, Boston, Mass.
Canadian Film Exchange.....32 Queens Street, East Toronto, Canada
Gaumont Company.....4 Queens Street, East Toronto, Ontario, Canada
H. & H. Film Service Company.....98 Jackson Boulevard, Chicago, Ill.
H. & H. Film Service Company.....Des Moines, Iowa
Continental Film Exchange.....902 Filbert Street, Philadelphia, Pa.
Lake Shore Film Exchange.....106 Prospect Avenue, Cleveland, Ohio
Majestic Film Service.....216 North Fifth Avenue, Chicago, Ill.
Superior Film Supply Co.....Toledo, Ohio
Mutual Film Corporation....422 Ninth Street, N. W., Washington, D. C.
Mutual Film Corporation.....81 Marietta Street, Atlanta, Ga.
Mutual Film Corporation....729 Maison Blanche, Bldg., New Orleans, La.
Mutual Film Corporation.....1509½ Main Street, Dallas, Texas
Mutual Film Corporation.....Salt Lake City, Utah
Mutual Film Corporation.....Denver, Colo.
Mutual Film Corporation.....97 Woodward Avenue, Detroit, Mich.
Pittsburgh Photoplay Company.....415 Ferry Street, Pittsburgh, Pa.
Progressive Film Exchange.....1517 Farnam Street, Omaha, Neb.
Swanson Crawford Film Company....723 Century Building, St. Louis, Mo.
Victor Film Service.....39 Church Street, Buffalo, N. Y.
Western Film Exchange.....145 West 45th Street, New York City
Western Film Exchange.....15 West 10th Street, Kansas City, Mo.
Western Film Exchange.....307 Enterprise Building, Milwaukee, Wis.

GET THIS PROGRAM

SUNDAY, Majestic, Thanhouser. MONDAY, American. Comet. TUESDAY, Gaumont, Majestic, Thanhouser. WEDNESDAY, American, Gaumont Weekly, Reliance, Solax. THURSDAY, American, Gaumont. FRIDAY, Lux, Solax, Thanhouser. SATURDAY, Great Northern, Comet, Reliance.

Address

133-135 WEST 44th STREET

NEW YORK

RELEASED FRIDAY, AUGUST 23d

"The EQUINE SPY"

TWO REELS

Featuring that famous horse with $20,000 annual earning capacity and whose owner refused offers of $10,000

THE CRITICS SAY:

Miss M. J. MacDonald, Critic, writes:

This production is in two reels and is full of action, the scene of which is laid principally on the skirmish line. "Don," the wonderful performing horse, does all kinds of human tricks, even going so far as to bring a canteen of water to his master, who has been captured and imprisoned in an old tumble-down building by the Union soldiers. He also lights the bonfire, which attracts the attention of the comrades of his master, when the Confederate officer by whom he is ridden has been pursued and wounded.

The scene is particularly effective with the glaring red of the fire against the shadows of the moonlight. The film must commend itself to all lovers of a good horse, for "Don" is certainly a superb specimen.

Louis Reeves Harrison, Moving Picture World:

One of the finest of his kind is "Don," in the Solax play, "The Equine Spy"—he looks like an Arabian—and he does his part with a modest dignity that should cause matinee idols to sit up and take protracted notice. His supporters are among the finest to be seen in moving pictures, nearly all the principals of the Solax happy family taking part in the horse play.

The play was designed for the splendid horse, and it appears to have been brought into correct lines of construction. The work is satisfactory in all the many details that go to make up a complete photodrama, and the roles are admirably assumed. I know what the Solax Company can do. They work in harmony without losing individual values; work enthusiastically and impress their superior quality and fine organization upon whatever they attempt to interpret.

REGULAR FEATURES

RELEASED WEDNESDAY, JULY 31st

BOTTLES (SPLIT REEL)

A "regular fellow" goes to his club—has a "few" on the boys and then finds his way home—the best he could. Before he reaches his nest he finds a note in his pocket which warns him that his wife is unfaithful. The "regular fellow" raises cain with his wife, and while in the midst of it, "Buttons" comes breathlessly rushing in from the club and tells him "that he by mistake took Jones' coat." Funny, eh? On the same reel is

IMAGINATION

A woman imagines she swallowed her false teeth and is ready to undergo an operation, but her husband saves her.

RELEASED FRIDAY, AUGUST 2nd

BUDDY AND HIS DOG

Buddy is a newsboy. He finds a stray pup and takes care of it—even better than the folks take care of Buddy. When Buddy hears that the dog-catchers are about to shoot dogs without licenses, Buddy takes measures against the police and the dog catchers.

Solax Company

CONGRESS AVENUE
FLUSHING, - N. Y.

3 WESTERN "AMERICANS" EVERY WEEK

A CHEERFUL MESSAGE TO THE INDEPENDENT EXHIBITOR! GOOD "WESTERNS" INVARIABLY "PULL" AT THE BOX-OFFICE—YOU KNOW THAT'S TRUE IF YOU EVER NEGLECTED YOUR WEEKLY ALLOTMENT OF "WESTERNS"—AMERICAN "WESTERNS." REMEMBER—NO PROGRAM OF THREE OR MORE PICTURES IS COMPLETE WITHOUT AN OUT-OF-DOORS WESTERN —AND, THAT BEING THE CASE, SEE THAT YOU GET THE BEST—AND "BEST" IS JUST ANOTHER WAY OF SPELLING "AMERICAN."

"It Pays To Wait"

(Release Monday, July 29, 1912.)

A Smashing, Rollicking Good Western Comedy illustrating that old wag. Natural Situations backed by side-splitting pantomime and superfine photography. A picture, clean, healthy and simply overflowing with good-natured fun.

"The Fight At The Mill"

(Release Wednesday, July 31, 1912.)

A powerful Western, distinctly unusual among typical "Westerns" containing a beautiful story and a dashing Indian battle that will interest and instruct.

"A Life For A Kiss"

(Release Thursday, August 1, 1912.)

A magnificent subject, telling a pretty story. A fighting Western, full of gun-play, fine situations and splendid stretches of California mountains.

"The BATTLE-GROUND"

(Regular Release Monday, August 12.) TWO REELS.

An Emotional Masterpiece—A second "Camille" or "Madam X" for Splendid Dramatic Situations—A two-reel Feature of absorbing beauty, Intertwining Some Powerful Scenes in the Sanctuary of Great Mother Church with the Life of the Gutter in the slum districts of Chicago. Essentially a Problem-Play, dealing with the finest emotions of the Human Heart. Read Synopsis for this wonderful story.

"THE FALL OF BLACKHAWK"

(That Monster TWO-REEL HISTORICAL with Abraham Lincoln, Jefferson Davis, Zachary Taylor, and General Winfield Scott the central characters) is meeting with the Big success we predicted. A few States unsold, offering a splendid opportunity to Live State Rights Buyers.

FILM SUPPLY CO. OF AMERICA

American Film Mfg. Co. FIFTH FLOOR, ASHLAND BLOCK : : CHICAGO

THE BEST FOUR OUT OF FIFTY EUROPEAN FILMS FOR YOU, EVERY WEEK!

THE Universal Company's plans are world-wide in scope. They are not petty, not limited. The Universal object is to give you the best films on God's green footstool, no matter where they are made. We Americans don't possess all the brains and ingenuity in the world. Over in Europe at least fifty fine reels are produced every week. The Universal is now about to complete arrangements whereby the Universal can select the best four out of the fine fifty every week and make them part of the Universal program. The Universal is going to throw open the gates to European film makers, encourage them to bring their very best goods into the American market and give you a program that will set you wild with enthusiasm. If you care to participate in the benefits of this and other Big Things planned by the Universal, the thing to do is

"Demand That Universal Program"

MONDAY - - -	July 22—	Imp.....	Nestor..... Champion.
TUESDAY - - -	July 23—	Gem.....	Bison..... Eclair.
WEDNESDAY	July 24—	Powers.....	Nestor..... Animated Weekly.
THURSDAY - -	July 25—	Rex.....	Imp..... Eclair.
FRIDAY - - - -	July 26—	Victor.....	Powers..... Nestor.
SATURDAY -	July 27—	Bison.....	Imp..... Milano.
SUNDAY - - -	July 28—	Rex.....	Eclair

Universal Film Manufacturing Co. 1 Union Square New York

WEEK OF JULY 22nd

Demand Universal

IMP

"THE TRAITOR'S FATE."
Monday, July 22nd.

A pretty drama staged amid the splendors of California.

A thrilling story in which a man's jealousy gets the best of his better judgment. Her refusal to accept his offer of marriage incites him to a dastardly deed. His former loved one is rescued in the nick of time by her sweetheart.

"THE HEART OF A GYPSY."
Thursday, July 25th.

A child picture. Pathetic, yet not morbid. Founded on a beautiful theme in which the love of the forest and her gypsy sweetheart induce a pretty gypsy maid to refuse the reward of a comfortable home and genteel surroundings for a valiant deed.

"A CASE OF DYNAMITE."
Saturday, July 27th (Split).

A screamingly funny comedy. Not a scene without a laugh-getter. Each situation funnier than the other. A mischievous boy, an unsuspecting farmer and the pandemonium created by an alarming announcement on a valise form the nucleus of this mirth-provoking picture.

"LOVE'S DIARY."
Saturday, July 27th (Split).

This is a treat. A picture that could have been released by itself, but cut down to give you a crackerjack Saturday split. It's a fine comedy-drama. A brilliant story well staged and acted.

MILANO

"THE BLIND MAN'S SACRIFICE."
Two Reels.
Saturday, July 27th.

This is an exceptionally strong dramatic picture. The portrayal of Cav. G. De Liguoro, of Dante "Inferno" fame, of the part of the blind man; and his wonderful intuition, is most masterly. It is one of best releases from the studio that produced the world's most famous photoplays.

CHAMPION

"THE CALL OF THE WEST."
Monday, July 22nd.

A gripping story of the unconventional West with all its freedom of life and generosity of nature that makes a wholesome appeal to all lovers of the unconventional. Sympathetic and appealing.

GEM

"BREAD CAST UPON THE WATERS."
Tuesday, July 23rd.

A big-hearted musician who parts with his most beloved instrument to keep body and soul together. Though in dire distress his heart goes out to a little mite of a street arab. He gives him a home and his kind deed is later rewarded by the boy he had befriended. It's pleasingly pathetic.

VICTOR

"NOT LIKE OTHER GIRLS."
Two Reels.
Friday, July 26th.

An exceptionally clever story with an exceptionally clever company. Florence Lawrence plays the stellar role, assisted by Owen Moore and a very strong supporting organization. The story was especially written for Florence Lawrence, and gives her every opportunity of portraying her versatility. It's one of those lovable themes, dealing with the embezzlement of a ward's money, the retribution which followed, the sympathy of a frivilous seminary girl, and the spirit she showed when she knew that her money had been squandered.

REX

"THE HAND OF MYSTERY."
Thursday, July 25th.

An ingeniously clever picture in which a member of high society is accused of theft and the novel method employed to catch the culprit. It's an entirely new sort of thriller, splendidly produced.

"THROUGH MEMORY BLANK."
Sunday, July 28th.

A pretty tale of a righteous country maid and a brutal husband. A picture strong in it's moral, pathetic in the struggle to lead the husband to lead a Christian life, his brutality and the love created anew when her memory was a blank.

UNIVERSAL FILM MFG. CO., 1 Union Square, NEW YORK CITY

That Program

WEEK OF JULY 22nd

ECLAIR

"THE GOVERNOR'S DAUGHTER."
Tuesday, July 23rd.

Just at this time when the air is filled with politics this picture will make a big hit. It's a gripping story of how a clever young fellow routed a band of grafting politicians; and the best part of it all is that the love theme, so essential, has not been forgotten. It has been entwined just where it will prove most effective, most thrilling.

"THE DOUBLE CROSS."
Thursday, July 25th.

An entirely new style of comedy. Prettily produced and excellently acted. None of the hackneyed laugh-getters in this, but a real mirth-provoker. Just enough serio-comedy injected to make it an exceptionally striking release.

"THE LADY BARRISTER."
Sunday, July 28th (Split).

In which a jealous lawyer places his loved one, who is also an attorney, in an exceedingly ludicrous predicament. After explanations have been made he realizes his foolhardiness and finally secures her forgiveness.

"LIFE IN A BULGARIAN VILLAGE."
Sunday, July 28th (Split).

Types and customs of Bulgarian peasants, their simple vocations and their farm life, with close views of their festivals and recreations.

NESTOR

"THE RANCHMAN'S REMEDY."
Monday, July 22nd.

If there ever was a Western comedy that could hand you a laugh, and a big one at that, this is the one. Funny, why it's so funny that you'll simply scream with delight. One of those rip, roaring and racing Westerners chock full of mirth provoking situations.

"THE LITTLE MOONSHINER."
Wednesday, July 24th.

A romance of the South in which is entwined love, hatred and jealousy. Not a scene without a "punch" in it. It tells of the treachery of a rejected suitor for the hand of a pretty mountain lass, and his just punishment. Staged with the real Southern atmosphere and brilliantly produced.

"YOUNG WILD WEST'S PRAIRIE PURSUIT."
Friday, July 26th.

Another one of those hair-raising adventures of this dare-devil hero. Race after race occurs throughout the picture. Not a dull moment from start to finish. The calm and deliberate daring of this brilliant horseman is most thrillingly portrayed in this picture.

BISON

"THE LITTLE RANCHER."
Tuesday, July 23rd.

A Western Comedy-Drama with a moral. Drink with its aftermath, its ruinous effects, not so much on the drunkard as upon his family affords a gripping, thrilling theme upon which the picture is based. The human wreck, disowned by his family, shunned by his friends, though a derelict, is saved from death, at the hands of irate cowboys, by his son.

"THE WHITE SAVIOR."
Saturday, July 27th.

A picture of Indian life, in which a child's influence does much to bring about peace and happiness. It is taken amidst picturesque surroundings and most admirably acted.

POWERS

"BABY SHERLOCK."
Wednesday, July 24th (Split).

A child cleverly secures the restoration of a sum of money that has been stolen. The story is most charmingly interpreted amid beautiful rural surroundings. Just the kind of a release that will please the "kiddies."

"THE AMERICAN OLYMPIC VICTORS."
Wednesday, July 24th (Split).

A REEL SCOOP! Just when all America is talking about the boys who hoisted the red, white and blue more often than the ensign of any other nation of the world comes a release showing those very boys, in the very feats that they won glory and honor for their country. It's a big money-maker. Go after it strong. Every loyal American will want to see it.

"HIS MADONNA."
Friday, July 26th.

An artist disappointed in love paints a wonderful picture of a madonna and child. The girl he has loved and lost contracts an unhappy marriage and in despair wanders into the church where the picture hangs. In the portrait of the madonna she recognizes herself, and so by that means traces her artist lover and is happily reunited to him.

UNIVERSAL FILM MFG. CO., 1 Union Square, NEW YORK CITY

The Universal's 2-Reel Features Are the Best Money-Makers You Ever Exhibited!

Absolutely nothing is being left undone to give you a complete program. Not only do we intend to give you SIX SPLIT REELS EVERY WEEK (at a terrific additional cost) but we are lavishing money on our 2,000-feet features. The best talent in the business is now at work on Universal feature films. Demand that Universal program morning, noon and night. It's the strongest in the world!

Two Reels "The Battle of Two Palms" Two Reels

Milano Release Saturday, Aug. 3rd

IT'S AWE INSPIRING! GIGANTIC! WONDERFUL!

Not a story built around the Italian-Turkish war, but

A Picture of the War. Taken on the Firing Line

Showing the actual hostilities between the Italian and Turkish armies, from the first appearance of the enemy in front of the Italian Position to their final rout.

2,000 Turks and Arabs were killed and wounded at the Battle of Two Palms.

It's a Real State Rights Proposition as a Regular Universal Release

IT'S HERE! IT'S HERE! IT'S HERE!

Two Reels In Old Tennessee! Two Reels

Released Aug. 15th

That wonderful two-reel Imp. Every scene Gripping, Thrilling, Sparkling.

King Baggot Supported by an Admirable Company

Go after it now! It's the best Imp you ever booked.

COMING! COMING!

Robin Hood

A MASTERPIECE OF THE ECLAIR STUDIO

Nothing More Gorgeous or Spectacular Ever Conceived

Watch for the Release Date

Universal Film Manufacturing Co.

1 Union Square
New York

Look At It from Any Angle

What we say is within reason—ten of them—because the page is too short for the thousand that suggest themselves!

1. SARAH BERNHARDT has never in all her phenomenal career, achieved, and will never again equal or approach, the triumph she has attained in her latest and perhaps last Photo Pantomime.

"QUEEN ELIZABETH"

2. Without SARAH BERNHARDT the pathetic story of Queen Elizabeth's fatal, futile love would have been a sensational masterpiece.

3. WITH SARAH BERNHARDT it is an immortal epic of human frailty and futility.

4. The photographic perfection of the production makes the three reels that comprise it a series of moving paintings.

5. The English Government surrendered priceless documents, the original notes and orders of Queen Elizabeth, including the death warrant of Lord Essex, in signing which she signed her own, from the British Museum to provide the last convincing detail in a thrillingly realistic production, and the dresses, armor, furniture and buildings are faithful reproductions the originals of the Elizabethan period.

6. The enormous cost of production is too apparent to be mentioned.

7. The germ of genius and the throb and sob of humanity thrill throughout the film.

8. Artistically tinted and toned, the production can veritably and meritably be called a half mile of Rembrandt.

9. We have underestimated, rather than exaggerated, the importance and value of the production.

10. (All the reason in the world by itself.) Your state wants to see Bernhardt in her immortal portrayal of the passion and pathos of Queen Elizabeth. Now be sincere to yourself and form your own

CONCLUSION:

The memory of the Master Photoplay, "Queen Elizabeth," will live as long as the name of the original and the fame of her great interpreter, Sarah Bernhardt. To be less modest and more accurate, it will exert a great influence in perpetuating her fame and immortalizing her art.

State-Right Buyers will realize it and on it! The Attorney-General of the United States Assures Protection to State-Right Buyers!

DON'T FORGET YOURSELF—WIRE!

Our seven-colored lithographs and booklets are equivalent to S. R. O.

Famous Players Film Company

Times Building Broadway and 42d Street New York City

A. ZUKER, President DANIEL FROHMAN, Managing Director.

LUX FILMS

The Acme of Excellence

Released Friday, June 26, 1912

Mr. X and the Unfortunate Heiress

MELODRAMA---LENGTH 967 FEET

A SYMPATHETIC STORY WHICH PROVES THAT GOOD WILL ALWAYS TRIUMPH OVER EVIL

R. PRIEUR, 10 EAST 15th STREET NEW YORK CITY

Telephone 3427 Stuyvesant

SOLD ONLY THROUGH FILM SUPPLY COMPANY OF AMERICA

FILM SUPPLY CO. OF AMERICA

GREAT NORTHERN

GREAT NORTHERN FILMS CO. COPENHAGEN

Release for Saturday, July 20th

ALMOST A TRAGEDY

A Comedy-Drama; length, 666 feet. On the same reel:

UNCLE REUBEN GOES TO TOWN

Comedy; Length, 332 feet.

Release for Saturday, July 27th.

DON'T GO ON A SPREE

Hilarious full-reel comedy, depicting the result of "a night out." A genuine mirth-provoking production that is sure to prove a winner.

Release for Saturday, August 3rd

THE KING'S POWER

A beautiful and refined drama in two reels. Book this attractive headliner now.

NOTICE

Do not fail to procure our latest advertising novelty, The Multi-Photograph for this feature. The best and most attractive lobby display ever put out. Consists of a selection of photo enlargements printed on bromide gloss-finished paper; size, 16" x 20". Any quantity obtainable at 35 cents each, prepaid. See reproduction which appears elsewhere in this publication.

SOLD ONLY THROUGH FILM SUPPLY CO., OF AMERICA

GREAT NORTHERN FILM CO., 7 E. 14th St., N. Y.

NORDISK FILM CO. OF COPENHAGEN.)

FILM SUPPLY CO. OF AMERICA

KLEINE

CINES FEATURE RELEASE FOR JULY 30, 1912

THE INVENTOR'S SECRET

A powerful and thrilling drama of International Intrigue.

A naval officer invents a new explosive which money cannot buy. He falls an easy victim to the wiles of a fascinating vampire, who betrays him and wins the secret.

The climax of the film is a hair-raising scene in which he puts his explosive to practical use, and, besides sacrificing himself, wreaks a terrible vengeance upon the woman who mocked his love.

(An 1100 Ft. Feature)

ASK YOUR EXCHANGE FOR THE SPECIAL 3-SHEET POSTERS!

ECLIPSE RELEASE, July 31, 1912

The Trials of a Playwright

A mirth-provoking comedy-drama, telling of a playwright who has great difficulty with his mother-in-law. Book it, and give your patrons a good laugh.

CINES RELEASE, August 3, 1912

Law and the Man

An absorbing story of love and duty. A sheriff spares the life of a daring brigand to save his child. It will appeal to every one.

ADVANCE SYNOPSES FREE. WRITE TO

GEORGE KLEINE

166 North State Street, CHICAGO

LICENSED BY MOTION PICTURE PATENTS CO.

LUBIN FILMS

RELEASED WEDNESDAY, JULY 24th, 1912
LENGTH 436 FEET

A Visit to Lively Town

The awful experience of Si Barbour and Seth Jones, who take a day off to visit Lively Town. They get into many troubles and finally escape and hasten back to the Farm.

RELEASED WEDNESDAY, JULY 24th, 1912
LENGTH 599 FEET

THE TALKER

The horrible work of a veritable talking machine, Sarah Tripamer talks people to death. Milkmen, policemen, a blind man, a German band and all classes of inoffensive humanity collapse before her awful clatter. Finally she dislocates her jaw and then learns the mute sign language and is still talking with her fingers.

RELEASED THURSDAY, JULY 25th, 1912
LENGTH 1062 FEET

The Shepherd's Flute

Allan Steele, a mountain shepherd, all day plays on the flute, and improvises some weirdly beautiful romances. Ruth Winton, a society girl, is attracted by the music and, becoming acquainted, the boy and girl fall in love. Ruth is removed to the big city, and by her mother betrothed to an Earl. The boy goes in search of his sweetheart and is discovered by an impressario, who takes him to a society function. Ruth is there and, hearing a familiar air, rushes to the salon and throws herself into her lover's arms.

RELEASED FRIDAY, JULY 26th, 1912
LENGTH 1053 FEET

HIS VACATION

Bobby Burns gets an invitation to join a bunch of friends at Atlantic City. He tells his boss that his mother has met with an accident and gets a day off. The employer, however, gets wise and follows Bob, intending to fire him. On the beach he meets a lady who happens to be the chaperon of the girls of the party and, indulging in a flirtation, forgets all about Bob and his errand.

RELEASED SATURDAY, JULY 27th, 1912
LENGTH 1062 FEET

The Divine Solution

Jaunita was a happy little maid until she married Pedro Carillo; she had loved Manuel Garcia, but he was called away to carry arms for his country and Jaunita thought he did not care for her. Carillo turned out to be a drunkard, and all the little wife's treasures went for whiskey. One day Garcia returned and in an altercation with Pedro was wounded. The drunkard then tried to steal the golden challace from the church, but fell dead on the altar steps. Garcia offered his love to Jaunita and once more she was happy.

RELEASED MONDAY, JULY 29th, 1912

LENGTH 765 FEET

PUEBLO INDIANS, Albuquerque, N. M.

One of the most interesting educational pictures ever taken in the semi-Mexican atmosphere of this country. The Indians, being educated at the Government Schools, show great advancement in civilization.

LENGTH 293 FEET

A FARMER'S SON

A little burlesque on an old adage, in which is shown a youth, son of old farmer Simpkins, who, tired of farm work, is anxious to try his fortune in the big city. Dada one day finds Silas asleep at the stable door and orders him to get to work. The boy declares his intention to quit the Farm. All hands bid him good-bye and the old farmer "makes hay while the son shines."

EXTREMELY BEAUTIFUL ONE and THREE SHEET POSTERS of our PHOTO-PLAYS, printed in FIVE COLORS, can be obtained from the A. B. C. COMPANY, CLEVELAND, OHIO. These handsome bills will offer a GREAT ADVANTAGE to your Theatre.

LUBIN MANUFACTURING COMPANY,

Chicago: 154 West Lake St. B. Nichols, 86 Wardour St., London, W., England.

MODEL NEW STUDIOS,
20th and Indiana Avenues,
Philadelphia, Pa.
Berlin, 35 Friedrich Str.

VITAGRAPH
LIFE PORTRAYALS

"WANTED—A SISTER" Monday, July 22nd

VERY DESIRABLE. A young fellow does the Sister act for his chum. They both get in trouble and have to help each other out. Something doing all the time.

"THE ADVENTURES OF THE THUMB PRINT"
Detective Chase Tuesday, July 23rd

A REGULAR NABBER. After a terrible struggle on top of a fast moving freight car, he makes the thief surrender. The action is exciting throughout.

"MARTHA'S REBELLION" Wednesday, July 24th

FULL OF SNAP AND SPUNK. A grouchy old brother bullyrags his sister. Martha comes right back at him and brings him to terms.

"THE BARRIER THAT WAS BURNED" Friday, July 26th

AMID THE SNOWS OF THE FAR NORTH. Rex Beach, the great writer, furnishes a thrilling plot for this drama, of life among the settlers of the Canadian Northwest.

"THE LIGHT OF ST. BERNARD" Saturday, July 27th

FAR OUT UPON THE WATERS it throws its great ray. The villainous wreckers are foiled in their desperate plot. A noble girl, who is keeper of the light is faithful to her trust and stands bravely at her post.

NEXT WEEK NEXT WEEK

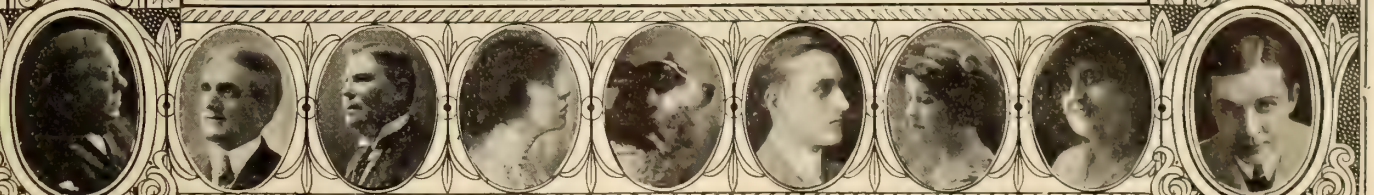
"THE MIRACLE."—In ancient Bagdad. MONDAY, JULY 29th.
"A JUVENILE LOVE AFFAIR."—Childhood Days. TUESDAY, JULY 30th.
"THE ADVENTURE OF A RETIRED ARMY COLONEL." —Detective Chase. WEDNESDAY, JULY 31st.
"THE AWAKENING OF JONES."—Gay and sporty. FRIDAY, AUGUST 2nd.
"THE FATHERHOOD OF BUCK McGEE."—Diamond in the Rough. SATURDAY, AUGUST 3rd.

Special Vitagraph Feature Film
IN THREE REELS
"The Money Kings"
Released through the General Film Company, Monday, July 15th, 1912



THE EDISON KINETOSCOPE

An Unsurpassed Moving Picture Machine from Every Point of View

There's a whole lot of money for live wires in the moving picture business, but you can't get it and KEEP it with a cheap machine.

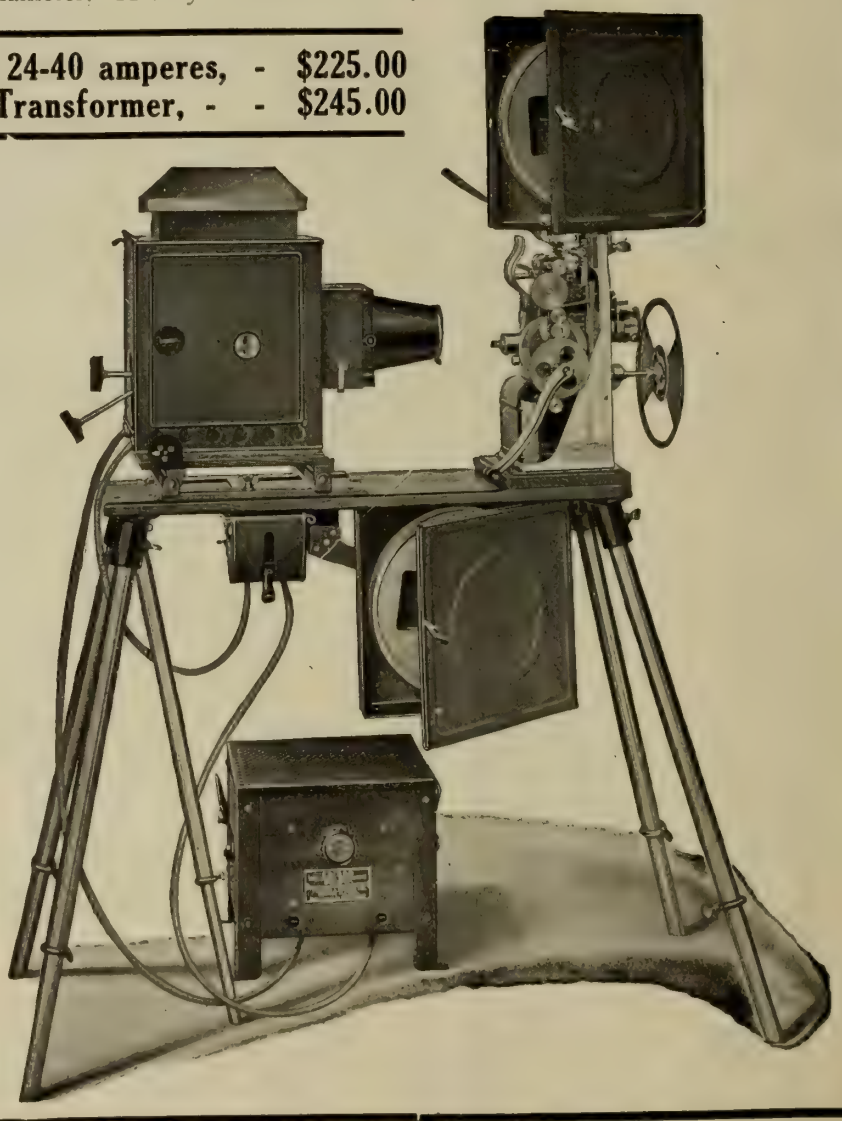
Start with the machine that builds up the biggest patronage and HOLDS it. The machine that Thomas A. Edison invented and stayed with and brought to its present state of perfection; the one that projects the clearest, steadiest pictures, is easiest to operate, eliminates fire risk, doesn't wear the films, and is built to stand the steady grind—The Edison Kinetoscope. Write to-day for Catalog 500, and copy of the Edison Kinetogram.

SPECIAL FEATURES OF EDISON UNDERWRITERS' TYPE "B"

The only machine with hardened steel shafts running in hardened bearings throughout.

Adjustable Outside Revolving Shutter, Chain Take-Up, Extra Large House with square condenser holder, Double Magazine Rollers, Heavy Brass Terminals on connecting cords, set of Heavy Extension Legs four of which are 1¼ inches in diameter. A very substantial stand.

Price, with Rheostat, 110 volt, 24-40 amperes, - $225.00
Price, with 110 volt, 60 Cycle Transformer, - - $245.00



Current Edison Films

July 26—"The Escape from Bondage," by Bannister Merwin. Being the first story of "What Happened to Mary," produced in collaboration with "The Ladies' World." (This story appears in the August number.) 1,000 feet. Dramatic.

" 27—"The Relief of Lucknow." (The Indian Mutiny, 1857.) 1,000 feet. Historical-Drama.

" 30—"More Precious Than Gold." 1,000 feet. Dramatic.

" 31—"When She Was About Sixteen," by James Whitcomb Riley. 1,000 feet. Comedy.

Aug. 2—"The Lord and the Peasant," by Emmett Campbell Hall. 1,000 feet. Dramatic.

" 3—"Ninth International Red Cross Conference, Washington, D. C., May 7th to 16th, 1912." 700 feet. Descriptive.
"Mary Had a Little Lamb," illustrating the famous poem. 300 feet. Comedy.

" 6—"In His Father's Steps," by Bannister Merwin. 1,000 feet. Dramatic.

" 7—"Marjorie's Diamond Ring." 1,000 feet. Comedy.

" 9—"The Librarian," by Bannister Merwin. 980 feet. Dramatic.

" 10—"The City of Washington, the Capital of the United States." 960 feet. Scenic.

" 13—"A Dangerous Lesson," by B. C. Franders. 1,000 feet. Dramatic.

" 14—"Holding The Fort," by Bannister Merwin. 1,000 feet. Comedy.

" 16—"The Harbinger of Peace," by Robert Brower. 1,000 feet. Dramatic.

Thomas A. Edison
INCORPORATED

239 Lakeside Ave., Orange, N. J.

The Leading Motion Picture Producer of the World

SELIG SELIG SELIG SELIG

FOLLOW THE FLAG

July 29th

The Three Valises

A decidedly unique and dramatic story of mistaken identity and dual personalities—original in plot and clearly acted. The photography is excellent and abounds in double exposures. A good feature.

About 1000 Feet

July 30th

The Peculiar Nature of The White Man's Burden

A thrilling story of the days when whiskey was not allowed in the Northwest Territory. "Bootleggers" and members of the R. N. N. M. P. match their wits against one another in dramatic form.

About 1000 Feet

COMING ON THE WAY! COMING

"THE COUNT of MONTE CRISTO" IN THREE REELS.

Greatest of all Selig Spectacular Melodramatic Productions.

"KINGS of the FOREST"

IN TWO REELS.

Selig's Greatest Wild Animal Masterpiece.

August 1st

Officer Murray

The thrilling story of how a policeman lost and rewon his star. One of the most thrilling feats ever photographed occurs in this picture. From the roof of a blazing building officer Murray is rescued with the aid of a steel workers' derrick. About 1,000 ft. A Great Feature.

August 2nd

The Wreck of the Vega

A dramatic educational subject showing how big wrecks are salvaged. See the divers, clammers, etc., and the great scene in which the huge ore boat is blown to atoms.

ON THE SAME REEL WITH

The Right Way and The Wrong Way

An out-of-the-ordinary educational subject showing the right and wrong way of alighting from cars, extinguishing fires, etc. Combined length about 1,000 feet.

TRADE S MARK

Selig Polyscope Co. Chicago U.S.A.

EUROPEAN OFFICES

LONDON — BERLIN — ST PETERSBURG.

KALEM

The Mine Swindler

A story of the Real West

Released Monday, August 5th

Freed From Suspicion

A Photoplay containing many novel situations

Released Wednesday, August 7th

The Wandering Musician

This story will make the heart throb. A business getter for the exhibitor

Released Friday, August 9th

Photos of Principal Kalem Players
$1.50 per dozen

KALEM COMPANY
INCORPORATED
NEW YORK, 235-239 W. 23rd St.
86 Wardour St., LONDON, W.
BERLIN, 35 Friedrich Str.
PARIS, 13 Rue du Faubourg Montmartre

MOVING PICTURE WORLD

J. P. Chalmers, Founder.

Published by
CHALMERS PUBLISHING COMPANY,
J. P. CHALMERS, SR., PRES.; E. J. CHALMERS, SEC. AND TREAS.; JOHN WYLIE, VICE-PRES. AND GEN. MANAGER.
The office of the company is the address of the officers.

Telephone call, 1343-1344 Gramercy
125 E. 23rd Street (Beach Building), NEW YORK

Entered at the General Post Office in New York City as Second Class Matter.

SUBSCRIPTION RATES: $3.00 per year. Post free in the United States, Mexico, Hawaii, Porto Rico and the Philippine Islands. Canada, $3.50. Foreign Countries, $4.00, Post Paid.

WESTERN OFFICE: 169 W. Washington St. (Post Bldg.), Chicago, Ill. Phone, Main 3145. Automatic Phone 32732.

DISPLAY ADVERTISING RATES ON APPLICATION.

CLASSIFIED ADVERTISEMENTS (No Display), Three Cents per Word; Minimum Charge, 50c.

Address all correspondence "Moving Picture World, P. O. Box 226, Madison Square, New York," and not to individuals.

Vol. 13 JULY 27, 1912 No. 4

INDEX TO CONTENTS.

ADVERTISING FOR EXHIBITORS....338

BEAU BRUMMEL (Vitagraph), by Louis Reeves Harrison....332
BIG MAN OF FLICKER ALLEY....326

CALENDAR OF INDEPENDENT RELEASES...362
CALL TO NEW YORK EXHIBITORS....325
COMMENTS ON THE FILMS (Licensed)....343
COMMENTS ON THE FILMS (Independent)....344
CORRESPONDENCE....358

DOINGS IN LOS ANGELES....335
DON JUAN AND CHARLES V. (Pathe), by Louis Reeves Harrison....330

ENTHUSIASTIC NEW YORK MEETING....326

FACTS AND COMMENTS....320

"FLYING A" AT SANTA BARBARA....334

INDEPENDENT FILM STORIES....376
INDEPENDENT RELEASE DATES....362
INDIANAPOLIS....359
INQUIRIES....342
IN THE MISSISSIPPI VALLEY....359

LICENSED FILM STORIES....366
LICENSED RELEASE DATES....361
LOUISVILLE....359

MANUFACTURERS' ADVANCE NOTES....350
MICHIGAN EXHIBITORS' CONVENTION....323
"MILLER OF BURGUNDY, THE" (Selig)....336
MOTION PICTURE EXHIBITORS' LEAGUE..323
MOVING PICTURE EDUCATOR....327

NEW ENGLAND....358
NEW JERSEY EXHIBITORS' SECOND STATE SESSION....325

OBSERVATIONS BY MAN ABOUT TOWN....328
OLD FACES IN A NEW FILM....337

PHILADELPHIA....360
PHOTODRAMA AND THE CHILD, by Louis Reeves Harrison....322
PHOTOPLAYWRIGHT, THE....340
PROJECTION DEPARTMENT....346

SAN FRANCISCO....358
SONG SLIDE RELEASES....363
STORIES OF THE FILMS (Licensed)....366
STORIES OF THE FILMS (Independent)....376

TOLEDO CONVENTION....323

INDEX TO ADVERTISERS.

CARBON IMPORTERS.
FRORUP, L. E....396
KIEWERT, CHAS. L....397
REISINGER, HUGO....397

ELECTRICAL AND MECHANICAL EQUIPMENT.
BENDER, GEO....360
CHICAGO M. P. SUPPLY CO....360
ENTERPRISE OPTICAL CO....385
FOOS GAS ENGINE CO....391
FORT WAYNE ELECTRICAL CO....385
HALLBERG, J. H....397
LAVEZZI MACHINE WORKS....380
PICTURE THEATER EQUIPMENT CO....395-373
SCHNEIDER, E....374

FILM IMPORTERS AND DEALERS.
INTERNATIONAL FILM TRADERS....393
MASKO FILM CO....385
WESTERN FILM BROKERS....374

FIREPROOF APPARATUS.
TRAINER, C. W....380

FILM EXCHANGES.
ACME FILM CO....398
BRADENBURG, GEO....389
BUCKEYE LAKE SHORE FILM CO....396
CALIFORNIA FILM EXCHANGE....394
CALEHUFF, CHAS....360
GREENE, W. E....394
HETZ, L....360
LAEMMLE FILM SERVICE....389
LIBERTY FILM RENTING CO....395
UNIVERSAL FILM EXCHANGE....357

FILM MANUFACTURERS.
CRYSTAL FILM CO....381
N. Y. MOTION PICTURE CO....371

INDEPENDENT FILM MANUFACTURERS. (Film Supply Co.)
AMERICAN....306
ECLAIR FILM CO....383
FILM SUPPLY CO. OF AMERICA....304
GAUMONT....373
GREAT NORTHERN....312
LUX....312
SOLAX....305
THANHOUSER....302

INDEPENDENT FILM MANUFACTURERS. (Universal).
UNIVERSAL FILM CO....307-8-9-10

LICENSED FILM MANUFACTURERS.
EDISON....316
ESSANAY....303
KALEM....318-375
KLEINE....313
LUBIN....314
MELIES....399
PATHE FRERES....386-387
PATHE WEEKLY....374
SELIG....317
VITAGRAPH....315

MISCELLANEOUS.
A. B. C. CO....393
AMERICAN SONG SLIDE & POSTER CO....390
AMUSEMENT SUPPLY CO....385
ARGUS WEEKLY....357
BARTON, DAN....396
BRADY, A....382
BRUNSWIG BROS....374
BOUND VOLUME....396
CLASSIFIED ADVERTISEMENTS....384
CORCORAN, A. J....393
EASTMAN KODAK CO....394
EXHIBITORS' ADVERTISING CO....380
EXHIBITORS' ADV. & SPECIALTY CO....361
FEDERAL FEATURE FILM SUPPLY CO....374
HARBACH & CO....380
HENNEGAN & CO....374
HOKE, GEO. M....398
KEYSTONE TICKET CO....374
McKENNA BROS. BRASS CO....385
NATIONAL TICKET CO....388
NATIONAL X-RAY REFLECTOR CO....395
NEWMAN MFG. CO....385
PARISIAN MFG. & FILM RENOVATING CO..360
PHOTOPLAY ADVERTISING & SPEC. CO...384
PITTSBURG M. P. SUPPLY CO....380
POWER OF DESTRUCTION....379
RAW FILM SUPPLY CO....395
SARGENT, E. W....389
STREET, E. R....395
TECHNIQUE OF THE PHOTOPLAY....395
THOMAS, A. G....360
THREE IN ONE OIL CO....383
VISCO MOTOR OIL CO....389
WHYTE WHITMAN CO....395
WILLIAMS, J. D....385

LENS MANUFACTURERS.
GUNDLACH-MANHATTAN CO....384

LECTURERS.
ADAMS, G. M....361
MOVING PICTURE WORLD....393

MOVING PICTURE MACHINE MANUFACTURERS.
AMERICAN....396
EDISON....316
MOTIOGRAPH....392
POWER'S CAMERAGRAPH....400
SIMPLEX....359

MUSICAL INSTRUMENTS.
DEAGAN, J. C....398
SINN, C. E....391
WURLITZER, RUDOLPH....383

OPERA CHAIR MANUFACTURERS.
AMERICAN SEATING CO....398
ANDREWS, A. H....398
BENNETT, GEO....398
HARDESTY CHAIR CO....398
STAFFORD, E. H....398
STEEL FURNITURE CO....398
WISCONSIN LUMBER CO....398

PROJECTION SCREENS.
AMERICAN THEATER CURTAIN CO....394
MIRROROIDE CO....392
MOTION PICTURE SCREEN CO....392

SONG AND ADVERTISING SLIDE MFRS.
RATTERSHALL & OLESON....363
CLAPHAM, A. J....382
LEVI CO., INC....363
SCOTT & VAN ALTENA CO....363
SIMPSON, A. L....382
UTILITY TRANSPARENCY CO....363

FEATURE FILMS (Released by).
AMERICA'S FEATURE FILM CO....380
AVIATION FILM SALES CO....381
CROWN FEATURE FILM CO....381
ELLAYE MOTION PICTURE CO....369
FAMOUS PLAYERS FILM CO....311
FEATURE & EDUCATIONAL FILM CO....380
FEATURE FILM CO (New Orleans)....398
FEATURE FILM CO. (Toledo)....398
FEATURE PHOTOPLAY CO....379
FRENCH-AMERICAN FILM CO....382
GARDEN OF ALLAH CO....367
GENERAL FILM PUB. & SALES CO....395
IMPERIAL FEATURE FILM CO....396
INTERNATIONAL FILM TRADERS....393
KNICKERBOCKER FILM CO....396
MASKO FILM CO....377
NEW YORK FILM CO....360
NORTHERN FEATURE FILM CO....380
QUAKER CITY FEATURE FILM CO....362
ROYAL FEATURE FILM CO....381
SPECIAL EVENT FILM CO....380
STAR FEATURE FILM CO....396
SUPERIOR FEATURE FILM CO....391
TOURNAMENT FILM CO....380
UNIVERSAL FEATURES....379-391
WALKER, A....374
WARNER'S FEATURE FILM CO....384-385
WORLD'S MOVING PICTURE CLASSICS....393

THEATRICAL ARCHITECTS.
CRANE, C. H....380
DECORATORS' SUPPLY CO....385

Facts and Comments

WE HAVE received complaints from several exhibitors concerning an effort by a well-known and reputable manufacturer to promote the sale of a publication called the Wild West Weekly by means of dramatizing its stories on the moving picture screen. It seems to be an arrangement between the publication mentioned and the film maker. The paper, which is decorated in screeching colors, announces that "this story has been dramatized and can be seen in such and such a moving picture house." An announcement on the film proclaims the fact, that the original of the story may be had at the box office for the moderate price of five cents. Some years ago such an arrangement would have been considered as little less than treason to the motion picture by the real friends of cinematography, and, while it is bad even now, it need not excite more than our hearty but good-natured contempt. We think the exhibitors and the public will laugh it out of existence. Our powers of description fail utterly in any attempt to do justice to the blood-curdling scene depicted on the front cover of the Wild West Weekly, but we produce with due admiration the text, which adorns the first page. Here it is:

> The enraged greaser seized the flag and attempted to tear it down. "Stop that!" cried Arietta, springing from the doorway. "Leave the sneaking coyote to me, Et!" Young Wild West exclaimed.

Frankly speaking, we agree very much with one of our correspondents, who says: "Films of this kind are merely putting weapons in the hands of our adversaries." We cannot resist the temptation to quote this extract from the pertinent and well-written letter or another reader and friend: "If the Board of Censors passes such a film, then I think it is the duty of every mayor and of the police to prohibit the exhibition of such films as the laws in some states do not allow the books to be sold to anyone under the age of sixteen. Why should we, as exhibitors, be asked to show such films to our patrons?" We cannot understand why manufacturers will affront their own best patrons in this way. In view of much good work turned out by the offending company in the past we are inclined to regard this step as an error of judgment, induced perhaps by the recent hot wave. There is positively not an inch of room in modern cinematography for any films of this sort. We earnestly hope they will be stopped, and in the interest of the manufacturer not less than in the interest of the exhibitors.

* * *

WHEN the first national convention of organized exhibitors met at Cleveland just about a year ago, The Moving Picture World in commenting upon the importance of the event, stated its belief and hope, that the "time had come, when the voice of the exhibitor must be heard and heeded in the councils of the industry." Since then the persevering and intelligent efforts of capable organizers, aided to the utmost of its power by The Moving Picture World, have amply justified our belief and hope. For years the exhibitors have been the mere hewers of wood and drawers of water. They stood on the firing line, bearing the heat and burden of the day, gathering in the coins that made the wheels go round. When it came to being represented in the cinematographic parliament they were practically without a voice. "We are taxed but not represented," ran the just complaint and grievance of the exhibitor. That the exhibitor too often suffered from arbitrary methods and arrogant manners, there can be no doubt whatever. Lately we are happy to say individual manufacturers have made praiseworthy efforts to get in friendly touch with exhibitors, but there was a time when nobody seemed to realize that the exhibitor had other rights than the right of paying his bill in advance. In the distribution of power and responsibility within the field of cinematography the exhibitor was saddled with much of the responsibility, but had no power whatever. He it was whom the general public held responsible for the pictures. He had to stand the brunt of hostile criticism. He was in daily personal contact with the men and women who patronize motion pictures and keep the great new art alive. The acquisition of greater power by the exhibitor is for the ultimate benefit of the industry, and in the line of sound development.

*

It is reasonable to assume that the same wisdom which recognized the necessity and benefits of organization will prevail in the councils of the new organizations and will characterize their actions. We may justly claim to understand the needs and sentiments of exhibitors. For years The Moving Picture World has been honored by the confidence and friendship of thousands upon thousands of exhibitors. Its service and usefulness have been appreciated. Exhibitors realize with satisfaction that this paper is not given to dispensing silly twaddle or reprinting a weekly symposium of press clippings, but that it is a living force, taking an earnest and active part in the daily making of cinematographic history. They like its independence and its strong characteristic individuality. Of all papers devoted wholly or in part to motion pictures The Moving Picture World was the only one, which from the first, understood the needs and the trials of the exhibitor and pleaded in season and out of season for the recognition of the rights of the exhibitor.

*

It is, therefore, no idle phrase when we say that we are deeply and silicitously interested in the progress of the organized exhibitors, in their plans and policies; in fact, in everything which pertains to their welfare. We know that within the near future their influence will be felt in every department of the industry, and there is every reason to believe that this influence will be exerted for the general good of the industry. While the industry is distinctly divided into the three great branches of exhibiting, distributing and manufacturing, it is plain that these branches are interdependent. There must be intelligent and active co-operation between them. We confidently look toward the exhibitors to insure this intelligent and active co-operation. If exchanges and manufacturers have heretofore shown small disposition to pay a sympathetic and practical regard to the various and varying needs of the exhibitor, the latter is now in a position to insist on greater consideration. If he uses his new-found powers toward that end and does so in a firm, but liberal, tolerant and courteous manner, he will not only make his position better and more secure, but he will benefit the entire industry.

The co-operation must have the one common object of an improvement in quality. A practical test will be the matter of feature films. The reign of the real feature film has just begun. So great is the demand for genuine features that exhibitors are often tempted to satisfy it with the exhibition of reels which are features in name only. These spurious feature reels may be had cheaply, but invariably do more harm than good. There is no blinking the fact that a real feature, consisting of two or more reels, costs a lot of extra money to produce. If exhibitors decline to share in this extra expense, manufacturers can hardly be blamed for being timid about planning great feature releases. If, on the other hand, exhibitors know how to get the extra expense out of their audiences, and leave a handsome profit for themselves, the production of first-class features will at once receive a new stimulus, and there will be enough features to go around. It seems to us that an increase in the price of admission on feature nights furnishes a simple solution of the problem. The public will be willing to pay a slight increase if the exhibitor knows how to put on the feature, how to advertise it and how to educate his public. It is quite possible that in some instances this process of education may be harder and more costly to the exhibitor than in others. On the whole, however, the public is very willing "to be shown." It is then a question whether the exhibitor will stand the "Missouri test." It all depends on the "How." A successful presentation, embodying the elements of music, lecture and effects, requires care, thought, experience and brains. It is, however, sure to pay. Let us never lose sight of the fact, that any deterioration of the pictures results in the surest and greatest damage to the exhibitor. An enlightened policy of self-interest should make the exhibitor the stanchest friend of quality, Quality implies time, money, skill, art, patience and other things of similar value. The good feature film should be welcome to every intelligent exhibitor, even at a slight advance in the rental. Most exhibitors, we think, will welcome that kind of a feature film, unless the extra cost is prohibitive.

* * *

ANYONE who has followed the newest trend of the motion picture with its frequent and pointed moral lesson will readily believe the story which an exhibitor in Alton, Ill., has been kind enough to send to The Moving Picture World. It appears from this story that a young man who had planned to commit a crime was so affected by a picture called "The Nipper's Lullaby" that he abandoned his evil intention and followed the light, which the picture had thrown into his heart. If a beautiful painting or an impressive ceremony or the words of an earnest speaker have power to affect the human will and turn it into a good direction, why not the motion picture, which, as a psychical force, far surpasses any other appeal to the heart or mind of man?

* * *

IN comparison with the lot of motion picture exhibitors in many of the European countries the moving picture men in our country are indeed reposing on a bed of roses. In Austria, Germany and Russia powerful influences are at work in a fierce campaign against the cinematograph. Lately the associated theatrical managers of the countries named have combined in an effort to cripple the development of the motion picture. Mighty agencies have been enlisted in their behalf, the first and foremost of which is the government itself. Men powerful in theatrical circles are sure to have friends at court, and, by invoking their aid, the enemies of the motion picture hope for victory. The means employed are simple enough. It is proposed to tax the motion picture theaters out of existence. There is a great variety of taxes, which may be imposed on public amusements merely by the edict of the police and without the consent of the legislative power. The result is that the exhibitors have banded together and are now fighting for their very lives. In order to influence public opinion against the motion picture reams of literature have been compiled and printed and circulated at the expense of the theater owners. The burden of all this literary invective against the motion picture is the claim that the cinematograph is not an art, but a mere mechanical invention. It is asserted that for this reason the cinematograph ought not to be permitted to interfere with the theaters, which are said to be the only true exponents of art. In several large cities the numbers of motion picture theaters have been reduced by one-half through excessive local taxation. From what we can learn in the cinematographic journals in these countries the exhibitors seem to be determined to fight back.

* * *

THERE are piano players who stop their work the very second the picture ends and sometimes quite a few seconds before it ends. Nothing irritates and provokes an audience more than this widespread habit. The exhibitor or manager is not always able to watch this most annoying and disturbing feature, but he owes it to himself and to his own audience to repress it sternly. If music is needful to accompany the pictures it is equally necessary to round them out in a pleasing and artistic fashion. Even in the big theaters the band plays until the last of the audience is gone. The picture needs the aid of the music to the last moment and a little beyond it. In the intermissions and while the show is getting ready music must take care of the audience. These suggestions are prompted by the desire of many exhibitors to impress upon the piano players the full extent of their duties. There is nothing more tiresome than a lazy man or woman at the piano in a moving picture theater.

* * *

THE studio wedding is at last being recognized as entirely feasible and as an altogether proper proceeding. At the time the first editorial on the subject appeared in this publication two years ago, setting forth the advisability of recording weddings by means of the motion picture, the scheme was considered possible, but rather visionary owing to the supposedly tremendous cost of negative production, projection machines, and all the various etceteras. The item of expense has been the "bugaboo" that has retarded camera weddings and has put the idea in the luxury class, available only to the wealthy. The rich will probably be the first to adopt the new scheme, but it is not necessary to be very rich to do so. There are many items of expense entering into the making of a motion picture drama that have no place in the filming of home events. There are no actors to hire; no costumes to rent or scenery to paint. Until such time as it pays to kinetograph weddings as a regular business the ceremony can be performed on a lawn, thus eliminating the expense of a studio and studio equipment. This brings the expense down to a mere matter of hiring a camera and cameraman for the small part of a day, and the cost of some raw stock and developing. Fifty cents a foot is an outside figure in such a case with a high average at forty cents. There are photograph galleries in the large cities that very blandly ask fifty dollars a dozen for cabinet photographs, and get it, every day.

Photodrama and the Child.

By Louis Reeves Harrison

LAUD as you may the power of the press or that of the pulpit, the newspaper leaves but a fleeting impression of baseball scores on the juvenile mind, and the platitudes of Mr. Preacherman fall on heedless ears if there is a boy in the congregation, whereas a spirited moving picture goes straight into the heart and soul of him. He is a born story-teller himself.

Study him at the age of four or five and observe how he dramatizes the trifling incidents of his limited environment. If he saws some of mama's spools in two and uses them for car-wheels on papa's cigar boxes, then builds a track of laths from Barnyard to Garden City, you will find him absorbed in the tragedies and comedies of his railroad system. If he whittles out platoons of peg soldiers and costumes them gaily from the wardrobe-room of his paint box, he will build a cannon out of an old faucet and mow them down relentlessly, reveling in the carnage of actual war.

Look him over! He is a wonder. Just as he stands he has in him the elements necessary to enter seriously upon every art, industry or occupation known to man. Circumstances specialize him, he becomes an editor or a politician, an educator or a grafter more or less, as his course is indicated for him by the complex influences brought to bear on his early life, but he remains a story lover and a story teller to the last of his days. He tells self-magnifying tales to every one who will listen or has to, cracks his worm-eaten jokes, and reaches his extreme development in the after-dinner speaker and "vodeveal" monologist at a moving picture show.

Every mature human being of intelligence is a novelist or dramatist by inheritance, only his faculties lack flavor —they are as dried peaches compared to those plucked ripe from the tree—and it is no easy matter to acquire full command of our varied means of self-expression. The spirit of adventure is never absent from him except in dull hours of drudgery, sorrow and sickness, and his sense of fiction enables him to enjoy or dread imaginary results from the whirl of events in which his existence is involved.

How about the little girl? Her sex has been "Orientalized" for so many centuries, maintained and belittled in a form of semi-slavery, that her natural powers have been rendered deficient by our assumption of superiority, but they are only dormant. It has always seemed to me that women are far more impressionable than men; that they become storehouses of impressions to be used in forming the mental structure of the generation to come, and that they are not only the creators of the race, but its upholders as well. We attempt to attach our little worlds by the achievement of our petty ambitions, but they draw our love and affection without effort by bettering our condition from childhood, by stimulating what is fine and clean in our natures, and by giving the world the best of themselves with no demand for recognition or praise in return. On their quality rests our own.

I have written child stories for adults which have been successfully produced in photodramatic form and I realize how difficult it is to penetrate the integument of a pure little child's heart with any thought that lacks clean, bright or beautiful purpose. If the intention is good little girls discern it with exquisite nicety, and they have an insight when social dramas are presented on the screen that would even stagger the mortal perverts who thrust the nastiness of their own minds on the public in order to cater to what they imagine to be a depraved taste among those who frequent the picture shows. That the noble art of the legitimate theater is now floundering in a sea of difficulties and financial distress is partially due to the low ideals of the powers in control. They shout aloud the platitude that "the drama must not preach," in apparent ignorance of the fact that the strongest plays are those that tell something of interest in a way that shows the working of temperament in human character and reach conclusions that provide it with vigorous action.

It is only a quibbler who explains that the dramatist should not be a writer of tracts, a quibbler who is already preaching to urge his own special pleading. We all know that. The play need not preach, but it may make our blood boil with indignation over injustice done those who contribute heavily to common happiness through self-denial, or inspire us with admiration for those who conquer the oppressor or attain other noble ends by force of grit and determination. When there is a sincere purpose behind a thrilling story it may reach the millions once stirred by "Uncle Tom's Cabin."

Author and producer are not the only determining factors in the New Art. I must include my friend, the exhibitor, he who has said so many nice things about me that it seems impolitic if not ungrateful for me to kick back in this way. Like the author, he is a toiler and a spinner—failure or success mean a great deal to him—and the verdict of the public is all in all to him. That verdict! How the small boys like the cowboy photoplays! How the children laugh at a very ordinary farce-comedy! All right for both if they are clean and go over so well as to amuse the entire audience. Fathers and mothers who provide the price of admission are entitled to consideration, and the warning of experience is that shows appealing entirely to the gallery call for plenty of paper in the body of the house. If plays of the so-called "Western" type suit all classes, stand out for quality, and I am with you. The American epic has yet to be written.

Frontier stories immediately gain spirit and dignity when they deal with the brilliant achievements which subdued our wilderness, and they become interesting to mature and primitive minds alike if relieved of the lawbreakers in fringed trousers, who lounge in barrooms and hold up stage coaches. The big and manly type of frontier life was not such sham as he is represented to be in photoplays doped out in the studios. His face was set against evil and fear was not in him. Instead of being an eternal victim of the lawless and the cruel, he exterminated them.

Our boys and girls are great absorbers of the picture plays, and I do not think that the average run is harmful, but there is plenty of room for improvement. Instead of letting them be released along mediocre lines, I am for making them strong, clean and fine enough for the betterment of the children and the consequent betterment of both producer and exhibitor. Give us historical plays that embody more history and less mush. Give us Western plays that depict the Western conqueror as he was, that he may thrill the whole world. Give us romance that is beautiful or reality that is inspiring, but please spare us the overdose of adaptation. The illustrious names of other days become false-faces in picture plays, good enough to scare puppies, but wearisome to old dogs, and they fool no one in the end.

Motion Picture Exhibitors' League

OF AMERICA

MICHIGAN EXHIBITORS' CONVENTION.

Three Days Session Held at Muskegon Which Ends in a Badger Fight—Officers and Delegates Elected.

IT cannot be said of the Exhibitors of Michigan that they are slow. A three days' convention was held at the town of Muskegon on July 9th, 10th and 11th, that was almost strenuous and finished with the traditional "Badger Fight," which was uproarious. A general good time was reported and much important business was transacted between shows.

Anticipating events several of the members arrived in Muskegon on the 8th, so, when Mr. Carl Ray went to the railroad station to meet President Neff at 8:55 o'clock Tuesday morning, he was well attended. The convention was called promptly at 11 o'clock at the Orpheum Theater by State President Peter J. Jeup, who made a brief address to the assembled members and then appointed these committees:

Committee on Credentials—Mr. Wm. Ullman, Detroit, chairman; Mr. August Kleist, Pontiac; Mr. M. J. Carroll, Jackson.

Committee on Constitution—Mr. B. L. Converse, Owosso; Mr. Fred Rumler, Detroit; Mr. H. F. Fowser, Lansing.

Committee on Reception—Mr. Carl Ray, Muskegon, chairman; Mr. H. R. Hillier, Grand Haven; Mr. Wm. Ullman, Detroit; Mr. Chas. Wentzel, Detroit; J. B. Towner, Jackson; Perry J. Coady, Muskegon.

An adjournment was taken until 3 o'clock in the afternoon and the members enjoyed an automobile ride in the meantime. At the afternoon session Mayor Harry A. Reitdyk, of Muskegon, addressed the meeting, speaking mostly upon the subject of educational pictures. The mayor's address was responded to by President Neff, who spoke at some length upon the future of the motion picture. He also pointed out the necessity of organization and the importance of the coming convention at Chicago. Mr. Neff's remarks created a decided impression.

Other addresses were heard after which the meeting adjourned for the day. In the evening the members were entertaind by a forty-piece band and high-class vaudeville.

Wednesday's Session.

Wednesday morning's meeting was called to order by President Jeup at 10 o'clock. Reports of the committees were heard and President Neff, of the National League, responded to a call for an address, speaking at length upon the necessity of organization and what could be accomplished. He told of the early struggles of the organization and of what had been accomplished in other states, making the claim that no other organization had grown so rapidly and had become so strong in so short a time as had the Motion Picture Exhibitors' League. Mr. Neff predicted a world organization if the growth continued at the present rate.

After the addresses the convention adopted a revised constitution and by-laws; adopted a resolution asking the legislature of the state of Michigan to provide for the appointment of a Board of Censors upon the motion of Treasurer Rieder, and arranged to put a state organizer in the field to enlist the cooperation of all motion picture exhibitors of the state.

Officers for the ensuing year were elected, as follows:

President—Mr. Carl Ray, Muskegon.
1st Vice-Pres.—Mr. B. L. Converse, Owosso.
2nd Vice-Pres.—J. J. Rieder, Jackson.
3rd Vice-Pres.—G. R. Durkins, Saginaw.
Secretary—W. Lester Levy, Detroit.
Treasurer—Mr. H. F. Fowser, Lansing.

After his election, Mr. Carl Ray was called to the chair to assume his official duties during the convention.

Mr. B. L. Converse, Owosso, was elected National Vice-President.

The following members were elected delegates to attend the Chicago Convention: Carl Ray, Muskegon; Peter J. Jeup, Detroit; W. J. Carroll, Jackson. Alternates: A. L. Brown, Lansing; G. C. Nichols, Grand Rapids; R. P. Leahy, Bay City.

The next convention was set for July 8th and 9th, 1913, and Saginaw was selected as the place of meeting after a spirited contest with Jackson and Bay City in which Saginaw won by a margin of one vote.

Prominent among the members were, B. L. Converse, Owosso, Mich., who is a very able talker and a hard worker in the interest of the League; W. L. Levy, state secretary, Detroit, Mich., was at his post always smiling and ready to assist in making the convention a grand success, which it was; Wm. Ullman, National vice-president from Michigan, is always distributing encouragement and ready to assist any way possible; F. N. Harris, Amuse Theater, Hart, Mich.; W. J. Connell, Bon Ton Theater, Jackson; J. B. Towner, Ideal Theater, Jackson, Mich.; J. S. Wentzel, Monarch Theater and Olympic Theater, Detroit; August Kleist, Eagle Theater, Pontiac; Fred Rumler, Warren Theater, Detroit; J. A. Pawley, Scenic Theater, Saginaw; H. F. Fowser, Vaudette and Boneta Theaters, Lansing; Harry S. Hillier, Temple Theater, Grand Haven; George McArthur, Royal Theater, Windsor, Ont.; P. J. Coady, Princess Theater, Muskegon; C. A. Anderson, Hermosa Theater, Chicago, Ill.

Mr. Anderson is first vice-president of the Illinois League, and one of Chicago's most earnest representatives who was the first to call the Chicago exhibitors together in a meeting. He is enthusiastic over the coming convention at Chicago and predicts a large gathering. He is a splendid mixer and is doing fine work for Chicago. He seems to never tire of telling of the grand time the Exhibitors will have at the big Chicago National Convention.

The newly elected officers are enthusiastic and are starting with the determination of showing the rest of the states how strong Michigan will be within the next few months.

Mr. Carl Ray, the newly elected president, owns four theaters in Muskegon; there is only one other theater in the city. Mr. Converse, elected 1st vice-president, is full of enthusiasm, good council and the right man in the right place. The delegate, Mr. Carroll, of Jackson, is an untiring worker in the interest of the League. Peter J. Jeup, who has served his term for one year was renominated, but declined the nomination. Mr. Jeup, at the Orpheum Theater, was presented by the League with a beautiful diamond ring in token of the high esteem in which he is held by the League of Michigan. The presentation speech was made by Mr. Neff. Mr. Jeup was pleased to receive the present and was very much surprised as it was kept a secret from him until Mr. Neff presented it.

A badger fight was pulled off in the convention hall at the Orpheum Theater after the regular performance Wednesday evening. Peter Jeup was master of ceremonies and Mr. Hans A. Abt, of Detroit, referee. Large sums of money were wagered on the fight. Mr. Abt was amply protected against any possibility of the badger biting him. He was so nervous when he pulled the string, however, that the Badger was thrown almost over the footlights and was badly broken. The dog was declared the winner while Mr. Abt ran hurriedly behind the scenery to keep out of the way of the contestants.

There was a short session on Thursday which wound up in an automobile ride, a sail and a banquet, which ended the most successful convention Michigan Exhibitors ever held.

THE TOLEDO CONVENTION.

Seventh Convention of the Motion Picture Exhibitors' League of Ohio, Held at Toledo.

By Jas. S. McQuade.

THE opening session of the Exhibitors' League of Ohio, Toledo local, was held at the Zenobia Theater, on Tuesday, July 16, at 11:30 A. M. It seemed as if the sweltering hot wave, prevailing over the Middle West, had favored the meeting by withdrawing in the face of a cool, invigorating breeze from the northland; for light summer garments felt a little there and many had been obliged to skirmish for discarded blankets the preceding night, with a surprise that was akin to astonishment.

One might expect, under the circumstances, that Toledo exhibitors and members of the league—there are forty-five of the latter in the Maumee city—would have recognized the benign favor of the weather god and hastened to show their appreciation by turning out en masse to welcome brother members and their wives, who had set out from distant points, when the sun was blistering, to assist in making the meeting a typical Ohio success. Reflecting on the enthusiasm displayed by Toledo representatives at the Dayton convention, when they worked hard for, and gained, the coveted honor of the succeeding state meeting, one could scarcely expect that their fervency would have oozed out in the short period of a protracted spring.

But it did; for there were only two local members of the League present when M. A. Neff, the national president, opened the convention! Will C. Bettis and Julius Levy were the only Spartans at the bridge; and, from all I can gather, Mr. Bettis has worked hard to make the Toledo gathering a notable success.

I have talked to a few Toledo exhibitors, in the brief time given me, with the object of solving the puzzling problem and, strange to say, these few have expressed astonishment over the matter; but none could enlighten me. The only considerate solution possible, therefore, is to assume that every man expected his neighbor to attend and remained absent himself, with the result as already given.

President Neff opened the meeting by calling the roll of state officers. He then appointed temporary committees on grievances, credentials and legislation, instructing them to make reports at the closed session on Wednesday. Mr. Neff then announced that a revision of the national constitution and by-laws was to be considered by the national officers, the changes to be made effective at the second national convention held in Chicago.

President Neff next outlined the growth of the League and the work done in Ohio. Starting originally with ten exhibitors, the organization has now a membership of 500 in the state, he declared. He emphasized the fact that all matters brought before the state league, in the interests of exhibitors, had been either adjusted satisfactorily or were being considered favorably.

Mr. Neff pointed out the necessity for energy, ability and honesty of purpose in carrying on the work of the organization and of the exhibitor. "You must believe in your business," he said with fine spirit. "If your hearts are not in the work, you may expect only failure. Desperate effort and untiring work must be made and done to make the organization the success that it should be."

A solid front for Sunday opening of picture theaters in Ohio was invited. A state censor board for pictures and for the examination of operators should receive the early consideration of members, Mr. Neff suggested. Resolutions on these matters were recommended to be framed and afterwards taken up at the Chicago national convention.

While exhibitors claimed their rights they should not forget the rights of the manufacturers and exchanges. The wise course is to ask nothing unreasonable, but to act wisely, honestly and fearlessly.

Mr. Neff then referred cheerfully to the newly made organizations in New York and New Jersey. He paid a compliment to the MOVING PICTURE WORLD for the kind assistance and help rendered during his labors in the East. He was glad to announce that the New York and New Jersey organizations were working organizations and not "paper" affairs. With all the work of organization done during the year the cost was scarcely 25 cents per capita, per year, to the fund, Mr. Neff announced.

The meeting was then adjourned until the afternoon, when Congressman James M. Cox, Democratic candidate for governor of Ohio, made a speech, treating of moving pictures specially, which bristled with many pithy sentences. Its substance was as follows:

The moving picture is one of the most important utilities of our generation. It has conclusively proved to be a strong moral force in our civilization. The speaker never attended a moving picture presentation without getting a glimpse of something that did him good.

Referring to the wonderful headway made by the moving picture in Boston, the hub of culture, Mr. Cox said, "If it has percolated through the brains of the citizens of Boston, there must be something to it. I hope to see the day when there will be a moving picture apparatus in every school house in the land," he continued.

"I hope you will, within the next five years, have the undivided support of the citizens of this state. The moving picture comes within the limits of the working man's pocket book, and when you give pictures of a high moral standard, on Sundays, you will have as large a following as the churches.

"If it ever comes within my purview, I will favor a state board of censorship, composed of men who will give the work a common sense view. Jane Addams said in Chicago that when there were plenty of play grounds and moving picture presentations, there was, as a sequence, a small percentage of moral delinquency.

"Government reports for the district of Colorado and Wyoming show that the consumption of beer and cigarettes has declined since the advent of the moving picture.

"The medical profession have been seeking for generations the best methods of sanitary precaution. The moving picture has solved the problem, and the profession recognize it as one of the two great publicity forces of the nation. Medical experts of Germany are tracing the movements of food through the stomach and intestines by moving pictures, which will later be exhibited to the public.

"The Federal government has taken cognizance of all the processes of the moving picture and the educational department has published a book concerning it.

"Thirty-five per cent. of the patrons of moving picture theaters are under fifteen years of age, and grown people spend one-fourth of the time in picture theaters that children do in the public schools."

At the close of the speech of Mr. Cox the meeting was adjourned until Wednesday morning at 10:30, and it was announced that a moonlight ride on Lake Erie would be made at 8:30 P. M. This feature of the program was hugely enjoyed by the visitors, and Will C. Bettis was warmly thanked for the arrangements.

The address of welcome by the Hon. Brand Whitlock, Mayor of Toledo, was delivered at the opening of the morning session, on Wednesday. Intervening duties had prevented him from doing so on Tuesday. He was introduced by Will C. Bettis, of the Colonial Theater, as a great friend of the moving picture.

His welcome, the mayor declared, was a pleasure not only in his official capacity, but personally. He has been exceedingly interested in the progress and development of the moving picture business for some time, and one of the first problems which confronted him, in the early years of his administration, were the cheap vaudeville theaters, with admissions of 10, 20 and 30 cents. The moving picture theaters solved the problem for him.

His concern is that exhibitors shall realize fully their responsibilities to the public. Humanity is lazy and dislikes to think; few indeed know how to think, and, therefore, people seek knowledge or entertainment through the eye. It is, therefore very important that moving pictures shall not convey false impressions of life to the young, so that they shall not be disappointed when they confront realities. The dime novel and the impressionistic false picture must be kept from youth. Exhibitors, therefore, have great responsibilities and they should see to it that pictures which give right and sane views of life shall be selected for exhibition.

The meeting was next addressed by Mrs. Sherwood, of Toledo, the able advocate of women's suffrage, by permission of President Neff. Mrs. Sherwood lauded the moving picture and held that women are its friends. Women and pictures are two of the great influences now working hand in hand for a better civilization, is the opinion of Mrs. Sherwood. While the convention could not pass a resolution such as was outlined by the speaker, owing to infringement on the constitution of the organization, on a show of hands it was apparent that Ohio exhibitors are strongly in favor of votes for women. Why not?

Following the last speech, the members were requested to go outside and have a moving picture taken of them, marching two abreast. I understand that a Gaumont camera man was on the job. The convention afterwards went into executive session, until dismissed for lunch.

The delegates to the Chicago national convention, for the State of Ohio, are as follows: Cleveland, F. M. Kenney and Edward Kohl; Dayton, Clem Kerr and Val Rayburg; Columbus, Max Stearn and J. A. Maddox; Toledo, Will C. Bettis and Chas. Nasse. The Cincinnati delegates have not yet been chosen.

From all accounts, Ohio will send a crowd of exhibitors to the Windy City in August. Indeed, the attendance from outside cities at the Toledo meeting was reduced materially by the nearness of the national convention.

Among the visiting exhibitors present were: Mr. and Mrs. O. B. Weaver, Dayton; J. J. Huss (Secretary Ohio League) and wife; Mr. and Mrs. F. L. Emmert, Mr. and Mrs. E. J. Lehman, and Mr. and Mrs. L. Emmert, all of Cincinnati; Mr. and Mrs. F. E. Simmons and daughter, and Mrs. Louise Schmitz, of Cleveland; Mr. and Mrs. B. E. Heslet, Clyde, O.; Mr. and Mrs. J. D. Kessler, with son Irvine and Miss Nettie Wall, Sandusky, O.; Mr. and Mrs. Clem Kerr and son Kenneth L., and Mr. and Mrs. Val. Rayburg, Dayton, O.; M. A. Neff, national president and president Ohio League; F. A. Bott, Wm. C. Kitt, Chas. Sternberg and Fred Schottsmillar, all of Cincinnati; J. J. Rieder, treasurer National League, Jackson, Mich.; J. A. Maddox, president Columbus local; A. Levy, Josiah Slimm, Ernst Schwartz, Harry A. Ross, Geo. W. Heinbuch, Frank Kenney, Ed. Kohl, Sam Lustig and Chas. Schroeder, all of Cleveland; Wm. J. Sweeney, treasurer National League, Chicago; J. H. Broomhall, Hamilton, second vice-president Ohio League; D. A. Schaefer, Findlay, O.; W. A. Pittis, first vice-president Ohio League, Conneaut; Mr. and Mrs. H. E. Mickey, Fostoria, O., and S. E. Morris, president Cleveland Local.

Representing machine and supply houses, etc., were: Fred A. Clark, "Motiograph," Chicago; F. W. Swett and H. B. Coles, Nicholas Power Co., New York; J. E. Robin and wife, "Simplex," New York; Herbert Griffin, the "Standard," New York; H. Charnas, manager Warner's Features, Cleveland, O.; E. H. Klinck, manager Seneca Feature Film Co., Toledo, H. W. Eddy and W. A. Page, representing the Indemnity Exchange Fire and Liability Insurance Co., of Chicago and St. Louis; Mr. and Mrs. F. C. Lewis, Wisconsin Seating Co.; London, Wis., and J. G. Carlson, American Seating Co., Chicago.

A CALL TO NEW YORK STATE EXHIBITORS.

President Sam H. Trigger and Secretary Rosenthal will devote the entire week beginning Monday, July 22d, to the work of strengthening the Motion Picture Exhibitors' League of the State of New York, by visiting six of the important cities of the State and organizing locals. Later other sections will be visited until the entire State is thoroughly organized.

"We cannot impress upon you, Mr. Exhibitor, too strongly the importance of your helping us along with this work. Your welfare is our welfare, your enemies are our enemies; single-handed none of us are strong enough to combat the forces which are actively and constantly working for our undoing. It is only by a united effort on the part of every exhibitor, large or small, in the entire State, that even a particle of justice can be secured for us who have made the motion picture business our lifework.

"Important legislation will be introduced at the next session of the State Legislature vitally affecting our mutual interests, perhaps our very existence. Are you willing to stand idly by and permit our foes to carry the day, or will you use that intelligence which you must surely possess to be a successful exhibitor, and see the wisdom of joining with your fellow exhibitors throughout the State, and present a solid front to the foe when the time for battle arrives?

H. W. Rosenthal, Secretary New York State League.

"The itinerary for the week will be as follows:

Monday, July 22, Utica.
Tuesday, July 23, Syracuse.
Wednesday, July 24, Rochester.
Thursday, July 25, Buffalo.
Friday, July 26, Elmira.
Saturday, July 27, Binghamton.

"The local conventions will be held in the forenoons, so as not to interfere with business. All exhibitors in these cities and adjoining territory are urgently requested to attend. I will notify you of the place of meeting. If you fail to receive such notice it will be because we have not your name on our list, so kindly get in touch with some fellow exhibitor in your territory and get the particulars.

"Trusting to meet you all, I remain,

"Sincerely yours,

"H. W. ROSENTHAL,
"Secretary."

NEW JERSEY EXHIBITORS' SECOND SESSION.

A Spirited Meeting of Earnest Men, At Which New Members Are Enrolled and a Minister "Starts Something."

The New Jersey State League of Exhibitors held its second meeting at Naegli's Hotel, in Hoboken, on Wednesday, July 17. The session was well attended and new members from some of the various cities in the State were enrolled. Fred Ruleman, of Trenton, the State treasurer, was the star recruiter. In the interim between the first and second meetings he had organized the Trenton exhibitors into a local and presented their application for membership as a body. Besides that he had made two trips through the south of Jersey spreading the gospel of organization. He is a bear. As special guests of the association there were present Mr. Samuel Trigger, president of the New York State and City Exhibitors' Leagues, Mr. Sidney Ascher, national vice-president from the State of New York, and Mr. R. C. Whitten, sergeant-at-arms of the New York local. Addresses were made, among others, by Mr. Trigger and Mr. Ascher.

Mr. Ascher related his experiences in trying to interest the clergy and civic dignities in motion pictures, and told of his efforts to induce them to attend meetings of the exhibitors. He dwelt at length upon the indifferent success he had had with Canon Chase, of Brooklyn, in this respect, as well as with some other well-known divines. The attitude of the clergy had been pretty well discussed when a clean, studious looking stranger arose and asked the attention of those assembled. He introduced himself as an exhibitor of motion pictures, but not in the accepted sense. He said that he had often exhibited motion pictures for the children and congregation of the Olivet Baptist Church, Philadelphia, of which church he was until recently the pastor. He came over from Philadelphia to attend the meeting, and to deplore the fact that so great an institution as the motion picture industry should have so long been working at odds with the church. There was one question, he said, that had never been answered to his satisfaction and in concluding he put that question, which was: "Why do the motion picture men antagonize the clergy?"

If he had touched a match to a sun-baked hay-stack he could not have gotten a quicker flame. Men were on their feet in an instant to tell him that it was the clergy that first threw down the gauntlet. It was explained to him that a few of his calling were self-advertisers and condemned the whole exhibiting business for the acts of a certain few who might be individually unscrupulous. It was pointed out that it is no more fair to condemn all exhibitors for the acts of the few than it would be to condemn the clergy as a whole for the actions of, for instance, such a man as the late Rev. Clarence V. Richeson, who was recently executed in Boston. The pastor held to his point very well for a while, but being submerged with overwhelming first-hand evidence he sank gracefully to his chair with a smile that showed his heart is in the right place, and that he is not like Oliver Goldsmith's schoolmaster who "e'en though vanquished he could argue still." The dominie admitted that the question had been answered to his full satisfaction, and made himself quite popular with the men through his rare good nature.

Arrangements for the New Jersey delegation to the Chicago convention were placed in the hands of Mr. L. Blumenthal, the national vice-president from New Jersey. He will arrange for the New Jersey men to make the trip in a body with the New York men. It is possible by this plan for the metropolitan exhibitors to charter a car of their own and have a royal good time on the way. The Chicago trip is a vacation that every exhibitor owes to himself. The Chicago exhibitors and manufacturers can be depended upon to show every visitor a royal good time, and one long to be remembered. It should be borne in mind that any exhibitor is welcome at the Chicago convention whether elected as a delegate or not. New Jersey exhibitors who intend to make the trip should communicate with their national vice-president, Mr. L. Blumenthal, 30 Union Square, New York. Notice of convention arrangements will appear in the World as soon as they have been perfected.

DON'T FORGET THE MISSOURI CONVENTION.

President George H. Wiley, of the Missouri State Exhibitors' League, desires to refresh the memories of Missouri Exhibitors as to the date and place of the Missouri State Convention. There are new developments in the motion picture business that demand the attention of every exhibitor in Missouri whether a member of the League or not.

There are 450 exhibitors in Missouri and it is expected that fully half of them will attend the convention, which will be held in the Sexton Hotel, Kansas City, Mo., on July 30 and 31. The opening sessions will be called to order at 10 o'clock Tuesday morning and the meeting will close with a banquet at the Sexton Hotel.

Arrangements for the entertainment of the members and visitors are in charge of F. C. Reynolds, president of the Kansas City Local, and no effort will be spared to make the stay of the exhibitors in Kansas City a pleasant one.

ENTHUSIASTIC NEW YORK MEETING.

This matter of organization is getting to be a great movement. It has impetus now that it never had before. The exhibition business to-day represents a survival of the fittest. A few years ago the business was constantly changing. No man could be actually considered as a permanent exhibitor. With the passing of the first blush of fabulous prosperity the weak ones dropped off and the strong ones remained, so that now the exhibition business may be considered as fairly well settled. Having arrived at this stage of being, it is time for exhibitors to accomplish something in the way of permanent value.

The meeting of the New York Exhibitors' League on July 18 at the Union Square Hotel bore strong evidence of permanence. It was one of the best meetings in a long while. The spirit of independence and sinew pervaded and the men were enthusiastic and militant. Something is going to come of this. It means that the time is ripe for the exhibitor to take his place as a power and not as a scapegoat. It needed only the magic touch of a man like M. A. Neff, the National president of exhibitors, to bring all sections into a component whole. No such favorable condition ever existed before and the various states are responding nobly. There can be only one outcome of such a state of affairs. It means that the exhibitor is going to be the dominating force in the motion picture business.

The New York meeting was dynamic. There were forceful speeches that went right home to the listeners. It is a pity that all the enemies of the picture were not present to hear the high-minded opinions and aspirations of the men and women assembled. It was a meeting to be proud of. The first outside speaker was Mr. Len Spencer, whose forceful personality was injected into his timely remarks and analysis of the present status of the exhibitor. He was followed by Mrs. H. W. Arthur, president of the Progressive Mothers' Association of New York. Mrs. Arthur is well known for her oratorical abilities and common sense. She possesses the power to fire men's hearts with hope and courage, and her co-operation is highly valued by the members. There was an address by Mrs. Whaley, of the National Board of Censorship, which was altogether sensible and broad-minded regarding the matter of children and Sunday opening. Many of the rank and file were called upon and those who spoke left an impression of moral sincerity that promises well for the cause.

The Nestor Film Company was denounced for its arrangement with the Frank Tousey Publishing Company whereby the Nestor Company is to manufacture motion pictures based upon the dime novels published by the Tousey Company, which dime novels they think will be offered for sale by exhibitors simultaneously with the showing of the pictures. The proposition was repudiated in toto by the New York Exhibitors and a committee headed by Mr. Harold W. Rosenthal was appointed, on motion, to draw up resolutions for the association protesting against the Nestor Company's agreement with the Frank Tousey Company.

Mr. Samuel H. Trigger, the president, presided over the meeting. A number of the New Jersey exhibitors were present.

BIG MAN OF FLICKER ALLEY.

Drops Into New York and Grabs Up a Lot of Fine American Features—Makes Other Deals.

HAILING from the hub of filmdom—famed Flicker Alley, London—there came to these hospitable shores one Richard S. Edmundson, yclept "Dick" for short. That he holds the title of "heavyweight" of the London film contingent you will have not the least doubt should you chance to meet him swarming up the street in your direction. Something over six feet with his boots on, the aforesaid "Dick" is fashioned in good proportions; broad of shoulder, with a girth like an alderman and an undershot jaw like an English bulldog, he certainly would be a bad man to meet up with in a dark alley. In very truth, he must have descended from some ancient tribe of British buccaneers, for booted, belted and turbaned in red, Old Morgan, the scourge of the Spanish Main, would have nothing on "Dick." Yet, withal, there is a kindly glance in his eye, soft speech on his tongue, and that hearty clasp of his hand that betokens the good fellow and friend that he is when you know him.

As before intimated, "Dick" Edmundson landed on these shores early in July in quest of good American pictures, for, in his role of film magnate in Flicker Alley, he finds much demand for the good Yankee pictures there and elsewhere upon the broad continent of Europe which he distributes through his many agents in the great centers, for the world is his market and large and profitable are his sales.

Though "Dick" Edmundson is English from top to toe, he acknowledges his debt to Uncle Sam for his early training. When but seventeen years of age he came to American and for as many years made his home in 'Frisco. It was there he became interested in motion pictures and it was there he got his big start through his connection with O'Day, Ricketts and Coffroth and the big Johnson-Jeffries fight pictures. He was on the ground when the pictures were taken and afterwards assisted in the exploitation of the films here and in Europe, establishing himself in London to handle the foreign rights. From this auspicious start he branched out, dealing first in Continental brands and getting something now and then from the States. A deal with the Republic Film Company gave him his first dependable American release, to which he has since added other brands. It was for the purpose of increasing his representation that he came to New York and it is quite likely that he will return with a considerable string of agencies, aside from the big features he has bought outright.

MR. RICHARD S. EDMUNDSON,
The "Bull Moose" of Flicker Alley.

Regarding conditions in the English market Mr. Edmundson told of the many peculiarities of Flicker Alley and its dependencies. "More than 150,000 feet of film per week are sold in London," he said. "And we have no official censorship." He explained that the matter had been put up to the London County Council, which is the authority over all things in London, and that body told the film men that they ought to be able to censor their own film—and they do. Duping is a thing of the past and the new copyright law gives complete protection.

Through an organization of manufacturers and renters, sample prints and other junk are kept off the market, so that, all in all, though the market is a wide open one, a nice profit is afforded London film agents.

On Thursday last, Mr. Edmundson made a flying trip to St. Louis to close some important contracts in that city and he will take his passage for 'ome, which is London, this week. He left us a cordial invitation to be his guest at Flicker Alley at any time we could assemble passage money, promising to show us a bit of London, should we ever make the trip.

The Moving Picture Educator

IMPORTANT TO EVERY EXHIBITOR.

THE one and only aim of this page is to advance both educational cinematography and also—and now especially—education in everything that relates to every branch of cinematography; the question then arises, who are to be educated? The answer is an easy one: those who should know, and yet do not know, what they ought to about cinematography. In a recent article on this subject it was shown that an intimate knowledge of the true "inwardness" of the moving picture was necessary even in legislative assemblies.

In the last issue of The World there is an appeal to the exhibitors of New York state, to prepare to fight an attempt to close their places on Sunday. How can this "fight" be best made? By disseminating knowledge, is the answer.

Why cannot every exhibitor cause his representative among the lawmakers to become acquainted with the Moving Picture World, especially such copies as that of July 20, wherein the Sunday question is approached from legal, moral and religious viewpoints. This is not written with any idea of advertising this paper, but it is written with the purpose of seeking to spread those high principles for which this paper—and this page stands.

If it is not possible to cause members of the legislative bodies to become acquainted with their trade paper and its principles, surely the Exhibitors' League could obtain the consent of The World to reprint in pamphlet form those helpful references to these vexed questions and moral problems, which have been carefully studied, analyzed and, in many instances, at least partially solved.

Do not use your trade paper for selfish purposes only. You advertise and sell; you read and buy; you are made acquainted with the films and their value. All this is personal gain to you, but the articles, the opinions, the experiences, the advice and all such valuable accessories which give tone and character to your trade paper are not for selfish knowledge, but for as widespread purpose as is possible.

About one year ago there appeared on these pages an article entitled, "The Moving Picture and Its Enemies." An enterprising exhibitor in the West had his pastor read it in his church; He also had his local paper copy it; other papers also copied it with great advantage to the moving picture and great confusion to "its enemies." Let this example be copied; use that which has been prepared by experience, time and money to your own greater profit.

There is little doubt that the great Sunday question may become one of education and not one of "fight." The true value of the moving picture should be one of adaptation rather than contention; and, instead of raising the question of shall we or shall we not have Sunday pictures, let it rather take the form of a conventional subject— "How can the Sunday Pictures be Best Used"—thus turning it from a debatable existence into an applied and profitable principle.

"THE SOCIETY CINEMATOGRAPHER."

A decade ago to be known and established as a successful society photographer was to be assured a social standing, an artistic reputation and a fortune. There is now open and awaits the suitable parties a similar position in society for cinematography.

It is becoming an established habit to photograph society weddings; the newspapers during the last few days have both described and announced important ceremonies, records of which are to be kept upon the immortal film. The value of this new custom is twofold: it gives the pleasure of producing the actual occurence for the benefit of those who participate in that they may "see themselves as others saw them," absentees can also see the actual function, and further, and perhaps of some importance, it becomes an historical and ancestral file.

The New York Herald announces that Mr. Hugh F. Hoffman, of the Moving Picture World, who was the first to suggest the cinematographic wedding, also predicts the film will ultimately become the "family tree." For historical and ancestral importance this portends great and valuable results, and the film shelf will probably become more important than the book-shelf or the picture gallery. This knowledge makes us positively sigh when we wish how we might be able to "look upon the past" in a way denied to us, but possible for "those who come after us." What rare treats are in store for "generations yet unborn," events, customs, habits, ancestors, all combined, make one of the most desirable additions to family life and knowledge.

How Generally Used in the Home.

Hitherto expensive and intricate, the home possibilities of the moving picture have become general; when some machine which can conveniently be used in any electrically fitted home is produced not only the special occasion but many events of family pleasure and importance will be a part of the heritage of every home. The field is as large as the human family, the duration of the idea is as long as human life on earth, for as long as we breath we live and as long as there are living people there will be the living pictures. The outlook therefore for the "society" cinematographer is a most promising one; the opportunity is ripe, the business sure and its growth more sure.

The Picture, the Church, the Saloon.

The "Educator" cannot allow to pass unnoticed the statement that in a certain church the young people's society had debated upon the resultant evil to church life from the saloon or the cheap picture places. The comparison is as odious as any it is possible to make. While no admirer of the original nickelodeon, now almost a thing of the past, the writer must certainly protest against the linking together in such an unholy triple-alliance three such separate issues as religion, cinematography and drunkenness.

These young debators are on false ground and evidently ill-advised. To compare the misuse of a new discovery with a well-seasoned, deep-rooted evil is as absurd as comparing the sowing of wild oats of misguided youths with the dark deeds of the hosts of evil. The evil wrought by the saloon is not only injurious to religion but to humanity, and even this could be seriously lessened if the whole church decided to act vigorously. Whereas the evil wrought by the picture was local and short-lived; indeed, it no sooner made itself manifest than it invited its own destruction, therefore it never lived long enough to become a terror to the church or anything else.

Again, where has the church taken to the saloon as an auxiliary to its good works? The question is too foolish to ask; yet, is it not provoked by this strange debate? On the contrary, scores of churches have taken the pictures as a most profitable aid to illustrative and educational religion. Is it probable that this particular society of young church workers may read this comment upon their strange attempt to grow in eloquent and debatable prowess? If so, let them expend their talents upon such themes as, "How may the moving picture be made an aid to the church," or "How can the moving picture prove an enemy of the saloon." Under this latter subject it can be shown that pictures exposing the evils of drink by Pathe and Eclair can do more good than a series of temperance lectures or debates.

Further, let them fortify themselves with the knowledge of the value of the pictures along all educational lines, especially the social, moral and religious, and their discussions will partake of a more positive and progressive nature, and they will find themselves developing along lines equally advantageous and profitable to themselves and their church, and at the same time they will be helping even the Moving Picture World to minimize the possible evil which may creep in the picture.

NEW EDUCATIONAL MOVEMENT.

Albert C. Derr. D.D., Ph.D., and manager of the Motographic Publicity Service, Inc., of South Bend, Ind., was an interesting caller at the office of the Moving Picture World, last week. Mr. Derr is well known in the lecture field and has given a great deal of attention to the motion picture and its educational and religious uses.

The company of which Mr. Derr is manager, proposes to secure a collection of educational and religious subjects for rental to schools, churches and Y. M. C. A.'s; it will carry a full line of projection machines and supplies for sale or rent, furnish operators and in every possible manner assist such institutions in the use of the motion picture.

Mr. Derr has affected a line of communication with educational and religious institutions all over the country and has received many letters of encouragement and praise for the enterprise in which he is engaged.

OBSERVATIONS.

BY OUR MAN ABOUT TOWN.

QUITE a discussion was overheard a few days ago as to whether the engagement of stars for leading parts in certain productions in pictures is a profitable investment, and to the best interests of the business as a whole. It was precipitated by an unassigned actor, and I refer to it for the reason that day by day petty jealousies become more noticeable in the ranks of the photoplayers. What has been the rule on the old stage almost from the beginning is rapidly taking deep root on the stage of the "mutes." There is no occasion for it, but it exists nevertheless. The standard of the photoplay has been raised by the steady acquisition of the higher grade of professional talent, and with it we have had thrust upon us that peculiar color of character which some of the best of actors are unable to subdue.

* * *

The discussion to which reference is made was precipitated by the actor stating that film manufacturers were standing in their own light by engaging special talent for certain parts when the people who patronize the picture shows prefer to see their respective stock company favorites in those parts. On being asked to make his statements more specific, he said, "I'll admit that the better class of people may be more interested in the reproduction of Miss, Mrs., or Mr., So-and-So in a part in which he has met with great success for many years, etc., etc., but what do the people who patronize the five-cent shows think, or care, of her, or him? The patrons of the cheaper theaters gave the moving pictures their first big boost. They were the first people to make the present-day stars of picture stock companies popular. They created the identity and when they see a good production with their favorites in minor parts and the leads portrayed by an outsider they are disappointed. Why not cast the favorites for the leads in these exceptional productions?"

* * *

A bystander remarked that if the manufacturers were not convinced the special engagement of stars carried weight they would not go to the expense, to which the actor replied: "Expense be hanged! Who pays the expense? Why, the exhibitor, or the man who buys the state rights. The exchange gets its money back by making increased charges. The seller of state rights secures himself by advance payments for territories. The specially engaged stars are the best secured of all. They get their bit before what they have done gets near the market."

* * *

It must be apparent to the reader that the actor quoted must have been influenced, to at least some extent, by a spirit of professional jealousy, a spirit that has become manifest, as I have already intimated, only since the great influx of professional people into the ranks of the photoplayers. Many of these people feel they are the "long-felt want" and bring with them a fund of wisdom which the business lacked up to the time of their advent in our midst. Quite a number of them have heretofore ranked with those who looked upon motion pictures with disdain and feel that their appearance in the field is a condescension, hence they proceed to expand their superiority and would resent the approach of specialists. There was a time when the picture stock companies operated like a family. Each helped the other along and co-operated in everything that tended to promote the welfare of producer, player, renter and exhibitor. Unfortunately this laudable spirit has become badly twisted at times by the appearance of Mr. Chesty, who wants to impress upon everybody the story of his life and what should follow.

* * *

This invasion is unfortunate. The chief sufferer is the invader, and what he gets comes to him through his own bad judgment. The next sufferer is the fellow who allows himself to be influenced by the invader. The stock company as a whole then suffers, because that spirit of co-operation which, in the earlier days, made the producers feel they had the hearty support of their employes in the struggle to uplift the enterprise has become adulterated by the unsolicited and, at times, rather presuming zeal of those who very inadvisedly allow themselves to be carried away by what is sometimes called abnormal expansion of the cranium.

Let all credit go to the five-cent show for what it did to perpetuate moving pictures at a time when influence of a most pronounced character was being brought to bear to crush them out of existence. Without them we would have had a comparatively small number of film exchanges, and without the exchanges we would probably have today but a baker's dozen of manufacturers. The five-cent house was an important factor. It was, indeed, a creative outlet of no small measure. But there are times when sentiment must give way to business. The five-cent theater of years past was of a different calibre compared with that of to-day. The proprietor of the old advanced with commendable zeal and we find him to-day among the foremost manufacturers of films and proprietors of the progressive theaters. The progressives serve as the better scale of measurement as to what the people want, and what they should be given. If the producers allowed themselves to be governed by the choice of patrons of the cheaper theaters entirely there would be no photoplays. The pictures would not hold the position they do to-day. The revenue from five-cent theaters alone would not warrant the expenditures manufacturers are making now. For several years there was a class of the amusement public that ignored the pictures as a very inferior form of entertainment. When pictures closed a vaudeville programme these people made for the exits, unless they happened to have children with them. "Why, then," some may ask, "did the managers of the theaters book the pictures?" The answer is, the pictures saved the booking of a more expensive act and, in the continuous houses, served as a "chaser." Then the nickel house started. The more they multiplied the more apparent it became in the vaudeville houses that the people were becoming more interested in pictures, and gradually the silent story enveloped the vaudeville end. One class of people still held aloof. They did not begin to "see" the pictures until the classics started to come out. When they saw that a higher grade of plays was being flashed upon the screen, their interest was aroused. This interest has grown with each advance made by the manufacturers in elaborate detail. People who probably would never have given the pictures more than passing notice had the five-cent standard been catered to are now regular patrons of the up-to-date picture houses. They are the higher-paying customers, and it is to them that the stars appeal. But not wholly to them. To say that there are patrons of the cheaper houses who have not heard of the stars would be a reflection; but they have not had the opportunity to see these stars in their great roles, and it is only reasonable to assume they are as anxious to see them in the pictures as are their more classy neighbors.

* * *

It is foolish to say that the specially engaged star does not add to the drawing power of a picture. In this instance names carry weight. It is a pity that photoplays were not made when Edwin Forrest, Charlotte Cushman, Edwin Booth, John McCullough, Lawrence Barrett, John E. Owens, John T. Raymond, J. K. Emmet and many others were upon the boards. What money-makers such films would be to-day, if only to recall the glories of the past? Historical? Yes. And in seeking stars of note for the leads in films that are being made to-day the producers are making history.

SIGNS OF THE TIMES.

By Hugh King Davis.

THE cost of living has increased, it seems unnecessary to announce the fact, but if bread and butter (or oleomargarine) have advanced, it's a sure shot that the question of amusement for the family is being settled in a mighty satisfactory manner, and along really economical lines.

When "dad" used to figure on going to the "show" it was a matter of dollars, if there was any size to the family at all. The show was a rare treat with many, a luxury to be used sparingly at occasional intervals.

But to-day it is far different; in every village and hamlet, as well as along festive Broadway of Old New York, stretch the tempting fronts of the Vaudettes and motion picture houses; here for a nickel or dime the man, or woman, or "kid" can take a trip to Africa, Germany or to any city in the United States, view the stars of the dramatic profession and be amused by lively comedy enacted by true comedians.

And in the camp of the manufacturers there is now a three-cornered fight—the business has grown by leaps and bounds, new concerns have sprung up to manufacture films; not only in the larger eastern cities but stretched clear to the Pacific coast, studios are busy producing the efforts of legions of photoplaywrights.

"Feature film" companies are getting more numerous every day, the Licensed camp is increasing its output, two-reel features are to become a part of their program. The two-reel is becoming a common matter; it is not hard to pick out many four, five and even six-reel productions—a whole evening's entertainment by the best in the profession.

And the signs of the times point to an increase even greater. Optimism looms immense in the motion picture field. I recall one of the first moving pictures I saw. It was a nickel-in-the-slot, electric machine on the Midway at the Columbian Exposition. Just a long-drawn greyhound racing along and jumping over barriers. Mighty simple, and that wasn't so many years ago. Then I recall a "black tent" at an Elk's Carnival in Grand Rapids, Michigan, a few years later; the show was "Mrs. Murphy's Baby"—now, you wise ones who recall that film smile. It was certainly not passed by any censor board, that's certain. And on another occasion not much later than the above I saw a moving picture. I fail to recall the title, but in it a woman was stabbed in full view of the audience as she lay half nude on the couch, the dagger quivering in her bosom and the red blood (?) pouring over her talcumed breast.

As a contrast just run over the pages of this issue of the Moving Picture World and note the releases, clean, educational, gripping films of all kinds, but not one to offend, all money makers in the open market. Times have changed for a fact.

It is an interesting comparison of the broadening out of the film business as far as the character of films is concerned, to go back only a year ago and compare the pages of the World now and then. Features are the rule today, scenic equipment, stage direction and dramatic companies that would have seemed an impossibility but a few months ago, now are just an ordinary incident of the day's work.

It was not so long ago that the moving picture theater was considered "cheap"—the folks who patronized the higher priced play house would pass the photo-play house with a smile, "not for them." And now these same folks crowd in to see their favorites, Nat Goodwin and the immortal Bernhardt herself perform in theaters of the best sort, at prices which are exceptional, considering the expense involved in production.

The big producers of legitimate road plays have felt the change, the astute managers of theaters in every town are waking up. The old "opry house" is given a new coat of paint, a projecting machine installed and the game goes on merrily, the people amused at a low price, the manager making money, instead of having an elephant on his hands. The film folks happy and the photoplaywright struggling along at the tail end of the parade valiantly endeavoring to keep up his pace with the onward movement.

It's but a matter of time, and I firmly believe in this prediction, when the regular theater at high prices will be a rarity, save in the very largest cities. The motion picture house is the logical solution of the amusement question and with the strict censorship reigning, the educational and travel pictures, as well as the stirring dramas and lively comedies, it would be a mighty hard person who could not be suited in some way.

All tastes are catered to, programs are varied and the talent employed in writing, producing and acting is being bettered steadily. The manufacture of films is improved, the projecting machines are better, the theaters themselves are being erected on safe and sane plans. Lighting is better, and advertising is healthy—though it could be vastly improved in many instances.

The photoplay is an accepted and permanent institution, a good, big, healthy youngster and being well educated and growing fast—the outcome is logical and easily foreseen, it is eventually the motion picture house that will dominate the entire amusement field.

TAYLOR AND LEONARD.

Producer Stanner E. V. Taylor and Miss Marion Leonard, that bright and particular photoplay star, are no longer connected with the Rex Company owing to the termination of their contract. Mr. Taylor has not made his plans for the future public, but it is understood that he contemplated plans which precluded the renewal of his contract with the Rex.

P. A. POWERS AND HIS STAFF OF MANAGERS.

Seated—A. A. Schmidt, P. A. Powers, J. I. Schnitzer. Standing—H. K. Somborn, Clarence Thompson, E. T. Lux, F. F. Hopkins, B. H. Goldstein.

"Don Juan and Charles V" (Pathe

By Louis Reeves Harrison.

IN addition to its historical beauty and accuracy, this play boldly presents the contrasts and contradictions of Spanish character and is replete with picturesque settings. It follows closely our own conclusion that the Spanish are proud, courteous and brave, but given to intrigue and magnificently imprudent, and the plot is one well calculated to bring out the half-vindictive, half-voluptuous nature of court life in the time of Phillip II.

The story begins with the abdication of Charles V. of Spain, whose vast and scattered territories had cursed his country with a foreign policy in nearly every corner of Europe. His Austrian dominions formed the bulwark which restrained the Moslem flood from deluging Eastern Europe, his galleys kept the Mediterranean a Christian sea, Flanders gave him a frontier regarded with jealous eyes by France, and the vast new dominions which had fallen under his sway in this country might have made our progress impossible during early centuries of our activity. There were ceaseless wars with the Turk on one hand and with the rising power of Protestantism on the other, while he had thorny problems at home. He fought his battles with great energy until middle age, then fell into despair from which he sought relief in religious mysticism.

I cannot too highly commend the type chosen to represent the emperor, Charles V., a large man of kingly dignity, whose acting was that of monarch long weary of his burden and delighted with the only son carefully reared for the exalted position he was to occupy. When Charles in the play mounts the throne before his assembled court to abdicate, we are in the presence of royalty and not merely gazing at a bunch of actors and supes in remnants from the wardrobe room. He is a veritable king, and his son every inch of a prince raised to listen to all men and trust none.

The careworn emperor declares:

"Wishing to consecrate the remaining years of our life to the saving of our soul in the monastery of Saint Just, we hereby abdicate the Throne of Spain in favor of our son, Phillip."

The proud old descendant of royalty dating back with that of his empress to John Gaunt of England, crowns Phillip, covers him with the royal mantle and kisses his forehead, then bows in allegiance to the newly created ruler, now acclaimed by the entire court.

His public duties over, his heavy burden placed on younger shoulders, Charles retires to a private chamber and becomes a man of simple and natural sympathies before renouncing the world. He writes to Don Quixada, a monkish preceptor, as follows:

"Having laid aside the cares of state, I wish before I enter the monastery to kiss my son, Don Juan, farewell, but he must never know that I am his father."

An interesting situation is now within view. A powerful monarch with one son in exalted position has a bastard, an irresponsible young fellow of royal descent who knows nothing of his relation to the adbicating nor the reigning king. A view of him is given at his studies, but his preceptor falls asleep and he steals forth to keep an engagement with a beautiful young lady of the city, Lucinde, with whom he is on the verge of an engagement matrimonial.

When Charles finally visits the preceptor with a combination of formality and secrecy, the latter goes forth to find the son, only to discover him seated on the top of an old wall which Lucinde has succeeded in climbing. Juan is torn away from the delights of billing and cooing with Lucinde and taken in to meet a man of importance, who is introduced as an old friend of his father. The scene between these two gives rise to some fine acting, exhibiting particularly the suppressed emotions of the great monarch now at the point of complete retirement.

All the scenes are admirably set up to this point, but we are given a veritable treat in the one immediately following, when the former Emperor of All Spain reaches the door of the monastery of Saint Just accompanied by one faithful attendant. In response to the attendant's signal, the great gates slowly open and reveal a deep interior of effective beauty, the reception room of novitiates especially illuminated on this occasion in honor of the illustrious man about to consecrate his life to religious devotion. The gradual disclosure of the interior with its beautiful altar is followed by the gathering of brother monks in solemn processional and the entrance of former power and world-wide activities. He had put behind him the realization of a dream which involved an Anglo-Spanish dynasty intended to dominate all America, the Mediterranean and the Indies, covering the wealthiest resources in the world save those of antagonistic Germany and France.

Scene from "Don Juan and Charles V" (Pathe).

Scenes from "Don Juan and Charles V," a Pathe Feature.

Charles passes up the room between two lines of gowned monks, soon to be his brothers, and, as he does so, the camera follows, bringing the interior gradually into closer view until the gates that discovered it are no longer seen. With the leading character, we are inside of the convent walls. I have never seen the delightful idea so effectively carried out as in this Pathé photodrama.

This ends the first part of the play and opens up the possibility of a romantic story. There are no flimsy quackeries, no tinsel and none of the claptraps that cheapen moving pictures, but an honest formula of noble types, in splendid vesture and settings worthy of the subject.

The second part opens with the escape of young Juan from his monkish preceptor, Don Quixada, and his clandestine meeting with Lucinde. The chamber is lighted principally from one point, and the result is made impressive by the shadows cast upon them and their surroundings. He kisses her hand in evidence of his intention, but their lips meet when they vow eternal fidelity. They emerge upon the exterior of a church where a crowd is gathering for the coronation of Phillip II. Phillip comes up on his horse, dismounts amid the applause of his subjects, and Lucinde, obeying a fatal impulse, gives her future monarch a flower. She retires to the protection of her true lover, the king's brother, but Phillip is instantly infatuated. Although at the hour of his greatest triumph, he becomes dominated by an ardent passion and sends one of his soldiers to learn where the beautiful girl makes her home.

Now is developed an interesting triangle—two brothers unknown to each other in love with the same woman. Unsuspecting Juan proceeds homeward with his fiance, kissing her on the way, and is followed by the new king's spy. We are carried beyond the portal into the home life of Lucinde—she is a girl of high quality and spirit—and given further views of the tender relations existing between the lovers. The spy hurries back with information that the young lady is within royal reach, conveying the information by a note:

"Sire: The young woman who had the honor of attracting your majesty's attention is of this city."

Ardent Phillip, who married several times during his reign and was not bothered by scruples in his dealings with court ladies at any period of his power, is shown in a spell of intense emotion which is worked up to an inextinguishable flame by subsequent events. He forces an entrance to Lucinde's house with a band of retainers and enters the privacy of her rooms masked. She is frightened until he unmasks, then kneels in humility as if overcome by the honor of the visit. Phillip wastes no time in making his purpose known—kings were no respecters of virtue as embodied in fair women—and meets with such violent repulse that he becomes enraged.

Juan rushes in on the scene, but is not given a glimpse of the intruder's face, Phillip hiding it in his cloak, until he struggles with the King and tears away the disguise. A violent struggle ensues when Juan is placed under arrest by the King's soldiers. He fights every inch of the way out of the room and keeps it up in the street before the door of Lucinde until he is overpowered by brute force.

Lucinde is badly frightened by the sudden disastrous results following the King's infatuation at the church door, but she remains unresponsive to his suit. She refuses to listen to his pleadings and manages to dismiss him when he resorts to threats. Not until he has gone does her spirit break, then she sinks down in a paroxysm of grief from which she cannot be roused by members of her household. Suddenly she has an inspiration. She rises and sends a note to the preceptor of Juan, telling him that he has been arrested by order of the King and begging for assistance. Don Quixada, the preceptor, is in a state of terror over the situation—the new King may begin his reign with fratricide. He decides to break in on the isolation of the old King at the monastery.

Charles V., in his cell, is deeply affected on learning of the danger menacing his two sons. He sends a note to the King as follows:

"Philip: Be lenient to your prisoner. You force me from my convent to tell you a terrible secret. Know, now, that Don Juan is your brother."

Philip summons the terrible Inquisitors and has Juan placed on the rack. He then goes to Lucinde's house with a band of ruffians and drags her by force to the place of torture. She is now placed between the alternative of acceding to Philip's demand or of witnessing the mutilation and horrible suffering of the man she loves. The action becomes very spirited as Lucinde repels the royal suitor and implores mercy at the feet of the chief Inquisitor. The messenger of Charles arrives at this tense moment and Philip learns for the first time that the man on the rack is his father's son. This news serves only to harden him, but the former King follows up his message personally, appearing on the scene in time to save one son from death and the other from committing an awful crime. The tragedy is averted, but it is difficult for Philip to become reconciled to the loss of Lucinde. A fine exhibition of self-struggle follows, in which he yields, and the lovers are restored to each other's arms.

NOTES FROM NESTOR.

Harry Edwards has gone East to join the Nestor force there. "Hank" was a great favorite, and all his old-time companions were sorry to see him go. He was the recipient of two handsome souvenirs.

Dorothy Davenport's pleasing personality will once again appear in the Nestor pictures. This clever little lady is acting under the direction of Mr. Fahrney. She is much liked by her fellow actors and actresses.

Thomas Ricketts is directing a very interesting picture this week. The play is domnated by those two well-known actresses, Gertrude Claire and Carrie Clark Ward (Mrs. Sedley Brown). Judging by their acting, they are lifting the simple theme of "The Second Home Coming" to a very high level.

Walter Pritchard, the clever little camera man with Mr. Fahrney's company, has been seriously ill, and for a time it was touch and go with him. He is mending slowly.

Louise Glaum, one time leading woman with the Western Pathe Company, has been taking leads with two Nestor companies. Miss Glaum has played with Nat Goodwin, Max Figman and other well-known people.

Richard Willis, editor of Photoplays, has been on the sick list, but is on the job again.

"Beau Brummel" (Vitagraph).

Reviewed by Louis Reeves Harrison.

IT is because photodramas are presented before millions of people that I think the producer should defer to this vast audience by using infinite pains in the details of a composition; in other words, possess and exhibit a sense of responsibility to the whole people. His medium has become a great expression of life as it was, or as it is, or as it should be according to the ideals of earnest and serious contemporaneous thought. Any man who is so little afraid of criticism that he courts it, who tests and retests his work until it rings true to himself, will have the secret happiness of one who has created well and the satisfaction of intelligent recognition among those who know a good thing when they see it. Thus far can he go—the opinion of the vast audience is more or less a mystery to all of us—but that is better far than writing down to a supposed ignorance among the masses. In this country, you who are reading and I who am writing belong to the masses, are glad of it and resent the idea that any old thing in the line of photospasm will do for us.

The audience is little concerned with what might be called the "mechanics," the wires and wheels and cogs and springs of a photoplay, but as these make up the coherent whole it is in the critic's province to give them especial attention, so I watched "Beau Brummel" for the use of broken-down devices to put a play over because I am long accustomed to see them, but I was agreeably surprised. The director who kept its scene plot clearly before him, who utilized exquisite taste in such effects of environment as furniture properties and costumes, who never slacked in his efforts to make the members of his company express the characters through themselves, has given us something to enjoy and think about in the entertainment he has furnished, and has done this by a high quality of production rarely presented on the screen.

"Beau Brummel" as a drama whose interest centers entirely upon the leading role, would fail into commonplace if not entirely fail without intelligent comprehension and interpretation of the principal character. This was assigned to James Young, a talented actor of interesting personality, who has been associated in his varied experience with Sir Henry Irving, Mrs. Fisk, and Viola Allen, but whose marvelous knowledge of make-up seems even a greater asset, so completely does it submerge his own identity in that of the impersonation.

Mr. Young has done more than correctly portray the character in lead, he has made one which reaches out and enlists our sympathies, although it is that of an effeminate fop, an idler who lived exclusively on what he could win without effort and who did not disdain to let friends show devotion in vain. Ridiculous as his pretensions are, they are so contrasted with those of eminent gentlemen of his times, even those of royal birth and privilege, that we like his nerve and feel sorry for him when he breaks down in adversity. The others' parts are admirably assumed, especially those of Helen Balleret and Isadore. The cast is as follows:

Beau Brummel	James Young
Lord Balleret	William Phillips
Helen Balleret	Clara Kimball Young
The Duchess	Julia Swayne Gordon
Lord Alvanley	James Morrison
Prince of Wales	Charles Chapmay
Isadore, Brummel's valet	Etienne Girardot

The story so largely depends upon characterization and the visual appeal of the dozen beautiful scenes that it is not an easy one to tell in this form. It revolves around the love of Helen Balleret for Beau Brummel and its unhappy issue resulting from the latter's insult to the Prince of Wales. Helen's love is first discovered by the Duchess of Devonshire through a miniature worn by the girl—it is that of the famous Beau. The introductory scenes move slowly,

Scene from "Beau Brummel," a Vitagraph Subject.

Scene from "Beau Brummel," a Vitagraph Subject.

but clearly impress the characters and it is seen that all of them are moving on an even social relation.

The character of Brummel is intensified in the third act, where he is discovered at a dressing-table laden with perfumes and cosmetics, the languid recipient of attentions from his servant. Wales and Balleret are among the friends who call upon the famous Beau and exhibit interest in the rather feminine details of his toilet, the Prince of Wales expressing particular delight with the snuff Brummel uses, and the inanity of all three is profoundly impressed upon those who watch the picture. They are about as idle and senseless as a bunch of bridge whist players, though their idiotic pursuits are more wholesome.

There is a beautiful ensemble in Scene IV, that of Lady Devonshire's ball. Helen is in the foreground when Brummel is announced and betrays her love for him through her agitation. The girl seems dazed when he speaks to her—she is deeply infatuated, but becomes radiant when he succeeds in leading her away from the throng to a picturesque spot in the garden. There he presses his suit openly and is accepted not only by the girl but by Balleret when the latter appears with the Duchess.

We are well introduced to the principal characters and the happy relation between the lovers is established when the first incident of importance occurs at a smart club of the period. Brummel is discovered gambling with Wales, Balleret and others, and winning heavily. Brummel pulls the bell rope and orders drinks for his friends and they are served, but Wales is troubled over his losses. He rises angrily and denounces Brummel as a sharper, stating that he will not play with him again. When Brummel good-naturedly offers his snuff-box the Prince knocks it from his hand. Brummel conducts himself with more dignity than the future heir of the throne of England. He asks Wales to ring the bell. This constitutes a dreadful insult in the country of snobs, but I fear its effect upon an American audience will be wholly lost. For the purpose of the play it makes Brummel a social outcast and gives rise to a series of incidents which lead to his downfall.

First of these is Balleret's decision that Helen shall not again speak to Brummel until he has apologized to the Prince for his insult. Helen implores the Duchess to take a note to Brummel in which she explains the grave situation. The Duchess goes to Brummel's own rooms and not only delivers the note but pleads with him in Helen's behalf. In spite of all these influences, Brummel refuses to tender his excuse, and disaster follows in the insistent demands of his creditors.

The faithful valet of Brummel is at his wits' end to shield his master from contact with the money lenders, and we are soon treated to a spectacle of royal revenge. Bad as it is to have the collectors call for unpaid bills, a worse scene occurs before the exterior of a haberdasher's. There is a sign over the door and window of the shop which announces that the keepers of it are "Purveyors to His Royal Highness, the Prince of Wales, and to Beau Brummel." When Wales appears in person and when the owner learns how peeved he is with Brummel, a ladder is put up to the sign and a painter daubs out Brummel's name. This terrible revenge causes Wales a burst of immoderate delight, but when Brummel is seen he does not turn a hair. He merely asks the companion of Wales, "Who is your fat friend?"

Brummel now begins to slide down the social scale, but keeps his nerve till the last, staking all that he has on one turn of the cards. When he loses he is cast into the debtor's prison, but his courage is unbroken and he is as much of a beau as ever. He is seemingly insensible to the terrors of his situation.

Helen is horrified to learn of his imprisonment and manages to send money through his valet to effect his release.

His debts are thus paid and his freedom is regained. But he goes forth an outcast, despised by the community whose most envied member he had been for many years.

We are not treated to a view of his gradual decay, but are given a glimpse of him hungry and cold in a garret some two years later. There he sits wrapped in an old dressing gown before the embers of a fire taking snuff, his hands twitching nervously or wandering aimlessly, and his face giving all the evidences of mental dissolution. His faithful valet enters to say that it is impossible to procure food. Brummel is unaffected by the prospects of starvation. He bows to imaginary guests, presents one to another, and repeats his early triumphs in what is only a mockery of his former gallantry of manner. He finally becomes weak and sinks back into his chair from physical inability to stand, though his spirit is unbroken.

The acting of James Young in this scene is masterly. It is so strong that one can only feel regret that his opportunities up to this time have been limited by the requirements of an unemotional role. I should think that Mr. Young would be at his best in some part which would offer him greater variety of situation and action or in a number of diverse roles where his versatility could be placed in evidence.

The last scene of the play exhibits Beau Brummel after being rescued by his friend, Alvanley. It was the last scene of the play that I saw, but all the pathos is lodged in that preceding it and there I should conclude the photodrama, because there is no possibility of a happy ending under the circumstances. Poor Brummel was headed straight for a tragic end from the outset and there is nothing to be achieved by averting the logical conclusion. I should have had him die in his garret, a smile on his face, his soul aflame at the last moment, his mind lighted up with visions of his past social triumphs. Then have what is shown, the vision of Helen.

We are all more or less in doubt about endings. One able critic states that the death of a leading character confers a distinction which should not be accorded without due and sufficient cause. On the other hand, a man dies when he cannot live, and Brummel's career was completely at an end. I am deeply interested in the big photodramas which are yet to come, and perhaps I am wrong in framing now what should be done in the future, but it seems to me that strong plays should end instead of leaving off. Then, if we are dealing with the truth, tragedy is quite as often the termination of our problems as their perpetuation. One of the most tolerant of critics has said, "Human life is glory to the eye of faith, a jest to the comedian, and a riddle to those whose spirits are tuned to the note of tragedy."

"FLYING A" AT SANTA BARBARA.

American's Western Contingent Now Comfortably Located and Busy.

With the exception of George Pierolot, character actor, who is taking hot mud baths near San Bernardino, the entire "Flying A," of the American Film Manufacturing Company, is comfortably located in Santa Barbara, Cal., and Wednesday, July 10, completed their first story in Santa Barbara scenery. Director Allan Dwan has named it "The Greaser and the Weakling."

There was more or less excitement about the taking of the first film. Mr. Dwan chose the old Dixie Thompson ranch house, just west of the city, as the scene. The ranch is rented by a very intelligent Chinese, who raised garden truck. He happened to be away, and two Chinese who know little English were cultivating nearby when the auto with the principals of the company arrived. The Chinese paid no attention to them, but a few minutes later "Chick" Morrison came dashing up at the head of his bunch of cowboys. Morrison was armed to the teeth, ready for any sort of fray. One of the Chinese took a look, and then beat it. He dashed down to the road for half a mile at full speed until he met Tom Edgar, the constable of the district, just outside the city limits.

The Chinese gesticulated wildly, and the constable thought something frightful must be taking place and hurried back to the ranch house, where everything was soon explained. Mr. Dwan placated the Chinese with a dollar. The two Chinese then watched proceedings with the greatest interest, and soon commenced to understand, as there are no better patrons of moving picture theaters in the West than the Orientals.

The following day was made a bit interesting by three members of the company running up against the traffic ordinance. Kerrigan and "Chick" Morrison drove in an automobile to the depot to see about some belated baggage. A few minutes after arriving a policeman informed them they had broken the speed limit. So they appeared before Police Judge E. A. Rizor.

"Starting in pretty early, aren't you?" laughingly asked the jovial judge, when informed who the two were.

It was all taken as a joke, and Judge Rizor, on behalf of the police department, formally welcomed the moving picture folks to Santa Barbara.

But Pete Morrison was up against a different proposition. He rode into town, dropped the reins on the sidewalk while he went into a State Street store. When he came out there was an officer.

"This is against the traffic ordinance," he was informed.

"What is?" he asked.

"Leaving your horse untied."

"I guess I better not ride into town any more, if that's the case," said Morrison. "That horse is better than tied, with the reins lying on the ground this way. You couldn't move him with a club or a cannon until they were picked up. That's the way all our horses are trained. But if I should tie him to a post, he would resent it, and probably would tug away until something broke—and then there might be a runaway."

A councilmanic wag when informed of this said it probably might be a good thing under the circumstances to pass an ordinance making it a high offense for a cowboy to tie his horse on the streets of Santa Barbara.

But the people of Santa Barbara have taken fine to the company and are pleased at the prospects of this becoming the permanent home of the "Flying A."

AN ECLAIR WEEKLY.

Word comes that the American Eclair Company is about to launch an "Animated Weekly" of pictured events. The Eclair output will be broadened in other respects. There will be a regular weekly release of educational subjects and colored pictures will be issued with greater frequency than heretofore.

MR. GASTON MELIES.

The cut herewith is from a photograph of Mr. Gaston Melies taken in the grounds of the California Studio by Mr. A. E. Smith, of the Vitagraph Company. Mr. Melies has just left for a tour of the Islands of Oceanica, where he hopes to secure some unique settings for his new company of players.

Doings at Los Angeles.

Latest Reports from the Seat of War—Various Items of Interest.

FOR pure news interest the fight between the Universal Company and its erstwhile member, the Bison Company, is still the big thing this week. The adjective "erstwhile" may not be justified, for the latest development is that the courts are to decide whether the Bison is a "former" or a "present" member of the Universal combine. This end of the fight was transferred this week from the domain of force into the domain of strategy and guile. In other words, the differences between the guardians of the Bison property and the invaders headed by the respective managers of the Nestor and Imp plants have been put up to the local courts to decide.

A week ago Fred Balshofer and his chief lieutenant, Fred Mace, late of the Imp Company, were besieged in the Bison plant at Edendale while all around walked guards armed with rifles, sawed-off shotguns and portable gatling guns of Colt design. At the Santa Monica Bison studio another small army of gunmen loyal to Balshofer and the interests of the original owners of the Bison Company were guarding that plant. On the other side were E. W. Gilmore, of the Nestor Company, backed by members of the Nestor and Imp companies who were laying plans to capture the Bison properties, claiming to have authority from the board of directors of the Universal Company in New York to do so.

For several days the situation was tense and then the Universal faction relieved it by going into the Superior Court of Los Angeles County and making application for an order restraining Balshofer and the others from "dissipating the property of the Universal Company, to wit, the Bison plant," and directing them to turn it over to the possession of the accredited representatives of the Universal Company. The case is set for hearing before Judge Walter Bordwell, the judge who presided over the McNamara cases on July 15. Meanwhile the situation remains, as the lawyers say, in statu quo.

Soon after the hostilities opened a week ago, both sides received assistance from the East. The first arrival was W. M. Swanson, secretary of the Universal Company, who came to take personal charge of the fight. The day following, H. J. Streyckmans, secretary of the New York Motion Picture Company, landed on the scene, having come from New York in 86 hours, which is fast traveling. Both are still here and will remain until some settlement is reached.

No Fight Pictures in Los Angeles.

The question of whether the motion pictures of the Wolgast-Rivers fight held at Vernon on July 4th will be exhibited is agitating the local fight fans. The fight was photographed by F. J. Balshofer on contract for Tom McCarey, the promoter, and McCarey is now negotiating for the sale of the films. They are said to be extraordinarily good as examples of photography.

Pending a sale of the state rights, McCarey is figuring on showing them at some local theater, but is up against an ordinance prohibiting entertainments which are immoral or against public policy. Heretofore fight pictures have been suppressed on several occasions under the terms of this ordinance, but McCarey consulted a high-priced lawyer who showed him a possible flaw in the ordinance which would make it impossible for the city to sustain a prosecution. Having discovered this loophole, McCarey announced that he would show the films and invite the authorities to inaugurate a prosecution. At the last moment, however, it was discovered that there is still another obstacle, which is the ordinance recently passed creating the Municipal Board of Motion Picture Censors. This board has arbitrary power to prohibit the exhibition of any film by merely issuing an order against it, and the probabilities are that the ordinance from which it draws its powers is legal. Although the board has not passed on the fight films it will have to approve them before they can be shown and a majority of the members have privately expressed the opinion that motion pictures of prize fights are not fit for exhibition in a city which has a stringent ordinance against prize fighting.

One interesting feature in connection with the films is that they settled a hot controversy that had been raised on the question of whether Rivers, who lost, was on the mat a full ten seconds when the referee counted him out. When the films were developed it was discovered that there were twelve feet of film in which Rivers was prostrate.

Brevities.

Several new theaters have opened here in the last week. R. B. Frist is operating the American at Long Beach, which has a capacity of 400 persons. The Joyland Theater at the same beach has been opened by M. H. Kuhn, who is able to take care of 650 persons at each performance, and often does it. Mike Gore, who owns the Plaza and the Broadway theaters in the downtown district of Los Angeles, has added another house to his string—one at 33rd and Central Avenue, with a capacity of 600. Two new theaters have also opened along South Park Avenue in this city. The one at 53rd Street is to be operated as a part of the K. & K. circuit. Its capacity is 500. The other at Vernon Avenue belongs to the Perlius Brothers—a misnomer, because, while there are six Perlius brothers, there is also a sister in the company. The seating capacity here is 620. All the above have contracted for Licensed programs.

D. Bershon, manager of the California Film Exchange, independent, will go to San Francisco next week to take charge temporarily of the company's exchange in the northern city. He expects to return to Los Angeles in about ten weeks. While he is gone, D. S. Markowitz will be acting manager of the local exchange.

John F. Pribyl, personal representative of William Selig, head of the Selig Polyscope Co., is in Los Angeles on one of the semi-occasional visits to the plant. Mr. Selig, who spent several weeks here, returned just before his personal representative arrived.

Three of the producing companies maintaining studios in this city have sent their companies away on special pictures.

The Pathe Western company, headed by James Young Deer, is still located at its temporary quarters on one of the big ranches of Orange County, near Santa Ana, where a series of big Western pictures are being made.

The Selig company spent last week in Bear Valley, a mountain resort about 100 miles from Los Angeles, and immediately upon their return to this city they were packed off again to San Juan Capistrano, near San Diego, where one of the famous old missions is located, to work in a drama dealing with the early days of California.

George Melford, of the Kalem company at Glendale, has taken eighteen of his people to New Mexico on some mysterious business that has to do with a forthcoming production. The details will have to wait until later.

At the Imp and Nestor studios the usual releases are being turned out notwithstanding the troubles among the officials of the Universal company. The Bison forces at Edendale have not been working the last week while the offices have been under guard, but at the Santa Monica outdoor studio the work has been uninterrupted.

BLANCHE WALSH.

Appearing in a Three-Reel Production of "Resurrection" Being Produced by the Masko Film Co., New York.

"The Miller of Burgundy" (Selig.)

Reviewed by Jas. S. McQuade.

IN reviewing films there is always a chance of overlooking a good average release for the more high-sounding special or feature, although the one-reel subject may offer all, or most of, the elements of a successful photoplay. While viewing a private presentation of "The Miller of Burgundy" the other day, I was impressed by the simplicity of the story, the rural picturesqueness of the scenes, the uniform excellence of the acting and, above all, by the artistic working out of details, which always keeps one in the atmosphere of the old mill and its surroundings.

The producer of this film, Mr. Oscar Eagle, possesses the talent of being able to utilize the aids that serve to bring out of a simple story all of its possibilities. With a fine imagination that is always kept well in check by keen technical skill. Mr. Eagle adds here and there touches of detail and action often overlooked by directors in the production of average subjects) which lead us into the very heart of the life and surroundings of the story.

I have also in mind another charming little story produced by Mr. Eagle, which I saw at Mr. Nielsen's Parkway Theater recently. It was entitled "Under Suspicion." The plot is simplicity itself and the story familiar, but Producer Eagle endowed it with a heart interest that aroused deep emotion and made it a lasting reminder of the dangers attached to a hasty decision, when another's welfare is in the balance.

Scene from "The Miller of Burgundy" (Selig).

The scenario of "The Miller of Burgundy" was written several years ago by John M. Bradlet, formerly on the staff of the World. His familiarity with rural life in France enabled him to write a charming story and to convey the scenes and quaint atmosphere of provincial life in Burgundy.

The cast shows happy selection. Frank Weed, as the old miller, offers a fine character study. Louise, the miller's daughter, loses none of the graces of delightful rural maidenhood in the person of Miss Adrienne Kroell, whose impersonation has the charm of unaffectedness. The remaining roles of importance—Bontemps, a rich Parisian, and his son, Charles—have been capably sustained by T. J. Commerford and Allen Mathes.

The opening scene shows the interior of the old mill, with the miller and his men busily at work. This scene is worthy of great praise as a model of setting and painstaking detail. We see the postman call and deliver a letter to the miller, all the employees standing around him as he reads it. The letter is from Bontemps, a rich Parisian, who offers to buy Meunier's mill. The hands oppose the acceptance of the offer, much to the miller's delight, and a letter is at once despatched to Bontemps refusing his bid.

Another picturesque scene, which follows soon afterwards, gives an exterior view of the mill. The mill race leading to the pond in the background, wagons laden with grain, drivers and workmen, ducks disporting themselves in the water and fowl picking stray grains in the yard give delightful atmosphere. This is further heightened by the mill wheel as it revolves amid the dripping spray. It is now the lunch hour and Louise is seen approaching with her basket. She serves the meal to her father with much dainty winsomeness, the two figures being clearly revealed against the fine background.

The scene changes to Bontemps' office in Paris. There we witness the rage of the old banker after reading the miller's letter refusing his offer. He summons his son, Charles, and commissions him to call on Meunier and renew the offer for his mill. As Charles approaches the Meunier home the horse attached to the carriage runs away and the young man is thrown out and badly injured.

He is carried into the miller's home and is nursed to convalescence by Louise. The old miller had discovered early that the young man was the son of his rich persecutor, but, listening to the pleadings of Louise, he had permitted him the shelter of his home. Not hearing from his son, Bontemps wrote him a letter, brutal in its reference to the miller, demanding that he secure the mill at once. Charles reads it to the miller and Louise and immediately sets out for Paris to change his father's whim. Love has sprung up between Louise and him and he is determined to thwart his father's purpose.

Scene from "The Miller of Burgundy" (Selig).

The meeting in Paris results in a quarrel between the father and son, and the latter quits his home. Bontemps père determines to bring the miller to terms and pays him a visit. Meunier flatly refuses to dispose of the mill and the banker leaves with the threat that he will build a modern one, across the way, and ruin the trade of the old mill. This he does and, in course of time, the new mill gets all the grain from the country 'round. Meunier, broken in spirit and sustained only by the tender ministrations of his daughter, is forced to close down his mill, and we sadly view the big wheel resting and the water in the mill race sluggishly reflecting the sunlight.

But an accident changes all the current in the affairs of the old mill. Bontemps, who has called one day to see Louise, in order to secure her promise that she will give up his son, falls into the mill race and is saved from drowning by the old miller. His eyes are opened to the virtues of Meunier and his daughter and he resolves to make amends for his injustice. He closes down the new mill forever and directs all his business to the old one.

The closing scene shows a merry meeting of the villagers at the village inn, with Bontemps, Meunier, Louise and Scene from "The Miller of Burgundy" (Selig).

Charles seated at a table in the foreground. The young people beam with happiness, while their elders look on with smiles of satisfaction.

The release date of this film is set for July 25.

OLD FACES IN A NEW FILM.

"Aunty's Romance," a Delightful Subject Portrayed by Vitagraph Veterans.

By G. F. Blaisdell.

THE appearances of the old-time Vitagraph Girl are so rare these days that to see her is well worth a long walk. If you question this assertion, go to see Florence Turner in "Aunty's Romance." If you are an old-time picture-goer this film will have an added interest by reason of the appearance with Miss Turner of the man who for so long played opposite to her—Maurice Costello. That was in the days when the Vitagraph Company was not the great organization it is to-day—for, surely, if any evidence were needed as to the rank of this company it would be furnished in the releases of July 12 and 13. "The Foster Child" and "Aunty's Romance" are issued as ordinary, every-day affairs. There is no suggestion in the advance announcements of the company that these two possess unusual merit. Yet they are pictures in which Americans may take justifiable pride—Americans abroad perhaps even more than Americans at home. The former will feel that in black and white the home product equals in all cases and in most is superior to the Continental output.

"Aunty's Romance" opens in Paris. Stephen Fisk, Jr., (Costello) receives a message telling of the death of his father in New York and requesting his immediate return. On his arrival here his lawyer (William Shea) tells him his father died bankrupt. Just prior to this business call he had visited Doris, his sweetheart (Miss Turner). She had gone tripping to meet him, blithe, light-hearted and charming. Stephen calls again upon Doris after seeing his lawyer. The two are sitting by the fireplace. He tells her of his financial condition. Doris' manner changes; she is frigidly thoughtful. She tells him she will not marry him until he has made a success in business. She returns to him the engagement ring. Stephen freezes; contemptuously he throws the ring in the fire. Doris shudders. Stephen leaves the house.

Doris leans on the arm of her chair and sobs. The temporary exterior of iciness has melted. She is again a woman. Aunty comes into the room. Mrs. Maurice was never more sweet and motherly than in this scene. Tenderly she tells Doris that money is not all in life; that to live without the love of the one who is prized above all others is to live less than a full life. Aunty tells how in her early days she had loved Stephen's father, but it had come to naught; she had never had her honeymoon.

When Stephen had left Doris he was in evening dress. We now see him "in the ranks." He is leaving a factory with the other workers. His dinner pail is on his arm. He wears a soft shirt, open at the throat. As he passes the home of Doris he sees Aunty, unconscious, on the great granite stoop. She had just left her old-fashioned rig and had fainted. Stephen carries Aunty into the house and lays her on her bed. Doris comes in and asks him to telephone for the family physician. It is Harry Morey who responds.

The doctor shakes his head. The end is near. He brings Stephen into the room. Aunty reaches out her arms to him. He kneels by the bed and puts his arms about her. She tells him of her old love for his father, and in his face sees again her one sweetheart. We see the visions that pass before her—the days of her youth, garbed in the great skirt of Civil War times; of a marriage ceremony—a ceremony that never took place, but should have; of two lovers in the twilight, their faces close together, outlined against a mass of cloud. She tells Stephen of her wish that he and Doris marry.

Doris is standing by the bed. Beside her is the doctor. His hand is on her shoulder. Not now is he the family physician; he is the friend, the comforter. Aunty's arms drop. The doctor leans over; he nods his head. Stephen throws himself across the body of his lifelong friend. Doris kneels beside him. Her hand seeks his and rests on it. A moment later the two rise to their feet. They embrace—she in her dainty house-gown, he in his rough garb. Aunty's wish is to be fulfilled.

If the highest expression of dramatic art lie in the creation of the perfect illusion it will be conceded by those who see this film that Maurice Costello in his direction of "Aunty's Romance" has approximated it. W. Hanson Durham is the author. It might be said that a man of education and refinement, reared in luxury, with expectations of coming into a fortune, would not be compelled to seek such humble employment as Stephen accepted. The fact remains that in everyday life it has been done.

It would be unfair to all the principals in this photoplay to specially mention any one. Miss Turner, Mrs. Maurice and Messrs. Costello and Morey and even Shea in the few moments he was on the screen were all that good actors should be; it was splendid teamwork. Perhaps an exception may be made of Harry Morey. His role of the family physician was in a measure a minor one, but his work will appeal to many as being an interpretation of the ideal doctor—the friend in health, in sickness and in bereavement. It will recall his splendid characterization of the surgeon in "The Light That Failed."

MISS ROSE FIRESTONE.

Until recently Miss Firestone was appearing as an American photoplayer, meeting with much favor on account of her ability and strong personality in the slient drama. Miss Firestone is now in Europe and while there will appear in Eclair productions.

Advertising for Exhibitors

Conducted by EPES WINTHROP SARGENT.

That Man Montgomery.

PROBABLY every exhibitor has heard of Montgomery, "the" motion picture man, but few know him as well as they should. That he is an old amusement man, an energetic and efficient advertiser and a hustler who had created a chain of handsome houses in the most difficult territory is motion picture history, and ten years from now the dispassionate chronicler of the early days of the photoplay theater will credit Frank T. Montgomery with keeping a year ahead of his business. Through his courtesy we have been permitted to look over the press book that the main office keeps, and this volume gives not only an advertising record of the houses, but it gives the keynote of the man and his methods.

About a year ago Montgomery (you never think of him as Mr. Montgomery; he always alludes to himself as "Montgomery, the Motion Picture Man") advertised for some houses and stated that he did not care whether the house had made money or not. He wanted to know only the size of the house, its location and appearance. He knew that a house might be a loser, but a potential winner under the proper management, and he has been spreading his houses all over Florida, Georgia and Alabama. The press book gives the record of these campaigns.

Strong on Trade Mark.

In personal beauty Montgomery runs a strong second to the man who puts his face on the talcum powder boxes, but he makes his face his trade mark and our readers will recall the familiar cut with the strong line background. It is a face that is quickly remembered and Montgomery does not use it because he thinks he is giving the public a treat. He knows that his cut is so intimately associated with the Montgomery advertising that even those who do not stop to read the statements have been reached by the advertisement. In time Montgomery came to be a standard and people who go to the houses through curiosity "to see what this fellow is doing" remain as regular patrons.

The value of a trade mark cannot be computed in line rates. It is something that must be taken more or less on faith, but with the knowledge that it is worth while. It must be backed up by a good performance in a good house, but that's part of the Montgomery campaign. He is flamboyant at times, using "circus stuff" for a large part, but there is no misstatement of fact, no gaudy, lying lines that sound well but are put in merely for show. Montgomery is too clever to build a house and then tear it down through misrepresentation. He puts his best foot forward at all times and sees to it that the foot wears a silk sock and a polished shoe, but it's his own foot and not an artificial fake and there's a man behind it all.

Making His Presence Known.

Montgomery believes in being one of the people. If there is a convention in town he invites the delegates to be his guests. At times he does more, as, for example, when he called on the citizens of Jacksonville to give a convention an auto ride that they might see all the town and backed up the call by donating his own machine. It tickled Jacksonville that this man, lately arrived, was so proud of their city, so they all came to the call with a will and backed up the comparative stranger's efforts to make the city known to the other strangers—and Montgomery was less of a stranger to them after that. He was a Jacksonville man working for the city. It is one of the secrets of his success. He isn't merely "that fellow that runs the picture show," he is Frank Montgomery, "one of our enterprising citizens."

One of his first cares after locating a house or site is to establish his credit through reference to business firms he has had dealings with elsewhere. Every former creditor is a Montgomery boomer and so it quickly gets about that the new showman is "all right" in every way.

Liberal with Printer's Ink.

The next step in the publicity campaign is a newspaper contract and it's the sort of advertising that gets them talking. Here is a sample:

HAVE YOU EVER NOTICED?

This is a mighty funny world—
Many men know your business
Better than you do yourself.

I heard a fellow remark:
"Montgomery's going to open to-day at 10 A. M."
The other man inquired:
"What's he going to feature?"
The fellow who thought he knew said:
"He's going to feature vaudeville."

Then he goes on to explain that he never had the slightest idea of featuring vaudeville, that pictures are plenty good enough for him and that the new house will open at noon and not two hours earlier. Just the plain announcement of these facts would not have attracted the attention this apparently controversial advertisement drew.

After the house is under way a popularity contest may be run. He has conducted several of these with automobiles as first prizes and plenty of other things to make the list look large. He runs the contest for a period sufficiently long to get his money back and by selling tickets good for the future he sells the house far ahead and a contest running perhaps three months has an evident effect on six months' business, many of the admissions for the ensuing three months being paid for in the last few days of the contest that vote records may be swelled.

Educationals.

Films like the Fly Pest, Boil Your Water and the long Edison list are good grist for the Montgomery mill. He gets local physicians interested, welfare societies are urged to help the cause along, the aid of the newspapers is enlisted and special advertising is thrown out, with the result that the exhibition becomes a function.

But Montgomery does not wait for the big things to come along. If the local Red Cross is selling tuberculosis stamps he is the first to come forward with an offer to run slides and the same tender is made any important local charity. We recently alluded to his art campaign in Atlanta and there have been many others along the same line. It helps the town and it helps Montgomery because it does help the town. He is looked upon as a leader. He is something more than the manager of a ten cent picture show.

Good Lines.

Here are some of the best lines from the Montgomery book. Take the question of repeaters, for example. He says:

Three New Pictures Daily

Is the magnet that crowds the Grand to overflowing

Not one repeater
I have three fine pictures to-day that have not been seen this side of Atlanta. If you see an old picture at the Grand

Ask for and get your money back

And the advertisement means precisely what it says. If a ringer should get in the money would be returned with argument.

Disposing of his interest in a vaudeville house in Jacksonville and opening the Grand to pictures he announces that the first thousand ladies to attend will be presented with a free copy of the Motion Picture Story Magazine. The magazine is useful in making fans, but it is rather an expensive souvenir, probably costing the entire entrance fee. In the same issue his reasons for selling the vaudeville house are plainly stated to be his belief that he can do better with a picture theater because of his greater experience in that line. Here was a case where flamboyancy was not called for and the statement is made with a directness that is the more convincing because of the contrast.

Frank Talks.

Every little while Montgomery sits down and chats in printer's ink. Here is what he had to say to the patrons in Columbia:

New York and other cities show the exact pictures that are shown in all my houses. The whole truth of the matter is this. In every trade, business or profession you will find a representative person; that man excells; and it is the thought and worry he applies to his business that makes him stand out pre-eminently in his class. To be a leader in any line requires deep thought and thought causes worry, and worry causes grey hairs, and therefore I say to you "The Grey Hair Tells the Story." Some men devote a few hours a day to studying your wants, but the wan who lays awake nights figuring out an advantage for you is the man who wins out in the long run.

Time Tells All Tales, and You Mark My Prediction:
The time will come when every right-thinking and well-meaning man and woman in Columbia will thank me for entering Columbia's amusement field.

This is but a part of the advertisement, but the keynote to the rest and the catchline, "The Grey Hair Tells the Story," rouses interest.

Here's another confident prediction made to the Atlantans which has since been proven correct. He explains that he is about to open a theater there and alludes to the varying opinions of himself, winding up with:

You can do as you please and think as you please, but

I'll Make You Come Across

which the same has been done to the entire satisfaction of Montgomery and the Atlantans.

Ten Cents a Try.

When the Buffalo Jones pictures were in Jacksonville he advises you that "it costs but ten cents to try to get in." It would be pretty hard to beat that line for a suggestion of big business, though in the residential sections it might frighten away some of the more timid. Better is the catchline: "You may have to wait in line, but you'll be fully repaid," which appars in another advertisement.

When a program failed, this was the announcement:

Majestic No. 4 closed for the day.
New pictures at the No. 2 and No. 3 Majestics.

A portion of my pictures were delayed and rather than charge an admission to see pictures that I have shown before I have decided not to open the No. 4 Majestic to-day. The entire orchestra and three singers who are engaged for this theater will render their services to-day and to-night at Majestic No. 2.

That makes the best of a bad situation and probably the results in admissions were the same.

Taking a Chance.

For a Sunday performance when the matinee business might have been poor, it is announced that children accompanied by an adult will be admitted free and there is added:

Now Listen to Me:

Here's my proposition. I don't want you to pay for any child under ten years of age and in order to gain admission for yourself, if you are an adult and have not the price to spare, simply tell the doorman MONTGOMERY INVITED YOU and he'll admit you any time between 1 and 6 P. M.

That sort of thing makes talk and business.

Meeting Opposition.

Characteristic is his advertising to combat the interest in a local stock star. The headlines announce that "I shall try to divide honors with Mabel," and in characteristic fashion he tells how on his arrival in town he asked for the best show and was referred to the performance of the Mabel Paige stock company. It was evident that they were too strongly intrenched to be driven out, so he does not rouse antagonism by an attack on the favorites, but merely announces that the field is large enough for both and that he shall seek to divide the honors with her. He makes friends of all Miss Paige's friends and attracts their attention as nothing else could do. It's a good way to meet the competition of the always popular stock star until you can make the fans take up the stars of the picture field.

For the hot weather last year he used this argument:

24 Fans, count em—24.

Now here's a proposition you can't beat. This applies to my lady patrons only. Any afternoon you are in my house look around and see how many ladies are using fans. If you can count six of them fanning themselves, call the attention of the doorman to this fact. He will at once be seen leaving the theater and on his return will hand YOU and EVERY LADY who uses the fan a season pass to the Grand.

Along the same lines is this from another advertisement:

If I Can't Cool You Off
I'll Give You Back Your Money.

The Secrets.

That sort of talk may sound a little loud to conservative advertisers, but it is all backed by sincerity and this saves it from the classification that in many quarters it might seem to deserve. If he announces that you can have your money back if you do not think the house cool enough, he'll give it back to you without protest, knowing that you'll go out and give him more than ten cents worth of advertising in the next ten minutes. When he says he has a better show than usual it will be found that his show is above his average and where the films are booked over his circuit, he has his early houses advise the later ones as to the star features. He makes the most of every turn of fortune, whether it be good or bad, and he makes himself a figure in all big things. Of course it is not all Montgomery himself. He is the general, but from colonels to high privates he has drilled them in his policies and makes the entire mechanism of his growing circuit one smooth working machine. We have given him rather more than his share of space because he offers ideas and because we personally regard him as one of the most interesting as well as important figures in the motion picture business. He gives the stamp of individuality and integrity to his work.

What "Monty" Found.

Some of his friends insist that E. H. Montagu, now representing Selig in Europe, would not know an Arabic proverb if he saw one lying in the street, and to prove that he does we give the proverb and application referred to recently. It runs:

MEN ARE FOUR.

1. He who knows not, and knows not that he knows not,
He is a fool—avoid him. He gets his film from the Junk merchant.

2. He who knows not, and knows that he knows not,
He is simple—teach him. Tell him to run a Selig on every program.

3. He who know, and knows not that he knows,
He is asleep—awake him. Don't let his hirer put him off; but let him insist on a Selig on each program.

4. He who knows, and knows that he knows,
He is wise—follow him. He always runs a Selig on every program.

This can be adapted to local use by any clever manager. Try it.

And from Chicago.

And from Chicago comes the booklet of prize essays printed by the Selig Company. This matter was prepared by the members of the Chicago Press Club in competition and provides the manager with material for newspaper work that advertises Selig in particular only in that copyright credit and the fact that it is a prize article must be given.

This booklet has gone to all of the members of the National Press Association, who recently were guests of the Selig Company in Chicago, and with it goes an offer to provide matrices free of the cuts to be used in illustrating. As the association members went home chock full of enthusiasm for pictures and Selig pictures in particular, and most particularly for the one in which they all took part, it will be surprising if this idea of Stanley H. Twist does not prove to be one of the most profitable boosts ever given the pictures in America. That picture, by the way, is The Pennant Puzzle, released July 15th. Have you asked for it?

That Isis Advertisement.

Here is the Isis advertisement to which reference was made in the last issue, the advertisement itself having been lost in the hurry of make up.

SPECIAL WEEK

We will exhibit 25 full reel releases this week. DO NOT OVERLOOK THE FACT that NO OTHER Show House in America has been successful in making a contract of this character.

3	MONDAY, JUNE 17th	3
4	TUESDAY, JUNE 18th	4
4	WEDNESDAY, JUNE 19th	4

Including a 3-Reel Feature
VITAGRAPH—Historical Drama

THE FRENCH SPY

One of the most heroic stories of all history, literature or fiction

4	THURSDAY, JUNE 20th	4
4	FRIDAY, JUNE 21st	4
3	SATURDAY, JUNE 22nd	3
3	SUNDAY, JUNE 23rd	3

Trusting to be able in the future as in the past to please all with the best and latest productions by the World's Greatest Life Motion Picture Makers.

ISIS, 1632 CURTIS ST.
DENVER, COLO.

Likes That Band.

Here's a little letter from William Barrie, Jr., of the Marple Theater, Wichita, Kan. Mr. Barrie is some few months ahead of the rest, but all you live wires will be using an orchestra instead of vaudeville soon.

We have had the orchestra now for a month and every day sees our attendance increasing, and it pays anyone who will just spend a little money advertising and then wait until it brings the people down, for once they are here we are sure to get them again; in fact, we now have many faces passing in the theater daily who were unknown to us before, so it certainly will pay in the end.

Our leader, Harry Frank, employs his own men, union scale, with the distinct understanding that they do not substitute on him, for when they are continually changing about it's the same as with singers, the harmony disappears, and that he will not stand for.

Yesterday we had a special wire at the theater for the returns of the fight and crowded the house to the limit; in fact, we had over 800 in at three o'clock, with only a 600 seating capacity, so you can judge for yourself how well it took.

We're beginning to think Mr. Barrie knows a lot for a small town man. Get that line about no substitutes in your orchestra and you'll thank him for the tip. The man whose key unlocks the same office door ours does is a leader and we know that substitute thing backwards. Insist on the same men every night. We don't know who told Mr. Barrie, but he is wise to the game. Now you be wise, too.

Wow! Wow!

We hope the man who edits the Cameraphone theaters bulletin never gets closer to Chicago than his own Pittsburg. Here is the way he bills Selig's The Cat and the Canary:

Matilda Scroggins.....Vera Hamilton
The Cat

Hiram Barnaby.....Frank Weed
The Canary

Miss Hamilton is not, most decidedly not, a cat, and Mr. Weed is not even a weak imitation of a canary. Nope! There were Matilda, Hiram, the Cat and the Canary in the cast. 4—count 'em—4.

And just in passing, there's a new Cameraphone at Lincoln Avenue, near Rogers, with a capacity of 600. We can't have too many theaters of the sort the Cameraphone people run, so here's a hearty welcome to the newcomer, may it be like its forbears. It can't be much better.

Just to make a safe and sane fourth the Cameraphone sent up fifty balloons on Independence Day, with prizes attached, all of which makes for general interest.

The PHOTOPLAYWRIGHT

CONDUCTED BY EPES WINTHROP SARGENT

Script Market Hints.

Put this with your card catalogue of buying companies:

UNIVERSAL FILM MANUFACTURING CO. (Joe Roach, Editor), buying for the various brands released by this combination. Can use Eastern and Western dramas, melodrama, comedy drama, Mexican and seacoast stories, costume plays, light comedies and farces of half and full reel length.

Also make note that the Majestic Company, Hopp Hadley, editor, 540 West Twenty-first Street, New York City, is in immediate need or rural stories of life on the farm, or love stories that can be played in a rural environment. This does not replace the original classification, but is supplemental to that list. Majestic also desires pictures dealing with seafaring or life near the sea containing an original comedy element.

It's Hot, But Still—

IT'S most too hot to argue with the thermometer at ninety and the humidity at 900 or thereabouts, but George A. Posner wants to argue and we like to be obliging. He writes:

> Your answer to Mr. M. M. W. in your inquiry department in a recent issue, in which you promptly and no doubt rightfully squelch some amateur actor with motion picture aspirations has suggested to me an idea, namely, that is not your argument singularly applicable in the case of the amateur photoplaywright? What chance has he with his little amateurish, poorly constructed story, meager in plot and pitifully unskillful in the handling, when the market is already overflooded with the finished, polished, perfect work of experienced and able writers? Even if the story should be very good it would require considerable revision and editing, whereas the work of the professional, finished and perfect requires practically none. I repeat it, what chance indeed has this amateurish script against the ready-made, ready-to-wear products? Is it then strange that so many hopefuls are wondering why their scripts come back with such astonishing regularity? I have several friends, amateur writers, who have been in the field for the greater or lesser part of a year who have yet to sell their first script. One of my friends has been in the game for almost two years, he had been receiving checks fairly regularly; his ideas, he says, are more numerous and better than ever, and his technique has certainly not retrograded; but lo! and behold! he has not sold a script for the past six months. Strange case, eh?
>
> A hint to photoplaywrights. Don't sit down to write after a full meal. Do it before or a few hours later and watch the results.

For the benefit of those who may not have seen the question to which Mr. Posner refers we would explain that another of those amateurs was asking about the chance he stood or getting a job as a photoplayer and we reminded him that the woods were full of well trained actors to whom a salary 52 weeks a year would be a pleasant surprise, and that he stood no show until these players all died.

Immediately, during a cool spell probably, Mr. Posner rushes to his type mill and grinds out the above and we hasten to give Mr. Posner the cheering information that the market is not overflooded with finished, polished, perfect work. Nay, Pauline, and Posner, too. There is no flood of perfect scripts. There are more good stories available than there were a year ago, but we've not seen any traces of a flood of perfect scripts in the studios or on the screen.

Quite to the contrary, there is more of a demand for good stories than ever before and fewer stories of this sort available in proportion to the demand. It is for the reason that the business is still in its formative stage that this department was instituted by the MOVING PICTURE WORLD. It is for this reason that the really good writers are snapped under contract and that so many stories are made in the studio because here at least the technique is supplied, though the idea may be no more novel than that contributed by the outsider.

That's just the point.

The studio can turn out a fairly good story on demand. What the men who own the studios are advertising for are people who can turn up better stuff than the studio people can, not merely stuff as good. Now do you understand?

Giles R. Warren can turn out a good script every week for Miss Florence Lawrence. He did it with Imp, with Lubin and now with the Victor, but when he gets a better idea than he can write he takes a week off and buys that story. We mention Mr. Warren because he is one of the best men along this line we know. There are others as good with other studios and they, too, turn out stuff each week because they can do better than the chap who doesn't do as well, and theirs is professional development against the amateurish construction that accompanies most of the commonplace ideas.

If the aforesaid flood were noticeable they would devote their time to fixing up the work of others rather than writing their own, but most of them write because they write better stuff than they can get through the mails.

When they do get a good script they make a loud noise of rejoicing and cheerfully send a check and a nice letter. Then the author's chest swells out, but not so far that it is not overshadowed by the new bulge in his forehead, and he "goes bad" and gets the idea that anything he writes is good.

The writer in his own editorial work went on the idea that every man and woman should be capable of giving one good idea and it was worth while reading several of their bad ones to get that one good one. It was worth a word of advice now and then and perhaps more than a word.

There are many who have more than one good idea, many who have two or three and some who possess inventiveness in a marked degree. One never can tell from early efforts what the mature results will be and it is for this reason that we go over and over again the familiar ground for the benefit of newcomers in the knowledge that three or four years from now dozens of prosperous writers will look to the MOVING PICTURE WORLD as their Alma Mater; writers who now are discouraged and perhaps disgruntled, but who possess perseverance.

In the dramatic field there are some five to seven thousand professionally trained players who will be glad to enter the photoplay studio and it is useless for the amateur who has done well in the productions of the Amaranth Society or who thinks it would be just lovely to play in the Vitagraph with Maurice Costello, to attempt to compete with these men and women with hard-won experience, but the photoplay field is almost brand new. The dramatist and the drayman stand almost precisely the same chance if they go at it in the same spirit of perseverance and determination. Not all dramatists, mind you, and by no means all draymen, but some dramatists and some draymen.

The photoplay apprentice of to-day is the master workman of tomorrow. Not many apprenticeships end the first year and it is ridiculous to suppose that any man can hire a machine, buy a box of paper and write and sell photoplays.

The trouble is that there have been too many untruthful advertisements; too many "You can earn a hundred dollars a week" baits for photoplay schools and the idea has been raised that anyone can write and sell plays.

This is not true.

The writing of the photoplay is as much of an art as the writing of a fiction story or the construction of a drama. This art must be studied through practise as well as reading, and it is an art the more difficult because apparently so simple. No gift of language is required; no finished literary phrase is essential and for this reason many are eligible who might never gain fame as dramatists or fiction writers, but there is an art; an art that is not to be mastered in a year or two years, and those who complain that they have not sold a script in a year are not real photoplaywrights, but rainbow chasers. They put on paper some incidents and call them a photoplay. Then, when it does not immediately sell, they complain that there is no market or, being a market, it is controlled by the few on the inside track.

The men on the inside are mostly those who broke in from the outside with good scripts and then kept inside by producing more. Anyone can get on the inside if he tries long enough and in the right way provided he can think up new ideas.

The other day we welcomed to the elect a man who had arrived at the realization that his stories did not sell because they were of poor quality. He is a gifted chap, a brilliant lawyer who values more the check for literary work than those his professional services bring him. He has found out what Mr. Posner has yet to learn, that the script that doesn't sell does not sell because it is not a good script. He has found out that not all he writes is good. Sometimes we think that the selective faculty is of even greater importance than the creative. It is as important to know what not to write as to know what to write—and this does not come to the average man within the year.

The amateurish script with poverty of idea and lack of technical development has no chance against the work of the practised writer, but the construction of such scripts and a study of their faults will lead to the better work and this, in turn, to success.

There never has been a time in any field of endeavor when there has not been room at the top, but the bottom rungs of the ladder are crowded with the faint hearted sitting down and crying that there is no hope.

Be a Doctor Munyon. It's better up above, and if you really are a climber, hands will reach down to you. Come on up.

Some Solax Sense.

We are borrowing from the Solax sheet because one paragraph gives the reasons for a host of rejections in about as few words as can be used. Read this over and then read it again and perhaps a couple of times more. Then think it over:

> The photoplaywright should bear in mind that every scene has to be posed before the camera, that each and every set must be built by stage hands, and that train wrecks, explosions or shipwrecks are rather expensive, not to say impractical. The photoplaywright should also bear in mind that a photoplay has more chance to land if its production does not require an outlay of several thousand dollars or require the engagement of a large cast. An available manuscript has at least one or two original situations. One or two original ideas or situations in a complete photoplay makes the photoplay satisfactory to us. Comedy is in greater demand than drama.

From One Who Knows.

Harry O. Hoyt started a discussion on the treatment of scripts in the mail and moves a mail clerk to make response. Some correspondence schools, patterning after a certain literary magazine, suggest an envelope that will take a sheet of the usual size folded once across. This seems to be what this writer refers to. Both the No. 10 and No. 11 envelopes are within the limits of the dimensions he mentions. Read this and remember it:

> I am a mail clerk and have dispatched mail for ten years, therefore you can take this as authoritative.
>
> It is all told in one little sentence. Use standard size envelopes. If an envelope 6 or 7 inches long will not do, use one 9 to 11 inches long and in no case more than 4¼ inches wide.
>
> "There's a reason." Mail in standard size envelopes is dispatched tied up in packages of from 10 to 150 letters. These packages, all the letters reinforcing one another, will even go through a wreck without damage to any of them.
>
> But suppose the script to be mailed in a 6 by 10 envelope. The dispatcher has no more like it and he must put it into the pouch loose. It is an "odd size"—it must shift for itself. It goes into a pouch containing 50 or 100 bales of letters and when these 50 bales get to working on that poor lonely 6 by 10 envelope they are pretty sure to chew it some. "Odd sizes" should be avoided unless one uses very, very strong envelopes. All business houses recognize this fact—why not photoplay writers?

Again the Length.

The question of the length of a photoplay has Banquo's ghost in a recumbent position when it comes to downing. In a recent discussion we advanced the suggestion that scripts should not exceed five pages. Comes Steve Talbot to remark that his scripts run from six to fourteen pages and that perhaps therein will be found the reason for their rejection. He adds: "I use a complete page for my cast and do not know whether that is customary or not. I use a great deal of margin and average about three scenes to the page, though sometimes I require a full page in order to get over all the points." He also explains that his product is largely half reel comedies.

We do not think that mere matter of length will operate against a photoplaywright, but we do think that Mr. Talbot and others would profit by the suggestion that the good half-reel comedy is about the toughest proposition in the photoplay field. When space permits we shall take up this matter in extenso, but we are talking of lengths now.

The mere matter of length does not count much. Of course the long, rambling script gets the editor wearied trying to follow the plot through a maze of inconsequential business, but we do not think that Mr. Talbot overwrites to this extent. Because editors and producers want brief, snappy plots of action it is well to study condensation and brevity, but if a good scene runs a page double spaced with a wide margin it will stand just as much chance as a single spaced half-page with the same number of words and no margin, but the long script is apt to suggest the novice who lacks technique and that, in turn, suggests a poor development that will amount practically to writing a new script with small help from the original if it is accepted and this is apt to militate against the author who overwrites.

At the same time the mere matter of words, within reason, will not be found a cause for rejection and the six page script mentioned was not an arbitrary standard of length, but merely a point to be aimed at. We hold that an experienced writer can keep any full reel story within four pages single spaced and get the complete story over. We never have contended that a fifth page will spoil the writer's chances. Get a new idea, tell it briefly but clearly and it will be judged by the idea and not by the number of words—but be certain that the idea is really novel.

Anyhow, You Can Laugh.

The Photoplay Author sends us the cheapest "course" in photoplay we have yet seen. It is published in New York, on the lower east side, consists of a single 2 by 11 sheet and costs ten cents. It's worth that much as a laugh. We can't spare much space, but here's the way to write a photoplay:

> Scene 1—now your title, "Mother goes to church." You then tell what mother is expected to do, her leaving the old homestead with a baby on her arms and wandering down the lane to the little village church and so on (all in scene one, mind you) until you reach scene 2 in your story, then you proceed to describe the action of the actors in scene 2 until you are ready for scene 3 and so on until your story is finished.
>
> Some stories require no titles after the first one, as the actions of the actors tell the story complete. The title is the speaking part of a moving picture. It suggests the meaning of the scenes where the action of the actors is not so plain to the person looking on.

And at that this is not so much worse than the suggestion of a twenty-dollar course that no full reel should contain less than forty scenes as the managers like plenty of change.

And a week later comes a "follow-up" letter, in which it is suggested that "by this time you must have written a play" which this genius can sell for you and he asks only a dollar for "starting you on the road to success at once."

Can you beat it?

Think of This.

Here's a clipping from the Kinematograph and Lantern Weekly, of London, that throws some light on the English situation. Even with the explanation that a shilling there looks like a dollar over here (though we never found we could get a dollar's worth with a shilling) it sounds a bit cheap. This makes the run from about $2 to $25, the latter being for top scripts. What do you think of that?

> S. J. Mitton has had two picture plots provisionally accepted and he writes to us for guidance as to what to charge for them. The question this raises is a decidedly delicate and difficult one, inasmuch as a plot may be worth anything from say 7s. 6d. to four or five guineas. Comic plots, unless especially good, would not be worth as much as high-class dramatic ones, if only because the published lengths of comic films run shorter than in the case of dramatic ones. Also English firms do not usually pay for plots of any description on a particularly liberal scale. Since S. J. Mitton's plots are comic ones, we would place their topmost value at about £2 or £3 each at the very most. Probably he will not get as much. He might ask a guinea apiece and get it, or he might take the safer course of interviewing an official connected with the producing house which has accepted them, and using his business instinct to ascertain how the land lies and get the best he can. The sooner producing houses take to making their own offers for approved plots, the better it will be for everyone. This is the course invariably adopted in other branches of journalism.

Want Some Names?

William H. Kitchell has grown tired of the inevitable Juan, Jose and Tony for his Western photoplays, to which end he has obtained a copy of the Mexican Year Book (evidently an old one, since it mentions Diaz) and he offers these for the good of the craft. They should interest some of the Western editors as well as photoplaywrights.

Male Surnames—Alberto, Antonio, "Tony," Alfredo, Arturo, Alfonso, Anselmo, Benito, Clemente, Carlos, Emilio, Eduardo, Francisco, Franciso, Frederico, Felipe, Gregerio, Ignacio, Juan, Justino, Jorge, Jacinto, Jose, Josef, Luis, Miguel, Manuel, Portfirio, Pedro, Pasquale, Prospero, Romero, Rodriguez, Ramon, Ricardo, Romelo, Roberto, Sebastian, Salvador, Vinvente.

Feminine Surnames—Carmelita, Maria, Francesca, Juanita, Pepita, Tina, Carmencita, Alfreda, Benita, Dolores.

Proper Names—Argueles, Ahmedio, Arios, Barrere, Cardenas, Calero, Calderon, Diaz, Enrique, Estrada, Garcia, Gonzales, Hernandez, Herrera, Icaza, Iturbide, Jiminez, Lacerda, Martinez, Molina, Morales, Nunez, Ortega, Perez, Pinzon, Portella, Ramon, Ramirez, Rivera, Rodriguez, Rozas, Rosas, Romero, Rosales, Salvada, Salada, Valdez Vallado, Vasquez, Zaragoza.

Love in the Photoplay.

A Pittsburgh correspondent, who starts in with the statement that he has sold some scripts and has not sold some others, but holds no particular grudge against the editors, bewails the sameness of plots and the obviousness of the story, as others have done before him. He says he does not dare send his love affairs askew lest he court rejection and thinks that perhaps the flood of useless love plays is due to the practise of using the old fashioned stories week after week. In passing he thinks that perhaps the poor average is due to the practise of having a tame author in the studio to write all stories.

It all depends on the author and the studio so far as the latter practise is concerned, but this is a situation that rapidly rights itself. Personally we think that the practise of letting the players write stories is bad because most of them write "actor-stories." If they are taken they are not likely to please the public and when they are not bought the disgruntled player may sulk through three or four productions.

But the happy love story seems to be as essential to the photoplay as it is to the magazines. Audiences will have nothing else for a steady diet. The photoplay audience is no more than the magazine reader in the theater instead of at home with the printed page, and the popular magazine that is not eighty per cent. happy ending love stories seldom sells well. If you prefer the sobby, soulful story, you're in the minority, and the minority does not pay for film service, current, rent and other things about the photoplay theater. If you can write better love stories than the other fellow, write them; but by all means do not seek to educate to higher things a public that refuses to be educated.

Taking a Dare.

We have received a letter from a man who dares us to print it. We are not going to print it in full because we don't think it's worth the column or more of space he takes in which to say very little, but we are going to print the parts he thinks we won't print in spite of the fact that he lacks the courage and manliness to sign his name. He begins:

> A few weeks ago you attacked the motives of the various concerns engaged in placing musical manuscripts for composers. You made a broad assertion. Perhaps you are right.
>
> After writing about twenty-five photoplays superior to those which I have seen in the moving picture houses, I have concluded that photoplay writing is a waste of time and journals advocating the prospects of the earnings of the photoplaywright are about on a par with the concerns that you have condemned as mentioned above.

The writer goes on to say that he agrees with us that a "classical education" is not essential to success in photoplaywrighting, and volunteers the information that he has not had many educational advantages. He adds that he has written several unproduced plays, some produced sketches and the words and music of songs that have "circled the globe." In March (about four months ago) he was shown an advertisement for scripts, so he read books and visited the picture shows, then he wrote his scripts, which his friends told him were good and which he himself knows to be superior to the published product. To use his own words: "I make this statement with the conviction that of all the scripts I have written—and there were quite a number, I assure you—not one was unworthy of being rejected," by which, we presume he means they were all worthy of being accepted, though he does not say so. He quarrels with the suggestion that technique is needed and gives this interesting picture of the mental attitude he assumed toward his work:

> I told my wife before I wrote a scenario that I had no faith in the fact that they would be accepted. I said then, and am more convinced than ever, that an office boy could evolve the plots of the photoplays which I had seen. I think that any three men of fair education can write all the plots of photoplays now written and have enough spare time for other business. . . . I feel that you are of this opinion and that you know that it is only a waste of time for a man to write scenarios, but that it is to the financial advantage of your journal manufacturers to encourage the chase after shadows. I think that your circulation would shrink and moving pictures would lose a number of their patrons if there were no shadows to chase.

Here is a man who has failed where he thinks even an office boy should succeed, who complains because he has not sold his twenty-five scripts in the four months he has been writing and yet who went to the task beaten because he had no faith in his success.

What do you think of him? Personally we do not think very much and we are glad that he has gone back to his globe circling songs.

The moral of all of which is that if you want to win success go at it determined to win. Do not march forth to battle under a white flag.

Touching on the more personal side, we believe that the Moving Picture World, through its editorials, its discussions, its general tone and through this department, has done more to raise the standard of photoplay writing and production than any other single factor. Those who can write photoplays are helped, but there is no help for the egotist and the man who is confident that his plays are better than those he has seen on the screen unless, in the kindly course of time he wakens to a realization of his faults. We do not think we can ever do our anonymous correspondent any good, but we can at least use his screed for the diversion and instruction of those more willing to learn.

INQUIRIES

NOTE—No questions can be replied to by mail. Look for your answers here. A list of studio addresses, kept up-to-date, will be sent if a stamped and addressed return envelope accompanies the request.

BLUE GRASS—The Edison cast for "The Passion Flower" merely gives The Three Suitors, who are: Benjamin F. Wilson, Richard Niel and William Randall. In Kalem's "The Gent from Honduras," the girl was Miss Eileen Errol, and Stuart Holmes was Roost. In "The Drummer Girl of Vicksburg," Miss Marian Cooper was the drummer girl and Guy Coombs Lieut. Lightfoot.

A. J. N.—If you cannot get your script back notify the company by registered mail that you withdraw it, then copy your carbon and send it out elsewhere. That Thanhouser is a year and a half old, therefore outlawed. Writing in a vision in photoplay is simply written, "John gazes fixedly into fireplace. Vision Beth's face in fireplace;" or, "vision part of scene three in corner." If the photoplay sold it doesn't matter so much whether it was written in strict accordance with technic or not, does it? You must have come close enough.

W. N.—We do not think the service offered worth any part of the price asked. If you have the idea you get it over well enough, but write your business in. Do not say that a character does something "in a comical manner." Tell what he does that is humorous. That's what they pay you for.

Mrs. T.—This department is for the answering of questions, not for a discussion as to your favorite players.

F. H. H.—Thanhouser is not in the market for scripts. Most of the Universal Editors are now located in 1 Union Square. If you want to make a bid for a particular company mark the script "Imp Brand," or whatever it is. Suffragette plays have been done dozens of times. That is probably why your script was returned. If it has been out since April, we think we would make polite inquiry. Your last question is a little too broad. Pure satire would be apt to tire, but you can utilize the mannish woman for comedy and not satire and with success. There is a difference between satire, travesty and comedy that you and your friend do not seem to appreciate.

H. B.—See above for first question. Cut your paper down to the 8½ by 11 size. Any large paper house or printer can do it for you at small cost. The longer sheet is not handled so easily and look amateurish.

NEVER-MISS-A-COPY—We cannot tell you of a New York house running first run independent film and our critical staff bewail this fact.

L. B. V.—You simply waste your time with historical or other adaptations. These can be made by the studio staff to greater advantage, because the studio man knows precisely what the director wants, which is information you lack. What you can sell is an original idea, and an original idea only.

E. J.—An ex-cavalryman should stand a good chance of eventually getting in with a company, but we do not think that the western sections would import riders from New York. Try the local companies.

B. G.—We have not the information you ask. Sorry.

C. L. M.—The Edison cast does not list the telegraph operator in "The Funeral that Flashed in the Pan." Arthur Mackley was the father in Essanay's "The Ranch Girl's Mistake." Crane Wilbur played both parts in Pathe's "The Texan Twins." The company did even better in "The Three Whiffles," in which one man impersonated three characters on the stage at the same time. If you want photographs use the home addresses of the companies. Do not address the players. The Lubin Western is in the vicinity of Tucson, Arizona; the others in the vicinity of Los Angeles.

WARREN KERRIGAN—Bushnell Dimond contributes the information (for the benefit of an inquirer), that Warren J. Kerrigan is a former Essanay star.

LITTLE JEFF—The numbers appearing on the inserts in films have reference to their proper placement in the film. Sometimes just the number of the insert is used, at others the negative number is also included.

J. M.—Our Biograph identifier has not yet sent in the information you ask.

R. K. M.—If you have a comedy, send it to the company most likely to do that style of story. The fact that you have no women characters does not help us much—and we do not think it will help the sale greatly. When a script is returned as unavailable it may mean anything from "This is utterly bad" to "We would like to take this, but we have too many on hand." It has no specific meaning and that is the reason it is employed. To find out whether or not it is any good, send it to all the companies in turn. After they have all rejected it be satisfied that it may not be all that you think it, but no story is ever dead until the market is exhausted, and even then it may be fixed over. Public stenographers charge from five to twenty-five cents a page. It all depends on the stenographer. We pay ten cents for double spacing and fifteen for single. Kinemacolor has no regular release dates, nor does it sell or lease through the exchanges.

Richard Roe—An exhibitor may handle both the Universal and Film Supply subjects if he can find an exchange that handles both. Some do. Please do not ask Rex casts. Their press man is dead, but keeps walking around. With the exception of the Melies Company the companies now in the Motion Pictures Patents Company were in at the formation. Biograph, Vitagraph, and Edison and Lubin are the real pioneers with Selig close behind.

H. E. C.—We can't say what the Board of Censorship will or will not permit. It all depends on how it is done. The actual commission of crime is frowned upon, stories based on crime are not approved, but the final test is one of motive and commission rather than a set of regulations. It is not so much what is done as the manner in which it is done and the motive that lies behind it.

Dot B.—Miss Blanche Sweet was the light haired girl in Biograph's "Man's Lust for Gold." Our identifier has not given us the name of the dark girl in "A Siren of Impulse," but may when he reads this. Watch. You cannot purchase pictures of the Biograph players. They are obtainable abroad, but will not be sold except in England and the colonies. Mr. Costello and Miss Turner play regularly. The mere fact that you do not see them has nothing to do with the case. Miss Normand was with Biograph last we heard. The Edison Company produced "Where Is My Wandering Boy To-night." It was done some years ago. The Vitagraph also produced "Wistaria Memories," in which this song is featured.

S. W. B.—It appears from correspondence that your script addressed to the Victorgraph was delivered to the Vitagraph in error, which accounts for the fact that it came back with a Vitagraph rejection slip clinging to its clammy chest. There is more than one "Under Two Flags." Universal and Thanhouser—which is why.

G. M. P.—We do not know whether Biograph paid Street & Smith for the rights to "One Round Hogan" or not. It may have been that they were stung into the purchase of a copyrighted story.

S. C.—It is a matter of taste whether scripts are single or double spaced. Some editors like one and some the other style.

L. G.—There should not be two sheets of the synopsis. If you can't get the story in two or three hundred words, practice until you can. It can be done and should be done.

R. W.—We do not recall that the company mentioned has made this story before, but it has been done by half a dozen other companies so far as the basic plot is concerned. Both the Licensed and Independent companies have repeatedly used the idea, so it is not remarkable that the idea seems familiar.

KLEINE'S COMEDY PROGRAM FOR THE WEEK.

George Kleine's three releases for the week ending Saturday, July 27th, consist of a Cines comedy-drama; an Eclipse farce, combined with a French military subject; and a Cines light comedy; altogether a program attractive, amusing and quite appropriate for this season of the year when light and entertaining pictures are more appreciated than the heavier photodramas requiring the effort of thought.

Tuesday's Cines (July 23rd), "A Daughter's Diplomacy," in which Miss Florence Bertini, one of the Cines Company's most charming leading women, portrays the character of the daughter, concerns the Martin family and the jealousy of Mrs. Martin because of her husband's assiduous attentions to a certain fascinating countess. The daughter, Marion, is very unhappy when she becomes aware of the state of affairs and bends every effort to break the spell of the countess over her father and bring about once more the old-time happy relations. How successfully she works out her dilemma is best related by the finely staged and splendly acted picture-play.

Wednesday's Eclipse (July 24th), "Billy's Nightmare," is one of those French farces requiring very little explanation; the title itself being sufficiently lucid. It is enough to say that from start to finish it is one long laugh—what is commonly termed "a side-splitter."

On the same reel has been added a splendidly military topical subject showing in impressive and thrilling martial array "The French Army in Action." This reel is bound to be a winner because of the splendid combination of fun and laughter and instructive entertainment.

The Saturday's Cines (July 27th), "Too Many Sweethearts," relates in a highly amusing manner how George (played by Alfred Bracci), a very impressionable and fickle young man, imagines himself in love with several girls at the same time and while the guest of two fun-loving sisters at a houseparty he falls in love with both, which results in many laughable complications. Miss Dorothy Ferrari and Mr. Maurice Anverso are also concerned in the cast, which fact is evidence of the high artistic manner in which this comedy is portrayed. Some of the best talent of the Cines players are employed in furnishing the action of the comedy. The scenery and settings also deserve special mention, and there is little doubt of the popular approval with which this film will be received.

EDISON PLAYERS GO WEST.

Director J. S. Dawley, of the Edison Company, with Miss Laura Sawyer, Mr. MacAllister, B. F. Wilson, James Gordon, Charles Sutton and Richard Neil are bound westward on an extensive picture-making tour of the United States. The company will make stops at Chicago, Denver, Colorado Springs, Salt Lake City, Yellowstone Park, San Francisco and various points up and down the Pacific coast, Yosemite Valley and the Grand Canyon of the Colorado River. Scenic and industrial pictures will be included in the work. The principal feature of the trip will be a series of pictures taken in co-operation with the United States Forestry Commission, showing methods of protecting great forests from various forms of depredation and devastation. Stories with love interest will be worked into the various scenes and localities visited by this company, and it is expected that a splendid lot of subjects will be the result.

NEW DETROIT HOUSE.

Messrs. A. Arthur Caille and John H. Kunsky are having plans drawn for the erection of a handsome theater, to be known as the Garden, at 727, 729 and 731 Woodward Ave., Detroit, Mich. The building will be of white tile and terra cotta, fireproof construction, with a frontage of 75 feet and a depth of 200 feet. The lobby will be 75 by 25 feet, and the theater proper, 60 by 125 feet in the rear. It will be one of the finest vaudeville and high-class picture playhouses in this country. The approximate cost will be $60,000. A row of automobile boxes will occupy either side, and an unusually large orchestra pit has been designed. All the interior decorations will be lattice and vine combinations, to carry out the garden effect.

Comments on the Films

Licensed.

"MAN'S GENESIS" (Biograph), July 11.—An old man climbs a hill with two children, a boy and a girl. The boy attempts to strike the girl. The old man sits down with the children and tells them a story. The title describes it as a psychological comedy founded upon the Darwinian theory of the origin of man. The light fades on the peaceful, fertile countryside, dotted with homes. It reappears on a rocky waste. Weakhands crawls out of his cave. When he goes as a suitor for a woman he is driven away by Bruteforce, as big and powerful as Weakhands is frail and anemic.

Lilywhite, through the death of her mother, is forced to go out of her cave. She meets Weakhands, hiding from Bruteforce. Weakhands rushes for her and lays hands on her. She goes with him, willingly. While out of her cave the leering Bruteforce takes Lilywhite, and when Weakhands, with a courage not justified by his strength, interferes, he is pushed down the hill and injured. He crawls back to his cave, from which he can see Lilywhite bemoaning her fate. Weakhands, in his cave, picks up a stick and absently fits it into a rounded stone. The stone falls off and hurts his leg. He puts the stone on again and tries the weapon lightly against his head. It hurts.

Over the expressionless, almost beastlike, face of Weakhands there flashes a look of intelligence. It is the birth of an idea. Securely fastening the stone to the stick, he sets out for the cave of Bruteforce, where he finds Lilywhite, and beckons her to come to him. She holds back through fear. Bruteforce rushes at Weakhands, his fist in the air. The rapidly descending club collides with his wrist. In dumb mystified fashion Bruteforce looks at his limp hand and raises the other. The club gets that, too, and it is useless. The battle goes on all over the hillside. Finally a blow on the top of Bruteforce's head ends the struggle. The amazed clan of Bruteforce assail Weakhands, but the club stops them. Weakhands leads away his companion. Night slowly settles down. The jagged rocks at the crest of the hill are outlined against the sky; all is dark. Day breaks across the beautiful valley. The old man arises from the rock with the children. The boy shakes the girl's hand.

The work of Weakhands, Bruteforce and Lilywhite enthralls. The illusion is complete.

"HUGRY HANK'S HALLUCINATION" (Kalem), July 10.—A very short film. Hank occupied a bench just deserted by six women. He went to sleep. He dreamed the women kissed him. When he awoke a donkey was licking his face.

"THE BUGLER OF BATTERY B" (Kalem), July 10.—This, as the title indicates, is a military story. It concerns the commander of a battery and his bugler, who loved two sisters. The commander, who somehow is a major, is summoned to the front and leaves the bugler in charge of headquarters, which is the home of the sisters; behind him he leaves a piece of artillery, and takes with him every man except the bugler. A company of Federals approach to attack. The bugler, aided by the sisters, serves the piece. At the first shot the Federals drop to the ground. At the second they stay just where they are. At the third they run—away, although they have wounded the bugler. Stonewall Jackson arrives and makes the bugler a lieutenant. He does not court-martial the major for leaving one man in charge of a fieldpiece.

"THE STOLEN RING" (Lubin), July 10.—Arthur Johnson puts over a drama in clean, consecutive, workmanlike manner. Johnson takes the part of a hotel clerk, Charles Brandt that of the hotel proprietor and Howard Mitchell that of his son. The work of the whole company is of the best.

"PA TRUBELL'S TROUBLES" (Essanay), July 11.—Howard Missimer was Pa. His troubles caused him to waive his arms in his most characteristic fashion; somehow those who observed him struggling with his troubles were much more disposed to laughter than to tears. The young man who in different disguises was courting Pa's daughter materially contributed to the fun. It is fine comedy.

"AFTER MANY DAYS" (Edison), July 9.—Camilla Dalberg has written a pretty story. Her work in the leading feminine role added to its effectiveness. Sharing the honors with her was William West, who in the characterization of the father of the singer was in full sympathy with the spirit of the play. His acting was finished—artistic. Marc McDermott got out of his lesser role all there was in it. He played the detective—the real, every day human policeman, not the "dope" sort. There was an unusually dramatic climax, and the three principals all participated.

"TRYING TO FOOL UNCLE" (Biograph), July 4.—Comedy that gets over. The work of the uncle, the nephew and the waitress is good. The photography in the scene of the mansion is superb.

"ONE-ROUND O'BRIEN" (Biograph), July 4.—On the same reel as the foregoing. A laugh, and a good one, all the way.

"ON THE BRINK OF THE CHASM" (Pathe), July 10.—Paul Panzer and Crane Wilbur are co-stars in a better-than-usual Indian drama. There is a fine picture in the scene where Panzer on the cliff holds up the child for the Indians to see.

"THE GEISHA'S LOVE STORY" (C. G. P. C.), July 9.—This is a hand-colored Japanese film, in which all the participants are of the land of the chrysanthemum. It gives a comprehensive idea of Japanese drama and also shows that in the silent play the little brown men and women are adepts in pantomime. They show skill in depicting the varying emotions. Altogether it is a very interesting picture.

"THE VOW OF YSOBEL" (Selig), July 9.—A romance of the days in old Mexico when the Americans first began to stray over the line. It is an interesting story. Ysobel was intended for Jose, the son of a neighboring landowner, but she had no heart for marriage—until she met Dr. Livingston, a young American. Jose, to injure the doctor, cut his saddle girth, with the result that a bad fall into a gulley ensued. In response to Ysobel's calls for help Jose responded, but refused to give assistance until Ysobel promised to marry him in return for the rescue. The Spaniard later on took some of his associates to the spot to show them how it was done. A rearing horse tumbled him down the embankment and killed him. When Ysobel heard the news she almost laughed. The doctor got a bride. The story is well told.

"THE ARTIST'S JOKE" (Edison), July 10.—Harry Furniss, the English comedian-caricaturist or caricaturist-comedian—he seems equally facile in each department of entertainment—puts over another engaging picture. There is a lot of wholesome fun and a bit of romance, in which latter, however, the artist does not share. Nevertheless, he materially contributes to the general result.

"FOR VALOUR" (Edison), July 12.—The "u" in valour is undoubtedly in compliment to the soldiers of the second battalion of the Queen's Regiment, now stationed in the Island of Bermuda, which participated in the battle scenes in the play. The story is by Talbot Mundy. Laura Sawyer takes the only feminine role. Richard Neill and Benjamin Wilson form the two other corners of the triangle. The scenery, the number of men involved in the action and the photography well entitle this film to be classed as a feature.

"A MYSTERIOUS CASE" (Eclipse), July 10.—A story in which circumstantial evidence plays a prominent part, yet is shown to be in this particular case of no value whatever, owing to the fact that the victim of an accident recovered and was able to clear his brother. The acting is good, especially that of the unsuccessful inventor and his daughter.

"DOWN JAYVILLE WAY" (Essanay), July 12.—Howard Missimer and John Steppling are suitors for the hand of Lillian Branscombe. As the title indicates, this is a "rube" show. All the characters are of the country, countrified. There are some amusing situations, especially where the parson drives off with the girl, the two were anxious to marry.

"HIS MASTERPIECE" (Selig), July 11.—A dramatic story of a stolen operatic score, in which the thief retained his ill-gotten honors and gains and the creator of the musical success went to a pauper's grave unhonored and unsung. Aside from this unsatisfactory termination the play is worthy high praise. The old musician's role is splendidly filled.

"THE SHERIFF'S DAUGHTER" (Lubin), July 11.—Clever drama. The daughter of the sheriff, the sheriff, and the detective are natural and likewise interesting. In fact, it may be said they look their parts. So also does the bank president look his—which it is not always possible truthfully to say in these sheriff dramas. The sheriff in this film certainly "looks the goods."

"THE FOSTER CHILD" (Vitagraph), July 12.—Drama with a heartache. Sheridan Holmes is the author. The director is Van Dyke Brooke. That splendid actor also takes the leading role, but the work of all in the cast is so uniformly good that it is another case of "glory enough for all." For a minute we see Miss Finch in serious work; she is good to look upon. James W. Morrison adds to his reputation by his sympathetic interpretation of the part of the foundling. Mrs. B. F. Clinton, Miss Leah Baird and George W. Cooper take the other characters. "The Foster Child" shows craftsmanship; probably none will enjoy it more than Mr. Brooke's confreres.

"MME. DE MODE" (Edison), July 13.—J. W. Culbertson has written a delightful comedy. There are many amusing incidents following the letter written by a young woman to the editor of the "sob sister" column of an evening paper and her prompt marriage. Of course she didn't know her sweetheart was "Mme. de Mode," the editor of the column; he didn't realize the identity of his correspondent. He gave her good advice; she took it. All ended merrily.

"PICTURESQUE DARJEELING, INDIA" (Edison), July 13.—On the same reel as the foregoing are some fine scenes of lofty, snow-covered mountains and pictures of the people.

